HAVE YOU FORGOTTEN !

Have you forgotten the sunny glade, Down by the little spring, And the spreading oak tree's leafy shade, Where first the wild birds sing? And the hill where the purple violet blue, With the wood lily's snowy bell, And where the mint and rushes grew, In the green and mossy dell-?

Do you remember the swing we made Or wild and bending vine? And I sat and sang 'neath its leafy, shade-For a merry heart was mine; And the bench on which you carved my name, Beneath the walnut tree; Far dearer is that rustic seat Than a royal throne could be !

The flowers bloom as sweet and fair. The wild birds sing as sweet, And the brook rolls on its silv'ry waves O'er the pubbles at my feet ; But I've sat opon its banks and tried To feel as gay in vain-

Returning home late one night, jaded by a list.

Less stroll through the town, I found the junior member of the firm awaiting for me. The house had received intelligence, after business hours, of a transaction entered into on their account, which required the immunitate transmission, to an isolated inland town, of several thousand dollars, together with certain papers and statements necessary to conclude the affair. It was too important and caught at the envelope, Meanwhile, there was matter to be entrusted to the delay and uncertainty of the mail at that time. Upon a consultation of the firm, I had been selected to perform it was to unfasten it, I hurried back to my own down upon its knees, and clasping its little that it would be such a recreation as would divert my thoughts for a time from the perplexities of my inserable condition.

With the usual foresight of the firm, everything harrassed me. I looked at the monorandum on the back of the envelope. It was "5,000." The letter was open before me. I read it over. It named five thousand at the sum enclosed. There had been pre-actions were placed in my hands in an envelope, again and again I counted it. I had been used to handling large sums, and counting large sums, and counting large sums, and counting large sums, and counted large in the concern in the matter. A letter of instruction was likewise enclosed.

I remember well the botter monorand my cycs, failed in the encluding words of the prayer.

I need not say that I changed my mind with regard to the money. I passed a quiet of the money is and rose early, and hastening away to ward my journey's end, so as to give myself the least possible time or opportunity for the less the possible time or opportunity for the less than the sum enclosed. There was evidently an error, I counted it. I had been used to handling large sums, and counting large sums again and again I counted it. I had been used to handling large sums, and counting large sums of money daily; but I actually found more difficulty in arriving at the actual count of the ten bank bills before me than I ever before or since the first was ordered. The money is the encluding words of the prayer.

A conundrum for Mr. Darwin: Upon what principle of selection is it of all the darker colored horses which have white feet, twice as many of them have their white behind as be-

A clergyman in Maine was recently called home from his summer vacation to marry a couple. The railroad fare was $3 and his other expenses $2 more. The grateful bride groom gave him $2 as the marriage fee. Net Net loss to the clergyman, $3 in cash and thirty hours time The stock of the Eastern Railroad has deed about six per cent. since the disas ter. It was thought by many that it would fall ten or twelve per cent, in the course of a day or two, but it has held its own rer ration not far from half a million dollars,
