Canadian Cattle in England. LONDON, May 11 .- The killing of the Canadian cattle from off the Numidian is being awaited with great interest. So far there have been only a few cattle killed at Liverpool, and the strictest examination of the lungs fails to prove the existence of pneumonia or any other disease.

A Kick From Austria. VIENNA, May 11.-The Austrian Government has formally protested against the action of the Russian authorities in expelaction of the Russian authorities in eaper-ling from Russian-Poland Herr Roxwadow-ski, a member of the Austrian Reichstag, and an owner of land in Russian-Poland, on which he was living when ordered to leave the country by the Russian officials. Governor-General of Canada.

LONDON, May 11.-It is officially stated that the Earl of Aberdeen has been appointed Governor-General of Canada in place of the Earl of Derby, formerly Baron Stanley of Preston, who is about to retire from the office of Governor-General to which he was appointed in 1888.

Prosecuting the Jews,
ODESSA, May 11.—The Jewish inhabitants of Caucasia have been ordered to remove from their present homes to within the southwestern pale. About one-third of the Jewish population of Libau, the Baltic seaport, will be expelled within the coming six months, greatly to the detriment of the town, in which they form an influential part of the commercial community.

Drought Diminishes Italy's Grain

ROME, May 11 .- Reports to the Government from the prefects of the various districts throughout Italy show that the tricts throughout Italy show that the drought has caused such damage to the grain crops that Italy will be compelled to import this year 113,500,000 bushels of grain in excess of the ordinary amount imported. As the duty is 5 lire on a quintal, the receipts on this account will probably cover the deficit in the Italian budget. The Emperor's Disturbing Speech.

The Pope and the Pilgrims.

Rome, May 11 .- The facts in regard to reception of German pilgrims by the Pope, which brought out a remonstrance from the Prussian Government, are these: On Tuesday last the Pope gave a formal reception to 500 German Catholic pilgrims. These pilgrims were conducted by Dr. Steinle, the bishop of Eichstadt, in Bavaria, and they presented an address in Latin, which was read to his Holiness. The Pope replied in the Latin language. He culogized the services of the German Catholic press in the cause of the church, and reterred to the pilgrimages which had come to Rome from every quarter of the world as a proof of a reawakening among the people everywhere in spite of irreligious propagandaism. His Holiness above all praised those Catholics who were fighting to restore the independence of the Holy See, and he again proclaimed the necessity of that independence for the sake of the church. The Pope concluded by exhorting the faithful to labor for the amelioration of the condition of the working classes in the spirit of the Papal encyclical upon the subject. It was probably the reference to the former temporal power of the Papacy that gave offense at Berlim because likely to give offense at the Quirinal.

Timothy Healy (Anti-Parnellite) inquired whether it was in order to discuss the rejection of the whole bill on a motion thus concerning but one particular clause.

The chairman ruled that the motion was in sector.

Joseph Chamberlain commented upon the Joseph Chamberlain commented upon the scarcity of amendments proposed by supporters of the Government. He supposed they recognized the fact that the bill was only a sham one, and therefore proposed amendments only pour faire rie. He himself was anxious to know what were the intentions of the Government concerning Ulster. Was there any plan that Ulster should be excluded from the operation of the bill? He believed that such exclusion ought to be provided for, and he should regard Ulster men as doing wrong if they should reject any arrangement to except them from Home Rule according to the bill. They would be all the better able to defend the rights of the minority in the rest of Ireland if they should minority in the rest of Ireland if they should the better able to defend the rights of the minority in the rest of Ireland if they should have a Government of their own than if they should be merely part of the minority in the Dublin Parliament. In conclusion Mr. Chamberlain reverted to the subject of the abstention of the Liberals from offering amendments, and asked why the Irish members had so suddenly become dumb.

Mr. Gladstone denied the truth of Mr. Chamberlain's insinuations that the supporters of the Government had closed their ears to the argument. The Government, he said, had already given the fullest explanation of the bill, and wished a fair and open discussion. They would not be driven, however, into obstructive and useless debates. When such debates were forced by the Opposition the Government would be silent. The members of the majority would speak as their own judgment dictated, and not with a view of furthering the devices of the Opposition. (Cheers.) In retaining that liberty of choice they would best perform their duty to the country. (Prolonged cheers.)

report progress. Ulster members, he said, had no opportunity to speak. Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, resisted this motion and moved the closure. The chairman ignored Mr. Morley's motion, and put Mr. Balfour's motion, which was lost by a vote of 304 to 260. Cheers and laughter followed the announcement of the result of the division.

The British Side. PARIS, May 11 .- Attorney-General Sir Charles Russell, of counsel for Great Britain before the Bering Sea tribunal of Britain before the Bering Sea tribunal of arbitration, in his address in behalf of the British case, began by bestowing generous praise upon the arguments of Messrs. Carter and Coudert, of counsel for the United States, as full of intellectual allurements. Nevertheless, Sir Charles went on to say, he thought that Mr. Carter's line of argument had taken him into the misty clouds of metaphysical and ethical discussion, which had no bearing upon the case. He had also built strongholds which were legally indefensible. Sir Charles remarked on the change of front in upon the case. He had also online strong-holds which were legally indefensible. Sir Charles remarked on the change of front in various parts of the American argument. Seals, Sir Charles declared, were like game, which the land owner had the right to kill, although only when on his land. The animum revertendi conferred property in wild animals only when the wild animals were induced by artificial means such as feeding them to return to a particular place. Neither international nor municipal law would confer property in seals, were law would confer property in seals, were the dispute between persons instead of nations.

Sir Charles Russell commented on what sion everywhere. It is stated that the Kaiser did not inform Chancelor Caprivi of his intention to deliver the address, and the Chancellor is therefore free from any responsibility for the imperial utterance. The Radical newspapers declare that it is impossible for the published text to be accurate, and they call upon the Chancellor to issue a correct version.

Kossuth Thinks Gladstone Will Fail.

London, May 11.—The Pall Mall Gazette (Tory) publishes an interview with the venerable Hungarian patriot, Louis Kossuth, in regard to Irish home rule, Kossuth says: "As to Mr. Gladistone's second scheme for Irish home rule, I know very little about it or the real principles underlying it. I believe, however, that Mr. Gladstone will never arrive at his goal. The Irish question presents the same obstacles as squaring a circle. It is a perfect utopia this wish of Mr. Gladstone to Gladst

He it was impossible that the it was impossible that there could be property rights in the seals in Bering Sea, and supported his contention with quotations from the American jurists and in particular from Prof. Woolsey's writings on international law. Sir Charles claimed that Great Britain represented in this controversy the rights of nations.

the seizures had been made on the high seas without previous diplomatic expostulation. Mr. Bayard, when Secretary of State, had never tried to justify the seizures on the ground that the United States had property in the seals.

Here followed a sharp exchange of contradictions between Senator Morgan, American arbitrator, Sir Charles Russell and E. J. Phelps.

Sir Charles declared the interruptions were uncalled for. He then went on to review the diplomatic correspondence between Great Britain and the United States on the subject of the Bering Sea.

The altercations which followed Sir Charles Russell's assertion that Mr. Bayard never tried to justify the Bering Sea seizures on the ground that the United States had property in the seals were so not that it threatened to jeopardize the whole arbitration.

that it threatened to jeopardize the whole arbitration.

Senator Morgen and Mr. Phelps declined to quarantee that the United States would accord damages for seizures even if the tribunal decided against them.

Lord Hannen exclaimed: "Then our whole arbitration is useless and the whole question will be reopened."

Finally the difficulty was adjusted temporarily that the discussion of the questions of liability be postponed.

When the stout iron hull of her Britannie Majesty's good ship Blake sinks below the eastern horizon this morning and the hearts of oak aboard are casting wistful glances toward the faint line on the horizon which represents to them the last of friends none the less dear for being newly made, the sorrow of their parting will be lessened and their kindly feeling increased by the presence of a handsome remembrance of their nonlarity and that of their ship.

presence of a handsome remembrance of their popularity and that of their ship.

In a week's competition among the Recorder's army of readers as to which was the favorite among the foreign war ships in the Columbian naval parade the Blake won the first place over her nearest rival, the German Kaiserin Augusta, having mearly two-thirds of the total vote. The editor of the Recorder accordingly ordered a magnificent illuminated testimonial, setting forth the above facts, to grace the a magnineers intiminated testimonial, set-ting forth the above facts, to grace the cabin of the Blake's commander, Captain W. The Irrn Duties.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:
Those who read the papers could not fail to notice that, during the week, some gentlemen from Port Arthur waited on the ministerial teriff inquiry deputation in Toronto, and requested that the iron duties be not reduced! How many more selfish specimens are we to hear of as waiting on the Tory minister for favore? The proposition made by the western men resolves itself into the equivalent of the following: "Tax the whole people till we get rich, what do we care even though commerce declines and our grain and cattle shippers pay nore freight to Europe in consequence. more freight to Europe in consequence. Montreal is nothing to us. We are going to look to ourselves and the nation may cease look to ourselves and the nation may cease to progress so far as we are concerned."

You are aware, Mr. Editor, that the most crushing of the outrageous specific duties is on iron, being to-day 58 to 72 per cent. on British values. I know there are higher rates on some items but as iron is the prime necessity, it is atrocious that the tax on it should be maintained at such a height, after it has been pointed out, not only how it oppresses the community but cripples most seriously the occan commerce we look to it oppresses the community but oripples most seriously the ocean commerce we look to as the making our nation. It is notorious that the fiscal system of protection is edging out our old importing firms, and in Toronto several metal houses have ceased to exist, or have become embarrassed, all through this hot-house pampering of great monopolists. My last observations are, when are we going to treat the mother country with common decency? Meantime, the Government policy, in vogue in Canada, simply works all the injury possible to Britain, and is doing ourselves immense harm. The Finance Minister calls the United Kingdom "our best customer" forsooth! Would a merchant treat a best United Kingdom "our best customer" forscoth! Would a merchant treat a best buyer so? I trow not. SEMPER IDEM.

BRITISH FIGHTERS SAIL AWAY.

Impressive Scenes in New York Harbor-American Hospitality Appreciated. American Hospitality Appreciated.

New York, May 12.—The English war ships, which have been so much admired while lying in the North River, tripped anchor at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning and set sail for Bermuda. Directly that the Blake made a start the other visiting ships ran up their strings of flags, sailors manned the yards and a hearty God-speed was uttered.

The going of the four Englishmen was a picturesque sight. The great ships weighed their anchors and steamed away as quietly as though they were simply picturesque sight. The great ships weighed their anchors and steamed away as quietly as though they were simply drifting out with the tide. It was just 11:30 when Capt. Hamilton, of the Blake, gave signal to the other ships for sailing. As she passed the Philadelphia, the American flagship, she dipped her colors, and her marines, drawn up on her quarterdeck, presented arms. The tars on board the Philadelphia cheered, and the band played "God Save the Queen." As the Australia, the Magicienne and the Tartar passed the American flagship their colors dipped also, and their men presented arms, while cheer after cheer came back to them from the Philadelphia and from the shore.

On one of the British ships a band was playing "The Girl I Lett Behind Me," and in answer to the music of the Philadelphia's "God Save the Queen" changed into the rollicking "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and then finally as the ships drew away, into the farewell of "Aud Lang Syne." As long as the ships could be seen the crowds along the drive lingered, and until the Philadelphia's band ceased playing the people on shore lingered.

He was 11 years old when he subset of the senate in concervatives to get a publish this morning their election manifesto. It savors in almost every line of agrarianism. While protection and bimetallism are avowed boldly as foremost party principles which must be reckoned with by the Government if it desires a firm alliance, no unequivocal word is spoken concerning the army bill. In fact, anything that could be construed as definite approval of the measure is carefully avoided. It hints at the desirability of a large borse tax, which would fall most heavily avoided the idea of the imperial initial and crown set in blue concerned the measure is carefully avoided the idea of the imperial initial and erows set in blue in the imperial initial and erows the imperial initial and er

The Deadbeats' Chance.

"I'm just willing to bet all I'll make or the next trip that that judgment at Osgoode Hali will cause us trouble," said a railway conductor. He was referring to the Court of Appeal's judgment is the cast of Beaver vs. the Grand Trunk Railway, wherein the court decided that a conductor had no legal right to put a passenger trail wherein the court decided that a conductor had no legal right to put a passenger train for failure to show his ticket. "That decision opens up great possibilities for the deadbeat, who has nerve, and few there are who have not. The way the case stands now a man can travel all over the country without paying any fare. A whole train load of people might refuse to show tickets, but the company would have to carry them wherever they wished to go, with no guarantee that anyone had paid his way. If a deadbeat were put oil a train he easily get a couple of his pals to say that he saw him purchase a ticket, and the railway company could be caught for damage.

Gladstone's Great Speech

Gladstone's great speech, just before th second reading of the Irish Home Rule Bill, has been so much talked about, the world over, that the ADVERTISER purposes to give its readers the more striking passages. The British Premier followed Mr. Balfour, the Conservative leader, and he spoke for a little over an hour. In the course of his address, Mr. Gladstone said:

OPPOSITION ARGUMENTS SUMMED UP. I can sum up in four short phrases, sufficiently expressive, what I conceive to be the staple and the aggregate of that copious mass of matter which has been laid before us by the opponents of our bill. The first of their powerful weapons is bold asbefore us by the opponents of our bill. The first of their powerful weapons is bold assertion; the second of their powerful weapons is persistent exaggeration; the third of their powerful weapons is constant misconstruction; and the fourth and last of their powerful weapons is copious, arbitrary, and baseless prophecy. (Cheers.) I speak of bold assertion. Well, sir, the right honorable gentleman says we are now going to subject Ireland to a system of duplicate finance which is unprecedented and intolerable. The father of the duplication of finance in this country is his own Chancellor of the Exchequer—(laughter)—and he has introduced in his arrangements with respect to the death duties provisions that are open to all the objections the right honorable gentleman can possibly make to those of the bill. ('Oh,' and cheers.) In the meantime while I do not deny that the Union has, among other difficulties, left to us as it now stands an inconvenient inheritance of complicated financial arrangements which we must endeavor to unravel, yet I do not scruple to say it, and I place my own experience against that of the right honorable gentleman, that there is nothing in these difficulties which ought for a moment to abash or terrify men who have a great object in view, who do not intend to be impeded by secondary obstacles from the attainment of their object. (Hear, hear.)

JUGGLED FIGURES.

I spoke of persistent exaggeration, and the right honorable gentlemen has given in the latter part of his speech an extremely the latter part of his speech at extensive simple illustration of that second proposition. If I misheard, as I too often do, he will kindly correct me; but I think I heard him speak of the 1,500,000 Protestants of him speak of the 1,500,000 Protestants of Ireland (cheers), as the other day we heard of the 500,000 sturdy adults who marched upon the flags at Belfast. We happily have a statistical and authentic record of the Protestants of Ireland, but the right honorable gentleman, who modestly believed that his speech contained nothing but demonstrable and unanswerable argument and fact, has not taken the trouble to refer to these statistics which would have told him that the Protestants of Ireland were not 1,500,000, but were eleven hundred and odd thousand. This is a single example of what I will call constant misconstruction. In this case I am sure it was involuntarily given; but if it had not been so I should still have said that it was most daring misconstruction. (Cries of "Oh" and cheers.) IMPERIAL SUPREMACY.

The right honorable gentleman said that

The right honorable gentleman said that we have indeed provided a paper supremacv. but one that is quite worthless. say that our supremacy is to be, for the first time in the history of the last 90 have been a suicidal act, because it would have involved the undertaking on our part of what was not only difficult, but with respect to simultaneous action totally and absolutely impossible. (Cheers.) Though challenged by the speech of the right honorable and learned member for Bury, I will not now touch on the Land League. (Laughter.) But when I do proceed to touch upon the Land League and to censure it I must in honesty and honor make the admission that without the Land League the act of 1881 would not at this moment have stood upon the pages of the statute book. (Cheers.) And without the act, I should be glad to know what, upon the estimate of the most sanguine gentleman sitting opposite, would have been at this moment the condition of Ireland? (Cheers.) THE MAIN ISSUE.

How is Ireland to be governed? Has that question been an awered in this debate? (Cheers.) Has it been answered by the right honorable gentleman, and how does it stand? I presume we are all agreed in thinking that Ireland ought not to be thinking that Ireland ought not to be governed, to use a homely phrase, from hand to mouth. Well, there is another proposition entirely omitted from the speech of the right honorable gontleman, which recognizes the deliberate will and conviction of the governed as an essential element in the legitimate title of the Govment. (Cheers.) Can you hope in these days, indging from the little progress you have made, to govern Ireland against the fixed convictions of the great mass of the nation? (Cheers.) nation? (Cheers.)

COERCION. In 1886 our contention was-it was one of those arguments which the right honorable gentleman regards as so trumpery and worthless—our contention was that government under the Union had failed in Ire iand. It had come to depend upon what I call a judicious mixture of coercion and concession, and it had failed to win the concession, and it had failed to win the affections of the Irish people. At that time the Tory party, represented by Lord Salisbury, virtually agreed with that view. Lord Salisbury admitted that the Government had failed, and he gave his reason and the latter of the control o the Tory party, represented by Lord Salisbury, virtually agreed with that view. Lord Salisbury admitted that the Government had failed, and he gave his reason and stated his remedy. The reason why it had failed was this—because our coercion and our concessions were indiscriminately mixed and not administered upon fixed and permanent principles; and what he said was, "Give me twenty years of firm government"—(Opposition cheers)—we know perfectly well that firm government was a euphemism for coercion—"Give me twenty years of firm government and you will see the government of Ireland will become a matter perfectly practible and easy." (Opposition cheers.) We were agreed, then, in a manner, upon those two propositions, because it was evident that Lord Salisbury, although he was willing to auppress—call it what you will—the people of Ireland for twenty years, did not contemplate the permanent, the unlimited, government of Ireland against the conviction of the great mass of the people. It reminded me of what happened at the Reformation. I do not know what the views of other honorable gentlemen may be, but my conviction is that Queen Elizabeth was a great deal too far seeing and wise a woman to entertain such an idea as that of maintaining an Irish Church in the island of Ireland like that which the Irish Church of an eighth or tenth part of the people. What Queen Elizabeth believed when setting up her Church was that the administrative system of that church was so excellent that it could not fail to convert the people, and in the same way Lord Salisbury had confidence in his twenty years of firm government, which I call coercion, and fully believed that that policy would bring the Irish people to a peaceful state and establish harmony. What I wish to put to honorable members opposite is this—what has become of their nostrum of twenty years firm government? (Cheers.) Could they have had a better opportunity of starting their system? They started it with a magnificent misjority of 120 persons in this house, and has the

LOST, STOLEN OR STRAYED.

Seven years ago it was recognized that we had come to the parting of the ways. It was recognized that we could not go on as we had done. A new charter of policy was laid down. Twenty years were demanded for its application. The appliastion of it was begun with a strong unsparing hand, and with a vast majority behind the Government, and in six years the whole fabric was overthrown. (Loud cheers.) As it was then admitted to be necessary that there should be a policy for Ireland, and as six years have since clapsed, I say we are still more justified now in putting to the Opposition the question, What is your policy for Ireland? (Cheers.) Do you want to start with a new twenty years? Have you the smallest prospect of it; and if you got it what is your security that it would not break down again? (Cheers.) No, sir, this is a subject constantly avoided by the speakers opposite. They do not venture to renew the scheme of Lord Salisbury, and when we ask them what their policy is there is not a break of the silence or even a whisper. (Cheers.)

TO END THE FULD OF AGES.

Mr. Gladstone pointed out, amid cheers, some presumption not very favorable as to what may become of the third. (Hear, jection is to the representatives—the Nationalist representatives—of Ireland." My right honorable friend seems to think—which astonishes me in so astute a man—that he has here got hold of a tangible and a broad distinction. Is it any distinction at all? Is there any distinction at all? at all? Is there any distinction at all? Are these gentlemen not the representatives then of the vast majority of the Irish peope? How came they here? (Loud cheers.) Are they here by the momentary accident of a single election? Are they here owing to the fact that an election has been taken upon some other issues, and that this is a latent issue which has come up in this House? No. Sir. During the last eight years—since 1885, when the franchise was enlarged under a protection which in Ireland was even more essential than an enlargement of the franchise—you had the election of 1885. even more essential than an enlargement of the franchise—you had the election of 1885, you had the election of 1886. You had the discussions from that time to 1892, and you had the election of 1892. On three several occasions the Irish members have been holding the same language in the hearing of their constituents, and three several times they have been sent back to this House that they might continue to hold it. (Cheers.) (Cheers.) EFFECT OF THE DOOR OF HOPE OPENING.

I am aware it may be truly said there was a time when the grievous recollections and traditions of Ireland, the dreadful sufferings and the apparently hopelessness of obtaining from Parliament any consideration for the capital desires of Ireland did sway some men off the precise line of absolute wisdom (laughter), and led some of them to use from time to time expressions which I for one have never thought it necessary to treat as involving moral delin-quency, for which I have found ample explanation in the conditions and the cirexplanation in the conditions and the circumstances under which they spoke, and which stand in most favorable comparison with the means which had been habitually employed by the overpowering might of England and by the ascendancy party in Ireland. (Cheers.) I have never heard a single objection made that has implied the slightest aversion or disaffection towards this country since the time when the door of hope—(loud Irish cheers)—was opened wide and we adopted their cause. (Renewed cheering.)

WHAT BRITAIN HAS DONE ABROAD. In giving free institutions to the colonies you had to deal with the case of one colony the majority of the inhabitants in which were convicts or the children of convicts. You gave them free institutions, and those free institutions have been continued with nothing but the happiest results. (Cheers. But you have not limited your benefactions to your own race. You went to Canada and found there a mass of Frenchmen to your own race. You went to Canada, and found there a mass of Frenchmen. Responsible government was conceded to that country, although the number of Frenchmen in it exceeded the number of Englishmen. (Hear, hear.) You captured the Cape and found there a sturdy race of Dutchmen, the most persistent and intractable of human beings. (Cheers.) You treated them in the same way. But the Irishman! You are to possess this vast empire, spread multi-form over the world, and every portion of it inhabited by men who acknowledge your justice and feel and one exception is to be permanently maintained, and at your own shore you are to have an island to which you are to deny the same free institutions. Does not this justify the statement I have made? Your opposition to the concession of a Parliament to Ireland is always founded on the supposition that the Irish people if they have power put into their hand will always use it wrongly; and you deny to them not the name of men but the proper consequences of the acknowledgment of that name.

TOO HUMAN ! But then say some gentlemen, including the right honorable gentleman the member for Birmingham, "Oh, no, we do not deny them to be human. They are only too human." Only too human! What is the meaning of that? In what are they too meaning of that? In what are they too human? They are too human to have any common-sense; they are too human to have any sense of justice; they are too human to have any perception of their interest, though it glared upon them like the sun at noonday. These imputations, these cruel imputations, are the grounds upon which you are refusing to I reland what you have given in every case throughout the empire. (Loud cheers.) Too human! What is it you mean? You are tampering with ideas under the vain, filmey, transparent form of words, because you shrink from the only proposition by which the relation between your arguments and your proceedings can be rationally and justly described. (Cheers.) (Cheers.)

A BRILLIANT PERORATION. My right honorable friend, the Secretary for Ireland, made a promise to the Irish people; he said that they were aided, and were to be aided, by one of the great parties of this country. I do not think that in the view of the Irish people that my right honorable friend will require any counter-signature. (Cheers.) What is

And the Matter Lies Over-Citizens Want the Sandbars Removed from the Thames-Ald. Coo Appointed Sub-Chief Park Ranger.

A communication was received at last night's meeting of the Board of Works signed by 33 city merchants and prominent citizens asking that the channel of the River Thames be deepened and improved between the forks and the cove bridge. There are at the present time two very inconvenient sandbars in this part of the river, and the pelitioners asked that the place be made as healthful and convenient as possible for the recreation and pleasure seeking inclined persons of the city. Col. Macbeth and Mr. A. G. Neighorn were present in support of the petition. The matter was referred to the engineer.

The engineer reported favorably on the matter of a drain on Park avenue, north of Dundas street, that Mr. Ben Higgins applied for. It will be advertised.

The engineer reported adversely on the petition of ratepayers who asked that Dufferin avenue be opened from Quebec street to Charlotte street. The opening was advocated on account of the newschool being erected there, and that it would be a great convenience to school children. Levants With a Married Brakesman Who Roomed in Her Rouse.

Who Recemed in Her House.

Palmer, N. S., May 11.—The talk of the town has been the elopement early yesterday morning of George Shaw and Mrs. Louis Bosquet. Shaw has been employed as a passenger brakesman on the Ware River Road, and is a grandfather, while Mrs. Bosquet is a woman of perhaps 50. Mrs. Shaw had property left her some time ago in West Brimfield, by the death of her mother, and has been living on the place. Shaw's employment making it impossible for him to go bome nights, he formerly for him to go home nights, he formerly roomed at a place where he had to daily roomed at a place where he had to daily pass the Bosquet residence.

After a time he became acquainted with Mrs. Bosquet, and soon went to room at her house. In April Mr, and Mrs. Bosquet went to take charge of the Monson Poor Farm, and it was soon remarked that the woman spent about as much time at this place as at the farm, where she was matron. Tuesday night, about 8 o'clock, Shaw brought a large trunk to the station here and had it checked, then took a team and drove over the bills to the poor house for his companion, and they took the 1:46 train this morning for the west.

Annual Convention of the Middlesex Societies.

Interesting Sessions—Those Who Par-ticipated—Officers Elected—The Liquor Traffic Condemned - Complimentary Resolution to a London Delegate.

Upon the arrival of trains the delegates were welarrival of trains the delegates were welcomed by the reception committee and escorted to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, where the regular sessions of the convention were held. The church was beautifully decorated. Over the platform streamed a banner bearing the word "Welcome"; underneath this was the motto text, "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." The pulpit platform had been extended to accommodate the speakers, and was surrounded by choice plants and cut flowers.

commodate the speakers, and was surrounded by choice plants and cut flowers.

MONDAY EVENING.

The first session opened Monday evenling with a song service, led by the choir, under the direction of Mr. Russell. At 7:45, Rev. W. A. Cook, Dorchester, president of the county union, called on Rev. J. S. Lochead to conduct the devotional exercises. After singing a hymn, Mr. H. Bishop welcomed the delegates to Parkhill, and to the homes of the people, in a neat and cordial address. Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, Strathroy, responded to the cordial welcome, on behalf of the delegates, in a well-chosen address, closing by inviting the convention to meet in Strathroy in 1894. The choir rendered an anthem, after which the speaker of the evening was introduced, Rev. A. F. McGregor, B. A., Woodstock, who spoke on "Our Fellowship." Mr. Me-Gregor organized the first Christian Endeavor Society in this province at Toronto in 1884, and thus is an ardent advocate of the Christian Endeavor movement. His address was interesting and instructive, and was listened to with rapt attention, being a subject dear to the hearts of Christian Endeavorers. The convention joined in singing a hymn, Rev. J. S. Lochead pronounced the benediction, and the delegates retired to the schoolreem, where an hour was spent in social intercourse.

sembled at the church for the sunrise prayer-meeting, which was led by Rev, J. H. Hunter, Parkhill. This was a season of prayer and praise.

The convention again assembled at 9 a.m., and after devotional exercises conducted by Rev, P. K. Dayfoot, Rev, W. A. Cook was called upon to deliver his annual address. Then followed the report of the county secretary, Miss E. M. Carson, of London. This report showed the number of secieties in the county to be 47, with a total membership of 1.393 active members and over 800 associate members. The report of the treasurer, Miss B. Grundy, of Parkhill, showed a small balance in the treasury.

The next item on the programme was a conversational meeting conducted by Rev, P. K. Dayfoot, when delegates were asked to give interesting features of the work in their society. This method elicited encouraging as well as instructive notes of the work being done. Then followed three interesting papers on "Christian Endeavor Fundamentals": (1) "The Pledge," Mr. W. A. McKay, London; (2) "The Prayer Meeting," Mr. T. W. Birks, London; (3) "The Consectation Meeting," Rev. W. J. Ford, Dresden. Again came three papers on "Who Shall he Our Officers?" (1) "President," Miss Gower, London; (2) "Committees," Mr. W. C. Ferguson, London; (3) "Corresponding Secretary," Mr. W. J. Doherty, London. The morning session closed with an earnest address from Rev. T. E. Harrison, Melbourne, on "Witnessing for Christ."

Tuesday afternoon saw the church filled with delegates and friends of the society. The first item was a model prayer meeting led by Miss E. McLeod, of Parkhill. The chairman then called upon the secretary for the report of the nominating committee, which was unanimously adopted by the convention. The officers are: President, Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, Strathroy, vice-presidents, Rev. J. McKinnon, Springbank; M. Pratt Landon: Miss B. Grundy, Park.

"Montreal, '93," was the subject of an address by Miss E. M. Carson, London, "Christian Endeavor in Relation to Missions" was the subject of a rousing, earnest appeal from Rev. J. Campbell Tibb. Lucasville. The speaker said mis-Tibb, Lucasville. The speaker said missions meant (1) money, (2) intelligence, (3) save, (4) spend, (5) interest, (6) organization, (7) now, (8) stewardship. Under these headings the speaker made plain our duty towards missions. The afternoon closed with the answering of questions, from the question drawer, by Mr. C. J. Aktinson, Toronto. The convention then adjourned to the Jubilce Methodist Church, where they were tendered a social reception by the Parkhill Christian Endeavorers. The social was a pleasing feature of the convention, and the young people of Parkhill deserve praise for the excellent manner in which they carried out the arrangements.

people of Parkhill deserve praise for the excellent manner in which they carried out the arrangements.

The closing session of the convention was Tuesday evening, and, as usual, the last session was the climax of the whole convention. The closing consecration meeting was very impressive. The evening programme was as follows: Devotional exercises, Rev. J. Holmes, Parkhill; address, "Distinctive Features of the Christian Endeavor Society," Rev. Wm. Johnston, Wardsville; address, "How to Develop and Maintain Spirituality," Rev. T. E. Harrison, Melbourne; consecration meeting, led by Rev. W. A. Cook, Dorchester.

The following resolutions were unanimously carried by the convention:

"That we hereby pledge curselves to do all in our power to suppress the liquor traffic by example and vote."

"That the thanks of all the Christian Endeavor societies in Middlesex be tendendered to our indefatigable secretary, Miss E. M. Carson, for her untiring zeal, and to whom more than any one else the success of this convention is due."

FOSTER'S STAR CHAMBRE.

Does the Dominion Government fear disussion of the tariff reform question that ovestigations are now being held in secretly
Vould it not be better to hold the inquiry investigations are now being held in secret; Would it not be better to hold the inquiry in public, that the opinions of manufacturers and others who wait upon the Ministers in deputation could be known to the public? All royal commissions are open to the press, no matter how important their functions may be, and why not the investigation of the trade question? There are many who would like to know exactly what the deputations here and in Montreal have said to the Ministerial committee of three, and whether or not any revision of the tariff has been saked. If the manufacturers are satisfied with high protection the country should know it, so that it may be informed as to the feeling in the manufacturing world. But the Ministers should not stop at manufacturers; they should invite the labor organizations to give their opinion on the tariff.—[Toronto Star. WORKINGMEN NOT BENEFITED BY PROTECT

WORKINGMEN NOT BENEFITED WY PROTRE-TION.

It may be, as alleged, that the destruc-tion of Mr. Henry George's book on Free Trade, in the Canadian postoffice, because the postage was not paid, was according to law and oustern. The sander had put on it a congressional frank which was inopera-tive in Canada, and so the parcels were condemned to destruction. It is, neverthe-less, a pity that this literature was cre-mated; for the book, though somewhat ex-treme and erroncous in some points, is maisly in the right read, and its distribu-tion would have done more good than harm. In such a case, it would have been better to notify the sender that the frank did not cover postage, and give a chance better to notify the sender that the frank did not cover postage, and give a chance for the release of the work. It should have beer sufficient if the postage had afterwards been paid. This book, we cannot doubt, had a considerable influence on the American elections; and it was calculated to lighten some dark spots in Canada, if the opportunity had been given. Among other things it exposes the fallacy of the assumption that workmen are, as a rule, benefited by a policy of protection.

What is Natural Gas?

What is Natural Gas?

Washington, D. C., May 11.—A novel case has come up for the decision of the Treasury Department in its enforcement of the custom laws. It involves the question of the character of natural gas, whether it comes under the tariff as a mineral product or in any other way. Natural gas is imported in great quantities by pipe line companies into Bufalo from Canada. The Bufalo gas companies should pay a duty on the imported natural gas, and the matter is now before the board of general appraisers at new York for decision.

Here's a really funny item, with an un-dercurrent of sadness, such as funny items often have: "A new Missouri law makes it a penitentiary offense for a husband to desert his wife until they have lived to gether at least ten years." The L. and P. S. R. Difficulty May Involve the M. C. R.

President Ledyard Informed of the Situation.

The Section-Men Have Left the Road and M. C. R. Trains Are Preceded by a Hand-Car-A Question of Law Involved.

London and Port Stanley affairs, running London and Port Stanley affairs, running amuck as they appear to be, are fast assuming a complexion that calls for immediate action one way or the other. The latest, and a regrettable, phase of this interesting entanglement is the possibility of the L. and P. S. R. difficulty involving the M. C. R., thus reopening the trouble of a month or so ago.

The situation is briefly this. With the section-men walking the streets, striving to get some security for their wages, the road is left uncared for, and it is against the law for any train to run over a road that is not constantly under the supervision of sectionmen.

Mr. Larmour informed the M. C. R. by telegraph this morning of the situation, and gave them their usual running order, telling them at the same time that any accident that might arise would be on their own responsibility. The M. C. R. hardly knew what to do under the circumstances, but ultimately it was decided to dispatch four of their own section men over the road on a jigger, and then follow up with the train. How long the M. C. R. will be bothered with such an arrangement remains to be seen.

Mr. J. G. Lavin, Canadian general passenger agent M. C. R., came up from St. Thomas this morning on the 11:40 train. To Mr. Larmour he stated that he was waiting to hear from Mr. Ledvard in regard to the situation, and it all depended on what his verdict was whether the M. C. R. continued to run into the city or not. men. Mr. Larmour informed the M. C. R. by being obliged to shut down on account of existing complications?" a reporter asked.

"Well, yes there is," answered Mr. Larmour. "The Government may step in and interfere. In fact I heard a well developed and healthy rumor this morning to the effect that some one in the city had already acquainted the Government of the state of affairs."

And so he resolved to keep the secret to guard the fatal mistake from the knowledge of the world Only their own two selves were riviy to it, therefore when we selves were riviy to it, therefore was self-as Mark's; and yet scarcely an error, for perhaps nine surgeons out of ten would so have administered it to a patient under similar circumstances, and have made no exception of Lady Oswald. He, Dr. Davenal, must suffer this to be assumed, saying himself as little as possible upon the matter to any one; in a case where the tormination had been so unfortunate, his reticence would be excused. He leaned his head upon his hand in the dark twilight, and pondered over the circumstances. He could not keep his mind from dwelling upon them most morbidly. A strange fatality scemed to have attended the affair altigether. There had been the obstinate persistence of Lady Oswald to see her landlord, in spite of common sense and of Mr. Oswald Cray's representation that it could not possibly serve woman—of their having gone by mistake, she and her mistress, to the wrong side of the station at Hiddon, and had thereby lost a train. They went, naturally enough perhaps for inexperienced travelers, to the side of the platform on which they had descended on going; and it was not until a train came up to the other side, took in the passengers waiting on that side of the platform, and went onto Hallingham, that they discovered their mistake. But for that they would have been in Hallingham safe when the accident happened to the late train. Then there was the fact of Mark Cray's having been in the train, of his having been the first one to see Lady Oswald. When brought afterwards to the home terminus, she had said, "Mr. Cray will go home with me;" and later she had insisted on him taking the operation. He, himself, had been called out to Thorndyke, had been kept there while the long hours of the best put of the day filted away. Had he not been called out, why the operation would, beyond all question have been performed in the morning, probably by himself, for he should have seen her early and detected its need. There was the absence of the pupil Julius Wild, through what appeared to be an unaccountable mistake; had that pupil been present, to him would have fallen the task of getting Parkins from the room, and the chloroform could not have been administered. A curious chapter of accidents—or (what are called such—and Dr. Davenal lost filmself in the chain of thought. "Oh merciful father, forgive him! forgive him this slight's work '!'he murmured, "And mayest thou have taken that poor woman to her yest!"

ing from his chair. "Wait until you are called."

Neal after a moment's stare, shot back again. It was not so much the sharp words, more imperative than those commonly used by his master, but the tone of pain in which they were spoken, that struck Neal; nay it almost seemed as if his entrance, had brought a sort of terror to the doctor.

It was not terror. Neal was mistaken. But Dr. Davenal had been so completely buried in thought, not altogether of this world, that the abrupt interruption with its commonplace excuse, had seemed to him singularly inopportune, causing him to ware away abruptly both the man and his words.

He satonin the dark again, and Neal took his place at the front door, and stood there looking out. Not a soul was in the house, save himself and his master; and it may have seemed to Neal a more cheering way of passing the evening than to be shut up in doors.

passing the evening than to be shut up indoors.

It grew darker. Neal strolled along by the skirting of the shrubs of the garden, and took his stand at the front gate, ready to exchange courtesies with the people who would soon be going home from church and chapel. The moon did not give much light yet, but the night promised to be as bright at the previous one had been.

"Halloa!" cried Neal, as a man he knew came up quickly. "You are in a hurry tonight."

"I have been out on business, Mr. Neal," replied the man, was in fact an assistant to a carpenter and undertaker. "Our work can't always wait for the Sabbath to go by before it is seen to."

"Lady Oswald. The message came down to us the best part of an hour ago, so I've been up there."

It has been observed that Neal has been too well trained a gentleman both in manners and nerves, to express much surprise, but the answer did cause him the very greatest sheek. He was so startled as to take refuge in disbelse."

"Lady Oswald, did you say? But she's not dead!"

"But she is," replied the man. "I ought toknow. I've just come from her."

"Do you mean chloroform."

"That's it. I nover can remember the name. But I'd rather call it poison, for my par:—killing folks off without a warning."

"Who gave it to Lady Oswald?"

"Your master," replied the man, lowering his voice to a whisper as he gianced at the windows of the house. "The servants were in the room with me up there, and they told me about it. There was something to be done to my lady—some bones to be set, I believe—and the doctors went this afternoon, and they gave her this stuff and it killed her. I wonder purliament don't make a law against its use, for my part."

"I am sorry to hear this," exclaimed Neal.

"My lady was very frienly to me."

"Ay. The servants be cut up like anything. And enough to make 'em! It's a shocking thing. The lady's maid says she can't think why they should have given her the stuff, for Mr. Cray himself told her, when he was there in the afternoon, that what they had to do to my lady wouldn't hurt her no more than a fleabite. Anyway, she's dead. But I can't stop here. I must get back with the measure. Good-night, Mr. Neal,"

"Good-night," replied Neal.

SARNIA SUNBEAMS.

Visit of the Seventh Fusiliers—The G. T. R. Roundhouse.

The beautiful steel steamer Manitoba, of the C. P. R., which runs from Owen Sound to Port Arthur, called at Sarnia, the other day, and many of our citizens went on board and were delighted with the splendid furnishings. Capt. Anderson, a former resident of Sarnia, is in command.

The death is announced of Harry Leslie, the bright young son of Mr. H. W. Mills, manager of the Sarnia Street Railway.

Posters are out announcing the coming of the Seventh Fusiliers, of London, on May 24, and they will no doubt be greeted by a large erowd on that occasion.

The offices of the Street Railway Company are nearly completed and will be a great improvement. They face on Front street, opposite the Hotel Vendome.

On Tuesday evening, May 9, the Companions of the Forest, A. O. F., held an "At Home" in their lodge room. A splendid programme of songs, readings, recitations, etc., was rendered. Bro. Richards, of London, who organized the circle about a year ago, was present, and gave the ladies of Sarnia some pointers in regard to joining the Companions. The circle here has a membership of nearly 50, a very good showing for the length of time organized.

The Oddfellows are around among their lady friends. soliciting names to start a lodge of the Daughters of Rebekah.

The G. T. R. officials have finally decided to build the roundhouse as the tunnel station, and work will be immediately commenced. Point Edward will then be truly called the "Deserted Village," although grass could never be induced to grow on its streets. This move will necessitate the removal to the south ward of all the train hands now residing at the Point.

The convention of the bee-keepers of Lambton will meet in Sarnia on Friday, the 19th inst., to discuss the best way to prevent the bees from becoming extinct, as there was great mortality mong the bees last winter, whele apiaries being swept away.

The Chief Justice—In other words, certain general powers are given to the Dominion Parliament, and out of these are carved certain exceptions, including municipal institutions and the police power, under which it may fairly be claimed the cipal institutions and the police power, under which it may fairly be claimed the liquor traffic falls.

All through the arguments both days, the chief justice and Mr. Justice Taschereau appeared to be strongly in favor of the new view that the total prohibition of the liquor traffic could be exercised by the provinces by virture of their power to establish and exercise local government under the provincial system. Those members of the court seemed to place great stress on the fact that the Dunkin Act of 1864 was a purely municipal affair, and, in the view of the chief justice, can only be repealed by the local and not the general parliament. As his Lordship said, the Dominion Parliament may have the power to prohibit prohibition, but until they exercise that power it may be that the provinces can, within the municipal and police powers, pass a prohibition liquor law. Chief Justice Strong and Justice Taschereau leaned to the view that both the Federal and Local Legislatures may have power to pass a prohibitory law. On the other hand, Mr. Justice Sedgewick seemed to hold the view, judging from his remarks, that the Federal authority alone has this power. Then the extent of the prohibition comes in question also. The respondents in this case only seek to make out a case for the power to prohibit the retail trade. Mr. Du Vernet replied, contending that the Dominion alone has the power to prohibit, and that such a law as the Ontario Local Option Act was unconstitutional. Judgment was reserved.

"Yes, Lactated Food is now ahead of all other foods ever prepared for the use of infants, and my sales of it are increasing every month. I know a host of mothers who are using it, and all speak highly of it as a nourisher and flesh-builder."

These are the words of one of Ontario's most prominent druggists, who has had a varied experience in the sale of foods.

Lactated Food is the choice of thousands of mothers in every section of our country; they have tested it severely and have never known it to fail. It is the only pre-digested food known to the medical faculty. It is the only food that is tolerated on weak atomachs. Weak and puny infants, when fed with Lactated Food, soon show signs of true vitality and strength; it builds up quickly the emaciated and worn body, and often saves the lives of precious darlings. If baby has to be fed artificially, give it Lactated Food and nothing else.

The Section-Men Have Left the Road and M. C. R. Trains Are Preceded by a Hand-Car—A Question of Law Involved.

London and Port Stanley affairs, running anuck as they appear to be, are fast assuming a complexion that calls for immediate action one way or the other. The latest, and a regrettable, phase of this interesting entanglement is the possibility of the L. and P. S. R. difficulty involving the M. C. R., thus reopening the trouble of a month or so ago.

The situation is briefly this. With the section-men walking the streets, striving to get some security for their wages, the road is left uncared for, and it is against the law for any train to run over a road that is not constantly under the supervision of sectionmen.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The nine-inch nickel steel armor plate manufactured by the Carnegie Steel Company was tested yesterday. It represented 355 tons, and is to be used for the Amphitrite. It proved highly satisfactory, and earned a premium of $30 per ton. Two rounds were fired from an eight-inch breech-loading rifle. The first shot penetrated the plate, and the second passed through the plate and slightly into the backing, but no cracks were made in the plate in either instance.

He leaned his head upon his hand in the dark twilight, and pondered over the circumstances. He could not keep his mind from dweiling upon them most morbidly. A strange fatality seemed to have attended the saffair atiogether. There had been the obstinate persistence of Lady Oswald to see her landlord, in spite of common sense and of Mr. Oswald Cray's representation that it could not possibly serve her; there had been the sudden falling lame of the carriage horse, for which the coachman had been unable to account; and there had been the accident to the train. Parkins had told him a confused all—confused through her own grief, poor woman—of their having gone by miatake, she and her mistress, to the wrong side of the station at Hildon, and bad thereby lost a train. They went, naturally enough perhaps for inexperienced travelers, to the side of the platform on which they had descended on going; and it was not until a train came up to the other side, took in the passengers waiting on that side of the platform, and went onto Hallingham, that they discovered their mistake. But for that they would have been in Hallingham safe when the first one to see Lady Oswald. When brought afterwards to the lone terminus, she had said, "Mr. Cray will go home with me;" and later she had insisted on him taking the operation. He, himself, had heen called out, twy the operation would, beyond all question have been performed in the morning, probably by himself, had heen called out, twy the operation would, beyond all question have been administered. A curious chapter of accidents—or invalidation of the proper of the day flitted away. Had he not been called out, twy the operation would, beyond all question have been performed in the koff getting Parkins from the room, and the chloroform ould not have been administered. It was not terror. Neal was mistaken. But Dr. Davenal had been so completely buried in thought, not altogether of this world, that the abraph interruption with its commonplace excuse, had seemed to him singularly inopportune, gausing him to wave away shrupily both the man and his words.

The heautiful steel steamer Maniton, of the C. P. R., which runs from Owen Sound to Port Arthur, called at Sarnia the other day, and many of our citizens went on board and were delighted with the splendid furnishings. Capt. Anderson, a former resident of Sarnia, is in command.

The death is announced of Harry Leslie, the bright young son of Mr. H. W. Mills, manager of the Sarnia Street Railway.

Posters are out announcing the coming of the Seventh Fusiliers, of London, on May 24, and they will no doubt be greeted by a large crowd on that occasion.

The offices of the Street Railway Company are nearly completed and will be a great improvement. They face on Front street, opposite the Hotel Vendome.

On Tuesday evening, May 9, the Companions of the Forest, A. O. F., held an "At Home" in their lodge room. A splendid programme of songs, readings, recitations, etc., was rendered. Bro. Richards, of London, who organized the circle about a year ago, was present, and gave the ladies of Sarnia some peinters in regard to joining the Companions. The circle here has a membership of nearly 50, a very good showing for the length of time organized.

The Oddfellows are around among their lady friends, soliciting names to start a lodge of the Daughters of Rebekah.

The G. T. R. officials have finally decided to build the roundhouse at the tunnel station, and work will be immediately commenced. Point Edward will then be truly called the "Deserted Village," although grass could never be induced to grow on its streets. This move will necessitate the removal to the south ward of all the train hands now residing at the Point.

The convention of the bee-keepers of Lambton will meet in Sarnia on Friday, the 19th inst., to discuss the best way to prevent the bees from becoming extinct, as there was great mortality among the bees last winter, whole apiaries being swept away.

The respondents in this case only seek to make out a case for the power to prohibit the retail trade. Mr. Du Vernet replied, contending that the Dominion alone has the power to prohibit, and that such a law as the Ontario Local Option Act was unconstitutional. Judgment was reserved.

A DRUGGIST SPEAKS

About Lactated Food!

"Yes, Lactated Food is now ahead of all other foods ever prepared for the use of infants, and my sales of it are increasing every month. I know a host of mothers who are using it, and all speak highly of it as a nourisher and flesh-builder."

These are the words of one of Ontario's most prominent druggists, who has had a varied experience in the sale of foods.

Lactated Food is the choice of thousands of mothers in every section of our country; they have tested it severely and have never known it to fall. It is the only pre-digested food known to the medical faculty. It is the only food that is tolerated on weak stomachs. Weak and puny infants, when fed with Lactated Food, soon show signs of true vitality and strength; it builds up quickly the emaciated and worn body, and often saves the lives of precious darlings. If baby has to be fed artificially, give it Lactated Food and nothing else.

THE NATIVE AFRICAN CHOIR-

It may interest readers of the Advertisk to know that the exact words of her Majesty Queen Victoria to this famous organization was as follows: "I am pleased to see you all here this afternoon, and I have admired your singing very much." The bishop of London at Fulham Palace said: "I am very grateful, indeed, to the African choir for their kindness in coming and singing, and I have greatly admired the music, and I hope they will always have a pleasant recollection of their visit to Fulham Palace. I very highly appreciate the object at which they are aiming, namely, the founding of a college for the improvement of their own people, and I trust they will be entirely successful in their endeavors." A magnificent frame of photographs, representing the choir is various attitudes, is exhibited in Edy Bros. 'store on Dundas street. A Kaffir piano will also be a most remarkable instrument that ever human eyes beheld. The engagement promises, from its unique character, to be one of the most successful ever given in London.

—News has been received of the death in Ireland of Dr. Adrian Taylor, which took place at Clontoo, the residence of his son, Major Taylor, at an advanced age. Deceased was a native of India, where his father served as colonel of dragoons, and was a brother of Frederick Taylor, principal of Delhi College, who was killed at the massacre there by the Sepoys, and an ephew of the botanist, Dr. Thos. Taylor, of Dunkerron Castle, Kerry, whose grandson, H. Taylor, tea merchant, resides in this city. When a boy coming to Europe, Dr. Taylor conversed and shock hands with the Emperor Napoleon at St. Helena. He was widely known, and leaves many relatives in India, Ireland and Ontario.

The Boys and the Firecrackers.

The opinion that this is pre-eminently the age of the small by has been exceedingly prevalent. No one, however, must run away with such an erroneous idea. The police authorities have decided to grind the "dear things" under the iron hand of a despotic tyranny. Four sportive juveniles assembled in a lane off Kent street yesterday, and proceeded to ignite the festive firecrackers. They were not left in peaceful pursuance of the enjoyment long, though. A burly constable summoned them to appear before the magistrate at the Police Court. Their mothers were present this morning, and when the future good behavior of the recreants were vouched for, Magistrate Parke dismissed the quartet. Charles Brown appeared on a charge of infringing the bylaw. He was propelling a bicycle on the sidewalk before the break of dawn. He was discharged with a warning.
