The Parish Councils Bill. London, Jan. 12 .- The report stage of the Parish Councils Bill was finished at midnight, and Henry Fowler, president of the Local Government Board, who has had the bill in charge, moved at once the third reading. The bill was passed amid loud Liberal cheers, and the House adjourned until Feb. 12. Clemenceau's Promised Sensation.

PARIS, Jan. 12 .- M. Clemenceau, editor of Justice, has received from Toulon a most important document relating to the French navy, which he has resolved to publish in the interest of national defense. He will demand that a check be placed on the reckless waste prevailing, which he says is nullifying the efforts being made to reorganize the navy. Clemenceau promises to furnish proof of his assertion to-morrow by official documents.

Change the Mode of Taxation.

LONDON, Jan. 12. - Ninety-four members of the House of Commons have signed an address requesting Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to revise the present methods of taxation. They propose a graduated scale of death duties, exempting estates of less than £500 and increasing the rate on larger estates. Thus while estates of £4.000 would be taxed 4 per cent. those of £500,000 would be taxed 10 per cent. According to the Radical taxation.

A Ship Mutiny.

LONDON, Jan. 13 .- A dispatch from Pernambuco states that a mutiny has occurred on the Government cruiser Nictheroy, The trouble was caused by several of the crew who had been drinking heavily. The mutineers were overpowered, but not until two of them had been killed. The remainder were put in irons.

The British Victorious.

London, Jan. 13. - A dispatch from Mizanbuce says reports from Victoria say that P. G. Johnston, Imperial Commissioner to Central Africa, is at Lake Nyassa avenging the treachery of Chief Makanjira, who caused the disaster to Capt. Maguire and his party. Old Makanjira has since been murdered, but the successor to the hereditary titles has now been routed. All his positions have been captured and a number of slaves have been released. Mr. Johnston's force was lately augmented by 100 Sikhs, two British officers and the gunboats Pioneer and Adventurer, manned by seamen. The British lost one man, one Sikh and two irregulars were killed and nine wounded.

BUSINESS BETTER,

Say Dun & Co.'s and Bradstreet's Review of Trade.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.-R. G. Dun & Co.'s week y review of trade says business has distinctly improved since the new year came, and the gain is no longer visible, only in speculative mar-kets, but is based upon actual in-crease in the production of industries. THEY DIED HARD.

Particulars of the Slaughter of the British by Matabeles.

Fought Behind Dead Horses-All the Whites Killed.

CAPE Town, Jan. 13.-Advices from a Matabele source are to the effect that Capt. Wilson and his party died fighting hard. A native has arrived at Buluwage, who had been present when the Matabeles made their first attack on Capt. Wilson. They at first thought that the whites had a numerous force and retired after the first skirmish. Lobengula, in his wagon, fled for a short distance, but learning that Capt. Wilson's force was numerically weak, the Matabeles were ordered back to attack them. The natives, in overwhelming numbers, fought the whites, but the latter battled gallantly behind the cover afforded them by their dead horses. It was impossible, however, for the whites to hold the Matabeles in check, and their fire grew weaker and weaker. But the Matabeles rushed on the British, nearly all of whom were wounded. All of the live whites were killed with assegais and stripped of their clothing and accoutrements. A party has arrived at Fort Temi and reports meeting a band of armed natives, one of whom was carrying a rifle that had belonged to one of Capt. Wilson's men.

AN INDIAN'S SUPERSTITION Causes an Uprising in Mexico-He Worshiped a Leai,

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 13 .- An uprising is threatened at Lecheria, and already $70,000 worth of property has been destroyed. An Indian working on the Hacinda de Lecheria found a maguy leaf which had been worm-eaten until it contained a tracing, which, to the Indian, appeared to be a reproduction of the Virgin of Guadaloupe. He prostrated himself before the plant to worship the picture, then hastened to the master to tell him the great mark of favor bestowed upon him from heaven. The master, Senor H. Pimenthal, came and looked at the leaf, contemptuously remarking that any worm could eat out as good a picture. He then snapped it with his cane and left. The Indian was infuriated. That night the hacinda and 1,000 balls of cotton were burned, and the incendiarism has been traced to the Indian. The old Indians were aroused over the supposed indignity, and have assembled and are holding a great feast. A petition has been sent to the cathedral in this city asking that a prelate be sent to examine the plan real estate and personal property picture, but it is feared that before he can would be subjected to the same rate of arrive and disabuse the Indians of their superstition an uprising will occur.

Such Will be the Next Sitting of the Dominion Parliament.

A Prediction of Startling Results to Follow Disclosures,

Lord Aberdeen May Take a Hand-Tory Dissension Growing-The Premier

> Anxious to Delay the Session.

[Ottawa Correspondence of the Toronto News, Conservative.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—There are not a few who would like to know just now when Parliament will meet, and I think Sir John Thompson is as eager to know as anvone else. But what a session it will be when it does come! Sir John may think that as it promises to be one of the longest session on record he can more easily roast the beggars out than freeze them out, and delays the calling of the House together until the latest possible moment, that when it runs into the heated term the ardor of the inquisitive Opposition will melt under the rays of a July sun.

But this is to be the fighting session. This is to be the session in which the Opposition is going to show that they have adopted some of the tactics of the late Premier, Sir John Macdonald, by holding back a reserve of ammunition to fire off as a parting shot which. in former years, before they gained their experience, would have been wasted in skirmishing during the earlier sittings of the House.

Just look at the list of subjects that are sure to engage the attention of the members next session. Tariff Reform, Mc-Greevy-Connolly case, Sir Adolphe Caron charges, Sir Hector L. & Co., Yellow Martin and Black Tarte, Curran Bridge, Further Gerrymander, French Treaty, while with the etc , etc., etc., I might fill up half a column. This has no reference to the dissension within the party ranks. That the gap is widening, even the most ardent Tories do not deny, nor do they attempt to conceal it. Their only defense is the hope that something will turn up to demoralize the Grits, which would give them a fair fighting chance at the next election. What a happy family. Is it a wonder, then, that Sir John Thompson should wish to put off the evil day, for when the House does meet it will be fight from the word go, and

They have an Aberdeen, not a Stanley, to deal with this time, and if all I hear is true, our present Governor-General is ikely to take a pretty decided stand. There is more than one disquieted member of the present Administration here who would breathe easier if Lord Stanley had remained a little longer.

However, there is much in store for the guilty ones, and if some startling results do not follow the disclosures of next session my prediction fails.

FAREWELL!

Service of Praise.

The Church Crowded- A Warm Welcome to the Favorite Basso, Mr. J. M. Williams-The Mehan Ladies' Quartet.

The service of praise at the Dundas Street Center Methodist Church last evening was participated in by two men-Mr. W. J. Birks and Mr. J. Marshall Williams -whose names will long be held in admiring esteem by the members of the congregation which is identified with that building. The former, after ten years of constant labor as organist and choir master, was making his valedictory appearance; the latter, who was for some time basso soloist under Mr. Birks, and has latterly been pursuing his studies in New York, returned specially to testify by vocal assistance, a gracious appreciation of his former mentor. The feelings of the large audience which assembled to extend a joint farewell and welcome were diversified-there was sorrow at the loss of one of the city's leading musical figures, and joy at again being permitted to hear the sonorous tones of its much-favored basso. In thinking over Mr. Birks' career in London no surprise is expressed at the retention of such a source of unbounded delectation and pleasure. But what does occasion remark is the subtle but powerful influence which he has uniformly exerted over the members of his magnificent choir. Throughout the continent of America there may be musical organizations containing on the whole better voices; but it is not stepping beyond the bounds of accurate fact to affirm that, in a similar, area, there does not exist a more superbly trained body of singers than that of the Dundas Center. Mr. Birks may not be a great organist; but he has all the essentials of a great choir leader. An accurate knowledge of music; a pleasing mode of conveying instruction; a magnetism of demeanor which conciliates every individual, while it bends all to his will; a moderately indulgent disposition - these are the points of character and requirement which have made his labors in this locality so eminently successful.

Mr. Williams was accorded an enthusiastic reception, and he deserved it. Since his last appearance in this city his methods have been broadened and matured, and his vocal powers show a corresponding development in the excellence of tone and ease of production. "Honor and Arms," an air from Samson, was his first number, and in response to a rapturous encore he sang Gounod's "Calvary." He also rendered two other solos-"Watch and Pray" (Cremer), "If Laws Severe" (Jewess) - and took part in a quartet, bringing together once again the four vocalists whose efforts in consort some years ago were so much admired. Mr. Williams was somewhat retarded in his singing by a heavy cold. But he is too impassive. He could introduce more energy and vim into his method with an improving result. He might, for instance, profit by Mr. Carroll's example in this particular. who always sings with taste and expression. Aside from the mode of expressing his songs, however, Mr. Williams has a voice of unusual power, resonance and sweetness. All his numbers were very similar in character, and did not afford him the widest possible scope for displaying his powers. The Mehan Ladies' Quartet, of Detroit, had five numbers assigned to them on the programme, and the inevitable encore fiend—not, probably, unjustly in these cases—made the most of the opportunities presented. The results attained by the four ladies forming the organization-Miss Nellie Goodwin, Miss Jessie Corlette, Mrs. Mehan and Mrs. Younghusband-are indeed worthy of the highest commendation. Their voices blended with sweet agreeableness, and the admiration which their successive rendering evoked in a responsive audience must have been ample requital for the satisfactory attempts made to please. A report of this concert would not be complete were some mention not made of Miss Detta Ziegler's singing of the solo parts in Mendelssohn's "Hear My Prayer," as well as of the admirable effect produced by the choir in rendering Gounod's "By Babylon's Wave." Mr. William Skinner sang the solo in Verdi's "Spirit Immortal" with acceptability. Mr. William Moxon, who is to take Mr. Birks' place, played an organ solo with much brilliancy of execution, and showed himself to be a master of the instrument over which he is to preside.

There was one feature of the evening which marred an otherwise enjoyable concert-the almost invariable encore which followed the solo numbers. The larger portion of the audience was not to blame. as only a small section of the misguided aided this uncommendable procedure, Often the artists were themselves responsible. They sometimes responded too readily to a desultory applause which did not indicate the wish of the majority of their hearers. The programme as printed on this occasion was lengthy enough without any repetitions.

who lives in Luxemburg, St. Louis county, is mourning the loss of his wife, who, he believes, has gone back to Germany with the lover of her early youth. Years ago, when Mrs. Schramm was a school-girl in Germany, she had a playmate named Fritzsch. As they grew in years they came to love each other and at last plighted their troth. But when Herman Schramm asked her of her parents they consented, and Fritzsch's sweetheart became Mrs. Schramm before she was 17 years old. As soon as they were married, Mr. and Mrs. Schramm came to America. During the World's Fair Fritzsch came to America and then visited the Schramms. On Sunday, during her husband's absence, Mrs. Schramm and Fritzsch left the place and have not been seen since. She left four children behind.

DEADLY DIPHTHERIA.

Are the Proper Remedies Always Applied?

to Combatting the Scourge.

because old remedies are still tenaciously adhered to, such as tincture of iron, chlorate of potash, etc., or is it because the mode of treatment is defective from a wrong application of remedies used. Diphtheria, according to the progressive physician of the day, is in its initial stage, purely and simply, a local disease eventually becoming constitutional if not properly

"He who hesitates is lost," and the physician who fails to recognize diphtheria in its incipient stage, at the same time using old-time remedies, will almost invariably add to the death rate.

There really should be no difficulty in discriminating between diphtheritic cases and other throat affections.

All admit some similarity exists beween acute diseases of this organ, such as pain on swallowing, fever, enlarged glands, spots of matter, etc.; but though such is possible to a discerning physician, the difference in the formation of the spots should be a sufficient diagnostic point.

Matter in a diphtheritic throat invariably appears on some one particular portion, especially the tonsil, as a small spot varying in size according to stage of disease at which seen, undefined in shape, creamy color, leathery consistence and spreading repidle if you color and spreading repidle if you consistence and spreading repidle in the properties of the propert ing rapidly if not checked. Spots of matter in follicular tonsillitis and other minor throat troubles never appear singly, but consist of separate points scattered over one or both tonsils. This distinction, broadly speaking, space not being allowed for a more extended description, is worthy of some consideration. In the treatment of this most dreaded disease all remark the want of uniformity existing between physicians in the drugs used and their mode of application, some saturating the system with tincture of iron, whisky, chlorate of potash, etc., harmless in themselves but equally so in their action upon the disease; while others again, recognizing the cause and nature of the trouble, use appropriate remedies, but their methods of applying them render their effect abortive. Chlorine has always been looked upon as a great germ destroyer, and some of its combinations, especially chloral hydrate, exhibit a most marked effect upon the microbes of the disease. On these lines a treatment has been satisfactorily based, which, if generally adopted by physicians and the public, must reduce the death rate to a minimum. The following is the method referred to: Take 60 grains of chloral hydrate, dissolve in one ounce of water, and apply thoroughly to the patches of membrane in the throat every two hours day and night, by means of a swab made by wrapping absorbent cotton around the end of a piece of wood suitably sharpened. Keep this mixture in a tightly corked bottle. For the fever use from half to one drop doses of tincture of aconite, according to age, every hour until the aconite to render the treatment still says that in protesting against the action of more positive, arseniate of copper in one Mr. McCallum I and my friends are enthree-hundredth part of a grain can be deavoring to stir up dissension and strife. three-hundredth part of a grain can be given, dissolved in a teaspoonful of water between each time of swabbing. This drug is harmless in the doses mentioned and can be obtained from druggists in tablet form. In giving nourishment or drinks, do so immediately before using awab or taking medicine, so that their effect upon the throat is not destroyed. effect upon the throat is not destroyed. The above treatment, if used in the early stages, renders complications rare, shortens the period of the disease, and very materially relieves the mind of the physician and the parents. The after treatment and many minor details cannot be outlined in a short article like the present, but will be left to the discretion of the attendant. At some future time it would be considered a privilege to place before your readers the injurious effects, accruing from the use of quinine in the early stages of influenza or

The large majority of cross, fretful and peevish babies are fed on poorly prepared food. These foods create irritation of the stomach and bowels; they conduce to indigestion and constipation. When baby has to live on such vile foods and endure such dreadful troubles can we look for health and good nature?

It is vastly different with the babies who are nourished on pure and health-giving Lactated Food. They know no ills or troubles; they are always healthy, happy and hearty.

A well-known Canadian physician has said: "If the babies of Canada who cannot be nursed by their mothers were fed regularly on Lactated Food, few of them would suffer or die. In my opinion Lac-tated Food should be the only diet for infants, who are deprived of mother's milk." Mothers, for the sake of your little ones, give this grand food a week's trial.

At the late election, however, Mr. Forbes, who is a Catholic, was replaced by Mr. Rufus Russel, an Orangeman. Mr. McCallum was one of those who voted against him (Forbes) at the council meeting at which the officers are selected. Mr. Forbes regards his displacement as being wholly due to his religion. He says he has always been a warm friend of Mr. McCallum's and has more than once moved his nomination for the reeveship. For the member for East Lambton to thus turn against him because he is a Catholic, he thinks is anything but charitable. Mr. Forbes says the Forest Standard, a P. P. THE INHERITANCE TAX.

(Chicago Herald.)

Prominent lawyers differ widely in opinion regarding Senator Hill's bill to tax inheritances. Elihu Root thinks the tax would "work much harm, not so much to the persons and property at which it is aimed as to the people at large." Without stopping to explain how it would hurt "the people at large" he hurried on to intimate that we have too many tax laws, and to say that he would oppose the bill because if it should pass it would "open the gateway to an army of office-holders—a thing most to be deplored." That would be a respectable argument against a general income tax, but it can hardly be regarded as a serious argument against a tax on legacies and successions. When Mr. Root makes it his principal objection he leaves us to infer that he has no very important objection to offer.

Henry H. Anderson, Cornelius Vanderbilt's legal adviser, takes higher ground. He does not think that Congress has a constitutional right to impose a tax of this kind. He does not argue the point, nor explain wherein the tax would be repugnant to the constitution. It may easily be, however, that he has in mind the constitutional requirement that direct taxes shall be apportioned among the States in proportion to population. Upon this requirement may be based a plausible argument against not only an inheritance tax but against a personal income tax. What is a direct tax? It will be admitted that an indirect tax is one which is originally collected from certain persons or classes and in turn collected by them from those to whom they sell the taxed article. For example, the tax on whisky is indirect because it is collected by government officers from distillers, who in turn collect it from dealers and they again from consumers. And so of other excise taxes and all taxes on imports excepting the form all taxes on imports, excepting the few articles imported by consumers themselves for their own use. Neither an income tax nor an inheritance tax comes under this description. Each is collected directly from the person receiving the income or the inheritance. Are these, therefore, "direct taxes" in the sense in which that term is used in the constitution? If so, they must be apportioned among the States according to population, as the constitution requires. That may be possible in the case of an income tax, but hardly so in the case of an inheritance tax. In either case a tax so apportioned upon these subjects would bear very unequally upon the people of different States. Neither tax would accomplish what its advocates seek to accomplish, because neither would tax incomes or estates equally, and neither can be taxed equally in all the States under the constitution if taxes on incomes and inheritances are "direct" in the meaning of the constitution. But assuming that an inheritance tax is not direct in that sense, it is constitutional if made uniform. And the most of the lawyers whose opinions on the subject have been published agree that such a uniform tax would be easily and surely collected, and that, if moderate, it would involve no hardship and no wrong, because no one has a natural right to property left by a

A Sign of Promise

Every good business man is now studying the signs of the times. General business, although dull, did not prove exceptionally so in 1893 for those who persistently sought it in legitimate ways by judicious newspaper advertising. However dull it may be at any time, it will always be dullest with those who fail to advertise their wares.

Business is not dead, but there is not enough of it at present to satisfy every one. Many get less than they need. Some get enough. The latter are always the liberal advertisers. As in the past, so in the future—they will get the lion's share. Now is the time to plan out a vigorous campaign for 1894. We are ready to assist.

It will be observed from the above statement that the duties collected in London during last year are greater than at any other point except Hamilton, Toronto and Windsor. In Hamilton the extra duties are collected from tobacco. Toronto duties are specially swelled by the receipts for spirits, malt and tobacco, while the large sum collected in the Windsor district is accounted for by the operations of the Walkerville distillery.

Of the duties in the Province of Quebec over two-thirds are collected at the port of Montreal, chiefly on spirits. tobacco and cigars, the first-named representing nearly a million dollars of the revenue accruing.

London is the headquarters of the cigar manufacturing industry for the Province of Ontario, $128,922 of the $286,682 duties collected in Ontario being contributed from this city. The only other city in the Dominion showing larger collections is Montreal, where $300,820 was collected.

The duties collected in London were greater than those received from the entire Province of Nova Scotia and were also more than those contributed by the Provinces of New Brunswick and British Columbia. The collections at the port of London were made up as follows:

Lord Aberdeen as Engine Driver-Graphic Description of Experiences While Vicercy of Ireland-Lady Aberdeen and Her Interesting

the character sketch of Lord and Lady proceedings was reached when Lord Aber-Aberdeen given by Mr. W. T. Stead, the distinguished English writer, in the last number of his Review of Reviews. Mr. Stead spent some time at Rideau Hall as the guest of the Governor-General and his Irish democracy and all that was best in wife, and he evidently writes from full and the popular party in Britain. reliable information. He gives graphic and interesting glimpses of the ancestors of both the Earl and Countess, and then he deals with the character, personal characteristics and career of the distinguished statesman and his wife.

With the historical data, the ADVERTISER has already dealt. It is our present intention to reproduce some facts regarding their Excellencies not generally known. Few Canadians, for example, know that Lord Aberdeen is an expert locomotive engineer. Mr. Stead gives this reminiscence of one of his early experiences on the rail: "Lord Aberdeen unites with the love of sport which is common to most landed aristocracy a passion which among peers is almost unique-from boyhood he has had a ably the only peer who could drive an engine from London to Edinburgh. Through the indulgence of a relative, when he was still a schoolboy he had permission to ride on the engine of a local railway and he never, if he could help it, rode anywhere else. He had no greater delight than to stand in front of the fire-box acting as fireman or starter and occasionally being permitted to drive the engine. He still remembers as one of the proudest days of his life how, when he had finished oiling the engine when at full speed, the old engine driver said to him: 'John, I think I must apply for a day's holiday and let you take charge.' From that time forward Lord Aberdeen has never lost touch with the locomotive engineers; no one is more popular with the railway servants in the old country, and nothing but the lack of acquaintance with the road and the signals stands in the way of his being able to take a Canadian Pacific express right across the whole continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He is certainly the first Governor-General who was also an engine driver. Engine driving, in fact, may be considered as one of his favorite hobbies, and one of the things which he looked forward to in the new world was that of making a study of the engines of America, as complete as that which he has made of the locomotives of England and Scotland.

It was this boyish passion, indeed, that first introduced Lord Aberdeen to public life. When Lord de la Warr moved for a select committee into railway accidents. Lord Aberdeen, then a very young man. made his maiden speech in the House of Lords in support of the motion. Subsequently a royal commission was appointed to consider the subject, and Lord Aberdeen, though the youngest commissioner, was appointed chairman. The commission reported in favor of the block system, continuous brakes, continuous footboards, and of many other improvements which the railways have for the most part introduced of their own accord. As the commission was not unanimous Lord Beaconsfield shirked the duty of legislation. Mr. Stead suggests that the Governor-General is in a position to give valuable information to the railway men of America as to how best to avoid the annual slaughter of workmen on the rails.

The phenomenal success of Lord and Lady Aberdeen while the Governor-General was Viceroy of Ireland, is strikingly brought out in Mr. Stead's sketch. When the couple arrived in Dublin they had a cool reception; the populace kept away from the castle, as they had been in the habit of doing, and many feared that the lot of the new Viceroy would be no happier than that of his predecessors. But both he and the Countess well understood human nature. They had been accustomed to manage humanity, and they resolved to treat the Irish as they had treated their tenantry-with kindness and consideration. An opportunity soon presented itself. In 1886 there was great distress in the West of Ireland, and a meeting was called by T. D. Sullivan, the poet, patriot and genial chief magistrate of Dublin, at the private request of Lord Aberdeen, who intimated that though "his Excellency could not attend as Lord-Lieutenant, he would be very glad to be present in his capacity as a citizen resident in Dublin." The Viceroy and Lady Aberdeen were importuned by the permanent Government officials not to go, as they would be hissed and received with hostility; but to all entreaties their Excellencies turned a deaf ear. "It was an inspiration," remarks Mr. Stead, "and they -The Toronto Empire has dropped into did well to act upon it." Here is Mr. Stead's description of their reception:

"The news had got abroad that the Castle was going to visit the Mansion House, and an immense crowd was gathered in the neighborhood to see the viceregal carriages. In Dublin the representative of her Majesty keeps up the tradition of royal state much more than in the more democratic colonies. On this occasion the Viceroy drove through the streets of Dublin to the chief magistrate of the city with the usual carriage and four, with postilions and outriders. It was a critical moment when the carriage drove up in front of the door of the Lord Mayor's official residence, and the Viceroy nd his wife, in their capacity of citizens. descended to attend a meeting summoned to consider the distressin the West of Ireland. It seemed to those who were present as if the crowd quivered and hesitated, not knowing whether to hiss or to cheer, when suddenly one of the bhoys gave rein to the exuberance of his enthusiasm and broke out into a hearty cheer. Another second and all suspense was at an end. Amid a roar of cheers, the like of which had never been heard behind a Viceroy in re-

"The 'Unionists,' of course, were scandalized that a representative of the Queen should shake hands with a man who had done his term of penal servitude in Portexchanged the right hand of fellowship before the eyes of the two nations. From that moment everything went well with them in Dublin. A strange and what appeared to most Irishmen an incredible thing took place. Dublin Castle, so long the symbol of an alien dominion, became the headquarters of the Nationalist movement. Lady Aberdeen, remembering her Irish descent from the O'Niells, threw herself heart and soul into developing the industries of Ireland."

"It was not," continues Mr. Stead, "until the day of leave-taking that the Aberdeens themselves or the public had any adequate conception of the degree of passionate personal enthusiasm and devoted loyalty which they had succeeded in six short months in creating in the capital of Ireland. The whole of Dublin city turned out to give the Viceroy and his wife a national Irish farewell. "As they drove from the castle down to the station, through streets filled with cheering and weeping crowds, it was evident even to the most cynical observer that the popular heart had been touched to its depths. Everywhere in the streets banners were waving and flags flying, and strangest, ot all, for the first time in recent years, the Irish National Band played "God Save the Queen." It was a great moment and one which made the heart swell high with pride and gratitude that such an outburst of popular sympathy had been brought about by the simple talisman of helpful sympathy and profound respect. For the Aberdeens had learned to love the Irish people with a whole-hearted devotion which touched that emotional and appreciative people to the quick. They saw in Lady Aberdeen especially one who was more Irish than the Irish themselves, and the enthusiasm and loyalty which her presence elicited did more to reveal possibilities for the pacification of Ireland than all the administrations of all the

Mr. Stead gives a charming account of the early life of Lady Aberdeen in her romantic home in the Highlands of Scotland. She is the daughter of Sir Dudley Coutts Marjoribanks, since created Lord Tweedmouth, of a staunch old Whig border family, and who himself represented "the good town of Berwick-on-Tweed" as a Liberal, but little Ishbel's home was at Guisachan, Inverness-shire. This country seat is nestled at the head of a lovely mountain strath, 23 miles from a railway station or telegraph office. How she came to marry Lord Aberdeen is thus told by Mr. Stead:

"The Scottish girl, with her Gaelic name, nursed on tradition, on romance, and surrounded from infancy with the sound of the stirring melodies of her native hills, was only 11 when she first saw her present husband. It chanced upon a day that a young man of 21, who had been riding across the country, lost his way and came over the hills with a footsore pony to the entrance bridge of Guisachan. He was little more than a boy. Slight of frame, although of ordinary stature, with a frank, fearless look in his eye, as he, after many apologies for trespassing, craved permission to put his pony up for the night at the lodge so that he might the next day continue his journey. Sir Dudley Marjoribanks, on inquiring for the identity of the strange wayfarer, found that he was named John Campbell Gordon, the son of an old Parliamentary friend, the Earl of Aberdeen. He at once gave a Highland welcome to the belated traveler. Ishbel, then a girl of 11, saw the visitor and soon after she fell in love with him, nor has she from that day to this ever wavered in the whole-hearted devotion which exists between her and the man who afterwards became her husband. * The acquaintance thus auspiciously begun was continued in a friendship which was consummated and placed upon a more permanent foundation when in the year 1877 Ishbel Marjoribanks became Ishbel Aberdeen."

We are all conversant with the fact that the married life of Lord and Lady Aberdeen has been most harmonious and useful. They have countenanced every effort for the betterment of humanity and have made hosts of friends in both the old and new world. Both are firm believers in woman's suffrage and Lady Aberdeen is president of the Women's Liberal Federation of Great Britain, an organization of 80,000. They have a happy family of three boys and one girl. Lady Marjorie, who is only 13 years old, is the youngest editor in the world. Her half-penny "Wee Willie Winkie" is an almost ideal specimen of what a child's paper should be.

So far, as Mr. Stead points out, the Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen have made a distinct impression for good upon the Dominion. They have shown that they are interested in our progress and that they mean to promote that unity of action among ourselves and kindly feeling towards our neighbors in the Anglo-Saxon Republic that is necessary to our prosperity. Of the future Mr. Stead says: "In Canada there is a widespread conviction, confined by no means to the Opposition, that we are on the verge of a transformation of power from the Conservatives who have succeeded to the heritage of cent years, Lord Aberdeen made his way | Sir John Macdonald's prestige to the Grits or Liberals, who are confidently looking torward to gaining a majority at the coming general election. It is not like'y that the majority which will change thereins of power from Sir John Thompson to those of Mr. Laurier will be large, unless, of course, the tariff proposals of Mr. Wilson should lead to a great accession of strength to the advocates of a reformed tariff in the Dominion. It is by no means impossible that if the tariff bill is carried the advocates of reciprocity between Canada and the United States may be able to establish themselves in power at Ottawa, with instructions from the electors to minimize the curse of a custom house which impedes the free interchange of commodities between the United States and Canada. If such a contingency should arrive it is obvious that there would be plenty of work for the Governor-General to do, and it is satisfactory to know that Lord Aberdeen is certain to use all his influence in the direction of maintaining good relations between the empire and the Rascals in high places will find no friend in Lord Aberdeen. Mr. Stead's recent visit to Ottawa enables him to thus talk

The gangrene of corruption, which undoubtedly prevails to some extent among politicians in Canada, is one of those frauds against the commonwealth which call for the unceasing vigilance of the Governor-General. In what way it may be possible for Lord Aberdeen to take action in the matter it is impossible to say. Two things, however, are certain: First, that he will loyally abide within the limits of the constitution, but not less certainly, if an opportunity arises by which he can within these limits strike a blow at the malady which afflicts the commonweal, no personal considerations will for a moment stand in the way of any action, which will be all the more resolute because it will be heralded by no flourish of trumpets or preliminary

A TREAT FOR LONDON.

Coming Visit of the Great English Actor-Two Grand Productions-The "Isle of Champaign" Last Night.

It isn't likely that Henry Irving will be able to visit London during his present American engagement, but the Forest City and Western Ontario may rejoice that they will have "the next best thing," namely Wilson Barrett. Indeed, it is a matter of dispute between their respective admirers as to which is the greater, all branches of the art considered. Mr. Barrett, though much younger than Irving, is a man of many parts. While famous as an actor, he is a brilliant manager, a successful author, and a master in stage craft. The engagement of the celebrated Englishman next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Jan. 16 and 17, at the Grand Opera House here, is one of extraordinary interest, and will be the greatest exposition of the classic drama for many seasons. Shakespere's subline tragedy, "Othello," is the play Tuerday night, and it will be netable for the first appearance in London of the premising young Canadian actor, Franklin McLeay, whose rapid advances in his chosen profession bid fair to place him in the front rank at no distant time. Mr. Barrett's confidence in young McLeay is preven by the fact that the latter has been cast for the role of Iago. Mr. Mel.eay's conception of Shakespeare's most consummate villain is said to be rickly effective. His friends here will great him warmly even if he does play the evil genius. The second night's production is "Claudian," a most stirring emotional drama, with grand scenic accessories. Mr. Barrett is seen in this at his best. He brings with him his famous English company in its entirety. It includes among others Cooper Cliffee, the young tragedian, a descendart of the famous Sarah Siddons; Austin Melford, a foremost character actor; Ambrose Manning, whose fame was made as the grave digger in Hamlet, and the leading lady, a southern girl but educated in England. Mr. Barrett also carries with him all the gorgeous scenary and stage paraphernalia which make his performances so perfect. His plays will be staged with the same magnificence in London, Canada, as in London, England.

Indications point to overflowing houses both nights. It is well to encourage this higher order of things in the dramatic line. Manager Roote has received numerous inquiries for seats from outside towns, which intend forming theater parties to visit the

"THE ISLE OF CHAMPAGNE." Local theater-goers are breaking the record in attendance of late. Last night there was standing room only at the Grand. The magnificent audience must have inspired the actors, and the performance went over the boards with a smoothness that was delightful. A more sumptuous production than the "Isle of Champagne" has seldom graced the local stage, which throughout the three acts was a dream of beauty, so rich and varied were scenic and wardrobe effects. The company was large and well trained and the principals splendid. Of course the bright particular star was Thomas Q. Seabrooke, who, as king of the isle where champagne was the only drink, efervesced with fun like the bottles of his native beverage he so frequently opened. Mr. Seabrooke played the role to perfecties, and kept his hearers in rears of laughter. The wit of the libretto doesn't smack much of the classical but consists of modern quips and quiddities commonly called "slang," which do not require an exertion of the mind to comprehend. Mr. Seabrooke was capitally supported. Miss Day, as Priscilla, added a charming face and figure to her beautiful soprano voice. Miss Cook, the portly Abigail, was inimitable. Miss Crox (Mrs. Seabrooke) suffered from a cold, but made a sprightly Diana. The musical gem of the evening was a love duet between the handsome tenor, Mr. Sheehan, and Miss Day. There were some fine choruses, and the ballet was superb. Mile. Paris, the premier danseuse, performed some remarkable feats, which brought down "the gods." It was a great

CARROLL JOHNSON. "The Irish Statesman" will be produced at the Grand on Monday evening by Carroll Johnson. The concise story of the play tells how a young Irish schoolmaster rises step by step until he, with the aid and kindness of others, takes a seat in Congress. The plot is inspiring, and with the competent company under him assures an evening's enjoyment to all who attend. Johnson's songs, rendered as they are with ase, purity and sweetness, are particularly pleasing.

THE CHORAL SOCIETY. The date for the London Choral Society's annual concert has been fixed for Feb. 15. The work to be produced on this occasion is Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," undoubtedly the most ambitious work ever attempted by a local choral organization. Mrs. Martin Morphy, of Hamilton, will sing the soprano solos, and Mr. F. Rogers, late of Chichester Cathedral, England, now of Brantford, will take the tener parts. A chorus of 130 voices in in training, as well as an orchestra composed of 40 members.

Installation of Clan Fraser's Officers -A Pleasant Hour Spent,

Scotsmen to the number of about 40 gathered in Kent's confectionery parlors, Dundas street, last night. The chief object of the gathering was the installation of the officers of Clan Fraser, No. 43, Order of Scottish Clans, and among those present were: Messrs. J. W. Jones, Alex. McRae, Scott Murray, R. Borland, J. G. Jones, T. D. Gray, Robert Preston, Andrew Ferguson, Arch. McCallum, John Crawford, Hugh McDougall, John Dromgole, George Taylor, A. Ferguson, Alex. Milne, G. W. Taylor, John Johnson, W. McCoomb, J. McCartz, George Bowman, R. Gray, James Parkinson, G. Preston, Thomas Johnson Parkinson, G. Preston, Thomas Johnson, James Chalmers and a number of others.

The first duty which those in attendance were called upon to perform was the partaking of a bountiful and tempting spread prepared in excellent style, to which full justice was done by the clansmen. Past Chief J. W. Jones then undertook the duty of installing the officers, those chosen to conduct the affairs of the clan for the present year being as follows: Chief-Alex. McRae. Tanist-Scott Murray. Chaplain-R. Borland.

Treasurer—T. D. Gray. Senior henchman—Robert Preston. Junior henchman-Andrew Ferguson. Seneschal-Arch. McCallum. Warden-John Crawford. Sentinel-Hugh McDougall.

Secretary-J. G. Jones.

Piper-Alex. Milne. Auditors-A. Ferguson, Geo. Taylor and John Dromgole.

When the installation was concluded, loyal patriotic toasts and "Clan Fraser" were proposed and received with enthusiasm. In reply to the latter, Secretary Jones referred to the increase in membership which Clan Fraser had enjoyed during the past year. There was also, he said, a goodly sum in the coffers, as shown by the reasurer's statement.

Messrs. George Taylor, Fraser, Preston, Murray, Ferguson, McDougal, Chapman and McCartz also responded, all agreeing that it was not so much a large number of members they wanted, but good members. In response to "Clan Fraser," Past Chief J. W. Jones gave a brief historical sketch of the Order of Scottish Clans, and also spoke of the harmony and good will which was a predominant feature among the members in this city. Disagreements or trouble were unknown to them. Scotsmen were cosmopolitan and were always willing to join hands, for benevolent purposes, with Englishmen, Irishmen or any other

Then came an important toast, drank in true Highland fashion-"The Chief." This was answered by a short address from Mr. McRae, in which be spoke of the good quality of the membership.

Songs were sung by Messrs. Archie Mc-

Callum, J. W. Jones and a number of others, after which the past chief drew attention to the coming concert on the celebration of Burns' anniversary. "God Save the Queen" then brought the enjoya le evening to a close, the members marching ing good old Scottish airs on the bagpipes.

FEEDING A CORPSE.

An Aged Weman Lived Alone For Two Weeks With Her Daughter's Dead Body,

STOCKTON, N. Y. Jan. 12.-Feeble cries for help proceeding from a solitary farmhouse near here caused a passer-by to stop and inquire the cause. He found on the floor, wrapped in a quilt, the dead body of Mrs. Clark, about 60 years of age. The remains were in an advanced state of de-

She and her mother, 82 years of age, had lived here in isolation from choice, not necessity for several years. The old lady, nearly blind and crippled in body and mind, had not realized that her daughter was dead, so she had been coddling and feeding the corpse ever since death, which must have occurred two weeks ago. The mouth of the corpse was stuffed with unmasticated food.

Liberal Tariff Platform.

We, the Liberal party of Canada, in convention assembled declare: That the customs tariff of the Dominion should be based, not as it now is, upon the protective principle, but upon the requirements of the public service.

That the existing tariff, founded upon an unsound principle and used as it has been by the Government as a corrupting agency, wherewith to keep themselves in office, has developed monopolies, trusts and combina-

It has decreased the value of farm and other landed property;
It has oppressed the masses to the enrichment of the few;

It has checked immigration;

It has caused great loss of population; It has impeded commerce; It has discriminated against Great Britain

In these, and in many other ways, it has all of which evils must continue to grow in intensity so long as the present tariff system remains in force. That the highest interests of Canada demand a removal of this obstacle to our country's progress, by the adoption of a sound fiscal policy, which, while not doing injustice to any class, will promote domestic and foreign trade and hasten the re turn of prosperity to our people

That to that end, the tariff should be reduced to the needs of honest, economical and efficient government That it should be so adjusted as to make free, or to bear as lightly as possible upon the necessaries of life and should be so arranged as to promote freer trade with the whole world, more particularly Great Britain and the United States We believe that the results of the protective system have grievously disappointed thousands of persons who honestly sup-ported it, and that the country in the light of experience is now prepared to declare for a sound fiscal policy.

The issue between the two political parties on this great question is now clearly defined.

The Government themselves admit the failure of their fiscal policy, and now profess their willingness to make some changes, but they say that such changes must be based only on the principle of protection.

We denounce the principle of protection as radically unsound and unjust to the masses of the people, and we declare our conviction that any tariff changes based on that principle must fail to aboud any sub-stantial relief from the buttens under which the country labors.

This issue we unhesitatingly accept and upon it we await with the fullest condence the verdict of the electors of Canada.

EAST BUFFALO.

EAST BUFFALO. N. Y.. Jan. 12.—Cattle—Offerings 10 cars, mostly butchers. Good fat cows sold at $3 10, and poorer lots down to $2 75; good mixed cows and heifers, $3 30; fair to good fat bulis at $2 45 to $2 85.

Sheep and Lambs—There was a heavy run, 64 cars being on sale, including 17 cars of Canadas. Most of the native lamb stock was of the common order, and about three-quarters of the offerings were lambs. There was a fairly active demand from buyers for New York butchers, the regular order buyers, and the buyers for city slaughterers, but there was little demand from speculators for the lambs, though the inquiry for sheep was good. With the liberal supply of sale stock, anything in the sheep line of fat and of the wether order was scarce, and that class generally sold at 10c to 15c stronger than the early sales of the week, while fair and the common order of butchering sheep sold at about steady prices with the early sales of the week. while fair and the common order of butchering sheep sold at about steady prices with the early sales of the week. Lambs generally were easier in price. Natives and State lambs of good quality 10c lower, and common to fair 15c to 20c lower; $4.65 to $4.80 took the bulk of the good lambs offering. Between $5.30 and $5.35 was paid for some selected Canadas, but the bulk of choice sold at $5.25, and $4.90 for fairly good stock.

Hogs—Receipts, 46 cars. The market opened fairly active and firm, but before noon ruled dull and unsettled, and trices slumped off fully 10c to 15c on best Yorkers and mediums, while peakers would not now within 15c to 25c. while packers would not pay within 15c to 25c of the top prices. Early sales were as follows: Yorkers, $5 65 to $5 75; choice light, $5 75 to $5 80; good mediums and mixed, $5 60 to $5 65; choice heavy, $5 60 to $5 65; pigs, $5 85 to $5 90, but later closed with a downward tendency.

MONTREAL. Jan. 13,—There were about 32 milch cows and springers offered on this market yesterday, but there seemed to be scarcely any demand except for good milkers, and as the majority of the offerings were scarcely of this sort, one of the milkmen described them as goats. There were not many sales during the forenoon. The following sales were made up to 11 o'clock: A vair of extra cows were sold for $29 and another pair for $109; a single cow for $55; two very fine springers were sold for $100.

London Saturday Market. Farmers generally will not be sorry to learn that $1 and $1 01 was paid for white wheat on the market to-day and from 97 cents to $1 for red. In one lone instance $1 was was paid for a load of oats, but that was because a transient buyer took a fancy comparatively good and the weather beautiful there was only a fair amount of grain shown. What was brought in found ready ply of turkeys, and prices were 9 cents by the load and 10 cents in single birds. The sales were not as plentiful as might be expected, and before the day was over many had disposed of their killing at a reduction. The meat market was probably the largest of the year. It opened with regular prices, 4 to 6 cents for beet, and 7 cents for lamb, but before the close, rather than carry their leads back, many sold out at slaughter prices. Dressed hogs, too, were lower. The best grade sold at $6 to $6 50 per 100 pounds. For the heavy and rough article $5 50 was the price paid. Chickens were dearer, and sold all the way from 40 to 70 cents a pair. Ducks could be had at 60 cents each; $1 per pair. Eggs were unchanged at 18 and 20 cents, butter steady at 22 to 25 cents, and potatoes sold from 65 to 75 cents a bag. Apples brought $1 25 a bag as a rule, and the hay market was cleared at $8 to $8 50 a ton. LIL WAS MAD.

The Insane Irish Comedian Raises a Disturbance at a Show,

New York, Jan. 13 .- Three hundred insane men and women made up the audience which members of Tony Pasto eceased—Alexander, of London; John, of of players amused yesterday afternoon. It Wallaceburg; Alfred, of Chatham; Peter, was in the chapel of Bloomingdale Asylum. of Wallaceburg; James, of Kerwood, and Among the audience was W. J. Scanlan, the once famous Irish comedian, sweet singer, and the composer of "Peck-a-Boo."

He is slowly dying of paresis. He was very quiet at first, but became gradually more excited as the performance went on. When the Dales were doing their comic juggling a great rubber ball nearly two feet in diameter, with which they were performing, flew from the stage down among the audience, bumping from head to head and finally rolling over towards the orchestra, Scanlan ran and picked it up, tossing it on the stage. It bounded into the audience again and he again sprang and grabbed it. One of the Dales was tossing knives in the air at the time, and Scanlan fired the ball at him, striking him full in the chest and sending the knives flying in every direction. Mullaly's song, "The Wild Irish Boy," also greatly excited him, and he joined in the chorus. From this time on he became more and more agitated. He talked and gesticulated and it was evident he thought he was on the stage and acting himself. One of the doctors and Mrs. Scanlan had who have been late shoppers will have to to get him out at last. He went quietly

A BROADSIDE AT PROTECTION.

Delivered by the Renewned Jerry Simpson in Congress-An Illustrated Argument. WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 .- Hon. Jerry

Simpson, of Kansas, leader of the Populists, delivered a broadside at protection in the House yesterday. Mr. Simpson created great applause and amusement by treating the House to an object lesson of his dilapidated overcoat. He proposed to show the House exactly what the poor people of the country did wear. Reaching down under his desk he seized a tattered old overcoat, fringed at the edge and bespangled with great patches. He held it on high while the House and the galleries cheered. "I bought that off a farmer," said he, "who told me he had left home at 12 o'clock at night and driven 25 miles to sell his produce in your boasted home market. There, as Mr. Cleveland said, is an object lesson. (Laughter.) There is a sample of what men wear under the beneficent system of protection," he continued. "It is made of shoddy and rags, see?" Here he ripped it up the back. "Yet," he added, "I can find its duplicate on the backs of 1,000,000 men in this country. "Where did he buy it?" asked Mr. Cannon (Rep., Ill.) "He bought it a year ago in this city for $8, and I bought him another shoddy coat to take its place for $10 40." (Laughter. "Is it American or imported?" asked Mr. Cannon.

"I don't know," replied Mr. Simpson. "I don't care; but it is the product of American protection. No one can deny that." (Laughter and applause.) Mr. Simpson concluded with an appeal to the people to ring out the old and ring in the new order of this an advantageous opportunity to do so at a small outlay. We handle only reliable goods. Chicago Anarchists Moving.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 13.—It is said the police have stenographic notes of a recent meeting of Anarchists, in which the speakers said that now was the time for he unemployed to assert themselves, and that the application of the torch was justifiable if their demands were not complied with. Resolutions were adopted requesting the city council to investigate the number and condition of the unempleyed of the city, and to publish the results. The resolution wound up with an invitation to all the unemployed of the city to act as an escort to the committee appointed to deliver the resolutions to the city council on Monday. "She will see me when you tell her that I ask it for the last time. I shall not plead to her for forgiveness, I cannot expect that, though Heaven knows my folly has borne bitter punishment. Tell her that I come to bid her farewell, to tell her once more that while life lasts I shall love her and cherish her memory. I cannot so without making her memory. I cannot go without making it plain to her that never for a moment has my love for her waned or faltered; that, even while treading the path down which henor pointed, my heart was hers, and that, though I marry the other woman whom I had unwillingly wronged, my heart will al-ways be with the little willful maid to whom I gave it months ago !"

"What good can this do?" said Philippa, sadly. "Better let things rest as they are, Ceeil. She—she is better and stronger now, and—and—" She thought of Gerald

He watched her face, her eyes, intently. "You will tell me that my image may be effaced from her heart, and that she may find consolation and forgetfulness of the post in the love of another and a better man! So be it!" His voice trembled for all this assertion. "Heaven grant it may be so, if it be for her good; but, nevertheless, I must tell her how my heart stands toward her. Philippa, I will come this evening. You are living here?"

Philippa nodded.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The picnic party returned in high spirits. It had been a very successful picnic, and no one had enjoyed herself more than Zenobia. She came in radiant, her eyes sparkling, her cheeks flushed, No one would have magined, as she glanced at the clock, that it was to see if she had kept-her husband

Waiting.
Her first inquiry was for Lord Cecil, but they told her that he had gone out after the party had started, and had not yet returned.

'He will not come in till nearly dinnertime," she shought; "I am quite safe," and slipping away from the rest, she made a preteuse of going to her room, but instead went by a back way into the garden and reached the shrubbery, where she had before met

He was not there, however, though the clock had struck six, and with a scornful toss of her head she was about to return to the house, when she heard a step behind her, and looking round saw that it was Lord

"A narrow escape," she thought, and mentally resolved that this should be her last meeting with Gerald Moore; at the same time, with that readiness which dis-tinguished her, she determined to utilize the opportunity by getting Lord Cecil to fix the wedding-day.

She turned to him all smiles.

"How wicked you are, Cecil!" she said, holding out her hands. "Where are the letters you were obliged to write, sir? Was there ever such a shameful case of deceit-fulness? Wicked boy, you wanted a lazy day all to yourself, and invented the excuse! Now, to punish you, I ought to tell you how we have enjoyed ourselves, but I will be merciful and spare you. Ah, Cecil, if you knew how I have missed you this morning! Dearest, I think I am never at rest or happy unless you are by my side,' and her hand closed upon his arm caress.

Lord Cecil looked hard before him, as if he were summoning up mental courage for a grave and earnest, "I wish to speak to you. I saw you from the window and followed you, that what I have to say might not be As he spoke, as if in direct mockery of his words, she heard the leaves rustle behind her, and knew that Gerald Moore was concealed within hearing.

"I know what you are going to say, dear Cecil!" she said, in the tones that had once thrilled him, but now were powerless to move him. "You are going to speak of our marriage." She drew a little breath, and would have hidden her face upon his shoulder but that he stood so irresponsive and motionless. "I know that the counters is desirous to see you settled, and-and I will not render her unhappy. It shall be when you please, dear Cecil!"

His face paled. "Zenobia," he said, and he took her hand with a spasm of pity at his heart, "it was to speak of our intended marriage that I followed you, but not to ask you to hasten it. No, Zenobia; I have a hard task before me, and I will beg you to extend all the in-dulgence and kindness which dwell in your heart toward me, who am, alas! so little worthy of it. Zenobia, some truths are so cruel, so bitter, that one is tempted to hide them. But if one yields to that temptation, that truth, let it be what it may, will rise from the grave in which it is hidden to accuse and punish the coward who concealed it. Such a truth lies heavy on my heart at this moment, and if I would not be a craven, rnworthy the name of man, I must tell it. Zenobia, bear with me! Think of me as you will—as one whose weakness made him unworthy of your love—but still deem me

Her face grew gradually pale.

What had he done? Had he escaped her? Was he going to draw back? Had he—her breath came hard and fast—had he met and married that other girl?

He pressed her hand, then slowly dropped

"Zenobia, this marriage of ours must not take place!"

"Must not take place!" she echoes; and her eyes gleamed upon him from her pale face. "No," he said, in a low voice. Thank Heaven, it is still in our power to say the words! It might have been too late; I might have made the discovery after, instead of before, the event."

She started, and cast a glance of fear at the heart which at the altar I should have sworn to give you, is not mine to give."

She breathed again, and the color came back in her face.

"Cecil!" reproachfully.
"Hear me, dear Zenobia, and bear with me! Until this morning I laid the flattering conviction to my soul that I could revive the love I once bore you; but this morning something revealed to me that it would be impossible; and I thank Heaven that the truth has come home to me in time. I know with the certainty of revelation, that if we were married our lives would be a misery which only death can assuage!" She looked at him, breathing hard; then she smiled. Dear Cecil, you think too much; you are morbid where your conscience is concerned. Think what it would cost me to lose you! Suppose-suppose that I too have known that you have been cold to me, and suppose that I am willing to wait until I have won back the love which my folly lost me." (To be Continued.)

OR DEATH!

When the Hungry Ask for Bread, Shall They Receive a Stone?

When the Sick Seek a Cure, Will They Be Given a Medicine to Increase Their Sufferings?

Beware of the Recommendation "Just as Good!"

Paine's Celery Compound, The World's Great Healer and Life-Giver.

When a child asks its father for bread, will he receive a stone? When a poor and famishing mortal asks for food to appease the gnawing pangs of hunger, will he be an organization were well presented. given something that will add to suffering Among other things she gave her own exor end his life?

Fortunately for the deserving poor of our country, we have very few in our midst the past ten years, and how this link bewho are callous and indifferent to want, famine and distress. When the hungry ask to be filled, there is always a noble and honest response that is creditable to all classes of our population.

Notwithstanding the fact that our people are charitably disposed and ever ready to relieve poverty, we regreat to say that there are men in our midst-business men, too-who do not hesitate to take advantage of men and women who are brought low by disease and suffering, and whose lives are in peril.

These business men (we thank heaven they are few in number) wilfully and deliberately withhold from the sick and afflicted the only remedy that can meet their cases and give a new life; and will take the money of their victims for medicines they recommend because of the immense profits they make, never taking a thought for the precious life of the buyer, or caring whether pain and suffering is even alleviated for one short hour.

This unbusiness-like, unmanly and unworthy policy is followed by some dealers when Paine's celery compound is plainly and distinctly asked for. This dishonest practice of substituting-recommendingsomething just as good is carried on because Paine's celery compound does not pay as large a profit as inferior and worthless preparations.

When the sufferer goes or sends to such selfish and profit-loving dealers for Paine's colery compound (a medicine which is as necessary for the cure of disease as is bread for the appeasing of hunger), he is met with the remark, politely uttered. "I have something just as good"; and the buyer is often already heavy burden of misery and suffer-

It is well that our Canadian people should know that there is nothing in this world as good as Paine's celery compound; nothing else can cope effectually with rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, indigestion, impure blood, headache, and all the troubles that are making men and women weak, nervous and sleepless. Any honest and straightforward dealer will supply you with earth's best medicine: they will never try to force you to take something else that would give them larger profits. Go, therefore, for Paine's celery compound to the man who has a regard for your judgment and your necessities; he will gladly and willingly give what you ask for. In the past many have traded on the reputation and wonderful success of Paine's celery compound, by putting up mixtures to take the place of the genuine article. All such attempts are made to deceive and draw profits that can never be made when Paine's celery compound is sold. Look well to the cartoon and bottle; see that the word "Paine's" and the "Stalk of Celery" appear on what you purchase. To the sick and suffering this important matter means life or death.

An English firm have recently been granted letters patent for an invention whereby the heels of boots and shoes can be easily detached or reversed. The invention consists of steel, or any similar material, shaped as a lift, with flange and groove, by the first of which it is fixed in any part of the height of the heel at the option of the maker, while the upper portion of the heel is so constructed as to slide into position so literature, art, and social reform, have that it is indistinguishable from an ordinary determined to organize local councils, and heel; but to insure absolute security a fine screw is inserted from the inside. Movement to Establish a Weman's Council in London-Sketch of the Organization's General Policy.

Among the many conventions held in Chicago during the great fair last year was a congress of women, at which representatives were present from Canada, nearly every one of the American States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia, and many other countries. Valuable practical papers were read on a large range of subjects, from bread-making and household management and dress reform to higher education, woman's enfranchisement, temperance and charitable and mission work. It was then resolved to form a permanent International Woman's Council with affiliated branches in the different countries where desired. The Countess of Aberdeen was elected president-a suitable recognition of her excellent ability and her zeal in the promotion of every good movement for the benefit and uplifting of women, whether rich or poor.

It was also resolved to form a national council for Canada and this has since been accomplished.

Last October an important meeting of representative women was held in Toronto and at it the organization of the national council for Canada was completed. Lady Aberdeen was elected president and took an active part in the proceedings. She delivered an able and thoughtful address, in which the objects and desirability of such perience of how similar federations had worked in many towns in England during tween women workers had enabled them all to know what each was doing and had put them in sympathy with each other and ready to take up any fresh work when needed. Among other things she said, "I understand that it is hoped that local councils or unions, such as I have sketched, will be formed in all towns and districts where various organizations and different institutions exist, and in addition to this, that a national council, composed of women representing those societies or institutions which have a national object or value, shall be formed, thus representing the work and thought of women in the Dominion, from Halifax to Victoria. Every organization in the council to retain its entire freedom, and it by no means follows that the mem bers of the different organizations should be in sympathy with one another's object—the main idea is that all bodies containing women workers should be represented, so that there should be a link between all, and that they may be a kody that can act, if necessary, for the united interests of women and children. Conferences would be held in each of the large cities of the Dominion and Province in turn. Every shade and denomination will be free to enter the council-there is to be no exclusion whateverevery sort of institution or association which has for its object the good of mankind is to be allowed to enter and have its representatives, whether the women conducting their work are working themselves or alongside of men."

We understand that a movement will soon be made to establish such a council at induced to take a decoction that adds to an | London and some other leading cities in the west. Mrs. E. N. English, of Hellmuth Ladies' College, is the recording secretary of the National Council, and is taking an active interest in the work here. A meeting for London will be held on A meeting for London will be held on Tuesday afternoon, 16th, at 3:30 in the "Y" rooms, Nitschke Block. All presiding officers of every woman's organization in the city of every description—religious, philanthropic, benefit societies, wage-earners' unions, literary societies, musical clubs etc.—are earnerily remusical clubs, etc.—are earnestly requested to be present, or to send someone to represent them. Invitations have been sent to all known. If any have been inadvertently omitted they are quite as welcome, even if it is not their intention to become active members.

The following is the general policy of the organization as given in the constitution:
"This council is organized in the interest of no one propaganda, and has no power over the organizations which constitute it beyond that of suggestion and sympathy; therefore, no society voting to enter this council shall render itself liable to be interfered with in respect to its complete organic unity, independence or methods of work, or be committed to any principle or method of any other society, or to any act or utterance of the council itself, beyond compliance with the terms of this constitution."

The local constitution provides as fol-

Lodge Princess Beatrice. At the last regular meeting of Lodge Princess Beatrice, No. 6, D. O. E., there was a good attendance of members, and much interest manifested in the proceedings. After routine business the worthy district deputy, Sister Roughley, installed the officers for 1894, as follows: W. P., Sister Howe; W. V. P., Sister Annie Fleming; F. and R. S., Bro. A. Isaac; W. T., Sister F. Lutman; W. C., Sister Trace; W. F. G., Sister M. Watson; W. S. G., Sister Chesley; W. F. G., Sister Jago; W. F. G., Sister Neary; W. S. G., Sister Knott; I. G., Bro. W. Tranam; second guide and outside guard being absent. After the installation ceremony a surprise was in store for the late worthy president, Sister Emma Anderson, for, when taking the past president's chair, she was called to the dais and a neatly-worded address was read by Sister Burton. Sister Horrasby then stepped forward and presented a pin, inscribed "D. O. E., 1894." Sister Anderson responded feelingly to the address, although taken completely by surprise. Not satisfied with one presentation Sister F. Lutman, W. treasurer, was called to the platform, when Sister Burton again read an address, complimenting Sister Lutman on her faithfu! performance of her duties. Sister Hornsly then presented her with a pin similar to the one given to Sister Anderson. Sister Lutman thanked the denors for their gift The officers-elect each responded and a

A unique method of temperance reform has just been inaugurated at Stillwater, O. T. The city council has passed an ordinance prohibiting saloonkeepers and liquor dealers from selling liquors of any kind to four confirmed drinkers named in the ordinance. Any man selling to these parties is liable to arrest and imprisonment and will have his license revoked. The council will keep a list of all confirmed drinkers reported and revise the ordinance monthly.

Whoever has taken much pains to analyze the recent plebiscite vote will notice that the largest majorities for prohibition were rolled up in those counties where the Scott Act was in force years ago. In many such municipalities the people were disappointed at the time with the working of the act, and got an impression, after all, that "a well enforced license law" would be better. Subsequent experience, however, has convinced a good many that they were honestly mistaken. In many localities where the Scott Act was repealed by a popular vote, it has been asserted that it could be easily carried again if once submitted to the people. The majorities on New Year's Day clearly indicate that. The liquor traffic all over Canada is getting most significant notices to quit.

Temperance influence seems to have been felt more in the municipal elections in Hamilton this year than for some years past. There are more tavern licenses granted there in proportion to the population than in any other city in the Province, and they have been out of all proportion to the needs of houses for public accommodation. The council, for years, has refused to reduce the number by bylaw. Last year but three aldermen supported any such reduction. This year it is said that fourteen are pledged to a large reduction. Six or seven men who were known as "saloon candidates" were defeated. The probabilities are that the number will be reduced more shop licenses have also been granted than there was even paying custom for. There ought to be a reduction of them, too.

reducing the number of licenses in that law-makers of the country. Why municipality. The councils now ought should not they all be given a voice in to take steps to carry out the well- the councils of the country? understood wishes of the people, as expressed on New Year's Day. The majority of the electors in nearly every municipality declared for total prohibition law, but they certainly have the authority to put a good deal more prohibition, in their locality, in the existlicenses and limiting the hours during which licensed bar-rooms may be kept open. Much good can be done in that anywhere where the existing number of licensed houses is not greater than the demands for houses of actual public accommodation call for.

The Wine and Spirit Gazette, one of the most interesting of our exchanges, does not contend that prohibition is proximity. such a "dead letter" as some of the smaller fry of liquor advocates assert. Its strong objection is that so far as the respectability of the traffic is concerned prohibition pretty effectually destroys residences had been depreciated in that. Even that is not an unimportant value $2,000 by the fact that a licensed point gained. In a recent issue it puts saloon had recently been established it did last, and will surely continue to verdict is concerned. The Marter wonderful improvements than during General Assembly, a sketch of the life and a conital workers of Rev. Mrs. May Thornley, of this city, the provincial president of the W. C. T. U., has just been setting a London editor right about his confused ideas of prohibition and the Scott Act. She

"There may be doubt as to the degree of complacency with which the city of London would regard the Scott Act (which is not prohibition, as it makes no interference with the importation and manufacture), but there is no doubt whatever as to the attitude of the 'prohibition mind' towards this or any other form of local option. We want none of it. Closed bars, with breweries in full blast and a fringe of taverns all round our suburbs, is too weakly a form of the article to interest us when total provincial prohibition is in sight. While the provisions of the License Act remain as at present this sort of exemption in spots, except in small places and rural communities, is only a travesty on genuine prohibition."

Those who are now talking of the Marter Bill as a "prohibition measure" are subject to a similar correction. Localities that recently gave large majorities for threefold prohibition might give quite a different verdict for either the Scott Act or the Marter Bill, for the simple reason that neither of them pretend to interfere with the brewers, or distillers, or importers.

At the late plebiscite in Toronto there was 3,719 women's names on the list as entitled to vote who did not vote at all. Thereupon quite a number of newspapers jump to the conclusion that women, as a whole, don't want to vote anyway, and, therefore, ought not to be given the legal right to vote. Even the Globe, which is usually in better company on that important reform, seems inclined to join in the cry. At the same election, in the same city, there were 22,077 men's names on the voters' lists who did not vote one way or other. That is two or three times as many as all the women electors of the city, including all who did or did not vote. If logic is logic is it not demonstrated beyond all doubt that men don't want to vote any way, and ought not, therefore, to be entitled to vote? Let some of these great anti-logicians rise and explain. As a matter of fact the very class of women who are now entitled to vote, by our present vote, are those least from 95 to 50 or 60. For a time past likely to exercise the franchise: They are the widows and unmarried women, very few of whom have families, and many have not even households of their own. Are Licenses a Pub ic Nuisance?

There is a good deal of interest in ing license law. Let bylaws be enacted many parts of the States just now over still farther limiting the number of the fact that the Supreme Court of Indiana has just decided that a saloon dealer knows very well how much the that the recent verdict was for threelicense established near the residence way. The may give us power to converse with often attended with far more damage and destruction to the inmates of the home—the fathers and sons—than to the actual house itself. The "depreciation in value" in this case is far more serious, and the need of redress is far more urgent. It does not matter whether the saloon happens to be located next door or at the opposite side of the town or the ward, it too often puts in its terribly injurious work. cases, and the only sure remedy seems to be to close up the saloon altogether. The idea is all the time gaining ground that society needs prohibition for its own self-protection. Those who do not drink cannot be safely protected against those who do drink until the whole traffic is cut off. In regard to the right of the State to legalize liquorselling by license the following quite recent judgment of the United States Supreme Court seems very reasonable, and, at the same time, very important: "No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it, much less their servants. Government is organized with a view to their preservation, and cannot divest itself of the power to provide for them." That ought to be good law in Canada also. The first great duty of Government is to protect all its citizens in their lives, homes, liberties and the pursuit of happiness. The saloon, though licensed by law, is a serious source of danger, not only to those who happen to drink, ever, a good deal more important than some very stupid men who keep on popular conviction is that a sweeping people beyond the ocean. Electric that. The existence of a saloon is saying, "It you leave the drink alone it will leave you alone."

Reduce Licenses, The Ontario License Act gives authority to any municipal council to reduce the number of liquor licenses in that municipality down to two, if it desires to do so. A bylaw to that There ought to be a remedy in all such effect may be adopted and go in force any year if passed before the 1st day of March. Now that the electors of so many townships have given such sweeping majorities for the abolition of the whole business it would be well for the councils to adopt more restricting bylaws. There can be no doubt but that the amount of drinking and drunkenness in any community depends considerably on the number of open barrooms in the place. In London, for instance, the official records of past years show that with every decrease in the number of licenses issued there has been a decrease in the number of arrests for drunkenness.

Predictions of Progress.

Some of the Prophesyings of a Good Time Coming by Leading Workers.

One of the interesting features of the New Year's number of McClure's magazine is a chapter entitled "The Marvels of the Future" in which forecasts of progress are made by a number of well-known men in different departments of the world's work. Most of the names are familiar to Canadian readers, and all the predictions will be found interesting and suggestive. THE FUTURE IN SCIENCE.

Prof. Edwin J, Houston, who has of applied electricity, thanks that the for the world. He predicts a practical method for the production of electricity directly from the burning of coal. The result will be the universal adioption of the electric motor, the throwing away of the steam engine, and the almost immediate realization of the air ship as a means of transportation. He thinks that electricity will be more applied to alleviate human sugerings and to prolong life. He also predicts some elactrical apparatus for seeing through a wire, as we now speak through it, and for very long distances—a thousand miles or more. He also thinks that hard vitrified road beds may be produced by the intense heating power of enormous currents of now hardened and made durable.

The family of the nation will, like the family of the traffic is the growth of generations, and individual, be smaller and happier as the mind, instead of the body, comes to utilize all physical powers.

APPLICATION OF CHEMISTRY. Prof. Ira Remsen, of Johns Hopkins University, predicts, as regards the applications of chemistry: 1. That the time is not far distant when the artificial preparation of articles of food will be accomplished. 2. That the chemical study of the substances present in the animal body under normal conditions, and of those found in the body in disease, will lead to chemical methods of treating disease that will be thoroughly scientific.

ERADICATION OF CONTAGIOUS DISEASE. Pasteur, the great French scientist. predicts that to some simple measures dictated by experimental science, we can allow ourselves to foresee the time when all great contagious scourges which have decimated humanity shall be eradicated at their sources.

MORE MERCY, JUSTICE AND RIGHTEOUS-

Archbishop Ireland, the great Roman Catholic leader, says: Scarcely ever was humanity pregnant with such possibilities; scarcely ever were similar opportunities offered to accomplish great things. The future will bring no millennium. There will be no rose bush without thorns, no day without the nearness of evening shades, no life without the menace of death. But I do believe there will be more mercy in the world, more justice, more righteousness. There will be more respect for manhood, more liberty tor the individual. The brotherhood of men will be more widely recognized, and its lessons more faithfully practiced. Nations will see in one another assemblies of brothers, and peaceful arbitration will, in the settlement of disagreements, take the place of the murderous sword.

ALL WILL BE WORKING. Emile Zola, the noted Frenchman, says: "The coming century will be a century of work. Do we not see already, in the increase of socialism, the social law of the future form itself-a law of work for all-work the regulator and pacifier? How grand and healthy would be that society in which every Last week we made mention in these that matter they are usually governed made a specialty of the practical study the work! The man who works is always good. Hence I am convinced electric future is bright with promise that the only faith which can save us is the belief in the efficiency of duty accomplished."

> A GLOOMIER VIEW. Pope Leo XIII. is much less hopeful in his outlook of the future. He writes: "In studying the condition of the workingman we have sought to extinguish the disastrous conflict which torments and menaces human society, over which hangs, like a black sky, the wrath of popular passions, announcing by terrible thunder-claps the breaking loose of a tempest fraught with shipwrecks."

Prohibition in Maine.

Some of the Results According to a Liquor Organ's Testimony.

The New York Wine and Spirit Gazette is one of the leading and ablest organs of the liquor interests in the States. It is ably and keenly edited and seldom fails to make a point against prohibition where one can be made. A recent number has a very caustic criticism of the Hon. Neal Dow's letter, published in these columns some weeks ago, in which it points out the following among other "deplorable results" of prohibition in Maine, and concludes by saying, "We hardly think our neighbors across the Canadian border will be in haste to invite such a train of adverse blessings. They now know what prohibition implies; know it authoritatively, and we hope will govern themselves accord-

The result here did not turn out as objections in the minds of many as it successful. fancied they might be. The Gazette indorses Neal Dow's statements thus far at least:

"The distilleries of Maine, once prosperous enterprises, have been closed by prohibition; the breweries have been dismantled, and what was formerly the State's greatest import and export trade has been squelched. Certainly, Mr. Dow, that is what your prohibition has accomplished. It has suppressed industry, destroyed commerce, abridged the markets for the natural products of the soil, stagnated trade generally, and, as a consequence, ances come about in the same way. repelled population and ruined all pros-

To have closed up all the distilleries and breweries; to have driven out of the State "every reputable liquor seller;" to have made it "practically impossible to procure a glass of pure liquor, or even a decent imitation of it in the State," are not such evidences of "total failure" as many advocates of the liquor interests have wanted the people to believe. The statements of the Hon. Neal Dow and of the Gazette will agree on these points, and they are, no doubt, both quite correct.

Not a Majority.

The London Free Press has been gravely arguing that the late sweeping verdict of the plebiscite is not, after all, to be taken as an expression of a majority of the people of Ontario for a very large majority of all those who voted at all voted that way, yet it did not represent a majority of all the electors on the list! That looks very much like crawling through a pretty pretty small to do that.

Suppose the same logic is applied to the confidence of the electors of Canada to the present Dominion Government and its policy. There are over a million electors in the Dominion entitled to vote, and of this number those in Parliament now supporting the Government policy, including the ministers and all their supporters, received less than 350,000, or a long crying "peace, peace," to the temperway short of even one-half. British Temperance Notes.

-In Scotland they have prohibition on a limited scale, but so far as it goes it works very satisfactorily. The Forbes-McKenzie Act closes the bars on Saturday nights and Sundays, and the amount of drunkenness during those hours has decreased wonderfully in consequence-as in Ontario. In Edinburgh the public bars have been closed on New Year's Day for some years past. The chief constable of the city has recently declared that it has been very successful in reducing the scenes of drunkenness during that festive sea-

A bill will be presented to the State Legislature of Iowa at its next session for the purpose of repealing the prohibition law there, but whether it will carry or not remains to be seen. While prohibition is weak in the cities it is strong in the country districts. The proposed bill provides for local option both in the manufacture and sale of liquors and beer. The license fee is to be not less than $500, and may be increased to $1,000. The present prohibitory law is to remain in force in counties which fail to vote to the

The reaction after the great fair is telling greatly on the Chicago liquor dealers. Since Nov. 1 over 500 retail dealers in that city have been forced out of the business, and it is said fully 1,200 more will drop out of the business within the next few weeks. Those best informed regarding the business predict that there will be fewer saloons and less liquor sold during this year than in any time for years past. No doubt much of the terrible destitution in that city now is in consequence of so many saloonkeepers being so well patronized.

Dr. J. M. Buckley gives this good advice to public speakers: "The whole art of making a good speech is to have something pertinent and moving to say; to say something all the time, to say it vivaciously; and if it is a religious speech, to say it with religious feeling, and to stop when every one wishes you to go on."

Bread and Digestion.

A correspondent of the New York Outlook, writing about food, nutriment and good health, has a few words to say about the use of very fine white flour for bread which a good many Canadians would do well to take thought of. No doubt whole wheat flour would be a more healthy food, and especially where bread constitutes a large part of the meal partaken of.

When Sarah or her maidens ground the flour for Abraham's guests ('two women shall be grinding together'), they did not stop to sift out all but the white starch, but gave the whole grain, minus the 'chaff which the wind bloweth away.' And, for some reason, men and women lived longer in those days. Those of us who use whole-meal bread think we are stronger, and mean to live longer.

"There is one error in the concoction of some of this bread; it is so often made of inferior wheat that it is tasteless, or even bitter. And then, to overcome this taste, sugar or molasses is added 'to sweeten it.' Then those who eat it complain that it turns acid and troubles the digestion. But this the pure wheat never does in its natural state."

The gain of women in trades over the census of 1870 was 64 per cent., the entire percentage of women workers for the whole country being 49. It is reasonably expected the returns for 1890 will indicate a further increase of 10 per cent.

Miss Clare de Graffenreid, special agent for the United States Department of Labor, divides woman and child labor into five classes, New England being pre-eminently the textile district. In Boston alone, out of 17,427 workers, one-tenth earn only from $100 to $150 yearly.

The second group she locates in New York, where the employments are much more various, and the foreign element largely predominates. The third group goes west, the city of Philadelphia leading in population and in women workers.

The Southern group Miss Graffenreid considers unique, and says: "Nowhere else in the world do so many well-bred women, bankrupt and bereft of male providers, labor at manual callings as at the South, pursuing, without loss of caste, vocations which elsewhere involve social ostracism."

At the close of the war about 100 new avenues of industry had been opened to women. In the ten years following the number more than doubled, while to-day there are over 400 occupations which women are following with more or less social and financial success. In the great manufactories of America there were, in 1885, 281,822 men and 112,762 women. Woman has now entered every field, and is distinguishing herself in art, music, the drama, in medicine, journalism, literature, education, theology and science.

HANNAH MORE'S CURE.—Harper's Bazar says: "It is told of Hannah More that she had a good way of managing tale-bearers. It is said that whenever she was told anything derogatory to another her invariable reply was, "Come, we will go and ask if this be true." The effect was sometimes ludicrously painful. The tale-bearer was taken aback, stammered out a qualification, or begged that no notice be taken of the statement. But the good lady was inexorable; off she took the scandal-monger to the scandalized to make inquiry and compare accounts. It is not likely that anybody ever a second time ventured to repeat a gossipy story to Hannah More. One would think her method of treatment would be a sure cure for scandal.

But no truth is essential to the beginning of salvation—that is, to a start after character; no truth-nothing but a desire Godward? Nothing is essential but desire. Every equipment is an advantage; no equipment is a requisite. Have you a desire Godward? Do you wish there was a God? Do you wish that your cry could reach him, and your heart could hear his answer? Do you wish he had given you a book of counsel to guide, and a book of law to govern? Do you wish he had sent some one to lift off the burden of remorse from your soul and point you to a nobler, better, diviner life? No? Then I know not what can be said to you, what help can be given you. Yes? Then you have enough to begin with Desire Godward is faith. Begin with it, Grope until you can see. King Spirit and His Home. BY MRS. EVA GRIFFITH MILLER.

King Spirit lived in a beautiful house usy and happy place. There was Mrs. ood, the housekeeper, who was ever dd bits of dirt and filth, broken bits f wall and impurities that had drifted from the street, and with her coruscles all dressed in red uniforms, he had these things picked up and lean and healthful.

Then there was Mr. Vitality, the uilder, who, with an army of coruscles dressed in white, went around fter Mrs. Blood and repaired all the roken places in the walls and kept vas always at work, for King Spirit natter how strongly they were built.

vas situated just behind two beautiful ight windows, where the king was wont to look out on the world. A great many little telegraph and messenger boys were employed by the king, and they were always running back and orth from the king's office to the exreme portions of the palace to carry orders to Mrs. Blood and Mr. Vitality, who were often busy in the remote parts of the great house. Sometimes, too, Mr. Vitallty stayed awhile in the office, and then the telegraph and messenger boys had to take orders to his corpuscles. Some of the telegraph boys were stationed in the remote parts of the palace, where soldiers were set to watch, and whenever a bit of wall was broken down or an enemy appeared the soldiers sent the telegraph messenger boys always traveled along smooth avenues, made on purpose for them, called nerves, and these avenues had to be always kept in good repair, or else the messages would be delayed and harm come to to the palace.

The king had many enemies who were constantly trying to get into the palace and rob him of his jewels and stationed at all the doors to notify him about.

There were troops of wicked little germs that tried to get in at the door, nose, but the soldier, Smell, stood guard there to keep the germs out, and whenever he smelled bad air he would notify the king so he could move the palace to some other place. There were other enemies that tried to slip into the wide door, mouth, but the soldier, Taste, stood guard there. Then wicked oaths would come and try to get in at the ears, but Hearing stood guard there and would warn the king whenever they came around.

Prot. Intelligence, in the king's office, studied up the history of the king's enemies and kept everybody informed as to their danger and habits, and the king's business manager, Mr. Commonsense, gave orders to the guards as to whom they should let in and whom keep out. No one was allowed to enter unless he could show a certificate of purity, which would prove him loyal to the king.

But one time a dreadful thing happened in the palace of the king. Mr. Commonsense went away on a vacation and left the business in charge of Mr. Desire. Now, Mr. Desire was a very smart young man who thought he knew of the Cross Creek and Buffalo blankets up over their heads, so a great deal more than Mr. Common- Churches in Washington county, they did not hear us, as the next of taking in at one comprehensive sense, and he said there was no need of Pennsylvania, in 1790, and from that day we came upon them suddenly, being so strict, and he was going to let the boys have a little fun.

KEEPING FOWLS WARM.

Device For Securing a Comfortable Roosting Place In Bleak Weather.

It goes without saying that poultry will yield small profit in winter if not kept thoroughly warm. Fowls will, however, endure somewhat cold quarters during the day time if kept briskly at work scratching for their living, but

PARTITION IN FRONT OF ROOSTS. cold nights must be specially guarded against., Country Gentleman furnishes a device for securing a warm roosting place that will doubtless commend itself to many poultry breeders.

Above the platform are placed the roosts, and in front of these is a tight board partition coming down to within 15 or 18 inches of the platform. The feed is not equally good for all purposes, ceiling, sides and back of the space thus inclosed being tight. The authority quoted says a good temperature will be maintained by the heat from the bodies of the fowls themselves, for this heat rises and cannot escape, while the impure gases, being heavier, descend to the floor below.

If difficulty is had in getting fowls to go to roost in such an inclosed and partially darkened place, this added partition in front can be hinged at the top and raised during the day, being let down after the fowls have gone to roost.

The barrel below the platform is in a convenient position to receive each day the accumulation of droppings upon the platform. If the hallway is at one side or in the rear of this roosting place, the nests can very conveniently be placed beneath the platform and made accessible from the hallway.

Clipping the Queen's Wings.

Opinions are divided on the subject of wing clipping. The American Bee Jour-

If a queen's wings are clipped, it does not in the least prevent the issuing of a swarm. The clipped queen goes out, too, and may go back into the hive on the return of the swarm, or she may wander off to some distance and be found with a small cluster of bees. Sometimes she will enter a neighboring hive and be killed, if the hives stand close together. The swarm which issues may return to the hive after sailing around in the air a short time, or it may not return to the hive until after it has clustered and hung a half hour or longer. But instead of returning to its own hive the swarm may enter another hive where a swarm has returned previously on the same day, being attracted by the excitement still

These disadvantages, to the minds of some, are so great that they prefer to watch for swarms with unclipped queens. Others argue that it is still worse to have swarms go off to the woods with a flying queen, and clipping the queen effectually bars anything of the kind. Even some who watch for swarms are strongly in favor of clipping queens' wings as a safeguard. Some claim that a queen with clipped wings is more likely to be superseded. Those who clip deny this, saying that with clipped queens the superseding is promptly noticed, whereas with whole wings a queen may be superseded without the knowledge of the owner.

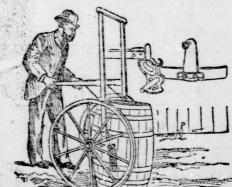

The Graduated Wage System. A good plan to contract with men is on the graduated wage system, says The Farm Journal, which explains this system as follows:

The agreement is $200 and board. Begin at $15 for October and November; February and March, $10 each month; April, $12; May, $15; June, $30; July and August, $25 each month, and close the year in September with $20. This gives the man most wages in long days, when others are earning day wages, and least in cold weather, making him satisfied the year round. Of course the methods of farming.

SUBSTITUTES FOR HAY.

The Importance of Cornstalks and Straw For Stock Feeding.

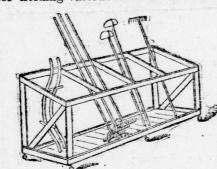

Professor E. B. Voorhees of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station, in a bulletin on cornstalks and straw as hay substitutes, furnishes some valuable information to farmers and answers the ever recurring query as to the proper use of cornstalks and straw for stock feeding. As Professor Voorhees explains, one reason why corn fodder and straw have a low feeding value is that they are coarse foods. They must be made finer before they are fed. To obtain the best results they should be fined by being run through a cutter and softened either by mixing with roots and grain or steamed or dampened with hot water. It may safely be said that unless these things are done it will be impossible to obtain the full feeding value of these coarse foods. The saving of three tons of hay in a season will pay all the cost of cutting and softening stalks and straw.

Attention is called in this bulletin to statements made by the French minister of agriculture: "It is an error to suppose that animals on the farm are condemned to suffer or perish if the hay crop fails, for there are countries where horses and cattle never receive any hay, and these countries are renowned for their cattle." He gives the following nutritive equivalents for cattle: One hundred pounds of good average hay can be replaced by 170 pounds of oat straw, 237 pounds of wheat straw, 150 pounds of oat chaff, 193 pounds of wheat chaff and 145 pounds of potatoes." It must be remembered that while these products in the quantities given may furnish the equivalent of nutrition, it does not follow that they would serve equally well in maintaining life if fed alone. A good and even animals of the same kind differ in their capacity for using feeds. In England great progress has been made in feeding methods. The cut hay, straw and other coarse products are mixed with sliced roots, the feeds added, the whole mass thoroughly mixed and allowed to remain some time before feeding. This method doubtless adds to both the palatability and digestibility of the foods.

Professor Voorhees gives a number of rations for dairy cows, horses and fattening steers, but these are not intended as positive rules. Animals must be fed as individuals, with peculiarities of appetite, digestion and assimilation, not as fixed machines. The remark is made that where stock is kept clover hay should not be sold from the farm. The importance of retaining the crops on the farm or exchanging their value for commercial fertilizers should be well understood. Both cattle and horses will gain in weight on liberal rations of clover hay. For young and growing stock, as calves and colts, linseed meal, bran and middlings are the best additions to the rough fodders, stalks and straw, in the way of feeds, as they are rich in the muscle and bone forming constituents. The amounts required should be adjusted by the feeder according to the age of the Quality of Corn Fodder.

There are many causes for variation in the fodder made by growing corn, some of them pertaining to the way it is grown, and others to the skill, or want of skill, shown in curing it. Corn that is grown so thickly that its stalks are thin and white is as nearly worthless as such feed can be grown. It has little sweetness and not enough nutrition to keep anything in good condition. For fodder alone corn must be grown so thinly that nearly every stalk will have a nubbin on it.

The stalks from field corn that has in December reduce to $13; January, borne a crop of ears have more nutrition than the average of corn thickly sown grown for fodder alone. Sweet corn stalks are better than those of the ordinary field variety. This may in part be owing to the fact that roasting ears are picked early, and as the leaves continue to gather more sweetness it goes into the stalk after the green ears have been remonthly rates named here will need to moved. Plucking green ears from ordibe altered to suit altered circumstances nary field corn makes the stalks richer, in different localities and under different and such stalks are always preferred by cows when fed with others where the ears had been removed after being fully ripened .- American Cultivator.

Things Told by Others. The Farm Journal says: Bring the horse up to the hitching post with his head from the wind. He will not get so cold as if his head is toward the wind, and he will stand better. The horse will stand more quietly while you are hitching him if his head is from the wind.

Bore a small hole in the pump below the floor or bind it around with straw to keep it from freezing. It is foolishness to give the cow ice steel rattrap set at the hole of the rat or in its trail along a stream. Bate it with fish or carrot.

When the icehouse is filled, do not put any sawdust on top of the ice until you have thrown the house open some stinging cold evening and poured water over the ice until the crevices are filled. Leave the house open three or four very cold nights and the ice will freeze into one solid mass and keep better.

In the abstract of the annual report of may be carted out every month or six the secretary of agriculture just issued we it is stated that the work of the bureau of animal industry is reviewed in considerable detail, each one of its principal features being briefly considered. The result of the Texas fever regulations is pronounced to be highly satisfactory, but to increase their efficiency it is suggested that a penalty should attach for violation of the department regulations by railroad companies transporting infected cattle. The total number of import animals inspected the past year was 463,389; the total of export cattle inspected, 611,542.

A further reduction has been effected by vessel inspection in the percentage of cattle lost at sea, the ratio being for the last year less than one-half of 1 per cent. The law at present does not provide for the inspection of horses imported into the country, and an amendment in this respect is suggested. As regards meat inspection, the microscopical inspection has been greatly reduced, the intention being to confine it to products intended for direct export to countries exacting the same. The microscopical inspection costs the country 61 per cent of the value of meat sold to countries demanding that inspection. Careful comparison of meat exports for 1893 shows that microscopic inspection has not increased our foreign sales, and the secretary thinks it does

Further recommendations in the work of the bureau are for legislation compelling the immediate destruction of any animal or carcass condemned by the old trotting stallion Steve Whip-United States inspectors; for an extension of the work in regard to tuberculosis in co-operation with local authorities for a yearling in this country will until danger to human life has been re-hat paid for the bay colt Rosedale, duced to a minimum, and for a civil t by E. PEAT AND PEAT MOSS FOR BEDDING.

Prepared and Used For Bedding and Fortilizers In Germany.

Several years ago experiments were made with dried moss peat and it was found that it could be used to great advantage in the place of straw; yet it was but slowly that farmers could be convinced that this hitherto valueless stuff, which is found in considerable tracts all over the country, where it has previously been considered of no value whatsoever and its existence as a drawback to every farm, should be called upon to revolutionize old established usages and to be suddenly considered of immense value as a regular mine of plant food and an unrivaled absorbent of ammo-

It will absorb three times the weight of liquid droppings that the best straw will, and as a producer of humus it also gives the soil, weight for weight, three times the amount of humus that straw does. Its application is attended with less trouble, and the manure is in better shape and can be handled immediately and spread by means of a shovd if required as finely as one could spred sand or earth, enabling its use as winter top dressing where straw manure wuld not do. I use this peat bedding for cattle, horses and pigs at the rate of fie pounds a day for every full grown armal and find that they are more easily lept clean than by the most liberal allwance of

AS A WINTER REVELLER

CANADA WILL MAINTAIN HER RE-PUTATION IN QUEBEC.

The Winter Carnival for 1894 to Be Held in the Historic City-A Sham Battle on the Plains of Abraham One of the Attractions.

Canada has determined to maintain her secord as a winter reveller and entertainer. Plans have been laid for a carnival that will cause all eyes to be turned toward the Dominion about the end of this month. Hitherto, Montreal has prowided this treat. The principal commercial city of Canada gave birth to the idea; and those who have participated as sightseers in the revelries attending the famous winter carnivals in that city will never forget the visit. The sleigh-drives, the show-shoers' parades, the tobogganing experiences on the Tuque Bleu or the Montreal slides, the ice-palace and its attack and defense, the grand balls at the Windsor hotel, the quaint habitans, and their quainter carriages, all these are tucked away in a ready corner of the Montreal, however, has waived her right to the winter carnival this year. Whether this was due to the clamorings of certain newspapers against the custom of advertising Canada as a country of snow and gleaming ice, it is impossible to say; but that they had an effect is certain. Ottawa proposed to hold a carnival this year, but such a howl went up that the proposal was dropped. The probabilities are that Montreal was influenced in a similar manner. That "distance lends enchantment to the view" never was better exemplified. Canada sees in her ice carnivals and winter sports only an objectionable and illadvised advertisement of the country as a sort of Iceland or Siberia. Our neighbors, on the contrary, regard us with envy, and would gladly exchange fogs and drizzles and snowy slush for the crisp, ozone-laden air, dry snow storms and the steady winter weather that paints in glowing red the cheeks of their cousins on the northern side of the Great Lakes and the St. Law-

The announcement that Quebec had decided to hold a winter carnival and perpetuate the Arctic festival has been hailed with delight, and all doubts of its success have long been dispelled. The business | fact the results are unprecendented in the | a New York Guernsey. men of Quebec went down deep into their pockets and subscribed liberrlly towards the expenses; and an energetic committee of prominent citizens is planning and perfecting the arrangements. If diligence and enthusiasm are factors in obtaining results, the week following Jannary 29th will see the Ancient Capital in holiday attire and crowded with amusement-seeking visitors. Instead of an icepalace, as in Montreal, Quebec will erect an ice-fortress on the old walls of the city, between the St. Louis and Kent gates, the same walls that were so unsuccessfully assaulted by Gen. Montgomery in 1775. A statue of that brave officer will be built of ice on the apot where his remains lay for 40 years before their removal to the American metropolis. The ice-fortress, as shown by the accompanying plan, will be an imposing fortification, rising to a height of 85 feet, and crowning an elevation where the assault and accompanying fire-works will be visible for many miles.

Snowshoeing is one of the features of social life in Quebec. The snowshoe clubs are as numerous as euchre clubs are in Buffalo; and caparisoned in the gay colors of toque and blanket uniform the members present a very striking picture on their tramps by moonlight or torchlight over the snow. The ice-fortress will be attacked by the combined snowshoers of Quebec, who will be reinforced by large numbers of their kind from Montreal and the towns surrounding Quebec. It is estimated that the assaulting party will number sbout 2,000. The fortress will be defended by the troops in the garrison at Quebec and the scene will be made as realistic and startling as bombs and rockets, Roman candles and Greek fire can make it. The pyrotechnic display and the illuminations will be on a grand scale.

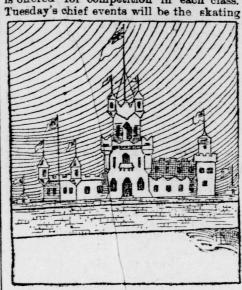

Gen. Herbert, Commander-in-chief of the Canadian forces, has consented to a sham battle on the Plains of Abraham, the troops on snowshoes and the artillery on "traineaux." It will be a novel sight, indeed, to see a large body of men deployed in battle array on snowshoes. For those who enjoy tobogganing there will be num-erous opportunities afforded of gratifying one's fancy for that delirious sport. The most attractive slide, doubtless, will be that which is to be erected on the Dufferin Terrace. It will carry the sliders directly to the door of the Chateau Frontenac, the splendid new hotel recently built for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at a cost of $750,000. Snowshoe races, hockey matches, curling bonspiels, skating races and so forth will help to make a week of fare entertainment. The carnival drive, in which all Quebecers and their visitors are expected to take part, and the carnival ball which will be held in the Quebec House of Parliament where there is ample accommodation for 1,500 guests, will be two enjoyable events of carnival week.

In Quebec one gets a glimpse of many odd features of life in the north. The French Canadians are an interesting people; and those in the rural sections are likewise attractive and picturesque. Most of them have retained the use of the French language and their love for the fatherland; and thousands of those above and below Quebec speak nothing but French, although it is doubtful if the Parisian would understand the patois much better than he would grasp Hindustanee. Quebec is the only walled city in America. It is the Gibraltar of this continent. The grand old fortresses bristling with cannon, guarding the entrance to the St. Lawrence; its quaint old walls and ancient and modern gates; its citadel and its military, are all suggestive of ancient English history; and when with these are combined a wealth of natural scenery within and without the old walls; the narrow streets, the strange market places, the world-famous terrace, the ice-bridged river and the picturesque falls of Montmorency near by, one is strongly tempted to add to his store of sights and scenes a few glimpses of this really charming and historic old town. The carnival begins on January 29 and ends on February 3.

The official programme of the carnival has been issued. Monday, January 29th, is curlets' day. The grand bonspiel is open to the world, and a valuable trophy is offered for competition in each class. Tuesday's chief events will be the skating contests for the championships of Canada. and a lacrosse match on skates, with a fancy dress masquerade at the Quebec skating rink. On Wednesday there will be skating races at the Quebec rink and a tug-of-war at the drill hall, open to six men from any organized snowshoe clubs in the United States or Canada. The great event of the 31st, however, will be the carnival ball at the Parliament buildings, which, it is said, will be graced by the vice-ragal presence of Lord Aberdeen and his Countess. On Thursday the hockeyists will have their innings. There will be a hockey tournament for trophies and medals. On Friday morning the fancy skating contest for the championships of Canada will come off; at 2.30 p.m. there will be an open snowshoe steeplechase from the Que-bec Snowshoe Club rendezvous on the Ste. Foye Road to Parliament Building Square (about two miles); and at 4 o'clock a ehildven's fancy dress masquerade at the Quebec skating rik. Saturday will be devoted to snowshoe races and to a general windup of all contests. The social programme is incomplete, as yet, but the indications are that the week will be an exceedingly gay one.

THE NEW ENGLISH ENGINES. Something About the James Toleman

And Its Recent Test. F. C. Winby, inventor of the James Toleman type of English engine, exhibited at the world's fair, has arrived from South Africa to superintend the official test of his engine on the St. Paul road. Mr. Winby is is an admirable field for the terpise perhaps the leading mechanical engineer of of some rich man who would hamer-England and has worked his way up by his own ability from a shop hand. He now has railroad contracts to the amount of $20,-000,000, which he is carrying out in South Africa. The private trial of the James Toleman engine on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad recently proved to Mr. Winby that all the working parts of his locomotive were in good order. As a matter of best five cows at the World's fair history of locomotives, as it was the first time the engine had run under her own steam, and the automatic indicator showed 62 miles an hour, though it must be understood this is by no means the highest speed she could have attained.

The James Toleman is the property of Messrs. Westwood & Winby, who are extensive contractors for the construction and equipment of railways and public works, of 11 Clement's lane, Lombard street London, England. Messrs. Westwood & Winby are so largely interested in the merits of locomotives for long lines of railways which they are con-structing and equipping, that Mr. Winby determined to design an engine having four high pressure cylinders and driving wheels of large diameter, dispensing with coupling rods and having great boiler power. The engine was built last year in the works of R. & W. Hawthorne, Leslie & Co., Limited, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, the oldest firm of locomotive builders in England, and is of the highest class of material and workmanship. All the tires, wheels, framing and motion are of steel; the firebox and tube plates copper, and 235 brass tubes 2 inches inside diameter and 14 feet 10 inches in length.

The aim of Mr. Winby is to settle the question, "Is there higher merit in a noncondensing compound engine than the ordinary high pressure locomotive engine?" The chief point of excellence that Mr. Winby claims for his design is that it gives greater boiler power than has heretofore been obtained in any locomotive without lifting the centre of gravity to a dangerous height. The heating surface is 2,000 square feet, one-third greater than in any other English locomotive, while the area of the grate twenty-eight feet, is also larger in the same proportion. The boiler is constructed in two cylindrical segments, superposed. The chord stays are common to the two segments, so that, while the lateral diameter of the boiler is not greater than will pass between a pair of driving wheels of large diameter, the vertical diameter is greater, the tube plates deeper and of greater area, and the tubes themselves larger and more numerous than in an ordinary cylindrical boiler placed between driving wheels.

There are two pairs of driving wheels, each seven feet six inches in diameter. The leading driving wheels are driven by a pair of inside cylinders 17 inches in diameter, and with a stroke of 22 inches. The trailing driving wheels, of the same size, are driven by cylinders 16 1 inches in diameter with a stroke of 24 inches. The tractive force is 143.8 pounds for every pound of mean pressure. The boiler pressure is 180 pounds. The "bogie" wheels are four feet in diameter. The weight of the engine, loaded, but without tender, is 60 tons. Senseless Pot-Hunters. Half-grown fawns, little bigger than sheep, are coming down in great numbers over the railroad tracks from the northern counties of the maritime provinces to the more sheltered parts of the south. Some soulless pot hunters are slaughtering the poor little creatures as they trot nnsuspectingly over the ties in search of warmer woods and better forage.

Nearly 1,000 children are born yearly in London workhouses.

A WORLD'S FAIR GUERNSEY.

Call For Improvement and Development In This Dairy Breed.

It was often said during the Columbian exposition that if half the attention had previously been paid to the Guernsey cows that the Jerseys have been receiving for the past 20 years in America, the Guernseys would have made a grand showing at the fair, and the Jerseys would not have had things so much their own way. Very well, then, there are more world's fairs. There are county fairs and state fairs every year. If the Guernsey breeders think their cows better than the Jerseys, then let them go in and develop the red and white Channel island cow for all there is in her.

A stockman and dairyman who has looked nto the matter says the Guernseys as a breed have certain defects, showingthem to be not yet fully developed. Guernty enthusiasts would not of course admithat their pets have any defects at all, it they can at least learn what defects other people think the cows have. The stochan and dairyman declares that Guerescows lack vitality. Next, they havedefective udders, one sided, with crooks teats or teats too small and difficult, get the mile out of. The udder is someties not large mough Finally, they do ro give as much milk as they ought to, condering how large they are. But, on the ther hand, Guernsey enthusiasts decla that they make excellent, sizeable bees. Perhaps that is the reason they do t give such a quantity of milk.

At any rate, whater the defects in the Guernsey breed hese defects can every one be bred at of them as the defects of the Jer breed have been. It has been suggest that an acmixture of Ayrshire blocwould be beneficial. Even 10 year vould to much in that direction, wn under-taken with intelligence and 1. unsterilized cream for the manufacti ers of ice cream. Ice cream makers s that it "swells" in making up. Crea is better for this purpose when 24 hou old than when fresh, and he has kept from Tuesday until Friday and found in prime condition.

Butter made from sterilized cream ha brought him a cent a pound above th highest quotations. He sent some to th World's fair and it scored as follow: Flavor, 42; grain, 25; color, 15; salting 10; package, 5; total, 97—being thre points off in flavor, otherwise perfect This is convincing proof that sterilizing does not hurt the grain nor destroy the flavor, for it was still marked high.

Mr. Lawson's paper called attention to the fact that a starter must always be added to sterilized cream to ripen it, as the bacteria have been destroyed by the heat. He is satisfied that thousands of dollars would be added to the value of 110110 Iowa butter by sterilizing cream .-Address Reported in Creamery Journal.

The Winter Cow.

A writer thus describes the cow for ANNERS. winter dairying: She should come in fresh Nov. 1, should be from 1 to 9 years old and weigh anywhere from 1,000 to 1,800 pounds. She must be a hearty feeder, with barrel rib, giving plenty of room for breathing and digestion, must also have a large udder and full, round teats. Her daily yield of milk should not be less than 30 to 60 pounds, and that milk should make from 1 to 2 2-10 pounds of butter a day for nine months at a stretch.

The World's Fair Dairy Test.

The Breeder's Gazette says; of the World's fair dairy test: The Jerseys sweep everything. They have 18 out of the first 25 places. And, finally, it remains to be stated that as a result of the Columbian dairy test the 14 pounds a week cow is worth a great deal more than she was before the test was instituted.

CRADLED IN

A PLEA FOR THE NEGLECTED CHIL-DREN OF THE PEOPLE.

Raised in Ignorance and Privation They Grow Up to Swell the Army of the World's Offenders-Practical Suggestions for Diverting the Stream of Evil.

In this latter part of the nineteenth century, more attention is being paid to the causes and sources of crime than ever before. Every day it is becoming more evident that in the past, much effort has been wasted in dealing with effects rather than causes, and the most advanced thinkers now fully acknowledge that to effectively grapple with crime and vice, thought and effort must be concentrated on the children of the poor. The governing power must come to regard the child as a future citizen, and must see that it has opportunities for education and for development along the lines of industry and morality. A child's education begins from its earliest infancy, and the State has a right to insist that its training shall be such as to fit it ultimately for the proper discharge of its duties and responsibilities. We all know the difficulties experienced in influencing for good the inmates of reformatories and penal institutions, the years of labor that have been exhausted in seeking to break the chains that bind the drunkard. How much more hopeful the outlook when we deal at once and directly with the little children, and implant in their young minds aims and aspirations that shall carry them safely through life?

Very little thought has been given to these children. They have been neglected by parents, neglected by law-makers, neglected by school boards, and only thought of by the faithful mission-worker, who, in the absence of suitable laws, and the lack of public recognition, could accomplish but little of a permanent character. It would not be too much to say that seventy-five per cent. of the criminals of to-day were made such in early childhood. It is true that occasionally a young man of good family and occupying a good position of trust gives way to temptation and falls to the criminal ranks, but he seldom remains there, usually returning after a short time to law-abiding citizenship. The habitual criminal is made such in childhood, and he continues to live by crime, not voluntarily so much as necessar-ilv. His actions indicate the early training working to its logical conclusion. There are children on our streets at this moment who will almost surely be criminals. It is their hard and cruel fate. They are consigned to it by neglectful and vicious parents, and by the indifference and shortsightedness of the community, through its authorized representatives.

J. J. KELSO.

Are we justified in expecting otherwise than that evil training shall bear evil frmit?

Consider the case of a child born of drunken and degraded parents, growing up in a hot-bed of vice; hearing nothing but profanity and obscenity; learning nothing of the difference between right and wrong; no prayer whispered over its cradle; no pure thoughts of a better life instilled into its budding mind; its playground the street; its companions equally benighted with itself. It cannot attend school; it has no clothes; it is not kept clean; the mother would not take the trouble to send it, and school boards are not always sufficiently interested to provide accommodation and enforce attendance. Growing up untrained, except in evil and sharp cunning ways, the child at seven or eight years of age is sent out to sell papers or to beg, sometimes to steal, on the streets constantly, and with companions older in vice than himself. The boy learns rapidly, until at fifteen or sixteen he becomes a thief when opportunity offers, and trusts to luck to escape detection and retain freedom.

With the girl the downward course is somewhat different, though the result is essentially the same. Escape from the family quarrels and squalor is sought on the streets, where vice is easily learned, and the road to comfort and luxury made to appear comparatively easy, until by stages she sinks into a common outcast, unpitied and unloved.

Thus are the ranks of the criminal classes supplemented, and thus is perpetuated the curse of evil that stands as a constant menace to life and property, and continues to hold over every community a sense of insecurity. And where, we may well ask, lies the blame of this state of things? Not with the helpless victim of untoward cirthe community which failed to step in

In proposing a remedy, the first essential is education. Not education in the narrow sense of mere intellectual instruction; but education which cultivates the heart and the moral nature, which inculcates truthfulness and gentleness and modesty and calls out the purest and noblest instincts of humanity. In providing such an education it may, and often will, be necessary to remove the child from its natural parents. In this enlightened age, it is a recognized principle that no man or woman has a right to train a child in vice, or debar it from opportunities for acquiring pure and honest habits; and if parents are not doing justly by their children, they forfeit the right to continued guardianship. This principle is now a legal enactment in almost every Christian land, and it is only in the careful yet unfaltering use of this power, that we can hope for a noticeable reduction in our prison population. It is a duty we owe to ourselves; it is far more a duty we owe to the children who are thus unfortunately placed. Every resource of the law should

CRIME, for the education of their children re- 100,000 YEARS OF AGE. moved from their control.

For the protection of the child the removal is made; for the protection of the community, the unworthy parent should be compelled to pay to the last farthing. For all such children real homes should be sought. where they may develop naturally, and grow up in common with all other children. An institution is not a home, and never can be made such, though it may be useful as a temporary abode in which to prepare the little one for the family circle. No child should be kept permanently in an institution, however good, and this is something that cannot be too frequently pointed out, since there are orphanages that retain children for periods of from five to ten years.

While there are these cases in which the only hope for the child lies in its complete removal from improper guardianship, there are also many children who, without removal from their home, need a little supervision and as many good influences as can be brought to bear upon them. Families, for instance, where the mother is employed during the day, or, where the children, living in poor neighborhoods, are in danger of evil companionship. To help to tide such children over the trying period of childhood, and get them safely started in life's work, there are many useful aids, some of which, with some evils which are to be avoided, might be mentioned, as fol-

THE MISSION KINDERGARTEN. -As a preventive agency nothing but a mother's own good teaching can surpass the mission kindergarten. In this work the teacher is usually chosen because of special qualification and zeal. Little ones from three or four years up to seven are gathered from the streets and alleys, and taught to use both their fingers and their minds. In many instances they are saved from acquiring evil and untidy habits, and are given a suitable preparation for the common schools.

MISSION CLASSES AND ENTERTAINMENTS. -In every poor neighborhood mission work, especially among children, is productive of much greater result than usually appears on the surface. The love that is freely poured out in their service sinks deep into young hearts, and is almost sure to bear fruit in the later life. No mission worker among children should ever be discouraged.

Boys' Clubs.-For growing and active boys of twelve to fifteen years of age there is room for many clubs, independent, or carried on in connection with churches and missions. Boys must be doing something, and if not induced to belong to some evening organization will learn much on the streets that is evil and hurtful. These clubs should not be strictly religious, but should lend books, teach topical songs, provide games and gymnastics if possible, and generally seek to win the boy's interest by catering to his reasonable desires. The membership may be anywhere from ten to forty, and the founder may be any young man or woman interested in the welfare of the growing boys of our country.

DAY INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.-In every large city there should be one or more day industrial schools. To these would be sent truants, or children unfit for the common schools, children getting beyond parental control, or those guilty of first offences. To this school the child goes in the morning at eight o'clock and remains until six a similar capacity to advance. o'clock in the evening, being provided with meals, and engaging in manual as well as intellectual work. Such schools would do away with the necessity for sending so many children to reside permanently in industrial reform schools at large expense to the country.

POLICE STATIONS.—No child should be taken to a police station except in a very extreme case. The fear of such a place is the best deterrent, and the child who has once been confined there is likely to lose its dread of punishment, and to return again in a short time. The same argument applies with even greater force in the case of the police cell or the gaol. POLICE COURT.—The trial of children and young girls in the open police court, can only be regarded as a barbarous proceeding, in almost every case confirming and hardening the offender. It is false economy; it is the greatest cruelty to the child; it is disastrous to the community in

The business in which so many boys are engaged-that of selling newspapers on the streets-is hurtful in many ways. Besides tending to make boys cunning and unserupulous, it is an occupation of a temporary character, leaving a youth at sixteen or seventeen years of age without a trade and altogether unfitted for any vocation which requires steadiness, punctuality, obedience or manual labor. With expensive tastes and a love of freedom, many boys of this class take to pilfering to keep up their decreasing revenue from the newspaper business. It would be very desirable to have open-air news-stands located on the leading thoroughfares in charge of old men, and limit the number of boys now running the streets as news-vendors.

All successful work on behalf of neglected children must be through personal contact and sympathy. The child must feel and know by many acts and words of encouragement and kindness that he or she has at least one true friend. For this reason large classes are to be avoided, the economy that appears on the surface being really a loss and hindrance. In this thought there should be much encouragement for those earnest workers who have nothing but their services to offer. They may gather little bands around them at trifling expense, and experience the great iov of turning aimless young lives into spheres of usefulness and happiness, And surely there can be no greater service for God or humanity than in calling forth in young hearts, aspirations and hopes that lie dormant, and in removing from their path the obstacles that prevent them from achieving all that is best in their nature! cumstances, but with the parents, and with Hope and joy may be brought back to crushed little hearts by love and sympathy, when the parents proved false to their | and if, through the reading of this article, some friendless child is gladdened and aided along life's journey, it will not have

SKELETONS FOUND IN ITALY WHICH HAVE LAIN FOR THAT TIME.

Some of the Bones of the Men Who Lived On Earth at the Time of the Older Stone Age-What the Early Men Were

The accompanying illustrations show human skeletons and weapons that were deeply buried in the earth in a cavern at Mentone, on the borders of Italy, and that are supposed to have lain there since the older Stone Age, probably more than 100,-

Prof. D. G. Brinton, in a public lecture before a recent meeting of the American Association for the advancement of Science, an abstract of which is published by the Popular Science Monthly, discussed that very interesting subject, "The Earliest Man." He said that science inclined to the belief that man originated in one spot, and that all others descended from the first pair. What is called the present period was divided many thousand years ago by the glacial period; and it was probable that in certain parts of the world man lived during the ice period, which would make the antiquity of the race at least 100,000 years.

Prof. Brinton is of the opinion that the earliest man was of the average height of men of to day, muscular and strong, walking not always erect, but stooping forward. His skin was hairy, of a reddish color, and REMAINS 100,000 YEARS OLD. the women were somewhat smaller than the men. His forehead was low, but his brain was fairly developed. He knew the use of fire, how to make weapons of stone, bone and wood, traps for animals and some kinds of boats.

Then he used some kind of shelter; he lived in communities; he had a language; he loved his family and took care of the sick, but he did not seem to have had a religion. He was brave in battle, and loved to roam. All this can be proved by a careful study of his remains. It was concluded, therefore, that the earliest men were of the same spirit and soul as men of the present day, endowed with like faculties, and with

The illustration gives the position in which these representatives of the prehistoric men were found. They lay across the present mouth of the cave with their heads to the east. The outer skeleton was that of a man apparently well on in life. Unfortunately the skull was broken with a blow of a pick at the first moment of discovery, and the length of the skeleton can therefore only approximately be given.

From his heel to his head he measured six feet four inches. This giant frame was somewhat turned to the left, but it lay more on its back than the other two. By his left hand, laid close to his side, lay a long flint knife, which is shown lengthwise and crosswise in the accompaning sketch. About the neck and on the skull were remains of ornaments of teeth and bone, fish vertebrae, pierced shells, etc.

Immediately behind this lay a skeleton, recognized as that of a woman. It rested on the left side, with the knees slightly drawn up and its right hand almost resting upon the giant's shoulder. The female skeleton was not so richly decked with ornaments as the other two. The third skeleton, of a youth, lay in much the same attitude as the second, with its right hand raised as if to be laid on one shoulder of the man in front of it. Under its head a flint knife was discovered.

In France in the early fifties Boucher de Perthes claimed to find in early quarternary gravels, flirt implements made and used by an ape-like man. In the latter part of the fifties two Englishmen went to France and helped De Perthes in his investigations. They were both good geologists, and became convinced of the truth and importance of the Frenchman's claims. Supported by men of unquestioned ability, an interest on the part of scientific men was awakened, and similar finds were made all over Europe. Before his death De Perthes saw with great satisfaction the quarternary man fully established. From France the news of the discoveries spread over the world-men became interested in prehistoric times, and caverns, rock shelters and terraces were assiduously searched for evidences. To-day Europe can divide her quarternary men into several epochs, and bring them through polished stone, bronze and iron ages to our present age of steel.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 14.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. iii, 1-15-Memory Verses, 13-15-Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 22-Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

1. "Now, the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?" In the first two chapters all is perfect, and God walks with man, and man communes with God. Now comes the wicked one in the guise of a serpent-full of hatred of God and man. See his aliases in Rev. xii, 9; xx, 2, and his end in Rev. xx, 10. He begins his work by insinuating that God does not love his children or He would not keep any thing from them.

2. "And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden." We cannot blame the woman for talking with him, for she probably had not heard of him who spoke to her through the serpent. We know him and deserve to suffer if we hold any parley with him. See Eph. vi, 11; Jas. iv, 7; I Pet. v, 8, 9.

3. "But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die." She both added to and diminished what God had said. Compare carefully chapters ii, 17, and let us give good heed to Deut. iv, 2; xii, 32; Jer. xxvi, 2. Our part is to be simply obedient and trustful and shun every insinuation

4. "And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die." What a deliberate lie! When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own, for he is a liar and the father of it (John viii, 44). All liars shall have their portion with him (Rev. xxi, 8). One would think that such an attack upon God would have shown the woman that she was dealing with an enemy of God. But what shall we say of professed friends of God who today teach that there is no hell and not even a devil?

5. "For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." This seems to have been his own ambition (see Isa. xiv, 14), and he will yet find a man willing to be filled with it (II Thess. ii, 8, 4). We know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, and then shall we know even as we are known (I John iii, 2; I Cor. xiii, 12), but this is to be reached by death to self, trust in the sacrifice of Christ and obedience to Him, never in any other way (Acts iv, 12).

6. "And when the woman saw, etc., she took of the fruit thereof and did eat and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat." This is the history of every temptation and sin, the outward object, the inward commotion, the increase and triumph of passionate desire, the degradation and ruin of soul. So with Achan. He saw; he coveted; he took (Joshua vii, 21). Adam and Eve had everything and yet sinned. Christ seemed to have nothing, yet stood firm.

7. "And the eyes of them both vere opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves aprons." This was an eye opening that has left us blind by nature in the right direction ever since, as we need to be anointed and have our eyes opened to behold spiritual things (Rev. iii, 18; Ps. cxix, What a contrast between the garments of light which they lost and these self made aprons! Fig leaves may well represent profession without reality (Math.

8. "And they heard the voice of the Lord God, and Adam and his wife hid themselves." What a sight is this! God's dear children hiding from their loving Father and thinking that trees can cover them. What fools sin makes of us, and how blinded must be the mind that seeks to hide from the only true friend! Such has been the sinner's conduct ever since, vainly seeking to hide from God.

9. "And the Lord God called unto Adam and said unto him, Where art thou?" From the fall to the end of the Bible story it is a God of love seeking lost and straying people and man in his blindness hiding or running away from God. What does your soul say in response to "Where ar's thou?" Mine replies, Lord, thou knowest I am in Thee, and Thou art to me the Rock of Ages (Isa. xxvi, 4 margin). Once and for a long time I tried to hide from Thee, but now Thou hast taught me to hide in Thee.

10. "And he said, I heard Thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked, and I hid myself." Here is the first fear in Scripture, and it follows hard on unbelief and distrust of God. There will be no fear where there is confidence in God. for His perfect love casteth out fear (I John iv. 18); so that if our hearts can say, "Behold, God is my salvation," we should also add, "I will trust and not be afraid" (Isa. xii, 2). Some are afraid of the voice of God in His word because they prefer their own thoughts and ways.

11. "And He said, Who told thee thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?" God of course knew the whole story, but before we can be forgiven there must be on our part conviction of sin and confession of the same. This God would give to Adam and draw from him that He might forgive him (see Prov. xxviii, 13, and I John i, 9).

12. "And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat." This sounds very badly. Adam, thou hast fallen very far and brought us down with thee, for some of us have talked that way. But see the sin. He finds fault with the gift of God and lays the blame on her. Now see Jesus, who has taken upon Himself all the guilt of His body, the church, and borne it, that He might present her to Himself without spot (Eph. v, 27).

13. "And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat." She did not ask, as some do now, why God allowed the serpent to come to her, and why God did not keep her from falling, but she makes confession and pleads guilty. And both having now confessed the way is open for the revelation of God's salvation by grace (Rom. iii,

14. "And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle," etc. What kind of a creature the serpent was before this and of what form we are not told. But it is evident he did not go upon his belly as now. Eve will tell us when we see her if it is worth while to know. 15. "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and ther seed. He shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." The Lord God speaks to the enemy in the serpent and in the first clause declares the woman's restoration to God and her hatred of the devil, all brought about by God Himself, who

A LIBERAL CZAROWITZ. Not After the Czar's Heart But That of a European Princess. Another royal heart is being hawked in the courts of Europe. This time the owner of the heart is the Czarowitz, eldest son of the Czar, the coming autocrat of all the Russians—the powerful ruler, that is to be, of hundreds of millions of people. This young man is looking for a wife, a woman who will some day sit upon the Russian throne, the most powerful of her sex in Concerning this fortunate woman, that dreadful little rogue, rumor, has much to say. But this much lacks confirmation. Yesterday it was the daughter of the Prince of Wales, to-morrow it is a Danish princess and next week we shall have another story and another name. Indeed, the heir to the throne of Russia is the most engaged, but by no means the most engaging, young man in Europe.

Who is this Grand Duke Nicholas, fated some day to be the most powerful man in the world? He may become Czar of Russia at any time, should the anarchists or nihilists succeed in their designs of killing the present head of the Romanoffs. Little is known about him. As the immediate heir to the throne, and in view of the uncertainty as to the life tenure of the Czar, it has been the policy of Alexander III. to keep the Czarowitz from any dangerous, or even public post of duty. This accounts, in the main, for the fact that so little is known of the young man, who is now, by the way, a few months over twenty-five years of age.

Truth be told, there is very little about the young man to attract attention, aside from his position as the eldest son of the Czar. The Grand Duke, in fact, is a very colorless youth indeed. He lacks strength mentally and physically. He has shown no talent for anything of consequence. There is nothing of the Tartar about him. He is not at all a Romanoff in appearance. These men have nearly all of them been of the most impressive appearance. The mad Emperor, Paul, was a fine looking man. Alexander II. was one of the handsomest men, in point of physique and face, in Europe. The present Czar is a veritable Ajax, and is held to be the strongest man in Europe.

Grand Duke Nicholasis a weakling. He que, but, instead, resembles his Danish mother. Frequently there are rumors that the Czar has determined to use his autocratic powers and name his robust second son as his successor.

There is probably nothing in these reports. The one soft spot in the character of the present Czar is his love for his wife. Her influence over him is remarkable, and she, womanlike, loves her first born child, who has her face and amiable disposition; therefore she is not likely to allow him to be set aside if she can help it-and she probably can.

It appears true, however, that though the Czar may love his son well enough in a paternal way, he has no especial admiration for him as a prospective ruler of Russia. The massive, imperial crown of Russia and the flowing robes of state have looked impressive enough on such giants as the recent Czars of Russia, but the effect will be different when they are put on by the somewhat puny Grand Duke.

But this is not the worst. The Czar might forgive his son his weak physique and Danish face. There is worse. The Czarowitz is inclined to be a liberal; and in the eyes of the Czar this a crime against Russia and against him.

Alexander III. cannot understand liberalism. He never admired the somewhat liberal ideas of his father, and he can understand still less those of his son. The young Grand Duke disagrees with his father in many essentials. His temperament is that of a scholar, and his tutors have made him a very fine one. The Czar does not like scholars in the abstract. He has to have them about him in certain positions, but he would be better pleased if he could do without them.

Another subject upon which the Czar and his eldest son disagree is with reference to the Emperor of Germany. The Czar has no especial love for that chipper young monarch. Grand Duke Nicholas has, and has given public expression to his opinion. Should he come into power at some time in the near future all the love making that has recently gone on between Russia and France would have been for nothing.

Popular Everywhere,

Beginning with a small local sale in a retail drug store, the business of Hood's Sarsaparilla has steadily increased until there is scarcely a village or hamlet in the United States where it is unknown.

. To-day Hood's Sarsaparilla stands at the head in the medicine world, admired in prosperity and envied in merit by thousands of would-be competitors. It has a larger sale than any other medicine before the American public, and probably greater than all other sarsaparillas and blood purifiers combined.

Such success proves merit. If you are sick, is it not the medicine for you to try? Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures. Saxon ladies wore a gown reaching to the feet and over it a capacious mantle covering the form and head.

THE GREAT TELESCOPE OF THE CHICAGO UNIVERSITY.

Magnificent Buildings to Be Erected on the Projected Structures and of the Great Telescope

Within a year from now will rise a magnificent structure, 200 feet above Lake Geneva, in which the largest telescope in the world is to be housed. In it that branch of science which makes the knowledge of the going and coming of the starry host on the firmament its special domain will be pursued, taught and carefully nurtured. Charles T. Yerkes, the well-known street railroad manager of Chicago, some time ago made a donation of $500,000 to the Chicago University. He specified that this sum was to be expended in the creation of an astronomicai department for the institution, and for no other purpose. It is stated that Mr. Yerkes is so well satisfied with the way in which his generous gift has been laid out by the recipients that he intends to increase the size of his donation at a future day. Out of the $500,000 given by him the board of directors of the university has spent $125,000 on that famous telescope known the world over by its donor's name, and which was an inter-esting exhibit in Manufacturers' building during the recent exposition. The column and head of this, the largest instrument of its kind in the world, are of cast iron and rise to a height of 43 feet, the weight being fifty tons. The polar axis, of steel, is 15 inches in diameter, 13½ feet long, and weighs three and one-half tons. The declination axis, also of steel, is 12 inches in diameter, 11½ feet long, and weighs one and one-half tons. The tube is of steel, sixty-four feet long and fifty-two inches in diameter at the centre, tapering toward the ends. Its weight is six tons. The driving clock, weighing one and one-half tons, is located in the upper section of the columns. It is wound automatically by an electric motor and is controlled by a double conical pendulum. It is geared to the main driving wheel, eight feet in diameter, which, when clamped to the polar axis, revolves it, together with the tube and all its accessories, all weighing twenty tons, in exact sidereal time. All quick motions, slow motions, and clamps, both in declination and right ascension, are operated by hand, and also by electric motors controlled by a switch-board placed within easy reach of the astronomer. The assistant astronomer likewise has full control of all motions from the balcony which surrounds the head, and which, together with the clock, is reached by the spiral staircase. The total weight of the telescope is seventy-five tons. Up to the time of constructing the Yerkes telescope the one in the Lick observatory, near San Jose, Cal., was the largest in the world, its largest disk being 36 inches in diameter, the one in the great telescope of the United States naval observatory, 26 inches, being next in size. The Yerkes telescope has disks measuring 40 inches in diameter.

John Johnston, jr., a lawyer and capitalist of Chicago, gave the site to the university, stipulating that the observatory with the Yerkes telescope be placed there on. The site is a tract of fifty-three acres on the western border of Lake Geneva valued at $27,000.

Xiphioid Whales Which Belong to Long-

Past Geological Ages. Prior to 1883 the naturalists of America knew nothing of xiphioid whales except from comparisons and the fossil records of the geological ages. During the year mentioned, however, one of these queer cretaceans was stranded upon the sands at Barnegat City, N. J. J. H. Ridgeway and his assistants managed to save the specimen, and immediately telegraphed for the officials of the National Museum of Washington. They went, of course, and took all the apparatus necessary for preserving such a unique curiosity. Among these Smithsonian worthies were scientists of catch my idea. international reputation, yet the creature before them could not be assigned to its proper class until after the brain was critically and scientifically examined—this on account of its great rarity. Before removing the flesh preparatory to "making a skeleton" of the great creature's bones a plaster cast of the exterior was made. After this operation had been finished in all its minute details the meat was cut away and the bones carefully articulated. A scientific report of the incident, quoted by | that his throat needs protection. the St. Louis Republic, closes as follows: "The xiphioid whales have a most interesting history. * * * They really belong to the geological ages, and perhaps only a few stragglers are now left in remote quarters which declined long ages before man appeared upon the earth."

FIRST OF HOOFED ANIMALS. Supposed to Have Lived on Western Prairies 500 Years Ago.

In the rooms of Professor E. D. Cope, at Philadelphia, the person fortunate enough to gain admission says the St. Louis Republic may see the creature which the Shores of Lake Geneva-Details of | all naturalists are unanimous in pronouncing the first representative of the hoofedanimal species. The animal is not alive, neither is it entire so far as flesh and blood are concerned, but to the paleontologist, who cares only for the fossiled bones, the specimen is perfect. It is not larger than a yearling calf, and not nearly so tall, and was found in the Wind River country in Wyoming. Professor Cope named it Thenacodus primævus when it was first discovered, giving it as his opinion that it was akin to a specimen which was found several years ago in France (the paleotherium), and which gave Cuvier and the other naturalists so much trouble to classify. At the time of the discovery of the French specimen the savants of Europe decided that it was the ancestor of "hoofed critters," but the Wind River fossil, which is easily distinguished as being a type of the same is believed to be much more ancient. Cope's curiosity was found in rocks belonging to the eocene period and the time when it grazed on the western prairies has been placed as far back as

Mr. George F. Riddell, says the Collingwood Enterprise, is one of the best known residents of Singhampton, and in conversation with him and Mrs. Riddell, we were told the story of how their little girl was saved, which is well worth making public. The little girl is two years and four months old, very bright and intelligent. Her name is Lizzie, but her parents call her the "Pink Pills baby," and gave these reasons: When Lizzie was ten months old she was taken ill, the trouble being ascribed to her teeth, and so bad did she become that she was quite blind for two weeks. A doctor said there was no hope for her, and the parents shared his opinion, for the child was exceedingly puny. Mrs. Riddell said: "We frequently could not help wishing the little one was at rest, so much did she suffer.' Mr. Riddell heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and determined to try them. As baby continued taking the pills she began to grow well and strong, and has gone on steadily improving. "I think," said Mrs. Riddell, "that baby would long since have been in her grave had it not been for Pink Pills. Mr. Riddell said he had been ill for some time himself, feeling nervous, worried and losing his appetite. His left hand also seemed to be losing its strength, and his weight decreased to 132 pounds. He resolved to try Pink Pills, and in six weeks he regained good health and appetite, while his weight showed an increase of 32 pounds. He is enthusiastic concerning Pink Pills with good reason.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are as beneficial in the troubles incident to childhood, as they are for persons of more mature years. They act directly upon the blood and nerves, strengthening and rebuilding the whole system. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail on receipt of 50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2 50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y. pepsia."—Mr. Samuel T. Casey, Belleville, writes: "In the spring of 1884 I began to be troubled with dyspepsia, which gradually became more and more distressing. I used various domestic remedies and applied to my family physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with but little hope of relief; and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. Although now 79 years of age I can enjoy my meals as well as ever, and my general health is good. I am wellknown in this section of Canada, having lived here 57 years; and you have liberty to use my name in recommendation of your VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, which has done such wonders in my case."
