Peculiarities of Place and Custom Give Variance To Hotel Figures.

Forty thousand glasses of new been were required to slake the thirst and satisfy the curiosity of London yesterday. The approximate figures given out from the hotels today show 38,940 glasses sold. The amount of the new beverage consumed will be in excess of this, for it does not take into account deliveries to residences

With a "reat curiosity satisfied to varying degrees Londoners today returned to normal ways. The demand for beer fell off to a marked degree The hotels, compared with yesterday, were more or less deserted.

Bottled beer was the popular drink yesterday. The number of bottles placed on the tables was 12.782, or 581 cases of 24 pints. About 73 kegs and half barrels were used. More than 13,000 glasses of draught beer were

The demand for bottled beer and the draught product varied with the location. One hotel sold 90 cases and four kegs. Another proprietor said that his draught beer went beg-ging. All his customers wanted the bottled ale. The largest amount consumed at any one parlor was 118 cases and 14½ kegs. The kegs hold ten gallons each; the half barrels

DECRIES CHURCH STRIFE IN CANADA

Dr. Fleming Cautions Against Adoption of Dominion Plans.

Associated Press Despatch. London, May 21 .- Rev. Dr. Archibald Fleming of Edinburgh, one of the most eminent of the Presbyterian ministers in Great Britain, in an article in the British Weekly, earnestly pleads with the Scottish general assemblies not to arrive at a hasty decision on the question of church union on representations of Canadian deputations.

Dr. Fleming describes the church union matter in the dominions as. civil war within the Canadian Presbyterian church which for bitterness and intensity and tragic acrimony has had no parallel since the Scottish disruption in 1843.

"The melancholy thing," Dr. Fleming states, "is that all this unchristian strife has been going on in the name of Christian unity, and without doubting their good motives it is permissible to question the statesmanship of those who in this sacred name have engineered so lamentable disruption."

A recent Canadian Press cable stated that Rev. Dr. Alfred Gandier, principal of Knox college, Toronto, derator of the general asembly of the Presbyterian church in lanada, and Rev. Dr. J. M. Duncan, editor of Presbyterian publications, Toronto, were visitors at the general assembly of the Church of Scotland in Edinburgh. Both of these minis-ters favor the union of the Presby-terian, Methodist and Congregational churches in Canada, which union is to become effective on June 10 next.

The two graceful Dornier Wal machines, laden to capacity with a most carefully selected cargo of those articles which had been decided upon as the absolute essentials, lay side by side on the ice in a protecting cove a mile from headquarters, ready at a moment's notice to glide into the air on their epoch flight. Day after day the planes and strategy of the flight were gone over again and again until every detail was like second nature to every one of the six men in the crews.

Today the meteorologists spoke their final word. "The hour has come," they declared.

The hop-off was poised with delicate balance between fair weather and foul. The basis for the sudden decision to take the air today, was the morning meteorological forecast by Professor B. J. Edward Grange of Ottawa spent yesterday in London. He didn't know whether there would be an election soon or not, so the chances are that no person else can answer the question, because Ed. Grange has an almost uncanny habit of getting fairly close to the center of political affairs.

For some time he has been with his first love, the press gallery in the parliament buildings, and is now representing Reuter's news agency, probably the greatest world-wide news gathering organizations. His impression seems to be that the gov-ernment is not worrying much about later, because it feels that its posi-tion has been strengthened in recent months. "Other parties are doing more worrying about an election than the government," he added.

Dr. Harry Thompson Was a Bear When It Came To Teeth.

In handing you this healthy bear, We ask for him your loving care. Keep him ourselves, we wouldn't dare But then we know you'll do what's fair. He's a bear, boys, he's a bear.

Such was the introduction given by Tom Yull when the Kiwanis club bear, a Rocky Mountain one year old bruin, was formally introduced to Commissioner T. W. McFarland, chairman of the parks board, at the weekly luncheon held in the Tecum-seh hotel at noon today.

The travels of the club are over, unless he escapes. For some time past he has been travelling from one club to another. Lately visiting Kitchener, Galt and other points. He was not taken out of his crib in the dining-room, though many of the Kiwanians clamored to see President J. J. McHale warned, how-ever, that Mr. Bear was in such a healthy condition that he might want o play. He stayed in the box. Had Lombardo's Orchestra

From the standpoint of entertain ment, novelty and education, the meeting was perhaps the best in Kiwanis circles here this year. Guy Lombardo and his celebrated orchestra offered a splendid program of dance music and songs.

Dr. Harry S. Thompson, head of the department of research in the Royal college of dental surgeons, Toronto, announced that he would trace the history of dentistry, and that he would speak quickly. He did. In one of the liveliest addresses ever heard in London he told the story

The pendulum swung too far the other way so that in the last few years the first question a doctor asked was concerning the extraction of the teeth.

240 Pounds Bite Pressure He spoke of the relative merits of the artificial and the natural teeth, The biting power of the normal male's own teeth was a pressure of 240 pounds; his own was 260; the power derived from false teeth was 40 pounds. The power was masti-cating power, chewing ability. The diseased teeth were caused by dead nerves, said Dr. Thompson. A dead nerve was an abscss, an abscess meant puss. It was for the dentist to keep the tooth alive.

Manager William Baines, of the Winter Garden, introduced the members of the Lombardo orchestra, saybers of the Lombardo orchesta, saying that they were the only musicians who had gone in a body to the United sates and received recognition as a first-rate orchestra.

During the first quarter of the way the planes broke through the ice sheet to the depth of ten inches. As they gained momentum they taxied more lightly. The entire getaway was carried off without a hitch. To onlookers, however, the suspense was so acute that the cheers that went up as the planes took the air was almost hysterical. Special to The Advertiser. By BEN G. KLINE.

San Francisco, May 21.-Dorothy Ellingson, who confessed that in a violent rage she shot and killed her own mother when that mother tried to lay a restraining hand on her waywardness, has been found sane by the experts at the Napa state insane asylum. As a result, she will be returned to San Francisco to be tried for murder.

After close observation and examination for six weeks, the Napa specialists unqualifiedly pronounce the emotionless girl sane. Six weeks ago a jury of her peers declared her insane. Some days before that a specialist for the state told the court she was sane. Against this another specialist retained by the defence told the same court she was insane. The girl fought bitterly against the jury's insanity finding before she was sent to Napa, declaring she was as sane as anyone in the court and that she wished to take the punishment for her self-confessed crime. The insanity finding was a victory for her attorneys, but a defeat for the defendant, who displayed the same rage against the lawyers retained by her father for her defence that must have flared up when she shot her mother. Now the findings of the specialists at Napa is a countervictory for Dorothy, though it may be the means of securing for her a long term in prison.

Sir George had not forgotten that service and brought Colonel French out of retirement to write the new cavalry book. Then the question arose as to who was to carry out the alterations called for in the book. Some answered "the one who suggested them." The story sounds a warning to the careless husband, pointing out the marital difficulties that are bound to crop up when wives are neglected—a particularly risky proceeding when other men are only too anxious to gain her favor and shower attentions upon her.

Lewis S. Stone, Florence Vidor, Lew Cody, Dale Fuller, Winter Hall, Edithe Yorke and other screen favorites are seen in the cast, but the bulk of the picture is carried by the first three stars. Seldom does a production have the advantage of such sincere performances as are given by this trio.

RANK Jones used to complain and achey from his long walks to and from work on the hard roads and pavements.

One day when he felt more tired, and his feet hurt him worse than usual, he happened to see a man go gliding by on a bicycle.

"Cycling is far easier than walking," said Frank to himself. And all day long while he was working that thought kept running through his mind.

That night, on the way home, he dropped into a C.C.M. dealer's and looked over the different C.C.M. models, choosing one that suited

Laymen's League in Centennial Church. Characterizing the union of three of the great Protestant churches in Canada as the greatest event in church history since the reformation, Rev. Dr. D. C. MacGregor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, received a reception last evening from the London Methodist conference at Centennial church, such as is seldom accorded a visiting speaker.

As a tribute to his work in the problem, the delegates arose to their feet at Dr. MacGregor's introduction and so warmly applauded him that Discoverer of the South Pole, who is attempting a non-stop flight across the North Pole. One reason for union was because the present organization of the Protestant churches was not in harmony with the New Tastament. Paul, n his letter to the church at Corinth, was concerned with the broken-up condition of the churches.

Lord Astor's Bill Turned Down By Two Votes in House of Lords.

Associated Press Despatch. London, May 21.-That women will before many years be entitled to vote in the House of Lords as well as in the House of Commons, is the conclusion drawn from the fact that Lord Astor's private bill to enable peeresses in their own right to sit and vote with British peers was rejected by a free vote of the lords today by a majority of only two

Lord Salisbury, speaking in behalf of the government, said he had decided to vote against the bill "with reluctance." while another government member, the Earl of Birkenhead, who described himself as "an unrepentant opponent of woman's franchise," stated what may be regarded as the government attitude on the issue, namely, that such an important reform could not be properly dealt with by a private bill, but should be brought about with the overdue general reform of the House of Lords.

Lord Birkenhead declared he thought the present government could not fail to deal with the reform of the House of Lords during the lifetime on the present parliament. In that case, he said, since Resignation of High Commissioner Comes at Critical Moment.

London, May 21.—Lord Allenby's resignation as High Commissioner of Egypt comes at a critical moment in Great Britain's revelations with her most troublesome protectorate, and is surrounded with so much mystery that it may have unfortunate effects.

While Lord Allenby's departure from Cairo has been made to appear a perfectly natural sequence, involving no change whatever in Great In perfectly natural sequence, involving no change whatever in Great Britain's policy, it is obvious to those who have followed recent history that his authority has been undermined by intrigue among Europeans in Egypt and by the bitter campaign against him in the press at home.

The reluctance of the home government to allow Allenby to resign last full while affairs in Egypt were in a state of dangerous tension undoubtedly was the wisest course, but whether acceptance of the resignation at this juncture is a wise move will remain in doubt for many months. against him in the press at home.

Make Music the chief joy in the life of your family. An appreciation of good music should be inculcated in youthful minds-and in this important duty that devolves upon every parent, the piano can be either true aid or serious obstacle. according to its worth.

The uplifting influence of Music has its fullest opportunity to develop childhood's appreciation and understanding, when the home instrument is one that the older members of the family can take real satisfaction in playing. An ordinary piano-or a worn-out one—is likely to be a silent piano.

A Mason & Risch Piano, distinguished by sweetness and power, is a constant invitation to play. It lures you to its keyboard daily, by its charming revelations of tonal purity; and in so doing, impresses upon the mind of the child those finer subtleties of tone-beauty which only a great piano is capable of depicting.

Why be satisfied with mediocrity, when at so very little extra cost you may own a piano bearing the name "Mason & Risch"—symbol of highest ideals and greatest skill in piano craftsmanship.

When the lieut.-governor comes to the city on Wednesday next to inspect the local cadets he will find every school corps proudly carrying a standard at the head of its column. And this because the I. At the close of the service the congregation enjoyed a social hour. Wrs. H. Leonard and John McKay introduced the members of the congregation to Rev. Anthony.

At the last Municipal chapter meeting Mrs. Ralph Millar was appointed to see that every school was furnished with a standard. Some of the chapters have already been able to purchase flags in time for presentation during today's Empire Day activities in the schools of the city. Other chapters are lending their own standards temporarily with a view to purchasing flags for their part to see that the cadets are properly outfitted. Mrs. Millar has been working busily during the past week, and has practically every school equipped. How Tim Does Recountin' how Tim Crab he fell and busted up his leg a spell, but yet he grinned, a-claimin' how he was a-gettin' on quite swell.

It does me good to meet Tim Crab, I'm always glad when he comes in, he leaves behind a cheerful smile, a chuckle and a friendly grin. If there's one man with cause to mope and sigh of things that come to him, there ain't no doubt about the fact that that one man is smilin' Tim.

Last fall he fell and broke his leg and got laid up a month or two, and folks was wonderin' as they passed just what Tim's folks would go and do. For Tim he has but little means, he works away as best he can, but he be thirty leagues removed from rankin' as a wealthy man.

I mind a-droppin' in one night to sit and talk a spell with him, and anxious to find out myself how things was goin' along with Tim. Of course as I was sittin' there I sympathized about his fall, remarkin' how it seemed to me he didn't have no luck at all.

But Tim he grinned and said as how the the way that I was lookin' so, you'd think that I had been the one what tripped and tumbled in the snow. And he was sayin' how he be the lucky chap of all the men, for he had busted just one leg instead of smashin' both of them.

When he got workin' on again the shon it took afire one day, and burned just like a hemlock slab or like a load of seasoned hay. So Tim he had to look around to find some other thing to do, most men they would have cussed their luck, and made the air turn thick and blue.

But Tim he reckoned 'twas all right, he wasn't grouchin' on his luck, but went a-searchin' for a job, and usin' sixteen kinds of pluck. He said how he was thankful now his days of broken legs was done, and he had two to walk upon instead of hobblin' out

Before Tim struck another job his wife took sick for quite a spell, and it was nigh three weeks or so before she was a-feelin' well. That seemed to bother him a bit, he didn't whimper like a cur, but said he didn't have a job so he'd stay home and care

But Tim he's workin' steady now, his wife she bein' around once more, and things around his humble shack is runnin' like they

Tim says as how a healthy laugh is trouble's one unfailin' cure, but he who sits about and mopes, he's licked and flattened out for sure.-ARK.

From the church came the recommendation from the Rev. William Proudfoot, who was sent from Scotland by the united associate synod of the Church in Scotland, made in the following extract from a letter sent to that synod: "From what I have seen of the country and the religious parties in it I think the synod could not do better than strengthen the hands of the united synod of Upper Canada, since they have made it their claim that they are of the same principles as the united associate synod; and more over it would be no easy matter to satisfy the people that they and we are the same in doc-

The united synod of Upper Canada came into being some time during the year 1830, and it is very definitely recorded that on the 25th day of December in 1834 "the mission presbytery of the Canadas in onnection with the united associate synod of the Secession Church in Scotland" was duly organized. The "Supertest" slogan, "Costs no more than the ordinary kind," is amply borne out in actual experience. In fact, many motorists are con-vinced that "Supertest" means real economy and freedom from trouble.

A Capable, Experienced Organization for Doing Good

SIXTY years of experience has developed the Salvation Army into a great and thoroughly-organized machine for doing good. Its methods are as business-like as a Trust Company, but its Christian spirit of sympathetic helpfulness is limited only by the means at its command, for helping those who need help

The Salvation Army knows no creed, or language, or nationality or social position when its services are needed.

An important part of its work is among the inmates of jails and penitentiaries. It is with the prisoner on trial, it follows him to the prison, it ministers to him in prison; it meets him on his discharge, finds a job for him and sets him on the road to self-respect and decency. You can help the Army carry on this work through your contribution to the Self-Denial fund. You cannot visit the prisoner, or try to set him on the right road; you cannot meet him and find him a job;

you cannot visit or care for his family. -But with your money you can send a Salvation Army officer to do all these things.

OLIPPRS CLIP COLTS.
Special to The Advertiser.

Ritchener, May 21.—The Colts got off on the right foot today and counted early in the game, but Hamilton hit in the pinches later with the few hits that they did have and won 3 to 2. It was a neat game of ball, with the pitching being high class. Wernke didn't pass a man and struck out five, while Delcof restricted the visitors to six hits. One of these was a homer by Froman in the fourth after Daubert had walked. Previously the Colts had tailled twice in the second on Keating's single. Loepp's triple and Brown's single. The Clippers won out in the ninth on McCrae's single, and two out, followed by Lopez' bingle to left.

Compeau, the Colts' shortstop, had a bad day, slipping up on three chances, while Jack Beatty saved him another by neat fielding.

CHAPTER XVI.

A Promoter Who Made Prize-Fight History.

One of the brainlest men that ever promoted boxing is Gus Troxler. He gave me my first chance to referee in Newark. If Troxler had not liked boxing as a hobby—he knew he could not make anywhere near as much money in it as on the stage—Jersey money in it as on the stage—Jersey would not have boasted of half the oxing stars it turned out. Troxler was a great actor. He was also a strong man. He could break a cobblestone by smashing it with his fist. Troxler was also the inventor of many of the ring's appurtenances. It was he that invented he swivel stool, which is used by all the big clubs in the country. He first tried it out in his club. Ben Douglas had the honor of being the first boxer to use the swivel seat. It was attached to the ring post, so that it could be swung in between rounds. When the bell rang it was swung out, which was a saving of time and also saved those sitting near the corner from the annoyance of seconds rushing a stool in and out

Fox, who had lent such wonderful support to boxing during his lifetime, giving many handsome championship belts and the like. Troxler's glove had no thumb. It was shaped something like a cocoa-nut. The glove had a wooden rod placed inside, which the boxer grasped. He was able to hook, jab with the regulation glove. This was how Troxler circumvented the law. He claimed that the boxer wasn't hitting rith his hand, as the hand clutched the rod.

Many good boxers were developed while foxing bouts were the rage.

These contests were as well attended as those with the regulation gloves. Troxler also claimed his bouts were attended by "pupils" only.

Sheriff Harrigan, who was in office about 1908, said that he thought a man could be killed with the foxing gloves, and he requested that the oldstyle of boxing be restored, but with big ten-ounce gloves.

Charlie Weinert, who has been making a great comeback, was found shadow-boxing one day in Gus' gym. It seems that he was using the one-two punch and other ring fricks in clever style. He matched Charlie with Jim Finney, a 145-pound negro, Clandeboye,

When the club fans heard the announcement of the match they booed, as they thought it the worst pairing

He was then matched with Battling Levinsky in New York city and made Levinsky in New York city and made a big rep by outpointing the clever Philadelphia Hebrew.

Jeff Smith received his start at Troxler's. His first purse was five dollars. Gus says he knew from the start that the clever Bayonne boxer, who has since knocked out champions of all weights in all sections of the globe, would make a good boxer.

Tony Bender, who had Abe Attell, featherweight champion, down for a long count at Billy Elmer's club in New York city, but who was tricked out of the title, received his school

Bartley Madden, who has yet to be dropped, though Harry Wills and other stars have tried their best to do so, got his start under the watchful eye of the Newark promoter. John Lester Johnson, who many experts credited with beating Jack Dempsey, made his debut at Troxler's, as did Joe Shugrue, who would undoubtedly have been lightweight champion had not his eyesight failed.

A rival promoter held a boxing show one Good Friday. This so riled the police commissioner that he ordered the bouts at Troxler's and everywhere else stopped. He declared a fistic crowd for the first time in the little gym in Newark.

Should Be Attractive Proposition to Cross Word Puzzle Fans.

Associated Press Despatch.

London, May 21.-After complete upsets in form, in which first one Derby idol suffered and then another, this year's running of the English flat-racing classic at Epsom on May 27 should present a very attractive proposition to cross word puzzle enthusiasts. Even those who are students of form confess that they might as well pick a horse by pricking the list with a pin while blindfolded as attempt to work with any success from a book.

Even the wagering on the Derby is less reliable this year than formerly, since, in the words of, a well-known member of Tattersalls, the market is so unstable that any animal is likely for chester butcher, jumped from 66 to 1 against to 28 to 1 against.

It is certain, however, that many horses will, draw support merely from the calibre of their stables, as for instance the Aga Khan's Zionist, Lord Derby's Conquistador, and Lord Astor's Crossbow, while His Majesty will have a big following through Runnymede. The feminine element, which is always strong on this race, continues blindly to follow the mounts of Steve Donoghue, whose personality is so strong that he would be backed by the women if he rode a turtle. There are many women, however, who prefer romantic candidates, and these undoubtedly will find some satisfaction in supporting a horse like Priory Park.

LOCAL GREENKEEPERS ATTEND ONTARIO MEETING

I Hickman, greenkeeper of the Highland Goil Ciub, and A. Nixle, green-keeper of the London Hunt club have returned after attending a meeting of the Omtario greenkeepers at Hamilton. The greenkeepers of the sixteen golf clubs represented at the meeting were guests of the Hamilton Country club

On paper the McCormicks appear to have the edge, as they have beaten St. Marys in a league game, while the Orients lost to Strathroy in their only fixture to date. However, Orients have gathered in a few more players within the last day or two and promise to field a stronger team than that which lost to Strathroy.

Q.—If the base umpire orders a player out of the game, can the umpire-inchief overrule him and allow the player in dispute to continue to play ball?

A.—Possibly. If there is a dispute the umpires usually hold a conference. The rule reads: "Under no circumstances shall either umpire criticise or interfere with a decision unless asked to do so by his associate."

Q.-Can the base umpire call a balk on the oitcher, or is it necessary that a balk can only be called by the umpire-in-chief?

Public Utilities Are Aggressive in Wall Street Trading Today.

Associated Press Despatch.

Associated Press Despatch.

New York, May 22.—Prices headed upward throughout the morning despite another large volume of proit-taking in public utility issues, which was particularly agressive in Electric Power and American Waterworks.

Motors were again the favorites of the speculative element on indications of a further quickening of the demand for popular priced cars. Nash Motors had declined 7 points before moon: Pierce-Arrow prior preferred moved up 4%, and Mack Trucks 3%.

New leaders also were sought among the low-priced specialties, a sudden spurt in the buying of New York Canners sendg that stock up 7 points to a record top at 48.

Among the rails, Reading, Norfolk and Western, and New York Central all showed substantial gains.

Call money renewed at 3% per cent.

Market Sidelights

BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

Measured by any reasonable standard, business has been good since the first of the year, is good at present, and will continue to be so unless quite unforeseen changes should take place in undersying factors, according to the National Bank of Commerce bulletin just issued. The question may well be asked, "What constitutes a reasonable standard of prosperity?" Assuredly there is no to bitrary standard, but when consumption is at high levels, labor well employed credit abundant and money rates reasonable, and when efficiently operated enterprises are making moderate profits, it is a safe assumption that conditions are normal or better. This is exactly the situation pow. There is some evidence that businessmen are realizing these facts, and are gradually forgetting their disappointment over the failure of a hoped-for boom to materialize. Herein lies the main betterment in the general situation compared with thirty days ago. BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

Mines and mining stocks.

Whether or not the recent bylaw on the Standard Exchange has had any effect on trading is hard to say. Anyway, the fact is that ever since it was announced as passed, trade has been dull, while New York, Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges are making mew high prices dally. The cause of the lack of interest in mining stocks may, as a matter of fact, be due to this very boom in the other markets. Canadian mines in London were reported weaker this morning, and that is never a favorable thing to our own market.

The mines themselves never looked better. Lakeshore is expecting a million-dollar year, Hollinger report earnings of over six million and a half, and further expansion in 1925. Barry Hollinger looks like a new producer in the immediate future, Mining Corporation have just found what is said to be the largest for body ever discovered in South Lorrain. Vipond are going ahead with an expanding program. Premier Paymaster looks like a new producer in Porcupine. Cobalt camp is regularly adding new shippers. What more do you want? MINES AND MINING STOCKS.

FARMERS WILL SAVE

Notification of Reduced Rate by Government Reaches Local Office.

Good news for Ontario farmers who have received loans from the government farm loan agency is con-tained in a despatch from Toronto, which states that interest on mortgages held by the government is be ng reduced from 6 per cent to 51/2 per cent.

This means a saving to the farmers of some $30,000, as the farm loan board holds mortgages totalling six million dollars. The reduction in rate applies to existing contracts as well as those that may be made in the future.

The decline in the interest rate was announced by Hon. John S. Martin, minister of agriculture. There are a number of farmers in Middlesex who will benefit by the owered rates, brought about by cheaper money.

The swelling tide of suds has driven the London Motor club to seek new quarters. E. C. However, this, like all matters of hotel accommodation, now depends on the quality of the beer and the demand for it. If the summer proves dry and the home and visiting throats dry, he will most likely have to find a home in another building. In the meantime he is keeping school in the hallway, surrounded by beer cases, beer drinkers, and potted palms in green pots.

You Are Going to Paint!

Of course you are! Your pride in the appearance of your property, together with the enhanced value and saving through preservation from rot and decay, makes good painting a profitable investment.

In selecting your paint you have two choices: Modlaze a self-levelling paint, and others.

Other paints made with raw linseed oil produce a brush-marked finish with hills and dales like this-

At the bottom of every brush mark there is a weak point in the paint film and also a lodging place for dirt.

It was considered good paint until our scientific research in the treatment of linseed oils and balancing our formulas revealed the wonderful possibilities of FLOGLAZE EXTERIOR PAINT, which produces a self-levelling, enamel-like surface, absolutely free from brush marks, like the diagram below-

The above diagram illustrates a typical

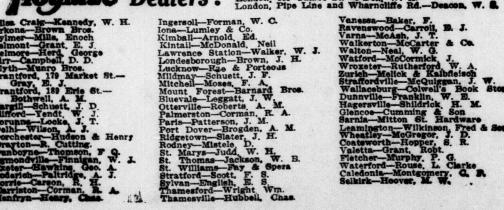

Exterior Surface

If you could remove the two inches of brush-marked film illustrated in diagram 1 and stretch it out to a level surface, it would more than cover the 24" space, same as Floglaze. Just a plain fact with no argument against it.

This is why Floglaze covers 25% greater surface with an even film of weather-resisting paint, no weak points, that looks and wears 25% better than other paints. Good brushes are essential for good painting, but with the poorest or coarsest brush, yes, even with a whisk, you cannot leave brush marks in Floglaze, it just naturally self-levels.

THE NIGHT OF THE WEDDING

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON. Copyright, 1924, by Public Ledger Company.

INSTALLMENT XXVI. Sir Rawdon in Love

He was a privileged person at Hidden Hall Court, and had a right to go and come as he pleased, even after midnight; but if his unprovedperhaps unprovable—suspicious were just, there would be a spy about the place, bound by love, or fear, or money, to report upon his movements. Fanny was an adversary not to be despised, even by Dagon of Scotland Yard. Her room was far from hisas far as the furthest end of the house—but if she were watching him it would be by night as well as day. Her experience as a V. A. D. must well have accustomed her for "night duty."

Dagon used the secret displayment of the him him to do with Miss Carroll—I mean Month of the him to do with Miss Carroll—I mean Month of the him to do with Miss Carroll—I mean Month of the him help—what?"

"Well, I'd like to hear the details of your dream a little later," said Dagon evasively. "But meanwhile—ergo up stairs?"

Wells smiled at the hint. "Certain—ly. Whatever you like."

"Had the dream anything to do with Miss Carroll—I mean Month of the him help—what?"

well have accustomed her for "night duty."

Dagon used the secret door and staircase leading down from the tapestry boudoir in order to reach the cellar. He chose this way because he knew that a dog of Fanny Gillett's—a sharp-voiced fox terrier—slept in the housekeeper's room; and he would have to pass that door if he descended to the cellar by the obvious route.

With Miss Carroll—I mean, "No. It had to do with Pandora—Miss Haste."

"Ah!" Dagon could not keep back the exclamation. "Did you dream she was calling for help?"

"I did dream that very thing. How did you guess?"

"I don't know. I do guess things! I generally guess right. And I've been thinking a whole lot about Miss Haste lately."

descended to the cellar by the obvious route.

He knew the secret of the spring, over which he had brooded a good deal lately, and the mechanism was practically noiseless, if carefully handled. But tonight he was excited and must have bungled, for the door behind the tapestry stuck in resignove and the push he had to give it sent it home with violence. Dagon had shut each door behind him as he passed, yet the noise the tortured mechanism made seemed to his jangled nerves to echo through the house. It seemed, too, that he had heard some other sound—a sigh, a rustle, the tap of a heel, and had he been superstitious his heart would have jumped, for the tapestry boudoir was haunted by the ghost of the long-vanished bride—that mysterious beauty who had disappeared two centuries ago, as Eve Carroll had disappeared the other night.

The detective, however, prayed it might be nothing more perilous to his plan than a ghost. He would be tabout Miss Haste thinking a whole lot about Miss Haste lately!"

"You have?" A note of surprise, nerhaps of resentment, sounded in Wells' voice (This pleased Dagon. "You've never even seen her. I think?" "I've seen her photograph. And I've heard enough about her to know—not just to think, but to know!—that she must be about the bravest, most loyal girl this side of—well, not to exaggerate, let's say the North Pole." "She's all of that," agreed Rawdon Wells. "You say you—a stranger—have been thinking about her a good deal. It isn't very strange then, considering what she tried to do—what she sacrificed—for me, that I should be thinking of her—dreaming of her. too—all the time" "No. it seems to me it would be a bit strange if you didn't," agreed Dagon.

"Still, I hope you'll forgive my butting in on your affairs! You see, I've had to make them my business, and might be nothing more perilous to his plan than a ghost. He would have secured his retreat by closing the secret door again, but dared not do so lest it should stick once more. His electric lantern guided him down the narrow stairway in the thickness of the wall and then the cellar peen. have secured his retreat by closing the secured hor again, but dared not do so lest it should stick once more. MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

Mrs. L. G. Nethercott, R. R. No. 1, Crinan. Ont., writes: "I was awfully troubled with constipation, and sick and bilious headaches, accompanied with severe vomiting spells, which made me very miserable. I tried different remedies, without relief, but since taking Laxa-Liver Pills the headaches and constipation have disappeared, and I am very thankful for what they have done for me."

"I understand," Wells filled up the embarrassed pause. "Unofficially you give me the benefit of the doubt, or rather more, and I have a lot to thank you for. Yet officially you're for Scotland Yard; and Scotland Yard scotland Yard; and Scotland Tard eyes me askance. I'm supposed to know some dark secrets of this poor old house, and to use them for devilish ends. The theory is, if I stayed here looking on while you followed your star—or 'hunch'—I might rather hinder than help—what?"

Dagon. "Still, I hope you'll forgive my butting in on your affairs! You see, I've had to make them my business, and

"Well! I should say you had come to your senses with a vengeance, Sir Rawdon!" almost gasped the detective

It was the door of the laboratory, and framed in it appeared Rawdon Wells.

Both men were surprised. Each exclaimed the other's name. For the detective there was no need to excuss his presence in the cellar, but it was different with Sir Rawdon Wells. He knew that he was under suspicion, and probably guessed, if he did not actually know, that he might have been arrested instead of remaining in his own house "on parole," had it not been for Dagon.

"I came down here tonight because I had the most amazing dream," Wells explained instantly, as if expecting a question. "I simply had to come. I think you'll believe, Dagon, that I'd no hidden motive—no intention of doing anything the police would disapprove for a man in my position. I suppose you're here for a quiet look at something or other that's struck you as interesting. But if you don't mind I'd rather like to tell you about that dream, and see what you think of it. There's nothing in it, I suppose: Still I can't get the impression out of my head." As he spoke he touched a switch, which lit the whole cellar.

Dagon thought of the signals. Those S O S calls hadn't been sent out for nothing. He might at best be a long time in finding the way to that "hidden hall under the pool, so he had no time to waste in discussing queer dreams.

And that's why—on top of all the proofs against me—Pan believed me guilty—why she took the crime—if there's been a crime—on herself. Do you wonder I've turned to her? That I see I must unconsciously have loved her since she was a child and that I shall love her all the rest of my life—whether it's short or long?"

"No, I don't wonder,' said Dagon.
"The wonder was always the other way round. It woudn't have been my business exactly, if I hadn't every reason to believe that Miss Pandora Haste and I are brother and sister. You know who it is I look like now, don't you? Well, I was a foundling and she was a foundling. I've seen the cloak she wore as a baby when she was left at the Haste's door. A waistcoat I had on when I turned up alone in Canada was made of the identical stuff, with the same kind of buttons; and though I've no time to explain much more to you just now, I'll say this: I'm tracing our origin back to your house—to your family, Sir Rawdon Wells!"
