BLENHEIM BOWLERS CAPTURE THE SUTHERLAND TROPHY

Stalwarts From the Progressive Town Won Out From Chatham in the Big Tournament - Exciting Finals-Over Eighty Bowlers Competed.

It was a picturesque and decidedly day and the last scores were not playnemorable scene. Already the even- | ed off until late in the evening. The ing shadows were presaging an early games were watched by a large number of spectators, who seemed to take as much interest in the competition presence. The rinks were crowded! with excited players and spectators. as the players themselves. The Suth-erland trophy was won by the Blen-heim club, who in the finals succeed-Blenheim had a lead of three shots, Chatham lay one and one bowl remained to be played. ed in defeating the Chatham rink by one shot. The Banner-News trophy, which was a silver pitcher, was not our only chance," appealed one Chatham play- palyed out.

"You'll be careful?" queried another anxiously. "If you can only do it."
"Can you carry that bowl out?"

"Draw in for shot." "No, that's no good. Play a running shot and raise this one."

If Skip Dr. R. V. Bray had been a nervous or excitable player these constant appeals and instructions would surely have played havoc with his eye and arm. But he is not that kind. J. S. Black gave him "the broom" and he laid down a beauty of the running order. It found two tiny ports and reached its goal, throwing its force against the inner Blenheim bowl and hurling it from the vicinity of the "kittie."

For a moment Chatham shouts were delighted and congratulatory, but they were followed by those of Blen-heim. Dr. Bray's fine shot had given Chathan two points on the the end, but they had needed three to tie. Blenheim had won the Sutherland trophy by one point.

The Sutherland and Banner-News trophies bowling tournament was held on Tecumseh Park yesterday. Bowlers were present from Chatham, Walkerville, London, Thamesville, Dresden, St. Thomas, Blenheim, Pe-trolea, Ridgetown and Windsor.

The games were very interesting and the competition very keen. The players worked throughout the whole

PATRIOTISM AND LOYALTY.

Dominion Day is the patriot's day, comments the Toronto Star. The loyalist claims all seasons for his own. On all hands, in the press, on the platform, in the pulpit, voices the pulpits of Canada the prophet is either patriotic or loyal are heard. The heard, and wheresoever in the press voices are not always in harmony. The senitments they utter are not always the same. Patriotism and loyalty are quite distinct. Politicians do not always distinguish between them, and the crowd too often thinks that man the truest patriot whose shout for loyalty is loudest.

He is a patriot who loves his country first and gives to it his fullest and finest service. He is a loyalist who is true to his rulers and stands unflinchingly for things as they are. The patriot may be called a traitor by hiscontemporaries, but after generations will build his sepulchre. The loyalist may be richly rewarded by his government, but his name may be unblessed.

in the gates. There is as much loyalty in Canada as can well be sustained, but of patriotism there is ever a lack. This first waste time. He has come to believe Dominion Day of the new century (through a lack of training the inmight well be consecrated to patriot- dustrial side of his nature) that he ing declamations of the lip-loyalist, at least, not but to serious and sane consideration of Canada's problems and perils.

The patriot is concerned about the perils of his country. He loves his ambitious class never get into the own country most truly when he has place for which they were by nature studied to best purpose the history of intended. They are misfits who other lands and nations. He is seri- spend their lives wandering from one ous because he knows that a nation's kind of work to another. history is not a thing of chance, but moves obedient to eternal laws, If in the life of his people are elements make a serious mistake who neglect which made for the downfall of the to have their sons prepared to earn nations, he knows that, conditions be- their livelihood in some particular ing similar, history will repeat itself

And there are tendencies making for weakness and disaster in Canadian life to-day. The sudden and surprising development of the resources of the on material wealth and the loosening of moral obligations, have been the occasion for a revival of the materialistic spirit in the life of our people. Following this, and as a result of it, there is a disposition to make wealth the god of our life, and so mammonism becomes our real religion. Recent experiences have added a third peril, not less hurtful, namely militarism, which is burning like a madness in the brain and a fever in the blood, That trickmaterialism, mammonism, militarism are the deadliest enemies of Canad today, and he is the patriot who recalls himself and his fellows to battle with country's real foes. There are those whose "loyalty" will not admit of any breach with things as they are. Like their forerunners in Israel, they cry, "Peace, them the prophet's voice must be strong and stern. They are the ene mies of the country because they will not hearken to the truth. Self-interest or prejudice has blinded their eyes, and if the prophets undeceives them, he may have to pay the old-time penalty. But at any cost, the patriot is true to his country. Wheresoever in the patriots are found, there shall be heard on this Dominion Day, not highsounding eulogy or the smooth sentences of flattery, but the straight-flung words of rebuke and the sober words of warning and the faithful words of appeal. There :is much in Canada's present for which to be thankful, and which encourages the highest hopes There is much, too, to fill the patriot with fear, lest we foeget.

THE VALUE OF TRADE.

The swiftness of the present age is seen in the falling off of the number of apprentices to trades. To spend four or five years at small wages to qualify for a trade is looked upon the average youth of to-day as altogether too slow and, in fact, Not to the ranting and royster- is fitted for some work which will, necessitate the soiling of

...... AN HUMBLE

But presently a change came over her, and the paleness of disappointment on her face slowly gave way to the flush of anger. If she could love with a passion that but few women know, she could hate equally well. Fixing her eyes on Sim, with such an expression of deadly hatred as he had never seen in any human eyes before, she said: "Sim Banks, you are a fool, a poor, pitiful, mis'able fool, an I despise you with my whole heart and soul. I despise you wuss'n I despise the meanest snake that ever drawed the breath of life or crawled in the dust. I hate you!

I hate you!" Ordinarily Sim would have been astonished at this sudden and vehement outburst, but at that moment he was not in a state of mind to be astonished at anything. With a wan, weary smile, he said:

"That's a different tune, Mis'us Mann, to what you sung that night up thar when you told 'bout lovin me." "What if it is?" she snapped vicious

"Oh, nothin. It don't make no difference to me what kind of tune you sing, nary a particle on earth. I'd jest as lief you'd sing this kind as the other, an I don't know if I wouldn't liefer. But seems like you've changed a beap.' "S'pose I have? Is it any sign 'cause a body's a fool once they're goin to allus be a fool? An I was a fool then, Sim Banks, a plumb downright idiot fool. If I hadn't 'a' been, I'd never 'a' thought that I loved the likes of such a mis'able thing as you. Lord, you make me plumb sick with your fool clingin to Loueesy's skirts when she's doin her very best to kick you off. You ain't got as much sense nor as much backbone as a fishworm."

A flash of anger swept over Sim. "Mary Mann," he said, with some spirit, "what I do is my own business, an as long as I don't step on your corns you ain't got no cause to squeal. No matter what I do nor what Loucesy does, it ain't takin no hide off of your back, as I kin see, so I reckon you mought jist as well save your breath for some other purpose." "Humph! I reckon you mean to say that it ain't none of my business."

"I do, Mis'us Mann; I mean jest that "Waal, mebby it ain't my business: but, for all that, Sim Banks, I'm bound to say that you're a fool an that ev-make about it, you better go on to him." "You're sich a sot an determined fool," Mrs. Mann said, ignoring Sim's last remarks, "that you wouldn't believe a thing ag'in Loueesy if you see it with your own eyes. Them words I told you are the truth, the plumb gospel truth, an I'd be willin to sw'ar to

'em with my hand lifted up to heaven an the Bible open before my eyes." "I don't b'lieve nary a word of it Mis'us Mann, an I wouldn't b'lieve nary a word of it if you was to stan' up here an sw'ar to it till you drapped in your tracks. It's ever' speck a mis paring to deal a harder blow. As she stood with her eyes fixed on Sim she marveled at the change that had come over her. She thought of how dearly she had once loved that man and of how thoroughly she now despised him, of how once she had longed to make him happy and of how now she delighted in making him suffer. Of a truth "hell has no fury like that of a woman scorned." Truer words were never uttered, nor ever was there a woman to whom they more perfectly applied than they did to Mary Mann.

Calmly, far more calmly, than she felt, she said: "I reckon you know Sam Morgan, Sim's face bianched to a deadly whiteness, and a dreadful trembling seized him. If Sam Morgan said those things, he couldn't doubt them, and in spite of himself, in spite of all his earnest desires, he would have to believe all Mary Mann had told him. It was hard, however, to relinquish the last vestige of the fond faith he had in his wife, and, beaten back to the last ditch, he made a final stand in her defense.

"Sam Morgan won't say no sich words!" he cried in tones half pleading, half deflant. "Sam Morgan won't never do it!"

"He will," Mrs. Mann persisted, with unrelenting cruelty. "He has said 'em already, an he'll say 'em ag'in." "I don't believe it. Sam won't lie." "Sam won't lie, but he'll say them words." "How do you know he will?"

"'Cause he has already said 'em, an he won't never take back his words. It was him that seen the meetin between Loueesy an Melvin, an it was him that heard them two talkin love. If you wa'n't a fool, Sim Banks, a plumb, senseless idiot, you'd know from what you've seen an heard that Loueesy loves that man. My Lord, ever body else knows it an has knowed

Granolithic Walks Laid on Short Notice.

"T'LL' DO MY DUTY." Sure enough, as Jacob Hicks had redicted, a circular came bearing the information that one Frank Shelton was wanted by the authorities of an other county and that a liberal reward would be paid for his arrest. The description of Shelton as given in the circular fitted Melvin so perfectly as to leave no doubt of his being the man that was wanted.

Hicks very prudently decided that the less noise made about the circular and the fewer people who were in-formed of it the better. So, in accordance with this decision, he took Pap Sampson, Jason Roberts and Sam Morgan into his confidence and excluded all others. Pap and Jason he knew he could trust implicitly, and, while he was not so sure of Sam, he was compelled to let him into the secret on account of his being the township constable, for when it came to making the arrest Sam would have to take the

That night he showed the circular to those three men in his store and asked their opinion on it. After reading it over carefully they all agreed, with one accord, that Hicks was right in his view and that Shelton and Melvin were certainly one and the same.

"That," Pap Sampson said, with an air of clear conviction, "is as plain as the ears on a mule. Thar ain't a shadder of doubt in my mind on that score. But what I'm pestered 'bout is what we ort to do next. That's the p'int I'd like for some of you to make clear to

They all exchanged an inquiring glance, but no one spoke. It was evident that none of them had any very well defined ideas as to what would be the proper course for them to pursue. When the pause had begun to grow awkward, Jason Roberts broke it by remarking irrelevantly:

"Lord, jest to think of that feller bein wanted for murder! Ain't it awful?" "'Tis so," Sam agreed. "Wonder who it was he murdered. Does that paper tell?"

"Of course it does," Jason replied "Didn't you read it?" "Not all of it, I didn't. I never read nothin 'bout that." "What was the feller's name, Jake?"

Jason asked. "I've done clean forgot." "Marchand," Hicks replied. "Right putty name, ain't it?" Jason observed. "Rale high soundin, too, like it might belong to some of them way up kind of people." "'Tis shore," Sam agreed, "an I bet he was a good sort of feller too." "Mought 'a' been," Jason replied.

"I dunno nothin 'bout that, though." "No, but I bet he was. Wonder what that feller killed him for any "Lord, Sam, I reckon it'd be putty hard to tell what made him do it. Mebknife.' "I guess that's jest 'bout what he done, Sam-either that or else he shot him or somethin. It's an awful thing any way you fix it."

"Ain't it, though? Lord, I'd hate awful to be done any sich a way."
"Yes, but I dunno if I wouldn't hate most as bad to be the feller that done

it. My land, don't you know he's moughty nigh skeered to death all the time for fear he'll be ketched an hung?" "C'ose he is. Then I bet he's ha'nted "To be shore he is. I've hearn it said that when a feller done a murder he wa'n't never free from a ha'nt no

Day an night, day an night, long as he lives, the spirit of the one he killed jest hangs round after him, never sayin nothin, never makin no complaint, but jest a-keepln its eyes on him an a-lookin so sad an mournful it's jest plumb techin." "Lord, ain't that ter'ble? Why, I'd rother be dead than to have a haint al lus a-pesterin round after me that a-way an know I wa'n't never goin to git shet of it no more. My land, I'm awful glad I ain't never killed nobody an you bet I ain't never a-goin to kill nobody nuther."

Suddenly and unexpectedly Pap Sampson brought his cane vigorously down on the floor, causing Sam and Jason to jump and putting an end to their conversation. Pap and Hicks had been holding a consultation apart relative to Melvin and, having reached an agreement, were now ready to take the others into their confidence.

"You uns has said a-plenty bou them dead folks an ha'nts," Pap remarked, "seein's it ain't them things we uns air specially interested in jest now. So, if you uns please, we'll talk 'bout that Mr. Melvin." "Waal, if you got your mind made Turner's tomorry an take him." Sam gave an uneasy glance around. "Yes, best jest nail him while we can," Hicks added. "He mought hang round here a long time yit, an he nought skin out tomorry; no tellin." "But," Sam remarked, "you all ain't figgerin that I ort to go over by myself to take that thar feller?"

"Lord a-massy, Sam, you ain't a-gwine to be afeard of him, are you?"

Pap asked.
"No-o, I a'n't afeard of him," Sam replied slowly, "but I 'low I'd ruther have so body go 'long of me. That man's killed one feller, an I have a notion he wouldn't hang back much to drap arother if he thought the safety of his rick demanded it." What is remained dark and closed all the evening.

Sporting men, actors, and other inhabitants of the Bohemia whose centre is the Strand, coming to their acsustomed haunt, found to their deep and sincere regret that the occasion of the closing of the establishment was the death of Mr. Romano, the proprietor. The rigours of the spring had killed him.

A day or two ago he had seemed his usual self, but the bitter north-saster seized him; on Wednesday he was taken ill with pleurisy and congestion of the lungs, and the end came resterday afternoon.

His death will bring to a very large section of the public a keener sense

His death will bring to a very large section of the public a keener sense of personal loss than would be caused be the death of many a man of high distinction. "The Roman" was perhaps the most widely-known restaurateur in the world. All over the world, wherever English sportsmen are to be found, the news of his death will evoke kindly memories. For Romano had the supreme tavern-keeper's faculty of personally knowing his customers.

His cooking was capital, his liquors were good, his service was well organized, and his establishment was in all respects comfortably appointed. But these were not the chief elements of the popularity of Romano's. It was his own cheerful personality that was the leading feature of his success. Upon that agreeable and distinctive personality our contemporary the Sporting Times claverly seized, and the reproduction of his shrewd remarks in broken English formed an agreeable portion of its weekly contents. So the Roman" came to be one of the best-known figures in Bohemian London and his establishment the favour-lite rendezvous of the light-hearted. His customers found in him not only a good host but an amusing companion, and there is probably no restaurant-keeper in existence who is on the same terms of personal acquaintance with his guest.

Less than a week ago he was entertained at a complimentary banquet by a number of his purveyors. Romano supplied the dinner at a price—and a good substantial price—per head. Also, when is that ditch filling going to be completed to Weaver's. It was announced as having been filled two weeks ago, but east of Mr. Anderson's, 100 feet from Princess street, it still yawns as wide and deep as ever; the first teaspoonful has yet to be put in it. In fact, in front of where I live they dug ugly holes in the well sodded bank to get earth to fill in under the granolithic where it is from 12 inches to 18 inches above the old level of the ground.

HUN THE CIRCUS INSTRUCTS.

From American Showmen.

When one of the big American shows first arrived in Europe, appearing new in the cities of England, now in those of Germany, Austria and Hungary, the phase of the American circus which most astonished military men was not so much the show itself as the manner in which it was moved. Two or three in idents will serve to illustrate the curiosity with several army officers were always present to witness the loading and unloading of the cars, the transportation to and from the grounds and the erection of the tents. The reigning monarch of one of the European nations himself came to the show incognito. He did not come to see the performance, but devoted the night to

SUCCESS IN BANKING.

Detail and Accuracy.

A habit of carefully noting the details of every transaction should be cultivated. Minute observation is essential if costly mistakes are to be prevented. In law a man is presumed to be innocent until his guilt is legally established, but it is not so in banking. Inquiry as to papers, persons, notes and coin is always in order. A spirit of investigation is as necessary to the right kind of bank clerk as it is to the man of science. Slapdash methods are entirely out of place, and system must be-

The material was brought into the building, and the arch was put together, bit by bit, flat on the It is a singular thing that in the popular view of disease the interdependence of the several organs of the body is lost sight of. The heart, for example, is diseased and it is treated as if it were entirely separated from, and independent of, every other organ.

he Loyal and Patriotic Scenes at the Buffalo Exposition Yesterday Were Grand.

When Chief Young, of this city, reached the Exposition grounds at Buffalo yesterday morning, he was altogether surprised to hear the band playing, "God Save the King." The Maple City police chief had been in New York and knew nothing about yesterday being Canadian day at the Exposition, but he was wide awake as soon as he heard the National Anthem played by a good band. He followed whence came the sound of the music and found that the 48th High-landers' Band were playing in the Temple of Music, while outside the regiment of the 48th Highlanders stood drawn up. The Temple of Mu-siq was filled and the Chief was soon with the Canadians in the large and spacious hall.

The chair was occupied by R. M. Britton, M. P., Kingston, and speeches were delivered by Mayor Diehl, of Buffalo, Dr. Borden, M. P., Minister of Militia and others. The Canadian building was afterwards opened and Mr. Young says that it is now com-pleted and looks splendid.

DEFEAT.

The house was quiet at last. Since death had entered there had been a constant coming and going, and al-though he had remained shut up in his own room in stupid despair, and the steps that he heard were hushed, yet he was ever conscious of them as an accompaniment to his thought. But all noises had ceased now, and he stole down the long stairway into the room where the light burned, and where in the midst of flowers she lay at rest. The lamp of life had been blown out, but the place where it had shone was still beautiful. Forehead and cheek and thin, how smooth they were, and rounded. Wasting disease had not had its will upon her, and she seemed to sleep. He drew his breath softly for a sleep. He drew his breath softly for a moment lest he might disturb her. Close to her bosom, with her arm about him in all a mother's tenderness, lay the little blossem of life, for whose brief existence so great a price had been demanded. He touched the rounded cheek, but it was cold with the chill of death. It was true, then, and no delusion. She who had been the inspiration of his whole life would never look up at him, the love shining in her eyes as it always did, again.

Was there any time that he could not remember her? It must have been the very dawn of self-consciousness not remember her? It must have been the very dawn of self-consciousness that summer day when he stood shyly peering between the palings that surrounded the garden of the richest man in his native village. The colors of the flowers attracted him, but the power that held him was the beauty of the little sunny-haired maid who plucked them here and there. He had no feeling of humiliation, although bare-footed and ragged, while she was clad in frock of daintiest texture, and he turned his face to her, even as he turned it. rock of daintiest exture, and he turned it ed his face to her, even as he turned it to the sunlight, for it seemed to min-ister to his joy as the sun itself. Did she speak to him that first day so long ago? Of that he could not be sure, she speak to him that first day so long ago? Of that he could not be sure, but from that day there was no morning when she did not in imagination stand beside him when he awoke, no night that she did not visit his dreams. There was no part of his life that she did not influence. He had never tried to explain it, but the personality of this fairy child called his soul into new life. In some instinctive fashion he came to know that rags and ignorance and poverty were barriers between her and himself, and a resolution shaped itself within his childish mind, and hardened

A bright glance such as she vouchsafed to any and all the inhabitants of the to any and all the inhabitants of the little village, the sound of her fresh young voice when the congregation praised God on Sabbath morning, a passing glimpse as she passed by the shop where he was employed. There was little else, and the years that he labored there were hard years, and yet they never seemed hard or wearied him. He lived two lives, the life of tred and if the life of dreams; and if the him. He lived two lives, the me or toil and the life of dreams; and if the one was hard, the joys of the other made him forget the hardness. It was slow progress in the village, but when he reached the city he felt himself in the great arena where he must fight for his life. And he fought well. Infor his life. And he fought well. Industrious, economical, honest, and yet not too scrupulous, his whole nature concentrated and poised for the struggle, he was sure to succeed. More quickly than he had thought, men marked him as one of the strugglers who was to win his way, and when at last he ventured to take a day or two that he might visit the old village he found himself the central figure. Even the scrutze's daughter looked curiously that he might visit the old village he found himself the central figure. Even the squire's daughter looked curiously at the young man who bore himself with such a confident air, as one who had gained a standing-place, and yet who had been such a short time ago the raggedest boy in the village streets. And when they spoke together, she wondered afterwards what it was, that look he gave her, as though he had taken possession of her very soul. Ah, how wise he had been. How carefully he had planned to gradually attach her to himself. Surely never had man her to himself. Surely never had man fought more magnificently to win fair lady in all the days of chivalry than this nineteenth-century youth battled, and never more successfully. For at last he won her. The crown of life that had glittered before him all these that had glittered before him all these years was in his grasp at last, and with it he was abundantly content. Men envied him his commercial ability, his keen judgment, his rapidly-growing wealth, but to him all these things were but steps of the ladder up which he had climbed until he reached the point where he could take his place at his fair lady's feet. Did she ever realhis fair lady's feet. Did she ever point where he could take his place his fair lady's feet. Did she ever realize how much he loved her, ever know how high a place he had given her?

He could not tell. Only this he knew—that the year and a half that had passed since he called her wife had been perfect. His instinct had not misled him. Her face was fair, but its loveliness was as nothing to the beauty of her soul. Every day some new charm revealed itself, and there was nothing he had to ask from fate. He never looked to the future nor gave much thought to the past. The present was full for him, every moment was golden. And now the end was here. The fair castle that he built so proudly and with such care was shattered into ghastly ruin, and there were no materials with which he might hope to face with that in life which is inexplicable so far as man's reason is conplicable so far as man's reason is concerned. Ho looked down again at her who lay so quietly, with flowers atl about, and her face at peace, and then he looked up and said:—"God, thou hast been too strong for me."

HAS PILES.

The Most Torturing Disease That Man Has Ever Known-lhe Safest and Most Certain Cure is Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Of the grown-up persons you meet from day to day one in four suffers more or less from itching, bleeding or protruding piles. Mock modesty leads many to suffer in silence, others dread many to suffer in silence, others dread the surgeon's knife, and, believing an operation to be the only cure, neglect to be treated. Some have found out by actual trial that piles can be promptly relieved and thoroughly cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Oint-

If you are a sufferer from this exas-If you are a sufferer from this exas-perating ailment and will once make a test of Dr. Chase's Ointment you will be grateful to the end of your life for having read this advertisement. It will certainly cure you, no matter what forms of piles you have, so long as you give it an honest trial.

It has been frequently remarked by persons who have used this prepara-tion that it has probably relieved tion that it has probably relieved more suffering from itching skin disease than any remedy that the world has known. While remarkably effective, as a cure for eczema and salt rheum, Dr. Chase's Ointment is unique as the only actual and proven cure for each and every form of piles. Mr. George Thompson, a leading merchant of Blenheim, Ont., states: "I was troubled with itching piles for fifteen years, and at times they were so bad I could scarcely walk. I tried a great many remedies, but never found anything like Dr. Chase's Oint-

Mr. F. G. Harding, retired farmer, living at Nilestown, Middlesex County, Ont., writes as follows: "I have been troubled with bleeding and itching piles for four or five years, and suf-fered intense agony at times. I had tried almost everything, but could get nothing that would give relief. On hearing of Dr. Chase's Cintment I procured a box, and it only required part of it to completely cure me. I am recommending it to all afflicted

If you have not met with some one who has been cured of piles by Dr. Chase's Ointment, ask your neighbors about it. It is impossible to publish testimonials of persons that all readers know, but by asking your friends you are sure to hear good words for Dr. Chase's Ointment. The Servant Gir! Problem.

As a contribution to the vexed problem of the servant, the scheme which a number of the ladies of Manchester, England, have embarked is of interest. A limited company, to be known as the Manchester Distributive Kitchens, Limited, has been started, no difficulty having been found in securing the $15,000 necessary for the project.

"We intend eventually," said the Honorary Secretary, a Mrs. R. Brodmeier, to a Daily Mail representative recently, "to deal with all branches of domestic service, but for the present we shall be content to do what we can to make up the inadequate supply of efficient cooks.

History of Kissing.

"In the spring a young man's fancy," etc., and a Philadelphia paper is moved, whether by the season or not, to an examination as to the origin of the kiss. The writer, of course, begins by putting the blame on another :-"A Germantown man who claims to have made a study of the kiss in that spirit of scientific analysis which is spirit of scientific analysis which is now so popular says that it really has a most interesting history. Its origin was in prehistoric times, passibly when the cave man was battling for his life against all sorts of foes, but ethnolog-lists differ as to just how it was dis-covered. One learned school holds that It arose through cannibalism; that one person would rub his lips over the flesh of another to see if the flesh was sufficiently sweet and tender for eating purposes, and, on a memorable day, a young warrior brushed with his lips the mouth of a girl of the tribe, and with that spft shock, electrical and sweet, the kiss was born. This has an attractive sound, but a second theory claims that the primitive mother originated the kiss. Drinking vessels had not yet been discovered, and the mother, to give her thirsty little children thon, or fire breathing dragon. The er, to give her thirsty little children one fact to remember is that the germ is powerless to harm the body when the blood is pure. It is far easier to keep the germ out than to drive it out after it obtains a hold in the syst. with that other evil. wine. According to this theory, as soon as men began to store up wine in their caves or houses, they grew suspicious of their wives, and on each return from abroad would set their mouths to their wives' mouths to see if any drinking had gone on during their absence."

Thomas F. Millard, in the May Scribner's, helps very materially in placing supply the body with blood in quantity and quality adequate to its needs.

"The figure, of middle height, was stocky and well-set, conveying at a glance an impression of physical strength. There was nothing in the appearance or dress of the man to cause one to single him out from among any crowd of burghers. He looked the crowd of burghers. He looked the typical Boer of the veldt, from his westypical Boer of the veldt, from his wea-ther-beaten slouch hat to the cowhide boots into which his trousers were tucked. A more unmilitary figure could hardly be conceived. There was no attempt at uniform. A dingy, dark-blue sweater concealed the shirt—if attempt at uniform. A dingy, dark-blue sweater concealed the shirt—if there was one—and the trousers were an ordinary pair of brown overalls. Coat there was none. A bedraggled little cockade of ostrich feathers was stuck in one side of the hat-band, but it had lost its freshness and drooped dispiritedly. Not the slightest indication of rank was visible. But for the light magazine sporting rifie slung across his shoulder and a bandolier filled with cartridges, he might easily have passed for a farmer who had just left his plough. As he faced us, with his back to the setting sun, his face was obscured in shadow. Il could see that it was bearded and belonged to a man well along in middle age, but little more. Still I exaggerate nothing when I say that even at that moment I was conscious that it was not the face of a commonplace man. Perhaps it was his straight, secure seat in the saddle, per haps the air of cool assurance and selt possession, perhaps the quiet; even tones of his voice: but, at any rate possession, perhaps the quiet; even tones of his voice; but, at any rate the impression was instantaneous and

TAUTIUS OF BANDITS.

RAID THAT WAS ALL CAREFULLY PLANNED IN ADVANCE.

ien Like the Younger and the James Brothers Could Ride Into Town In Broad Daylight, Rob Bank and Get Away.

"How was it ever possible for a half dozen men to ride into a small town like Northfield, Minn., rob a bank and ride away?" asked a reporter of a man in New York who knew the Younger brothers and the James boys.

"Such a thing." was the reply, "could not be done so easily now as in 1876. Bank robbery requires nerve of a peculiar order. I never engaged in the business myself, but at one time in my life I knew men who did. I was personally acquainted, for instance, with the Youngers and the Jameses. Left to themselves, the James boys would never have been successful in bank robbery. They were better at holding up stagecoaches and railroad trains. But, to answer your question directly, the Northfield bank affair will illustrate the method.

"The gang that rode into Minnesota did

"The gang that rode into Minnesota did not plan any particular robbery. It was a sort of bandits' outing party. They rode into Minnesota leisurely. The party was composed of Cole, Jim and Bob Younger, Frank and Jesse James, Charley Pitts, Bill Chadwell and Clell Miller. They were well mounted.

They were well mounted.

"The Youngers were the brains of the party. They were always men of good presence. Bob was as handsome as a well trained athlete. He always impressed women favorably. Jim was the politician of the trio. He could talk to men and get their confidence. Cole was more reserved, but he could have joined any church on his first application. His early training was in a religious direction.

early training was in a religious direction.

"These three visited some of the resorts in Minnesota before the Northfield affair came off. They learned a good deal affair came off. They learned a good deal in their visits about towns, about the people, for you must remember that they were away off their compass when they were in Minnesota. That's why they touched elbows with the people at the resorts. When the season was over, they knew the best place to strike. They knew how to get into Northfield and how to get out of it.

"Northfield had about 2,000 people. It was a quiet town. They didn't dash into it, as some people think. That isn't the way raids on banks were made in those days. Bob Younger, Jesse James and Charley Pitts rode into the town first, very leisurely. They had no intention of creating any suspicion by doing anything creating any suspicion by doing anything else. It was a common occurrence for men to ride into town as they did. They tied their horses to a rack near the bank They stood on the corner, as countrymen do in a small town, and talked politics as you and I would.

"At the same time they were taking note of the people. They tarried on the corner at the bour of noon and after, for that was the time when people in a town like Northfield were at dinner. They eat dinner in such towns at noon. There were fewer people astir then than at any

"While they were talking the other members of the gang, having undoubted-ly had some sort of signal, came whooping and shouting down the main atreet. These were Jim and Cole Younger, Bill Chadwell and Clell Miller. Eyery one of them had been with Quantrell, and as they rode they uttered the rebei yell. It was new in Minnesota. Naturally, it total the few people of the state of the state of the state.

startled the few people on the street.

"As soon as Bob Younger and his two friends saw that the people on the street were confused they added to the confu-sion by running about, shouting, 'Get off the street!' You know how easy it is for one man to control a panic stricken crowd. He can either make it run like scared animals or he can, if he is cool, round it up to a standstill.

"The cry of 'Get off the street!" was a new one in that quiet town. That it was uttered by strangers made no difference. People in a panic don't reason. If they did, there would be no fatalities. Bob Younger knew this. He and Cole and Jim planned the whole thing in advance, Get the people scared and they will run to their houses. "The moment Bob Younger saw the people on the run he and Pitts and James rushed into the bank. They had, however, flushed the game. The scare outside had penetrated the bank. The cashier, Haywood, had time to fathom the situation. He slammed the inner door of the vault shut and locked it. He must have been an unusually quick man mentally as well as physically.

"His act disconcerted even such men as Bob Younger and Jesse James. The lat-ter lost his head. He drew a knife across Haywood's throat to scare him and make him open the safe. Haywood didn't scare. There are few men who will not quail at the touch of cold steel. Jesse James cursed and raved. Two clerks in shooting after he knew the safe door was Besides, the uproar at the bank gave the town time to think, and the citizens went after the bandits, who gode out of town on a gallop. Bill Chadwell and Clell Miller were killed on the way out. In this case the warning to the people to get off the street was given too soon. If Haywood had not had the warning, he Haywood had not had the warning, he probably would have given in.

"Frank James was not in the raid, but he was on guard. As the bandits rode away he joined them. He was taken sick, and that is how Jesse James escaped. His love for Frank was always like that a woman has for her child. He escaped and took Frank with him on the pommel of his saddle. In this way they rode by night and secreted themselves by day.

"Sometimes Jesse left Frank in a thicket, entered a town on his route and bought medicine, returned to the sick brother, ministered to him, and at night they resumed their ride. This was continued until they reached Missouri, and a Kansas City doctor took charge of Frank and award nweet him back to health dight there and nursed him back to health right there in the town. I knew the doctor well, and I had the story from his lips. His ac-count of that ride was one of the most ex-citing recitals I ever heard."

Contradicted. "Here's a scientist who says that we think with one-half of our brain." "Well. I could show him some people who don't."- Puck.

Canadians Beaten.

Philadelphia, June 29. The Canadian cricket team lost its first game of the series here to-day with the Belmont cricket club after a sensational finish by seven wickets. Until the last two hours' play of the day had commenced, the game looked to be a certain draw, but the remarkable bow-ling of J. B. King made it possible for the Quakers to win out 15 minutes be-fore time was called. Continuing this morning the Philadelphians carried their total of 131 to'178 before the side but seven runs behind their opponents The Canadians started on their second venture, and the first six men mad a showing equal to their first inning.
C. Lownsborough being the principal contributor with a well played 56. J.
B. King then found his pitch, and the team was retired for a total of Younger knew this was a mistake and left the bank. Jesse James followed, but two hours to make the 142 runs necesturned, fired and killed Haywood. It was sary for victory, but the good playing turned, fired and killed Haywood. It was sary for victory, but the good playing bad business. It only infuriated the of A. M. Wood and F. L. Altemus en abled them to win.
