RECORDS OF HUN ATROCITIES ARE KEPT IN GOOD PRESERVATION

Facts Embodied in Report of Dr Hillis Some Which Make the Blood Curdle. —Others That Dare Not be Presented in Words

New York, Sept. 26.—The Crimes and Atrocities of Germany as the logical and inevitable result of the German philosophy of Militarism was the topic on Sunday of a sermon by Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the first of a series of six sermons, in Plymouth Church, based on observations made for the American Bankers' association in France, Belgium and England during July and August, 1917. He has documents proving 1,000 cruel acts.

No Question of Cruelty "Every American who has passed through France and the edge of Belgium this year," Dr. Hillis declared, "has returned home a permanent and sad man. German cruelty and French agony, have cut a bloody gash in the heart, and there is no Dakin solution that can heal the wound. Here upon this pulpit rests a reproduction of an iron coin given as a token to each German soldier. At the top is a German portrait of Dietz, and underneath are these words: The good old German God."

Records are Preserved. For three years German-Americans have protected that stories of German atrocities far better established than the scalping of the Indians on the Western frontiers, the murders in the Black Hole of Calcutta, or the crimes of the Spanish Inquisition. On a battle line 300 miles in length, in whatever village the retreating Germans passed following morning accredited men hurried to the scene to make the record against the day of judgment.

Atrocities Stenking. "The old catalogue of German atrocities now documented and in the government archives of the different nations makes up the most disgusting page in history. Every solemn pledge that Germany signed a year and a half before at the Hague convention, as to safeguarding the Red Cross, hospitals, cathedrals, libraries, women and children, and unarmed citizens are scoffed at as a "scrap of paper."

These atrocities also were committed not in a mood of drunkenness, nor in an hour of anger, but were organized by a so-called German efficiency and perpetrated on a deliberate cold, precise, scientific policy of German frightfulness. It is not simply that they looted factories, houses, bombed every farm house and granary, left no plough nor reaper; chopped down every pear tree with every grape vine, and poisoned all wells.

The German slaughtered old men and matrons, mutilated captives in ways that can only be spoken by men in whispers. They bombed and looted hospitals, Red Cross buildings; violated the white flag—while the worst atrocities cannot even be named in this mixed audience.

No one understands the German people as well as the Kaiser. Our president, in a spirit of magnanimity patience, and good will distinguished between the Kaiser and the Prussian government and over against them put the German people. But Hamburg's board of trade and certain popular assemblies, would have none of this and in the fury of their anger passed the resolutions saying: "What our government is, we are: Their acts are our acts. Their deeds and

WOULD LEGALIZE DEATH FOR AGED Sir William Osler Advocates Government System of Euthanasia.

By Courier Leased Wire Chicago, Sept. 25.—Legalized euthanasia providing easy death for the aged, infirm and those suffering from incurable maladies, an enlargement of the theory advanced several years ago by Sir William Osler, was advanced yesterday at the opening of the sixth annual convention of the Association of Progressive Medical men and received considerable support. Dr. W. A. Guild, of Des Moines, Iowa, read a paper in which he advocated the establishment of government or state commissions, which should have power to make legal the administering of an easy death to the aged, infirm and those suffering who are absolutely past remedial measures and desire it, and where no responsible person objects.

THE SITUATION

Still another air raid has been made on the Old Land, and it would seem that this form of Hun frightfulness is likely in the future to be pursued with more systematic activity than hitherto.

The destruction of enemy defenses or arsenals, or munition works is not the thing achieved but the spreading of devastation among the civilian population and this in plain language is sheer and wanton murder. The manifest intention is the spreading of terror, on the same basis as shelling of boat crews, after a vessel has been torpedoed. The Kaiser, during one of his many addresses to his soldiers crystallized that intent when he said "make yourselves more frightful than the Huns under Attila. See that for a thousand years no enemy mentions the very name of Germany without shuddering." The Germans do not know the British spirit if they think that the air raids will in any sense spread dismay. All that they accomplish is intensified purpose, although in many quarters it is felt that reprisals on German centres would constitute the only answer the German mind could understand.

Powdered counter attacks were made by the Germans on a portion of the positions recently taken from them by the British, east of Ypres. They attacked in great force, under cover of a heavy mist and gained a foothold on two points, but were later ejected after hand to hand fighting. Their losses were heavy. Over The Courier leased wire to-day comes the announcement that Haig's men have made another successful attack on a wide front in the same region.

The Crown Prince has again been felled in renewed attacks in the Verdun region.

Report comes from East Africa of the continued rounding up of the foe. The members of the Argentine Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 53 to 18, have again declared for breaking relations with Germany.

The London Times has commenced publication of a series of special articles under the caption "The Ferment of Revolution." The writer shows that under the auspices of a section of young men and women workers of the well paid earning class this dangerous propaganda is becoming pread. It is stated that the movement is altogether outside of Trade Unionism.

DICKIE-TURNER.
 A quiet wedding took place to-day at the Calvary Baptist parsonage, when the Rev. W. E. Bowyer united a marriage John Wm. Dickie and Abel Gertrude Turner, both of Brantford.

MCLEOD-HUFF.
 A quiet but pretty wedding took place this morning at St. Basil's Church, when Lucy M., youngest daughter of Mr. Free Huff, Dundas St., and Alex. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. John McLeod of this city, were united in the bonds of matrimony. The Rev. Dean Brady officiating. The bride, who looked very charming in her travelling suit of gazelle broadcloth, with hat to match, was assisted by her sister, Miss Mary, while Fred G. Huff supported the groom.

A Pound of Whole Wheat contains 1700 calories, says the chemist—but it doesn't contain any calories for you unless you can digest it. It is what you digest, not what you eat, that supplies nourishment for the day's work. It is a time to cut out expensive foods that generally contain little nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent. whole wheat—nothing wasted, nothing thrown away. It is real man-power food. Two or three of these little loaves of baked whole wheat with milk and fresh fruits make a nourishing, strengthening meal at a cost of only a few cents. Made in Canada.

THE GERMAN TOLL IN LOSSES
 Recently The New York Tribune printed an article discussing the casualty lists of the war on their military side. On Tuesday it found an even more illuminating aspect to the discussion of losses during the conflict—that which bears upon the economic value after the war of the death lists of battle. It is an examination of this which demonstrates the extent of the disaster to Germany of the present war.

The German permanent losses—that is, the number of Germans killed, crippled and permanently removed from the battle line—amounted for the first three years of war to 4,000,000. The figures are those of the French General Staff, but there is no reason to question them, as the sources of information of all general staffs permit them to know the losses of their foes, and their own losses serve as a guide. At the moment of war Germany had available, including the younger men who would reach military age before the end of 1918, a little more than 11,000,000. This figure represents the fit, not the aggregate male population.

For three years, then, the German loss has been rather more than a third of her able-bodied males—36 per cent. to be exact. If the German permanent loss for the current year should be what it was in each of the first two years—that is, 1,500,000 (the Russian collapse lessened it for last year, because it not only reduced casualties suffered from Russian armies but slowed down the Allied offensives)—the aggregate permanent loss of the Germans for the four years would be 5,500,000—that is, 50 per cent. of their man power.

Now, in the first three years the British loss was somewhere around a million; it was less rather than more. This represents a 12 per cent. loss in military population of 7,500,000, and this is just a third of the German loss. In other words, the blood tax upon British manhood has been just a third what it has been upon the Germans in the first three years of war. Now, suppose the British should lose another million next year—an extreme estimate. The total loss would then be 2,000,000 or just over a quarter of the man power of Britain.

If you say that four years of war cost Germany half of her able-bodied men, that it will remove them permanently from industry, while it removes only a quarter of the man power of her greatest commercial rival, you will state the probable truth, and you will indicate the real extent of German disaster. The British situation is, too, improved by the fact that Britain has nearly 15,000,000 whites in her colonies, which means a further population of able-bodied males of 2,500,000 in the empire, less the colonial casualties, which are not likely to pass the half-million mark in permanent losses.

At the present time Germany holds no British territory, while Britain holds a million square miles of German colonies. Britain has four Germans to one Briton held in Germany. Granted that the war restored the geographical conditions of 1914, the two great commercial rivals would face each other in far different posture than before the war. Of Germany's great wealth-producing population of males, half would be gone, as against a quarter for the British. Add this to the lost markets in enemy countries and, by contrast, the improved British position in countries now become allies, and there is a measure of the inevitable British victory.

Germany has only one other great commercial rival—the United States—and that nation will end the fourth year of the war with a casualty list at the greatest conceivable point, of not above a hundred thousand. This is less than 1 per cent. against 50 per cent. for the Germans.

The Germans have been able, by using their prisoners and by turning the populations in the occupied districts into slaves, to put a far larger percentage of their male population upon the firing line than their Western opponents. This has enabled them to hold out, but it means a continual reckoning which must be met. All Americans recall that the South, with its negro slave population, was able to mobilize almost its entire manhood in the Civil War, but this manhood was ultimately well-nigh destroyed and the South has hardly recovered in half a century.

The real defeat of Germany must be measured by the death lists, by the numbers permanently removed from industry. Another year of war will mean not less than 50 per cent. and there is no certainty that next year will be the last year of the contest.

Church and Press in Time of War

Why the Papers Have More Influence than Priests.

M. C. Malden writes in the London Daily Mirror as follows:
 At the great service in St. Paul's the other day to celebrate the consecration of America in the cause of liberty, there was one thing wanting.

The sunshine poured in like an omen of good, lighting up the mosaic and the sterner aisles, and the darkly-clad multitude; the songs and chants were magnificent, the preacher eloquent, the congregation impressed, but in all that there was no mention of those most present in our minds, most vital, most a part of us, most loved and near. There was no mention of our dead.

And yet, to those of us who have any vision, they are always with us, strong, vivid, eager as when they were torn from us a little while ago. They will share our triumph, if we have a triumph, for it is by their loss that we shall have gained it. I maintain that they must be a part of our everyday life and speech, even though it be true that a great silence has fallen upon them. They should be spoken of in all church services, in all public functions, always and everywhere.

The best part of this world, as we knew it, has gone from us with them, and will never return. Let us, then, help ourselves by outstretching to them, even as they, undoubtedly, are stretching out to us.

In this matter, I regret to say, in many others, our church is proving miserably inadequate. A suggestion that our noble dead should not be included in our prayers should not have had to be made by the laity. But apart from these dear children of ours, no one would know, in attending our Sunday morning service, that we were a people living in the midst of the most disastrous epoch known in human history. We are given the same placid old prayers of our childhood—very fine, no doubt, but inappropriate. We have the same lessons from obscure items of Jewish ritual. Psalms that sometimes meet the case, more often than prayer for our men by sea and land and in the air, not one Psalm or word or message that might bid them Godspeed. When this in the case I maintain that something must be wrong somewhere.

"An Inarticulate People"
 It is useless to reply that we get all we want at the daily intercession services; none of the workers or soldiers can go to a week-day service.

It is the Sunday service that is the important one. I have been myself with a boy just going out to the front, and sat through the whole service, perhaps his last in this world, and not heard one prayer for our men by sea and land and in the air, not one Psalm or word or message that might bid them Godspeed. When this in the case I maintain that something must be wrong somewhere.

We, being an inarticulate people, cannot voice our complaint. The press sometimes does that for us. Without the press I do not know how we, the great dumb, suffering public, would have borne our lot during this war. We have scarcely had a grievance, but the press has been so full of expostulation, so nagged until it was redressed. During this time of our affliction it has been the press militant, not the church militant.

But why should the church be less great than the press? Let it come over and help us. Come strong as the Thunder, was strong with the earbes against evil; compassionate as its Founder, was compassionate for the victims of that evil. Not absorbed in vague doctrines and infinitesimal disputes, but charged with prayer for all men. Prayer for the right of the right, prayer that these days may be shortened, prayer that shall now, and all ways to close both the living and the dead!

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crown and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut up and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and woman are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freestone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freestone which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from a foot.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without irritating or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

Between 150 and 200 farmers in the complete record of the business of each farm for the last year, an inventory of farm equipment, and real estate and questions dealing with the management of farm business, will be collected, and these figures will be used for various purposes.

OH, MAN!

The fate of Tantalus will not be comparable with that of certain dry devotees of Bacchus, who will gasp with parched lips when they learn that a ten gallon keg of perfectly good whiskey is roaming around this city without an owner. License Inspector R. J. Eacret was recently warned that the keg was being shipped to a John Miller of this city, and when the liquid arrived at the express office a seizure was made. John Miller failed to appear in the police court this morning to claim his barrel of booze, which will be disposed of according to the ruling of the Board of License Commissioners.

TOO MANY MIDDLEMEN, SAYS FOOD CONTROLLER

Inefficient Dealers Responsible for High Prices, Says W. J. Hanna—To Fix Prices Might Bring Disaster

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—An excessive number of middlemen is the greatest obstacle to the reduction of prices and under present conditions the adoption of a drastic policy of arbitrary cutting would mean "temporary ruin to every city and town in the country," according to a statement last night by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Food Controller, in an interview with the Canadian Press Ltd. The statement was made following the return of the Food Controller to Ottawa, after a study of the situation extending over a period of several weeks. Mr. Hanna has made personal inquiries in all parts of the Dominion, and has just returned to Ottawa after a conference with Mr. Hoover at Washington. In the interview with the Canadian Press he discussed the whole question of high prices and the features responsible therefor, with frankness. He stated that his policy was: "To bring all the powers of the Food Controller against any producer or middleman whom we find in our present investigation to be making an undue charge for his services—an unfair spread." Mr. Hanna proposes to issue additional statements from time to time discussing phases of the economic situation, and the problems which he is trying to solve.

Misconception of Problem. "I find," said Mr. Hanna, "and the gentlemen so ably, earnestly and disinterestedly assisting me, find that very grave and mischievous misconceptions of the duties and powers of the food controller exist in the minds of a number of Canadians. This number is not large, and I had hoped that with the passage of time most of the misconceptions to which I refer might of themselves have been cleared away. Since, however, they persist, and appear at times even to be fostered by writers who have perhaps been too busy to give sufficient thought to the problems they discuss, I deem it necessary to the public to make the following statement: "Unless the consumers in the cities of Canada signify their willingness to face a complete disruption of all trades, a total breakdown of real estate values, and the utter demoralization of labor conditions in their cities, the Food Controller cannot possibly accede to the demand made in some quarters to "cut prices down," to "sell food at cost," or, as it is otherwise expressed, "to do away with the middlemen." Such goals may be partially achieved. How much or how little can be done will be made known to the public from time to time, as I find necessary. But however great may be the hardships of present food prices, however popular would be the movement to have the government sell fish or any other commodity at cost, however overburdened Canada may be with the class of people known as middlemen—radical measures cannot be promised, except upon such terms as I have just indicated.

Seven Main Reasons.

"I must remind those Canadians who are perhaps unaware of the fact that seven main factors may be said to govern the present prices of food: (1) The disproportion between demand and supply, consumption and production. Food cannot be cheap while there is such a growing disparity between the numbers of producers and the numbers of consumers. (2) Unrestrained competition between great foreign buyers of foodstuffs in our markets. (3) Unequal distribution of the available supplies, surplus production in one province being unavailable for provinces in which shortages exist. (4) The food speculator. (5) The greedy middleman. (6) The superannuated, unnecessary and inefficient middleman, and (7) The waster.

RALLY DAY AT PARK BAPTIST

During the months of July and August, at the Park Baptist Church, the Bible School has been held immediately after the morning service. Beginning with September the school assembled at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, as formerly, and Sunday last was Rally Day. The pastor, Rev. W. H. Wrighton, preached in the morning, a sermon appropriate for the occasion, subject "Christ and the Children," taking for his text the 18th chapter, verses one to six. First, little children were considered in their training at home, in the day school, Sunday in the church by older members. Then humility in the Christian life. The picture was vividly drawn of our Lord taking a little child, placing him in the midst, and then declaring to His Disciples the object lesson as an answer to the question in the first verse, "What is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" by pointing them to the little child, in their midst, and said "Verily I say unto you except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Humility, therefore, was a very important feature in the Christian life when without it one could not enter the kingdom of heaven. Then as to the standard one would have in the kingdom was measured by the humility one possessed. "And whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven." What a beautiful thing is humility after all—compare some men if you will whom we know, say a man with simple, childlike faith walking among us, seeking to do good, by ministering unto others—with an arrogant, conceited man, who is only a stumbling block to the church's usefulness.

There has been a steady increase in the average attendance of the school and of the collection since the first of this year, over that of last year, and superintendant, officers and teachers are to be heartily congratulated on the results of their labors. A carefully arranged programme was carried out in an able manner by members of the school. In the evening, the audience listened to a very good sermon by Rev. H. B. Comans, the new Baptist Home Mission Superintendent, who is the successor to the late Rev. Dr. Norton, whose life and work still linger in the pleasant memories of the churches. Rev. H. B. Comans is a worthy successor. His subject was First John 4:16 "God is Love." The Rev. gentleman spoke of the love of another, its tenderness, its purity—none did not forget the love of mother, but God himself was love, his best name was love, and love is sacrifice. There was no love without sacrifice. The splendid men who offered themselves as soldiers to their king and country, gave themselves their very lives as a sacrifice for their love of their country. The love of God was the sacrifice of His law of the best of life and that was made sacrifice for man—rebellious man—man who had sinned against God—such was the love of God, that He sacrificed the life of His only beloved Son for him. The congregations were good both morning and evening. The choir was out in full force and rendered good music. Solos and anthems were given at both services and were much enjoyed by all present.

"Stop the Mouth of Seditious With a Bullet," Urges Father of Soldier, Who Has Seen the Necessity of the Whole World Putting an End to the German Menace; Only at Risk of Life Should Any Man be Permitted to Say or do a Thing That Imperils the Success of the Allied Cause in the War.

A strong argument against permitting seditious something that is altogether too common in Canada, as well as in the United States, appeared in a recent issue of the New York Tribune, in the form of a letter from a New York man, Lemuel Ely Quigg. Quigg's utterances, which might be thought to have been written by some Canadian, are as follows:

The mouth of seditious should be shut by a bullet. I am not boiling with rage, Mr. Editor. I am not even excited. The point is this—my son, my only child, in prompt response to his country's duly sounded call, is to-day headed for the French trenches, there to be the target for German bullets. Every voice raised here at home, to discourage others from going with him, they to back him and he to back them, and so to make their mighty work a success at the least sacrifice to any, increases the chance already considerable, that he will never come back to his mother and me. I think that that voice ought to be stifled before he has been.

men said a year ago about capitalists and money power and the encroachment of entrenched wealth on the rights of the unprotected poor. I might then have agreed with most of what they said, even though I might not have been able to agree with all they suggested in remedy. But the only thing before this seditious is how to win this war with the smallest sacrifice of the arms, legs, lives of the boys that marched down Fifth Avenue yesterday; of the arms, legs, of those who are marching from everywhere throughout the country to points of training and departure for Europe; of the wealth this is the sustenance of American industry and that earns bread and butter to keep them in the field and to keep their wives and children, their fathers and mothers, their dependents and those on whom they may have to depend, from distress and starvation. That is the only question before the people of this country just now.

the office, behind the counter, or in the factories, or on the farm, can still do something more—we can make it damned unpleasant for seditious; and in support of any step that the President will take to suppress seditious at home. While my son and other men's sons are doing the nation's work abroad, I offer to the President my service and present to the spirit of seditious what much or little I can do for its swift extermination.

But this view, so important to me, so important to the fathers and mothers of the thousands who marched down Fifth Avenue yesterday and to the parents of the hundreds of thousands that are being gathered from all over this land to places of training and departure, is the very least of it. The great thing is that until the world rises itself into nations organized into beasts of prey no man's home is worth building. No man's wife or his cradled baby getting a breath of fresh air in the street in front of his house, is safe from rape or death.

Make it unpleasant for them. Only at the risk of his life should any man be permitted to say or do anything that imperils the success of our cause in this war. Only at the risk of his life should any man be permitted to say things or do things that tend to increase the sacrifices that our nation just now make to render this world safe for democracy. We Britons know her to-day for something more than fogs and codfish. We know her as the home of a breed of men true as steel and brave as lions.

When Was War Popular. I have often heard it remarked that this war was unpopular. What war ever was "popular," except to the greed, lust and ambition that caused it? What war ever was popular to people who want to live in the enjoyment of peace, order and liberty. The word "popular" in connection with a war is despicable. But never before has there been a war where the principle of individual liberty, the right to make a home, to go about freely, to do one's lawful business without interruption, to protect one's woman and children against the barbarity of lust and murder, has been so definitely presented to us to-day. Lexington and Concord were not so bad as this. The issue that brought us into conflict with one another sixty years ago was not so bad as this.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S RECORD IS HIGH
No Part of British Empire Has Greater Cause for Pride to-day

Not "popular" Do you suppose that five million fathers like myself would permit our boys to be taken away from us, hustled into barges and then planned straight in the way of bullets and bombs and killing machines if we didn't think it was their duty to go and to urge them to go? Do you suppose that we five millions would permit a handful of men down in Washington to impose upon us billions of taxes for us to pay next year if we didn't think that they ought to do it and that we ought to pay? If the war was unpopular, do you suppose that we would leave the manifestation of that fact to a rabble on a street corner in Butte or on Broadway?

The Everlasting Menace Up to now nothing has been allowed to go very far in this country unless it accorded with the will of the people, and the reason that we are at war with Germany is because we intend to keep things that way. The reason we are standing these our young men is because, after our patience against provocation unexampled in history, after hopes created in one day only to be dashed the next and deeds we couldn't believe until proofs that we could no longer doubt, we have at last become convinced that the end sent against France and Flanders and Russians means not to their conquest only but ours also—means that if that end is successful in Europe it is an everlasting menace to national organization and individual liberty everywhere on this earth.

What is the use of trying to keep up a home and to conduct a business, a farm, a profession, to earn a living that will content your wife and educate your children. If you have got to spend half of what you labor earns and what is watching for the interruption of your life, creating military equipment and performing military service in order to be ready to beat some ravenous beast that is watching for the right time to spring at you? The German people must now get the sense of this, at whatever cost to them or to us. They are responsible. They don't have to have the Hohenzollerns and the German military autocracy unless they want them, nor unless they mean what their godless rulers mean.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Only One Question I don't care what anybody said a year ago about England. I might then have agreed with a whole lot of them have agreed with a whole lot of them, even if it had started with William the conqueror and had never stopped until the day when Germany invaded Belgium. I don't care what

SOME SNAPPY ON GIANTS
Some Character "Mugs" McC... Bring Home to Charlie the Machine

SLIM SALLEE—Sallee, Cardinal pulled a Rubie Bent order to get his world's series. He went home to Ohio and told Huggins baseball would just struggle unless a deal was made that would send him some else. He finally brought Huggins to his way and was transferred to the Giants. He was recognized one of the game's most brilliant even while the Cardinals were doing around in low position when he became a member of Giants his effectiveness was in evidence considerably. He forced one in the triumvirate of Southpaws has virtually won the McGraw mantle.

CHARLES TRESHAU—Charles wears a Jeff when called pitching mound, is the only one now with the Giants who was when they won their last pennant in 1915. He has been with the team a year and years, but doesn't seem to be a huge exponent of the ball method of fooling batters hasn't been overly successful this year. It isn't likely he will start in a world's series game.

WALTER HOLKE—John Graw took a long chance a year and made good on it. He and Fred Merkle from his payroll put Walter Holke in his place. Holke has developed into an excellent fielder first baseman and a cumulative record of 1917 covers off baseballs at opportune moments. He is considered one of the best young first basemen in the league. His average in 1917 is better than other batters, but he played short time that Hal Chase finally credited with the lead.

CHARLEY HERZOG—Here the real life and fire of the High strung, temperamental possessed of untiring energy. Herzog is the only second baseman in the National League who rightfully compared with Ed Collins. Herzog was star of the team on the Giant team that near winning a world's pennant in 1912. He played in 1913 and the Giants manager in 1915 to an offer by Garry Herrmann, manager of the Reds. He also has with Boston, Herzog was as a manager. Herzog's manager showed Cincinnati baseball fans they hadn't been for many years. His retreat back to New York was glittering in 1916. He was in charge of New York field with such success that the Giants record last fall in consecutive series. Herzog's manager is one of the sensational and kind. His hitting while not former marks, has been excellent. The pinches Herzog is another of his records. He is the most important of Giant defence. His injury last year was more unfortunate than any other. With him out of the line the Giants would present a spectacle against the marvel of the White Sox defence.

ARTHUR FLETCHER—Another of the McGraw veterans has done today's work. He has done today's work. He has done today's work. He has done today's work. He has done today's work.

SOME SNAPPY SIDE LIGHTS ON GIANTS IN BIG SERIES

Some Characteristics of the Men "Mugsy" McGraw Depends Upon to Bring Home the World's Series Bacon—Charlie Herzog is Real Life of the Machine

SLIM SALLIE—Sallee, former Cardinal pulled a Rube Benton in order to get his world's series pie. He went home to Ohio and told Miller Huggins baseball would just have to struggle unless a deal was arranged that would send him somewhere else. He finally brought Huggins to see it his way and was transferred to the Giants. He was recognized as one of the game's most brilliant stars even while the Cardinals were bounding around in low positions, and when he became a member of the Giants his effectiveness was increased considerably. He forms one angle in the triumvirate of Southpaws that has virtually won the McGraw pennant.

CHARLES TRESBEAT—Charles, who wears a Jeff when called to the pitching mound, is the only pitcher now with the Giants who was there when they won their last pennant in 1915. He has been with the Giants four years and years, but doesn't look like he is a huge exponent of the spit-ball method of fooling batters, but hasn't been overly successful at it this year. It isn't likely he will get a start in a world's series game.

WALTER HOLKE—John McGraw took a long chance a year ago and made good on it. He dropped Fred Merkle from his payroll and put Walter Holke in his place. Holke has developed into an excellent fielding first baseman and has accumulated the knack of knocking covers off baseballs at opportune moments. He is considered one of the best young first basemen in captivity. His average in 1916 topped all other batters, but he played such a short time that Hal Chase was officially credited with the leadership.

Charlie Herzog—Here centres the real life and fire of the Giants High strung, temperamental, and possessed of untiring energy, Charlie Herzog is the only second baseman in the National League who can be rightfully compared with Eddie Collins. Herzog was a star third baseman on the Giant team that came so near winning a world's pennant in 1912. He played in 1914 and was with the Giants until he decided to accept an offer by Harry Egan to manage the Reds. He also has played with Boston, Herzog was a failure as a manager, but as a shortstop he showed Cincinnati baseball fans that they hadn't seen, for many, many years. His retreat back to New York was glittering for he was placed in charge of New York field operations with such success that the Giants set a record last fall in consecutive victories. Herzog is a marvelous fielder one of the sensational and steady kind. His hitting while not up to former marks, has been excellent in the pinches this year. His baserunning is another of his long suits. He is the most important cog in the Giant defence. His injury last spring may be more unfortunate than was at first thought, for it is a noticeable fact that Herzog's holding efforts are attended at moments by pain. He collapsed recently in Brooklyn and for a time it was feared he would have to quit baseball for the season. Recently, however, he has been resting and will be expected back in line shape. With him out of the infield, the Giants would present a sorry spectacle against the marvelous combination of the White Sox inner defence.

Arthur Fletcher—Fletcher is another of the McGraw veterans who has done himself well. He has saved just a few of the oldest veterans now doing duty in the big leagues, in point of service. For years he had been stationed at the clean-up position for the Giants in the batting order, and only relinquished it when Heine Zimmerman was acquired from Chicago. He now maintains a niche only one peg below that place. Fletcher is an ideal workman alongside Herzog. Each is unreservedly sharp with his tongue, and each is a lightning fast fielder. Double-play relays come natural to this pair. Fletcher covers a lot of territory in the short field, and is steady enough to balance Heine Zimmerman's erratic tendencies. Heine Zimmerman—Here stands the most temperamental man in baseball, a successor to Rube Waddell and Bugs Raymond though lacking in the irregular habits that made unfortunate the careers of those two stars. Zimmerman spent most of his baseball life in Chicago, where he is in disfavor with the general run of fans. It was a daily habit for a long time for him to get into altercations with the umpires. Fines were frequent and suspensions only a part of the season's work. John McGraw has taught Heine to curb a fiery temper, and the big New Yorker is playing the best ball of his career, and hitting many points above recent marks turned in at Chicago. McGraw is as well fortified at third base as any manager in the National League—most critics think he is better off.

Hans Lobert—Honus, old, but still speedy and carrying a heavy mail, may see service in the world's series. He came to the Giants in a trade, that carried pennant-winning material to Philadelphia—and has been practically worthless as a regular ever since. Punch-hitting and coaching is the main duty of one-time star, but he is perfectly capable of giving a good account of himself at times. Injury to Herzog probably would mean a shift of Zimmerman to second base, with Lobert at third.

Jimmy Smith—This youth is a product of the Federal League, where he did his first professional shortstop. Against this we have the tutelage of Joe Tinker in Chicago. He did utility duty here until the Reds blew and he was picked off by Pittsburgh. An excellent fielder, many a manager has tried to develop him into a hitter but without noticeable result. He has spent a term in the International League, and is having another try at first company as a utility man.

George Burns—The Giant left fielder is a sort of a non-communicative gus. He's the sort of a player who makes his presence felt rather than heard. He's the most efficient patrolman left fielding baseball in the National League. Burns has been many times when his quick brain made opposing players the victim of some startling play. George heaves the ball with his right hand, and is an extremely dangerous in the pinches. He is an excellent base runner and has a powerful true arm.

Benney Knott—Benney's press agents had it all fixed for him to make a holy show of the rest of the National League when he graduated from the Reds to the Giant. He did not do it, but he's improving mighty fast and bids fair to some day gain fame that will name him the best outfielder in the National League. It is doubtful if there is a man in baseball who hits baseballs with more force than the squatty Giant centre fielder and it is doubtful if there is a man in the game who drives more of his efforts straight into the hands of some waiting fielder. Despite this he has attained a .300 average and has held it there most of the season. Knott is an erratic fielder prone to take long chances, but recovers many of them through his speed and a strong arm. He is very dangerous with men on bases.

Dave Robertson—McGraw calls Robertson the best outfielder in the National League, but as a matter of fact Dave isn't in the same class with Knott, Burns and Knott. He has lots of slugging power and plenty of speed but is inclined to take things too easy. Robertson is a clean, steady, factor, and has the art of taking drives off the right field wall at the Polo Grounds down to a science. Robertson is a long hitter, but sends most of his drives to right field, where they generally are easy prey for camped outfielders.

100,000 MACKEREL HOOKED IN ONE DAY AT REDONDO BEACH, CALIFORNIA.
A few of the 10,000 anglers who, in one day, hooked 100,000 mackerel at Redondo Beach, California. The day's fishing set a record for Pacific coast. From dawn to dusk and until far into the night the three piers at the beach were packed with fisher-folk drawn from Los Angeles and its suburbs by the report of the record run of mackerel. Some of them to insure securing a place to fish from at the pier came the night before with cots and sleeping bags and slept on the pier to make sure of a chance at the fish in the morning.

NEW GAME PLAYED IN THE GREAT WAR

Hunting for U Boats with Airplanes Birdmen Are Improving in This Science with Corresponding Effect in the Accomplished Results.

Advice is coming through slowly, it must be confessed, but surely, from that silent source of almost invincible power, the British Admiralty. Perhaps the silence of the senior service is sometimes a little too pronounced. It is felt that a few more facts might encourage the people without enlightening the enemy. Against this we have, to remember that the British Admiralty has centuries of experience in the great game of war. That in all that long experience, silence and implicit obedience to orders, the dependability of her men to do the right thing at the right moment, has been the greatest asset of the great assets of British seamanship.

Birds of the Air and Sharks of the Sea
We are all interested in the U-boat campaign, and any information revealed on this subject is eagerly read by millions of Britons the world over. The development of the aeroplane is co-incident with the development of the undersea boat. Both developments may mean much to civilization and courage of operators are turned to do works of goodness. In the meantime, looks as though, in warfare, the fate and usefulness of the undersea boat will be in the hands of the aeroplanes. In other words the usefulness of the submarine may be made altogether too expensive in fighting, when the enemy has the mastery of the air.

When Germany instituted her ruthless submarine warfare last February Britain's reply was the building of more cargo ships and pressing every available small vessel into patrol work, but in addition using aeroplanes for scouting and capturing hostile submarines, and conveying ships.

This was largely defensive work, but had men are not content to remain on the defensive, they get a chance of attacking in offensive work.

Aeroplane vs. U-Boat
The first submarine to be caught by the Allies' aero was the Austrian U-11. Here is the official story: "The U-boat was lying lazily on the surface and apparently failed to notice the aviator as he circled overhead. With a sudden swoop the aeroplane shot downward within 45 feet of the submarine's deck. Three bombs were dropped, all of which struck the submarine near the turret and exploded. "The sub sank almost immediately and did not reappear, wreckage was afterwards found near the scene. The U-11 was one of the newest Austrian submarines and displaced about 800 tons. She is supposed to have had aboard a crew of about 351 men."

How the Aviator Spies the Sub
The value of the aeroplane in fighting the subs is in the fact that the aviator is not troubled by the refraction of the rays of light, which interferes with the vision of a person aboard ship. Also, the aviator flying at a height of from 1,000 to 5,000 feet, has a range of vision of many miles, and the washed white of the dark surface of the water. Present day subs are also large and can be detected by the shadow they make in the water, and also by means of the many tracks at the stern clearly visible by contrast.

These facts can be verified by a simple experiment. Let any person stand on a steep rock over deep, clear water, and he will get a wide range of vision of the water, whereas if he descends to a boat his vision is confined to a small space. The fish discern the boat above and swim away as it approaches. Conceive the fish to be hostile, one can readily see how vulnerable is the boat to the fish. Let the fish represent the subs, the boat the freighter, and the man on the rock the aviator and one can readily see how much advantage the aviator has over both freighter and submarine.

How a Transport was Saved
The story of the aeroplane that saved a transport is told in very few words but what a picture it presents. A British transport laden with troops and ammunition was sighted in the Dardanelles by a German submarine. What a prize! The U-boat prepared to take aim with a torpedo. In the very act she was spied by aviators who at once gave the alarm and began dropping bombs. Though no hits were made, the submarine was forced to submerge. Destroyers arrived and transport, troops and ammunition were saved.

How Submarines are Bombed
Here is the story of the capture of submarines, both exciting and adventurous. It is told by one of the aviators, Lieut. Viney. He says: "It was noon on Sunday. We had left half an hour before on a French bi-plane to look for submarines which were reported nearby. We rose 10,000 feet and had been cruising about for some time when we saw two submarines five miles

SPORTING COMMENT

Ball players should give second thought before they turn on Phil Ball writes Sid Keener in the St. Louis Times. Few managers have been more liberal in his beginnings as a manager. Ball never quibbled with a player over salary, and in spite of the fact that he is "in" more than a half million dollars as a result of baseball ventures, pinching a dollar from an athlete has been the last thing in his mind.

Johnny Lavan was out for a long while with an illness not due to his work on the ball field, but his pay went on just the same. Carl Wellman was put out of business early in the season because of a serious surgical operation for a complaint that was not brought about by his work as a player.

When physicians reported it would be impossible for Wellman to play again this season, or perhaps ever Phil Ball called Business Manager Bobby Quinn into the office and said: "Jones tells me Wellman always was a conscientious worker. Fill out a check for his full salary for the season and I will sign it, so that he can go home if he wishes."

That's how Ball treats his ball players. He is a fan and like every other fan he wants to win, and if he thinks his players are not trying he is not the kind of a fellow to beat around the bush and say so, but the ball player will go a long way before he finds a club owner as loyal to him as Phil Ball. That's why the public is with Ball in his present argument with a couple of his athletes.

Some have said that Derrill Pratt and Johnny Lavan signed their own passports, giving them exit from the profession that at least gave them a financial start in life, writes Ed. Way in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Baseball has ever shunned the courts. It seems to tacitly put the "B" for Ban or blanket on all who resort to it. Heretofore no player land when a shell whistled across the Eastgate's bows. He had no wireless and decided to make his way to the port lifeboat. He was spotted about two miles off his starboard quarter and bore down on the steamship at full speed, firing as fast as she could.

"The shrapnel," says Capt. Ramsdale, "scathed our third engineer in the leg and rendered him unconscious. Another shell found our starboard lifeboat and blew it to atoms. Meanwhile I had ordered the crew to take to the port lifeboat. We were just rowing away when I heard the roar of an aeroplane and saw a fast French biplane approaching. "The aeroplane dropped down within 500 feet above the undersea craft. At the same time two destroyers, snubbed by the aviator, came from opposite directions at top speed. The submarine submerged with all possible speed. A few minutes later she was back to the Eastgate and headed for La Pallice. We arrived that night and quenched the flames by flooding the holds."

While it is difficult for the submarine to see the aircraft, it is hard to drop bombs with precision. But now air craft guns of 3-inch calibre are being turned out, which makes it possible for the pilots to hit his mark.

It will be seen by these few stories the possibilities of the aircraft in detecting and helping to destroy submarines. The use of the Allies are making of the useful aeroplane.

er has dared to bring action against a manager for derogatory statements made about him for fear of the dreaded bogey, the blacklist. This fear-inspiring bogey, past history seems to show, is just a mere myth. Instances in which baseball players have been forced out of the game by mutual major league agreement either never existed or are so far back in the dark ages of the game as to be forgotten.

Nevertheless, the latent power to force a "squeeze" when the need develops, is known to exist, and has destroyed many a headstrong player from rash steps.

Five or six years ago a suit such as Lavan and Pratt have inaugurated would undoubtedly have meant the shutting of these players out of the American league. "For the good of the game." They might even have been passed along into the minors although this is more doubtful.

Under present conditions, however, when the need of good players is so immediate, it is hardly probable that they will be released from the American league, but that these players can continue with the Browns next year is not belter by those who know the principals to both sides of the controversy.

The New York National League Club has apparently invited trouble for itself, by announcing that the world's series tickets will be placed on public sale and not reserved in the big city. Such a course, if allowed, would inevitably place a goodly portion of the much coveted, pasteboards in the hands of the scalpers, who would find agents plenty to do the purchasing to defeat the limit placed upon the number to be bought by each person applying, writes Bob Dunbar in the Boston Journal.

To do justice to everybody in the distribution of World's Series seats is a manifest impossibility, but the plan of reserving tickets for bona-fide patrons of the games during the season who apply by mail, as has been done for the past few seasons, has a great deal of merit and only minor faults. Theoretically it is the fairest method possible and though individual injustices have been done each season and will be done each season to come, in the practical working out of the plan, no better one has ever been suggested.

JIM THORPE
The big Indian had a lot of medals that he won by winning the world for the United States in the Olympic games. He's returned these and he's been kept mighty busy of late trying to learn baseball. He does a fine job of fielding and can run the bases with the best of them, but National League pitching is just naturally too heavy for this brave aborigine, who catches everything that is pitched to him in the big league. It is probable he won't be given a chance in the big series. Thorpe drives the ball with great power.

JOE WILCOX
The lanky pinch-hitter was a real cracker in minor league baseball when George Stallings snatched him from the American Association. He found his way to his National League pitching, although always a star in the minor leagues. This year, however, his services were not needed, as the Giants refused to waive, with the result that he's in line now for a cut on the world's series. He sports a .300 average, but is considered far from being a dangerous batsman. He has been used principally for pinch-hitting.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives once burdened with pain and suffering.

It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, obstructions, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

THE PRUSSIAN VIEW

Extracts From Diary of a German Officer Give Interesting Sidelights Upon Teuton Spirit in the War — Amazed at British Treatment of Prisoners.

I was recently enabled to see the diary of a German Officer taken prisoner by the British in one of the big offensives of the present war. In such a document one is naturally disposed to look for points that flatter one's own nationality. As a whole this diary did flatter the Briton, if chiefly by admissions in what will seem "matters of course" to all Englishmen. Nevertheless, from an honest enemy these admissions have their value. His mind was fixed on his own experiences and nothing that he dealt with was to him a matter of course.

The diary is interesting chiefly as a personal story. The author, a simple but not empty writer, and clearly a brave fellow, was in some of the thickest of the fighting on a certain spring morning when the British came down like a wolf on the German fold. At 10.30 on the previous evening the intelligence reached this officer that a relief was in prospect and that his battalion, then in support, would in the early hours of the morning take the place of a unit in the front line. It was a familiar part of the line, since the battalion in question had held it a fortnight previously. At this moment he describes "it seemed to me that I should never come back and that something great was impending." He adds that the relief was snared by others. The relief was ordered for 3.30 a. m., but the start was delayed owing to the fact that two men in his company were missing. It looked as if the two had preferred discretion to valor; at any rate they were not to be found, and the march forward began in command of the company, but he led the first platoon. The relief was completed at 4.30 a. m., to the evident delight of the troops who were thus removed from immediate danger.

A rough plan is given of the trenches held and of the approximate position of the British. This portion of the German line appears to have been strongly defended. The trenches were well sited and it was no doubt a point of importance to hold it to troops of high quality. Having made his dispositions, the officer turned in for the rest which he might need, as he had not slept during the previous 24 hours. He did not do this with a light heart. The English patrols were reported on his left and it was known that a great attack was impending and it might take place at any time. His sleep did not last for many minutes as a bombardment opened which assumed a great intensity. It seems probable that the German line to the right, and left, suffered more from the bombardment than this particular section. At any rate no mention is made of excessive losses, and the next entry of importance is this:—"Tommy attacked 9.70. Machine guns bring attack to a stand in front. Enemy remain in wire." After some praise of the conduct of his men, he continues:—"In spite of well directed fire we did not succeed in holding down the dense columns which continually broke forth anew. To the right, the line was overrun and the enemy established himself in our second line." He describes one corner of his position as "a real witch's cauldron." The British appear also to have broken through to the left, but the writer is naturally concerned almost exclusively with what was happening to his own company front.

This company must have defended itself stoutly. It is evident that it was almost isolated at an early stage in the attack, but there was apparently no thought of retreat or surrender. Very soon men were falling rapidly, and "the lightly wounded were hurrying back." At about 6.30 the Company Commander "had received so many wounds that he too had to go back." This left the author in the command of the company. He complains that their worst trouble was the shower of hand grenades from the shell craters in front, now occupied by the enemy. "As we could not throw so far with our hand grenades we were helpless against these." Then two tanks appeared, evidently called up to deal with this little nest of resistance. One was put out of action by a direct hit, but the other quickly reduced them to the situation in a trap. "We could not put our heads out of the trench since it took us as a target." The end is described with military "briefness." Shortly before 7.11 ordered a retirement. The second trench occupied by the enemy. We could only surrender.

Beyond question this little band had put up a gallant fight. As a prisoner he was first treated like other "it had not made it known that I was an officer." They were hurried back to the original British lines beyond the field of battle. On his way they assisted in carrying wounded. He is much impressed by the masses of British troops still surging forward far behind, at the very moment of the attack, and he is amazed at the number of ambulances. He continually refers to such points as the "proof of the overwhelming character of the attack," and "a later stage he joined other captured officers of his battalion. They reached a collecting station. The food was already many prisoners. The officers were kept apart in a separate enclosure an arrangement which he naturally approved. From the first they were well treated and well fed. "The treatment here and indeed later, was always good. The German officer was everywhere respected." The diary abounds with such statements. They were given a choice of the option of marching on to a point still further behind the lines, and he and others accepted it. Incidentally he had official proof of the number of British soldiers of artillery one would think that not a man could survive." He is impressed by the knowledge of them. At their next resting place they lay in huts and were apparently comfortable. "I had fourteen blankets, the food was good and sufficient." Hitherto he has scarcely mentioned his wounds except to say that they were twice dressed, but now he is "sent directly to hospital. Here, he says, "the treatment was excellent; we even got cigarettes and beer."

MOTORCYCLE AND SIDE-CAR DRIVEN ON COAL GAS IN ENG.

Photograph shows motor cycle and side car fitted up and driven on coal gas. This is the first time the coal gas idea has been applied to motorcycle and side car. The cost of running works out at a penny for ten miles. It has been driven over 100 miles and works very satisfactorily. The photographs illustrates how the outfit can be used as a commercial side car, parcels, etc., can be carried under the bag that carries the gas.

Music and Drama

THE GRAND

The second musical comedy of the 1917-18 theatrical season, "Flora Bella," was the attraction at the Grand Opera House last evening. The play was most successful in all its phases and well up to the standard of high class entertainment that has been established at this playhouse. Country residence in Russia, the Petrograd cabaret, "The Sign of the Golden Cal," were the locations of the different acts. The scenery was effective and well adapted to the production.

Catchy music, entrancing dancing, witty dialogue and good comedy were the attractive features of the play. The music, the choruses were unusually good, and was one of the outstanding good features of the comedy.

THE SKY PILOT

The Canadian premiere of "The Sky Pilot," a dramatization of Ralph Connor's two best known novels, "The Sky Pilot" and "Black Rock," occurred Monday in Toronto at the Royal Alexandra theatre, and resulted in one of the most brilliant dramatic events ever that the city has witnessed in several seasons. The large play house was packed to its utmost capacity, and the crowded would be spectators were turned away. The audience included leaders in social, political and religious circles. The Caledonian society was well represented, and many well-known men in uniform lent color to the occasion. There never was a moment's question of the play's success. It gripped the spectators from the very start, and at its conclusion the audience evinced its approval by six curtain calls. Throughout the development of the plot, the spectators were successively thrilled, awed and amazed. The play's success is due to the fact that the author's characters appeared, including the pilot, Owen Broncho Bill, Hi Kendall and Bruce, they were greeted as old friends. The artist who portrayed them scored individual successes. In the cast are several New York favorites, including Brandon Thomas, Reginald, Ernest Archer, and Louis Leonhart. An interesting feature of the event was the presence of Rev. R. M. Dickey, the original sky pilot of Ralph Connor's story. The play, which was well received and the advance sale of seats, it is believed, that an effort was made to extend the Toronto engagement of the play for another week. CANUCK FIGHTERS LOOK WITH FAVOR ON ENGLISH GIRLS

Many Ready to Marry Good Girls and Bring Them Home to Canada.

Will Wed English Girl or Not at All Whereby Canadians in Camp May Meet English Girls.

London, Sept. 26.—Some "flutterings" have been created in camps here by letters in the Daily Mail from the English girls confessing that they see no future, but dull spinsterhood because, though healthy and domesticated, they are war-torn and get no chance of meeting young men of their own standing.

The Daily Mail's "flutters" from the letter box, half of the camps in England contain lonely souls who wish to get to know these English girls.

Canadian soldiers, writing from a Sussex camp, say "there are hundreds of men in this camp who would be glad to marry good girls and take them back to their homes in Canada. Many of them are rich, most of them in comfortable circumstances, and owners of property. I am one of the latter who could offer a good home. All are more or less incapacitated, but I am not hurt badly."

A private in a Canadian convalescent camp says: "I should love to meet a nice English girl; you cannot beat them anywhere. I am English, Canadian born, now 31, I mean to marry an English girl or no." Urges Bridal Organizing.

One correspondent suggests a new organization, to be called "British Brides for Greater Britain," to encourage unions between suitable Englishwomen and men from the dominions.

He suggests that both home and Dominion Governments co-operate. The lady superintendent of the Y.M.C.A. huts says this is exactly what would appeal to many Canadian and other overseas men.

Meanwhile young women are showing unexpected efficiency on English land. Lord Prathero, British minister of agriculture says 200,000 English women were placed this year on English land, showing high efficiency in an entirely new sphere of work. "Farmers have learned to which they get their mind."

Canadian authorities here are keeping a watchful and sympathetic eye on these English land women, expecting many of them to go to Canada when men whom they now replace return from the front to the countryside.

It is suggested that Canadian home and other legislation should be adopted to attract them, either as spinners or wives of Canadian soldiers, or to occupy grouped settlements, worked on a communal plan.

CANADA WELL COVERED BY NEWSPAPERS

Despite War, Canada's Reading Public Well Served

Canada continues to be unusually well served by the press. This is brought out in the current issue of the Canadian Newspaper Directory, compiled by A. McKim Limited, Advertising Agency of Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and London, Eng.

There are 1384 publications of all kinds now being issued in Canada, including 133 dailies, 4 tri-weeklies, 40 semi-weeklies, 221 weeklies, 222 bi-monthlies, 1 bi-monthly, and 16 quarterlies.

Reflecting the general prosperity which has obtained in Canada since war began, the publishing business is in a healthy condition. Since A. McKim Limited issued its first Canadian newspaper directory twenty-six years ago, the firm has seen the birth of many of the publications listed in its directory, and is in a position to have accurate knowledge of the field. The present day condition of the Canadian press enables the Dominion to continue to boast the largest reading public in the world in proportion to population.

An usual, McKim's Newspaper Directory contains a wealth of general information regarding every town and city in Canada where a newspaper or other publication is issued, giving population, transportation, telegraph, telephone, express, banking facilities and other accommodations. It is a veritable mine of pertinent, up to date information for business men at a time when such facts as it contains are in great demand by farsighted industrial leaders. The book itself is well bound, durable, neat and fit for a place on any office desk or in any library.
