She Couldn't Go Her Corns Wouldn't Let Her.

She remembered the agonies of the last dance. She kept her at home to coddle her touchy corns. She simply couldn't face the pain again.

How easy it would have been, what instant relief, if she had only known of Blue-jay. Other millions of men and women have found relief this way. Blue-jay stops pain instantly. And the miserable corn is gone, roots and all, in 48 hours.

New shoes—smart styles—have no terrors to Blue-jay users. These soothing plasters, inset with a medicinal wax, have ended millions upon millions of corns.

Many tests conducted by experts show that the first application removes 91 per cent. Stubborn cases require a second or third treatment. Why wait longer? Why suffer?

CHAPTER II.

"There are plenty," she said. "You'd have no difficulty in marrying well, Byrnes."

"Thanks for this unsolicited testimonial to my charms. I think I'll go now; you couldn't say anything nicer if I stayed. Haven't you some kind of show on to-night?"

"Yes; the people will be here in a few minutes. I wanted you to come before they arrived. I didn't ask you to dinner because I knew Glassbury would ask questions; and you always hate them. I want you to stay, at any rate, for a little while, Byrnes. You go and smoke a cigarette while I get Louise to see to my hair."

"Very well," he assented. "But your hair's all right."

"I know," she said, as he opened the door for her; "but I also know you want that cigarette. 'Don't stay in the smoking-room all the time; you'll hear the music.'"

Heroncourt sauntered off to the smoking-room—he was like a son or brother of the house, and came and went as he pleased—and he got a cigarette from Glassbury's own box and threw himself on a lounge; but presently he arose as if his thoughts would not permit him to remain still, and paced up and down the long room asking himself why on earth he cared, and why he could not go on in this old way and leave Heroncourt and the title go to the deuce.

"Marry for money," the phrase stuck to his mind like a burr, and, like a burr, irritated him. The thing was common enough; yet, strangely enough, he hated the thought of it; strangely, because Heroncourt was not a susceptible man; and, though he had moved all his life in a circle of beautiful women, he had never been in love.

"Seal Brand" means a certain, definite blend of high-grade coffee—uniform in quality and always delicious.

Don't take any chances—always insist on having "SEAL BRAND" COFFEE.

In 1/2, 1 and 2 pound tins. Whole—ground—pulverized—also fine ground for Percolators. Never sold in bulk. 108 CHASE & SANBORN, MONTREAL turned from him; but as she took her seat at the piano, she looked round, her dreamy eyes sweeping the audience as if she were saying, "Will you listen to me!" and Heroncourt had a clear, full view of the face.

He did not say a word in agreement with Glassbury's exclamation; but he thought, at that moment, that it was the loveliest face he had ever seen. There was a murmur of curiosity, and a woman near them asked Lord Glassbury in a whisper:

"What does she do, sing—play?" Lord Glassbury shook his head. "Sorry," he said; "don't know. I she sat still and did nothing but let us just look at her it would be good enough."

"She is a raconteur," said a lady near them. "I heard her at Howarth House the other night. She is really wonderful—and so young, too! Do you ever see such a marvelously expressive face?"

She was hushed down, for Maida had touched the keys, a soft prelude was floating through the room; it was followed by a soft and as melodious an air; and then, suddenly, the clear mellow voice began to recite Owe Meredith's "Misery."

Of course, it is a wonderful poem it is difficult to read it without feeling unutterably wretched; but imagine it recited by such a girl a Maida Carrington, in such a voice as hers, with the subtle accompaniment waiving in harmony with her ever tone, now almost a whisper, now a deep contralto note, and now a ringing like the music of a tenor-bell and in every line and all the time thrilling with dramatic suggestion!

The silence was intense; men held their breath, women put up their fans to hide the tears in their eyes. When the voice and the music had ceased, the silence hung upon them for an instant or two, then the applause broke out like a thunder-crash. The whole audience was excited by admiration and enthusiasm; indeed only one person in the room remained calm, and that person, strange enough, was Maida.

She stood for a moment, her tapering fingers resting lightly on the keys, her small, exquisitely shaped head slightly bent in response to the continued applause. Her gaze was still dreamy, and a smile that shone in her eyes and curved her mobile lip was not in the very least like the smile of gratified vanity with which we are all so painfully familiar; it was just the smile of a child who is pleased because you are pleased with it.

At that moment she was thinking not of the brilliant crowd who were clamoring for an encore, but of Carrie: the piece had been a success, and Carrie would be so proud and delighted.

Lady Glassbury made her way to the piano. "It was beautiful—more than beautiful, Miss Carrington," she said. "You will not be surprised that I should want you to recite—sing—I do not know what to call it—again for us."

"I shall be very happy," said Maida. She sat down and struck a chord—a loud one this time, like a trumpet-call, and gave them one of Kipling's soldier ballads. Men grew hot, women beat time with their satin shoes, and looked at one another with sparkling eyes and parted lips; and when she had finished, the men, and some of the women also, called out, "Brava!" as they clapped. They wanted more, and Maida would have given it to them; but Lady Glassbury saw that the lovely face had grown pale, and, laying her hand upon the girl's arm, she said, very sweetly:

"No, no; you shall not do any more to-night—I will not let you. I can well imagine how trying it must be. I will find my husband, and he shall take you to get some wine."

But Maida shrank back, just the very least, and murmuring, "Thank you, I never take wine; I do not want anything; I will go now, if I may, please," made her way between the crowd, which was beginning to press upon her, to the anteroom, where she had left her out-of-door things.

She was trembling a little, but not excited—certainly not with vanity; for, like all true artists, she was remembering one or two shortcomings and one or two mistakes of inflection

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."

—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky. No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

and emphasis; and as usual they were haunting her. A maid helped her on with her things, gazing at her with open-mouthed admiration and something like awe, and followed, and watched her down the stairs as Maida went out of the house.

Heroncourt was the only man in the room who had not applauded. He had leant against the wall with folded arms and had remained almost motionless during the whole of the performance. It had seemed to him that loud applause, even applause of any kind, would be so inadequate as to be almost an insult. One does not slap one's hands before a Cimabue or shout "Brava!" before an Italian lake; and to him the girl and her achievement seemed the perfection of nature and art. He knew that the unvarnished notes of her extraordinary voice would haunt him for days; he didn't want them crushed out and drowned by the roar of the long-haired basso profundo whose huge form was now approaching the piano; he therefore availed himself of an opportunity of getting through the crowd and went slowly down the stairs into the hall.

His crush hat and light overcoat were brought by a footman, and Heroncourt sauntered through the open door and down the steps. On the pavement he stopped to get out his cigarette-case, and while lighting his cigarette he saw Maida standing a few yards off, evidently trying to find a cab.

There was a long line of carriages, and there was the usual small street crowd waiting to see the guests come out. Heroncourt would have liked to have called a cab for her; but she hesitated; he felt, somehow, that she would not like him to intrude upon her; but it occurred to him that he might get a cab for her without her knowing it, and he was looking up and down the street in search of one when he saw one of the loafers move away from the crowd and edge up to the girl.

Heroncourt vaguely suspected mischief—the man had the slinking, hang-dog air of the professional pick-pocket—and Heroncourt strode after him. The man snatched at a plain, simple, gold bracelet which gleamed on Maida's wrist; Heroncourt saw her start and heard her utter a sudden, sharp cry as of pain; and—well, it must be frankly admitted that he lost his head: the girl's cry went through him.

His blow—a terrible one—fell on the man's evil mouth, and the wretch went down as if he had been struck by lightning. (To be Continued.)

Never put pans and kettles half-filled with water on the stove to soak. It only hardens whatever may have adhered to them, and makes them more difficult to clean. Keep them full of cold water and soak them away from heat.

I got hit in our big April the 14th, when so many boys paid the supreme sacrifice. Casualty list is very heavy. We went over the top we were strong, and according to what I heard, only sixty answered the call next day. We advanced our own barrage fire. It was silent. I got to the enemy line and we were digging in on a kind of a ridge when I was hit. It was a machine bullet. It is only a flesh wound. I will be all right in a week. The German machine gun is hellish. It mowed down our numbers. Before we got to the front line men fell around me where and still I didn't get man two yards on my right we ed and the corporal two yards left was killed, still I was not this time. Send me the casualty when you get it. I would like how many are killed. The G are as cowardly as rats. Tell on you when advancing, but you get near them they run. I laid three of them low before I was killed. I was very lucky. I am sorry for poor Bill. He was killed a few yards me. How are the boys, Bill and all hands? Remember

AT THE HOUSE.

Yesterday afternoon's sitting of the House of Assembly was featured by the first reading of the hardy annual and much agitated question—the Daylight Saving Bill. After the Minister of Finance tabled the Public Accounts for 1915-16 and Bills respecting Death Duties, Discipline on Ships controlled by the Admiralty, Returns of losses by Fire Insurance Companies and Contracts with the Riverside, and Newfoundland Knitting Mills were introduced and read at first time, the debate on the motion for an Address in Reply was continued. The Rt. Hon. the Prime Minister concluded his remarks on the work of the Imperial Conference, presided over by Mr. Long, the British Colonial Secretary, on the main matters discussed, the general feeling being that closer relationship by the colonies in all the policies of the Empire was imperative, especially as to its foreign relations. The matter of the graves of heroes who had died on foreign soil was also talked of at the Conference; France has donated burial grounds to Britain and it is hoped sincerely that arrangements will be eventually finalized with other European countries in order that the bodies of British soldiers will rest in British soil. The graves will be attended to and looked after by a Commission of which the Prince of Wales is chairman. Another vital question discussed was the Empire's mineral resources and their future development and possibilities, the British Government having due regard for the Bell Island mines. Other matters spoken of by the Premier were India's position in the Empire; the bringing home of our troops immediately after the cessation of hostilities; the appointment of a permanent Trade Commissioner for Newfoundland; emigration and the salt question.

Mr. Coaker followed and in wrathful terms criticized the Government from all standpoints. He said that a better explanation should have been given for the delay in calling the House together besides the fact that the Premier was wintering in England; he advocated that there was need for a general election and that it was an attempt was made to extend the life of Parliament, the Opposition would hamper the Government; and delay the House till September next; that the people were being badly fleeced by the Water Street business people while the Government kept their eyes closed; that dealers in salt were making 100 per cent. more profit than they ever made before, and that four importers in the country cleaned up over $3,000,000 within the past two years; that the Opposition were not unapologetic and disloyal because they refused to amalgamate with the Government, as he explained the Opposition suggested a coalition two years ago but the idea was repudiated by the Government. The high freight rates charged by the Reids were also denounced as well as the unconstitutionality of Mr. Frank Morris occupying a seat in the Assembly Chamber as one of the representatives for Placentia and St. Mary's and drawing $2,100 for the past two years for the permanent duties of District Judge in addition to his private practice.

The Committee to draft an Address in Reply was then appointed, after which the Daylight Saving Bill, fathered by Hon. John Anderson, which went through its various stages in the Upper Chamber without opposition or comment, received the hearty concurrence of the House amid spontaneous applause. The Bill will be read a second time to-day.

Our Soldier Lads.

The following letter is sent to us by Rev. Fr. O'Brien, P.P., and is from his nephew Michael. It describes vividly what our men had to face at Monchy, and the spirit it displays is admirable. The writer is only 18 years of age.

3rd London General, Wandsworth.

Dear Mother—I write you these few lines hoping you are well. I suppose you have seen by the papers that I have been wounded. Well, yes I have. I got hit in our big push of April the 14th, when so many of our boys paid the supreme sacrifice. The casualty list is very heavy. When we went over the top we were 875 strong, and according to what I have heard, only sixty answered the roll call next day. We advanced under our own barrage fire. It was magnificent. I got to the enemy's first line and we were digging a trench on a kind of a ridge when I got it in the left arm. It was a machine gun bullet. It is only a flesh wound and will be all right in a week or two. The German machine gun fire was hellish. It mowed down our men in numbers. Before we got to Fritz's front line men fell around me everywhere and still I didn't get it. The man two yards on my right was killed and the corporal two yards on my left was killed, still I was not to go this time. Send me the casualty list when you get it. I would like to see how many are killed. The Germans are as cowardly as rats. They fire on you when advancing, but when you get near them they run. Well, I laid three of them low before I got it. Civic Board Meets.

Mayor Gosling presided at last night's meeting of the City Council, all the Councillors with the exception of Mr. Mullaly being present.

The Colonial Secretary acknowledged the receipt of a letter relating to certain changes in taxes, and informed the Council that the matter would be placed in the hands of those who were dealing with the charter.

Tenders for pipe were received but owing to the price being four times as great as in 1914, they could not be accepted.

J. P. Powell, Supt. R. N. Co., wrote re street lighting and said the matter would be attended to.

J. P. Kieley, manager of the Nickel Theatre, asked the Council to reconsider its decision to tax children's tickets and pointed out the difficulty that would follow in checking up, etc. Councillor Brownrigg moved and Councillor Vinnicombe seconded a motion to the effect that the matter be deferred till next night of meeting. It was ordered that the lights be turned on in Victoria Park.

The Solicitor in reporting the claim against the Reid Nfd. Co. for $22, said the company had applied for and was granted leave by the Supreme Court for a Commission to take evidence in Montreal. The company took this step to ascertain their liability or otherwise in the matter.

The Mayor referred to the condition of the tracks of the company and their failure to make repairs.

The Solicitor reported that the Council could remove the old shed on Newman's premises; the Engineer was instructed to take immediate steps to that end.

A day will be named to test all the water service pipes in the city.

W. P. Shortall and the Royal Stores were given the contracts for uniforms for certain officials.

Owing to the high freight rates hay will be purchased from our local farmers in July instead of importing it in the fall as has been the custom.

A certain number of houses on Goodview Street, unfit for habitation, will be torn down.

At the request of Councillor Vinnicombe, the fish market at Gill's Cove will be supplied with water, and the condition of the old stables formerly owned by the Reid Co. on King's Road will be attended to.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, May 17th, 1917.
PRINCE A KEEN SAILOR.
 Prince Albert, who joins the Malay this week, is passionately fond of the sea, and, indeed, of everything that appertains to the Senior Service. A keener sailor it would be hard to find, and it is said of him that his greatest ambition is to witness and take his part in the next great naval engagement. One thing is certain, and that is that the Prince is never happier than when he is on board a battleship. He fulfills the ordinary routine and gives the utmost satisfaction to his senior officers, showing a real aptitude for his work, and a desire to learn all he can of its requirements.

"A 4" MEN.
 Certain battalions that exist for the sole purpose of supplying drafts for the front by the "intensive training" system, now in operation have recently been somewhat embarrassed by a reversal of the ordinary order of things—the arrival of men from the trenches. These soldiers are perfectly fit, and have no need for further training, but they are not yet 19 years old. They got to France by adding a few months or years to their ages, and now, having been found out, they are to be kept at home until they reach the stipulated age. These lads are classified as A4 men, and several have been wounded and a few have gained decorations.

THE ENGLISH MAGAZINE.
 It is good to know that the "Cornhill" magazine is to be continued under the arrangement by which John Murray takes over the business of Smith, Elder and Co. The "Cornhill" and "Blackwood" are, I think, the only two survivors of the dozen fine magazines of the eighties that have maintained their old literary existence. "Macmillan's," "Longman's," and the "English Illustrated Magazines" have all gone, and the others have suffered a change by which their distinctive English character has disappeared, and in most cases their titles are merged into the new sort of popular production, which resembles a cinema entertainment rather than a literary magazine. The "Pall Mall Magazine" began with the brave effort to produce what was best in English illustration and fiction, but it has now passed into another form of journalism. With the disappearance of the more responsible English magazine came the supremacy of the excellent American magazines, "Harper's," "Scribner's," and the "Century," addressed to the educated public. The import of American magazines is now almost stopped, and the "Cornhill" has an opportunity to enlarge its public, and with enterprise it ought to give us again an English general magazine of wide appeal that will be second to none of the Americans.

the grain reserve of India, he raised his voice against a course which he urged was wholly inadvisable in view of the fickleness of India's harvest and her extreme liability to panic through seditious propaganda. At his inspiration a memorial panel was set outside of the office of his paper to commemorate Rudyard Kipling's staff-work on it in the early eighties. It is characteristic of the Indian Civil Service that it held this tablet up for a couple of years until it decided under which head the trifling cost should come. Mr. Wilkins suggested the gift of war aeroplanes, which the Indian princes have now contributed so generously. His death will be sincerely mourned on both sides of Indian politics.

Little Boy Had Eczema

On Face and Hands—Local Doctors Treated Him in Vain—How Cure Was Finally Effected.

Trenton, Ont., June 1st.—This letter will interest all mothers of young children, because it tells of the best medicines obtainable of overcoming the annoying and torturing skin troubles which come to so many children. Mrs. Waldron had several doctors treating her boy for eczema, but all in vain. Finally she heard about Dr. Chase's Ointment and her letter tells of the wonderful results obtained by the use of this soothing, healing ointment.
 Mrs. Samuel Waldron, George street, Trenton, Ont., writes: "About four years ago, my little boy had a rash on his face and hands which the doctor called Eczema. He gave us a wash for it, and some ointment, which we used, but without benefit. I think we tried all the doctors here. Finally we tried Dr. Chase's Ointment, and gave it a good trial. We could see that it was gradually healing. At first it appeared to burn the skin, then this skin would peel up, finally he got rid of it entirely. During the winters of the next two years we noticed a symptom of the disease under the skin. Each time we used more Dr. Chase's Ointment, curing it both times. For the last two years he has not had any return symptoms at all, so we think that he is now entirely cured."

Italy's Offensive Really Important.

(From the New York Herald.)
 Italy, following the tactics of her heavier Allies, has struck hard once more at the psychological moment. Without hurry or fanfare, but patiently waiting until all was in readiness, the Italian armies have resumed their drive on Trieste in deadly earnest, and already have captured the important town of Duino, which is only twelve miles from Austria's great Adriatic seaport. The Austrian War Office—the last, with the exception of the Turkish, ever to admit a repulse—has officially stated that the gains of the Italians on the Isonzo are important, which leads to the conclusion that the drive at Trieste is making even more progress than Rome's most official statements indicate. The capture of Duino is a deadly blow to Austria and means much to Italy in prestige and morale.

Household Notes.

Eggs that are saved for setting should be turned every day to prevent them from settling on one side.
 A method of cleaning brass, so that it retains its brightness for several days, is to use a paste made of powdered rotten-stone moistened with turpentine.
 Spinach should be put into sufficient water to float it. The sand will settle to the bottom and the spinach can be lifted from the water. This should be repeated until there is no sand in the bottom of the vessel.
 Egg shells should be dried in the oven until they crumble into small pieces with ease before feeding them

STEAM HEAT.
 Steam heat is a modern luxury with meter attachment. It is one of the few approved methods of heating which can be turned off for two weeks without causing the meter to miss a stroke.

Some people manufacture their own steam heat by investing heavily in a boiler, which is inserted in the basement by members of the Plumbers' Union who are subject to a fine for over-exertion. The boiler then is attached to nine dizzy-headed radiators with an impediment in their speech. It is a gruesome thing to be awakened in the middle of the night by a radiator which is trying to swallow a mouthful of live steam, and making a noise like the muffer cut-out on a motor truck.

Every once in a while something will happen to the Central Heating Plant.

In the larger cities flat dwellings and business houses are provided with district steam heat, which is run partly by pressure and partly by providence. Whenever the pressure goes down below a certain notch, everything becomes dead and inactive except the meter. The meter is run by condensation, and when the pressure gets low it has all it can do to keep its feet and transact business. The pressure in a district plant is always highest after everybody has gone to bed and is parting for air, but by six o'clock in the morning it has moved out of the building entirely and seldom returns until the gas log has saved several precious lives. Every once in a while something will happen to the central heating plant, and shut off the steam for a couple of days, but people who did not sell their stoves when they moved find this an inconvenience whatever.

Steam heat is a priceless blessing when it is working freely, but it is hard to beat the old-fashioned coal stove with the ironing board window, which could be fed with soft coal with the bare hands, and always came back for more inside of fifteen minutes. This is the kind of heat that our ancestors were reared by, together with the open fireplace, one of the noblest devices for scorching the humaniceps ever invented. Our forefathers did not have to rely upon steam heat to dress in the morning. All they needed was a broom with which to brush the snow off the bedspread, and enough light to locate their clothes by, after which they could go down stairs and thaw out by sitting on the cook stove. This teaches us that luxury is largely a state of the mind, as well as a state of the pocketbook.

to the chickens. If this is followed, chickens will not get the egg-eating habit.

If a loaf of bread is mouldy on the outside, it is not always necessary to throw it away; wash the loaf off thoroughly and heat it in the oven.

People who know the convenience of collars and cuffs fastened to the dress with snap fasteners instead of basting thread will never return to the old way.

Keep moths out of the house by carefully airing and sunning all woolen garments and having them clean before they are put away.

When hanging out clothes, try pushing the clothes-pin basket ahead of you on the clothes-line. A wire hook attached to the basket is hooked over the line.

AUSTRIANS AND ITALIANS IN HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING.

in the use of bread-stuffs, Germany couldn't starve England even if her submarines triumphed over the Allies' fleets.

VETERANS TO BE CONSULTED.

OTTAWA, May 31. Dominion officers of the Executive Committee of the Great War Veterans' Association of Canada are being called to the capital on June 5th next for a conference with the Federal Government on all matters affecting returned soldiers. This Association, which was organized at a Convention of delegates from the numerous local bodies throughout the Dominion, and held in the city of Winnipeg in April last, now has a membership of 1,000, and is rapidly increasing. The Executive comprises men from all the provinces.

EMPEROR CHARLES' SPEECH.

AMSTERDAM, May 31. In the Speech from the Throne at the opening of the Reichstag at Vienna to-day, Emperor Charles said in part: Summoned in a fateful time to direct the State, I from the beginning have been conscious of the immense seriousness of the task Providence has laid on my shoulders. I feel within me will power and loyalty to discharge my duties as a ruler, following the example of my illustrious predecessor, to do justice with God's help, to my sublime office. The interests of the State shall no longer be deprived of that effective furtherance of the popular assembly which rightly comprehending its powers, judicious and conscientious, can provide. I have summoned you to exercise your constitutional authority, and I heartily welcome you to-day on the inauguration of your work. In full consciousness of the constitutional duties taken over from my predecessor, and from my own deepest conviction, I desire solemnly to declare to you my unalterable will to exercise my right as a ruler at all times in a truly constitutional spirit, and to respect inviolably your liberties according to fundamental law, and to preserve, unbridled, for the people that share the formation of the States that which the prevailing constitution provides for. I trust that the recognition of your serious responsibility for the formation of political conditions, your belief of a happy future empire, splendidly strengthened by this terrible war, will give you strength in union with me to speedily create conditions giving scope to free national and cultural developments for equally privileged peoples. From these considerations I decided to postpone taking the constitutional oath until the time, which I hope is not far distant, when the foundation of a new, strong and happy Austria which will again, for generations to come, be firmly consolidated internally and externally. We are still amidst the mightiest war of all times. Let me from your midst with thankful heart offer my Imperial greetings to all heroes who for nearly three years on our far-flung fronts have joyfully discharged their heavy duty, on whose iron resistance between the Alps and the Adriatic every renewed desperate attack even now is breaking to pieces. Our group of powers did not seek a sanguinary trial of strength in this world war. Aye, more than that it is from the moment when thanks to the imperishable achievements of the Allied armies and fleets, the honor and existence of our States no longer appear seriously threatened, that opened, and without ambiguity we made known our readiness for peace, guided by the firm conviction that the true formula of peace can only be found in the mutual recognition of positions which have been gloriously defended. The future life of peoples should in our view remain free from animosity and thirst for revenge for generations. There should be no need to employ what may be called the last resource of the State, but this high aim of humanity can only be attainable by such a conclusion of the war as will correspond with that peace formula.

OTTAWA, May 31. Customs revenue for May amounted to $17,144,368, the largest monthly return in the history of the country. The revenue increased by $4,089,987 over the corresponding month last year. QUET ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

From the Staff Correspondent of the Associated Press, with the British Armies in France, May 31.—While comparative quiet continues to reign along most of the Western front, the war is far from standing still. The great fighting machine behind the fighting forces continue to move with never-resting energy. Artillery duels break out day by day and night along the various sections of the battle line. There passes now unnoticed an expenditure of shells which only two years ago would have been regarded as little short of marvellous. But the game of modern warfare is ever a progressive one, and a miracle to-day becomes commonplace to-morrow. The infantry activity lately has been confined wholly to raids and minor attacks. These are conducted mainly for the purpose of keeping in touch with the enemy's movements and intentions. Both the British and Germans have adopted these tactics and are filled with trench marauding expeditions. The Germans appear daily to grow more nervous and worried by the present lull. They are watching the British with cat-like alertness.

The slightest alarm during the night sets their guns going, and many defensive barrage curtains have been projected uselessly in front of British positions. Some of their aeroplanes also are taking desperate chances in flying low over the line, endeavoring to keep in touch with any important movement. The German Government continues to fill the air with a wireless propaganda against the British, virtually ignoring all the other allies including the United States.

CANADA'S REVENUE.

OTTAWA, May 31. Customs revenue for May amounted to $17,144,368, the largest monthly return in the history of the country. The revenue increased by $4,089,987 over the corresponding month last year. ADDRESSES U. S. SENATE.

WASHINGTON, May 31. Prince Udine, head of the Italian Mission, delivered to the Senate Chamber to-day a message from King Victor Emanuel to the American people. Resplendently garbed in uniforms of gold and blue, with green shoulder sashes, the mission was enthusiastically received. Union and effort of purpose by Italy and the United States was emphasized by the Prince, who entered into the war with aims equal to those which you pursue. Her territory had not been invaded, her insecure boundaries had not been violated, our people understood the sacrifice of free nations was to preclude their own sacrifice and that we couldn't remain indifferent without denying the very reasons of our existence. Italy wants safety of her boundaries and her seas, and she wants to secure herself against new aggressions. Italy wants to deliver from a long standing martyrdom a population of the Italian race and language who have been persecuted implacably, and who are nevertheless prouder than ever of their nationality, but Italy has not been, and will never be an element of discord in Europe and as she will her own free national existence at a cost of any sacrifice, so she will contribute with all her strength to a free existence and development of other nations.

NEW YORK, May 31. The Stock Exchange will be closed on Tuesday next, Registration Day, it was announced to-day by the Board of Governors. The Cotton Exchange also voted to close Tuesday, as did the New York Produce and New York Coffee Exchanges.

CURTAILING RAILROAD TRAFFIC.

COPENHAGEN, May 31. A Berlin despatch says passenger traffic in Germany, will be restricted in a most drastic manner in the near future. Railroads will be limited to one fast train daily in each direction. The military authorities have been empowered to confiscate the rolling stock of all private railways. The measures are due to a shortage of rolling stock and the impossibility of keeping in repair or replacing the equipment of the State railroads.

PLOT UNEARTHED.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 31. A gigantic propaganda plot with national headquarters in this city, organized to induce young men of military age all over the States to refrain from registering for Conscription, has been uncovered by the State and Federal Secret Service agents, according to an announcement made to-night by Governor Cox. The details of the plot which is said to have extended into many States, became known when United States Marshals raided a print-shop office in South High Street where practically all the propaganda literature was printed and distributed. It is stated the plot appeared to be well financed and well organized.

GROCERY STORE SATURDAY NIGHT.

THE SOMME VICTORY, Monday, June 4th.

Under the distinguished patronage and presence of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson, who had a private view in advance of the war film. His Excellency said these pictures give a vivid idea of what war is, and the life that our men at the front lead. It is a splendid opportunity for all here in St. John's to view the moving scenes of troops actually in the war zone.

COMING—Corporal Jagers, of the 60th Rifles, who lost a leg in the Ypres Battle. Wounded hero in vaudeville.

Saturday Night at Rossley's.

As Saturday night at Rossley's will be set aside and called Grocery Store Night, nothing else but groceries will be given out. This is done in the American and Canadian theatres and it makes a good night's fun. People like to see the fun, and as a great many people do not require what is given out they are at liberty to give them to someone who does. Last night, despite the bad weather, great crowds turned out to the Country Store. On Saturday night there will be several bags of flour, tea, bacon, butter, onions, potatoes, pork, fish, fruit, biscuits and candy. Heaps of good things, a big show and good pictures. That's going some, and on Monday the great War Picture direct from the firing line 'The Somme Victory', under the distinguished patronage and presence of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson who have already had a private view of this great picture and want to see it again.

European Politics.

The temporary lull on the battlefields has not affected the continuous shifting of the political kaleidoscope. Following the significant developments in Austria, including the deposition of Tisza, the Austrian Reichstag has assembled at Vienna for the first time, if we mistake not, since the beginning of the war. The Emperor's speech betrays little of the real causes that have brought this about, and is of a tenor that was only to be expected. Germany having voted the new Russia in vain, Austria pays court with honeyed words, behind which we are able to believe there is more real sincerity. The cautious professions of a friendly spirit towards all the world (the hostile one having failed of its object) will not deceive the world any more than those that have preceded them from Germany. "Our group of powers did not seek a sanguinary trial of strength in this world war," says the Emperor. Of course it did not. There was to be no trial at all, and the blood was all to flow from the unprepared and vainly resisting enemy. Now that the Parliament has met we may look for further light in Austrian internal affairs. The Emperor's dislike of Prussia is known and Prussia's greatest instrument at his court has been removed. Hollweg and Count Czernin, Austrian Ambassador, very nearly succeeded in reaching an agreement as to war aims which, working through Russia's hesitation, would have been a serious peril to the Allies; fortunately the Kaiser and his militarists, blind instruments of destiny, put an effective ban upon it. The new overtures to Russia will fail. Then may come from Austria news of a different sort.

The British Government takes a bold and diplomatic step in sending men like Jowett and Ramsay MacDonald to Russia. Certainly the democratic and socialist elements in that country cannot complain that Britain has sent them representatives not in sympathy with their principles. Nothing could be better calculated to change their misdirected aims. If there has been, or is, anything aggressive in Britain's policy, anything aiming at unjustified "annexations" or penalties, it is not the man to keep silence about it. British labour and British socialism see their goal in victory; they may open their eyes to their Russian confederates to see that theirs lies in the same direction.

Apparently our legislators in the Lower House have a delicate sense of humour. Perhaps it was the relief to highly strung nerves from the tension of their own tremendous deliberations which made the reception of the Daylight Saving Bill so mirth provoking. Notwithstanding this Olympian laughter, however, we venture to predict from Mr. Anderson's measure more practical benefit than will be contained in the majority of the enactments which will this session find their way into the statute-book and which it would be unbecoming to discuss with any but the most serious countenances.

An Attractive Window.

Among the many well decorated store windows to be seen on Water Street to-day that of the new Premium Department of the Imperial Tobacco Co. stands out prominently as one of the best, if not the very best window display of its kind ever seen in the island.

The first impression this window gives is that of absolute restfulness to the eye, so beautiful is the color scheme that it forms a symphony in green and gold. The display, which is designed to introduce a new Cigarette—the "Gem Magnums"—is very simple, with the simplicity of perfect taste. The raised central stand is occupied by a stork—fit sponsor for the new brand—carrying in its bill a box of "Gem Magnums" swung by gold ribbon, while the stand itself is strewn with the rich golden tobacco from which the cigarettes are made.

On each side of this stand are pedestals of classic design, their flat tops laden with tobacco on which stand tiny chickens holding the new cigarettes. The floor of the window, and its paneled side show the new box well featured, and a lovely touch of color is given to the display by the use of two quaint bronze vases containing purple lilies, the latter adding a distinct charm to as perfect a window display as we have ever seen.

Closing Exercises at Mt. Allison.

"NEWFOUNDLAND'S YEAR"—HON. J. A. ROBINSON'S ADDRESS.

Editor Evening Telegram:
 Dear Mr. Editor,—It may interest your readers to know that some sixteen Newfoundlanders were in attendance at Mt. Allison University and associated schools during the past year. Three of the Universities in the Maritime Provinces, Mt. Allison, at Sackville, N.B.; King's College, at Windsor, N.S.; and St. Francis Xavier, at Antigonish, N.S., have made arrangements with the Colleges in this city by which our students who pursue certain courses may enter on the second year at these Universities.

The closing exercises at Mt. Allison began on Friday evening, May 18th with what is known as a "Grand Reception." This is usually held in the Ladies' College but owing to the serious illness of a student it was held this year in the Owdart Building in which is housed the finest art collection east of Montreal.

On Saturday evening the School of Oratory staged the Greek drama Pygmalion and Galatea by W. S. Gilbert. This was followed by a Musical Pastoral: "The Echoing Green" by Professor F. C. Robinson of the Conservatory of Music. A fine orchestra gave added pleasure to what was a very splendid performance and gave a fine exhibit of the class of work done in this department.

On Sunday morning a Memorial Service was held in the church for the "Mt. Allison boys" who had fallen at the front, some 27 in all. Among the names of the fallen heroes were those of two Newfoundlanders—Gordon Boone and Don Trappnell. One of the speakers at the service was an old Mt. Allisonian—L. McLeod just back from the front. It was very touching and impressive service. Mt. Allison, in proportion to the number of her alumni, has sent more men to the front than any other University in Canada.

Sunday evening the Baccalaureate Sermon was preached in Convocation Hall by Rev. E. J. Robertson of Nova Scotia. Before the service the students and professors with the visiting graduates formed in procession and dressed in cap and gown and appropriate hoods marched to the Hall. It was a procession such as can only be seen in a University Town. The Mt. Allison orchestra and choir rendered splendid music and led the singing of the congregation which was magnificent.

The next morning on the lawn of the Ladies' College the young ladies gave a splendid demonstration of gymnasium work. The day was cold and damp weather hundreds of spectators crowded the beautiful campus overlooking the lawn, while the heavy stream of automobiles and motor cars and carriages filled with people who had come into the town to witness the sports. The demonstration closed with the Mt. Allison march which ended by the young ladies so grouping themselves that they formed as they stood in the letters, M.-A. and sang a Mt. Allison song.

In the afternoon came the closing exercises of the Boys' Academy, followed by the evening by that of the Ladies' College. Both were a great treat to lovers of music and song and especially the evening gathering. Some 15 young ladies graduated in different departments among whom was Miss Mary F. Harris, of Grand Bank, in the Department of Household Science.

The University convocation was held in the Charles Fawcett Memorial Hall Tuesday evening, and was a splendid gathering. Some remarks after it was over that this was Newfoundland's year at Mt. Allison. Beside a number of prizes won by clever students, no less than four persons hailing from the Ancient Colony were granted degrees: Misses Laura Darby and Elsie Tait of this city graduated in Arts and Music, respectively; Rev. T. B. Darby received the degree of M.A. in course, and Hon. J. Alex. Robinson received the degree of LL.D. honoris causa. It is worthy of note in this connection that Miss Tait was the first young lady to finish the difficult course of Bachelor of Music at Mt. Allison; and the first who has won the degree.

The feeling for Newfoundlanders, however, was the address of the Hon. J. Alex. Robinson. It was a splendid effort, worthy of the man and the occasion. The following bare outline is all that I can give:

The War is revolutionizing human vision.
 It is giving us a new idea of Empire.
 It has given a new meaning to Britain. It is no longer "one with Britain," because all are Britons, whether living in the Old Home Lands, in the Dominions, the Protectorates or the Islands of the Seas.
 It is giving a wider view of life. There can be no reversion to the years of selfishness. Life now is Service.
 It has drawn away the veil, and given to the sorrowing and broken-hearted a new conception of death. Death unlovely in itself is but the door that leads from the lesser to the greater phase of life.
 "Virtue treads paths that end not in the grave and to the saner mind. We rather seem the dead, who stay behind."

Dr. Robinson was followed by Dr. Chown, General Superintendent of the Methodist Church, who was on his way to the Old Country on an important mission.

Of the Freshman Class, who had entered four years before, only eleven were graduating. More than fifty of them had donned the King's uniform and were at the front or sleeping their last sleep in the bloody salient of Ypres or the shell-torn sides of Vimy Ridge. It was a thrilling moment when the valedictorian of the class turned to address her classmates and made eloquent touching reference to their absence and their valor. It was noticeable that every male student of the military age in the gathering was either in khaki or wearing the honorable badge which declared his unfitness for the strife.

Before your correspondent left Sackville next day the halls and campus were almost deserted and silent and the students had scattered to their homes. Two of our boys in khaki were Edgar Duff, son of Mr. Robert Duff of Carbonear, and Mr. Garnet Smith of Cupids, whose brother Don is among the missing of April 14, and another brother, Lance-Corpl. Hunter, is at Ayr. They have a brief holiday to visit their friends and then return to their regiment at St. John, N.B.

Yours truly,
 MT. ALLISON.

Baseball Game To-Morrow Afternoon.

U.S. vs. Nfld.—Proceeds for Red Cross
 The Baseball League has received a challenge from the Navy ship now in port to play a game to-morrow afternoon at St. George's Field, and have decided to accept it. The visitors will be managed by Lieut. McQuirk, while Capt. Hartnett of the Wanderers has undertaken to look after the fate of the local aspirants to the International championship. The Navy team will practice to-night at Stancombe's, and we are requested to ask that all city league baseballers attend there as well for their tryout. The lineup of both lines will appear in to-morrow's papers. The game should be a decided attraction, as this will be the first opportunity local fans have had of comparing the brand of baseball as served in Newfoundland to that of our newest ally. All the proceeds will be devoted to the Red Cross fund. We understand that the visitors have the crack baseball team of the North American squadron, so that a brilliant exhibition should be witnessed.

REPAIRING CITY WATER SERVICE.—Under the supervision of the City Engineer's Department a staff of men have been at work nightly testing the water mains for leaks in the East End and with great success. It is estimated that the repairs to damaged pipes will save the city close on 500,000 gallons of water per day. A similar test is now going on in the West End.

The Anti-Conscription Demonstration.

That there should be public demonstrations against conscription may be regarded as unfortunate, with Berlin listening and hoping; but that they should be accompanied with disorder is far more than unfortunate—it is criminal. This is a matter for the police. We can debate the policy of this country to our heart's content. It is a land of free speech and free thinking. But it is also a land of law and order. And the law must be sustained and order maintained at all costs. We may or may not have conscription, but we cannot tolerate rowdysim.

It is a time for men of cool heads to give the nation the full benefit of their excellent quality. There is nothing to be gained by passion on either side. What we want is more soldiers to fight the Germans. That is absolutely all. We will not get them, however, if we must stir up trouble in Canada of sufficient gravity to consume any large part of our energies at home. Complication is still the first patriotic duty.

General Smuts made an appeal the other day in London for race unity, both in his own country and in Canada. This was really a remarkable event. A decade and a half ago General Smuts was fighting in the field for race antagonism in his own country. He has seen the mistake of his policy—a policy he was so short a time ago ready to die for. No country can stand divided. Abraham Lincoln saw this and fought a great war for union. If Canada is to live, we must have union. Nothing is surer. The present is a time when the seeds of discord or the cement of unity will grow under our hands with phenomenal speed. Let us be very, careful what we do. Let us appeal to reason and not to passion. Let us suppress the firebrands of both races, and turn to the sober common sense of every section of our people.—Montreal Daily Star.

Our Baseball Column. PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

Archie Syme is the first to offer in response to an appeal in yesterday's column to "fill the gaps" in the Baseball ranks. He will wear a Wanderers' uniform.

Manager Hiltz claims to have picked a winner in McQuade, of the Royal Bank, who will go on the mound this year for the Red Lions. Mac is a southpaw, and though extremely reticent as to his accomplishments, is said to have the whole 57 varieties.

A contributor, signing himself "E. I. S. Player" sends us the following in praise of their manager, Mr. Dick McGrath. With such an esprit de corps existing, the Irishmen should make a bid for the Pennant this year:—

ONE MORE YEAR.
 "One more year" the veteran said,
 "One more year, or maybe two—
 Then I reckon I'll be through,
 With my last engagement played.

I can feel it coming quick,
 So can Mac; but you know Dick—
 Bound to give you every shade,
 Even when your string is played;
 Always grinning when your pace
 Shows you don't half earn your place,
 Always stirring up your grit,
 Sayin' "Are you goin' to QUIT?"
 Always praisin' up your past,
 When he knows y'r slippin' fast,
 But I know I'm almost through,
 And I know that he knows too!
 Sure, he'd carry along
 When he knows that dope is wrong,
 When he knows that youth will tell—
 No one knows it half so well,
 There he comes! He's grinnin', too—
 Kind a put new heart in you!
 This old arm, it ain't in trim,
 But I'd break it off for him!

"One more year," the veteran sighed,
 "Not much steam in this old limb,
 But I'd break it off for him—
 Yes, and feel plumb satisfied."

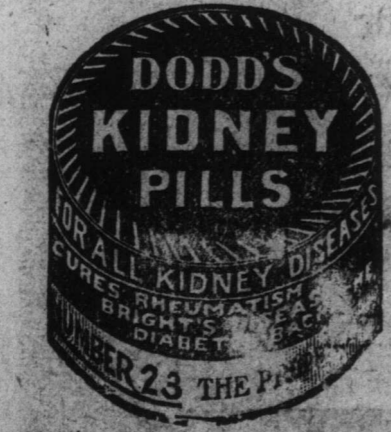

One of the basest hits in town these days is Erv Clouston—the plucky little backstop of the Cubs.

THE ROOTER'S RECREATION.
 If I liked walking mile on mile
 This golf would be about my style.
 If I disliked my eyes and nose
 I'd box and take a lot of blows.
 If in the surf I liked to soak
 I'd learn the crawl and trudgcon stroke.
 If I were old and liked to doze
 I might try chess or dominoes.
 But I can't see these sports at all;
 I'm waiting for the spel "PLAY BALL!"
 And I'll be there, Bo, if I crawl.

WELCOMED YESTERDAY.

There was a large and representative gathering of citizens at the Railway Station yesterday afternoon to extend a hearty welcome to the following returned heroes:

Capt. (Rev.) Clayton, Sergt. Winslow, L.-Corp. Northcott, Ptes. H. Read, J. Malloway, Noseworthy, Moore, Greening, Dyke, Noseworthy of the Newfoundland Regiment and Lieut. Stan Dunder of the Royal Naval Reserve.

The men were greeted by the Premier and members of the Ladies' Reception Committee and on being lined up in front of the station were addressed by Sir Edward Morris, who thanked them for the valuable services they had rendered the Empire.

Capt. Clayton on behalf of himself and returned soldiers thanked the Premier and the Ladies' Reception Committee for their kindness in extending so hearty a welcome which he and his associates greatly appreciated.

Cheers were given for the returned soldiers, the Premier and the Reception Committee, after which the heroes were driven to their homes.

Dear Sir, - I have been informed that a suspicion exists that I was the author of a communication in your paper of a short while ago criticising the officers of the Regiment. As I have never corresponded with or for the press since donning my uniform in 1914, I would request you to put this matter right and oblige.

Yours very truly,

THE KING REVIEWS MEDICOS.

Historic Ceremony on Terrace of Buckingham Palace—Engineers to Study Trench and Railway Problems.

London, May 24.—The engineers from the United States army who have arrived in England were entertained at luncheon today by the Earl of Derby, secretary for war. Additional officers and hospital units have arrived and more than 1,000 persons belonging to the American army are now in Great Britain.

Several events of joint interest to Americans and Britishers occurred to-day. One was the arrival in London of the first detachment of the United States army engineers, under command of Major William Barclay Parsons, builder of the New York Subway. Another was the arrival of two more United States hospital units, one of them reaching London this morning, together with sixty college volunteers for Y.M.C.A. work. A third striking event of the day was a review of the first American hospital unit of twenty-six surgeons and sixty nurses, which reached here about a week ago, by King George, Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, on the terrace of Buckingham Palace.

This was the first ceremony of the kind to take place in Buckingham Palace, and also was the first occasion which newspapermen were especially asked to attend.

When the royal party, accompanied by Ambassador and Mrs. Page, came out on the terrace, where the surgeons in khaki and the nurses in white uniforms with blue caps, headed by Major Harry Chilchrist, commanding the unit, were drawn up in line, the King's first words were addressed to the civilians gathered beside them.

King Speaks of American Chivalry. "Put on your hats," he said. "It's too hot out there in the sun." Then, walking forward and looking keenly at the rim line before him, he received and returned a salute and then spoke quietly.

"It is with the utmost pleasure and satisfaction that the crown and I welcome you here to-day," he said.

"We greet you as the first detachment of the American army which has landed on our shores since your great republic resolved to join in the world struggle for the ideals of civilization.

"We deeply appreciate this prompt and generous response to our needs. It is characteristic of the humanity and chivalry which have ever been evinced by the American nation; that the first assistance rendered the Allies is in connection with the profession of healing and the work of mercy."

Then the king and queen walked down the line, shaking hands and speaking cordially to each of the surgeons, the Prince of Wales and Princess following their example. After this the nurses filed by the royal party, the king and queen shaking hands with each of them also.

The king wore the undress uniform of a field marshal, while the Prince of Wales was in the khaki garb of a staff captain. The queen was in gray and the princess in white.

Harvard Surgeons Arrive Safely.

Major Robert P. Patterson, as head of another medical unit which reached London to-day, asked the Globe correspondent to announce the safe arrival of his unit, 250 strong.

"We have a very fine contingent, which includes three Harvard professors of great distinction," he said. "We were not attacked by submarines. I believe the American hospital in France will do magnificent work."

Western Fishery.

The Board of Trade have received the following messages:—

From T. Soper, (Channel to Port au Basques).—The catch to date is 9,100 qtls. of codfish and 36,500 lbs. of halibut with 50 quintals and 3,000 pounds for the last week. Ten dories and skiffs and one boat are fishing. Prospects are not very good at present, but there is enough of herring for bait. Lobsters are scarce. The weather has not improved, strong S. E. and E. winds with fog and rain prevailing.

From R. Furneaux, (Rose Blanche to Hr. LeCoe).—Prospects are poor and only a little herring is obtainable for bait. Fourteen dories and skiffs are fishing. The lobster fishery is very poor to date. Nearly all the boats have gone fishing on the Cape Breton grounds and none have returned yet. The weather was stormy during the week, hindering operations. The total catch is 1,360 qtls. with 30 or last week.

Eye Glasses for Divers

Why cannot the human eye focus sharply under water even when protected from it? Briefly, because the water makes the eye long sighted. The human eye operates like a camera lens receiving the light rays from the image and making them come together or converge in such a way that half an inch or less will be sufficient to reproduce a twenty-foot object.

This convergence of light rays or waves is due to refraction. It happens that the "refractive index" of the front of the eye is practically the same as that of salt water. This means that the curvature of the front of the eye is lost under water, and the rays of light instead of being deflected by that curvature, as in the air, enter straight. Thus deprived of one of the lenses, the eye is of long focus and the objects instead of being reproduced in sharp focus on the retina, or back of the eye, go well beyond it and produce only an indistinct impression.

A pair of under-sea glasses invented by Dr. Dudgeon, an English physicist, were designed to overcome this difficulty by means of an "air lens." This air lens consists of two surfaces of ordinary glass enclosing air and forming certain curves. In air it has no effect at all, neither magnifying nor reducing an object; but in the water it acts as a converger, and shortens the focus of the lens of the eye.

And the Worst is Yet to Come--

Who Made the Flag?

(From "Girard's Topics of the Town," in Philadelphia Public Ledger.)
A flag was raised over the Jamestown worsted mills. From the towers of the mill itself I learn:
The flag was made of wool from American sheep—
Sorted by an American,
Carded by an Italian,
Spun by a Swede,
Warped by a German,
Dressed by an Englishman,
Drawn in by a Scotchman,
Woven by a Belgian,
Supervised by a Belgian,
Inspected by an American,
Scoured by an Albanian,
Dyed by a Turk,
Examined by an Irishman,
Pressed by a Pole.

Where else could this be true except in the "land of the free and home of the brave?"

Your Boys and Girls.

The first band to be put on the baby in the summer should contain some wool and the shirt should certainly be of a medium weight. The child should be kept as cool as possible, although you should keep the band containing some wool over the abdomen during even the extreme weather. It is wise to sponge the entire surface of the body several times a day during the extreme weather. Nowadays the fond mother begins from almost the day of her baby's birth to keep a card book for its future inspection. This needs must be a large volume for into it go all of the correspondence cards, congratulations to the parents, the birth announcements of contemporary infants, the visiting cards attached to flowers and gifts, and all holiday picture cards.

Fads and Fashions.

Nothing is better for summer wear than foulards, usually in quiet dark designs.
The black satin dress is relieved by a line of white satin outlining the V of the neck.
One-piece dresses always have a smart air, which is one of the reasons for their popularity.
There is no doubt about the popularity of the gingham dress for informal country wear.

Small women are wearing sport suits made of khaki and cut with a decidedly military air.
They are trimming children's dresses with a touch of wool fringe in a contrasting color.
Novelty millinery flowers are made of tiny sea shells; there are even garlands of them.

How to Be Happier.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

What a wonderful index of the state of one's mental and physical health the voice is!

I was talking over the telephone yesterday with a friend who has been much overworked the last few months.

Her voice has hitherto shown the drag, but last night it seemed to lift up instead of down.

"What's the good word?" I asked at once. "Are the hard times over?"

"Well not exactly," she said, "I'm still doing the work of three but I am feeling a bit happier."

"Why is it?"

"She was working as hard but was happier."

"Well, I thought up a little scheme to make things move more smoothly here (she is the head of a big office) and it's succeeding wonderfully. I've been working harder, if anything, but I've been so much more interested that I've felt better."

What a key sentence that last is!

And not only a key to her improved condition, but a key to unlock the prison of boredom and weariness and monotony of many a life, and to let the prisoner out into a world of vast possibilities! That is, if he will only take it and use it.

They are comparatively few of us who have not enough to do.

But there are millions of us who have not enough to do that interests us.

Never Mind If Your Life is Already Full.

But if our lives are already full of duties how can we find room for interesting things?

No one ever had a life more full of duties than the woman of whom I write. And she made those duties more interesting by trying to do them more efficiently.

What one of us couldn't do that?

A stenographer could try to raise her percentage of accuracy, or study out some way of eliminating waste motions, or try to learn more about the larger aspects of the business.

How a Mother Could Make Her Work More Interesting.

A mother could study her children, work out new ways to help them overcome their faults, think up new ways to develop them and make them happy.

An elevator man might try to see how smoothly he could run his car (there is a vast difference in technique) and try to acquire that modicum of extra courtesy in giving directions and answering questions that would raise him above his class.

There is not one of us however humble, however excited, who cannot make his work more interesting by doing it better.

Had a ship's anchor fall on my knee and leg, and knee swelled up and for six days I could not move it or get help. I then started to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and two bottles cured me.

Torpedoplanes.

A German seaplane off the Suffolk coast the other day introduced to us a method of naval warfare which is a pure novelty to the great majority of people in this country—namely, the attack with torpedoes from aircraft.

The Admiralty have since told us that this mode of attack was successfully employed by our own airmen in the Dardanelles nearly two years ago, but I believe I am right in saying that the whole idea originated with Rear-Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, of the United States Navy, who in 1912 patented a patent "covering both a method and an apparatus for delivering submarine torpedoes from an airship."

This new type of fighting craft, whose possibilities can as yet be only vaguely realised, will be known quite naturally as the torpedoplane. Generally speaking, the method of carrying and "firing" the torpedo is much the same as that which was used in the small and early types of torpedo-boats, and which was put to such effective use by the picket-boats of the Triumph and Majestic when they torpedoed and destroyed the stranded E 15 in the Dardanelles in April 1915 to prevent her from falling intact into the hands of the enemy. The torpedo is slung in an inverted cradle, where it is held by tongs, and at the requisite moment the tongs are opened and the weapon, its engines simultaneously set in motion, drops into the water and heads away for the target.

In the torpedoplane the dropping gear would be suspended between the floats. The lifting power of modern aircraft is such that it would be quite possible to carry two torpedoes, weighing up to 1,000 lbs. each, one on either side of the body. Aiming would be done in the same manner as with a fixed tube in a submarine—that is, the plane would have to be brought dead head-on to the target. A captain in the Italian Navy, experimenting with a torpedoplane a year or two back, is said to have made nine hits in ten attempts at a range of 3,000 yards.

Household Notes.

Operating between the lights—at dusk or early dawn—a flotilla of torpedoplanes would be an unpleasant adversary to meet at sea. Approaching at a great height, the aircraft would plane steeply down to reach the water at a distance of three to five thousand yards from their objective. High-angle fire would be ineffective against such tactics, and although a destroyer screen would be useful in assuming the aircraft to have to alight on the water, which does not necessarily follow, the destroyers' inferiority in speed would be a great factor in favour of the attack. In any case, the loss of thirty torpedoplanes would not equal, either in men, money, or time to build, the loss of a single destroyer. To be effective the defence would have to meet the attack in its own element—in other words, a fleet would need to be protected in the air by "torpedoplane-destroyers," as it is protected on the surface by torpedo-boat destroyers.

There are some who will see in the torpedoplane a possible means for effectively attacking fleets in harbours where they cannot otherwise be reached. Fleet bases nowadays are strongly boomed and netted and mined against submarines, and, generally speaking, are not susceptible to attack from the water, whether on the surface or below. No boom or net would keep out a torpedoplane. Given the necessary conditions, it could discharge its weapons within the defences; and if the torpedoes were so adjusted as to move in circles instead of in straight lines, the chance of doing considerable damage inside a harbour would be greatly increased.

A few weeks before the war Sir Percy Scott said: "With a flotilla of submarines commanded by dashing young officers, of whom we have plenty, I would undertake to get through any boom into any harbour and sink or materially damage all the ships in that harbour." That offer does not seem to have been taken advantage of, but it certainly suggests one of the most momentous possibilities of the torpedoplane.—Richard Thirkell in the Daily Mail.

Pigeons need salt. If you have a box of salt in a convenient place, notice how often they will come to it.

If a healthy child has a quart of milk a day, besides an egg, and butter on his bread, he probably gets enough fat.

A bicycle whistle laying near the door is a handy thing to use in calling the people at work some distance from the house.

The easiest method of breaking ice for the freezer is to put it into a bag and beat it with the flat side of a hatchet.

It should never be forgotten that fruit and vegetable salts are absolutely necessary to the human system.

If the loaf of bread is put on the table and sliced as it is needed, there will be no left-over pieces to become dry.

SPRING MUD.

Spring brings the wet and helpful rains, the cloudburst and the flood; and then the broad and fertile plains are plastered thick with mud.

We journey forth from our abodes, in wagon, boat or cart, and we get stuck in muddy roads, which break the human heart. We spend about ten million bucks, each year, to fix the pike, and in the springtime only ducks along the same can hike. The farmer stays away from town and doesn't blow his seeds, so we find commerce sagging down in all our western grades. The autos are no longer run, dead are their wonted fires; the worthy dealers take no mon for gasoline or tires. All trade in grim stagnation stands; 'tis this way everywhere; and merchant princes wring their hands, and rend their robes and swear. The roads are just long stretches of mud, a warning and a fright, and with the old accustomed thud the mules sink out of sight. We spend some forty million bones, each year, to fix the pike; go forth, I say, in thunder tones, and see what they are like. Go forth when tides are ebbing low, survey the dismal scene; and if you're wise, when forth you go, you'll use a submarine.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. TO-DAY'S Messages.

10.00 A. M. DELEGATES CAUSING MORE TROUBLE.

LONDON, To-Day. According to a Reuter despatch from Petrograd, dated Tuesday, the Bourse Gazette reports a grave clash between Admiral Kolchak, commander of the Black Sea fleet, and one of Russia's finest naval officers, and a group of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates at Sebastopol. The latter demanded the dismissal of the Commander of the Port, who was carrying out the Admiral's orders. With this Admiral Kolchak refused to comply, whereupon the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates arrested the Commander and resisted the Admiral's demand for his release. Admiral Kolchak then threatened to resign and the Government sent M. Terentelli, Minister of Post and Telegraphs, to Sebastopol, to investigate the matter.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT EXPLAINS POSITION.

LONDON, To-Day. In connection with the approaching visit of George M. Roberts, Lord Commissioner of the Treasury, James Ramsay MacDonald, Chairman of the Labor Party, and Frederick W. Jowett, President of the Independent Labor Party, to Russia, the following authorized statement has been issued: Since really desirous of meeting the views of the Russian Government that they should be enabled to learn at first hand the opinions of all sections of British thought, the Government is facilitating the journey to Russia of representatives of different political opinions. Among these are factions with a very small following, who latterly have not been over enthusiastic in the vigorous prosecution of the war. The British Government has nothing to hide. They entered the war in defence of the rights of small nations and democracies and of freedom and justice. A brutal war was forced upon the Allies, who were in a state of total unpreparedness. Now they are in a very different position. They cannot allow Germany to profit by the gains wrested from them unscrupulously and in defiance of all right. Desiring, therefore, a full investigation and having nothing to conceal, the Government will gladly allow all sections of the public to advance their views. This is being done, including Messrs. Roberts, MacDonald and Jowett, who will only further inform the Russian people how we were driven into a devastating war and will throw an additional light on Germany's manoeuvres in this juncture to distort the predatory objects she had in forcing the war on her peaceful neighbors. A newspaper on May 12th said the Independent Labor Party, which is the pacifist and socialist section of the Laborites, had appointed Messrs. MacDonald and Jowett, both Labor Members of Parliament, to go on the mission to Petrograd. The paper adds there was some doubt as to whether they would be able to obtain passports. Roberts is also a member of Parliament, being the whip for the Labor Party.

EDMONTON, To-Day. Formal nominations for 43 out of a total of 53 constituencies to be represented at the next Provincial Legislature were made throughout Alberta today. Up to the present time the headquarters of neither party have received word of any acclamations. Of 15 other seats there were eleven members returned by agreement of the Legislature by reason of their absence on Empire overseas service. Two representatives will be nominated and elected by soldiers. Deferred

WAR REVIEW.

LONDON, To-Day. A state of virtual inaction prevails on all the war fronts. In only one theatre has there been any fighting worthy of note. This was in the Champagne region in France, where the French, counter attacking heavily against positions northeast of Mont Haut, where on Wednesday night the Germans in a violent counter offensive captured trench elements, drove out the Tenthons on Thursday and established their former front in its entirety. To the west of the region lying between Soissons and Rheims there has been a continuation of spirited artillery duels in various sectors, notably Vauxaillon and Lafaux. South of Berry-au-Bac the Germans for the first time in several months carried out sapping operations. This netted them portions of trenches, which were blown up. Intense fighting along the southern portion of the Austro-Italian front has apparently entirely ceased for the moment. The Italians probably being engaged in the consolidation of the positions won and bringing up guns for further operations in their campaign against Trieste. Along the Isonzo line only artillery operations have been in progress owing to bad weather conditions. There has been a renewal of activity by the Italians in Albania and several villages on the southern part of this theatre have been taken and held successfully against the counter attacks of the Teutonic Allies. Eastward on the entire Macedonian front artillery duels are in progress. An indication of the heavy fighting during the month of April is given in the official British casualties during this period, showing 112,238 of King George's men killed, wounded or made prisoners. Included in the aggregate are 5,902 officers.

MORE TORNADOES.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., To-Day. Reports received by the Globe Democrat to-night from a correspondent at Marble Hill were that at least 25 were killed and more than 100 injured at Zalma, Bollinger County, by a tornado that struck there on Wednesday.

STRIKE FOR DOUBLE WAGES.

PETROGRAD, To-Day. Three thousand tailors and drapers' assistants in Petrograd have gone on strike for a one hundred per cent. increase in wages.

OIL WORKERS STRIKE.

TIFLIS, via London, To-Day. A Baku despatch reports alarming conditions in the oil districts. The workmen there, the despatch says, gone on strike and arbitration councils have failed to reach a settlement with them.

EMPEROR CHARLES' SPEECH (Continued).

AMSTERDAM, To-Day. The great neighboring power to the east, to whom old friendship united us, is gradually becoming conscious of its true aims and tasks. It lately appears to approach this standpoint and seek from an obscure impulse a direction of policy which will save the treasures of the future before they have been devoured by the senseless war policy. We hope that in the interest of humanity this process of internal reformation will manifest itself externally in strong development, and that such enlightenment of the public mind will also extend to the other enemy countries. While our group of powers is fighting with irresistible force for honor and existence, it remains towards everybody who honestly abandons his intention to threaten ready prepared to cease hostilities. Whoever wishes to open a better and more human relation will certainly find our side ready in a conciliatory spirit. In the meantime, however, our fighting spirit will not relax; our sword will not become blunt. In true co-operation with our old ally, the German, and the Allies whom our just cause has won during the war, we shall remain ready to force, if necessary, by arms the good end which we would like to be able to attribute to the victory of reason.

ENLISTING BRITISH IN U. S. A.

NEW YORK, To-Day. A campaign to enlist some estimated 800,000 British subjects in this country was begun today, when officers from the British Recruiting Mission were engaged here. Actual recruiting will not be started, however, until Brigadier General White, head of the Mission, outlines its object in a statement which is expected on Monday. The Mission includes seven officers besides Gen. White. They have been here looking over the situation. Whether the Mission will establish recruiting stations in other cities of the United States will depend on the success achieved here. It is stated.

COALITION MAKING HEADWAY.

OTTAWA, To-Day. The departure for Halifax this afternoon of A. K. MacLean strengthens the belief in Parliamentary circles that Hon. G. H. Murray may enter the Coalition Government. MacLean left here without making a statement, but the impression here today is that his departure from the Capital presages his accession to the Premiership of Navo Scotia in Opposition to Murray, who will come to Ottawa.

Lieut. W. Grace

"As Good a Man as Any." By the last English mail Mr. J. T. Meany received a letter from his son, Pte. J. A. Meany, in which he said: "Sergeant Chancey told us of Willie Grace's encounter with the Germans shortly before the 14th of April drive, in which he was wounded and taken prisoner. Chancey said Grace was as good a man as any over there in the face of the enemy. On the occasion in question, Grace and his platoon held a part of a trench for two days and a night without anything to eat. During this time the Germans attacked them five times. They were cut off by German barrage from their supports and relief could not reach them till the barrage was lifted. But through it all they held their ground and inflicted punishment on the attackers each time, which broke their drives against them. Sometimes they had hard to hand work."

Body in State.

The corpse of the American naval man, Edward O. "Rich and Poor Alike"

(From the Boston Transcript.)
It is reported that Mr. Herbert C. Hoover's investigation into the food situation in the United States already has convinced him that the main problem to be solved in connection with food administration is not to overcome a food shortage, but to cope with the farmer's inclination to hoard his crops for higher war prices. If this is correct, Mr. Hoover may well argue that the Government can abandon all consideration of minimum price legislation. The point which thus emerges is at the heart of the present food problem. Indeed, it is folly to talk of minimum prices for wheat at a time when wheat stores are being held for the outlandish prices forecast by the imaginations of the growers of wheat. Government officers who are not greatly concerned with the immediate political effects of their public acts should have no difficulty in realizing this fact. The same men should be accessible to an appreciation of the probability that a maximum price on food articles may soon become an actual need. Public opinion will quickly return an indictment for anti-patriotism against grasping food hoarders, and Mr. Hoover's diagnosis of the situation needs only to be verified and disseminated in order to do away for the time with the talk of protecting the farmers against low prices. Patriotism demands that there should be the utmost of restraint and carefulness exercised by every section of our citizenship which has to do with the food supply. Not only should the farmer decide quickly to sell his product at the fair prices prevailing and thus to place them at the disposal of the nation in the war, but the well-to-do citizens should be equally responsive to the public needs. There should be no extraordinary accumulation of food stocks and fuel in the cellars of our Commonwealth. This admonition is based not so much upon thoughts of economy in the household as upon the well recognized fact that unnecessary purchases tend to force the price levels upward and thus to inflict hardships and privations upon men of low-earning capacity. Rich and poor must be subjected to the same treatment when it comes to food conservation. The wealthy men must not be permitted to lay up great stores of the necessities of life against the time when common stocks may be depleted. The successful farmer should be forced to content himself with a fair profit upon his seasonal labors. The slogan, "rich and poor alike," should be reiterated with the evolution of each national policy and it is to be hoped that the food control policy which the President is about to entrust to the administration of Mr. Hoover will be an embodiment of this ideal.

Tremendous Possibilities of "Little Things"

IN FEEDING THE PEOPLE.
The United States Secretary of Agriculture has just published an estimate of the food waste in the kitchens of the United States. Translated into terms of money, the department puts it at $700,000,000 annually, or about $7 per person. Conversely, a saving of $7 per head in food would mean a saving of seven hundred million dollars worth a year. A saving of $7 a year means less than 2 cents a day. In other words, if each person in the United States ate 2 cents-worth less of food a day, or wasted 2 cents less, the annual gain to the country would be seven hundred million dollars. Such is the power of little things if a lot of people do them. Another striking illustration of this was offered by a recent British official computation that if each person in the British Isles used one lump less of sugar per day, the saving a year would be £150,000,000 sterling, or about $750,000,000. In Canada we can accomplish vast results in the way of saving food and cheapening food if in every family a very small amount of care or self-denial is exercised. We all clamor at governments to "do something"; but it is safe to say that we could settle the trouble in a week if every family in Canada would suddenly start exercising moderate restriction in its meals, and rigid care with what is left over.—Ex.

Everyday Etiquette.

"What are just the times a young man is required to raise his hat to a woman?" asked Bob.
"When he acknowledges a woman's bow; when walking with a lady and either one meets a friend; when he passes a man friend accompanied by a woman; when offering his seat to a woman; when drawing to one side to allow a woman to pass; when giving information asked by a woman; when restoring anything she has dropped; and when a woman he is with receives a courtesy from another man," were his father's instructions.

A Wonderful Help in Keeping the Complexion Youthful and Clear.

Perhaps you wonder how so many women manage to have a complexion that is always fresh and clear, and how you can make your complexion better. Here's the secret:—

This is the Vanishing Cream that softens the skin and gives it that soft, velvety radiance that we all desire. Nyal's Face Cream is not oily or greasy, and it is readily absorbed by the skin, vanishing without leaving any tell tale gloss on skin. The skin welcomes this pleasant, soothing, cooling cream. It makes dry, tight skin soft and pliable. It makes rough skin firm and smooth, and gradually gives to coarse rough skin a finer, more delicate texture.
