For Daisie's Sake

CHAPTER XXVII. EXPIATION.

"Show the gentleman in, Patrick. I have time to see him," she exclaimed, leading the way to a reception room.

She saw that the caller was a very fine-looking man—young, tall, handsome, clean-shaven, and wearing protective glasses over penetrating dark eyes.

"I am Reed Raymond, madam, and I called in answer to your ad in the evening paper," he said, with a very courteous bow.

"It is fortunate you came at this time, for my husband feels very dull this evening," she answered, adding: "It is for him a companion is desired. He is a helpless cripple, who chafes always against his fate, and I must own that at times he is a most irritable person. But who could blame him—condemned to so sad an existence in the bloom of manhood! What he needs is a bright, cheerful young man, cultured, acquainted with the world."

"I can furnish unexceptionable references from Lord Werter, with whom I have traveled the past five months," the handsome applicant assured the lady.

"I think I will introduce you to my husband, as he, after all, will be the one to decide on your availability," said Daisie, rising and motioning the young man to come.

He bowed, and followed her into the hall, thinking to himself that she was certainly the rarest beauty that had ever dawned on his horizon.

"How cruel to lose such a woman! No wonder!" he was thinking, when his eyes were arrested by another vision of beauty, trailing down the grand staircase toward him—no less a person than Annette Janowitz, sparkling, radiant, in rose-pink satin and pearls.

"I am all ready, Daisie, dear!" she cried, in her musical young voice, and the listener reeled backward against the wall, with his hand upon his heart.

"Ah, what is the matter?" cried Daisie, in alarm.

Reed Raymond soon recovered himself, and answered, with a pallid smile: "I beg pardon—it is nothing, I am subject to slight spasms of the heart."

And he staggered on with her into the library, not daring to glance back at the radiant vision on the stairway, while he groaned to himself: "Who would have thought of meeting her here? Yet now I remember that Dallas Bain once told me she was Daisie Bell's dearest friend."

At that moment Mrs. Fleming entered, exclaiming: "Well, girls, are you all ready?"

"Come, Annette, let us follow, and see if he will suit Royall," cried the volatile little widow, snatching Annette's hand dragging her along.

"Mrs. Fleming, Miss Janowitz, Mr. Raymond," said Daisie, and they all bowed formally, the gentleman standing at the back of Royall's chair, superb in manly dignity.

"Stunning!" whispered the widow to Annette. But the young girl had grown suddenly very pale and still. She waited silently, her bosom heaving under its pearls, her eyes down-cast beneath their jetty fringes, until Mrs. Fleming uttered:

"Well, we must be going, girls. Take Royall; so glad you like my new Paris gown. You must try to exist without Daisie a few hours, will you?"

He threw her a bitter smile, and Daisie waited to clasp his cold hand and kiss his brow, heedless of the stranger's presence, ere she followed the others from the room.

Royall looked up at him, saying wittily: "Is it not enough to make a man curse God to be the husband of so rare a creature, yet a helpless cripple from his bridal hour?"

He saw the pale face of the stranger working with sympathy as he said hoarsely:

"Do not curse God, but rather the dastard whose hand sent the blow."

"Ah, you have heard?"

"Yes, it was in all the papers last year, you know. I have always felt the strangest sympathy for you, and if I can brighten one lonely hour, God knows I shall be glad."

"I thank you. But do not think I am neglected. My wife has been all devotion, only her health could not bear the strain. She had to have some recreation, hence my wish for a companion. In fact, all three who have just left me have been angelic in their ministrations. My cousin, Mrs. Fleming, is untiring in her kindness. As for dear friend, she is the kindest-hearted girl in the world. On the night I was lute nurse me. She was as kind as a sister. When the doctor said I would live, she wept for joy. A week later, when the first hope of recovery was wrecked by my sudden shock of paralysis, she was inconsolable. She cried out that it must not be so. God would not be so cruel; and in her excitability she almost went into hysterics. She remained for weeks, and when her mother insisted on her coming home, we all missed her like a dear little sister. But since then we have her often with us, and her sympathy is very sweet and dear. She has been with us now a month, and Daisie says she has become a great belle and has many lovers."

"Does she show any preference for any?" Reed Raymond asked, in a voice that was husky in spite of his efforts to make it careless.

"I do not know about that. But why are you standing all this while, my dear fellow? Sit down, and let us be sociable. Will you smoke?" ringing the bell. "Wine and cigars, Pierre," to the attendant. "And now, do you really think you want to be my companion?"

"I wish it, above all things, Mr. Sherwood. Stern necessity forces me to apply for this place, and if you accept my service I shall do my best to deserve your patronage, believe me."

The strong, eager voice impressed Royall very favorably, as Raymond hurried on:

"I have been a companion for Lord Werter several months, in fact, traveling in New York only a few days ago, and he permits me to refer you to him as to my reliability."

"I should fancy that your position with him is more tempting than this with me?" Royall asked tentatively.

"It was very pleasant. I am very fond of his lordship. But—I am weary of travel, and he is a nomad. I am an American, too, and prefer to settle down for a while in my native country." Reed Raymond rejoined eagerly, in his anxiety for favorable consideration.

In his keen remorse for the evil he had wrought in madness, in his longing to expiate it, in so far as he could, by devotion to his victim, Ray Dering had decided on this step, and nothing could turn him aside from what he believed his duty.

By such disguise as the change of his name by a slight transposition, the shaving off of his luxuriant dark hair, and the adoption of eyeglasses, he felt himself safe from recognition by former friends, and his winning manners at once secured him the boon he craved.

CHAPTER XXVII. TO REMEMBER A LITTLE WHILE.

Mrs. Hill-Dixon, the famous society leader of New York, was so proud of her titled cousin, Lord Werter, that she fastened him by metaphorical chains to her triumphal car, and dragged her cynical victim whithersoever she would.

It had been a little different in past days, when Dallas Bain paid several visits to America.

Then he was only the earl's younger son, destined for the army.

But when his elder and only brother was drowned in crossing the Channel last year, and Dallas Bain succeeded to the title of Lord Werter, and stood in direct succession to the earldom, oh, that was quite another thing—yes, indeed.

Dallas must be feted and lionized now, although he said frankly that it went against the grain with him.

He might have told her as frankly that his good looks had won enough adulation from women already, and that he did not care for the surfeit he would have now with his title and prospects added, but he did not wish to seem conceited. It was easier to give her her way for a few days, than to slip away when he grew too weary of the passing show.

But the second day after his arrival, when she was talking about the social queens, and mentioned Mrs. Royall Sherwood, he betrayed a sudden interest.

"The most beautiful and winning girl society has seen in years," she said. "But at first some would have liked to put her down, you know, because she was only a poor girl—a New York teacher—though she looks like she was born to a purple. But, of course, her marriage to a Sherwood changed all that. And, really, Lottie Fleming stood by her grandly, and I never liked the little widow, I own; but she has the true Sherwood grit, and never gives up what she sets her mind on. They say she helped Royall in his love affair, and he married the girl at her summer home down in Maryland last August. There was an awful tragedy about the case, you see, because Royall was shot in the grounds on his wedding night, by a jealous rival, it is supposed, though it never could be traced directly to him. Well, the young husband did not die; but he got better, for he has been paralyzed ever since, waist downward, and lives in a roller chair."

Dallas said huskily: "And the bride's devotion—did it outlive his affliction?"

"Why, they say that she is quite touching in her tenderness, and did not leave him at all for months until her health failed under the strain. So they made her go out with the widow, and she seems very gay, only there is something in her face at times—in repose, you know—that hints at secret grief. And, no wonder, with her husband struck down, almost the same as dead, on their bridal night, and she poor girl! wedded, but a maiden wife, watching his slow descent into the grave, with what torture who can tell!"

"But must he die? Can he never recover?"

"It is supposed not. Poor fellow, it is such a shame! He used to be one of the best dancers in New York."

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE PRINCE'S RETURN.

LONDON, Aug. 23rd, 1920.
It is now officially announced that in place of the Prince of Wales the Duke of Connaught will go to India, and not the Duke of York. There is much curiosity in Court quarters about the Prince's return and what he will do then. I am told that his letters show that his main interest will be to have a rest from public affairs for at least six months. He has now been serving the State in his own way since the second year of the war, and despite the rest with which he is taking his Dominion experiences, there is no doubt that he is rather worn out. It is not expected, in spite of the rumors, that he will take a new residence in the country. For one reason, these have been lean years with the Duchy of Cornwall, as a large part of the revenues have been put into the estate funds in London and Cornwall, and there is no large sum available, even though part of the Kennington estate is being sold. The Prince has expressed his intention to have a lot of hunting, and to make many visits to houses throughout the country, where he can hunt with different packs. He is the first member of the Royal Family for several generations who really cares about horses. King Edward, though fond of racing, did not care much for horsemanship, and King George much prefers shooting. Queen Mary has rarely if ever, ridden a horse since her girlhood.

REGIMENTAL COLORS.

In the old days before the war the wearing of regimental colors, ties and buttons was confined to the few officers who had served or were still serving in the units concerned. Now, if you chance to meet the business stream in the morning or evening you will observe that nearly 30 per cent. of the men are wearing some regimental combination of colors as a necktie. It seems also that the esprit de corps bred of five years' war has broken down all former traditions about the wearing of these colors. No longer is the right to sport the regimental colors confined to the officers of old. And the sacred red and blue of the Brigade of Guards is proudly worn by the rank and file who served with this historic formation. It is a very pleasant thing to see this almost instinctive yearning for old associations.

WOMEN POLICE.

Some surprise has been caused by the statement that women police have been sent to Ireland to undertake a duty new in that country. They are to act as searchers of women when the Royal Irish Constabulary, by whom they are temporarily employed, consider that necessary. The policewomen who have been appointed are not those working at Scotland Yard (the headquarters of the police force of this country in London), but members of the much older body, the women's police service who were engaged during the war in large numbers at munition factories, where one of their important tasks was to make sure that girls in the danger zone had no metal concealed in their clothes or hair. A hairpin was a great danger, and anything even so small as a hook had to be prohibited. The searchers learned to make skilful search with the least possible amount of unpleasantness. All the women police in this country, with the exception of those at Scotland Yard, are drawn from the women's police service which was founded by the late Miss Damer Dawson. There is such a demand for them that the training school, which has already trained over 1,700 women, is starting another training school in Scotland. Only a few women are at present employed by the chief constables in any one centre, and the scheme of selecting recruits and giving them a preliminary training at the London schools has so far worked very successfully.

A PLAGUE OF INSECTS.

London, or at all events part of it, is suffering from a plague of vicious insects, which are causing irritation and suffering to persons who frequent the commons and open spaces with which the Metropolis is so generously endowed. The hot weather, which as a rule prevails here throughout the summer, seems to stimulate action of the little pests, and though recently the climate has not been of the usual summer brand, the occasional cold spells have not checked the nuisance. The most menacing of all the insects from the public health point of view is the mosquito which breeds in places like the Hackney Marshes and in stagnant ponds and pools in the parks. The germ-carrying species is regarded by medical men with some concern; and one authority says that we may have an outbreak of malaria due to the activities of the mosquito in contact with infected cases from abroad. Apart from this grave danger, the immediate effect of the operations of the mosquito is troublesome, and there have been cases where victims of insect bites have had to remain in bed for a day or two while the poisoning induced by the bite subsided. The outward evidences of an attack is a swelling and discoloration of the affected part. Many of the victims are children, who run about bare legged; but even a thick woollen sock is not proof against the penetrating powers of the tiny marauders.

MOTOR 'BUS LUXURY.

'Bus travel in London is now becoming a luxury where formerly it was a dangerous adventure. The elements of danger and adventure are still to be found in the scramble to board the vehicles, but if one is fortunate enough to secure a place in one of the new "K" type one can imagine oneself landed in a comfortable saloon carriage. These roomy conveyances—a far cry from the converted Army lorries which were suitable only for invertebrates—are rapidly replacing the old type of vehicle; they have a larger carrying capacity, greater steadiness, and are easily handled in traffic. But what the long-suffering public appreciates most is that there are no "straps," and the strap-hanger's doom is sealed. It is expected that early next year there will be a thousand of the big 'buses on the streets. Meantime their numbers are being added to at the rate of 25 a week. As the new 'buses are ready for use obsolete types are being withdrawn in equal numbers, but every "K" bus that replaces another represents an increase of over 30 per cent. in carrying capacity.

CHILDREN FROM BUDAPEST.

The first batch of children brought over by the Famine Area Children's Hospitality Committee were the 500 little Austrians, nearly all of whom have by now found homes. The Hungarian children were kept in their own country till the close of the summer school term, but they have been in Holland for the past few days and are expected to arrive at Folkestone in a day or two. They are going for the first eighteen days to the delightful camp at Richborough where the Austrian children enjoyed themselves so much, and they are sure also to be treated with kindness by the people of Sandwich, at whose door the camp lies. The committee has had some difficulty in finding helpers who can speak Hungarian, and the trouble will be greater when they try to find visitors to talk in their own language to the children who will be distributed about the country. Many offers of homes have been received, but I hear that most of the people are not anxious to take boys or elder girls. The request generally is for "a girl not more than eleven years old." Girls are supposed to be less trouble and they probably arouse more pity, but there were some very attractive-looking youngsters among the Austrian boys.

LUNCH IN CHURCH.

An experiment which is being made in one of the City (London's business and financial district) churches of providing facilities for City workers taking their lunch recalls the public protest of a few years ago against the inconsiderateness of people who threw the fat from their sandwiches under the chairs of St. Paul's Cathedral. The church in which official recognition is now being made of a long-established custom among a certain class of London workers is at St. Mary-at-Hill, where the cinematograph and other devices to bring in the people from the highways and byways have been employed for some time under the guidance of Prebendary Carlile. In the present venture there is no motive of inducing workers to go into church for the purpose of holding a service; but it is simply intended to meet the needs of those who have nowhere else to go for their mid-day meal. Tables and chairs set apart in one of the vestibules of the building, and tea and lemonade free of charge, are provided. Prebendary Carlile regards his experiment as being entirely satisfactory, and commends its adoption to other churches who desire to give expression to their practical Christianity.

The Fatal Chamber.

Tragedies of the House of Lords.

A scene which may not unfairly be described as historic was enacted on Tuesday, June 22nd, 1920, when the veteran Lord Halifax, in opposing the Memorial Causes Bill, suddenly collapsed. "I shall probably never address this House again," he pathetically remarked.

The incident takes on a deeper significance in view of the fact that it is at least the third of a similar nature which has occurred in the House of Lords. The Upper House indeed may yet be known as the Fatal Chamber.

Chatham's End.

It was on April 7th, 1778, that William Pitt, Earl of Chatham, left his sick-bed to go to the House of Lords. Great Britain was then on the verge of war with her American colonists, and Chatham was determined to leave no stone unturned in the interests of peace.

As he rose to address the House, leaning on his crutch, there was a tense silence. "I am old and infirm," he exclaimed, in faltering accents, "have one foot—more than one foot—in the grave. I have risen from my bed to stand up in the cause of my country—perhaps never again to speak in this House" (the phrase, it will be noted, is almost identical with that used by Lord Halifax).

Chatham's speech lasted only ten minutes. He was followed by the Duke of Richmond. At the conclusion of the latter's speech Chatham made several unsuccessful attempts to rise. Suddenly he pressed his hand to his heart and fell back unconscious.

There was an instant commotion in the chamber, while the prostrate peer was carried into the princes' withdrawing-room and laid upon cushions on the table. He died a few weeks later.

Death of a Primate.

The other incident is nearer to our own times.

On Thursday, December 5th, 1901, Dr. Temple, the aged Archbishop of Canterbury, was addressing the House of Lords on the Education Bill when, in the middle of a sentence, he suddenly swayed and fell backwards into his seat.

Within a few seconds he was on his feet again. "I hope," he continued, "your lordships, in spite of any objections that may be made, will nevertheless pass the Bill into law, and let us see how it will act when it begins to work."

They were the last words he ever uttered in public. Once again he collapsed. A few minutes later he was assisted from the chamber by the Archbishop of York and a visitor who had been watching the proceedings from the steps of the Throne.

The following night Dr. Temple's speech was finished for him by the Bishop of Winchester (now Archbishop of Canterbury). But the Primate himself lay on his death-bed in Lambeth Palace.—T.M.P.—In John O'London's Weekly.

Animal Barometers.

Trappers believe firmly in the ability of wild animals to forecast weather conditions.

The type of house which the muskrat builds for the season indicates the kind of weather he expects. When the muskrats build large houses with thick walls, a cold winter is to be expected. If the houses are made unusually high much snow and high water will come.

Just before a storm all animals are usually active and travel fast and far. Even human beings notice a difference in their feelings especially if they are troubled with rheumatism.

If it is raining and the owl screeches a change for the better will shortly ensue but should the peacock screech bad weather is to come or continue.

Snails are also valuable weather prophets. As long as they are to be seen jogging along in the orthodox manner fine weather may be confidently looked forward to. If there is rain in the atmosphere the snails may be seen to seek shelter up the stems of trees and shrubs under leaves and, in fact, anywhere where they can be safely out of the wet. Only when all immediate danger of a recurrence of rain is over will they emerge again.

The End of the Sugar Farce.

The curtain was rung down on the last act in the great Sugar Farce, Monday, when Chief Justice Horwood granted the Mandamus to Mr. Hickman, causing a writ to issue to Finance Minister Brownrigg compelling him to grant a permit to Hickman & Co., Ltd., to take possession of 200 barrels of sugar which arrived here from New York on the s.s. Rosalind, last week. This sugar, we understand, is being offered at 24 cents per pound wholesale. The delivery will have to be made within four days from Monday, otherwise the Finance Department Minister will be inviting further trouble on himself. When this permit has been given, future shipments will be much lower than 24 cents, according to latest cabled quotations from New York. The history of this costly sugar bumbling reveals a state of affairs which, in point of lack of capacity on the part of those responsible for it, and waste of public funds, is without parallel in the history of Newfoundland. When we come to consider the personnel of those who constituted the Food Control Board, we should not, on second thought, be surprised. What reputable house along Water Street would place these men, either individually or collectively, in charge of its affairs? Hon. Mr. Mews is a newspaper editor, Mr. McGrath is a fish inspector, Mr. LeMessurier is an ex-broker and now a customs collector, and Mr. McKay is an ex-dry goods clerk, now commission merchant, whose knowledge and experience in the sugar business should be his warrant never to touch sugar again. His sad experience in sugar in the past should disqualify him as an authority on the subject if nothing else would.

Before this unfortunate purchase by the F.C.B., that has cost the Colony so much, was entered into, large contracts for sugar, costing 12 cents per pound, were still running. There was enough of this cheap sugar bought to last till July. Some evil genius about this time, induced the Food Control Board to make this purchase of sufficient high-priced sugar to last six months. The public as a consequence have been obliged ever since to pay 32 cents a pound for sugar by retail. This purchase of the F.C.B. was made at a time when by all the laws that governed such quotations, it should not have occurred. Even the wildest plunger hesitates to buy at the top of the market, and buying such a large quantity at such a high price would be inexcusable in the veriest tyro. Why was not this speculation by the Food Control Board entered into at the first indication of the stiffening in prices? It has not yet been made clear to the public what discussion prompted their decision to make this purchase. The sugar importers were told what had been done, but unlike the Food Control Board in the late Government, they had very little participation in the actions of the Board, with one or two exceptions.

Under the Cashin Government, free discussion took place amongst all the sugar dealers at the Board meetings, and their joint opinions was always acted upon, so that the cards were always face up on the table. The decisions of the present Board were evidently arrived at by star chamber methods. However it goes now, the unfortunate part is that the Colony is at a loss of $400,000, based on the difference of to-day's import price and the cost to the Board of over six months' supply. Today a state of consternation exists amongst all handlers of sugar, who find themselves with quantities of this Government high-priced sugar on their hands. What are they going to do with it, is the question that alarms them, as they read of the permission given to Mr. Hickman to take possession of his cheap sugar. It seems as if these innocent victims will have to follow the precedent established when the restrictions were lifted from the sale of flour substitutes last spring. The cringing plea now set up that they meant well, is poor satisfaction to the people of the country who have been fleeced in sugar prices all the summer. Our people are patient and long-suffering, but they are in no mood to have this hardship inflicted a day longer, and we would say to the Finance Minister do not exasperate the people any further. The Government may defy the people all the summer in this sugar business, but would be well advised in not trifling with the decision of the Supreme Court.

Motor Association Meeting.

Yesterday afternoon the Newfoundland Motor Association held a meeting in the Board of Trade Rooms. Some 182 motorists have subscribed to the roll and paid their dues. Others are expected to do the same. The committee, Messrs. Cocker and White, appointed to deal with the matter of regulations governing motor traffic on Rawlins' Cross, reported that a white flat stone is to be erected in the centre there for the direction of motorists. The additional tax was discussed at length. The idea has not abroad that this tax has been imposed by the Motor Association, but such is not the case. It was imposed by the present government. Mr. Campbell, representative of the Sawyer Massey Co., attended the meeting and gave details as to the machinery which is now here for road repairing. This machinery includes a scarifier, tractor, rock crusher, screen, drags, a small horse and engine grader, plows and two scrapers. It is proposed to take this machinery via Duckworth Street to Topsail Road on Saturday or Monday and a parade is being arranged for the occasion. Good work has already been done in improving the suburban roads, and with the new apparatus greater progress is expected to be made.

Sad Occurrence.

A sad occurrence cast quite a gloom over Jenkin's Cove on Thursday when Mrs. Wm. Borden, a widow of between 60 and 70 years, was found by her son suspended from a beam by a small rope, on his return from fishing shortly after dinner. Mrs. Borden was seen by the neighbors in the morning and appeared all right. She milked her cow and attended to other duties and spoke to several neighbours. On her son's return about 2 p.m., he found no one in the home, the milk unstrained and no sign of his mother. He investigated and in the store house he found the body of the unfortunate woman, suspended from a board nailed under the beams, with her feet touching the floor. Death had occurred about two hours before, according to the doctors who were at once summoned.

Although stories of previous attempts on her life were current, the evidence at the enquiry brought forth nothing of the kind, and none of the witnesses called had ever known of any such.

Great sympathy is felt for the son, who was quite distraught, and the relatives of the unfortunate woman. —Twillingate Sun.

Rev. E. W. Gardner.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Now that the Diocesan Synod of the Church of England is in session and a big collection anticipated for Queen's College, I thought probably that the clipping herewith appended from a Canadian paper would interest many of the clergy, more especially those of Queen's College, as it tells of the ardent missionary zeal of one who labored for years (till his health would not allow him to do more) on Labrador. I refer to the Rev. Elias W. Gardner. The clipping is taken from a newspaper of Bobcaygeon, Ontario, and reads as follows:

"On Saturday, August 7th, the Rev. E. W. Gardner who has recently joined the staff of workers in the Diocese of Keewatin, left Kenora in company with Archdeacon and Mrs. Faries for the Mission of York Factory on Hudson's Bay. Arriving at Winnipeg they were joined by Miss Baker who goes to teach in the Mission school. On August 9th, the little band set out via the Pas, Manitoba, for their distant field of labour. It is supposed that Mr. Gardner spent the winter at York Factory and then went on as soon as opportunity offers to Trout Lake, some three hundred miles distant, being an inland mission with a large band of Indians to whom the late Rev. William Dick, a native clergyman, ministered for some 34 years. Mr. Gardner has left his wife and children in Bobcaygeon." Let us hope that strength will be given him to perform his sacred duties, and that he will be spared to come back to his loved ones whom he has left in Bobcaygeon. Mr. Gardner's son, Paul, is now attending college at Bobcaygeon.
Yours very truly,
J. W. DEWILING.

Wedding Bells.

On Sept. 6th, a quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas's Church by Rev. Dr. Jones, when Marjorie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Miller of this city, was united in holy bonds of matrimony to ex-Pte. John C. Short, telegraph operator at Hermitage. The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father and was attended by her two cousins Misses Janet and Florence Hart, while Miss Marjorie P. Bishop acted as flower girl, carrying a bouquet of white asters. The groom was supported by Mr. Fred Learning. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to Bowring Park where luncheon was served, and from there proceeded to the home of the bride's parents where an enjoyable evening was spent. The bride was presented with many useful presents. They left for Placentia by this morning's train where they will join the Glenoe for their future home at Hermitage.

Salvage Notes.

News in this part of the island is rather meagre, and consists almost entirely of fish and weather topics. Of the Labrador fleet, only one of our port fleet has yet arrived, viz., the schooner Beatrice May, Isaac Squires Master, hailing for 480 qtls.

Skipper Isaac spent the earlier part of the summer fishing at home, and sailed for the Labrador late in July, but fortunately struck the fish plentifully, and beat, in time, those who had left earlier.

The "Alsace" from Squid Tickers, Stephen Oldford Master, with 900 qtls. of fish, leaves for St. John's during the ensuing week to try and discharge cargo (regulations re null or No. notwithstanding). The rest of the Labrador fleet remains to be heard from.

The shore fishery has been practically a failure, the highest trapman in the place being below one hundred qtls.

The hook and line fishery has been as bad as the trap.

Most of the men gave up the fishery after the trapping season, and went to Alexander Bay, working in the Terra Nova Co.'s plant.

This plant—in consideration of the poor fishery, has been a special boon to the people of Bonavista Bay, and hundreds of the fishermen are now earning good wages, who otherwise would have been compelled to leave the country.

In the kingdom of crops, the grub pest has made itself felt, even down here. The potato yield, however, promises to be about normal, and rumour has it that already the surplus stock at Salvage Bay has been "marketed ere dug." Further up on the South side of Bonavista the hay crops suffered considerably from the black grub, and many people will be compelled to kill their cattle for lack of provender.

Mr. Kenneth Burden, who was here from St. John's on a short holiday, returned to the city a few days ago.

The Salvage High School opened after the summer vacation on last Monday, 5th inst.

The rumoured changing of the S.S. Clyde to the Port Union Service route, and the consequent confusion to freight consignees resultant therefrom are nuisances to the public. If Port Union is in need of advertising, then the frequent change of steamship lines ought to serve the purpose admirably.

Republicans Win in Maine.

Great Britain to sell German Liners---Italian crisis over---New Offensive against the Poles---Miners' demand condemned by Leader.

SOVIET FORCES TAKE OFFENSIVE
LONDON, Sept. 14. Russian Soviet forces, it is reported from Moscow, have taken the offensive on both sides of Brody, near the Galician border, and are marching on Lemberg, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Berlin.

MAINE GOES REPUBLICAN.
PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 14. Maine gave an overwhelming plurality to the Republican ticket in the State election yesterday with a total vote larger by fifty-five thousand than the highest ever previously given in the State. Frederick Pankhurst, of Bangor, was elected Governor by fifty-five thousand over his Democratic opponent. Four Republican Congressmen were elected by a large majority.

ANTI-BOLSHEVİK RIOTING IN PETROGRAD.
LONDON, Sept. 14. Serious anti-Bolshevik rioting is taking place in Petrograd, it is declared in reports from that city received in Berlin, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. Six of the Bolshevik commissioners, it is asserted, have been drowned in the Neva and the rest have been compelled to seek places of refuge.

ITALIAN CRISIS PASSED.
ROME, Sept. 14. Italy has passed through the crisis of the metal workers' movement, according to the Giornale d'Italia. In commenting on the situation the newspaper says, "Until last Saturday we were on the edge of Bolshevism. That the present question is one of law enforcement was made here by Governor Cox, Democratic presidential candidate.

MINERS' DEMAND CONDEMNED.
LONDON, Sept. 14. The most arresting fact in the coal strike situation is the bold condemnation of the miners' demand for a reduction in coal prices by Thomas Spencer, one of their leaders. The miners argue that enormous profits are being made by the owners but official figures show that for the quarter ending last June only five areas show any profit.

AGAINST ENTERING POLITICAL FIELD.
WINDSOR, Sept. 14. A resolution advocating the entrance of labor into the political field was adversely reported by the resolutions committee at yesterday's session of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

POISONED.
PARIS, Sept. 14. Doctors who performed an autopsy on the body of Olive Thomas, American moving picture actress, concluded that her death was due to "poison through intoxication with a sublimate" taken accidentally.

AIRMAN MEET TRAGIC DEATH.
CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 14. Air Mail Pilot Walter Stevens and Mechanician Russell Thomas, both of Cleveland, were burned to death today when their plane caught fire at an altitude of five hundred feet at Pemberville, fifteen miles south of Toledo.

BRITAIN TO SELL SHIPS.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 14. Great Britain has under consideration the sale of forty former German liners and a number of cargo vessels to their former owners, according to reports received by the United States Government from London. The sale of the ships which were awarded to Great Britain by the Reparations Committee practically has been decided upon, these advisers state, but definite action has been held up until the existing law can be modified so as to permit of the sale of the craft to the Germans. Some officials of the United States profess to see in this plan an attempt to hinder development of the United States Merchant Marine, but Chairman Benson of the Shipping Board declared that the immediate acquisition of considerable tonnage by the Germans would in no way defeat the purpose of the agreement between the American Ship and Commerce Corporation and the Hamburg American Line for opening of former German trade routes to American Shipping.

ONE EFFECT OF MACSWEENEY'S DEATH.
LONDON, Sept. 14. The negotiations for the settlement of the Irish question, which are described as the most promising yet initiated, will be nullified if Terrence MacSweeney dies from hunger strike, says the Dublin correspondent of the Times.

WAITING FOR POLES' TERMS.
RIGA, Sept. 14. The Russian Bolshevik peace delegation, who have arrived here to meet representatives of Poland and negotiate armistice and peace terms, consider the meeting merely a continuation of the conference at Minsk. "Our terms," said Adolph Jaffe, head of the Soviet delegation to-day, "were never answered by the Poles at Minsk, nor were any counter proposals submitted. The Poles merely criticized our terms, but offered nothing in the nature of proposals. Before the conference can proceed the Poles must make known the terms upon which they would have a treaty."

LOST NO TIME.
NEWARK, N.J., Sept. 14. Count Ilya Tolstol, son of the late Count Leo Tolstol, Russian dramatist and philosopher, and Mrs. Nadine Forshina, were married by Mayor Gillan here to-day. Both Count Ilya and his bride are divorcees of less than two months ago.

MAD ELEPHANT SHOT.
SALINA, Kansas, Sept. 14. It required three rounds from five army rifles yesterday to kill "Snyder," a trained elephant belonging to a circus showing here. The animal had gone mad and started to wreck the menagerie. He threw one cage containing four lions a distance of thirty feet and upset a score of others.

LOED BURNHAM COMING TO NEWFOUNDLAND.
MONTREAL, Sept. 14. The steamer Empress of Britain leaves Quebec to-morrow afternoon for Liverpool and will carry the main group of the Imperial Press party home. Viscount Burnham, head of the party, has gone on to Newfoundland and will leave Quebec next week.

WHITE MAN LYNCHED.
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 14. Alito Windham, a white man, was lynched last night near Hartford, Alabama, because of remarks he was alleged to have made to a white woman.

SEELY PRAISES CANADIANS.
MONTREAL, Sept. 14. Major General J. E. B. Seely, who for three and a half years commanded a Canadian cavalry brigade in France, is at the Ritz Carlton Hotel to-day. The General is very warm in his enthusiasm of Canadians who served under him and in speaking of them he said, "words cannot express the valor, indomitable cheerfulness and splendid soldierly qualities of the men I had the honor and pride to command."

MARY LOXNER LOST.
HALIFAX, Sept. 14. The following cable from Turk's Island was received here to-day: "The schooner Mary Loxner is reported a total loss at Silver Cays. Captain and crew arrived in vessel's boat at Grand Turk on 14th." No Mary Loxner is listed in available shipping records, but a Mary Loxner is. She is a new vessel and sailed from Lunenburg for St. John's, Nfld., last month to load for Barbados.

TORONTO, Sept. 14. Delegates to the ninth congress of the Chamber of Commerce of the British Empire are now arriving in this city. Among the arrivals to-day was Lord Desborough, President of the Congress. The Congress will open on Friday night when delegates will be formally welcomed at Massey Hall. The object of the Congress, which is held triennially except that on account of the war no session has been held since 1912 in London, is to give expression to Imperial Commercial opinion on matters directly or indirectly affecting commercial and industrial affairs, according to Stanley Machin, Chairman of the Organizing Committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

FOUND RIGHT MEDICINE AT LAST, SAYS LORD.

Worn-out Feeling And Indigestion Gone And He Gets Up Every Morning Ready For Work Since Taking Tanlac.

"Tanlac has simply made a new man of me," declared Frederick Lord, well-known fisherman, living at Navy Island, West St. John, N.B.

"Last winter my digestion became so upset I couldn't eat a thing without having terrible pains in the pit of my stomach afterwards that fairly doubled me up. I bloated up with gas till I had to let out my belt several holes, and I had a bad taste in my mouth all the time. I got very little sleep at night and always got up in the mornings feeling tired out. I was so weak I could hardly drag around and thought I would have to give up altogether.

"My brother-in-law was greatly helped by Tanlac, and when he saw what a weak condition I was in he advised me to try it, and I'm glad I did for it proved just the right medicine for me. The first few doses gave me an appetite and in a very short time I could eat like a horse and never suffer a particle from pain or gas afterwards.

"I now sleep like a log all night and get up in the morning feeling ready for work. I have gained several pounds in weight and in fact my whole system has been benefited and I feel just fine all the time. Tanlac certainly is one grand medicine and believe me there's nothing like it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Belleoram; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Joe Quinn, Renevee, 422.

Bank of Commerce

PENS NEW SUPERINTENDENCY AT CALGARY—NOVA SCOTIAN RECEIVES APPOINTMENT AT WINNIPEG.

The ever increasing importance of Canadian Banking institutions is a matter of national pride, and the announcement of The Canadian Bank of Commerce to the effect that an additional Superintendency, similar to that established in Halifax in the early part of 1919, is now to be opened in Calgary, marks an important step not only in the continued progress of that institution, but reflects in no uncertain manner the rapid development which has been and is still taking place in the Peace River district and other outlying parts of the inland Empire which this new Superintendency will serve.

For many years the Bank's business in the Central Western District, which comprised the Provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, has been handled through the Department of the Superintendent at Winnipeg. In view, however, of the rapid development which has taken place in the Central West and the very general expansion of the Bank's business throughout the older settled portions of these Provinces, it has now become a difficult matter to handle all of the business at one central point, and the facility of service which it has always been the Bank's aim to render. Coincident, therefore, with the retirement from the Bank's service of Mr. V. C. Brown, who since 1911 has occupied the position of Superintendent at Winnipeg, the Bank has decided to make a change, leaving the branches in Manitoba and Saskatchewan under the supervision of its successor at Winnipeg and placing the branches in Alberta and the Peace River district under the supervision of Mr. J. B. Corbet, whose headquarters will be at Calgary.

Mr. J. B. Corbet, who for the past five years has been Manager of the Bank's main branch in Winnipeg, and who is one of the best known bankers in the West, succeeds Mr. V. C. Brown as Superintendent of the Central West. The announcement will be of particular interest in view of Mr. Rowley being a native of that province. Born in Yarmouth, N.S., in 1876 he received his early education at the local public school, later graduating from the Yarmouth Academy, and entering the service of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in 1897.

Mr. Rowley served as Accountant in the Winnipeg branch from 1898 to 1902, after which he spent a short time in Vancouver. Leaving there in October, 1902, he established a branch of the Bank in Calgary where, while making a very active interest in outside affairs he built up a very flourishing business for the Bank. He was one of the founders of the Calgary Clearing House and its first chairman, and also served on the Executive of many local Companies, leaving Calgary in May, 1911, he proceeded to Winnipeg where he has since continuously held the position of Manager of the main branch. Mr. Rowley will be particularly well known to the public on account of his activities. He is past president of the Canadian Club and in many ways has identified himself not only with local affairs at Winnipeg but with matters of Dominion-wide importance.

Mr. J. B. Corbet, the new Superintendent of the Bank at Calgary, entered their service at New Westminster in 1901, gaining his early training at the Pacific Coast. From 1903 to July, 1911 he was attached to the Head Office staff of the Bank where he gained a valuable experience in administrative work. In July, 1911, he received the appointment of Assistant Inspector at Winnipeg and since that date has been continuously attached to the Department at Winnipeg, and for the past three and a half years has been senior Inspector of the Bank's Western business. His experience and wide knowledge of Western affairs will be of great assistance to the Bank in his new capacity as Superintendent of the branches in Alberta and the Peace River district.

Mr. Rowley's successor at Winnipeg will be Mr. C. C. K. Nourse, who for many years has served the Bank in the Canadian West. Mr. Nourse is identified with the Bank in the Yukon territory during the gold rush, being in that district from 1898 to 1903, the latter part of the time as Manager of the Skegway branch. In 1903 he was appointed Manager at Prince Albert and in 1905 Manager at Edmonton which post he held until 1911 when he was appointed Manager at Calgary. With twenty-two years' service in the Canadian West to his credit he is unusually well fitted for his position as Manager of the Winnipeg branch. Mr. Nourse will be succeeded in Calgary by Mr. M. A. Maybee, at present Manager of the Bank's branch at Moose Jaw. For ten years previous to his appointment as Inspector's representative in Winnipeg in February, 1902, Mr. Maybee served the Bank in various Ontario branches. In September, 1905, he was appointed Manager at the Brandon branch where he remained until 1917 when he was appointed Manager at Moose Jaw.

HEALTH and happiness are the prime factors in children's lives. Exercising—running and playing, strengthens their limbs and muscles. Proper feeding nourishes their bodies and builds up the vigor of the little ones when given plenty of sleep.

Real cleanliness, too, is essential to their health—never overlook that. But children can't get the exercise they need and keep out of dirt—it's impossible. Yet they hate baths, hate shampoos and consider soap an enemy—nearly all children do, don't they? It's quite a problem isn't it—letting the children play as they should and still keeping them healthy, clean and happy?

However, the answer is simple when you know it. It's JAP ROSE soap. Let the kiddies acquire Roses in the Cheeks, Fluffiness in the Hair, Fragrant Cleanliness Everywhere—that's JAP ROSE Attar of Roses.

Bulgaria will lose much of its charm if it is true that its inhabitants are abandoning the attar of rose industry in favour of tobacco-growing.

Twenty years ago the traveller from Adrianople to Kezanlik—a distance of about ninety miles—found "roses, roses, all the way." Only two varieties were to be seen—the damask, used in the manufacture of the various rose confections beloved by Orientals, and the musk, proved by experience to be the best for making attar, which a Persian poet declares to be more precious than gold.

Tradition says that the scent originated through a certain Sultana ordering a fountain in her garden to be kept supplied with rose-water. The action of the sun presently concentrated the oily particles which rose to the surface, and the gardener, supposing the water to have become corrupt, skimmed off the floating oil. In this operation some of the globules burst, releasing a delightful fragrance.

The story is a possible one; and, at all events, science has largely followed it in extracting the essential oil of the rose. But the result thus obtained by a casual form of fermentation could only be brought to perfection by the distiller's art.

The amount of concentration required may be gauged from the fact that, though ten pounds of roses will impregnate a gallon of water by distillation, a hundred pounds will produce barely half an ounce of attar.

Although much depends on the season and the odorous quality of the flowers, it may be said that roughly only one pound of pure attar is hidden in a ton of rose petals. The fragrant mass goes to the still in about twice its own weight of water, and a powerful perfume results; but from this stage the process nearly follows the course suggested by the story of the Sultana's fountain.

The rose-water is exposed to the cool night air in shallow vessels carefully protected from the dust. Within a few hours an oily film of pure attar rises to the surface, and is dexterously skimmed off with a feather. This operation is repeated until the water has yielded up all its essential treasure.

THE LARGE FAMILY.
Time was we seldom bowed to care, the family was small, An' grief went walkin' down the way an' never stopped to call. We heard of sorrow here an' there an' saw time's constant change, But it was all so far away an' seemed so very strange That joyously we lived our lives, scarce thinkin' we must know The sorrows others had to bear, but that was long ago.

And now the family has grown, its circle stretches wide And very often now our hearts by care and grief are tried. We've many here who share our love, and some of them are old, Soon by the Shepherd to be called into the Heavenly fold. And we have bowed our heads in grief and lived those days of woe which seemed so strange to us back then in that glad long ago.

We've drawn the shades against the sun, we've said the last good-bye, We understand just what it means to see a loved one die, For as the family larger grew more oft we come to care And greater are the burdens that our hearts are asked to bear, And yet our joys have multiplied, glad smiles throughout the years And love and laughter we have known to pay us for our tears.

Binders of Empire.

(By H. G. GADSBY, in Toronto Saturday Night.)

I ran across the Binders of Empire—others the Imperial Press Conference—in the Chateau Laurier. By easy stages they had worked their way up from the Atlantic seaboard, stopping ever and anon to eat a banquet, to lay a corner stone, to accept an address, until here they were at last in the capital of Britain's greatest overseas dominion. They were a prosperous-looking lot from which I inferred that they might be mowers as well as binders.

Though democratic, as they professed, to the greatest extent compatible with the established order of society, I discovered among them three lords, a score of Sirs, and a certain aloofness in their manner which suggested that chibblins might appear on the slightest provocation. Their dress, slack at the belt, loose at the collar, and baggy at the knees, indicated the large score for creased trousers which the Englishman affects when travelling—he is so much at home with the whole world that he doesn't have to doll up for it.

I gathered from their conversation that they were much impressed by our Canadian scenery and were deeply indebted to the C.P.R., that greatest of Empire girdlers, for keeping it in such good condition. They admitted that our mountains are high, our rivers wide and our trees tall—that the trees particularly must be very old—some of them as old as the Norman Conquest—but that they lacked historic background. I assured them that this would correct itself in a few hundred years more when our historic background caught up with our national debt which just now occupied so much of the foreground that there was no background left.

In reply to the question how they liked Canada as far as they had got, they expressed great surprise at the freedom they experienced in Quebec, which they had been led to believe was—or—er—"quite othahwise." They were pleased to observe that there was no Bolshevism in Quebec and that it might be a safe home for British capital. They dwelt with satisfaction on the fact that one could drink as irresponsibly as one could eat in Quebec, that the banquets were very spirited on that account, in short, that it was a real home of liberty which had not forgotten the grand old maxim embodied in the Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, and other important constitutional documents—namely that an Englishman's house is his castle.

Our newspapers, nothing if not polite, had already told me that this was the greatest aggregation of intellect gathered together under one tent, and looking around at the spacious foreheads festooned about the Chateau, I could well believe it. Even the small talk breathed the wide vision which spurns detail. For instance, one of the highest brows there spoke to me of Sir Richard Laurier—a comprehensive phrase which brought Cartwright into his composite picture of Canadian Liberalism—and a minute later showed a sipilarly bold grasp of geography when he asked if I had met his brother who lived in British Columbia. For a great mind like his British Columbia was just a post office address. When a man starts binding the Empire he naturally thinks of continents as way stations. It is not as some suppose a certain concession toward colonials—it is rather the inability of the wide-ranging imperial eye to sight objects close at hand.

I was glad to see that our local Empire-binders, Lord Atholstan and Sir John Willison, held their own with the best of the overseas visitors. Lord Atholstan, as everybody knows, is a veritable pillar of Empire whom nothing can shake, rooted, as he is, in the peage. Sir John, though a smaller pillar, is just as deeply rooted. He is always on the job, and when he isn't reconstructing Canada he is holding up the power and prestige of Great Britain with an expertness due to long practice. Sir John is so good at the job that he can do it with both hands tied behind his back and keep his reputation warm at the same time.

The binders of Empire—particularly the big fish—were affable to the press. They exuded interviews at every pore. Mr. Robert Donald, late of the London "Chronicle," went as far in his efforts for better English—for which he makes an eloquent appeal to this slang-loving country—as to talk in his sleep. Only thus can I explain the volume of language from his lips which found its daily way into the Ottawa newspapers. Lord Burnham, as became his position as proprietor of the greatest newspaper in the British Empire, was more guarded in his remarks, but not enough to arouse suspicion. Otherwise happy there was a haunted look in his Lordship's eyes—shared by the other notables of the party—due, as I was told, to the gauntlet he had run from the universities.

He had been accumulating honorary degrees as a steamer trunk accumulates labels, and was at a loss to understand it until kind friends informed him that it is even harder to escape the LL.D. degree in Canada than the Legion of Honor in France. Only when he was assured that the LL.D. blesses him that gives at least twice as much as him that takes, did he smile again. It was my privilege to see Lord Burnham presented with a moose head, typical of our Canadian wilds, a token of esteem from his fellow journalists for the dangers he has run on his Canadian trip. The moose head will be hung up in his baronial hall and two generations from now the Lord Burnham of the day will tell his son how his noble grandfather met and conquered this giant of the Canadian forest, throttling it with bare hands while the desperate animal churned up acres of pulpwood in his dying agony.

Naturally I was pleased at the chance I had of conversing with these imperial minds on the great questions of the day—Canada a nation or not, how long will the grasshopper (the farmers' movement) keep jumping, and could one get it in one's room. I was happy to state that one could—if not in one's room at least across the bridge. When I saw the relief with which my last statement was greeted, I realized that the great heart of empire is in the right place, and that the quarter of a million dollars the Canadian Government is spending on this good-will excursion is not misplaced. When it comes to ties of "empire" we must have them of all sorts—liquid as well as silken, spiritual as well as commercial, bonds of affection and links of steel—morgues mostly—tariffs and tall talk. The latest and greatest bond of Empire, if I am to believe the Imperial Press Conference, also the strongest, would be of newspaper paper—but of that more anon.

It was my good luck to fall in with an Irish journalist from London, and being Irish, he had that in his bones which made him a frank critic of his fellows. The Irish newspaper man, I may say, is the saving heaven of the British press—if he can't get the truth out any other way he blarnts it. When I met him on the Chateau terrace he was gazing hungrily at the Laurentian hills, bearded to the chine with goodly trees.

"Pulpwood!" he asked, jerking a thumb toward the blue horizon.

"No," I said, "Wooden legs. We can make more money out of 'em that way."

I remembered the last Imperial Press Conference some seven years ago, and the new lake that was formed in North Ontario when the visitors allowed their mouths to water at the sight of our spruce forests, so I hastened to steer my Irish friend away from the subject. But, alas, he would not be steered—his nose turned ever in the direction of newspaper.

"We have no mission," he explained, "except friendliness. We would develop your resources and our bank accounts. Our pilgrimage combines pleasure and pulpwood. If pleasure stands in our way we will let it go and take the pulpwood instead. I heard somebody the other day call this little excursion a joy ride. A joy ride it may be, but it is also a paper chase."

"Too late!" I sighed. "It's the tail of the hunt. You should have got here sooner. Three-quarters of the money in the Canadian pulp business is American. That's why we have to go short ourselves."

"This," said my Irish friend, "must be remedied. You speak a great deal of the ties of Empire. You must translate your words into deeds and give us more newspaper. The solidarity of the Empire is in your hands—pulpwood. You have the greatest available supply in the world. The Lion and the Lion's Whelps cry for it—we must be fed."

My Irish friend was getting his metaphors mixed—you do not feed lions on pulpwood—but I could see his drift. Just a little while before a hard-bitten Australian had complained to me that four hundred and fifty dollars a ton for British Columbia newspaper laid down at Melbourne was a bit thick.

"You have," continued my Irish friend, "the desire of our hearts, plenty of pulpwood and easy to get at. As citizens of the Empire you must admit that we should share this precious heritage in common, giving the outsiders only what is left. If you love the Empire you must supply the pulpwood out of which the edifice of inter-imperial good will is to be built. There is nothing," he added, "that will compare with your spruce as the raw material of newspaper paper. The colah boolah tree of Australia is not fibrous enough for the purpose, while the wamba-wumba tree of South Africa, which is little better, does not cohere sufficiently. You have the cream of the market, and you're damned selfish about it."

"If you were real patriots now—" this with a twinkle in his eye—"if you really want to bind the Empire together, you would do something about it—produce a pulp tree, for example, that would grow about ten times as fast as the present sort does. It's the one thing that will save the Empire—Canadian pulpwood of commercial value at, say, two years' growth."

"We can do better than that," I challenged. "We can produce a print, paper tree. All you'll have to do is to back your spindle into the bush and unwind the stuff like birch bark. To go a little further, we might have two kinds of paper trees—Liberal and Conservative—the sentiments being ingrained, as it were. This would save setting up in the office and would do away with a great deal of expense if we could get the Typographical Union to agree to it. The paper tree, tapped at the proper season, would also supply printers' ink, and thus solve another problem."

"You're spoofing me," said my Irish friend, and sure enough I was. Not having an English sense of humor he saw it at once.

"As a binder of Empire," I explained, "I yield to none, but I suppose you have a job printing end to your newspaper?"

"What has that to do with it?"

"Well, as a job printer, you ought to know that if you bind too tight the binding rips. I'm in favor of the loose leaf system—when you can slip 'em in and out."

"The disadvantage of that," commented my Irish friend, "is that once they slip out you can't slip 'em in again. They go blowing around."

"True!" I agreed sadly. "Look at the United States of America. They're blowing yet."

No mission, of course—except a little pulpwood. But truth like a tooth will come out. One bright morning I felt strong enough to love the Empire as it should be loved, and took measures accordingly. What I mean to say is that I attended a meeting of the Press Conference and listened to the speeches. Sitting there under the aegis of the broad "a" I drank in those dear old red, white and blue platitudes which go to prove that the British Empire is the greatest human interpretation of divine justice extant, the most universal community of soul on the face of the earth, and other fine words to the same effect.

On this growing atmosphere of ideals and such impinged Mr. John Dafeo, editor of the Manitoba "Free Press," with a sturdy self-respecting speech which made me feel proud that I was a Canadian. No lack of loyalty there, but likewise no cringing. Dafeo stood up to it four square. The British Empire—what was it? A partnership by consent. If by consent then any partner might drop out if consent ceased. What was the solution? Not independence—at least not yet. Not independence, but more interdependence. Partners by consent—equal partners—Dafeo stressed that word "equal." Canada a nation—yes, a real nation, not a mere after-dinner amenity. Dafeo concluded with a few ill-considered words from Disraeli anent the "wretched colonies."

To this huge chunk of reason from John Dafeo a flow of soul was invited from Sir Gilbert Parker, who was evidently regarded by Lord Burnham as the proper antidote. Sir Gilbert is interested in a syndicate of English newspapers. He is novelist and journalist too—if his truth is only half as strange as his fiction he ought to be a great success in the newspaper business. That he is a great success as an Englishman and a Tory his opinions and his accents equally show. As long as his Canadian color lasted, Sir Gilbert had trouble with his accent, but now that he is thorough English—on the principle of the actor who blackened himself all over in order to play Othello—his accent fits better and does not fall off in moments of excitement.

Sir Gilbert admitted that Canada could leave the union of British Commonwealth without a shot being fired to stop her, but he was bound to explain. He explained that Mr. Dafeo was an "impawtant figyaz" in the West. He explained that Mr. Mackenzie King, "from whom you heard such loyal sentiments yesterday afternoon," was the "grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie the rebel." He explained that "Dizzy"—one felt at once that Sir Gilbert was speaking of a pal—had uttered those foolish words in pique, but that he had "repeated nobly." He explained—quoting a little—that he had with the Duke of Westminster in Green Park—that it was the privilege of English public men to "repeat nobly" when necessary, and that on occasion he had done it himself, notably in the case of South Africa, which had turned out trump in spite of his alarm when the gift of self-government was granted. Sir Gilbert explained—but why tell all? He was in an explaining mood and my sole purpose in giving him so much space is to explain that in him we have the greatest of treasures—an explainer of real genius. It seems a pity that we haven't given him more to explain.

The story of the Empire binders would not be complete without a short reference to Sir Harry Brittain, who threw out the hint that the Press Conference would shortly be followed by a Constitutional Conference at which great things would be doing if the Downing Street Imperialists had their way. Another thing that he threw out—and very properly so, I think—was the suggestion that the Committee of Overseas Cabinet Ministers, sitting permanently in London, should give their decisions on imperial policy on the spot, thus relieving the Overseas Governments of "those mawasses of detail which it would be quite unfair to quite unfair to impose upon them." We seem to have heard something like this before and to have speculated on the fat chance that overseas committee would have of not running in the wash.

We have heard that Britons never will be slaves, and we are disposed to suggest that, however successful

Mothers' Advice

The responsibility for a daughter's future largely rests with the mother. The right influence and the information which is of vital interest to the daughter imparted at the proper time has not only saved the life but insured the success of many a beautiful girl. When a girl's thoughts become sluggish with headaches, dizziness, or a disposition to sleep, pains in back or lower limbs and a desire for solitude, her mother should come to her aid and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, will at this time prepare the system for the coming change and start this trying period in a young girl's life without pain or irregularities. Thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of this medicine, and what it has done for their daughters.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For 3 months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching so I did not know what to do. I read in the papers about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. F. FORD, 516 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Had News for Burglars.

Burglary and highway robbery will soon be among the forgotten crimes of past ages.

A contrivance invented by a Mr. Braun renders it impossible for a burglar to enter premises by door, window, skylight, or chimney without raising an alarm. Not only do bells ring, but the premises become lit up inside, and a red sign outside blazes forth the word "police" in large letters.

A powerful phonograph shrieks for assistance to attract further attention to a raid, and the telephone communicates the presence of intruders directly they cross the threshold.

Even more wonderful is the luggage thief detector. The owners of kit-bags can safely leave them on railway platforms while they look for their friend or search for cabs, as Mr. Braun has perfected an alarm-signal which makes a noise like a swarm of bees directly any unauthorized person dares to remove the unattended luggage.

Mr. Braun realizes that he is about to profit by the ruin of an old-established criminal business, and to prove that he is a true sportsman he offers a small fortune in prizes to genuine burglars who are able to circumvent his apparatus.

Only professional thieves are eligible for this competition, and evidence must be given (in confidence of course) to prove that they have graduated in the school of crime.

Should this sporting offer fail to meet with a ready response, it occurs to Mr. Braun that he might devote a portion of his prospective gains from his invention to the endowment of a home of rest for decayed burglars, or, in the alternative, that he should erect almshouses for the benefit of the innumerable night-watchmen and caretakers whose services will be no longer required.

Marvels of Minute Workmanship.

MACHINE THAT SEEMS TO PERFORM MIRACLES.

Most of us carry two remarkable specimens of minute workmanship. They are both contained in our watch, if that article is of the ordinary pattern.

One is the name of the maker on the dial. This lettering, though only about 1.40in. in height, is painted on by hand.

We are indebted to machinery for the other microscopic feature. Look, with a glass, at some of the screws, and you may find that the heads of the smallest are only 3-100in. across and that the threads are sunk nearly 2-1000in.

This is fine work; but much more so is that in tiny watches which are incorporated in rings or ear-rings.

Amazing accuracy is attained, too, in the every-day manufacture of common things. By a whirling emery wheel parts of a motor-car engine are brought to within 1-3,000in. of standard size, and the slit in a pen is made by two blades adjusted with such nicety that the thinnest possible film of moisture on the lower one would be removed by the other in passing it.

Still more remarkable is the fineness seen in the gauges called for in mass production. This practice involves interchangeability of parts, and consequently a rigid adherence to standard is imperative. In some works there are great heaps of parts which do not vary from one another more than 1-2,000in.—a result which would be impossible without a series of beautiful gauges.

The care exercised in connection with such gauges would amaze the uninitiated. Periodically the working gauges are tested by master gauges, some of which are so exquisitely fine that they must be used quickly, lest they be affected by the heat of the hand.

These gauges are made of steel which has been thoroughly "ripened" or matured. New steel cannot be used, because it may splinter of its own accord, or, if it is worked up to certain dimensions, become distorted the very next day.

Marvellous is the accuracy of master gauges—which only the most skilful craftsmen can make. Not long ago, for instance, some were wanted in connection with the mass production of aeroplane engines, and it was necessary that they should be to within 1-5,000in. of standard. They were made, though at great cost. The men who produced them had to be carefully watched, and sent home for a rest if they seemed to be ever so little "off colour."

No less astounding are the details in some machines. One invented by Sir Joseph Whitworth will detect a length variation of one millionth part of an inch. If you touched for an instant with your finger-nail a 36in. bar of steel, the expansion in it due to the heat would not be too slight to be registered by this piece of mechanism.

Try This Test.

There are other machines which put the draughtsman out of the running for certain work. How many parallel lines can you draw in an inch? If you are very skilful, you may manage 150, or perhaps 200. But there is one machine that will rule 120,000 to the inch, and another is capable of ruling fourteen in a space equivalent to the thickness of tissue-paper.

An error so small as to be nearly inappreciable by the lay mind is fatal to success with these machines. If either was "out" only 1-300,000in., it would not work satisfactorily.

Minute care, however, is not peculiar to small work only. For in the making of a 12in. gun a shaving taken off a tube may be merely 1-500in. thick.

Secrets Revealed by Holidays.

"Many people positively dread the coming of the holiday season," the director of personnel of a big London firm told me recently. And he went on to explain that they were neither harassed parents nor neurostenics, but simply workers who were guilty of systematically defrauding their employers.

A recent case in his experience was that in which an employee of the firm had refused, for four years in succession, to take a holiday. The firm ascribed this somewhat unusual behaviour to zeal, until the man fell ill and was compelled to stay away. It was then discovered that he had regularly been robbing the firm of goods to the tune of nearly £5 a week—a fact which might never have been discovered but for his enforced absence.

The same business man told me of another case which occurred not long ago. In this instance the delinquent was cashier in the office of a firm of general merchants. For some years he had consistently refused to go away for a holiday, declaring that he had no friends and nowhere to go; also that he much preferred work.

One day his managing director, noticing that the man looked ill, handed him a cheque for £30, with instructions that he was to "clear out and rest for a bit" and not return until he looked fit. This advice the cashier, evidently alarmed, took too literally, for he was never seen again—and neither was the £3,000 of which he had robbed the firm.

More than one defaulting bank cashier has been "found out" in this way. One man had taken over £400 in ten months and had substituted leaden weights for the missing cash.

But while some large firms annually make discoveries of this kind, it is the smaller concerns, it seems, which suffer most. Small tradesmen are often unaccountably lax in their methods and embezzlement is frequent among their employees.

I heard of a case in a country town of a grocer who had just discharged an employee of nearly twenty years' standing at a moment's notice. It had been found that during the man's absence on holiday this year—his first for six years—the takings increased by, roughly, 30s. a week and

SAVE THE BABIES!

During these hot days when infants are suffering and dying from Summer Diarrhoea, it might be interesting to quote from a report read by Dr. Alan Brown, Child Specialist of Toronto, who says:—

"In severe cases of Diarrhoea which do not respond to the elimination of carbohydrate in the usual milk mixtures, PROTEIN MILK is indicated, as in practically all cases of intoxication and infectious diarrhoea, and many cases of dyspepsia in breast-fed infants."

The process of making LIQUID PROTEIN MILK is a long and difficult one. After four years of careful experimentation a PROTEIN MILK has been manufactured in powder form,—conforming exactly to the analysis of the Liquid preparation.

Upon presentation of a prescription from your doctor it can be obtained at any of the three Child Welfare Milk Stations where it is sold at cost of importation.

Bedrooms & Beds

There's nothing more important to the bedroom than the Bed itself, is there? From the point of usefulness or ornament it ranks first. Does your Bed suit your taste? Does it harmonize with your room? Does it give you the sleep-comfort you need? No? Well, then it's time to discard it and get another, quick.

We are showing All-Brass, Brass and Enamel, and All-Enamel Beds in all sizes and very fine designs. Each and all of which Beds can be fitted with Springs and Wool or Felt Mattresses if desired.

Prices quoted on request.
