Lord Mersey Turned Down

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 15.—(Canadian Press Despatch)—In his reminiscences just published, Viscount Ullswater, formerly Mr. J. W. Lowther, Speaker of the House of Commons for sixteen years, tells the following story of Lord Mersey, the famous jurist who, incidentally, conducted the inquiry into the loss of the Empress of Ireland. The story is concerned with the funeral at Windsor, in March, 1917, of the Duchess of Connaught. Lord Mersey was late and vainly tried to find a taxicab to take him en route to Windsor. Seeing the automobile of the French Ambassador outside the Embassy he evinced that Mons. Paul Cambon was bound on the same journey as himself. At that moment the Ambassador came out of the Embassy. Lord Mersey advanced with the intention of asking him for a lift. Not recognizing Lord Mersey, but imagining him to be a beggar, Mons. Cambon waved him away, exclaiming, "No, no. Go away. I give you nothing."

Abundant Health Within Reach of All

"Not to be born is best; and next, to die as soon as possible." This was the pessimistic view of life expressed by Sophocles. Most philosophers and intellectuals of ancient times agreed with him. Life was looked upon as an enigmatic affliction rather than a divine dispensation.

These diagnoses were based upon a mere consideration of symptoms. They were made in almost complete ignorance of the underlying physical causes of human misery.

Many years of experience in sitting and sorting human types, in searching for the causes of physical failure, have convinced me of the falsity of this pessimistic philosophy. No one would wish to live in a world absolutely devoid of struggle, pain, grief, or suffering. There is, however, no scientific warrant regarding life as a whole inevitably a period of purgatorial penance.

The world is as we view it. If we view it through bilious colored spectacles it is a blighted world. I have seen a man with big brain and dominant personality, fundamentally capable of a joyous, self-confident existence, wholly transformed into a pessimistic and wailing misanthrope by so crude a thing as flat-foot! Others have been similarly affected by poisoned or infected physical states, while sometimes the reverse is true and the body suffers because they are unhappy; others are unhappy because they 'nump'.

There should be systematic search of our bodies and our lives for the original sources of physical decay and life failure. The abundant means that even now science can supply for lessening the burden of man-made misery borne by the human race should be utilized.—Dr. Eugene Lyman Wisk, in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.).

Fight in Italian Chamber
COMMUNISTS FLUNG OUT.

Rome, Nov. 19.—The Communist members of the Chamber of Deputies were forcibly ejected from the Chamber by enraged Fascists to-day after a scuffle brought on by the speech of the Communist Deputy Maffi in protest against yesterday's demonstration in the Chamber in favor of Premier Mussolini. Maffi declared that yesterday's manifestation, a few days after the Premier's escape from assassination, represented "neither the thought nor the sentiments of the laboring masses or of the whole Italian people."

These words had hardly been uttered when Roberto Farinacci, Secretary General of the Fascist party, leaped from his seat and rushed across the floor of the Chamber, shouting in Maffi's face, "When one speaks ill of the Duce this must be the answer."

The next instant he landed a blow in Maffi's face. At this juncture the Fascist Deputies rushed in a body to the extreme left of the Chamber, grabbed the other Communist Deputies and shoved them to the door. There the Communists were forcibly ejected under a rain of blows from the Fascists.

Such a tumult was aroused by the incident that the sitting was suspended for ten minutes.

Headaches and Biliousness
Are quickly relieved by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

When you feel irritable, cranky and downhearted, you can easily blame the liver, for there is no organ in the human body which so quickly throws the system out of sorts as a torpid, sluggish liver. You do not need to be in the blue long, if you know about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for by their direct action on the liver they relieve promptly and prove lastingly beneficial.

Once the liver is right the bowels function regularly and the whole digestive system resumes its work. You feel fine and take a delight in telling others of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This is why this favorite prescription of Dr. Chase is so popular and is found in every store where medicines are sold.

The World's Coal Output

The total coal production of the world, exclusive of brown coal or lignite, may be estimated, from the data available, at 1.16 million tons of 2,240 pounds in 1924, as against 1,180 million tons in 1923 and 1,195 million tons in 1913. According to official calculations of the British Mines Department, as transmitted to the Bankers Trust Company of New York by its Foreign Information Service, the United States led with an output of 512 million tons in 1924 as against about 509 million tons in 1913. The United Kingdom followed with an output of 267 million tons in the later year and 287 million tons in the earlier year. Then followed Germany with 117 million tons in the later year and 187 million tons in the earlier year, while France had an output of 87 million tons in 1924 and about 89½ million tons in 1913. The increase in the French output and the decrease in the German output was due to including in the French figures and excluding from the German figures the output of the Saar district and of Alsace-Lorraine, which in the earlier period were German possessions; and also in the case of Germany because in 1924 the Upper Silesian mines had gone from the possession of Germany into the possession of Poland. The next largest producers of coal in 1924 were Poland, with about 32 million tons, and Belgium with about 23 million tons respectively, the Belgian output being almost identically what it was previous. Comparisons in the case of Poland are difficult because of the changes in her political and geographical situation since 1913, although it is estimated that the output of the territory which is now Poland was about 40½ million tons in 1913.

The coal production of the British Empire in 1924 was 328 million tons, compared with 339 million tons in 1913. It will be noted that the bulk of this output came from Great Britain herself. Great Britain employed in the coal mining industry more persons than any other country in the world, 966,000 of the 1,214,000 so employed were underground workers. In 1923, the latest year for which comparative statistics are available, Great Britain employed 1,203,000 workers in the coal mining industry; the United States employed 861,000; Germany 565,000; France 225,000, and Belgium 160,000. The output per person employed in 1923 was 229 tons for Great Britain, 652 tons for the United States, 193 tons for Germany, 136 tons for France, and 141 tons for Belgium. The United States takes first place with regard to the output per person employed, Great Britain being second, with only about a third as much produced per person employed. In this connection the Mines Department calls attention to the fact that the average output per person in different countries, or at different dates is affected by the accessibility and thickness of the seams, by hours of labor, regularity of employment, and by methods of operation.

The principal countries exporting coal are Great Britain and the United States. From the former 84½ million tons were shipped in 1923 and 84½ million tons in 1924, in addition to coal recorded as shipped for the use of steamers on their foreign voyages, amounting to over 18 million tons in 1923 and over 17½ million in 1924. The United States exports were 26½ million tons in 1923 and 19½ million tons in 1924, and in addition 4½ million and 4 million tons respectively were shipped in these two years for the use of steamers in foreign voyages.

Coal consumption is heaviest in the United States, the British Isles, Germany and France. The largest customers of the United Kingdom are France, Germany and Italy, and large quantities are also shipped to other European countries and to Egypt, the Argentine Republic and Brazil. The United States finds her chief market in Canada.

The average value per ton at the mine head in Great Britain was 18s. 9½d. in 1923 and 18s. 10d. in 1924, comparing with 10s. 1¼d. in 1923 and 6s. 2¾d. in 1913.

The statistics of lignite production show that Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria are the principal producing countries. Germany produced 122 million tons in 1924, Czechoslovakia 20 million, and Hungary and Austria 5½ million and about 3 million tons respectively.

Declares King Constitutionally
DEFEAT OF PRIME MINISTER DOES NOT RETIRE GOVERNMENT.

OTTAWA, Nov. 17.—(Discouraging opinion of Senator George L. Staunton that the defeat of the Minister automatically retired the Government, Alexander Smith, a lawyer, who for years has acted as legislative counsel in both public and private bill legislation before the Senate and House of Commons, today says that the Senator in his opinion sentence intimates a reply to a question.

"This sentence is 'If the Prime Minister does not secure a seat in Parliament before the House opens the Government is no longer in office,' says the Senator. Further, Mr. Smith says, 'The Senator does not argue that because the King was defeated in his riding the Government is therefore forthwith, for evidently in Great Britain and the British Dominions the Prime Minister has been defeated in their own ridings, but secured seats elsewhere.

However, the Senator implies, does not directly say, that King has a seat in Parliament in 1925, for if he does so, (without a seat) during the session, can continue further. This the Senator hints would be unconstitutional. 'The Senator speaks of (dis)signation or disqualification of Premier as dissolving a Government. Now none of these has happened. Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Governor Approves.

"It is evident that to the King has acted in accordance with what former constitutional provisions has suggested, and also in accordance with the wishes of His Excellency Governor-General, and so, as the sentence of the Senator's letter implies, King is, up-to-date, on the ground. 'As to the continuing phase suggested by the Senator, he says that King is exercising a power Parliament is called to determine. 'If Parliament declares in dissolution or otherwise that the Government or policy is what is required, then the Government of Premier King may proceed to resign and repair its party benches securing a seat for King and other long as King and his Government whole or in part, represents or the confidence of the House of Commons, the Governor cannot constitutionally do otherwise than accept advice of King.

New Precedents.
New precedents are made to new conditions, for without new conditions there would be no new precedents, and past precedents established facts of new (part) conditions. 'Should King continue, and time without a seat, as the Senator intimates, public opinion might as to change the view of the factor and King and the Governor General are in accord, so matter not disturbed. Under the constitution the Governor knows nothing but the Premier advises him, but the Government found supplies were forthcoming he might ask the why and the answer would be House refuses to support Mr. polley. The Governor is then to ask King to recommend a successor. This is the polite way of saying must have a new Premier."

"Officials sometimes called 'of the Crown' may seek information from Downing Street, London, and Governor-General may ask views (not necessarily confidential advice) of the home authorities. Montreal Star.

MASON SHOWS HIMSELF TO BE BETTER BOXER.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Harry Mason, British lightweight champion, defeated Johnny Brown, the clever Scottish welterweight, in a twenty round bout at Albert Hall here. The man fought some weeks ago when Brown was given a very unpopular decision, but there was no question about the winner last evening, as Mason was by far the cleverer and wickelier.

VIETNAM DEFEAT CANADIENS BY BRILLIANT FINISH.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—At the conclusion of last night's five to three victory, the local Canadiens hockey team started off a run and forced Victoria back to a defensive, back-checking line to halt the sorties of the visitors. But the rushes failed to bring results and the pressure was lightened. Play started to slow up, it was when it had got to the stage that Victoria was becoming a little less that Joliat went off on one of his periodic trips goalward. He slipped at the defence, but Morenz swung like lightning and, getting back at his stick, took half a dozen quick strokes toward Holmes and let drive at the Victoria goalie. The veteran did not see the puck as it snapped into the net. The goal was just in time, as the first period ended immediately after the face-off.

Then came the second session, half under eastern rules and half under western and the crowd got more thrills. Just when it looked as if Canadiens were going to start on the western style of play with their own goal lead, Frederickson started a westerner's rush, whipped a pass out from behind to Sheppard, who flicked the puck over to Fraser and the big Victoria defence man evened the score. And then came the surprise for the local team's supporters when Morenz stole the stick while supporting the Canadian defence and, dashing down the ice, drove at Holmes to score the goal that put Canadiens again in the lead, the margin coming under the western type of play, a gain which raised the hopes of Canadian fans.

But their anticipations were in vain. Victoria started their last period tricks right early. Two minutes after play has recommenced, Frederickson again started his team goalward. He swerved to the left of the stick, made a short pass to Hart, and the latter whipped one away over to the right, where Walker was alone and unmarked. The "daddy of the poke" had no defence to hurdle as he swept in from the boards and counted the trying goal. Then the parade started. Canadiens were shown signs of fatigue and the better conditioned coast players opened up with their full battery. Hart, Walker and Frederickson again rushed in and this time it was Hart who notched one behind Veziina to give Victoria the lead. Substitutes were rushed to the Victoria front line to keep up the pace and it was Anderson and Sheppard who made the opening for Frederickson to count, and then, to cap the situation, Fraser went through the following defence alone for the visitors' fifth and last goal.

Joliat completed the scoring with a penalty goal for Canadiens.

OTTAWA SENATORS DECISIVELY LICK CHAMPION COUGARS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—By a score of six goals to two, Ottawa Senators inaugurated the local professional hockey season with a victory over Lester Patrick's Victoria Cougars. The Ottawa showed a dash that was unexpected for their first game of the season, and after holding the Cougars to a one-all score in the opening session, went on a scoring spree in the second session and had the score four to one at the second halt. Outscoring the visitors two to one in the final twenty minutes, the Ottawa finished four goals to the good.

White the game was billed as an exhibition, it produced some sparkling hockey and was a real treat, as an opener, to the five or six thousand people who attended. The benefits of the game are given to the Ottawa Humane Society. Their Excellencies, Lord and Lady Byng of Vimy, attended the match and went out on the ice before the commencement of the game to greet the players of both teams. The Governor-General faced the puck to officially open the season and start the game.

On the night's play the better team won. Probably the Cougars are a bit faded after playing three games in four days, but the Senators held them at almost every turn.

WALKER-MILLIGAN BOUT ABANDONED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Failure to agree with the State Athletic Commission on division of the receipts for charity compelled Tex Rickard to abandon plans for bouts between Mickey Walker and Tommy Milligan for the welterweight title and between Jimmy Goodrich and Luis Vincentini for the lightweight championship at the Christmas Fund Show on December 23.

Infamies of the Tcheka

MASTERS EVEN OF LENIN.

By ONE WHO HAS SUFFERED.

"The Tcheka, the twentieth century Inquisition," says M. Popoff, in his introduction to the arresting book "The Tcheka: The Red Inquisition," is a State within the Soviet State, and paralyzes all endeavours of the latter which could bring about a "Europeanization" of Russia.

M. Popoff, a member of the old regime and a correspondent in Moscow for foreign newspapers, writes with a lack of bitterness and an obvious desire to be just that are the more admirable in one who suffered so much at the hands of the "Extraordinary Commission."

The formation of this political secret police—to describe the Tcheka in a phrase—was not approved by all leaders of the October Revolution, says M. Popoff. It must be stated, for the sake of fairness and justice, that among the Soviet leaders and within the Russian Communist Party voices were raised which declared that a Socialist Russia did not need to be foul of its hands by taking over such unclean legacies of the Tsarist tyranny. It is enough to say that the establishment of the Tcheka was fatal to the Soviet leaders. They could not free themselves of the spirit that they had called up.

Dzhershinsky was the moving spirit, and in the early days of the revolution "ruled Russia on his own responsibility" while Lenin had more important work to do. So powerful did the organization grow that Lenin himself was forced to bow to its power, for M. Popoff records that when on one occasion Lenin asked for the release of a certain prisoner, a Tchekist official replied: "Vladimir Ilitch, if you wish it, we will of course release the prisoner. But . . . we shall be forced to see in your action a proof of your want of confidence in us." Lenin, of course, made no further attempt to secure the fulfilment of his wish.

Put to the Torture. M. Popoff was arrested on a trumped up charge of anti-Soviet activities; he was eventually freed, but not before he had been examined twenty-one times, tortured, and subjected to the grossest indignities. He was then light-heartedly told that it was "all a misunderstanding."

His account of the ghastly execution chamber in which those condemned to death were shot by the official executioner is painfully vivid, as are his descriptions of the brutalities and murders of the Tchekists, led by the notorious Dzhershinsky, the man who is the head of the unofficial Government which rules alongside the Kremlin. . . . This bloody, almighty potentate rules over Russia, without possessing in the slightest degree the ambitions or aspirations of a monarch. He is a gigantic, insensible machine in human shape, a machine which an accident of history set moving, and whose wheel swings evenly, powerfully, indifferently, in giant circles, crushing and destroying everything that resists it. . . .

The matter-of-fact and at the same time the bloodiest governmental machine in history—is Felix Dzhershinsky!

The Locarno Pact

During the past week the Locarno Pact was ratified by the British House of Commons and by the German Reichstag. This agreement, to which "Vorwärts" refers as an event of world historic importance and one which may even be a turning point in history, and the Sunday Times, as the necessary addendum to the Treaty of Versailles to make it a sound and acceptable basis of a new Europe, has been achieved by a direct appeal to the common sense of the nations concerned, and by the willingness of each to rely upon the sincerity of the other. Practically all other press comments are of a similar nature.

During the discussion which took place in the House of Commons on Wednesday last, Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald both raised objection to the agreement on the point that the Dominions had not been consulted in reference to the pact, but otherwise they heartily approved of it. The Foreign Secretary, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, in explaining why such was the case stated that the Government had some months ago attempted to hold an Imperial Conference, but that circumstances in the Dominions had made it impossible, and the best he had been able to do was to keep the Dominions fully informed of events. He trusted that it would soon be possible to discuss the matter fully with them, and that in view of the urgency of the European situation they would fully approve both of the course that had been taken and the result of the deliberations.

In referring to the question of Imperial unity and what it consists of, the Westminster Gazette declares that the point is not very clear, "unless, it says, "it consists of a chance for the Dominions to profit by the markets of the Mother Country while excluding her products under tariffs only a little less generous than that applied to other nations."

"It is no doubt would have been better," The Gazette continues, "to have had the Dominions joint signatories of the pact, but would it be maintained that we should not have accepted the olive branch of Germany if the Dominions refused to countenance it? This question must be faced and there appears to be only one answer to it. The Government had to welcome the negotiations and having done so to press them to a successful conclusion."

There cannot be much doubt as to the attitude which the Dominions will adopt with regard to the pact, and if they make objection on account of their not being previously consulted, so much the better. The lack of any definite arrangement whereby their opinions may be heard on such questions is a matter to which consideration must be given, and the Locarno agreement emphasizes the necessity.

It is somewhat remarkable that arrangements have not already been made to celebrate in proper manner an event of such world wide importance.

No doubt this will be done, as it is the only way by which public attention can be called to it and its real significance properly emphasized.

Nfld. Dog and Fox Show

The Nfld. Poultry Association open their annual show next Wednesday. His Excellency and Lady Allardyce unfortunately cannot attend owing to the Court being in mourning for Queen Alexandra. The entries for foxes and dogs will close on Saturday, Nov. 28th and competitors are now busy finalizing their entries with Secretary Stewart Dewing and assistant secretary W. D. McCarter, Royal Bank Bldg. Dr. Bishop, V.S. is in charge of the fox and dog section and will personally supervise their care at the exhibition. The dogs this year will be benched as at regular dog shows. Each animal will have a separate dog stall and be chained there by collar and chain, so that this will be a big improvement over last year's methods. The Association offers specially imported prize ribbons for dogs and foxes as well as silver cups. Competent judges have been appointed and the show promises to be a big success.

Remember Next Sunday

Dear Sir.—As next month will complete the Golden Jubilee of the establishment of the Christian Brothers in Newfoundland, those of us who are their ex-pupils and all Roman Catholics generally, ought to make a special effort Sunday to outdo any other collection in the past.

There are now about twenty of those devoted teachers imparting the blessings of secular and religious education in the schools of St. Patrick's Hall and Holy Cross, therefore, when we contemplate that all the reward they seek is a volunteer response from Roman Catholic citizens on just this one occasion of the year it is plain to see they are asking but a very small recompense indeed.

The yearly upkeep of an equal number of secular school teachers would cost us at the very least thirty thousand dollars so it will be readily estimated how great indeed is the real monetary value of the services rendered by the Christian Brothers, apart altogether from the inestimable value of their annual work in the religious training of so many hundreds of our boys.

Instead of being called upon to contribute thirty thousand dollars all we are asked to do is to give a few thousand, but in common gratitude, I think an extra impetus should inspire us this year to go to at least another one thousand over the best we have given yet.

In order to do this let us keep our memories fresh during the week so that we shall have ample financial reservation made when the call of duty comes.

Yours truly, OLD TIME PUPIL, St. John's, Nov. 25, 1925.

False Pretence Case Continues

The postponed hearing of the charges preferred against Messrs. Snow and Griffin, of Colliers, was continued before Judge Morris in the Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon, when the evidence of Messrs. Costigan, Mahony, Walsh and Mearigan was taken. A witness, named John Murphy, was also called to give evidence, but he failed to appear. The evidence of the latter, with that of Mr. T. A. Hall, Chairman of the Highways Commission, will be heard at the next hearing on Thursday, thus finishing the Crown case.

Magistrate's Court

There was very little business to be dealt with in the lower court this morning. A drunk taken in last night was discharged.

A few civil cases were disposed of. A boarder of the Seaman's Institute who was found on Water Street last night in a nude condition, and taken to the Police Station, was later examined by Dr. Anderson and pronounced mentally insane. The man, it appears, has been drinking heavily of late, and had been kept under close surveillance by the Management of the Institution until last night when he escaped with only his shirt on.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Nov. 23rd.—Kept my bed these 4 days past, having a great cold of my head and in fear of catching the grippe that is now prevalent. My wife does me with many physicks, yet thinks so little of my welfare, that she leaves me alone to play at Bridge.

Little more news of the Civic Election, save that the number of candidates do still increase and God knows how many there will be by nomination day. A public meeting to weed out the candidates, do seem a necessity, yet but one Mr. Dowden, did reply to Mr. Outerbridge's challenge. Of the chances of the women candidates I do hear little, yet by some, are spoken favourably of.

By despatches out of France another French Government is fallen and seems now as much the custom of the country as are revolutions in South America.

My wife talks this day of her Xmas gifts, that she must buy, and would have me give her some money that she may do her buying early. It troubles me that I must needs lay out so much but will know little peace till I give to her what she wants. When I complain of household expense, she grows mighty angry and asks how they may be reduced, when I must have nigh 6 eggs a day and they costing 75 cents the dozen.

Flour Prices Advancing

Wheat prices took a jump of 6 cents per bushel this morning on the stock market. This is equivalent to about 80 cents per barrel on a barrel of flour. It is a curious fact that flour is selling to-day at much below cost of importation and is cheaper retail than wholesale. Flour which is costing $9.00 to import is being sold wholesale at from $9.00 to $9.30 per barrel. It can be obtained at less than $9.00 retail.

Sued for $3.00

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE.

A prominent lawyer appeared before the Magistrate this morning at the suit of a well known furniture merchant of the West End, who sought to recover the sum of $3 for removing a desk from the lawyer's home to his office. The latter opposed payment of fee demanded on principle, and contended that $2 was sufficient remuneration. The plaintiff said the distance was a quarter of a mile, and two men and a horse were employed three-quarters of an hour on the job. He was not present himself. The defendant insisted at the removal and in his evidence said the job took no more than fifteen minutes as the distance was about 250 yards. He paid into court the sum of $2 and claimed that the $3 demanded was extortion. His Honor agreed and awarded the plaintiff $2.

G.W.V.A. Hippodrome and Circus Show

AN IMMENSE SUCCESS.

A very large gathering attended the G.W.V.A. Circus at the Prince's Risk yesterday afternoon and last night. The unanimous opinion was that the performances were the best seen here for years. The arrangements were carried out without a hitch and promptly at the hour set down for the opening, 8.30 the first act was called. The "Pattersons" were said to be serial "artists" and, from the performance they gave, the name is well deserved. Many difficult stunts were gone through whilst through them all they introduced a vein of comedy which tended to make the spectators feel that in spite of their tears for the safety of the performers, there was no danger after all. An exhibition of hand-balancing by Professor Ringling, showed that he was a master. He first performed on a stand and then gradually built it up, finally standing on one hand with a pot of flowers on his head and two vessels filled with a liquid held with his teeth. Faust and Faust proved immensely popular with the spectators. On the following ladder they performed tricks and went through manoeuvres that were thrilling to witness. Mademoiselle Marie who performs feats on a ladder and on the rope was a wonder and astonishment. The most difficult actions were gone through with an ease that showed the high state of proficiency which this performer has attained, and when, hanging out of a rope with her feet only and her head down, she sang in a pleasing voice, the audience loudly applauded her. The pair of Ethiopian ponies took the fancy of those present immediately. Farrel, the contortionist was the next introduced and his acts caused one to wonder how the human body could be so contorted. The latter swinging performance of Miss Mae Thomas which was the next act was also splendidly executed and very popular. Miss Thomas was in splendid form and by her cheery manner won much approval. Thrilling feats on the aerial ladders were gone through with an ease that showed that they are masters, and when as a closing feat the lady performer fell from a high altitude, only to be brought up a couple of feet from the floor, it caused a thrill through the whole crowd. When "Blighy" appeared on the stage he looked the picture of gentleness, and when $10.00 was offered to anyone who would ride him for three minutes, it looked easy money although none of those present made an attempt. So much had been said beforehand of "Alfredo" the wire walker, that his act was expected to be the feature of the entire performance and it was not a disappointment. From the moment when he appeared and held a long bar in his hand, and walked with apparent unconcern on the wire, those below were amazed at the performance as he in turn slipped from his footing only to bring up again as if nothing had happened, undressed himself, stood on his head, lay full length and then returned to the starting point with his head covered, he had the individual attention of the thousands of eyes in the rink. This was the last act of the evening's vaudeville. The Circus will be continued every afternoon and night for the next two weeks and it promises to receive hearty support. Amongst the thousands who thronged the galleries and crowded the space on the main floor surrounding the platform were many distinguished visitors. The Prime Minister Hon. W. S. Monroe occupied the Governor's box with the members of the Executive of the G.W.V.A. His Excellency the Governor had signified his intention of being present, but informed the Veterans yesterday that he could not do so owing to the fact that Government House was in mourning for the death of the late Dowager Queen Alexandra.

New Mail Car

A new mail car for the cross country service has just been completed at the Government Railway car shops and will be placed on the route in a few days. The car, which was formerly used as a baggage and mail car, has been converted into an all-mail, and its whole lay-out is similar to those used on the Canadian Railway. It is equipped with long desks and pigeon hole distributing boxes, besides space provided for storage, while every facility is provided for the mail clerks for assorting purposes. The introduction of such an up-to-date mail car is a step in the right direction, and it will be the means of relieving the congestion that existed in the past.

Why Oscar is at the Top

I had a chat the other day with Oscar of the Waldorf. This Swiss immigrant and ex-waiter has for years been the most famous hotel man in the world. He started at the Waldorf when it was opened thirty-two years ago as head waiter, rose to be George Boldt's right-hand man, and for years has been running the whole establishment. Oscar doesn't look a day older than he did twenty years ago. I remarked on this and asked him how he did it. "Do you take life easy?" I asked, although knowing full well that he doesn't. Said Oscar: "When I arrive in the morning I hang up my hat and coat and I never touch them until fourteen to eighteen hours later. I never work less than fourteen hours and very often eighteen. I was never away from the hotel for more than three days in all my years' service until I made a business-and-pleasure trip to Europe last year—I'm going again next year in the interest of the international hotel business." Think of it. Fourteen to eighteen hours work every day. Yet Oscar thrives on it. More difficult though the task of running a large hotel is, Oscar probably gets as much out of life as anybody. He has won thousands of cordial friends, from kings and presidents to raw immigrants. All through his life he has experienced the joy that springs from being incessantly courteous and desirous of serving others. Isn't there inspiration for the rest of us in the knowledge that a poor, foreign-speaking waiter could come to this country and by diligence in business, kindness to all and a genuine spirit of helpfulness earn fame, fortune, health, happiness and legions of grateful friends.—B. C. Forbes in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.)

Wall Street's Boom

IS IT GOING ON OR ENDING? Painstaking investigation into stock market conditions and prospects has elicited the following from the highest banking, brokerage and business circles: W. C. Durant is credited with conducting the largest-scale speculation ever hatched by any one operator in the history of Wall Street. His activities embrace not one or two but quite a number of different stocks and, it is declared, he both buys and sells with unprecedented freedom during the marking-up process. His brokers are said to be allowed much discretion in determining what to buy on balance and what to sell on balance. Durant's paper profits are estimated at millions, but how his whole speculative jamboree will end is a question on which guesses differ. The present disposition is to minimize such unfavorable developments as the ugly anthracite strike, the sharp drop in cotton prices, the recent declines in all grains, including a serious fall in corn. Little or nothing is said of the release which inevitably must come sooner or later in the building boom. The abnormal speculation in real estate is brushed aside as a natural corollary of national prosperity. While a few expect an early and sweeping downward movement in stocks, the major opinion is that the highest circles is that the boom in certain motor, public utility, mercantile and other stocks will shortly culminate but will be followed by a switching of bullish operations to rails, oils and coppers which have not been unduly marked up. The recent one-sidedness of the market is revealed by the fact that, in the last week of October, ten out of the twenty most active issues were motors. And over one-third of the week's abnormal turnover was concentrated in these twenty issues.—B. C. Forbes in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.)

Calling a Halt to Cursing

A campaign against profanity has been started in Italy under the leadership of King Victor Emmanuel, according to a dispatch from Rome, and the Minister of Instruction, Prof. Pietro Fedele, has directed that lectures on the subject be delivered in the schools. It is not known here, of course, how great is the need for such a campaign in Italy; but it certainly behooves us, we are told, to take a leaf out of her book. No people, with the possible exception of the Australians, says the Little Rock Arkansas Gazette, are so profane as the people of the United States. In fact, "We are notable, and long have been, as a nation of 'cussers,' and now we are developing lady experts in this line.—To-day 'damn' is entirely innocuous and 'hell' is innocent, at least so far as language is concerned. "Profanity has been one of our greatest outputs for many years, and naturally we have developed 'cussers' of wide reputation. One of these, a famous newspaper man, has been known to divide a word with profanity. He declared once that he would fix the 'responsibility' for a certain crime if it took all summer. Nearly every town has its profanity champion. "If the King of Italy's campaigners are successful in Italy, they should be imported to America." It is difficult now, observes the Pittsburgh Sun, to find a play in which are not used words that formerly were not uttered in polite society. The Sun records: "There have been some plays in Pittsburgh this year that had a curse in nearly every line, and it has been said that they correctly mirrored life. In one drama foul words were used which no one would have dared to utter in public a few years ago. The excuse given for profanity on the stage is that it is realism. But that hardly excused the use of nasty words that would be frowned upon in the drawing-room. Unless the growing indifference to profanity is halted, these unpleasant expressions now so commonplace in the theatre will be heard in the home, too. "There are those who fancy that no one sincerely objects to swearing. But that is a mistaken notion: There is something to think about in the jocular sign which one sometimes sees hanging in offices: 'Please don't swear. There may be a gentleman present.'"

What Burst Stock Booms of Other Years?

The city's best Operatic Artists are appearing at the Madrigal Singers' Operatic Concert Thursday next at the Synod Hall.—Nov 24, 21. The question is naturally suggested by the market of 1925, of which many conservative watchers have for weeks been insisting that speculation for the rise could not possibly continue much longer at such a pace. Yet of which no one is able confidently to predict what will halt or upset it. Probably the majority of experienced Wall Street men will agree in recalling that the same question was asked, and with the same perplexity, at some stage of every really spectacular bull movement in our history. That being so, it would seem that the answer ought now to be apparent from the known incidents of the days when those older speculative manias terminated. Taking all the episodes together, it is a reasonable inference from this side of Wall Street's history that every overdone speculative boom has collapsed either because it had exhausted available credit facilities, or else because of sudden conviction among the speculators that the lead had become too heavy and that prices had utterly parted company with intrinsic values. When the market had arrived at either of these conditions, something usually happened—often of an entirely unexpected nature—to give the signal for disorderly retreat.—Alexander Dana Noyes, financial editor, The New York Times, in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.)

I had a chat the other day with Oscar of the Waldorf. This Swiss immigrant and ex-waiter has for years been the most famous hotel man in the world. He started at the Waldorf when it was opened thirty-two years ago as head waiter, rose to be George Boldt's right-hand man, and for years has been running the whole establishment. Oscar doesn't look a day older than he did twenty years ago. I remarked on this and asked him how he did it. "Do you take life easy?" I asked, although knowing full well that he doesn't. Said Oscar: "When I arrive in the morning I hang up my hat and coat and I never touch them until fourteen to eighteen hours later. I never work less than fourteen hours and very often eighteen. I was never away from the hotel for more than three days in all my years' service until I made a business-and-pleasure trip to Europe last year—I'm going again next year in the interest of the international hotel business." Think of it. Fourteen to eighteen hours work every day. Yet Oscar thrives on it. More difficult though the task of running a large hotel is, Oscar probably gets as much out of life as anybody. He has won thousands of cordial friends, from kings and presidents to raw immigrants. All through his life he has experienced the joy that springs from being incessantly courteous and desirous of serving others. Isn't there inspiration for the rest of us in the knowledge that a poor, foreign-speaking waiter could come to this country and by diligence in business, kindness to all and a genuine spirit of helpfulness earn fame, fortune, health, happiness and legions of grateful friends.—B. The question is naturally suggested by the market of 1925, of which many conservative watchers have for weeks been insisting that speculation for the rise could not possibly continue much longer at such a pace. Yet of which no one is able confidently to predict what will halt or upset it. Probably the majority of experienced Wall Street men will agree in recalling that the same question was asked, and with the same perplexity, at some stage of every really spectacular bull movement in our history. That being so, it would seem that the answer ought now to be apparent from the known incidents of the days when those older speculative manias terminated. Taking all the episodes together, it is a reasonable inference from this side of Wall Street's history that every overdone speculative boom has collapsed either because it had exhausted available credit facilities, or else because of sudden conviction among the speculators that the lead had become too heavy and that prices had utterly parted company with intrinsic values. When the market had arrived at either of these conditions, something usually happened—often of an entirely unexpected nature—to give the signal for disorderly retreat.—Alexander Dana Noyes, financial editor, The New York Times, in Forbes Magazine (N.Y.)

Calling a Halt to Cursing A campaign against profanity has been started in Italy under the leadership of King Victor Emmanuel, according to a dispatch from Rome, and the Minister of Instruction, Prof. Pietro Fedele, has directed that lectures on the subject be delivered in the schools. It is not known here, of course, how great is the need for such a campaign in Italy; but it certainly behooves us, we are told, to take a leaf out of her book. No people, with the possible exception of the Australians, says the Little Rock Arkansas Gazette, are so profane as the people of the United States. In fact, "We are notable, and long have been, as a nation of 'cussers,' and now we are developing lady experts in this line.—To-day 'damn' is entirely innocuous and 'hell' is innocent, at least so far as language is concerned. "Profanity has been one of our greatest outputs for many years, and naturally we have developed 'cussers' of wide reputation. One of these, a famous newspaper man, has been known to divide a word with profanity. He declared once that he would fix the 'responsibility' for a certain crime if it took all summer. Nearly every town has its profanity champion. "If the King of Italy's campaigners are successful in Italy, they should be imported to America." It is difficult now, observes the Pittsburgh Sun, to find a play in which are not used words that formerly were not uttered in polite society. The Sun records: "There have been some plays in Pittsburgh this year that had a curse in nearly every line, and it has been said that they correctly mirrored life. In one drama foul words were used which no one would have dared to utter in public a few years ago. The excuse given for profanity on the stage is that it is realism. But that hardly excused the use of nasty words that would be frowned upon in the drawing-room. Unless the growing indifference to profanity is halted, these unpleasant expressions now so commonplace in the theatre will be heard in the home, too. "There are those who fancy that no one sincerely objects to swearing. But that is a mistaken notion: There is something to think about in the jocular sign which one sometimes sees hanging in offices: 'Please don't swear. There may be a gentleman present.'"

At 8.15 a concert consisting of vocal and instrumental numbers will be given by some of the best talent in the city. The Ladies' Aid Society have been working most assiduously for weeks past making preparations for the annual event, and as an appreciation for their untiring efforts we predict that the sale will be largely attended, all the stocks disposed of, and a cordy amount realized. Queen Mother of Great Britain

(The Canadian Press, Toronto, Ont.)

"Sea-kings' daughter from over the sea" However harkened Tennyson's lyric became with the passing of time the affection of the people of England towards Alexandra of Denmark only increased as the years went by. Through all the long and gracious life which she spent among them she received a like affectionate and cordial greeting as on that day in March, 1863, when she landed to become the bride of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales.

Alexandra Caroline Maria Charlotte Louise Julia—to give her late Majesty's baptismal name in full—was the eldest daughter of Prince (afterwards King) Christian of Denmark. The Prince of Wales was 20 years of age when he first met Alexandra of Denmark. His bride-to-be was seventeen. That was in 1861, two years before the wedding. How the alliance was brought about makes an interesting chapter. The widowed Queen Victoria, in this matter as in many others was vastly influenced by her uncle, King Leopold of Belgium. This excited adviser to the Queen of England prepared a list of ladies of royal rank in Europe who were eligible to become the wife of the Heir-Apparent to the British throne. Even in those days there was evident in England a distrust of making matches between members of our own royal family and of the reigning houses of German States. Prussia in particular was showing an arrogantly ambitious bearing, and was betraying a sinister attitude towards Denmark concerning the possession of Schleswig-Holstein. King Leopold's list of eligible brides for Albert Edward was naturally scrutinized most thoroughly by Queen Victoria and her confidants. The German princesses who headed the list were eventually ruled out. Alexandra of Denmark stood fifth. In the summer of 1861 there was a meeting between the royal pair, a meeting which was repeated more than once. Queen Victoria herself contrived to meet Alexandra at Coburg. The Danish princess, with her youth, and her natural grace and beauty, enraptured the critical widowed Queen of England and the announcement of the engagement soon followed. It was stated that "this marriage is based entirely upon mutual affection and the merits of the Princess." Undoubtedly this was absolutely true, but whether there was not something of a diplomatic fiction about the further announcement that the betrothal "is in no way connected with political considerations" is open to doubt. As has been said, Prussia was already adopting a menacing tone towards Denmark, and it is certain that the reigning house took the news of the engagement with ill grace.

However, the rest of the world heard of the alliance with entire satisfaction. In Great Britain the news was received with feeling of the keenest pleasure. These feelings were demonstrated to the full when the royal yacht, with the young bride-elect aboard, put into Gravesend on March 7th, 1863, three days before the wedding. The Princess was met by the Prince at Gravesend. Together they made the journey through London amidst such a demonstration of delight as the capital had not witnessed for at least a generation. The unaffected graciousness of the young Princess, the youth both of herself and of the Heir-Apparent, the knowledge that the future Queen of England came from a royal house where the rule of life was one of service and not one of self-aggrandisement—all these drew the hearts of the people of Britain to the bride of Albert Edward.

They were married at St. George's Chapel, Windsor, on March 10th. It is interesting to recall that the wedding took place in Lent, and a special dispensation for its performance was granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury. There had been some talk of the ceremony taking place at Westminster Abbey or St. Paul's. On this point, however, Queen Victoria would not be gainsaid. Her Majesty insisted upon preserving, as far as possible, the seclusion which she maintained for so many years after the death of the Prince Consort, and the wedding was therefore conducted under comparatively simple and quiet conditions such as were possible at Windsor. The following note concerning the ceremony by Bishop Samuel Wilberforce is particularly interesting in view of the fact that...

"The wedding was certainly the most moving sight I ever saw. The Queen above looking down added such a wonderful chord of deep feeling to all the lighter notes of joyfulness and show. Everyone behaved quite their best. The Princess, calm, feeling, self-possessed. The Prince with more depth of manner than ever before. The little Prince William of Prussia between his two little uncles to keep his quiet, both of whom he—the Crown Princess afterwards told me—bit on the bare highland legs whenever they touched him to keep him quiet."

"The 'little Prince William' afterwards became the Kaiser, and one of his two 'little uncles' was the Duke of Connaught. The other was the Duke of Edinburgh, another son of Victoria, who died many years ago."

The royal couple took up their residence at Marlborough House, which only a year or two earlier had been purchased by the nation as a residence for the Heir-Apparent. Here it may be mentioned that it was some years afterwards that the then Prince of Wales acquired his Norfolk estate of Sandringham, where he lived the life of a country squire, although on many occasions after his accession he received Ministers, Ambassadors and other distinguished visitors there. Sandringham was King Edward's own property, and upon his death Queen Alexandra continued to enjoy the use both of Marlborough House and of Sandringham House. Now that Queen Alexandra has passed away it remains to be seen what ultimate disposition King Edward made of his Norfolk property. The future of Marlborough House presumably lies within the discretion of Parliament. Throughout Queen Alexandra's widowhood their present Majesties, King George and Queen Mary, continued to make use of York Cottage, Sandringham, as they did when Prince and Princess of Wales.

To follow in detail the life of Queen Alexandra from the days of her marriage would merely be to record her participation in one good work after another. The hospitals, the condition of the outcast, the care of children—in all these and many other philanthropic enterprises she displayed an unceasing active interest. One wing of the great London hospital, in the East end of the City, is called the Alexandra Wing in commemoration of its opening by her late Majesty a year after her marriage. There are hospitals all over the country which bear similar titles. The position which the Danish Princess had to fill in this country was one of extreme delicacy for her own station, exalted though it was, and naturally and properly overshadowed by the personality of Queen Victoria. The latter, as already indicated, persisted in her determination in maintaining a strict seclusion in her widowhood. It fell to the Princess of Wales, therefore, to fulfill many duties which in other circumstances might not have come her way. In her relation with people of any degree she always displayed the same captivating qualities. Her own personal friendships were invariably bestowed upon men and women of high-minded outlook. This is not to say that Queen Alexandra did not enjoy life on its animated side. At Epsom, on Aintree races, for instance, Queen Alexandra was always one of the most eager spectators. With King Edward she visited Ireland three times, the first occasion being in 1865, the second in 1885, and the third after King Edward's accession, in 1903. All three visits were pronouncedly successful, the graciousness and charm of the royal Consort largely contributing to this happy outcome.

Only once was the life of Queen Alexandra overcast by a shadow, and that was in the hands of an assassin. In 1900 their Majesties were travelling on the Continent, and at the Gare du Nord at Brussels a Belgian youth of 15, named Sipido fired twice at the royal couple. One bullet lodged in the boarding of the railway car between the Prince and the Princess. Neither of them was visibly alarmed. The would-be assassin proved merely to be hunting for notoriety.

A letter of Queen Alexandra's has been preserved which illustrates her sentiments towards a certain form of public function. The Prince of Wales, as he then was, suffered a dangerous illness in 1872. Upon his recovery a Service of National Thanksgiving was proposed to be held in St. Paul's Cathedral. To this idea Queen Victoria was greatly opposed, but her Ministers and other advisers persisted in reasoning with her Majesty on the matter. The Princess of Wales wrote to the Queen: "I quite understand your feelings about public thanksgiving. I do not like it myself, for it seems to me almost to be making too much of an outward show of the most sacred and solemn feelings of one's heart, and I quite agree a simpler and more private service would be more in accordance with one's own wishes. But then, on the other hand, the whole nation has taken such a public share in our sorrow. It has been so entirely one with us in our grief, that it may perhaps feel it has a kind of claim to join with us now in a public and universal thanksgiving." These views ultimately prevailed and the great service duly took place at St. Paul's.

Undoubtedly the heaviest grief which ever befell Queen Alexandra was the death in 1892 of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, her eldest son, who of course stood next in succession to the crown after the then Prince of Wales, Prince Eddie, or Prince Albert Victor, as he was earlier known, at the time of his fatal illness was within a few days of his 28th birthday. Only a week or so earlier his engagement had been announced to Princess Victoria Mary of Teck—now Queen Mary. With his present Majesty, King George, he served some years in the Royal Navy. The Duke of Clarence was never robust from birth. In that winter influenza took a terrible grip of England, and the Duke of Clarence was among its victims. The Princess of Wales was overwhelmed with sorrow, nevertheless her own grief did not make her unmindful of the bereavement of others. Cardinal Manning died the same day as the Duke, and Charles Spurgeon, the noted Baptist Divine, died a few days later. To the families of both the Princess sent her personal condolences. Throughout her long life, indeed, she took particular care to convey her sentiments whenever there passed away anyone whose kindred could expect her sympathy. Up to her last days the memorial wreaths which she caused to be sent invariably bore an inscription in her own hand.

Queen Alexandra's ever-youthful appearance, which continued almost to the time of her death, was a matter of wonder to the world over. "She might have been 28," declared Lord Morley after meeting her Majesty in 1910. Queen Alexandra was then 68! This appearance of youthfulness lasted for many years after. Not merely was it observable in the facial expression of her Majesty, but her figure generally, almost to the last, was that of a woman in the prime of life. Queen Alexandra's one physical drawback was her deafness, a misfortune which overtook her comparatively early.

After King Edward's death Queen Alexandra lived largely in retirement at Sandringham, although for some years she spent a portion of the summer in London. Her constant companion during her widowhood was Princess Victoria, the only child of King Edward and Queen Alexandra who never married. Once a year, though, for several years after her royal husband's death, Queen Alexandra again received, as in earlier days, the joyous exclamations of the people of London. Queen Alexandra's Rose Day—the first general "tag day" of which this country ever had experience—was instituted in 1912. Everybody was exhorted to buy an artificial rose in compliment to Queen Alexandra and in aid of the hospitals. Everybody complied. But the crowning event of the day—repeated for several years following—was when the widowed Queen drove through London to greet the flower sellers and their customers, and when she received the salutations of high and low, satiated as hearty and sincere as those which heralded her progress through the capital when she entered it as a bride-elect 50 years earlier.

Little Jack Rabbit by David Cory. When Mr. Happy Sun smiled down on the little white bungalow in the dear Old Bramble Patch, he found Lady Love up and about in the tiny kitchen. She had arisen early, for goodness' sake! you remember how many people had spent the night in her pretty white bungalow: Uncle Lucky, Dr. Quack and Peter Pig. And all on account of Mr. Wicked Wolf, who had almost upset the donkey egg on his way to her little white house. Yes, it was all on account of this wicked wolf that poor Uncle Lucky, with his sprained pinkie toe, Dr. Quack and Peter Pig, to say nothing of Donkey Longears, who had been safely locked in the Little Red Barn for the night, had been forced to stay over until the next day. Lady Love knew they would all be hungry by breakfast time, so this careful little housekeeper had hopped out of bed, even before Mr. Happy Sun had shaken off his yellow night cap, to prepare the breakfast. ### Boosting British Goods

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 23.—(Canadian Press Despatch)—An exhortation to Lord mayors, mayors, and the heads of other public bodies throughout the country to urge their people to buy British goods in the period immediately preceding Christmas has been issued by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, President of the Board of Trade, and by Mr. Neville Chamberlain, Minister of Health. It is suggested that in each centre there should be held a British Shopping Week, when home and empire goods should be prominently brought before the notice of customers.

"By increasing their purchases of British goods in the home market (the statement says) they will reduce the volume of foreign imports and improve the trade balance, thereby enabling this country to invest more in the development of new markets. By increasing the purchases of Empire goods in the home market they will enable the countries of the British Empire to buy more from the Mother Country.

"Every man and woman in Britain can help in these ways. Every purchase helps; and if all join in a common effort the stimulus to British trade, Home and Imperial, will be great and immediate. In many quarters people have already shown that they appreciate the need and the possibilities. But there can be no doubt that a national movement to help British trade by buying British goods, will be greatly quickened if a suitable occasion which will focus attention at once upon the need and the opportunity for meeting it."

Almost Felt He Had Died

WITHOUT KNOWING IT WHEN HE VIEWED CORPSE.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 23.—The fictional adventure of the man who stopped a funeral to view what proved to be his own corpse, was rivalled in real life when W. Edwin Russel, of Louisville, went to Indianapolis recently to view the body of "Edgar Russel, of St. Louis."

The resemblance between the dead man, who had been identified as the Louisville man, was so startling that for a moment the latter said he was almost persuaded he had died without knowing it.

W. Edwin Russel, an antique dealer, notified of his "death" by the police on the instance of the Indianapolis authorities, who had been advised of the "identity" of the body by an acquaintance of the Louisville man, was so puzzled that he decided to view the body. He believed he would find only a superficial resemblance but found that the man, who had committed suicide, November 7, under the name of Edgar Russel, was almost his exact counterpart, even to a shortened left leg.

"It almost floored me. If I had owned a quart I'd have drowned it on the spot," Russel said in relating the experience.

The real identity of the body may never be learned, as all identifying marks had been cut from the man's clothing.

Jury Amendment Bill

BALDWIN GIVEN BIG MAJORITY.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—(C.P.)—The Government to-day in the House of Commons secured an amendment to the Criminal Justice Bill under which if any juror in a criminal trial dies or is otherwise incapacitated the trial will continue with not less than 10 jurors, provided both sides in the case give written consent thereto.

Under the present conditions a trial must begin afresh if a juror engaged in it is incapacitated.

H. B. Grotian, Conservative member for South West Hull, prophesied that the amendment would prove unworkable and he quizzed the judge of the Scarborough Quarter Sessions to the same effect. No answer, he said, would agree to being tried by less than 12 jurors and thus lessening his chances of the jury disagreeing.

He suggested that if 14 jurors were empanelled in a criminal case this would allow for the possible illness of one or two and still permit of the securing of a verdict from the necessary 12.

The Government's proposal, however, secured a majority of 151, the vote being 245 against 97.

Hydro-Electric Development in Britain

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press Despatch)—England is gradually awakening to the possibilities of Hydro-electrical development. The River Severn is one of the first of the great waterways with which the Government is concerning itself in this connection. A special committee has been appointed to consider a project for the construction of a barrage across the river with a view to harnessing the tidal waves.

Plans for an extended scheme of national electrification have been before the Cabinet for some time. Experts report there are no natural obstacles in the way of hydro-electrical generation on the Severn. The cost of building a barrage has been estimated at not less than fifteen millions sterling.

Majestic Highliners Win Round of Applause

MEM-O-REA AND FILM FEATURE HIGHLY APPRECIATED.

Another large audience greeted Mem-O-REA and the other special features at the Majestic Theatre last night. The show which started at 8 o'clock, opened with the photoplay "Drums of Jeopardy" starring the celebrated Elaine Hammerstein and a noted cast. It is an extraordinary clever production full of action, thrills and sentiment all of which is combined in a remarkably attractive love story.

Mem-O-REA then took the stage and challenged contradiction of his claim that he can truthfully read the thoughts of any human being in his presence and afterwards reveal same. Last night he went further than on any previous evening to convince the audience and in doing so told several patrons matters which concerned them greatly. The mystery marvel is indeed a genius.

Rita Johnson, who enjoys a reputation as a dancer clearly demonstrated her ability last night. She is designated the International Champion dancer and her performance fully justified her claim to that title.

It is only by the special request of hundreds that Mem-O-REA and Miss Johnson have decided to remain another few days. They will appear again to-night, also to-morrow and Wednesday afternoon and night.

The interest created in the Majestic Theatre Pony Contest is best judged by the many thousands of votes which are recorded daily. This contest, though unique is certainly the most popular ever arranged in this city for some time. The question now asked everywhere is "Who is going to win the Shetland Pony."

26 Policemen Escort

PRINCE RAJAH II FROM WHARF TO HIS HOTEL AT NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Twenty-six detectives and uniformed policemen yesterday officiated at the birth of New York's newest mystery. In class ranks, as close as the automobiles and motor cycles would permit, they escorted from the Hoboken dock of the German Lloyd liner Berlin to the Hotel Vanderbilt a personage they had been ordered to protect against possible assault. They knew nothing about him save that he merited a larger police escort than any other visitor since the Prince of Wales and King Albert of the Belgians.

At the Vanderbilt, the personage was more communicative. Having been saved from the undivided danger, he warmed up to interviewers and announced: "First, that he was Rakhid Montram Pasha, an Arabian; second, that the Custom agents had opened his luggage labelled Prince Rajah II and had appraised his collection of old paintings, furniture and rare jewels at five million dollars, and third, that he would offer his objects of art for sale to any one having good money."

As he bowed his callers out with Oriental finesse, he requested to be remembered to all who had contributed towards making his American debut so noteworthy, and the only part of the mystery that remained unsolved was how he had convinced police headquarters that an antique dealer needed a police escort.

The Locarno Pact

Berlin.—In a speech which was broadcasted on the importance of the Locarno treaties, Dr. Stresemann, the German Foreign Minister, said that the chief German delegates would support the acceptance of the treaties of Locarno if they opened a way to the reconstruction and liberation of Germany.

After referring to the suggestion of Marshal Foch and M. Clemenceau at the Versailles conference that the Rhine should form the western frontier of Germany, Dr. Stresemann emphasized the fact that France, by means of the conclusion of the Security Pact, had finally renounced this policy and declared that she would never again desire to approach upon German territory with military force. He added that France appreciated the fact that Great Britain, as a guarantor of the Pact, would come to the aid of Germany if she (France) did not adhere to its stipulations.

"We have," Dr. Stresemann asserted, "no reason to doubt the honourable intentions of Great Britain to abide by the treaty. The fact that Great Britain, the former ally of France, has solemnly undertaken to protect Germany against a French attack with her entire sea and land forces is of the greatest political significance."—Reuter.

The Queen Doing Her Christmas Buying Early

LONDON, Nov. 17.—London is doing its Christmas shopping early. The Queen has set the style and Londoners are adopting it to the comfort of storekeepers, postmen and ultimately of the shoppers themselves. The Queen is an ardent shopper and one of the earliest Christmas shoppers in the world. She begins shopping in a small way in January, picking up odds and ends in antique shops and department stores she happens to visit, but it is not until mid-October that her Christmas shopping campaign emerges from the casual into an energetic search for Christmas presents.

'Unwanted Child' Immense Success

BALFOUR STOCK CO. IN GREAT DRAMA AT CASINO. Unlike this usual run of plays is "The Unwanted Child," in that the heart throbs, laughs and thrills are so cleverly interwoven that its appeal to the emotions is intense. "The best play of the season" is the general opinion of those who attended last night's performance, and, as anticipated a crowded house greeted the production. THE PLAY—The play is one of these strikingly unusual productions which commence quickly and gradually work up to a tremendous climax. Tears and laughter are never far apart and clever skill shown by the performers holds the fixed attention of its audience. The settings and atmosphere are all that a spectator of drama could possibly desire and the interpretation is brilliantly worked out.

Vox Humana

AN IDEAL OF ST. JAMES.

Mr. Speaker, Sir.—The man on his feet, there in the middle of the lower Opposition bench is about to address the house; all eyes are focussed on him, the nervous murmuring which heralded the orator has ceased, and a general shuffling, then silence, illustrates that the House has figuratively dug itself in, prepared to dose through at least an hour's speech. This promise to simple and consists of laying back, as far as possible, and pressing one's heels against the opposite partition just where it meets the floor.

The speaker is a newly elected member, bringing with him a provincial reputation, and this is his maiden speech. Old members with the experience of many maiden efforts, predict one of those long winded, carefully prepared, statistical orations; and the subject dealing, as it does with some aspect of Unemployment does not seem very inspiring nor at all delectable to listen to. Surely, they think, all the ground has been covered, can there be anything new to hear on a subject over which men like Asquith, MacDonald and Baldwin have exhausted themselves? Silence, and a cathedral like solemnity prevails; up there in the various non member galleries, the Press, the Distinguished Visitors and the Strangers are alert to catch every word uttered; below the six hundred members have been hushed as it were to sleep.

Three o'clock booms out from Big Ben, and as if by some signal, the dusky assembly hall is invaded by a set of multi-colored rays of light, coming through the huge stained glass windows, and falling like a lime light thrown from the wings of some stage, on the speaking member, and throwing in bold relief his slender figure against the monotony of the surroundings.

"Mr. Speaker, Sir."—The first note has been struck, and the melody depends solely on the efforts of the man himself.

He approaches his subject warily, working up his theme, as a chess master might the opening move, of his game; proves his theories and concedes his assumptions with logic.

He does more, for beyond the fact that his speech, as a speech is sound, his voice is the greatest factor in his favour, the clear, pure, powerful voice of a cultured man, the voice of Irving or a Tree, conveying an indefinable charm to the ear, charm, that word so hard to define, yet so easily recognized. There is nothing forced or "put on," about the tone of the voice, the speaker does not seek to create effect with it, it is natural to him, his own voice which he uses every day and at all times.

The House is taking notice, the sense of the speech does not matter whatever, it is good, sound, feasible but it is also quite usual. Birkenhead might have made such a speech, or Balfour or Austen Chamberlain, but none of them could have delivered it like this. Lloyd George or Churchill can create feeling and enthusiasm, but they would use other methods, which would resemble more the actor than the orator.

English, our mother tongue, forgers deride the, but the stiff and incapable of expression, but they are wrong. The English as spoken by this man is wonderful, flashing here and there like a rapier, raising the feelings he wants, producing the sensation he requires, and the awe he inspires.

Now the House is silent, but one can sense, with the rising voice, the throbbing of a huge heart, increasing, increasing, until suddenly all the pent up passion has loosed itself, in a storm of applause. All but the golden voice is forgotten, personal injuries, party feeling, national crises, all are forgotten; an Orpheus has charmed his listeners; they only desire to listen.

It is magic, hypnotism or what you will, it is Caruso singing or Kreisler conjuring music at the Albert Hall. It is the Sermon on the Mount.

Reaching his main point through a mass of facts and phrases, the orator elaborates, much as the spider spins her web, never above himself, leaving no room for criticism, advancing slowly and sweeping all possible counter argument aside in his advance.

The end of the speech has come and the note of climax is reached in a spirit of triumph, like the top note of a singer before she bows and steps back to allow the curtain to fall.

Silence holds ten, twenty, thirty seconds, then with a noise of thunder, and from friend or political adversary comes the applause, all around one hears the members talking, "another Mozart," "a New Disraeli,"—neither a new personality has arrived at historic Westminster.

ing, bearing an appearance not unlike that of the quiet sort of alehouse which was more common half a century ago than now. This is the office of the Morning Advertiser, the third oldest newspaper in London. The Advertiser has just been celebrating the 110th anniversary of its removal to Fleet Street. The paper first saw the light over 130 years ago. Of all daily papers now existing the Morning Advertiser possesses surely the most curious constitution. It is owned by the Incorporated Society of Licensed Victuallers, the most powerful of all organizations connected with the liquor trade. Every member of the Society and this means practically every licensee in the country is required to be a regular subscriber to the Advertiser. The whole of the profits of the paper are devoted to the Society's charities; the orphan school at Slough is maintained in this way at a cost of £15,000 a year. Very naturally the Advertiser devotes itself largely to matters connected with "The Trade." Independent in general politics it mostly concerns itself with a reasonable defence against undue interference of those engaged in the sale of intoxicants. Until two years ago the paper was almost entirely set-up by hand, but a number of improvements have since been effected.

Factors in Raising Appreciation of Music

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 15.—(Canadian Press Despatch)—The gramophone, the piano-player, the broadcasting apparatus—all these are raising the appreciation in England of good music, according to Sir Landon Ronald, Principal of the Guildhall School of Music, and one of the most eminent musicians of this generation.

Whether the actual patronage of concerts is increasing Sir Landon is doubtful. Sir Landon has just celebrated the completion of fifteen years as Principal of the Guildhall School, which is under the control and maintenance by the City of London Corporation. He is no high-brow, for he has encouraged the study of such works as Gilbert and Sullivan, with the result that many students have stepped straight from the Guildhall School to leading parts at the West End of
