Fruth is Mighty and Must Prevail - The Forecs of the Wicked Arrayed Against the Exposure-Will Mr. Stead be Prosecuted

LONDON, July 13. - The Pall Mall LONDON, July 13. — The Pail Mail Gazette this afternoon, in response to a request for its opinion as to the nature of the changes required in the present English suggestions. The Gazette, in an editorial commenting on the results of its revelations, declares that its "trumpet blast has roused declares that its "trumpet blast has roused the world." "No word was raised yester-day in the churches against us." continued the paper, "but all the forces of wickedness in high places are arrayed against us. W. H. Smith & Son, possessing the monopoly of the news stands on the railway system of England, have suppressed their sales of the Pall Mall Gazette, the Prince of Wales has stopped his paper, Mr. Ben-tinck is posing in parliament in the name of outraged morality and clamors for our extinction. The Gazette did not undertake this inquiry to unearth vices of the great, the world." "No word was raised yesterthis inquiry to unearth vices of the great, but if we are driven to bay, will be com-pelled by the action of our assailants to

In the house of commons this evening asked the Mr. Bentinck (conservative) asked the home department whether the Pall Mall Gazette's charges against the London police force in connection with that paper's revelations of iniquity in the city were true. Sir Richard Cross replied that if the facts were as stated by the Gazette the cullet inculty model has made. He the facts were as stated by the Gazette the fullest inquiry would be made. He considered it his duty to endeavor to get to the bottom of the charges. A mass meeting of women was held in Princess hall this afternoon to consider the ways and means to protect young girls from the horrible pittalls of London as revealed by the Pall Mail Gazette. Mrs. Booth and other ladies made elequent addresses. The meeting resolved that the laws on the subject should forthwith be made more efficient, denounced state regu-lation of vice, demanded the total repeal of the consider the situation re the strike. The sensation in Paris is almost as great shere. Mr. Spurgeon Enised Wis Veice LoNDON, July 13. —Mr. Spurgeon yester. day preached a powerful sermon on "Patrician iniquity of London as exposed by the Pall Mall Gazette." He took for his text the 16th verse of the second ohapter of the Epistle of Paul to the Romans, which he quoted in defence of the Pall Mall Gazette's work in making its revelations. St. Paul the preacher said, felt it necessary to mention the hideous vices of the heatnens defence of the rail mail Gazette swork in making its revelations. St. Paul, the preacher said, felt it necessary to mention the hideous vices of the heatnens and left on record an exposure of the sins of his day which crimsoned the check of the modest when they read it. It has to the modest when they read it. It has to be written to shame the abominations of the age, which are almost past shame. There was judgment for sin in this world for both men and nations. Assyria, Babylon, Persia, Rome and Egypt were empires of oppression and cruelty and iniquity. When the sin of these people could not longer be tolerated they were wiped off the face of the earth. It was thus with nations, but no one gould tell what blood shedding and suffering sould tell what blood shedding and suffering came upon men for their iniquities. "Should London," exclaimed the preacher, "be more favored than Rome? What is there about our boastful race on this or the ether side of the Atlantic that we should monopolize God's favor? God will judge men's secret sins too vile to be spoken of, and which cause nations to shudder if dragged, as they ought to be, into daylight. A Bit About a Bite,

The fisherman goes forth for trout At earliest ray of light, And shortly, as mosquitos sing, He feels he has a bite.

No tront he has though, and at noon He climbs a gentle neight, His lunch outspreads neath shady tree And straightway takes a bite.

At dewy eve he hires a boat, And ere doth fall the night He troils a while for bass and Junge, But doth not get a bite.

To boat-bouse he then sad returns, For tuckered out he's quite, And when he learns the boatman's charge He says, " well, here's a bite."

Now home he goes all over mud, But filled with pure delight At getting there, and tells his wife This bit about a bite.

The "Ugly" Stroke of the Argons Team More Changes in the Primress of Hamilton-Cricket in England.

If there is one thing in this world of which the president of the Argonaut Rowing club is proud it is the stroke of the senior crew. At the last regatta of the Canadian association of amateur oarsmen we remember him exclaiming in accents joyous-the four were leading-that they had the regular sweeping Oxford stroke, or something to that effect. It will, therefore, be with considerable surprise that he with with considerable surprise that he will d the following editorial remarks from London Standard of June 30, a couple of days before the Henley regatta

On the present occasion the race for the Steward's cuo is rendered more than usually interesting by the fact that the champion crew from the dominion of Canada have crossed the Atlantic to measure themselves against the Interesting of the intervent of Canada have crossed the Atlantic to measure themselves against the English fours. They have had some capital practice at Henley, and though their style does not commend itself to English oarsmen, it would be rash to predict that their short, quick and, as we think, ugly stroke, may not prove to be effective. The very circumstance that they have entered the list is another and a most welcome proof of the spreading sense of the consanguinity of race among English-speaking peoples, upon which far-seeing statesmen base their best hopes of rescuing us from some of our political troubles. Austruia, or, at least, that portion of it as yet is peopled, is deficient in rivers, or we suspect Henley would have seen a champion Australian crew before this. But the Australians are an enter-prising set of people; and nothing would surprise us less than to find a contingent of Australian carsmer coming over, practicing on our English rivers, and then following the surprise usiess than to had a contingent of Anstralian carsmen coming over, practicing on our Enrilsh rivers, and then following the example of the Canadians, and challenging all England to compete with them. The sconer they come the better. The subjects of the Queen cannot meet each other too often, or in too many different ways.
