Young Couple Appear Before Populace and Are Greeted With Tremendous Demonstration.

Madrid, May 25 .- The arrival of the future queen of Spain at the Prado Palace was the signal for a magnificent ovation testifying Spain's welcome to her new sovereign.

At 6:30 the royal train reached the outskirts of the city. Here a special train had been prepared, consisting of a majestic floral arch, beneath which was suspended a huge crown of red roses and yellow jonquils. On either side of the arch was a mast bearing British and Spanish banners. Beyond arose a monster arch which had been erected by the people of the neighboring village of the Mr. Wm. Burnip, G. T. R. En-Majahonda.

It was dusk as King Alfonso and Princess Ena entered the floral station. Awaiting them there was the Queen Mother, the Infanta Isabel, Eulalia and Maria Theresa, Prince Ferdinand, the members of the Government and the officials of Madrid.

A Minute Examination of a W.B. Corset

Will impress you more than ever with their all around excellence.

They are built with the object of giving entire satisfaction to the wearer.

Great care has been taken to secure high-grade, strong sterling cloth, coutil and light-weight batiste, so that the W. B. Corsets will not stretch or lose their shapeliness.

And the steels are also very strong, but pliable. Will assist to support the body, but at the same time will give to the slightest motions of the figure.

Stitching and workmanship have been neatly, accurately and perfectly performed. The corsets are thoroughly well made in every respect.

But all this perfection in the making would be utterly wasted if the W. B. Corsets were not designed in the very latest style dictates. As it is, they are models of stylish beauty, easy grace, fullness and comfort--the corset you need to exhibit to best advantage the stylish lines of the summer dress.

CHOROGRAPHORESCHOOLSCHOO Scandalmongering at Ottawa.

[From the Toronto Giobe.]

The present session is being worked to the full by the Opposition as an occasion for systematic and reckless scandalmongering. It is being done deliberately. Having failed to injure the popularity of the Government by legitimate means, the more abandoned of them organized a scheme by which it was hoped discredit would be brought upon the Liberals. This fact was disclosed some time ago, and it was known that with or without Mr. Borcoffee come and 'e'd poured it in 'is persistent talk of the Opposition dur-

As a policy of despair these tactics may justify themselves to Tory partisans. To the men who use them they need no justification. Those men have no reputations to lose, and they stand to gain if they succeed in besmirching the names of better men. Men like night for the proverbial man and at Mr. Foster and Mr. Bennett are under no obligations either to political integrity or to political decency. Their hope is that the public will not distinguish between irresponsible insinuations and proved charges. In that they will miss their mark.

There is one way by which these scandalmongers can be met, and only one. They cannot be argued down or held accountable for their calumnies. It is almost certain that some incidents can be misstated or warped so as to give color to their slanders. No great enterprise, whether private or public, is wholly free from features that might be given a suspicious appearance, nor would it be surprising if in a large staff one here and one there proved unworthy of his trust. But the way to meet these insinuations is not by argument or by denial, but by investiga-

The Liberals in Parliament do well in demanding that every charge of corruption or malfeasance be definitely stated and made on a member's responsibility, and the Prime Minister takes the right course in insisting on full and rigorous investigation. What was expected by the Opposition was hedging and refusal. When a special committee to probe to the bottom the "Arctic" charges was offered by the aunt one day. The aunt bowed to a Premier they were taken by surprise Roman church holds, believes and cause of national humiliation and that man they were passing. "Who is he, and tried to confuse the issue. Now the committee, including some of the loudest shouters of corruption in the Opposition, is appointed, and it will be their duty to disclose any wrongdoing; and if wrongdoing is proved it will be the Government's duty to give the osenders the limit of punishment.

The one thing for the Prime Minister and his colleagues to keep strictly in view is, not the clumsy stage-play of the Opposition, but the integrity of the Government's administration and the honor of the country. There must be no hesitation about turning the searchlight on any incident that shows the marks of wrongdoing. If the furnhing of the "Arctic" is proved t have been extravagant, at an extortionate cost, and in any way scandalous, those who planned it, and profited by it are not friends of the Government, but enemies, and they have no affair. The facts of that miserable business are being brought to light before the proper tribunal, and if, when judgment is given, it is found that discredit has been done to the country or that the Government has been compromised, the men who are involved should be given short shrift. Any man, no matter who he may be, who takes advantage of his official position and betrays his public trust to gratify his And he never had another chance to own ambition or to serve his own gain propose a plan for raising money for -instant and unpensioned dismissal is the least of his deserts. The Government or the Liberal party is under no obligation, political or otherwise, to any man, and the sooner that fact is made known and is acted on up to the hilt, the tetter for the public service and the public life of Canada. By taking that stand the Government will cause the scandalmongering of the Opposition to fall back on the heads of the men responsible for it, and the Liberals will emerge cleaner and stronger than ever.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

More men and women have gotten positive results from the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE than from all other hair remedies combined.

Newbro's Herpicide is the ORIGINAL Remedy that kills the dandruff germ. It eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and permits a natural hair development by destroying the tiny vegetable growth (a germ or microbe), that causes hair destruction.

Nature constantly struggles to supply life and vigor to the hair, but the dandruff germ saps this vitality and strangles the life out of the hair.

The scalp lacked nutrition and seemed dead. I used Horpicide according to directions with most beneficial results and attribute the restoration of my hair entirely to your Herpicide. I can conscientiously indorse it for doing all you claim, and it gives me great pleasure to recommend it." (Signed) MRS. MEGRUE.

For regular toilet use, Newbro's Herpicide easily occupies first place. It ts sold in practically every civilized country on the globe, and a single trial will show why discriminating ones prefer it. Contains no sticky substance. It will not stain or dye the hair. It stops itching of the scalp almost in

HIS LEGS GROUND OFF

Hamilton Volunteer Leaps from Train Traveling 20 Miles an Hour.

Hamilton, May 25.-While returning this morning with the Ninety-first Highlanders from the holiday outing to Windsor, Corporal W. E. Briggs, of Dundas, was fatally injured. In his eagerness to get to work he laughingly bade his comrades good-bye, and jumped for the platform while the train was traveling 20 miles an hour. Briggs' feet struck the platform in a elanting position, and before he could regain his balance he slipped under the wheel of the officers' car. Both legs were ground off, and he was horribly mangled. A corporal who saw the accident stopped the train. Briggs died before the city was reached.

Hamilton and Toronto aldermen are going to play ball. The Toronto bunch ought to be the stronger on base-stealing, but the runnings honors ought to go to the Bluff City. The Queen City outfit will be weak in patching up holes in their lineup.

It is probably not true that the Toronto morality department are going to investigate Minnie Adams, as she is too swift.

"The Shamrocks were dazed and shocked," a Toronto evening declares but when those Irishmen settle down to the game in earnest, the Indians will not have the chance that a snowball has in this clime.

It begins to look as if it is an off year for Barrie. With their hockey team to the bad, and the Dyment stable not doing much, the natives will have to go back to their most pleasurable pursuit of tossing eggs.

The Toronto Lacrosse Club play a nice game, but they will have to get battleaxes, if they intend to cut any figure in the castern lacrosse league.

By this time, Hamilton has settled down to its favorite pastimes, watching the bay and running to meet the cars.

Temperance Note.—Seagram is not doing a thing at the Woodbine this year. He carried Minnie Adams at an awful clip the other day. Minnie is awfully fast, really. Ain't it awful, Mabelle?

Diamond is polishing off the bookies at the Woodbine.

He's a bally rotter, that umpire fellow, I swear he is," was the cry of a new and excited fan after a close decision in the morning game.

Those steeplechasers at the Woodbine are the limit. If they keep it up a medical corps with 'steen hundred bearers will have to be organized.

The race for the Lipton cup in Chicago threatens to disrupt several families. Great! They must have divorces over there, and a yacht race is as good an excuse as any.

A New York dispatch says that Jake Gaudaur is going to scull again. And that right after the announcement that Dr. Osler was coming back to this country. Hope to die if Ned Hanlan won't get busy if that's true.

This includes the cost of the greatest steel plant in the world and a city of 100,000 people attached to it.

MANY PROBLEMS ENCOUNT-ERED.

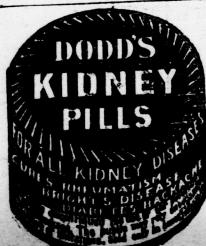

Consider the task of building a big city. It involves the proper understanding of all the complexities that go to make up municipal life. The public service system alone in existing cities have puzzled the people to the point of bewilderment. The requirements for beautifying a city are numerous and involved. The provisions for maintaining a high standard of morality, sobriety and education have yet to be worked out to the satisfaction of the sociologists. All these problems confront the builders of Gary; but listen, reformers, unreformed and students of municipal and industrial af-

One day, fifteen months after the raising of the black flag to the music of the band, the five pirates stood on the gallows with ropes around their necks. Chin-Fin had done no talking since his capture except to claim that it was all a mistake and that he was a good young man. When he saw that there was no longer any hope, however, he made a speech. He admitted that he had been a boss bad man from head to heel, and that the world ought to rejoice that he was to die. He spoke for half an hour, piling it on to himself as hard as he could, and then excused his conduct by saying that it was all owing to his mother having forced him to attend Sunday school when he had a heap rather go fishing. He warned parents to take warning by his sad fate, and with a dignified wave of his hand he signalled the hangman to let 'er go and was calomel, cascara, salts, strong liver pills and purging mineral waters won't do any permanent good.

When a person is bilious, the liver is not giving up enough bile to move the bowels regularly-and some of the bile is being absorbed by the blood. In other words, the liver is in a weakened, unhealthy condition.

Now, purgatives don't act on the liver at all. They merely irritate the bowels, and afford only temporary relief. Bus FRUIT-A-TIVES are the one true LIVER TONIC. They act directly on the liver-strengthen and invigorate this vital organand put it in a normal, healthy condition.

FRUIT-A-TIVES also stimulate the glands of the skin-and regulate the kidneys and sweeten the stomach. When skin, liver and kidneys are normally healthy, there can be no biliousness, no constipation, no kidney trouble, no impure blood, no headaches.

No other medicine known to science is so reliable and so effective in curing Biliousness as these fruit liver tablets.

Cut the dimity into two squares, each measuring twenty-six and a half inches. Lay a hem an Inch and a half deep all the way round, turning in, besides, a quarter of an inch as a "lay-down." This leaves you two twenty-three-inch squares.

Cut a corner off one square (deep enough to berve for a pocket), and, gathering the cut edge, mount it upon the band, which, by the way, is an inch wide when finished. Hem the pocket and set it in one corner at the side.

From the middle of the other square cut out a circle nine inches in diameter and hem the edges meatly. Then sew this square to the band by one point, but without gathering, simply letting the point end an inch or two below the band upon the wrong side.

Put a button on one end of the band, work a buttonhole in the other end and another in the point of the upper square that is directly opposite to the one which is joined in the belt, and—the Plaid cotton voiles are new and attractive, and delightfully inexpensive. And they wash, which is a comfort, for many of the interesting white stuffs of that class don't.

Ginghams and Linens Most Popular

OT FOR years have ginghams been so popular for shirtwaist suits and for the simpler sorts of dresses. But then, gingham styles have never before been so progressive. From the sturdy Scotch plaids, with a world of wear in them, woven into stunning tartan plaids, through the beautiful things with silk woven and interwoven with the soft, firm cotton threads, they range to the host of novelty ginghams, some of them almost like voiles in their loose, open mesh, others more like the mousseline and mulle family, so sheer and altogether "chiffony" (how that word has been overworked this year!) are they. And tartan ginghams have been most popular of all, especially the darker ones of blue and green.

For older women, silk ginghams in the soft, gun-metal grays make the prettiest ort of dresses. Some of them are almost plain, the silk in the weave giving the surface a soft little sheen.

More often they are figured, the mixed black and white designs, which a clever shifting of the threads throw to the surface, setting off the clear, beautiful gray of the foundation. Linen grows more popular all the while, every weight of it, and its tribe of followers besides. For "linen suitings" are usually cotton stuffs, made to closely imitate linen, and with a dot woven in instead of the embroidered dot which is so fashion-

But the linens themselves are fascinating. There are the open-mesh kinds that go by the charmed name of "linen voiles," and are just a degree prettier than the canvasy weaves we've been wearing for several years; and linens with plaids woven in them, some with cords a little or the order of dimities, but with a world of difference, and others embroidered with dots or eyelets or simple designs. There are novelty linens, with odd effects of weave or of color-blending, and plain-as-a-pipestem kinds with something distinctive about each.

As to color, wonderful things are being done with it. Some skilful Frenchman has discovered a new way of dyeing the linen, radically unlike existing methods—as so many French discoveries are. Instead of dyeing the threads and weaving the linen from the colored threads, he weaves it first, then dyes it in the piece; a difficult operation, but by it shades can be got which are impossible by the old process-shades which lean to pastel tints, and which are finer in every way.

Next to the linen family for suits comes galatea, which is a splendid stuff for hard wear and has been developed into interesting designs-some that seem almost like suitings.

For shirtwaist suits for the very hot days, comes a printed linon d'Inde—the old linen lawn of our grandmother's day printed with the same prim little patterns which were in fashion then. Nothing is much cooler than are they, and nothing, absolutely nothing, looks so fresh. Batistes are as popular as the lighter weight linens, and even more varied-embroidered and printed and treated in a thousand ways. A dozen different weights are about, from the inexpensive kinds that seem more like linen lawns than anything else to gauzy stuffs which bear the hallmark of Paris upon their snowy folds.

A batiste with a soft finish is perhaps the most popular member of the family, especially for embroidered blouses-the stuff is so easily worked

Madras has won its old place again-not the heavy, coarse, canvasy kind, but the compact firmly woven madras, as cool to wear as a lawn. Just the same quaint designs decorate them: narrow thread-like stripes of color, grouped, like dimity cords, into clusters of a few or of many, and tiny figures, like the plainest of the percales.

But to run over even the na les of the inexsigns. As a rule, they are in princess styles so cunpensive stuffs would be an impossibility, so many kinds have been developed by the cry for many changes and for infinite variety which marks this season even more definitely than it has the past two or three. There are wonderful little dresses to be got up at trifling cost—twelve and a half cent stuffs that need only a clever designing and making to be turned into charming little dresses.

For years the pompadour designs in heavy silks that fairly stood alone have had periodic returns to favor; but this season they are transferred to the sheerest, gauziest, most softly clinging tissues that make them possible even for t1 woman who more than inclines to embonpoint.

Yet the coloring of the latest pompadour gown is daring, even vivid, though so cunningly blended that the most soberly minded individual would fail to call it loud. This in the face of the fact that one of the most artistic of these summer dresses had scattered on it scarlet poppies the size of a dinner plate.

garishness from the prevalence of huge flowers and figures is overcome. The amateur dressmaker should by all means stick to the less conspicuous designs in selecting her pompadour gown. This advice also holds good for the stout woman. Most of these materials have an interlining of white chiffon between the taffets slin and the gauze, the least expensive of them all, woven into almost every design to at once heighten

When John Scott (Lord Eldon) was at the bar he was remarkable for the sang-froid with which he treated the judges. On one occasion a junior counsel, on hearing their lordships give judgment against his client, exclaimed that "he was surprised at such a decision." This was construed into contempt of court, and he was ordered to attend at the bar next morning. Fearful of the consequences, he consulted his friend John Scott, who told him to be perfectly at ease, for he would apologize for him in a way that would avert any unpleasant result. Accordingly, when the name of the delinquent, was called, John rose and coolly addressed the assembled tribunal: "I am very sorry, my lords, that my Andrew, who was created a count by Napoleon, had two children. One of them, a daughter, Antoinette by name, married Prince Charles of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, and was the grandmother of King Charles of Roumania and of his sister. the Countess of Flanders. The son. Count Peter Murat, married the daughter of Baron Meneval, the confidential secretary of Napoleon. The sole issue of this union was the late Count Joachim Murat, who died only a few years ago, and who was a most delightful old fellow, sparkling with wit. When he accompanied the late Duc de Morny to Russia to attend the coronation of Alexander II. he made an immense hit at the theatricals given by the duke in honor of the Russian monarch by a wonderfully clever charade, entitled "A qui perd, gagne" (he who loses, wins), which, in view of the fact that Russia had a few months previously been defeated in the Crimea by the English and French, was particularly appropriate. He died a couple of years ago, leaving three sons and three daughters, and it is one of these sons whose marriage is just taking place.

The ex-Duke of Parma, who as a there boy lost his throne in 1860, is so proud and reactionary a member of the house of Bourbon, that one is rather surprised to learn of his permitting one of his twenty surviving children, namely, Princess Beatrix of Bourbon, to contract a matrimonial alliance with Count Peter Lucchesi Palli, a young lawyer of Palermo, for the count's father is that royal Duchess de Berry's son, whose inopportune birth brought to a rather ridiculous close the Royalist insurrection of 1835 in France, and snuffed out the promising prospects of a restoration of the senior

Her daring and the devotion to the cause of her child appealed to the sense of chivalry of the French, especially in Brittany, and the insurrection assumed alarming proportions, so much so that King Louis Philippe was led to resort to the extraordinary measure of placing a price upon her head. She was betrayed into his hands by one of her most trusted agents, an infamous individual of the name of Deutz, to whom Theirs, then prime minister, handed the bank notes, constituting his reward, with a pair of fire-tongs.

The duchess was imprisoned in the Castle de Blaye, and while the rebellion was robbed of its principal leader, her captivity created a still greater sympathy in behalf of herself and of her cause. The sympathy did not last long, however, for it was soon made known to King Louis Philippe that she was shortly to become a mother of a child, the father of whom would be her chamberlain, the Count Lucchesi Palli. The French Government caused this news to be proclaimed far and

The duke managed, though with difficulty to secure an important command in the army on the outbreak of the war with France, and was badly injured through the explosion of the French stronghold at Laon. Until his death the duchess made her home with him at the Bellevue palace at Berlin, built by Prince Ferdinand of Prussia, youngest brother of Frederick the Great, and who survived the latter long enough to receive a courteous visit there from Napoleon, when he entered Berlin as victor in 1806. This Prince Ferdinand, who was married to one of his elder brother's daughters, that is to say, his niece, bequeathed, on dying, the palace of Bellevue to his son, Prince Augustus, who lived there with women who have been wrongly described as his morganatic wives. The crown prince For Scone Palace, the ancestral home of the Earls of Mansfield, on the Tay, duty he owed to history-the chronnear Perth, was in olden times the principal home of the kings of Scotland, who were crowned there on the stone of destiny, and who held council there with their chieftains and nobles.

The stone of destiny, as everyone knows, is supposed to be the stony pillow on which Jacob slept at Bethel. There are quite a number of legends found its way from Bethel to Egypt thence to Spain, and from Spain again to Ireland. How it ascended to the top of the Sacred Hill of Tara history does not reveal, but there it became "Lia Fail," or "the stone of destiny," and pect a fellow officer, Maj. Goikoditch, on it thenceforward all the Irish kings were crowned. How long it remained there is still a matter of controversy which resulted in the man's transfer to among Irish antiquarians. But from Erin it was mysteriously conveyed to Dunstaffnage in Scotland, more than a thousand years ago.

It was King Kenneth II. who moved the stone to a raised plot on the ground of Scone, upon and around which the last great battle between the Picts and Scots was fought. PRESIDENT TOO MUCH FOR HIM

ROOSEVELT HAD AN ENCOUNTER WITH A REAL BAD MAN.

Floored and Disarmed Him, Then Put Him Out of Hotel

For three years Mr. John Burroughs has postponed the performance of stone Park with President Roosevel Monthly for May Mr. Burroughs now tells the story of his camp life with Mr. Roosevelt. It is worth reading.

Mr. Roosevelt was scrupulous in his observance of the law against the de-Milochevitch, one of the aides de camp extant as to the manner in which it struction of bird and animal life in the Yellowstone Park. Whatever were his impulses and temptations in the presence of big game he obeyed the law of the land as faithfully as if he had not been protected from detection in wrong-doing by the exclusion of the reporters, the surveillance of none but a few carefully selected companions, including Mr. Burroughs, and miles of remoteness and hundreds of pickets covering every possible route of approach. Mr. Burroughs' testimony concerning this is positive:

"As we were riding along in our big sleigh toward the Fountain Hotel, the President suddenly jumped out, and, with his soft hat as a shield to his hand, captured a mouse that was running along over the ground near us. He wanted it for Dr. Merriam, on the chance that it might be a new species. While we all went fishing in the afternoon the President skinned his mouse and prepared the pelt to be sent to Washington. It was done as neatly as a professed taxidermist would have done it. This was the only game the President killed in the park.

Not a single mountain lion; only on nconsiderable mouse, and that for strictly scientific purposes! While it is possible that a great constitutional lawyer like Mr. Tillman, of South Carolina, might persuade himself that this mouse came constructively under the prohibition of section 4 of the act of 1894, inasmuch as Mr. Roosevelt could not have supposed that it was a dangerous animal, about to destroy human life, or to inflict physical injury on any of the party, we do not imagine that the President is in jeopardy of impeachment for the killing and the skinning of the Government's protect-

Mr. Burroughs' veracious pen is the first to record, we believe, from the President's own lips, the story of his encounter years ago with a "bad man" in the barroom of a little frontier hotel. As he entered the room he saw that every man there had been terrorized by a half-drunken ruffian, who stood in the middle of the floor, revolver in hand, compelling all comers to said the President, 'as far from him as I could get, and hoped to escape his notice. The fact that I wore glasses, with my evident desire to avoid a fight, with my evident desire to avoid a light, apparently gave him the impression that I could be imposed upon with impunity. He very soon approached me, flourishing his two guns, and ordered me to treat. I made no reply for some moments, when the fellow became so threatening that I the fellow became so threatening that I saw something had to be done. The crowd sat or stood back against the wall, alraid to move. I was unarmed, and thought rapidly. Saying, 'Well, if I must, I must,' I got up as if to walk around him to the bar; then, as I got opposite him, I wheeled and fetched him as heavy a blow on the chin point as I could strike. He went down like a steer before the axe, firing both guns into the celling as he went. I jumped on him, and, with my knees on his chest, disarmed him in a hurry. The crowd was then ready enough to help me, and we hog-tied him and put him in an outhouse." The President alludes to this incident in his "Ranch Life," but does not give the details. It brings out his mettle very distinctly. Mr. Roosevelt

Roosevelt once told Mr. Burroughs

"As we were going swiftly down the side of one of the hills, I saw out of the corner of my eye the President taking a header into the snow. The snow had given way beneath him, and nothing could him from taking the plunge. I don't know but it was quickly on its feet again, shaling off the snow with a boy's laughter. kept straight on, and very soon the laugh was on me, for the treacherous snow sank beneath me, and I took a header, too. "Who is laughing now, Oom John?" called out the President.

"The spirit of the boy was in the air that day about the canyon of the Yellow-stone, and the biggest boy of us all was President Roosevelt."

Corn is not only used as an article home, but there are in the United States more than 180,000,000 corn-eating animals, besides the millions of fowls. The foreign demand is also constantly increasing.

In the wonderful exhibit which Director Dodge made of American agriculture at the Paris Exposition there stood a great case containing between 40 and 50 of the products and by-products of Indian corn, while in the well-managed corn kitchen Europeans found many a toothsome delicacy which had hitherto been unknown to them.

Expert cooks prepared it in scores of ways, from plain boiled mush served with rich milk upward to the various dainties made of green corn, hulled corn, hominy, grits, corn-flakes and the different corn syrups; they also served canned green corn in cream. various preparations of "maizena," samp, cream meal, corn pancakes, and loaves of bread and cakes made from bolted corn flour, with other palatable combinations too numerous to mention. TO SAVE WARSHIPS. In Spanish war times it was found that the pith of cornstalks made the best possible material for packing between the plates of warships. It not only presented a barrier difficult of penetration by the Spaniards' guns, but when an aperture was actually made, the absorbent qualities of the pith came into full play in the water to which it was now exposed, and it would often swell sufficiently to close the hole temporarily.

Another use for this pith has now been found in the manufacture of high-grade paper. Abundant experiments have demonstrated its value for this purpose, and a large plant will soon be built for the purpose of the manufacture. Machinery will so into

NEW EPOCH FOR GROWERS. Discoveries made in the last five years had a wonderful result upon the increase of yield and also the quality of the product. In June, 1900, the Illinois Corn basis for a substitute for rubber, a Breeders' Association was organized; and this marked a new epoch, for it was the beginning of a widespread movement to put corn breeding on a similar basis with is used in the manufacture of rubber that of live stock improvement. Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Indiana and Maryland now have bodies of men who are doing systematic work, for the most part in connection with the state experiment stations, and there are large apperment stations, and there are large appropriations of public money for further investigation along these lines.

The principle underlying the scientific method is the choosing of the finest seed from a given race. This is planted in an

In all the world nothing stirs the blood or excites the imagination so much as a search for hidden treasure. In fiction or in fact nothing is so entrancing. Thrilling as are the treasure tales of Robert Louis Stevenson, tales just as thrilling are being enacted n truth in different parts of the globe to-day.

At present several interesting treasare hunts are under way. In the little bay of Tobermory, on the west coast of Scotland, a syndicate is endeavoring to reach the strong box of a sunken ship of the Spanish Armada which plunged beneath those waters, with wealth estimated at $15,-000.000.

Efforts are being made to raise a British warship which was sunk in Balaclava Bay during the Crimean War. Those at head of this enterprise expect to reap a golden harvest of $3,000,000. In prosy England the marshes of The Wash are being explored for the royal jewels and treasure of King John, which were lost by him during his flight in 1216. For some months an army of laborers has been digging for treasure on the Island of Mauritius, once the resort af daring and successful pirates of the Indian Ocean. Within the last twenty years no fewer than eighteen gold-seeking expeditions have explored Cocos Island, in the Pacific, and numerous deadly clashes have resulted in the search for the millions thought to be buried there. It is also believed that many people at the time of the British conquest buried whatever money or valuables they possessed, so that, according to belief, almost the entire island is a treasure mine.

Part of the wealth is said to have been secreted in the district of the Black Mountain by French officials, and it is in that locality that the present feverish search is being prosecuted. England is excited just now over an attempt to recover the royal jewels and treasure lost by King John in The Wash, when he fled across the marshes in 1216.

A COMPUTATION OF TIDES. In preparation for the search, St

John Hope, assistant secretary Antiquar the Society of made a study of the tides and land shiftings from the time King John lost his baggage and his wealth until the present time. The Wash has changed in its course since 1216, and Mr. Hope calculates that the treasure wagons will be located at Sutton Bridge, where there is twentythree feet of silt.

Another search for wealth long hidden beneath the waters is being conducted at Sebastopol, in the Crimea. Armed with government authority, salvage experts have undertaken to raise from the bottom of Balaclava Bay a large British manof-war sunk by Russian gunfire directed against the British, French and Turkish opponents of the Czar.

One of the very best lotions for the eyes, and one that will make them bright and sparkling, is grape juice. Just before the grape season, when the vines are in blossom, or the fruit quite green, the juice is collected. This is done by making an incision on the side of the vine, not deep enough to injure it. A small, hollow bit of reed is then inserted in the cut, the inserted end being flattened like a wedge. A little bottle is tied to the vine, with the other end of the reed in its mouth. It will be filled with the sap in about twenty-four hours. By filling an eye-cup with this and bathing the eyes they will become sparkling and brilliant.

When exercise is wanting—as in studious persons—there is greater need of abstinence, and tender persons ought to use as much abstinence as they possibly can. As to the amount of food, Nature requires no mathematical exactness. A plain rule for judging of the quality is, not to eat so much as indisposes for business. ses for business. The digestive system plays an

The digestive system plays an important part in longevity, as do the respiratory and circulatory systems. Only general rules, however, can be laid down, for each girl is a law to herself—within certain limits. Meals should be, if possible, taken at the same hour every day, and plenty of time should be given to them. It is very bad for the digestion to have the nervous system called off to attend to other matters.

Mastication should be thorough. I Mastication should be thorough. I think that this last will touch many of us very closely; "bolting" has become such a confirmed habit with the greater such a confirmed page of the greater such a confirmed habit with the greater such a confirmed habit with the greater such a confirmed habit with the greater such as the great such a confirmed habit with the greater part of Americans, especially those who are busy, that we actually do not realize in what condition we push the food down. It is really almost as if we took it from the table and laid it into the stomach. We cannot keep this up very long without feeling the ill effects.

Another habit almost equally pernicious is that of washing the food down with large quantities of liquid.

Bad digestion or "dyspepsia" and unwith large quantities of liquid.

Bad digestion or "dyspepsia" and unhealthy skins are often closely associated. Girls who are suffering from the in beginning their reform clated. Girls who are suffering from these ills in beginning their reform must avoid fried foods, pork, and sausage, new bread, hot rolls, in fact, everything doughy; rich salads, made dishes, many spices, all heavy sweet things, most desserts, especially the pastries, rich cakes, cheese, and much tea or coffee.

Most girls are interested in the effects of candy eating. An authority on dietects says that ¼ of a pound of cane sugar is all that is allowable in twenty-four hours. When you subtract the amount of sugar that you daily consume in ordinary foods, very little is left to be taken as candy. When eaten at all it is best taken directly after a meal. Taken between meals it disturbs the digestion and spolls the appetite. The chief objection to the use of sugar is the acid fermentation that it causes in the acid fermentation that it causes in the stomach. When taken in excess by young girls it is apt to be the cause of simples.

The advice given to a "dyspeptic" by sician for what he leared was heart trouble. Mr. L. was positive that his digestion was in excellent condition; he had never, until very recently, suffered the least discomfort from eating.

As soon as the doctor had convinced himself of the trouble, he told his patient that he would be obliged to be excused just then as he had a very important engagement, but he hoped for the pleasure of Mr. L.'s company at dinner that night at seven. At the hour appointed the guest arrived, and as he and the doctor were chatting together in the library, his attention was attracted by a punch-bowl of large dimensions. It was beautifully chased and of antique pattern. As he spoke of its exquisite design, the butler appeared with a cocktail. He walked over to the table and poured the concoction into the punch-bowl. AN INSTRUCTIVE MIXTURE

Retiring, he soon returned with half a dozen oysters, some horse-radish, crackers, celery, radishes, olives and salted almonds, which also went into the bowl. A glass of wine was added to this mixture.

Tomato bisque, cheese crackers, celery, salted almonds, and sherry next went into the bowl. By this time Mr. L. was awaiting with great curiosity to see what would next appear. It was boiled bluefish, potato balls, cucumbers, celery, almonds and hock. Then came roast chicken, French peas, olives, snow potato, currant jelly, bread, and champagne, all going into the punchbowl, one after another.

These were followed by lobster salad, cheese crackers, salted almonds and claret. The last contributions to the long-suffering bowl were ice cream, bonbons, wine, grapes, crackers and cheese, nuts, coffee and creme dementhe. And never a word yet from the doctor.

Mr. I. by this time felt most uncom-Retiring, he soon returned with half doctor.

Mr. L. by this time felt most uncomfortable. As the butler closed the door after his last appearance, the doctor led his guest over to the bowl and asked him to imagine the condition of its contents an hour later.

It needed little comment for the wise

The two men then went to the dining room, and while they were eating a simple dinner the doctor gave his guest a common sense talk on the proper way of living.

He gave him a list of wholesome, nutritious foods; he told him to drink copiously of water between meals; gave him directions concerning exercises and a common sense talk on the proper way of living.

He gave him a list of wholesome, nutritious foods; he told him to drink copiously of water between meals; gave him directions concerning exercises and deep breathing; begged him to sleep eight hours out of twenty-four, and to take a scrub bath every morning.

Mr. L. was much impressed and went away with the determination to follow out the doctor's advice. In a short time all suggestion of any so-called "heart failure" had disappeared.

all suggestion of any so-called "neart failure" had disappeared.

Food must be properly cooked in order to be digestible. Cereals are apt to be served in a partly cooked condition. Many of them require several hours' steaming.

Milk is one of the most important of foods, but is not of itself a sufficient diet for a healthy girl.

The active worker can digest food that the girl of sedentary habits cannot take care of. Meat once a day is sufficient for most people. Too much red meat from day to day means uric acid. The best vegetable substitute for meat are peas, beans and lentils.

Fruits are valuable for certain vegetable acids which they contain, but they are not very nutritious.

Bananas are easily digested, if before eaten they are both peeled and scraped. This disposes of the indigestible part of this nutritious fruit. Variety of diet is of the greatest advantage.

Alcohol is not necessary for healthy persons, and most people would be better without it in any form.

As to tea, coffee and cocoa, there has been endless discussion. Although I helieve that tea and coffee are far better left alone, tea, when taken fresh, in moderate quantity and strength, is not injurious to most people. It is refreshing when one is weary. Some who cannot take tea can drink coffee very well.

Coffee is in no way a food, but when it is taken at a meal less food is necessary, because it diminishes tissue waste. It has a clogging action, however. It hinders digestion, and so should be avoided by those with weak stonachs. Too much coffee has a decidedly bad effect upon the complexion.

Use it just as you would soap, it is very cleansing and softening to the skin. Always rinse off thoroughly, Hair on Arms I have read your valuable column for along time and am venturing to ask you for some remedy for a growth of hair on my arms. I am only 17 years old, and as I wish to wear short sleeves this summer I am greatly troubled. I have never tried anything on them, so the hair is soft.

M. H. S. Try bleaching the hair with peroxide of hydrogen, which will make it less noticeable. If, however, this is not satisfactory, try the pumice stone treatment, which has proved very beneficial in many cases. Get an ordinary five-cent cake of pumics stone. This is not pumice soap, but the regular old-fashioned pumice stone. To remove the hair rub the skin afflicted with the superfluous growth, and the pumice stone will wear the hair off. Be careful not to be too heroic and irritate the skin, in case the arms are made red by this treatment, use a little cold cream. Pumice Treatment.
