The burden of his British North America act says that argument was that clause 16 of the bill was incorporated in it in accordance with the spirit of the constitution. He denied that there was any cate of provincial rights as he ever was, and quoted from his own utterances twelve years ago to show this to be the case. The definition of what provincial rights were was to be found in the constitution and the history of the country. On the constitution he took his stand. Speaking for the party he said that the ground upon y they stood in the present case was that wherever a system of separate schools exists, that system comes into force and is constitutionally entitled to the guarantees which are embodied in section 93 of the British North America act, and when they introduced section 16 as it is in the bill they had no other intention than to give to the minority captured at the southern and 5,000 at the rights and privileges to which they were entitled under the constitution, and which they have today. With respect to the changes effected in that clause, he said they were made to make it clearer if possible that all that was intemplated was to continue the existing educational conditions in the west. impressed on the House that Confederation had only been possible by mutual concessions and compromises. conceded and yielded to achieve one great result, the unity and peace their common country. He asked them tion in a broad and generous spirit.

The remarks of the leader of the Opposition on the first reading debate, Sir Wilfrid said, were devoted two subjects of ownership of the land and the school question. Mr. Borden's position was that the land should go to the provinces and be owned and managed by them. On the school question he was reserved; he did not nounce any policy, but very wisely said that, in his judgment, the subject was one that ought to be approached servative press offered a very violent opposition to the school clause, sparing tion ever since, some 14 years. In 1875, as it was established that the minority in New Brunswick had no separate schools at the union, he had supported Mr. Mackenzie in refusing federal interference upon the complaint of the Roman Catholic minority. In 1899 he supported Sir John Macdonald in refusing to disallow the Jesuits estates act. In 1896 he opposed the Government of Sir Mackenzie Bowell when it endeavored to force upon the Province of Manitoba a system of schools which, according to high judicial authority, the Province of Manitoba had rejected within the scope of its legitimate authority. And now again, constitution when he said that Parlia-ment should give to the minority in the new previnces the same rights and privileges that are given to the minoriwas being opposed throughout the country in the sacred name of provincial rights, although these men overlooked the fact that in the very letter of the constitution on which they rely, there is an abbreviation of provincial school clauses were unconstitutional. rights whereby there exists in any province a system of separate schools. Yet this plain fact was being ignored. Referring to Mr. Northrup's quotation of a speech in 1893, in which he leclared himself a firm believer in pro vincial rights, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that later on in the same speech he had qualified that, by saying that the matter of education provincial rights were not supreme. This was the view he still held. admitted, we were still told that it does not apply to the present case, because territories are not provinces. "Now, in the name of common sense," said Sir Wilfrid, "what does it matter, so far as law and order are conprovinces? If, by the act of 1875, we gave them an established system schools, is not that system as dear to them as if they had then been created into provinces? If they have acquired sacred as if they had been created into provinces? The argument is being put forward in newspapers and in speeches that Parliament is omnipotent; that the Parliament of 1904 is now bound by the Parliament of 1875. Parliament is supreme, indeed, and may go even to laws which bind all governments and all men, just as it is open to any man foot his plighted troth. And if Parliament may violate its plighted troth, then we have a double opportunity to signalize ourselves, because not only nay we take away from the minority the system of separate schools which they have had for years, but we may trike out that more far-reaching vioation of provincial rights by which Parliament in 1881 exempted from mucicipal taxation forever the property and capital stock of the C. P. R. Nobody thinks for a moment of giving the new provinces power to levy taxation upon the C. P. R., and I ask, then that if we respect our engagements in the one case, why should we not respect our engagements in the other?" Sir Wilfrid Laurier contended that no better testimony in favor of the bill could be found than in the letter of Mr. Haultain, in which he said the territories were admitted into the union in 1870, and immediately upon their creation into provinces the 93rd dealt so amply with the subject when section of the British North America This was more act would become a part of their con-British North America act says that "nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have by alteration in his position on these law in the province at the union. questions. the history of the British North America act to show that section 93 was introduced into the Quebec resolutions and subsequently into the act to protect the Protestan minority in the Province of Quebec, and to show that, as finally enacted, it was regarded as satisfactory to that minority as well as to the Roman Catholic minority of Ontario, he read extracts from editorials of the Montreal Gazette of 1867. As to the changes which had been made in clause 16 of the autonomy bill, as set forth in the amendment the Government had taken the ground on more than one occasion, and took that ground now, that wherever a system of separate schools exists, that system comes into force and is constitutionally entitled to the guarantees embodied in the British North America act, be the system, little or much. "That," he said, "is the position we take, and when we introduced section 16, as it is in the bill, we had no other intention than to give to the minority the rights and privileges to which they were entitled under the sir, it has been objected to us that the language used in section 16 was too broad and too vague, and that if it were adopted, it would create trouble and confusion instead of certainty as to the rights of the minority." went on to say that the first paragraph of section 16 was copied from the act of 1875. Ottawa, March 23. - The Mounted Police report, just issued, contains a tragic "Babes in the Wood" story. It gives the details of the cold-blooded abandonment in the wilds of the northwest, near Lake Athabasca, of two young Indian children, who, deserted and unprotected, were eaten alive by wolves. A young Indian girl of 15, also abandoned, narrowly escaped death from starvation. The story, taken from the diary of Sergt. Field, in command of the police detachment at Fort Chippewayan, is as follows: "A halfbreed arrived here from Fond-du-Lac, on Lake Athabasca, and reported that an Indian, Paul Izo Azie, living at Black Lake, near Fond-du-Lac had eserted his adopted children in the bush some time during last September. The particulars of the case are: This an island in Black Lake where he intended fishing and hunting during the fall and winter. One day he sighted some canoes, with a number of men of Russian prisoners in Japan, and on board, coming towards his camp. He fired two shots in the air, as is cusomary among Indians, as a sign of friendliness. They did not reply or take any notice of his shooting, but paddled off in another direction and anded on the main shore of the lake. This man, being very superstitious, as most Indians are, concluded that these were bad people, and intended killing him and all his family. He became frightened, so he got his wife, sister, and the two little children into the cance and paddled scheme legion by canoe and paddled ashore, leaving his camping outfit and his belongings becamping outfit and his belongings behind him. When he landed on shore he started off on foot for Fond-du-Lac, followed by his wife and sister, leaving the two little children behind without food or protection, one a little boy and the other a little girl, aged 2 and 3 years respectively. It being an eight days' trip, or about 130 or 140 miles, from his camp to Fond-du-Lac, his sister, a young girl about 15 years old, got fatigued after the first or second day's travel. He left her behind also on the road, without food or protection. This poor girl wandered about the woods for several days in a dreadful state of starvation, until she was picked up by some Indians that were picked up by some Indians that were camped in that direction. She told them her story, how her brother had deserted these two little children on the lake shore.

TO HAVE CHAIR

tive Who Has Held the Position.

Toronto, March 22. - One of the ineresting facts in connection with the opening of the Eleventh Ontario Legslature is that the Speaker's chair will for the first time be occupied by a ifelong Conservative in the person of the Hon, Mr. St. John. Whitney on St. John.

In moving the election of Mr. J. W. St. John. Hon. Mr. Whitney referred to the peculiar interest which attaches itself to the office. Going back to discover the origin of the position of Speaker was going back to the times when the Speaker was merely a mer-senger between the House of Comnons and the sovereign. While it was then a position of high honor and responsibility, its functions sometimes partook of an unpleasant character, as in the time of King Edward III., when the Earl De La Mar, who had made a remonstrance to his sovereign, found that his remonstrance was received but because he had made it, he was to suffer imprisonment for life. He regained his liberty in the succeeding reign, however, and was then chosen reign, however, and was then chosen Speaker for life. In another reign when the Speaker had refused to be reign, however, and was then chosen Speaker for life. In another reign when the Speaker had refused to be the mouthpiece of the House and had attempted to break up the proceedings by leaving the chair, he had been held down by two sturdy members, while the proceedings went on. This, remarked Mr. Whitney, was one of the indexes of the growth of responsible government. The importance of the office of Speaker, Mr. Whitney went on to say, could not be exaggerated. The character of the Speaker exercised a great influence over the House in its collective capacity. He must be of high honor and unblemtshed reputation. The influence of the reputation. The influence of the Speaker over the House was the measure of the respect that his acts had caused the House to feel for him. He must at all times be the lest ity. In this country they nad no reason to feel ashamed of the distinguished men who had presided over their public bodies. Referring more part cularly to Mr. S John, Mr. Whitney remarked that I vas one of the sturdy yeomanry he country. He had left his father farm, progressed through college, studed law, became a member of the bar, and as a member of the bar had performed his duties with credit to himself and satisfaction to his clients. He had hearkened to the seductive voice of the people of his constituency an high position in the ranks of the representatives of the people. In all bis capacities he had borne himself so that he had made hosts of friends, He has so borne himself, said Mr. Whitfriend and the protector of the minorney, that no man hates him; most men love him and all men respect him. Mr. Harcourt's Speech

W. GOETHE QUANTZ, ORGANIST Briefly seconding this motion, Han, Mr. Foy remarked that he need not add to anything the Premier had said He indorsed his remarks and consid-. W. FETHERSTON, ORGANIST WELLINGTON Street Church. Teacher singing, organ, piano, theory.

He indorsed his remarks and considered that Mr. St. John was a fair-minded and broad-minded man, who would act impartially and with judgment. In the absence of Hon. George W. Ross, the acting leader of the Oppo-

marked that and at no time had there ever been a been lacking in the first great quali fication, strict neutrality between the these ontending parties. In last thirty years the Legislature had lacked neither dignity nor interest. and it was fair to say that one of the most able and courteous of all the speakers of the Legislature was the honorable gentleman who was at that of the assembly. Mr. St. John, he added, was the first life-long Conservative who had ever been called to the Speaker's chair in the Province, and this would add to the warmth of the ongratulations of his many friends in next Edv Province. He knew that Mr. St.

John would do all within his power to preserve the dignity, prestige and nor of the Legislative Chamber, Mr. Harcourt pointed out the curious fact that in Great Britain in the past 70 years all the speakers elected had been members of the Liberal party. Concluding, Mr. Harcourt said: "I can ssure, with all heartiness, my honorable riend, that he will be loyally supported the kindness and forbearance of the members on both sides of the house. He knew that if he erred in judgment they would not impute to him an intended wrong. This chamber had achieved a standing for the high character and freedom of its debate, and for the personal courtesy and chivalrous respect of member for member. He would endeavor to uphold their cherished traditions diligently.

faithfully and efficiently, and hand them on unimpaired to his successor. Mr. St. John concluded by asking the members to assist him by being in their places promptly New York and San Francisco is about 14,840 miles. LONDON, THURSDAY, MARCH 23.

The Ontario Legislature. The first Conservative Government this Province has known was installed yesterday with elaborate social rites. the Conservatives of Ontario should honor Mr. Whitney and his colleagues by investing the function with more than the usual ceremony which attends an opening of the Legislature. The speech from the throne gives no promise of an important session, but not much can reasonably be expected from an administration two months old. A year from now the public will be more exacting. The only measures foreshadowed are:

Amendments to the education act. Creation of a department of mines, with a minister at the head.

Abolition of the numbered ballot. There is a vague reference in the speech to the conservation of Niagara struction. These are facts which may power in the interests of the people, whatever that may mean. The forthcoming report of the commission on railway taxation is alluded to guardedly, but there is promise of immediate legislation. Mr. Whitney and his Northwest are desirable or expedient, followers in the last Legislature offered their support to the Pettypiece and constitutionally obliged to guarbill as a party maneuver, but a change from the left to the right of the Speaker often brings a change in joyed for 30 years. The Parliament of the point of view. The clause refer- 1875 believed it had established this ring to the extension of the northern boundaries of the Province is a response to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's intimation that the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba would be consulted as to the apportionment among them of the vast unorganized territory bounding the Hudson Bay.

The Amended School Clauses.

There is a substantial difference between the educational clauses in the first draft of the Northwest autonomy bill and the amended clauses introduced yesterday by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Under the original clauses the minority would have been entitled to the rights which they had in 1875. Under the amended clauses the minority inherit only the rights which they enjoy today under the school ordinances adopted by the Territorial Assembly; but the new provinces shall have full power to vary, alter and amend any school legislation so long as the privileges of the minority under the hair?" present ordinances are not abridged.

Those who know something of the history and development or school leg- disturbed by the surrounding converislation in the Northwest will appreciate the full extent of the difference between 1875 and 1905. Since 1875, by successive enactments of the Territorial Government, an appointive and irrespensible body for the conduct of educational affairs has been replaced by a department directly responsible to the people, while the separate schools have been brought under the same ordinances as the public schools. The Federal Government proposes to confirm this legislation by inserting in the autonomy bill the following subsection as a substitute for subsection 1 of section 93 of the British North America Act, 1867: Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to separate schools which any class of persons have a the passing of this act, under the terms of chapters 29 and 30 of the ordinances of the Northwest Territories passed in the year 1901.

These ordinances show that there is little in common between the separate schools of the Northwest and of Ontario. No religious instruction is permitted in any school from the opening until one-half hour previous to a resource in all extremities, and a the closing in the afternoon, after refuge even for itself. And yet love which any such instruction permitted or desired by the board of trustees may be given. Any child shall have the privilege of leaving the school room at the time at which this religious instruction is commenced, if the parents hand is that of the Minister of State or guardians so desire. If the powers which the Federal Government proposes to exercise are ultra vires of that body, the courts will have to settle the question in the end. If the educational clauses now before Parliament are ultra vires, then the most pronounced opponents of separate schools may find satisfaction, as we have already said, in the fact that the separate schools of the Northwest are not church or ecclesiastical schools, but non-sectarian from 9 o'clock in the morning until 3:30 o'clock in the afteroon, during which they are virtually under the control of the Protestant majority who have made the school

"It The Opposition leader declared a question of provincial rights, question of self-government, a quesquestion of those privileges and liberties of which the Right Honorable Prime Minister claims to be champion and exponent. No one appreciates or respects more highly than I the moral Catholic Church bestows upon the youth of Canada who are born within the highest the value of moral training of the children of this country, and I am free further to confess that cme others do the consistency, and devotion of Roman Catholics in this and other matters of their faith wherelatter might learn many valuable lesseparate schools. If any one gentlenan should propose to insert in this measure a clause forbidding the establishment in the new provinces of separate schools. I would be prepared to oppose strongly and strenuously any such provisions, because I lieve that not only in the light of the constitution, but in the light of the highest principles of statesmanship and wisdom that question should be left absolutely to the control of the people of the new provinces. Mr. Borden declared that in 1896 the Government did not attempt to assail constitution. It was a question of policy, but the people declared at the pells that even within the limit of the constitution there must be no coercion on the question of education. Mr. Borden closed by moving:

"That all the words after the word 'that' to the end of the question be eft out and the following substituted therefor: 'Upon the establishment of a province in the Northwest Territories of Canada, as proposed by bill No. 69, the Legislature of such provinces, subject to and in accordance with the provisions of the British North Amerca act. 1867 to 1886, it is entitled to and should enjoy full powers of propower to exclusively make laws in relation to education. The Hon. Mr. Fielding.

for damages. Apparently the cause for the action lies in the fact that the board of health, which under the statutes is empowered to regulate such matters as the ice supply, has not the power to prohibit, And as clause 4 of the board's regulations now stand, Mr. Bennett is abso lutely prohibited from cutting or selling ice from his pond for all time, or until the clause is repealed. The ques tion thus is, has the board the power to say that even though Mr. Bennett's ponds were cleaned and purified, so as o meet all the requirements of the bacteriological and chemical tests, ice shall not be cut from them? Another point which will figure largely in the suit will be the fact that the ponds were condemned on general principles by the board, and not as the result of any test as to the purity of the water. . "We will fight the case to a finish."

New York, March 21 (Special Correspondence).—The seeming miracles of healing performed by that famous scientist and panopath of this city, Dr. Wallace Hadley, his startling cures of men and women given up to die by doctors, have been so wonderful in both method and results that they have awakened universal praise, astonishment and mystery among professional men and the general public alike. In the face of doctors' verdicts and apparent impossibilities this man has taken invalids pronounced hopelessly incurable and restored them to life and health when all other means have

In partial explanation he states that he has discovered the saw an opening through his skull as a greatest of life's laws, that apparently has been overlooked by previous searchinger and half an inch long came out crs after the secret of nature. And it is evident beyond doubt that this discovery terrible. He had abandoned all hope, and the greatest him a rever over disease and death thought, nothing, but the greate waited. evident beyond doubt that this discovery gives him a power over disease and death not possessed by ordinary mortals. So certain is he of his ability that he claims and offers to prove that there is no disease he may not cure. Astounding as that assertion appears to be, there is plenty of evidence to support it. In one case, if not in more, by means of the mysterious power he possesses, he is stated to have made the human heart beat again, reviving the flickering spark of life when all but extinguished, and curing diseases that baffled the skill of the best doctors and specialists. The growth in the railway business, which it has seen during its were considered a big passenger train in the eyes of Londoners. The engines in those early days were so few in number that they were called by pet names, such as London, Hamilton, Chatham, towns through which they dwarf beside those of today, and the long that there is scarcely any room and Richmond streets. A generation ago, the yards in front of the old station consisted of one or two tracks-and the freights were not in the way at all. In fact, the old freight cars were only built to hold ten tons, while their present-day successors carry from 30 to 40 tons.

Of course, additions and renovations have been made in the old station building from time to time, as the staff of employes and the business increased. The same has been the case with the ancient freight sheds on York street. So that roughly speaking, both buildings have about twice the accommodation that they had in 1853. They are still the same "at heart," however. But there is no doubt that both will pass into history within the next two or three years. be the first to go, it is said. The indications point to very big things in London. As stated some time ago, a large slice of land has been bonded on the south sides of the tracks, between Clarence and Talbot streets. The company has recently approached the Bowman Coal Company with a view to obtaining their premises, which lie on the west side of Clarence street, just south of the station. And a large extent of land has been quickly cleared farther along the line to the east by the demolition of the old roundhouse, so that if the bonded property is bought, the present G. T.

R. yards between Talbot and Waterloo streets will be doubled or tripled in extent. When the Clarence street difficulty is cleared up there will thus be a great space ready for sidings and freight trains. There is scarcely any doubt that the new station will be built upon the old site, largely on account of the fact that it is at the end of the business portion of Richmone street. It is the opinion of many that since the expansion of the city, both industrially and residentially, must lito the eastward, the new depot could well be built on the present site of the ### Careful drivers-Hueston's Liveries. Bridge Advantages.

Inasmuch as sounding board bridges have so much to do with the production of a resonant and sonorous tone in a piano there is particular interest in glancing at the method of manufacture. For a high-class instrument such as the Gourlay, the bridges are made of many thicknesses of the choicest quarter-cut maple, glued together in centinuous bent form, thus avoiding the possibility of splitting under the strain of the strings. Moreover, the Gourlay has a third Grand Bass Bridge which has not hitherto been used in upright pianos, but which has been regarded as a prime necessity in all Grands. One advantage is that the middle strings of the instrument are ever seen Mr. McKenzie or heard him greatly enriched in tone, and that all sections are equalized in tone produc-
