To the Honourable LOUIS CODERRE, K.C.,
Secretary of State, Ottawa.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit the following report of the operations of the Archives Branch for the year ended March 31, 1912.

Many important additions were made during the year to the division of Manuscripts, to the Map division and to the Library; and several exceedingly scarce engravings and prints relating to Canadian history were added to our collection. Through the courtesy of the Gentlemen of St. Sulpice access has been obtained to the archives of the Seminary at Montreal. The Sulpicians have been Seigniors of Montreal practically since the foundation of the city, and naturally the Seminary has become the depository of an extensive and valuable collection of documents bearing on the history of Montreal during the past two hundred and fifty years.

The generosity of the Gentlemen of the Seminary in placing copies of these documents at the disposal of the Archives will be greatly appreciated by all students of history. The task of investigating the records has been assigned to Mr. J. C. O. Bertrand who has received much valuable assistance and advice from Mr. Hébert, the registrar, and Mr. Henri Gauthier, the archivist of the Seminary.

A list of the documents already transcribed is given in Appendix C to this report.

The work of copying records in other places in the Province of Quebec, and also in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces has been vigorously prosecuted. From the Province of Nova Scotia we have received several important collections of documents, including the private papers of Joseph Howe, the gift of Mr. Sydenham Howe, and those of George Johnston, the gift of his estate. By the use of the photostat now in operation at the Archives copies of documents can be made by photography at a great reduction of time and labour, with the additional advantage of an exact reproduction of every feature of the original.

It is the intention of the Department to install a photostat in the Province of Quebec and one in the Maritime Provinces.

Several documents of special interest are printed as an appendix in addition to the lists, and summaries of documents received.

During the past year a calendar of the maps in the Archives has been published, and three volumes of much historical interest are in the press—(1) a second volume of Constitutional Documents, (2) a volume of documents relating to Prairie Legislation, (3) Documents relating to the War of 1812. A catalogue of pamphlets from 1867 to date is in preparation. I have also to acknowledge the generous gift of Mrs.

Marslin of a number of souvenirs presented to her by different members of the Royal Family consisting of books and pictures, a gift prompted, as the donor states, by her appreciation of the position Canada is taking as a member of the British Empire; and some papers and interesting water colours by Sir Edmund and Lady Head, the gift of Miss Head.

A list of the several appendices to this report, lettered from A to N, is subjoined.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

A. G. DOUGHTY.

SELECTIONS FROM THE DOCUMENTS MENTIONED IN THE FOREGOING LISTS
SURRENDER OF QUEBEC.1629.

On the twentieth day of the month of June seeing the extreme necessity to which we were reduced [of feeding on] the Roots that are in the woods after having been ten months only eating seven ounces of pea flour a Day for each man I decided not to allow all to suffer any longer [but] to remain with sixteen persons both in the fort and in the habitation including two little Indian girls who had been given me by the Indians to be taken to france and to send all the rest of my Companions among the Indians who were to take them all and to give them [the means of] life, deciding to send the Sr Boullé my brother-in-law in a little craft of seven or eight tons burthen with thirty persons to leave twenty at gaspay among the indians giving in payment two Robes of Beaver-skins and in the craft there were Five hundred Beaver-skins belonging to the Sr de Caen having instructed the said boullé to go and look for a passage in some ship to go to france or in finding none to take the risk of crossing the sea to give information of the necessity in which we were even if he were unwilling to Return to Quebecq to share in our distress.

Thé sd. boullé left Tadoussacq for this purpose, the Twenty sixth of the Month of July opposite mantane he met the Sr Emery de Caen commanding a ship which was on its way to bring us help and to take away the furs belonging to him in the cabin (habitation) of the little craft he took the Five hundred Beaver-skins that were there and put them in his own [ship] This done the sd. boullé got into a Boat to Come and bring me [the] news of the help that was coming to us by the sd. Sr emery de Caen and The seventh of the sd. month of July the sd. boullé was taken from the boat by Captain thomas who fired a Gun at him when trying to escape having discovered that they were Enemies and the sd. Sr thomas at once manned a Boat with a double crew and chased the sd. boullé so hard that they caught him and robbed him of everything which [he] had in the said boat Both clothes and arms and from there [he] went to find the general Kearke whom he told that the Sr Emery de Caen had told him that peace was made to which the general replied has he the signed articles of the Said peace no not that I know to which the sd. Gnal Answers that he believed Nothing of what was told him of it to guard [him, Boullé] and thus brought him to the port of Tadoussacq with Six sailors.

The sd. gñal knowing the help that was coming to Quebecq from the sd. de Caen and the extreme need the Sr de Champlain was in both from the Indians and from several sailors of the boat immediately fitted out a flyboat and two pataches with twenty pieces of iron Cannon and some two hundred and fifty men taking the risk of sending the flyboat and her two pataches up [the river] to Quebecq which they did being quite near the habitation before we had news of their coming which was the Nineteenth of July when they at once summoned the sd. sr. de Champlain to surrender and hand over the place to them by means of a reasonable Agreement offering us every possible consideration.

The Sr de Champlain after assembling the leading [men] at his habitation and taking into account the utter want of food not being able to resist or to subsist having neither provisions nor more [than] two or three hundred rounds of musketry help nor news of any one who might be coming resolved to accept the best terms they could [obtain] and to this end the sd. Champlain set forth the articles of his demands which were answered by the Captains Louis and thomas Kearke which the said Champlain accepted as hereinunder.

The next day [the] twentieth of the sd. month Captain Kearke took possession of the fort and habitation as well as of the houses of the Jesuit fathers recolletz and the houses of two families who remained throughout in their homes or on their property they placed guards and seized the arms and other commodities of the fort and habitation as well as of all the furs both in the warehouses and of Jesuit fathers who had three hundred and also of the Compagnons de l'habitation to whom Captain Louis promised twenty crowns to each one who would give up their robes of Beaver-skins which had been promised them by the Agreement.

[They took] from the assistant Clerk named Corneille his Chest a part [of which] was stolen from him contrary to the pledged faith of the articles by a frenchman called le baillif a native of Amiens who had been employed by the Sr de Caen in his warehouse in the sd. Quebecq the which frenchman [who was] very wicked in his life and in his morals [and] who is clerk for messieurs the English in the sd. warehouse is suspected of having stolen a Chalice worth a hundred Livres from the recolletz fathers As well as a hundred livres in silver and gold which he stole in the night from the said Corneille [and] gave him back the purse the next day notwithstanding this complaint was made to Captain Louis who remained in command in this place [and] who made some enquiry about it promising to make a closer one the fact remains that nothing more has been done about it.

Captain Louis when paying a visit to the Jesuit fathers promised them that nothing belonging to them would be taken in any way whatsoever which was kept to seeing which the sd. fathers made him the offer that if they had anything that pleased him he should take it he asked for several books and pictures such as he wished for which could not be denied him.

Also that which belonged to the recolletz fathers was preserved to them except the silver-gilt chalice [which] as said was stolen from them.

The sd. Captain louis gave me a Receipt for all the Arms and commodities that were in the habitation.

I learned being at Tadoussacq that when the sd. Jesuit fathers took ship to come from Quebec to the sd. Tadoussacq the Captain louis wished to inspect their chest, and seeing there two silver-gilt chalices with the cruets in a stand he asked to have the sd. Chalices and wishing to handle them a Jesuit father named father massé said to him sir those are sacred things do Not profane them, straight-way said he profanely since you tell me that I shall take them Because I do not believe and will take away the Idolatry The faith which [you] put in these things that is why I take them which I should not otherwise have done.

Moreover general Kearke Kept the Surgeon of the habitation against his will a Carpenter a ploughman and a sailor telling them he would give them as much pay as they had from the french saying he was forced to do this all the more that he had need of those [of them?] on his ships.

I sailed from the sd. Quebecq in the flyboat with the S<sup>r</sup> thomas Kearke The XXIIIrd of the said month July who also took the two pataches with him after having unloaded them on the way at [a distance of] twenty and four leagues from Quebecq we met the sd. Emery de Caen who was coming up the River [and] who was attacked by the sd. thomas Kearke and his two pataches [in which attack] he defended himself very well Until the sd. sr. thomas boarded him in such fashion that they could not break loose from each other, at last the sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Caen not being able to contend against a force much greater than his own, yielded on the same terms as those of Quebecq the Which the sd. Captain thomas promised him and took possession of his ship and of all that was in it taking it to Tadoussacq.

The Sd. general Kearke being returned from Quebec to Tadoussacq told me I must give up the Receipt all the more that it was Important to his brother and himself and that I must give it up to him not being able to refuse in the Condition I was in on his ships I placed it in his hands We were a month longer at the sd. tadoussacq waiting till all the Supplies were transported to the sd. Quebecq Which being done we left the sd. port of Tadoussacq the third Day of September to return to England where we arrived the thirteenth of the month of october 1629.

In the Conference held last Thursday between Mess<sup>s</sup> the keeper of the Seals and marshal de Schomberg and the Agents of the King of Great Britain for the settlement of matters relating to Canada and to la Cadye.

The Agents offered to restore Canada without restriction and asked that articles should be appointed on behalf of the two kings to decide on their claims to port Royal Submitting as sole title A memorandum sent by M<sup>r</sup> Carleton and drawn up [by] Captain Alexander son of the Secretary of state of Scotland the person chiefly concerned in the matter whereby They claimed to shew that the Scots and English made the first landings in the settlements occupied prior to the war by the french and that consequently their right was anterior to ours.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

The keeper of the Seals Having examined their arguments Answered that it could not be replied by writing in such Wise as they asked inasmuch as their memorandum was not authentic not signed by any public minister That it was A loose sheet drawn up by A private individual for his [own] Advantage [and] having no foundation inasmuch as the dates were lacking and that they could not shew at what period the English planted their colony in the places where ours [now] are.

He also stated that he had a document in latin whereby the decisive answer concerning the restitution of the places in la Cadye was promised him within three months after the Day of its date which delay had been asked for solely for the purpose of doing things in an orderly [fashion] and to satisfy the scotsmen who had borne all the cost of the expedition [which was] leaving that there was no further reason for postponement nor to put the matter in doubt or compromise.

The Result was that either the King of G.B. should Restore without delay the places taken from the french in la Cadye or that he should not take it as a Breach [of peace] were we to recover them by force, having no other Purpose than to regain our own wrongfully Seized by certain individuals Who should not be upheld contrary to the law of nations and to the Detriment of the union and public peace which we desire to maintain with the scots our ancient friends.

And inasmuch as the English have always been in possession of certain places in la Cadye wherein those who have been driven away will be replaced on condition that they live as our friends and that an agreement be reached concerning the bounds and limits between the Ones and the others [between them and us].

That the restitution of the things taken which shall be still in existence shall be carried out to the full and the value of those which have been sold or removed by reasonable agreement and in good faith and as shall be decided by expert and intelligent persons concerning whom the princes shall agree and each shall also appoint one of the subjects of the other [namely a] responsible man who shall give surety and warrant for the execution of the things decided on.

That in the meanwhile all executive decrees, letters of marque and reprisals heretofore granted shall be revoked and declared null [and void] in order that matters may be amicably settled.

Thereafter the keeper of the seals proposed to send a man to England with power to treat of all the points at issue between us and accordingly appointed the Sieur de Caen who for various reasons cannot be [considered] fitted for the task in question.

1°. Because he has no knowledge of la Cadye save by the accounts of others having Never been in the places [referred to] nor made any settlements even in Canada Whither he has only journeyed as A merchant who goes to do business and not with the purpose of discovering the country and of establishing the French dominion there.

2°. It is manifestly contrary to the Interests of those of the company who have dispossessed him and [since] he might out of revenge or in the hope of recovery Throw matters into confusion and break up their Association.

3°. Having an action against the merchants of London for the Beaver-skins which were taken from him since peace [was made] which he estimates at Fifty thousand crowns It is to be feared that having the power at command being unwilling to lessen his claim in any way He should hinder the settlement of the main treaty being urged [thereto] by several persons Interested in His business.

The only person capable of treating and of conveying Instructions to the Kings ambassador is the cap<sup>t</sup>. Champelain as [being] the one who made the first landings in the countries [in question] founded the settlements built the forts and visited the harbours and coasts of which He has a very exact plan and charts which he will shew to Monseigneur the Cardinal if so desired and will give him information concerning the condition of the country the situation of the settlements of what should be done to maintain ourselves there and to draw profit from it.

He has a share in the compagnie de la nouvelle france the Directors of which have been instructed by Monseig<sup>r</sup> the cardinal to attend the naval council to morrow morning.

DEPOSITION OF JAN DESCAMBOURS as to his detention at Rochelle and failure to relieve the fortress of Quebec, etc.

October 30.

On tuesday [the]thirtieth Day of october m vi<sup>c</sup> twenty nine, Before us Jan aveline &c.

Appeared Jan Descambours, Saying that he had embarked in the month of march last in one of the pataches of the S<sup>r</sup> de Caen commanded by him for the purpose of going to the assistance of The fortress and habitation of Quebec in new france, And that being about three hundred leagues at sea They were overtaken by so violent A Storm that it carried away all their masts and all their Sails whereby They were constrained to return to la rochelle where the new company caused the Sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Caen's pataches to be seized, The which delayed them for more than fifteen Days. For from thence ensued the ruin of new france, inasmuch as they went and arrived in canada two or three days after the English And had they not been stopped at la Rochelle They would have arrived more than ten Days before the english who having found the Wind fairer in the river S<sup>t</sup> Laurens took the fort and habitation commanded by the S<sup>r</sup> Champlain by agreement [with its possessors].

[He] Said that his Capt<sup>n</sup> having after two engagements fought with the English passed thanks to the fog through the S<sup>r</sup> Querc's four ships at anchor off the moulin Vauldre And doing his best to get up the River to precede the others who were in front of them They learned from the Indians of the taking of the fortress as above [stated], And [that] afterwards the said Querc having ordered the ships which had taken the sd. habitation to Com<sup>e</sup> and fire on the patache of the sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Caen sent down a Phlibot [fly boat] armed with eight guns [and supported] by two pataches each armed with four Guns and Came and fought the deponent's patache for the space of Three hours, But A brother of the sd. S<sup>r</sup> Querc, commanding the sd. three Ships, seeing that they had lost seven or eight english He caused the sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Champlain to appear who came on deck, and the sd. Querc shouting, pledged his word that he would grant the same terms as he had given to the sd S<sup>r</sup> de Champlain, which the sd. De Caen seeing and that there did not seem to be any possibility of holding out Inasmuch as the whole of the sd. S<sup>r</sup> Quere's force was above them at the passage They agreed to surrender The terms were that no englishman should enter the deponent's Ship until they should have joined their general, and that no frenchman should be robbed which was kept to.

[He] Said that the English have brought back about Five or six thousand of beaver-skins belonging to the General de Caen, besides those which they were able to trade with the Indians which are not a great many.

Said that the english sent all their Provisions and goods to the fort and habitation of Quebec, where They left Eighty or a hundred English with sufficient ammuniton for the protection of the sd. fort.

Said that in the Ship of the sd. De Caen There were five or six men [who were] wounded in the last fight And seven or eight english killed.

Said that the sd. english left in the sd. country the two pataches which they had passed and another as well which they have taken up to the sd. country.

Said that all the french both the sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Caen and the S<sup>rs</sup> dupont and champlain embarked in the Ships of the S<sup>r</sup> Quere who to the number of Six ships & the S<sup>r</sup> de Caen's patache set Sail from Tadousac the XIII D<sup>y</sup> of September and arrived at the Downs (ladune) in England on Satudday last the sd. S<sup>rs</sup> de Caen, Dupont and Champlain having been taken to London, all the other french landed at the Downs to return thence to france and he [the] deponent having embarked at dover to Come to this Town arrived there To Day.

Said that he had no word of the new patache which parted from them during the heavy gale and that it must be taken for certain that she went down.

Said that the Capt<sup>n</sup> Jacques Michel who took the english to Canada died there & was buried The which he has Sworn and affirmed [to be] True, and signed.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CHATEAUNEUF TO RICHELIEU.

[The parts of this long letter which have been omitted have no bearing on Canada or Acadia. At the beginning of this document there is a marginal note to this effect: The words "in cipher are underlined in red." They are here printed in italics.]

*** I must now refer to the matter of St Christopher and Canada. In regard to the first, I was very glad to learn, as you were good enough to inform me of the truth of what occurred there, the Earl of Carlile* who is the only person Concerned having given out that he had gained a great victory over ours by land, where there were some four hundred left, and that having acknowledged their fault, They had asked for peace, which the english are said to have granted them and Imposed a kind of tribute for the lands they hold in the Island; On my giving the King to understand that which you told me about it, He said that he was better Informed than I and told a story of a land battle and the great advantages which his people had gained. Whereto I begged him not to trust the news and to believe that I was telling him the truth, concerning which I know that that very Day [when] supping with the Queen he found great fault with the Earl of Carlile who could not confess to having been beaten for fear of discrediting his plantation which he hopes to sell to some merchants For tobacco has decreased ten fold here in the last year. They are therefore thinking of planting Canary Vines there instead of tobacco. After St. Christopher I spoke to the King about the restitution of Canada and [the] fort of Quebec shewing by the capitulation that it was taken after the [conclusion of] peace. He said to me The Scots claim that the french have formerly wrongfully taken [the country] from them, and that in the short while wherein they can get back their own It must be allowed them [to do so] and that this is not contrary to the treaty. I replied that I saw he had been given Information on the matter at variance with the Truth, but that I did not wish to enter into these disputes, to wit who were the first to discover these lands, the french or the Scots. It was Enough for me to tell him that we were in possession of Canada and Quebec before the war, that we have since been deprived of it, that by the treaty we should be put back there, wherefore I begged him to consider the matter simply and in good faith and to order the restitution of it and of the goods that had been seized. He told me that I was better Informed than he and that I was right that his commisssioners would settle this matter along with others relating to trade. I know nevertheless that since [then] Those of his council have wished to enquire into this claim on Canada, and of nine who were present there were Six sufficiently Insolent to wish to Maintain that they ought not to give up Canada to us. But the three of whom the Lord Treasurer was one maintained that it should [be] given up. They now desire that I should meet them in order to advise as I told you how to make good what has been done since the peace, That is to treat of the restitution of eight or ten of our ships which have been taken on their way to Spain, of their two which were taken by Bontemps on the coast of barbary, of St. Christopher and of Canada without going any farther in [respect of] a general regulation of trade, which They neither look for nor desire. As to that which you sent me concerning the flag and the [right of] search at sea, They will not hear of anything, their purpose being to hold this matter in abeyance until they see what they can expect [to gain] from the peace with Spain. If that is made the letters of marque [will] cease, if it is not made They believe that we have such need of their support and assistance against the might of Spain that we shall willingly agree to prohibit our subjects from carrying any grain or cloths into Spain. I should raise some difficulty about treating for the restitution of private property without a general settlement were it not for the fact of Canada, For as for the ships which they hold here They are of small consequence and [they] are being strongly urged by their [own] merchants [who are] Interested in those held at Dieppe which they say are of great value. I shall nevertheless have leisure to carry on these discussions without binding myself [in any way] until I know the King's wishes and yours, [as to] whether I am to treat concerning the private property [referred to] should they be unwilling to arrive at a general settlement. And whether in the event of my treating for them and they give me full satisfaction in respect of giving back the said ships and of Canada, I may also promise them the return of the two [ships] which are at Dieppe with all the goods. The whole of this discussion bears solely on the recovery of these two ships which are at Dieppe, otherwise I doubt if we should have any satisfaction from them. And we must here take into account that I can only obtain one promise of the restitution of Canada the performance of which can only take place next Spring, Which I beg of you, Monseigneur to consider and to give me precise instructions as to how I should act having nothing to hope for with these people here who are bold enough to shamelessly deny truth and right and have made peace with us more out of shame and inability to make war than out of friendship and regard for the general good. As for the Toiras ship the Lord Treasurer told me plainly that we must look for it not of friendship and not by agreement, and on my asking him to explain he told me that there could be no friendship until we should have removed the Ré flags which are in Nostre dame, I think I [already] wrote you that I fancied that this was what they were aiming at.

In regard to the matter of Canada I have told you what I have done up to the present and how all the goods were seized and kept, And that These Gentlemen of the council were putting off from Day to day my admission to a conference with a view to straightening out all that had been done since the peace, Which they have not yet done their whole time having been taken up for the last fifteen Days in Questioning those prisoners to whom I shall refer presently. I have no doubt whatever so far as I can be sure of the fickleness of these people Here but that I shall obtain an order for the surrender of Canada into the hands of those whom it may please the King to send thither, the performance whereof as I have told you cannot take place before the month of April or May. The greatest difficulty is to know what is meant by the words Canada or new france, I see by the [letter] you wrote me by the hand of Mons<sup>r</sup> Martin that you specify Cape Breton and Laccadie, whereof being in doubt I have begged the Sr Champlain, whom I would willingly have retained here, to give me in writing before leaving the names of the places and coasts which I should claim as belonging to the King and should be restored to him, Which he did a copy of which I am sending you whereby you will see that neither Cape breton nor Laccadie are included, and that he thinks it sufficient that we should have the right to go and fish there. I beg of you Monseigneur to have this point enquired into with him [Champlain] and those who are familiar with it in order to set the matter in the clearest possible light and not lay claim to any thing which they can refuse us nor yet give up anything which belongs to the King, or if you prefer that I should simply without explanation on my part or on theirs be satisfied with their declaring that Canada and the fortress of Quebec shall be surrendered to the King. Which might possibly be the better [way] In any case I shall await your instruction in regard to it. As also if I can promise the further restitution of the two ships which are at Dieppe as against the restitution of those which are adjudged here the decisions concerning which I shall send you by this mail or if not by the next for I see that this is their sole purpose and that we shall have difficulty in bringing them to a general settlement or to a recall of the letters of reprisals against our ships that are bound for Spain except I be given leave to speak boldly and to tell them plainly on the King's behalf that he will be compelled to issue like letters of marque to his subjects against the English ships that may be found at sea. I do not think that if they see us fully determined [to do this] they will dare to maintain so Unjust a quarrel. But they are a self-willed people and the King more so than all his subjects who are hard and bold in refusing those things whereto they think they cannot be compelled by force & for fear lest they should accuse me of too much heat I have confined myself to speaking to them of the matter in the manner wherein I wrote [of it] to you.

In regard to de Caen there can be no doubt as to his fidelity in this matter of Canada, where to say truth if Mons<sup>r</sup> de Lauson had had as much experience as [he had] zeal and devotion the misfortune they suffered would not have happened But this is not his trade*****

My Lord

Since writing you my letter of the first which you will find with this which will be delivered to you by the Sr de Caen whom I have deemed it advisable to send to you, These Gentlemen of the council notified me to attend their council the next day [the] third of this month in order to communicate to me a despatch which they had received from the Sr Edmond Relative to a conference that he had had with Monsieur Bouthilier to whom I am reporting on all that took place in this council and on all the frivolous complaints they make to me Whereby you may Judge of the fickleness and Inconstancy of this nation, of the slight faith and certainty there is in treating with them. I will therefore not trouble you with it farther, This [letter] being only to tell you of the declaration they have given me in Latin of that which they had said to me two Days previously concerning the restitution of the things taken since the peace, begging me to regard it as merely a Draught of their Intention and to pay no attention to faults of words and phrases, whereof They told me that when I should have considered it They would come to an agreement without [any] difficulty. There is something ambiguous and not sufficiently explicit in regard to the abandonment of Cape breton and Port roial As also in what they say of the surrender of that which was taken at St. Christopher, which I intend not only to clear up, but to finish altogether. I know they have inserted it to please the Earl of Carlile* who as I told you openly professes himself the enemy of france and which would be a Cue and a pretext for Annoying us at every turn. They are also making a difficulty about the restitution of the goods taken and adjudicated between the XXIII april and the XX May when the peace was proclaimed, all the more that the Judges and the parties [concerned] say that knowing nothing of the peace, the former adjudicated, the latter Sold The goods and gave the sailors their share that it is Impossible to give them back and [that] two [cases] of this kind exist, as they also say occurred at dieppe and that it was agreed to return two thirds and to lose the third which had been given to the sailors. My opinion is that we shall have to adopt the [aforesaid] plan, You will see by means of the sd. restitutions what they [really] wish and likewise the revocation of those letters of reprisals [issued] to Cadeau and Launay, which as I told you in my former letters I shall make no difficulty about consenting to If they are Willing to Come to a general settlement it being however only a question of the restitution of the things previously seized without any assurance that they will do likewise in future I am objecting to this, And were it not [for] Canada I should be absolutely of opinion that we ought to refuse the revocation in question and even to come to any restitution except by a general settlement, but as public affairs involve various considerations, you may possibly find it well that I should consent to the restitution of the things which they ask for and agree on a Day for Its being made. In which case I beg that you will let me know whether I am to promise the recall of the said letters [of reprisals] For as they make this a condition in their written [statement], it would also be a condition on our part in order to oblige them to fulfil all that they shall promise us concerning the surrender of Canada, Cape breton and Port roial about which There will be difficulties enough here and over the places to be evacuated in regard to which I think [that] it would be well that some of the King's Ships should accompany those who shall go thither in order to carry out promptly and powerfully that which should be [done] for when we shall have done so They will hide it [the fact], If we are weak They will dictate to us and this matter will never be satisfactorily settled. The Sr de Caen who foresees nothing but difficulties [in the matter] will discuss it with you should you wish [to do so]. There are people over there who have served Mons<sup>r</sup> Edmond very ill, they have written from there that in speaking to the King he said all the evil possible of the late duke of Buckingham* and of the power he had over his Master who is not pleased at these tales. Mad<sup>e</sup> de la Trémouille is one of the persons who writes most news from over there and it [is] commonly [reported] by means of the merchants [that] she is in correspondence with the Earl of Carlile*. This is as much as I can discover, assuring you that I am

After the receipt of y<sup>r</sup> last [letters] of the XXIX ultimo I carried on several conferences with those of the council without [however] getting any farther as you will see by the duplicate of the [letter] which I am writing to the King. I do not know what they will do about Canada, but whatever they may promise me I shall hold nothing for certain except we be in possession of it. For I see by experience that all that they promise in word they render doubtful in execution, whence the King's subjects find Themselves Daily cheated by these people here who although to some They have given back their ships after many complaints and proceedings, this has been with so many charges and outlays that they would have done better to abandon them from the first day they were taken, And since they do not punish these pirates in any way, but rather shew them every favour possible, This evil will never come to an end save by force and protection which The King shall give His Subjects as I pointed out to the King of Great Britain, who suffers himself to be led in this as in all matters by those of his counsel who happen to be all Partners and sharers in the captures that are made, and hold it for a maxim of their State that as they are Islanders they must hush up these piracies that are wrought by their Subjects in order to keep them in the practice of the sea. It is all the harm they can do, for of great purposes or of great undertakings whether of offence or defence They are Incapable.

The Spanish ambassador is here without power to treat of or to propose anything as He told me, but only to play the part of an ambassador notwithstanding They have sent one thence to Spain to treat of peace whereof they have no news as yet of its negotiation. The said Spanish Ambassador has brought M<sup>r</sup> Smith Bishop of Chalcedon a Letter from the Nuncio who is in flanders, whereby he suggests to him in order to put an end to the differences existing between him and the regulars, to appoint two Bishops besides himself in England and to divide The Kingdom between three, who shall be chosen from among the regulars. This [comes of] a Jealousy which the Spaniards have against the said Lord Bishop whom they regard as french [in his sympathies] in order to lessen His power, nevertheless He being weary of these quarrels gladly agrees thereto and begs me to write to Mons<sup>r</sup> de Bethune to support this new erection of two Bishoprics at Rome if it is proposed there. I have told him that I would write to you about it and that you would instruct Mons<sup>r</sup> de Bethune to act in the matter according as——— should Deem it fitting. I am still awaiting both Mons<sup>r</sup> de fontenay and the capuchins who tarry too long and cannot ascertain whence the cause [of delay] proceeds. I greatly regret however having Sojourned so long and Uselessly and not to have the honour of Following in So glorious a journey as you are making whereof the success is awaited with great expectation and Jealousy from over there where the English ambassador who is in Savoy and must in the ordinary course go to france has despatched a courier thence in order to Learn how He should act in regard to you whereof I did not meddle to speak, save when they told me the Reason for the despatch of this courier, I said he was right being in a court where the Prince and His children yield precedence to you without question and even the Cardinal to whom the said Ambassador yields precedence on all occasions and that it would be very extravagant [for him] to claim rank and equality with you. I do not know what instructions they will give him, For since they are guided neither by reason nor by decency I dare not hope anything, save if it please your Lordship the continuance of the honour of your favour which I shall all my life strive to deserve by my obedience and my services being

SIRE,

In compliance with Your Majesty's commands conveyed to me in your last of the xxvi ultimo I have made renewed Representations on this side to the King of Great Britain and those of His council in order to arrive at a satisfactory settlement which should make trade between the Subjects of Your Maj<sup>ty</sup> and his Subjects in conformity with the draught thereof which I sent to the Cardinal and to Mons<sup>r</sup> Bouthilier, The former having advised me that Y<sup>r</sup> Majesty approved of it. Having however discussed it on several occasions with the leading men of the council on this side, They being at last convinced both of the reasonableness and the justice [of it] gave me as a final answer that they were quite ready to order the surrender and restitution of all that had been taken from your Maj<sup>ty</sup>'s Subjects since the peace, Even Canada and the goods brought thence provided I could assure them that Your Majesty would on that side surrender the two Ships taken by Cap<sup>t</sup> Bontemps, But that they could not cancel the letters of marque which they had given against ships carrying provisions or munitions of war to Spain which was an ordinary practice of their State, that they were moreover bound by the treaty which they made in the year sixteen twenty five of an offensive alliance with the States [General] to continue the said letters, that they could not therefore negotiate with me for the revocation of the same, that similar proposals had been made in the time of the late King Y<sup>r</sup> Father to Queen Elizabeth by the S<sup>rs</sup> de Boissise and de Beaumont then Ambassadors here who were satisfied with like answers wherewith the late King found no fault but continued to maintain peace and good friendship with the said lady Queen even as they hoped that Y<sup>r</sup> Maj<sup>ty</sup> would be satisfied with the same answer which they were making me on behalf of the King their Master, who moreover wished to give your Majesty all satisfaction and make a good settlement for the freedom of trade between your subjects from one Kingdom to the other, Whereto I represented to them The Result & consequence of this answer with all the discretion at my command in order to shew them that it would be difficult [and] even Impossible that Your Majesty should suffer his Subjects to be robbed and despoiled daily by the English without assisting & defending them for the preservation of their life & of their property, And that this defence could only be by force and [by] using the same means and reprisals against the English which would give rise to much trouble and misunderstanding between the two Crowns, That the last breach which had occurred was due to this Cause, That your Majesties had also provided by the last treaty of peace for the necessity of settling that which related to trade and to instruct your Ambassadors in this sense as I had been by y<sup>r</sup> Majesty, so that not consenting to agree to this settlement, was tantamount to saying that they would not implement that which they had promised Whereof y<sup>r</sup> Maj<sup>ty</sup> would have Reason to complain and their Master would be held responsible, That the practice of this State which they alleged to me had Never been with us nor with our consent Besides that they could not call usage nor practice a thing which had Never been applied to us without constant complaint and opposition and for so short a time that they could not count a whole year of it, as I shewed them by the remainder of our treaties and of that which had passed between France and them since the treaty of perpetual alliance which was in sixteen eighteen. But as they are more set on their own way than on right, They held to their answer hoping so far as I can judge of their conduct and the condition of their affairs, that before your Majesty can decide what should be done in regard to this proceeding, they will have an answer from Their Ambassador whom they have in Spain, That if matters tend towards peace as They greatly wish, that all kinds of letters of reprisals and acts of hostility will come to an end at sea, in such wise as that Y<sup>r</sup> Majesty shall obtain that which he wishes, [and] If on the other hand the war continues, they believe that Your Majesty is So much involved in the war of Italy against the house of Austria that he would be very glad to make a league for the continuation of the same with them, and go on gaining time with these arguments without being willing to settle anything, believing however that they are doing enough by surrendering that which has been taken since the peace. Whereto I have told them I did not think Y<sup>r</sup> Majesty would agree, the things taken being of different natures and conditions, To wit Canada and the furs which were removed thence, As also two or three ships that were taken when fishing, or on their return were not Subject to any judgment or condition, nor could [they] allege any Conceivable cause for retaining them The treaty saying distinctly that whatever should have been taken after the Day of the signing of the same should be restored on the one side and on the other. That in respect of the ships that were at dieppe They were taken laden with arms and munitions of war which they were carrying to the Infidels and people with Whom we were at war. That by their laws and ours the transport of arms and such like to the Infidels was forbidden, that the matter should be referred for Judgment when the parties could produce their reasons and defend their right, whereas I insisted that Canada and the furs and ships taken on their way to fish should be simply given up and restored in Compliance with that which had been promised by the treaty and without condition, Whereto they put me off to discuss it yet once more And the next day I took occasion to represent to the King of Great Britain all the objections which those of his council had made to me, whom I found greatly set on not giving way, notwithstanding that I was able to point out to him all the troubles that I anticipated from this procedure, Concerning which I shall await Your Majesty's instructions without saying anything further, besides that I do not think it necessary [to do so] it being merely fitting that Y<sup>r</sup> Majesty should devise means to prevent their doing harm or damage to His Subjects, and thereby set them [the English] in order and bring them to reason as He will well know how to do whenever it shall please Him this nation having Never been So weak nor So poor as it is at present. * * * * *

mised it to me as I have informed the King sending him the memo. which I submitted, But as it is a question of carrying It out They wish to do so to The Letter that is to say to surrender to us the fort of Quebec which the English took from us, but to make no reference to Cape Breton and Port roial where they landed at the same time as at Quebec, contending that being coasts abandoned by the french, they did not take them from them and were therefore free to land there. Yet nevertheless I learn from all those who are familiar with Canadian matters, that their staying in those places would be greatly to the detriment of the company's plans and even of the fishery, Besides that it would be a disgrace to france to have lost something by this last war, the English and Scots have some ancient claims that these coasts were first discovered by them, And we much more right to shew the contrary, But all this is to go into discussion and conference while they are in actual possession, which I have always declined to do, Insisting on the terms of the treaty that things were to be restored as they were before the peace, and that, after they shall have withdrawn, they may have any conference they desire. They reply that this is good for the fort of Quebec But that as for port roial, they have taken nothing from the french there, and settled in An Uninhabited land where They still are and promise to live in all good friendship and Understanding with us. On account of these Unfounded claims I am putting off acceptance of the surrender of Quebec, for having submitted to them the memo which I sent you, If I agree to [take] Quebec only, They will take my Silence or acceptance of part of my demand as a recognition of their possession, and that the matter having been arranged I was satisfied with Quebec [alone], Concerning which I beg that you will let me know plainly [what are] the King's wishes otherwise I shall leave the matter at issue to Mons<sup>r</sup> de fontenay without accepting anything. I am nevertheless constrained to add that they are making strenuous preparations to send people there this year, And that unless you stop them it will not be easy to get them away from there later on [and] even Impossible for this Prince to withdraw them [they] being all kinds of vagabonds barbarians and savages from Scotland whom they are sending there, and who are little skilled in obeying. * * *

I talked about . . . ago to the Marquis de Brezé who told me very frankly all that had taken place & [while] all . . . is true & without malice yet rumour which is always inventing something new mixed up matters quite remote from one another both in time and subject and has caused them to be received as [if] said at one time & on one occasion & [I] cannot exonerate of great malice [the person] who talked thus, things being as they are. As for what he said concerning M. de la Mailleraye, He said [quite] truly that he was a clever man & was very discreet, & [not] more than half an hour later having spoken of very different matters [he] began to talk about different kinds of minds, Whereupon the sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Brezé speaking of himself said that his mind was one that acted without craftiness and quite sincerely Which had no connexion whatever with that which had gone before & was quite irrelevant to it, & yet the conjunction gives rise to a comparison & the bad impression derived from it, wherein the malice consists.

In regard [however] to England, in saying that trade and commerce Shall be restored as it was heretofore I fear lest that may debar us from imposing the Duties whereby it is proposed to levy on foreigners in our ports the same dues that they lay on us in their state, for which reason I most humbly beg of you to consider whether it might not be possible to insert some little word which would preserve your freedom & yet should nevertheless seem in no wise other than in good faith, as [by] adding after these words: as it was heretofore and in the same manner as with the other allies of france.

We have also learned that the english are making preparations to conquer & invade all that france holds in Canada, They have sixteen ships quite ready & that They have already conquered it in imagination [is shewn by the fact] that in new maps Imprinted in Holland They have named Nova anglia that which had always been named Nova francia as You may see by the map I am sending you in a corner of the same which is not a matter of great importance if it stood alone, but with the warning we have of their intentions it seems to me that it should not be despised & [that it would be] well to make sure of in negotiating.

I shall expect the papers from the marine department when it shall please you [to send them] & you shall be good enough to give me a day [in] the holidays to go and sleep in town to have the honour of an interview & receive y<sup>r</sup> decision on the difficulties You have met with in the Edict.

I shall send you at the earliest date God helping me the memorandum in the manner followed on similar occasions but bloodletting and a little pain oblige me to finish.

ARTICLES AGREED UPON BETWEEN THE TWO KINGS OF FRANCE AND ENGLAND THE* DAY OF* 1631.

The two Kings having Deemed it necessary for the Interests of their Crowns and the quiet of their subjects to restore the ancient alliance peace and friendship, long existing between their two Kingdoms Have again thought it their duty to think seriously of the preservation of the Princes and States their allies, and to this end Have done and negotiated that which here follows.

It has been agreed between them that they will assist The King of Sweden and Their Honours the States of Holland in the Sum of Three millions of livres each equally one half which Shall be furnished without any fail by The sd. two Kings within the first Six months of each year in The City of Amsterdam in ready money or bills of exchange good and Amounting to the sum of given and delivered to the agents or Attornies of the King of Sweden, and the Sum of _____ to the sd. States, while and so long as they shall carry on the war Wherein they are now [engaged] and shall put their Arms in the field for that purpose.

To this end the sd. two Kings promised to treat and negotiate conjointly or Separately by their Ambassadors and residents at [the courts of] the sd. King of sweden and [the] States to the effect that in consideration of The sd. assistance They pledge themselves to make no Peace nor truce, Without their consent advice or participation, or to continue The war for Six or ten years, And even should they be unable to obtain One of these two conditions, The sd. two Kings Have nevertheless further agreed that they will not fail to furnish The sd. Three millions of livres to the sd. S<sup>r</sup> King of Sweden or States for whatever number of years they shall make and carry on The sd. war.

And inasmuch as the King of Great Britain declares that he has no dearer Care than to See His brother-in-law The Prince Palatine restored to his Estates or a part thereof The Most xtian King promises to intervene for him in good faith both with the Emperor and with the Duke of Bavaria to obtain for him by a favourable treaty A fitting satisfaction.

The two Kings will invite The Republic of Venice to unite with them in this Treaty and to assist The sd. King of Sweden and Their Honours the States, on condition that even should the said Republic decline to agree to it, The two Kings will not fail to furnish The sd. Three millions of livres to the said King of sweden and States as has been said.

For the confirmation of A greater peace and perfect understanding and friendship between the two Kings and to remove all subjects of disagreement that arise between them in regard to that which remains to be fulfilled of the last treaty of Peace and that which has since Arisen—

Their Majesties will pass the treaty agreed upon in London concerning The freedom of Trade and the restitution of things taken and held since the Peace Between the S<sup>r</sup> de Chasteauneuf Ambassador extraordinary & the Commissioners of the King of Great Britain.

And inasmuch as the King of Great Britain then put off giving the said S<sup>r</sup> de Chasteauneuf an answer concerning the surrender of Laccadre* and port Royal which have been taken from the french since the Peace, until he should have received advice from His Council of Scotland, Although by the answer given to the demands of the sd. S<sup>r</sup> de Chasteauneuf the surrender of all that had been taken in Laccadre,* port Royal Cape breton and other places from the french had been distinctly promised him in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Peace, and that hitherto His M<sup>ty</sup> of Great Britain has not given satisfaction on this point.

The Most xtain King will make no objection to the delays and difficulties raised by the Scots, Provided that the King of Great Britain [shall] declare that the Treaty made and passed between Cap<sup>t</sup> de la Tour and Captain Alexander in Acadia the 1629 shall be of no effect, And that he is willing that the said La Tour & the french shall be restored and remain in the condition wherein they were in Acadia at the time that Peace was signed between the two crowns The XXIX April 1629 Promising further that neither he nor any of his English subjects shall assist the Scots in the sd. Acadia directly or indirectly in the event of their persisting in the difficulties they have hitherto made in connexion therewith, The sd. two Kings being further agreed that whatsoever may take place in Acadia and the coasts thereof between The french and the Scots shall not in any wise affect the Peace which is and shall continue firm between the two Crowns.

My Lord,

This will convey to you the reasons and the conclusion of all our delays the reason has been the difficulty we have had in getting the places we have to surrender out of the hands of the Scots but the King has at last Satisfied them and they are ready to give them up the conclusion is that all the restitutions of merchandise on either side have been arranged with the Ambassador together with the surrender of the said places of Quebec and port real* they are also willing to pass the treaty of commerce as drawn up by us there now remains therefore only the payment of the rest of the [Queen's] marriage [portion]* which the King expects Burlamasi to receive on arriving who will convey the King's despatches for the surrender of the places [in Canada and Acadia] and will at the same time ask for these orders for the money at whatever the present rate may be accounting for it to the King so that he may be able to use it for the King of Sweden for whom it is absolutely intended. I was not able to answer for the success of this resolution as being outside the [terms of the] precise promise made me concerning the payment of the money for which reason the Queen has seen fit My Lord to despatch this special courier to you in order that you might not be unprepared for some alteration of affairs when you receive the resolution which will be sent you in a very few days by your Amba[ssador] and also to induce you to undertake the settlement of this matter which merely turns upon a point of time since it has been determined to carry it out and the truth is it would not have been so urged were it not that the affairs of the King of sweden and his daily entreaties shew us plainly that the times which had been set for the payment and which had been named here by your Ambassador after the news of the surrender [of Quebec, etc.] would apparently be too late for which reason the Queen was according to the hopes* always held out to me of a willingness to make the payment sooner in the event of its being determined here to use it in a quarter where this matter of time will not endanger so happy an agreement she promising you on behalf of the King that it [the money] shall be wholly and immediately applied to the affairs of the King of sweden and personally I believe that the journey of the Marquis who is hastening his preparations being already back from Scotland will depend largely on the success of this [matter] there may possibly be people who would not regret the delay but the success of this matter will give us an advantage over all the ill will which we may have to encounter and will not only give the Queen courage and inclination but strength and power to promote daily the results of the good understanding between the two crowns, wherefore Monseigneur taking the conjuncture into account and the good and the evil that may arise therefrom I have no doubt but that you will be willing to pleasure his Majesty in this matter being confident of receiving at the same time all the assurances of the fulfillment of all that should ensue from it the disadvantages of a misunderstanding as well as the certainty of falling into it if this present agreement miscarries are well known to us this is why I shall have no doubt of your ability to avoid them in an even greater difficulty than this one there is so little to be done in the present instance that the importance of not even seeming to fail makes me anxious moreover the general welfare [and] those who serve you personally will have the benefit of having overcome difficulties which you will not find it hard to conceive of [but] most of all I beg that Your Lordship will first inform the Queen of the resolution [come to] and if you are inclined to comply with our requests it will be honourable and fitting you should do so out of consideration for the Queen and to so state publicly and to send specially hither placing everything in her hands before the Ambassador announces it I have pledged my life to her that france would do this if she would make up her mind to satisfy us and I know well that your devotion to her honour and contentment is a better pledge for this [matter] than my life wherefore I beg that Your Lordship will despatch this news to us as soon as it may be possible for you to do so, because I am telling you of the result of everything [that the result...] which consists in the immediate satisfaction of Burlamasi all other things are as you wish them [to be] and you will soon have the Ambassador's report on them but we wished to be the first to prepare you to find nothing strange in this proceeding the Cardinal will oblige the Queen to whom he is not a little obliged for the opinions she has of him: it is alleged here that you gave us on your arrival here the same assurances of the payment of the marriage [portion] as are now made to us without any condition and a thousand other things but the upshot is that by granting this you would settle everything and would be assured of a profit on your money [it] being without fail used in sweden and without this [payment] a breach of the understanding will most certainly occur. I have written to the Cardinal reminding him of the promise to advance the money for this purpose for which it is actually [and] certainly intended moreover My Lord the respect to the Queen which is here looked for will be honourable and useful to you wherefore I conjure you to ensure the speedy despatch of this news if you accede to this request Burlamahi will leave at once if not his journey will be stopped. I will add nothing to this wearisome letter save [a mention of] the Marquise's pregnancy whom if you are a perfect gallant you will aid by procuring the absence of her husband which nothing will effect so speedily as our agreement you will see by the Queen's letter her feelings and her wishes I have fulfilled her commands in setting forth her wishes at length to whom they are so dear that being in conformity with the King's service one should look confidently for success the Chevalier will leave in eight days and will tell you how everything stands here and me that of

My Lord,

My not having hitherto made a direct report of matters to you has been due to my knowing how very carefully mons<sup>r</sup> Boutillier has been doing so, and also because I have not yet [received] your cipher [code] which I have often asked Mons<sup>r</sup> Charpentier [to give me] in order to communicate freely with you concerning matters which it was necessary to keep secret. Now [however], My Lord, although these two reasons still exist, the importance of matters makes it imperative that I should let you know the present condition of the treaty which you have sent me authority to sign and what has been done in connection therewith.

On Mons<sup>r</sup> de Montaignu's arrival here I urged the King of G.B.'s commissioners to carry out what he had promised in france touching the surrender of quebec and Port Royal whither they were bound to send speedily in order to make the surrender of them whereto they replied they had never given him any authority to negotiate or to promise, that having gone to france for other reasons, he had reported to them on his return that an offer had been made to settle the payment of the marriage [portion] simultaneously with the delivery of the quebec despatches whereupon having wished to discuss [the matter] with him as being at variance with my special orders notwithstanding I had a general [order] to confirm whatsoever had been promised him, he informed me that he had not gone so far although he had said that the departure of those who should be commissioned to go to Canada would be considered as an actual surrender and that Without waiting for news of their arrival the english might send Burlamachi from france for the recovery of the remainder of the dowry, Which being also at variance with my instructions which are to the effect that his Ma<sup>ty</sup> has no intention that it should be mentioned it being a matter which has no connexion with the execution of the treaty of peace and which must be done at his good pleasure and becomingly, I was not [however] able to get to that point though it would really have been useless [to do so] the english declaring their determination to stand by their terms and to take no measures for the surrenders except they be assured at the same time of that which they claim, which I have given them in word as far as I could and magnified the King's good intentions in clear and pressing terms wherewith they being unwilling to be satisfied they have drawn up an article to be inserted in the treaty concerning this matter, to which I could not subscribe they still persisting in wishing to send to france before [sending] despatches to Quebec, I urged against them the non-fulfilment of things promised and the hindrances they were raising to the voyage and to the treaty by their delays and by their new proposals also complaining that during the period of our conferences the second of which had been postponed for three weeks they had sent two ships to Canada, they replied that the ships were only laden with provisions which they did not wish to be captured knowing that preparations were being made in france, that the king their Master would on his side perform what he had promised, that the delays they had made were for the purpose of discussing [the matter] with their merchants concerned and that as evidence of their desire to avoid delays they had decided to send powers in due form by Burlamachi and all the despatches necessary for the surrender of the places to their Ambassador, so that their men might start from france without awaiting further instructions from England so soon as they were assured of their debt, I told them that the Banker's journey would be thought very strange nor did I think that he would gain anything by it until they should on their side have performed that which Montaignu and they themselves had promised, they rejoined that they would send him to their Ambassador who should have instructions to urge the matter and the other to facilitate and arrange the payments in case the [two countries] should be of one mind. That is the conclusion to which they have come based on the hope given them by Montaigne in order to be employed that they may succeed in their object through his agency and on several letters written from France to Burlamachi which he has shewn to the Ld. Treasurer and to several others as I stated in my letter of March 1 which I begged Monsieur Boutillier to shew you.

There is nothing to object to in the remainder of the treaty, as Your Lordship will see by the memoranda thereon which I am sending you [and] which the English agree to. . . . .

You are so used to the difficulties [connected with] surrenders that you will not wonder at the delays and obstacles which may arise therein the King my master hath at last removed all those that stood in the way of the surrender of Quebec and port real which he is ready to make according to the agreements with the Ambassador of france provided that Burlamahi shall receive at the same time assignments valid for the payment of the remainder of the Queen's marriage [portion] as this demand has somewhat exceeded the promise made to me I have only been able to reply to it by [an expression of] my hope according to that which your lordship gave me that in the event of their being willing to use it in assisting the king of sweden that france might bring herself to advance the money whereupon the King said to me that I might give every assurance on his part and that this purpose made him press for the payment now believing that france would very willingly agree to oblige him in this matter of time since delay would make this money useless to him the other matters My Lord have been settled here with the Ambassador of france according to the points conveyed by me the Queen has deemed it well to inform you of this resolution of the king's with the reasons [for it] in order that she might not shew a distrust of but rather a confidence in the good intention of the King her brother to grant it believing that a matter of time would rather be chosen in order to pleasure her than to inject a difficulty in [the way of] bringing to pass so important and so happy an ending of all their differences the Queen My Lord has no doubt of your equal willingness to do all that is useful and honourable which is why she feels confident that by your means this end shall be the beginning of much happiness to the two crowns personally My Lord I should be unable to allege any promise of so speedy a payment wherefore I speak only according to my hopes based on your prudence being able infallibly to assure you that the money will rather be used in sweden than touched here I have no doubt My Lord but that you will deem the respect you shall bear to the Queen in this business a means for bringing it about assigning whatever more you shall do to consideration for her and sending it [the money] to her hands this may have much import as a thing due in her need [of it] she has wished to inform Your Lordship of it through me in order to prevent your thinking the King's intentions to be in any wise changed by the demand of so speedy a payment you will receive from the french Ambassador all that has been agreed upon and asked for in writing wherein you will find nothing new except it be that you are always glad to find a fresh opportunity of doing more generous things than you have promised wherein you

Philippe Burlamachi has informed me that there was only left for him to receive certain arrears of the Stocks given him in payment of the Monies owing by His Most christian Ma<sup>ty</sup> to the King my master as also he claims that Monsieur Deffatt of happy memory had assured [him] that if he lost on the price of the Stocks in turning them into money he would be compensated. He assures me that by the delay of the Contracts of the said Stocks which were kept from him from the month of March 1631 Till the month of March 1632 He was much Involved in the Interests wherein he suffered, and that in order to turn the said Stocks into money He has lost at least the amount of Six thousand pounds Sterling without reckoning those which he advanced to the French Officers sent back to france, and others that were assigned on the same payment. He also told me that the Company of New france is withholding from him the Sum of Fifteen to Sixteen thousand livres tournois, for Provisions and supplies which on his order and Credit the Scots of Port Royal Sold to the Commandant de Rosilly Which sum according to the order of the said Commandant as shewn by his bill of exchange he paid here to the said Scots in virtue of his promise, without however being able to obtain payment of it Up to the present from Seig<sup>r</sup> de Lauson at whose request he gave Credit to the said Commandant. A True Copy, Attested by Joshua Natsto[ck] Clerk. BOSTON in NEW ENGLAND, Printed for Benjamin Harris at the London-Coffee-House. Anno Domini MDCXC.

Wednesday, April the 23, 1690.

This Morning we set sail in the Road before Governours Island, and Anchored in Nantasket, and in the evening got on board our Soldiers from Governours-Island and the Castle.

Munday 28. At six this morning we set sail from Nantasket Harbour the wind at S S W fair weather. In Company with us the Porcupine, Capt. Cyprian Southack Commander; the Mary-Sloop, Capt. John Alden Commander; the Mary-Ann, Capt. Gregory Sugars Junior, Commander; the Batchelour-Ketch, Capt. John Welch Commander; Capt. Cyprian Southack in the Afternoon was commanded to Casko-Bay, there to make a false Alarum under the French colours against the Fort, in expectation of drawing down the French and Indians, but the Enterprize failed, the wind serving their order was not to stay, but hasten the Salem Vessels with the soldiers, and meet us at Mount-Desart, which was the place appointed to Rendezvous. This night about twelve a clock we lost Capt. Welch who went in to Casko.

Tuesday 29. At seven this morning we set sail from the place aforesaid, the wind at S S E, & S E, close and foggy weather which forced us into Sheepscutt River.

Wednesday 30. At seven in the morning we set sail, the wind NW, fair weather, steered to Mount-Hegan, where the Boat was set on shoar, and brought off the Island Carratts & Cabbages, and several sorts of Garden herbs.

Thursday, May 1st. At 10 in the morning we anchored at Mount-Desart, the place appointed as aforesaid; in the evening Capt. John Alden who was sent within the Islands and commanded to view Penobscut-Fort, and to bring Tydings of Casteen, brought us this Intelligence; That Casteen was gone from thence, and 200 Indians were in the Fort, and that the out-Centinels fired several musquets at them alongst shoar; whereupon the General and Council ordered the Major and the several Captains with their respective Companies to prepare to attacque the said Fort.

Fryday 2. This Morning the wind came up at N E, we weigh'd and sail'd up the Harbour, which lieth W N W, and intended that night to make an Onsett on the aforesaid Fort, but by bad weather and a Contrary wind were hindred.

Saturday 3. This day all our souldiers were landed on an Island near us in order to fitt themselves to attacque the said Fort, but were hindred by bad weather that sprang up in the evening.

Folio 306.

Sunday 4. This day much Rain till evening, and after the Duty of the day was perform'd, it pleased God to send us fair weather, and about 8 in the evening the Soldiers were imbarqued for to ingage the said Fort, some on board the Sloop Mary, and some on board the Mary-Ann Ketch, and some in our Long-boat, Barge, and Pinnace, distance from the Fort 4 Leagues. They were to land their Men on this side the Fort, at some distance, the Fort being on a Neck of Land; their Order was, that Capt. Edward Willy should first land his men, and march 2 a-breast double Distance athwart the Neck, and ly near the Fort on the west side, and so every Company at the same distance, leaving 40 foot between each Company; the Mary sloop to attacque the Fort with her Gunns, the Ketch to keep between the Fort and Island, 20 men to be placed on each Island to keep off the Cannoes, but when they came up with the Barge to view the Situation of the Fort in the Night, they passed along without Interruption; hearing no noise in the Fort, they fired a Musquet, west a-shoar, and found nobody in the Fort. Some Indians had been there, 'tis guessed about thirty.

Munday 5. About 12 at noon the Porcupine Capt. Cyprian Southack Commander, the Salem Barque, Capt. John Brown Commander, the Salem Ketch Capt. John Walk Commander, and Capt. John Welch with the Salem and Ipswich Companies arrived about 4 in the afternoon, the Sloop, Ketch and Boats came down the River from the Fort, about 6 we weighed with the rest of the Fleet, Capt. Welch was ordered to make the best of his way on head, Capt. Thomas Bernard and his Company on board with him, to stop at Matchias, and there to send our Pinnace with a flag of Truce on shoar to the French that inhabited there, and if they would not surrender to attacque them, and when they came ashoar they found but one house, and two persons with whom they Treated who surrendered themselves: them and their goods they brought away with them. From thence we steer'd E & by S to avoid the shoal point that lies 4 leagues distant, and then E & by N to Bull-head, which is a small Island that makes the Entrance of the Bay of Fundee: the Current runs here very strong the Flood setts E N E as the Course is.

Fryday 9. At 9 in the morning being near the shoar, we anchor'd in 40 fathom water to the westward of Port-Royal entry, being calm weather. At 3 in the afternoon we weigh'd, the wind at W S W, and about 6, entred the River of Port-Royal; where the out-Centinels or Look-outs fired two Chambers, and got into their Cannoe, there being two in number; the place where they fired was distant from the Entry or Rivers mouth near a League. At 5 in the Morning we weigh'd, and turned up the River to Mr. Laverdure's House, where we anchored, and immediately sent a-shoar the Flag of Truce, with a Demand to the Governour to surrender the Fort; and in Answer he sent on board a Letter by one of his Priests to acquaint our General that he was willing to surrender upon our Terms and comply with the Proposals, the Priest was sent a-shoar, with a Letter to the Governour; the boat returned, and brought Answer in a Letter with one of the Governour's Officers to our General, That in the morning the Governour would surrender, and that he and the Priest should come on board, which they performed at the time prefixed.

The Soldiers laid down their Arms, and were gaurded to the Church, where they were kept as Prisoners.

Munday 12. EXTRAIT DE LA RELATION FAITE PAR M<sup>r</sup> DE GOUTTIN DE LA PRISSE DU FORT DE PIMIQUIT

Accadie.

Je vous envoye un petit detail de ce qui s'est fait dans l'expedition de Pimiquit, ou vous scaurez que nous sommes arrivez Le 14, du pñt mois sur le 3. heures après midy, et qu'il avoit plus de 4. heures que tous les sauvages et la chaloupe ou estoient les bombes, et canons avec les dettachemens de Nanoüac et des vaiss<sup>x</sup> estoient arrivez au portage, et avoient desja mis un mortier et deux canons a terre, et que les sauvages s'estoient allez poster au tour du fort, nous ne fusmes pas plustost mouillez que 15. sauvages vindrent du portage a nostre bord y prirent des vivres et partirent dans le mesme temps pour se rendre a un petit passage par ou les anglois pouvoient passer la nuit pour aller a Pescatoüet, ou a Baston.

Le d<sup>t</sup> jour 14. sur les 5. heures du soir M<sup>r</sup> d'Iberville envoya M. du Talt garde de la Marine servant d'Enseigne sur son bord, pour sommer le commandant de Pimiquit, il en revient sur les 7. heures et demie, et nous dit que le Commandant avoit repondu que quand la mer seroit toute couverte de vaiss<sup>x</sup> francois, et les bois remplis de francois et de Sauvages ils ne se rendroit qu'il ny fust forcé et qu'il n'ust veu Effectivement les efforts que l'on feroit pour le reduire; nos gens embusqués autour du fort n'urent pas plustost apris la reponce du Commandant de Pimiquit qu'ils commencerent a escarmoucher, et il leur fut repondu pareillement du fort par la mousqueterie et quelques Coups de Canon, Le 15. a deux heures après minuit M<sup>r</sup> d'Iberville descendit a terre, et apres avoir reconnu l'Estat et situation du fort, et resollu les endroits pour placer les batries, Il fit travailler avec tant de diligence tant au transport des mortiers bombes,* et affuts et canons, que sur les trois heures apres midy, il y eut un mortier en batterie qui tira 4 bombes qui ne tomberent pas dans le fort on le fit sommer pour la 2<sup>e</sup> fois, après qu'on luy eut dit qu'il ny avoit aucun quartier luy ayant exageré le nombre des bombes et artillerie et que l'on les abandonneroit à la fureur des sauvages, qui prioient M<sup>r</sup> d'Iberville de ne les recevoir a composition, cette derniere sommation Intimida sy fort la garnison, et M<sup>r</sup> des<sup>t</sup> Castin qui seroit d'Interprete leur donna sy bien l'alarme qu'ils dirent au commandant qu'ils vouloient se rendre, et demanderent a M<sup>r</sup> des<sup>t</sup> Castin un certificat comme on avoit 500 bombes a leur Jetter, Jls envoyerent des otages aux batries, à M<sup>r</sup> d'Iberville, et dans la Capitulation il fut permis à la garnison de Pimiquit de sortir avec leurs meilleurs habits seulement.

Le Landemain 16<sup>e</sup> la garnison estant toute sortie elle se trouva forte de 92. hommes. elle avoit esté renforcée de 42. hommes sur la Nouvelle des vaiss<sup>x</sup> françois, et la prise d'une de leurs fregattes: Le Commandant s'apelle Cap<sup>ne</sup> Chubb, il avoit sa femme et un garçon avec luy, Il y avoit 4. autres dames.

Le fort estoit de muraille de 5 pieds 2 pouces depaisseur du costé de la mar, et de 3. pieds du costé de la terre, et à le voirs* paroissoit tres beau et tres bon mais qui ne l'Estoit effectivement pas, les Logements Estoiert tout autour du fort tres propres, Il Estoit flanqué de deux grosses tours et de deux petites, il avoit 50. pas communs sur chaque fasse, estoit quarré, et on pouvoit mettre 500. hommes en bataille dedans, des Crenaux en dedans tout autour, et une gorge en forme de boyaux qui fortifioit beaucoup le dedans, Le Magasin à poudre n'avoit rien a craindre que les bombes encor n'estoit ce que par un tres petit endroit, la grosse roche aupres duquel il estoit bâti faisoit une partie de sa voute, et de ses murailles.

Il y avoit 15. p<sup>ces</sup> d'artillerie montée, et l'on peut dire que s'Il s'avoient voulu faire leur devoir ils auroient fait perir plus de 370. hommes, Il ne sy est trouvé aucune march<sup>es</sup> ny pelletrie, les armes poudre, et plomb, et tout le butin amassé ensemble a Esté partagé en quatre portions Esgalles aux Sauvages, ou à veu des Espées, et des Cinturons qu'avoient les soldats françois lors de la prise du port Royal, Le 17 on a travaillé a desmolir le fort. Le d<sup>t</sup> Jour Sur le Soir on a envoyé partie de la garnison dans la Chaloupe de M. de Chofours a baston, et en mesme temps on a proposé l'Eschange de nos prisonniers; J'oublois de vous dire que l'on a trouvé un sauvage aux fers dans le fort les Jambes roides comme un baston; et n'en pouvant plus; Le 18 on mit Le feu au fort. Le 19<sup>e</sup> on acheva de brusler ce que le grand feu avoit Espargné, et les Soldats et Matelots firent le Prince d'orange qu'ils bruslerent, et le jetterent dans le feu à coups de Pierre.

LETTER FROM CAPTAIN NICHOLSON WRITTEN FROM
AND PLANTATIONS, 4 NOVEMBER, 1690.

What hath passed betwixt my self & Maryland send yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>sps</sup> yo<sup>e</sup> Coppies of yo<sup>e</sup> Lett<sup>rs</sup> & am in hopes that Province will be settled soon, for I am forced to be very watchfull of them, lest they should bring their neighbouring part of this Country in Disorder. I send yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>sps</sup> a Cobby of a Lett<sup>r</sup> sent by their Maj<sup>ties</sup> Council here to New England, and I have an acc<sup>t</sup> from severall Principall Men there (whom I wrote to by yo<sup>e</sup> Messenger) y<sup>t</sup> they are in a bad Condition, for yo<sup>e</sup> French & Indians have kill'd & taken about 1000 of their people, severall Towns, Forts & Plantaçons haveing been destroyed by yo<sup>m</sup> & some within 30 Miles of Boston, y<sup>t</sup> there hath been great Taxes & liked to be greater, yo<sup>e</sup> Country very much impoverish'd, w<sup>ch</sup> makes yo<sup>e</sup> people very uneasy, & there are great Divisions amongst yo<sup>m</sup>. All their honest Men have little or noe Trade, but yo<sup>e</sup> others (for all their Publick Calamities) manage now as formerly an Unlawfull Trade, for I am inform'd by severall, y<sup>t</sup> they have Vessells come directly from yo<sup>e</sup> Canaries & Cadiz, whither they carry Tobaccos. They have also a Trade with Newfoundland (where suppose they gett French Gools) for a Privateer took two Shipps tradeing there amongst the English, they came from France haveing been taken by them, one did belong to London & yo<sup>e</sup> other to New England. I hear they were bought in France by some English Merchants, they are Sailed by English Men and have yo<sup>e</sup> French Kings pass, & suppose these are not yo<sup>e</sup> only shipps y<sup>t</sup> Trade thus.

About yo<sup>e</sup> 10th of Augst sailed from Boston, 32 Saile, 4 were Men of Warr, & 2 Fireshipps. They had on Board of Land & Seamen about 2200, Sr W<sup>m</sup> Phipps had yo<sup>e</sup> title of Generall, They designed to conquer Canada, for by 2 or 3 French Prizes brought into New England, they understood y<sup>t</sup> yo<sup>e</sup> French were very weak in Canada, & y<sup>t</sup> yo<sup>e</sup> French King sent them Lett<sup>rs</sup> y<sup>t</sup> he could not assist them this year, (and I hope he never will be able, either to assist yo<sup>m</sup> or any other of his Countries). The middle of yo<sup>e</sup> last Month noe News at Boston, what their Fleet had done agst Canada. They write me from New England y<sup>t</sup> they are 4000<sup>lb</sup> in debt upon yo<sup>e</sup> Port Royall Expedition, & from yo<sup>e</sup> latter end of July att 500<sup>lb</sup> p. Diem charge wth

If please God y<sup>e</sup> New England<sup>rs</sup> doe not conquer Canada, suppose y<sup>t</sup> not only themselves & New York Governm<sup>t</sup> will suffer, but y<sup>e</sup> Warr may reach y<sup>e</sup> heads of y<sup>e</sup> Rivers in Pensilvania (where think they will meet wth little resistance, y<sup>e</sup> Governm<sup>t</sup> being in Quakers hands.) Maryland, & this Country, for 'tho y<sup>e</sup> 5 Nations of Indians above Albany are our Friends yet, find they cannot be Govern'd as formerly, & say y<sup>t</sup> y<sup>e</sup> French make them great proffers, also they see what Distraction y<sup>e</sup> English are in, & I am inform'd y<sup>t</sup> there is not att Albany Goods to supply them, w<sup>ch</sup> may be a great inducem<sup>t</sup> for y<sup>m</sup> to side wth y<sup>e</sup> French, if they can but supply them. I most humbly beseech yo<sup>r</sup> Lord<sup>sh</sup>ps to send yo<sup>r</sup> Orders how we are to Act in this Warr. I transmitt to your Lord<sup>sh</sup>ps y<sup>e</sup> acco<sup>t</sup> of y<sup>e</sup> Plattformes, & y<sup>e</sup> Survey of y<sup>e</sup> Donbarton. I have spoke wth Cap<sup>t</sup> Rowe & Cap<sup>t</sup> Bradly, & they assure me, that itt will in noe Case be safe for her to cruise this Winter, & I fear in y<sup>e</sup> Summer neither. Wee being thus weake both att Sea and Land, hope some speedy Relief will be sent, but in y<sup>e</sup> Interim, this their Most Sacred Maj<sup>ties</sup> Country shall by all possible ways be secured, by him who craves leave to subscribe himself

APPENDIX H.

REPORT BY CAPTAIN MORRIS TO GOVERNOR SHIRLEY
UPON HIS SURVEY OF LANDS IN NOVA SCOTIA/
AVAILABLE FOR PROTESTANT SETTLERS, 1749.

Mimorandum.

In what Places in the Province of Nova Scotia a Number of Protestants may speedily settle themselves, in such a manner as to be able to protect themselves against a Party of Indians and support themselves.

Annapolis Royal

N<sup>o</sup> 1. The lands lying between the Bason of Annapolis Royal and the Bay of S<sup>t</sup> Marys will admit of Eighty or One hundred Familys. Their first Lotts, ought to be only sufficient for a House, Barn, and Garden of half an Acre each, and in like manner all the other Settlements and then their Farm Lotts may be laid all contiguous to them, their Home Settlement to border on the Bason of Annapolis from whence they will have a Communication by Water with the Garrison of Annapolis Royal, where they may sell their Timber, for the building & Repair of that Garrison and for Firewood, and thereby subsist themselves, while they are improving and clearing their Lands. In this Tract next to the Bay of St. Mary's is a considerable Quantity of Salt Marsh, and in the Bason a place call'd the Joggin, whether all the Inhabitants of the River at a certain Season of the year come to catch Shadd. No French Proprietors—Distance from Annapolis Fort Fourteen Mile.

N<sup>o</sup> 2. That Tract of Land lying between the Gut of Annapolis extending E N E to the first village: This will make a good Settlement, but the French Inhabitants are possesst of all the Marsh Lands which ought to be divided among the New Settlers & them in Equal Lotts. This will have the same advantage as the other in supplying the Garrison. Their House Lotts may be laid out at a Place call'd the Scotch Fort, a place of consequence, where the River of Annapolis is not above six hundred yards over, and the depth of the channell within one hundred yards of it. A Battery might be erected here under the Protection of such a Settlement which would Secure the Harbour and River. This would accomodate Forty Familys. Distance from the Fort five Mile.

N<sup>o</sup> 3. Another Settlement might be made adjoining to that and extending to Lands opposite to the Fort, it includes Twenty French Familys, a considerable Quantity of Marsh undyk'd; Forty Familys more might be accomodated. Settlement might be made Distance about two mile from the Fort.

N<sup>o</sup> 4. A Tract of Land on the Southermost side of the River extending from the Fort to Moose River would accomodate Eighty Settlers, because in this Tract are two considerable Marshes for the most part undik'd. This includes Eight French Familys. Their Settlement might be One Mile & a half from the Fort.

N° 5. & 6. Two small Settlements of thirty Familys each may be accommodated up the River Six Miles from the Garrison.

All these Familys might in a great Measure be supported by the Garrison in the Labour of Repairs, in finding Timber, boards, Shingles and Firewood, and if the Garrison should be revested with Brick, they would be able to make sufficient for that End, as there is the best of Brick Clay, in every district abovenam'd; which would save also, some Thousands of Pounds Sterling in Transportation.

And as there is no considerable Quantitys of Marsh further up the River, in a Body together; so no English Settlement can readily be brought forward. The absolute necessity of the Marsh Lands being allotted and apportioned I shall mention hereafter.

All the Lands lying between the Settlements on the River of Annapolis till you come to the River Canard, an Extent of Fifty Miles in length, lyes between two Ranges of Hills, & is about four Leagues wide, is for the most part Barren, has no Inhabitants, will admit of very few scattering families when the Country is fully settled.

Minas.

N° 1. River Canard has great Quantitys of Marsh Lands, and so has the River Habitant, a Fine Settlement might be made on Upland lying between these two Rivers of One hundred Familys Mowing Lands and Wood Lands equivalent to be assigned the French Proprietors west of their present Settlements.

N° 2. Minas and Gaspero have very large Quantitys of Marsh Lands will accommodate One Hundred and Fifty Families more. Mowing Lands for the Protestants and French South west of their Settlements and Wood Lands on the Eastern side of Pisgate River where they now fetch Wood all Water Carriage, The great Island on the Marsh will accommodate twenty Familys.

N° 3. Pizaquid. Sixty Familys; Settlement on a piece of land fronting the River St. Croix between two large Meddows. Equivalent Mowing & Wood Lands NW of Pizaquid & this will fully settle all the Lands between the River Pisgate and the River Canard.

The little Island on Grand Pre is well seituated for a Fort not only to assist and Forward all the above Settlements, but is so surrounded with Marsh, that no Regular Approach can be form'd against it without infinite expence, and therefore might be maintain'd with a few regular Forces it is thirteen hundred paces in length & four hundred in width but towards the Marsh great part is Low & wet grounds. No large ship can come within one mile & a half without grounding, there being but two fathom in the Channel at Low water.

N° 4. Harbour Advocate and Cape Doree will accommodate thirty Familys has three hund<sup>d</sup> Acres of Salt Marsh, and Excellent uplands. No French Proprietor. 'Tis said to have been granted the Duke of Chandos. Copper is found in the Crevices of the Rocks for two mile together and no doubt some valuable Copper Mines.

Cobequet will admit of several Settlements; the River Shubnacdie is said to have the most fertile lands in the country and runs within two mile of Chebucto as does also y<sup>e</sup> River St. Croix; but as I am not personally acquainted with that part of the Country I leave it.

Tho that part of the Country ought to be attended to, as it is one of the Inroads of the Canadians into the Province.

Chiegnecto.

Chiegnecto Bason is surrounded with Marshes almost intire. Three in particular run far into the Country towards the Bay of Vert. The Northermost of Eight Mile in length & One mile & a half at a Common Breadth contains above seven thousand Acres, a navigable River in the midst of it for Sloops and small Vessells within two Mile of the Head of the Marsh. The next runs much farther and contains a great Quantity, the other joins this last surrounding the old Settlement of Chiegnecto & contains above three thousand Acres besides there are several considerable Marshes on the River Minas & the South part of the Bason. Here more then Five Hundred Familys might be settled and find an Immediate Support if the Marshes and uplands were but equally divided and in contiguous Settlements One hundred familys in each Settlement and they may be thus accommodated.

N<sup>o</sup> 2. One hundred Familys in Old Chiegnecto with part of the Marshes N<sup>o</sup> 1 & 2. Upland for mowing. The Lands on which Old Chiegnecto stands, being an Island on the Marshes, Four mile Long One Mile & a half wide in common.

N<sup>o</sup> 3. One hundred Familys where is settled Thirty French Familys. Upland for mowing a Ridge of Land between the two Meddows N<sup>o</sup> 2 & 3 and to extend four mile. It is two Mile wide, these two last Settlements may be supplied with Wood-Lands. the uncultivated Lands from Cape Marangnon to the first Marsh Three leagues in length this will be Water Carriage to their Doors.

N<sup>o</sup> 7, 8 & 9. Three other Settlements may be made at Chipotee or Shepody, Marooncook & Patcootycaek of fifty Familys each & in like manner.

From Chipotee or Shepody There is no Marsh Lands all along the Northern Shore (till you are past St. Johns) near thirty Leagues. The Lands are Mountainous and broken without a Harbour excepting that of St. John's River which is but indifferent, dangerous at its Entry, & much expos'd to a Southeast Wind, which is generally a storm; The Lands of St. John's River is said to be incapable of any great improvement till you come twenty Leagues into the Country: Yet as by this River, the Indians receive all their Food from Chiegnecto & Minas a blockhouse or small Wooden Fort would be necessary, either to carry on a Trade with them in Peace, and to Cultivate a good understanding between the English & them, or in War to distress them, by cutting of their Supplys; by this River the Canadians also enter into the Province of Nova Scotia: It is distant from Annapolis Thirteen Leagues North Westerly.

I would here take notice that in the Meddow N<sup>o</sup> 2 of Chiegnecto runs a River, which is said to be navigable within 4 mile of the Bay of Vert, but it is a mistake, it flows but about three Miles and a half from the Bason and there I crost it over a Bridge; a Fresh Water Brook empties itself (above that) into this River, which otherwise is dry at two hours Ebb. This fresh Brook is dry at some Seasons, it was quite dry in September last when I crost it, but spring and Fall there is Water enough, the Country being upon a Level, to bring, in small Canoes, Hog<sup>ds</sup> of Rum & Molasses and other Merchandize, which the Inhabitants take in Exchange for Cattle, Wheat, Furrs &c carried to Louisburg by the Bay Vert.

On this Marsh also within a quarter of a mile of the Bason is a fine Hill or Island in an Oval Form near Sixty feet in Heighth, more than a quarter of a mile Long, and about half that width, The Foot of which this River passes by, on which a noble Fortress might be erected for the Protection of the Country; the Marshes surrounding it for a Mile distance except towards the Bason, would render it impregnable and large Ships cannot approach within half a mile, and that only upon the top of High Water, and in great Danger by the Rapidity of the Tide and their grounding in two hours.

'Twould be difficult for the Enemy to transport Cannon, across the Country, if not wholly impracticable, the Soil is deep and clayey, therefore the Inhabitants make no use of Wheel Carriages, but drag their Merchandize as above ( in a Canoe about Seven feet long, & wide enô to hold a Hog<sup>d</sup> & made for the Purpose) from Bay Vert is 4 mile to the Brook above mention'd, from old Chiegnecto to Bay Vert I measur'd Six Leagues.

To Divide the Marshes the French Inhabitants are possess of, for they have possess themselves of all that is valuable, and to allot a proportionable part to the Protestant Settlers is of the utmost consequence since without that I am sure it would be morrally impossible any large Number of Protestants can ever be settled in the Country, and the Reason is that they are lands that can be improved in perpetual Tillage, and the only Lands for certain Crops of Grains in the Country. Ten Acres allotted to every Family will produce, Wheat, Rye, Barley, Oats, Flax &c for a full and comfortable Support for them; On the Contrary the Uplands are not kind for Grain &c but produce excellent English Grass, and no Sooner are the Lands clear'd and laid open to the Sun, but they naturally run into English Grass which is much heartier for the support of their Cattle in the Winter then their Salt Meddow Hay what Lands I have seen in improvement in the Country of the Upland fenc'd in for Grass has produced as large Crops as ever I saw in New England and that without the help of Manure. They will also produce fruit Trees of all kinds Natural to the Climate.

The unimprov'd Woods will always be a pasture from May to October for their Sheep Cattle Horses &c and will fatten them fit for the market; An Equivalent therefore may be assigned them, in Lands adjoining their Settlements, in the manner aforesaid and without any detriment to the present Settlers; only some Labour without which, they in a manner now live, for they raise their Provision with the least Labour of any People upon Earth.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Another Advantage will arise, that the Protestants will be intermixt with the present Inhabitants, and consequently an Intercourse of Trade and intermarriages, whereby in Time they will come to have one Common Interest & mutually send out Colonies to settle the Inland Countrys.

The above is humbly submitted by Charles Morris.

Refers to Spanish ship (ut supra) French King's ships and (French) merchantmen to winter in the river, between Batiscan and Three Rivers, in preparation for next campaign. These ships will not retard British progress a day, if he can build twelve floating batteries. Miserable condition of remaining French troops: they oppress and plunder the Canadians under their subjection, whom they hate and despise: expects submission of every parish in Canada before July of following year. Any small reinforcements they may be able to smuggle in by the mouth of the river will be of no use to them: believes he is sufficiently master of the country to prevent them. - March 22.
Quebec. Murray to Burton. Has received his of March 18 and 16. Re a M<sup>r</sup> Hughes, and his intention to marry a Catholic. Thanks God that "the matrimonial distemper" has not yet reached them at Quebec; does not suppose laws of Ireland (entailing dismissal of any officer who marries a Catholic) have any force outside that Kingdom. Details difficulties that have arisen in connexion with recruiting: popular impression that enlistment involves life service. Encloses preparations made to meet the contingencies of the case.

Haldimand reports having got fifty volunteers; pressed men from Quebec may be replaced by volunteers, if Burton gets a sufficient number to volunteer.

April 8.
Quebec.

To the same. Re pressed men. Gave his reasons fully in his letter of April 2; is positive no one was hurt by what was done in Quebec. Thinks it "at least doubtful" whether they have power to levy new troops, but, if so, they certainly have power to "impress Idle fellows who have declared themselves the King's Subjects". Enough done to convince Canadians that they can never be oppressed with military services under British rule. Defines law of the province in respect of militia service; Governors' orders are laws "in our situation here." Re interruption of interior trade of corn; will allow exportation under certain restrictions; encloses copy of proclamation relating thereto. Approves of his refusal to grant passports for trade in the Upper Country. Is anxious to receive his commission and instructions; re unreasonable remonstrances from people at Montreal to Lords of Trade: ill effects which might arise from them.

Explains Cramahé's position in the matter. Thinks Burton the best judge of the expediency of instructing the French people, who have certainly been misled on this occasion. April 18.
Quebec.

Murray to Burton. Has received his letter of April 14. Has never issued, and will never issue any proclamation, as governor of the Province, until his patent arrives. Proclamation re export of corn not intended to have any effect beyond the district of Quebec. Thinks people of Montreal should be allowed to load any exportable commodity at that port, but must clear from provincial Collector's office at Quebec. Will decide any disputes when his authority is established. Is not disturbed by their "Remonstrances, Discontent, & Jealousys." Adds, in a postscript, that, having waived the military powers of his commission, in compliance with Gage's orders, he will not interfere in any matter within the Districts of Montreal and Three Rivers, unless forced to do so.

Reasons why the people have been allowed another month to register their paper money; much more in the country than he expected; no agents sent by French Court to buy it up. Reports departure of Canadian corps for Oswego. Thinks number of emigrants from the two upper Districts will be very trifling, judged by those of his own District.

Quebec.

Murray to Gage. Has received his letter of April 4. His own letter accompanying the Court Martial, was purposely addressed to Amherst; but being O.H.M.S., might quite well have been delivered to Gage; now sends it back to him. Has long ago received copy of Lords of Treasury's letter re provisions said to have been stipulated for Quebec; is sure reports and a duplicate have been sent to Gage; will not now sign contractors' certificates without his positive orders. Re certificates for good or bad provisions made over to King's commissary: explains why he cannot properly have any concern with them; but will comply with his orders.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Quebec.

Murray to Gage. Has received his letter of Aug. 27. Again refers to the matters of his military commission; not superseded by his patent as governor. Intends to assert his military authority as military governor of the town of Quebec, until His Majesty's pleasure is known to the contrary.

Sept. 16.
Quebec.

Murray to his brother, Lord Elibank. Speaks of "the Plot of Divesting me of my Military Command, as being now pretty evident; M<sup>r</sup> Gage's letter puts it beyond doubt. Expected to be continued in his command (as Brigadier). Province must be governed by military force; not more than fifty Protestant subjects in province, exclusive of troops: must choose magistracy from among them: their authority must rest on supreme magistrate's authority with the troops; otherwise "The Brigadier must in fact be the "Governor," to the oppression of the people, and the detriment of the province; begs him to present the case to the ministry at home. Speaks of the boundless powers of a commander in chief in America, and of the necessity of some control, some division of Military Authority in this vast Empire; is sure the provinces can never reunite; civil and military governors powerless in respect of commander in chief: cannot govern province unless he has authority with the troops; limits of his authority to be determined by Government. Task of governing in the Civil way, a great populous country of a different religion without the aid of the troops, or the assistance of the Law would be too hard for him. Characterizes the two lawyers sent from England as ignorant and greedy.

Speaks of French Canadians as "perhaps the best and bravest Race on the Globe," and needing only to "be indulged with a very few Privileges" [as Catholics], in order to "become the most faithful & useful set of men in this American Empire." Begs him, for God's sake, to secure his retirement if the "Popish [penal] laws must be Exerted wth Rigour in Canada," as he cannot be witness to the misery of a people whom he loves and admires. Praises Cramahé very highly.

Oct. 2.

Murray to Amherst. Explains why he has not laid "many things" before him, and has not asked his assistance. Has, however, asked Ross to lay the matter before him, trusts Amherst may be induced to advise him.

Oct. 3.

Murray to Lord Adam Gordon. Is grateful to him for contradicting false reports, etc. Speaks of the many "malicious lies" he will have to combat in England, and of Cuthbert's account of the success of his (Murray's) enemies. Would desist from the conflict, and leave the field to Burton and Christie, but for his affection for "a brave Valuable Race," his love of his country, and his own peace of mind. Wonders how change of ministry at home will affect the Colony and himself. Believes that Halifax encouraged Burton, &c., "to foment & keep up the factions of the English traders here" against his government. Defends his own conduct; refers to Court of enquiry (re Major Brown); encloses copies of correspondence, papers, etc., relating thereto; begs his intervention with Lord George Sackville. Gives favourable report of 52nd regiment. Letter sent by Panet, whom he recommends to his good offices.

Sept. 27.

Murray to Sec<sup>y</sup> at War. Encloses papers re his dispute with Major Brown (refusal to admit Governor to capital), in order that they may be laid before His Majesty. Goes into details of the dispute: thinks Burton expected support from Gage; wishes matter laid before a Board of General Officers; justifies his own conduct. Explains his interpretation of the powers granted to the Civil Governor in respect of the garrison of Quebec; refers to Secretary's letters of Jan. 12, and of May 18. Has sent copy of latter, with remarks, to commander in chief; will abide by his decision until honoured with H. M. commands. Considers military government of Town of Quebec the highest honour which can be conferred on him.

Oct. 17.
Quebec.

Murray to W<sup>m</sup> Gray, Dep<sup>y</sup> Sheriff, Montreal. Re letter from Lt.-Col. Christie, purporting to give substance of sheriff's remarks as to unwillingness of bailiffs to act, and pains taken to corrupt the people (of Montreal); and calling on him to give full account of all he knows, and why he failed to inform the Government of the attempt referred to.

Oct. 18

Murray to Capt. Carden (Montreal). Has received his letter of the 12th instant. Thinks it will be better to accommodate the soldiers at Three Rivers in their old barracks, for this year. Explains his position as civil governor in relation to the matter. Goes into various details, concerning which he makes recommendations.

Oct. 9.

Murray to Burton. Re injunctions to parishes near La Chine to furnish men for sixteen batteaux in question. Neither Government nor magistracy will be blamed, if any prejudice to the service results from the steps taken. Magistrates have no power to impress men for batteau service; approves of their conduct in the matter; explains the "special limited warrant" granted to Capt. Fraser the previous winter; and the reason of his letter to Col. Christie in Oct., 1764; criticizes Christie's conduct: accused of having "made very improper uses" of his powers under the military government; will be very cautious about giving him a general press warrant. Attorney General declares press warrants illegal. Will not issue press warrant for batteaux service, under present conditions, until authorized thereto by His Majesty. Wishes him to regulate his convoys so as not to interfere with seed time, "the Harvest and tillage of the ground." To take a number of men away at this season, is to expose them to famine and the King's stores to unnecessary risks. Is a matter of conscience with him: thinks the business should be done by contract. Expresses his zeal for the King's military concerns, in spite of "the Calumny; Intrigue & deceit of designing men." Re his instructions to Capt. Carden.

Oct. 9 Murray to Montreal Justices of the Peace. Same subject (press warrant for batteaux service). Commends their conduct in the matter, and encloses copy of his foregoing letter to Burton. Urges great patience, humanity, and infinite tenderness, in dealing with the "New Subjects." Refers to Carden's instructions re quarters for the troops.

Oct. 17. Murray to Burton. Has received his letters of Oct. 13 and 19. His own, of Oct. 9 (supra) is an answer to the first; the press warrant, enclosed for Capt. Fraser, to the second. Regrets loss of vessel; hopes Commander in Chief will not allow subsistence of troops to depend on safety of one ship. Wishes to know why soldiers may not assist in transporting the king's stores; but has granted warrant to Fraser, under present necessity. Blames Christie for disputing Fraser's former authority, and holds him responsible for the "Corruption" and "Poison" (among the people) of which he now complains. Wishes he would try to moderate Christie's conversation; Canadians must inevitably be influenced by constant disparagement of "a Governor who is to be recalled immediately." Reminds him that "the Civil Governor has no Coercive Power to impress Men for the Services in Question"; will most certainly not issue a second "impress Order". . . "this is fair warning."

Oct. 23. Murray to Lords of Trade. See C.O. 42, vol. 5, pp. 95-98.
Quebec.

Oct. 28. Murray to Cramahé. Thanks him for his many letters, and for his services to the Colony. Re Major Mills' services and pay as Town Major; is glad Cramahé gave Grenville an account of the duties and revenues collected in Quebec; reasons for publishing them in the Gazette. Re Martin's bills: defends his own conduct in the matter. Asks him to be civil to bearer of letter, M. "Leveque".
Quebec.

Nov. 11. Murray to Lord Adam Gordon. Re his differences with Gage and Burton, encloses paragraph of letter from the former (1) Refers to Burton's attempt to mortify him in every way possible: "he insisted on giving me Orders" (2 and 3). Details of authority assumed by Burton (4 and 5), and of his rebuff by the barrack master (5); full account of Burton's conduct, etc. Refers him to his own answer to General Gage (6); leaves the whole matter in his correspondent's hands.

Quebec.

Murray to Oswald. Thanks him for his pains to justify his (Murray's) conduct. Is now hopeful of bringing the vessel (the Colony) to a "happy mooring." Speaks, confidently, of having got the better of his military enemies; English merchants now look upon everything in a right light, and the Canadians are more attached to him than ever. Complains, however, of want of support and encouragement from home; re Walker's trial, and lack of Protestant jurors in Montreal; settlement of currency; hardships entailed on Province by Mutiny Act for America; their own action in the matter. Regrets Sir James Cockburn's departure; wishes Colonel Oswald would take his estate.

New York.

Gage to Murray. Re his letter, with Quebec accounts, estimates, etc. Complains of Murray's not having answered his letter of Feb. 17, and of his having ordered Chandler, the barrack master at Quebec, to apply to Burton for his pay; cannot understand this "sudden change", etc. Consents to repairs requiring immediate attention; barrack master must conform to the "General Rules and Regulations made for the Barracks in America." Adverts to a letter received from Burton re "his Transactions at Quebec", and to his complaint of the "Very Rude Stile" of Surgeon Dr Mabane's letter to him. Will be his (Gage's) business "to lay this whole Transaction before the Secretary at War."

Nov. 11.
Quebec.

Murray to Gage; in answer to the foregoing. Knows Mabane never meant to offend Burton; who had his positive orders to enclose his (Murray's) letter to him, to Burton. Admits duty of every officer to support and maintain the authority and dignity of H. M. servants, but adds that "had that Rule been observed towards the King's Governor & Governmt in this Province, the public must have long ago felt the happy Consequences." Hopes complaint referred to "will be productive of an Enquiry into Characters and Things which have been shamefully misrepresented." Expresses his readiness to answer to Sec<sup>y</sup> at War for his conduct, on all points.

[This letter is followed by one from Murray to Chandler, dated Sept. 5 (See under that date); one from the same to Dr Mabane (Sept. 3), denying Burton's authority over surgeon of Quebec garrison, and one from Mabane to Burton re same matter.]

No date.

Murray to Ellis (beginning of letter missing). Give his reasons for establishing the prerogative court in the province; encloses paper stating case: re Ellis's right to "the Testamentary Business," and explains what the consequences will be: he will "have a right to a great deal more which will totally upset every Establishment we have made, and will constitute Rules and practice which never had a being in any other Colony in His Majesty's Dominions;" thinks "an answer to the case and queries will effectually settle" the right referred to.

- Dec. 4.
Quebec. Murray to George Ross. His letter of Sept. 14 received. Speaks of his conduct as having been "egregiously misrepresented," refers to various charges, enriching himself; wasting public money; tyranny—of this the Canadians should be the best judges; blasphemy (words quoted), this charge being made by Walker, desires that he may be prosecuted for defamation. Has laid every public transaction impartially before the Government at home; has written to Conway, asking that his business "may immediately be brought to a Crisis"; refers to Burton's assertion that he has been offered the government and has refused it. Cannot understand why Cramahé has not been allowed a second hearing; encloses letters for Lord G. Sackville and Amherst; are to see this letter and enclosures, if they wish to do so. Re attacks on his military government of Quebec, and the "Infallible Protection" enjoyed by his enemies.
- List of bills drawn on the Treasury, etc.

Minorca. Murray to the Hon. George Murray. Thanks for his attention to his niece, Maria Murray. Have just received the accounts of Rodney's fight; refers to superiority of French manœuvres. Enemy seems to consider Minorca not "worth the Blood and Treasure" the conquest of it would cost; fate of Gibraltar and Minorca depends on Spanish success in West Indies. Thinks "our possessions in the "Mediterranean are of less consequence to us, than the smallest of "our Sugar Is'ands." Goes fully into the matter, blames him for failing to take necessary steps towards clearing it up; and for having done things which, as his (Murray's) agent, he ought not to have done. Asks him to read enclosed correspondence; does not believe Privy Council "will encourage & establish simony." If Olivars are encouraged, H. M. must send out another governor and lieut. governor; he and Draper "cannot perform impossibilities," decides to employ Harding (H. Pelham's brother-in-law) against Olivar. Wishes to know why D<sup>r</sup> Sequi's presentation to the rectorship (of Mahon) has been delayed; blames Olivar for it. Refers to family matters.

Will stay the winter "to endeavour at obtaining a final Settlement" of the matter. Thought it right to lay before the present ministers when they began to do Business in the present state of the Province with regard to the principal Points requiring a Speedy Consideration "viz. Church, Law, and Revenue". Have not yet reached any conclusion. Thinks France not eager for a new war. Re prospect of a final settlement of the "Canada Bills."

Kenth McCulloch to Murray. Refers to the "Confusion that now prevails in this Province; to the charges trumped up by "the famous Walker" against certain officers; means taken to arrest them; speaks of Walker's "malice", and of "Men of Distinguished Honour and Probity", as having been "dragged to the common Gaol", etc.

Nov. 30,
Quebec.

Surgeon Mabane to Murray. Same subject. Also, re his own dismissal by Carleton's orders, etc. Speaks of the Colony as "plunged into the greatest Confusion", and of Carleton's desire to throw the blame on others.

Jan. 13,
New York.

Colonel Maitland to Murray. Refers to Ministry's intention to call him (Murray) home "in order to be properly informed of the Real Situation of that Province in order to have your Assistance in forming A proper form of Government for it". Gives reasons for thinking American colonists "absolutely incapable of carrying on A Rebellion if they were to enter into it"; every Province a "Real Democracy: and there is not a Single man in the Country Dependant upon Another". Refers to the "avertion" taken by the people of New York to Murray, on account of his having put the Stamp Act into force, and of a speech he is said to have made. [Curious and interesting.]

March 16,
(London.)

James Oswald to Murray. Thinks his presence "on the spot" will afford him the best opportunity of counteracting "The Torrent of Malice and faction" poured upon him, by setting his conduct "in Its true and Proper light".

No date.
Incomplete.

Part of Murray's answers to the Articles of Complaint against him. (cf. Bundle IX, infra, for those answers in extenso. [Note. His defence of his conduct in relation to the French Canadians may be quoted, verbatim being of special interest: he supposes that the charge means that "I could not be prevailed upon to persecute His Majesty's Roman Catholick Subjects in Canada. If so I plead Guilty". He adds, in reference to this point, though under another article [12], that he "displeased the little Protestant Traders, who all, Quakers, Puritans, Anabaptists, Presbyterians, Atheists, Infidels and even Jews joined in protesting against any Consideration being paid to the poor Canadians." ] (cf. Murray to Eglinton, Oct. 27, 1764. which he speaks as "A Place fitt only to send Exiles to, as a punishment for their past ill spent lives". Details re various persons, places, Walker's witnesses, precedence in Council, etc. Speaks of "M<sup>r</sup> Carleton" as being led "by his Triumvirate Cramahie, Mills, and Dun"; and of "All the Memorials, Addresses, Petitions, Letters &c to, & from M<sup>r</sup> Carleton" as printed in the New York papers, which, he adds, "gives great uneasiness here; Our Printers were forbid to Print any of them."

Henry Caldwell to Murray. Re lease of part of the latter's Lake Champlain estate.

Cramahé to Murray. Re promotions to 3rd and 46th regiments; Gage's appointment to command in North America; various interviews; tells Lord Hillsborough that the summoning of an Assembly in Quebec has "not been considered as a Measure at all practicable for the present; Murray's despatches shew the present State of that Province"; gives details of his interviews with Ld. Hillsborough and of questions asked and answered. Ld. Elebank trying to have Murray made extraordinary Brigadier, without pay, and to command in Province under the Commander in Chief. Thinks "the Great ones here", no less embarrassed over the "Civil Matters" relating to the government of Quebec than Murray and himself were "puzzled". Suggests course which he should follow; should not "mention any thing of Resignation or Retirement, for they are sometimes apt to take a man at his Word upon the slightest Grounds, and Candidates are never wanting here".

From the same. Re further interviews on the subjects above referred to; Barré's speech on the American Stamp duty; Cumberland's nomination as agent for the Province of Quebec; question of Revenues; Briand's appointment as Bishop; ministers in a difficulty; Roubaud's (the ex-Jesuit's) opposition. ## APPENDIX J.

CORRESPONDENCE EXCHANGED BETWEEN THE COMTE DE VIRY AND M. BAILLI DE SOLAR, REPRESENTATIVES OF THE KINGDOM OF SARDINIA AT THE ENGLISH AND FRENCH COURTS RESPECTIVELY, 1761-2.

SHELburnE MANUSCRIPTS, VOL. 9, 1761-1762.

London,
Nov. 17.

The Comte de Viry to M. le Bailli de Solar (autograph). Has transmitted H. E.'s letter to M<sup>r</sup> Stanley. Refers to an event, which he appears to consider favourable to the accomplishment of their hopes [for peace].

[No copy of M. le Bailly de Solar's autograph reply, dated Dec. 4, to this letter has been preserved].

London,
Nov. 27.

The same to the same. Has received his letter of the 12th instant. Hopes his letter of previous week has been received, and made use of with a certain "Person who, I know, esteems you highly".

Paris,
Dec. 13.

Solar to Viry. Acknowledges receipt of letter of Nov. 27: has made use of the former one, as above suggested. Encloses copy of "the Person's" answer, which Viry may make such use of as he shall deem advisable. Insists, strongly, on the need of prudence and circumpection. Hints that "a Power" [England] certainly does "not desire peace". Has not, however, informed their own court [Sardinia] of their correspondence. Reasons for secrecy.

Versailles,
Dec. 8.

Copy of the Duke de Choiseul's note to Solar. Re passports for Mess<sup>rs</sup> Pitt and Fox. Has read Viry's letter to his cousin. Assures him of the King's confidence in the King of Sardinia's friendship and of their willingness to listen to any proposals made by the latter's ministers. Suggests this as answer to Viry's two letters. Solar's remarks on the above note sent to Viry, are to the effect that it must be regarded merely as a personal compliment, to which no attention should be paid.

Paris,
Dec. 13.

Solar to Viry. Asking him, in connexion with the above note, to confine himself to verbal communications: to give no copies to any one, but to burn the note as soon as he shall have communicated its contents.

London,
Dec. 13.

Viry to Solar. Refers to his letter of Nov. 17. Tells him, for such use as he shall deem advisable to make of it, that the present British ministry are quite willing to make a separate peace between France and England. Would need, however, to be offered to them.

London,
Dec. 13.

The same to the same. Has informed the King of Sardinia of his letter of Nov. 17, and will do so in regard to this one. Details re cost of army commanded by Prince Ferdinand; annual Treaty with King of Prussia, etc. Agains refers to separate peace.

London,
Dec. 15.

The same to the same. Has just received his letter of Dec. 4, in answer to his own of Nov. 17. British ministry aware of the Duc de Choiseul's confidence in Solar, and glad of it. Proposed address of Commons to King re papers relating to disputes with Spain: possible results of separate peace with France. Suggests means of negotiation. Re George Pitt's journey to Turin. Re Memorandum of British Government in answer to French note on failure of peace negotiations. Reasons assigned for its publication.

Viry to Solar. [Duplicate sent to the Court]. Has received his letter of Dec. 4. Re George Pitt's journey, certain commissions, etc.

The same to the same [autograph.] Has received his two letters of Dec. 13, and the Duc de Choiseul's Note. Will continue to act as a private individual only. Why he has communicated with "our Court", and in what sense.

Solar to Viry, in answer to his four letters. [Copy.] Orders received from "our principal" to forward all Viry's letters: will send extracts only. Refers to British Government, etc., under the style of "the merchants with whom you are dealing": are not likely to deal on the basis of their last offer. Declaration of war by Spain. Will send copies of letters himself to "our principal".

The same to the same. Has received his two letters of the 18th. re a commission referred to. Disadvantages of using allusions and ambiguous expressions: necessity of being able to write in plain terms.

Copy of three letters from Viry to Solar.

1. Jan. 5, 1762. [Confidential]. His friends much surprised at the way Spain has acted: matters might have been arranged at the same time as a separate peace. Pitt can have no suspicion of their correspondence.

2. Jan. 8, 1762. Re passport asked for: George Pitt's journey, etc.

3. Jan. 12, 1762. Has received his letter of Dec. 30. Still holds to his opinion about Spain and a separate peace. Will not write again about these matters, unless obliged to do so.

Viry to Solar. Has received his letter of Jan. 24, with Bailiff Froullay's Memorandum re Comte d'Estaing, which he has communicated to Lord Bute, etc. Hopes to be able to send a favourable report. Re capture of Martinique. His "merchants" still hold out for the old terms: are likely to become impatient to know "whether the goods can be sold or not."

Solar to the Comte de Choiseul [Duc de Pralin.] Reports Mr Pitt's arrival, with letters from Viry, of which he sends copies, and passport asked for. Re disposition of English ministry, and prospects of peace.

The Comte de Choiseul to Solar. Sends him the passport asked for. Hopes to see him on Monday to discuss contents of letters sent him.

The same to the same. Will discuss Viry's letters on Monday. Terms and conditions on which England can obtain peace, if she wishes to do so. France not in a position to speak first. Capture of Martinique will not affect French policy.

The same to the same. Has just received his letter, and his Minutes; and will communicate everything to the Duc de Choiseul.

The same to the same: Sending him back his Minutes, which have been shewn to the Duc de Choiseul. Only one Article considered rather too strong, and deleted, as agreed.

1 GEORGE V, A. 1911

Copy of two letters from Solar to Viry.

I. Feb. 1, 1762. Has communicated views of British ministers re separate peace, Spain, etc. to ministers at Versailles, and forwarded Viry's letters: now sends him the Duc de Choiseul's note, which must be considered confidential: Assures him that it conveys the real feelings of the French court. Reports interview with the Duc and the Comte de Choiseul; their views as to British peace proposals, etc. Suggest a secret mission, on the part of the British Government. Matters left in his hands and in Viry's; might be settled in six weeks. In case of failure, in this instance, it would be better they should go no further in the matter of peace proposals.

2. Same date. [Second letter.] Thinks it advisable to explain certain Articles in his letter of even date, and in the Duc de Choiseul's note. Re Allies, Spain, Germany, etc. Confirms assurances contained in his former letter.

Solar to Viry. Re certain passports, despatches, etc.

Viry to Solar. Has just received his letter of the 5th. Reports his friends in the City as well satisfied with Solar's course of action. Is not sure that speedy news would be the best news.

Solar to Viry. Has received his letter of Jan. 26. Has communicated with his friends in Lyons, who are as well disposed as Viry's friends. Question of their "making a trade" on the terms specified in his letter of Feb. 1.

The same to the same. Forwards parcel left for him by Mr Pitt, when on his way to Turin. Hopes his letters have been received. Again refers to "reasonable prices", and to "Lyons merchants".

Viry to Solar. Has received his letters. Will attend to "the business" as soon as the Sieur le Roux arrives. Will send the passports asked for.

The same to the same. Re the Comte d'Estaing. Encloses copy of Lord Egremont's letter [infra].

Solar to Viry. Same subject. Le Roux delayed at Calais.

Viry to Solar. Has received letters brought by Le Roux. Will see his friends in the City.

Solar to Viry. Re the Duc de Choiseul, Lord Egremont, d'Estaing, etc. Is much pleased with Viry's share in the matter; speaks of "the truly royal generosity" of George III.

The same to the same. Same subject. Forwards memorandum from the Maltese ambassador.

D'Estaing to Solar. Complains of his treatment by the English; "it seems terrible that I should have been treated as guilty". Begs him to obtain his regular exchange [cartel].

Viry to Solar. Re letters sent and received. Will answer his of the first as soon as possible.

The same to the same. Re passport for British minister to Switzerland. Has been to the City to see certain "goods", but has not found any quite up to the "samples sent". Hopes to send some nearly so, in a few days.

London,
March 16.
Paris,
March 21.

The same to the same. Lord Egremont's illness, etc.

Solar to Viry. Re letters sent and received. Surprised at his saying nothing about passport asked for by the Duke of Orleans.

Paris,
April 1.

The same to the same. Has received his letters of March 12 and 16. Thought Viry's friends did not find "the samples" sent suitable, but thinks that the news of "new fashions" brought out by "foreign houses" may have given them a taste for those sent by his "Lyons Correspondents". It rests with Viry's friends to "renew the contract".

London,
March 23.

Viry to Solar. Re the Comte d'Estaing's release. Again refers to "goods" and "samples", as above.

Paris,
April 5.

Solar to Viry. Letter of March 23 received. Re passports asked for.

London,
March 26.

Viry to Solar. Is sending passport asked for by the Duke of Orleans.

London,
March 26.

The same to the same. Transmits sense of interview with British minister re Solar's letter of February 1, and the Duc de Choiseul's note of January 23. Somewhat hurt at imputation of attempt to rouse the jealousy of the allies of France; protest the honesty of their intentions; surprised at evidences of distrust. Had taken advantage of the cessation of warfare to ascertain the feelings of France in respect of peace; de Bussy and Stanley ultimatums not necessarily the basis of new negotiations. Their views in regard to Spain, and a separate peace. Their regret at the apparent failure of peace negotiations. War with Spain should not prevent conclusion of a separate peace between France and England.

London,
March 27.

The same to the same. Has been able to use his second letter of Feb. 1, and Choiseul's note re allies of France. Regrets expressions of French distrust, which have delayed a possible agreement. Each country must lay aside any ideas as to the financial condition of the other, and its relation to the continuation of the war.

London,
April 8.

The same to the same. Is sending Lord Egremont's letter to the Duc de Choiseul, with accompanying Declaration, to the Chevalier Ossorio, under cover (open) to him. Explains why he is doing so.

London,
April 8.

The same to the Chevalier Ossorio. Is sending him a copy of letter from Lord Egremont to the Duc de Choiseul, and of the declaration concerning peace annexed thereto. Has also sent copies of both to Bailli de Solar.

London,
April 8.

The same to Solar. Is sending him a letter from Lord Egremont to the Duc de Choiseul, and a copy of the declaration referred to. He will see, from their contents, how the British ministers stand in regard to peace.

Whitehall,
April 8.

Lord Egremont to the Duc de Choiseul. [Copy.] Refers to King's pleasure in granting d'Estaing's unconditional release. Is instructed to convey His Majesty's sincere desire to come to an agreement with His Most Catholic Majesty. Will include Spain in the negotiations, if necessary for obtaining peace. Matter might be taken up again at the point where the breach occurred. Encloses Declaration, referred to.

Copy of Declaration made by H. M. the King of Great Britain.

Proposes that Ministers should be sent by each country, to resume negotiations on the basis of the two last ultimatums. Will induce his allies to send Ministers to the Congress if the other belligerent powers will do the same.

3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

- Undated,
(April 8.) Viry to Solar. Terms on which Spain and the allies of Britain and France may take part in the peace negotiations proposed. Is persuaded that English ministers sincerely desire peace. Encloses copy of a note from Lord Bute (infra).
- London,
April 8. Lord Bute to Viry. [Copy.] Would be very glad to see peace restored between Britain, France and Spain. Believes the war would soon be ended if the two courts (France and England) could arrive at a comprehension of each other's point of view. Gives reasons for his hopefulness.
- London,
April 9. Viry to Solar. Suggests various names of persons who might be sent as secret or public ministers by France and England, to conduct peace negotiations. Lord Bute's position in the matter. [Autograph letter.]
- London,
April 13. The same to the same. Re date of letters received; passports, etc.
- Versailles,
April 14. The Duc de Choiseul to Lord Egremont [Copy.] In answer to the Declaration sent by the British Government. Assures him of the French King's anxiety to "agree on a solid peace" with England. Change of circumstances has revived confidence of French ministry.
- April 15. The same to Solar. [Copy.] Enjoins strictest secrecy re details given in his letter. No separate peace can be concluded or negotiated without notifying Spain. Points to be arranged: (1) Differences between Spain and England: (2) French and English possessions in America, Africa and Asia: (3) The war in Germany and the allies of the two Crowns. Details relating to each point: (1) Prizes made in time of peace: to be referred to the civil courts: (2) English settlements in Honduras: (3) The Newfoundland cod-fishery—only two Spanish ships engaged in it. French claims as to restitution of territory in America, Africa, and Asia: two last ultimatums might be taken as basis: France willing to restore Minorca and to withdraw troops from Germany: will be easy to extend terms of peace between France, England and Spain to their respective allies. Reasons for adopting so unusual a method of treating so important a matter: Viry has permission to communicate this letter to Lord Bute.
- Versailles,
April 16. The Comte de Choiseul to Solar. [Copy.] Is sending him his letter to Lord Egremont, with a copy: contains all that he could have put in a counter-declaration. France will do everything possible to facilitate the Articles therein referred to.
- Versailles,
April 16. The Comte de Choiseul to Lord Egremont. [Copy.] King of France willing to end war. Necessity of including Spain in any peace negotiations. Suggests the interchange of preliminary Memorandums before sending ministers. Might be based on the two last ultimatums. Question of peace in Germany might be postponed until France, Spain and England agree to a suspension of arms.
- Paris,
April 15. Solar to Viry. Has spoken to the Paris agents of "the Lyons merchants", and has found them highly pleased with the proposals and anxious to "finish the business". Has received his letter of March 26.
- Paris,
April 16. The same to the same. Reports his conference with the Duc and the Comte de Choiseul. Told them he believed it rested with the Court of Versailles "to end the horrors of war by a speedy peace". Has shewn the ministers all Viry's letters. The Duc de Choiseul's explanation of the apparent distrust of English sincerity. Their wish to communicate with Spain before giving a definite answer.
- Spain.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

His insistence on the necessity of an immediate answer. A courier to be sent to Madrid at once. The Duc would like an answer to his letter to Solar, which contains all the preliminaries of a negotiation. Again refers to the desirability of using preliminary memoranda, which should be sent through the French court.

April 16.

The same to the same. Sending him two ciphers supplied by the Chevalier Ossorio.

Copy of three autograph letters from Solar to Viry.

1. Paris, April 1. Re the M Mackensie mentioned in Viry's letter of April 9: preliminary memorandums to be sent "through us", etc. The Duc de Choiseul esteems him highly, and would be delighted if he were sent to Paris.

2. [Undated.] Anticipates difficulties on the part of Spain. Does not think the English have much cause for fear in respect of Hanover. The Duc de Choiseul's anxiety for a speedy agreement in regard to preliminaries. Encloses note from the Duc de Choiseul, with reference to Ireland and Spain.

3. [Undated.] Re Viry's letter to Ossorio, use of cipher, etc.

Viry to Solar. Account of instructions given by him, re forwarding of his letters from Calais to London.

The Duc de Choiseul to Solar [Copy]. Is working at his Spanish memorandum. Has heard of the rebellion in Ireland: holds Madrid responsible: will not change his plans.

Viry to Solar [Copy.] Reports English ministers as enchanted with the Duc and Comte de Choiseul. Nothing definite settled yet, but will do his utmost to bring things to a speedy conclusion.

Copy of cipher letter from Viry to Solar.

Solar to Viry. Reports rumours of a general peace, or of an agreement between France, England and Spain: thinks the report rests on the Duc de Choiseul's letter re D'Estaing. Thinks Viry should inform Lord Egremont and Lord Bute.

Viry to Solar. Has received all the letters of April 16, and forwarded the Comte de Choiseul's to Lord Egremont. Lord Bute's satisfaction. Account of his interview with Lord Egremont; information conveyed by him to British ministers; cabinet council; letter to be answered as soon as possible.

Lord Egremont to Viry. [Copy.] British ministers have made further concessions to French Court. Sends him copy of a letter.

The same to the same. [Confidential. Copy.] Sends him copies of his letters to the Duc and the Comte de Choiseul. Concessions which the British government are prepared to make in the West Indies, and in Africa. Delimitation of Mississippi boundaries. Solar to Viry [First letter. Copy.] Same subject. Sends him copies of the Comte de Choiseul's letter to Lord Egremont, etc. Hopes England will make the same declaration to Spain as to France. Spain expected to adopt method of preliminary memorandums. French ministers pleased with attitude of British; peace could be made in less than three weeks, but they are hampered by Spanish court. - London, May 22. Viry to Solar. Sends him copy of an extract from his own confidential letter of May 12; refers to Carvalho and the Court of Lisbon: Grimaldi well known in Paris, not a friend of the Duc de Choiseul. The Marquis Tanucci also an enemy of the Duc de Choiseul. Wisdom of cajoling Grimaldi. Prussian ministers doing all in their power to prevent peace. Would like to know how Viennese Court took the communication that was to be made to it. English ministers postponing definite answer to Russian proposals for joint action of Britain, Prussia and Russia. Duke of Newcastle's resignation will not delay conclusion of peace. Motives of his resignation.
- Paris,

- Paris, same date. The same to the same. Acknowledging receipt of letters, etc.
- Versailles,
May 23. The Duc de Choiseul to Solar. Details of certain preliminaries absolutely necessary to the conclusion of peace. French ministers alarmed at English Cabinet changes. Authorized to treat with Lord Egremont and Lord Bute, would personally withdraw if other ministers were used. Report of conduct of French Court in regard to Spain. Await reply. Is sending him Memorandum of Preliminaries to be signed, when Spain consents, in order to save time. Details of negotiation known in Holland; detrimental to peace. Feels sure that England's allies do not want peace.
- St. Hubert,
May 25. The Duc de Choiseul to Solar. Sends him the preliminary letter referred to. Repeats what he said about Lord Bute and Lord Egremont: importance of peace between France and England "without England and without Us, all these Crowns... could not make 4 campaigns."
- Memorandum*, above referred to: "Means of Conciliation between the Crowns of Spain and England." Principles governing conquests, and conditions of peace. Cessions of territory in America.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Africa and Asia. Cession of Canada by France to be complete. Fishing rights to be granted on Newfoundland Banks, and in the Gulf of S. Lawrence: St. Pierre, Miquelon, etc. De Royale suggested as an alternative. Restitution of Martinique, and other West Indian islands. Mississippi as boundary in North America. Restitutions in Africa and Asia. Prizes left to the justice of H. B. M.; France to restore Minorca; article relating to Germany needs to be specially explained: French demands.

Paris,
May 26.

Solar to Viry. Reasons for believing that negotiations with Spain will be successful. Asks him to inform Lord Egremont and Lord Bute.

St. Hubert.
May 27.

The Duc de Choiseul to Solar. Asking him to come to Versailles in order to confer with the Comte de Choiseul re British Declaration to Spain. Sets no store by what Grimaldi says and thinks.

Versailles,
May 28.

[The same to the same.] Memorandum of French terms. Fears effects of Spanish conquests in Portugal. Interest of France and England in resisting "this Invasion of Tartars"; the plans of Russia and Prussia: thinks Fisheries article has been sufficiently explained. Will submit to English decision re De Royale. France making larger concessions in Louisiana than she would have made a year ago; will make Spain her reason in regard to Florida. France cannot cede St. Lucia. Explains his views as to the value of colonies, colonial trade, etc. The two nations will have no trouble in regard to the African coast. French claims in Asia. Better for England to have France in Asia than Holland or Denmark. Spain will make delays, but he is doing his best, and is cajoling Grimaldi. Refers once more to English Cabinet changes, and to French ministers' confidence in Lord Bute and Lord Egremont.

Paris,
May 30.

Solar to Viry. Enumerates the enclosures accompanying his letter: they contain the clear expression of the real views of the King of France and of Mess<sup>rs</sup> de Choiseul in regard to the matters dealt with (see above Memorandum). Renewed allusion to French ministers' confidence in Lord Bute and Lord Egremont, and to their anxiety about a change of ministry in London. Means taken to allay Spanish suspicions in communicating the terms contained in Lord Egremont's note to Viry. Precautions to be observed by English Government. Notes on the Duc de Choiseul's Memorandum (supra): French claims on St. Lucia; Grenada; and liberal concession of fishing rights in Newfoundland. Louisiana boundary, the loss of Martinique, and the Franco-Spanish alliance. Does not think these changes should prevent the conclusion of peace. The Duc de Choiseul has sent H. B. M.'s Declaration to Grimaldi, with a memorandum, and has written to French ambassador at Madrid.

May 12.

The Duc de Choiseul to Solar. [enclosed in Solar's letter to Viry of even date.] Enclosing correspondence sent him by Solar, and copies of information communicated to Spain and Vienna. Refers to Lord Egremont, Pitt, peace, and the difficulties re neutral West Indian Islands, and Mississippi boundary. Thinks English demands re Louisiana and the Grenadines should be granted, but St. Lucia indispensably necessary to France.

May 30.

Solar to Viry. Assures him that French King and his ministers ardently desire peace: Madame de Pompadour in favour of it. France will force Spain's hand if she can make peace on the terms now proposed: will insist on Spain's being reasonable in her claims. Important that England should assist Portugal. In regard to Germany, the Duc de Choiseul does not want a Congress, but England, France and Spain, once they have come to an agreement, can unite to make the German powers accept a reasonable peace. France will surrender Wesel to Prussia as soon as peace is made on the continent. Attitude of the Court of Vienna. As to Choiseul's Memorandum, feels sure England will grant, to all intents and purposes, what France asks. He may shew this letter to Lord Bute, if he wishes to do so. French ministers hope "Mackensie" will be sent as ambassador.

NOTE: The two following volumes being wrongly numbered, volume 11 is here given before volume 10 in order to preserve the chronological order of the letters.

- London,
June 15. The same to the same. King's illness. Council meeting postponed.
- Paris,
June 14. Solar to Viry. Has received his of June 4, with translation of King's Speech. Has shewn his letter to the Duc de Choiseul; encloses copy of latter's note in reply. Thinks peace assured if replies from London are favourable, especially re St. Lucia. Suggests sending signed preliminaries, and asking appointment of ministers [to treat of peace]. Necessity of strict secrecy.
- Versailles,
July (June) 12. The Duc de Choiseul to Solar. [Copy.] France is determined to have peace, and will not fire a gun on behalf of Spain in Portugal. Is waiting courier's return in order to send signed preliminaries to London.
- Paris,
June 17. Solar to Viry. Fears possible misuse of their confidential correspondence. The Duc de Choiseul assures him that peace is made if the answers from London are favourable. Spain will make larger claims if allowed to conquer Portugal. Reports interview with the Duc de Choiseul: Grimaldi has shewn latter a letter from London re Lord Grenville, M. de St. Severin, Spain and Portugal. The Duc de Choiseul's comments. Viry to communicate this to Lord Bute only. Britain should send troops to Portugal at once: Spanish advance on Lisbon made after receipt of peace proposals.
- Paris,
June 24. The same to the same. Messieurs de Choiseul astonished at Viry's silence re intentions of British ministry: suspect that they wished to consult the King of Prussia before answering. ## SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b English ministry to put the last touch to the business. Does not think England will miss peace for the sake of St. Lucia.

London,
June 25.

Viry to Solar. Cipher and other letters received, shewn to Lord Bute, and burnt. Lord Bute strongly in favour of a secret negotiation between France and England. Assures him that he says nothing to their Court [Sardinia] about this correspondence.

London,
June 28.

The same to the same. Solar's letter of May 30, and Choiseul's detailed note of May 23, received June 3. Delays referred to due to King's illness. Now sends papers received from Lord Egremont: replies to the Duc de Choiseul's Memorandum, etc. Feels sure Egremont would have acted differently, had it been possible to do so. Would take too long to explain their motives.

Whitehall,
June 26.

Lord Egremont to Viry. Sends him his Memorandum in reply to Choiseul's of May 29. Surprised to find so little in agreement with what he had been led to expect. Changes in Cabinet have strengthened British ministry. Cannot agree with Choiseul in regard to Germany: thinks change of Russian policy would be a counterpoise in favour of England, should peace fail to be made. Hopes Messieurs de Choiseul will be able to induce Spain to adopt a peaceful policy. Will await reply of French Ministry as deciding the fate of the negotiation.

Lord Egremont's Memorandum. Gives answers in detail to articles in Choiseul's Memorandum, on which they do not agree. There seems to be an agreement in respect of the Cession of Canada, eighteen months for emigration, and fishing rights on the Banks and in Gulf of St. Lawrence. England holds to her first offer re St. Pierre and Miquelon. Did not expect France would make difficulties in regard to the Mississippi arrangement and to St. Lucia. Thinks compensation asked for in return for Martinique was very moderate, and speaks of the very doubtful claims of France to St. Lucia. As to alleged danger to Martinique from England's holding St. Lucia; he contends that Barbadoes would be in greater danger should the French continue to hold St. Lucia. England asked for both banks of the Mississippi chiefly in order to establish peace upon solid and lasting foundations and to avoid all disputes concerning the limits of the two Nations on the continent of America. In respect of Africa, England is not aware of any trading-post still belonging to France in that part of the world: the phrase without prejudice to their trading posts needs explaining. As to East Indies, England offers to restore French trading-posts on Coromandel and Malabar Coast, but retains the Bengal post; Companies to settle details when preliminaries have been arranged. England cannot agree to proposed French arrangements re evacuation of places belonging to Prussia, etc., without previously communicating with the King of Prussia, and the Emperor of Russia. Proposes that France and England shall withdraw the armies kept in pay by the two crowns, now in Germany. Hopes that what has been proposed will not meet with difficulties of such a kind as to cause the failure of a work whose conclusion is ardently desired.

London,
June 27.

Viry to Solar. Has forwarded the Comte de Choiseul's letter to Lord Egremont, and a copy of the letter to Solar. Has discussed all the letters, etc., with Lord Bute and Mr Mackenzie. Impossibility of conceding French demands. Details of his conversations with Lord Bute. Duke of Bedford suggested as ambassador extraordinary. Lord Egremont and the questions of Ile Royale, navigation of Senegal River, East Indian trading-posts, St. Lucia, etc. Viry's answers to various objections, re Ile Royale in particular. His interviews with George Grenville and Lord Bute, explains Choiseul's attitude to the latter: question of Stanley's letters and relations: Lord Egremont and the article relating to Germany, Prussia and Russia. France's reasons for keeping towns, etc., until conclusion of peace in Germany. Matter reported to the King; Council called for the 21st. Solar's cipher letter of 14th received and shewn to Lord Bute: meeting of various ministers: unable to grant further concessions or to lessen the claims made—for political and parliamentary reasons. Cabinet council of June 21, Choiseul's Memorandum discussed. His interview with Lord Egremont. Would risk advising King to cede St. Lucia, if sure that France would first sign preliminaries with England, on the basis of the other articles relating to a peace between the two Courts. Council of June 24; answer to Choiseul's Memorandum read. Sends answer, and other documents: expected difficulties from the first. Solar to make such use of this letter as he sees best.

(June 28.)

The Comte de Choiseul to Solar. [Copy.] Has received Lord Egremont's letters, and will communicate them to the King. Asks him to lend him copies to send to Choisy.

Versailles,
June 28.

The same to the same. Sending despatch for Lord Egremont to be transmitted through Viry. Thinks English in a position to conclude a glorious peace in a short time.

Versailles,
June 28.

The same to Lord Egremont. [Copy.] Explains that France could not make definite reply to H. B. M's Declaration of May 19, until she had learned the views of her allies. Answers now received from Madrid and Vienna shew those Courts to be in accord with the views of France and England. Sends him copies of answers of King of Spain, Empress-Queen, and other documents: King of France would like to learn views of King of Prussia. Encloses Memorandum of terms on which peace could be made between France and England: last word of France.

Versailles,
June 25.

The Duc de Choiseul to the Comte de Choiseul. Transmitting Spanish reply to H. B. M's Declaration, and Grimaldi's letter. Points of issue: (1) Prizes taken in time of peace: (2) The surrender of British settlements in Honduras, etc.: (3) Free fishing rights on Newfoundland Banks. Grimaldi's explanations.

June 24.

Translation of Grimaldi's letter, above referred to.

Aranjuez,
June 12.

Reply of Spanish Court: general profession of His Catholic Majesty's desire for peace, and of his willingness to treat. Is anxious for restoration of peace in Germany.

Draft of Articles of Peace, drawn up by France. To be based on the two last ultimatums, but must necessarily include Spain. 1. Cession of Canada but with two conditions: (a) Freedom of the Catholic religion to be preserved: (b) Facilities of emigration for those who wish to leave the country. 2. Fishing rights on Nfd. Banks and in Gulf of St. Lawrence: Art. XIII of Treaty of Utrecht to be confirmed and renewed. 3. Shelter for French ships. Great Britain to restore Ile Royale, Ile St. Jean, or St. Pierre and Miquelon. 4. Dunkirk to remain as specified in Art. 17 of the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. 5. Limits of Canada not to extend beyond the Mississippi, nor to encroach on the sea coast of Louisiana. 6. Islands to be surrendered in West Indies. 7. England to retain possession of St. Vincent, etc. 8. Goree to be restored to France, with free trading rights in Senegal River. 9. Minorca to be surrendered to H. B. M. 10. France consents to evacuate country belonging to Landgrave of Hesse, Brunswick, and Hanover. 11. Proposals re Wesel, Guelders, etc. 12. Claim of indemnity for prizes taken before declaration of war. 13. France will evacuate Neuport on signature of preliminaries. 14. Cessation of hostilities to date from ratification of preliminaries. 15. East Indies: Islands and trading posts claimed by France. 16. Exchange of Prisoners.

Notes on the preceding Articles. Last two ultimatums taken as basis of present negotiation.

1. The same as proposed in the last negotiation.
2. Entirely in conformity with English proposals.
3. Proposed surrender of Ile Royale the only change made by France in former proposals. Reasons in support of the proposed change.

4. Demolition of Dunkirk agreed to, as far as may be possible, without rendering town uninhabitable.

5. Larger concessions made in Louisiana than in former treaty.

6. Surrender of Martinique to France to be considered as offsetting foregoing concessions.

7. Former treaty proposed division of neutral West Indian islands: France now confines herself to St. Lucia.

8. France cannot take less than island of Goree, and equal trading rights on Senegal river.

- 9 and 10. Are as England asked for them.

11. Only require establishment of a perfect reciprocity, and the safeguarding of the interests of the several Allies.

12. Demand in conformity with Law of nations.

13. To England's satisfaction.

14. Not open to any objection; in conformity with two past ultimatums and with ordinary usage.

- 15 and last. Better to settle East Indian questions in Preliminaries, than to refer them to Companies: necessary to distinguish between the real and the relative position of a Power in regard to its conquests and its losses.

The Duc de Choiseul to Solar. [Copy.] Gives certain explanations as to despatch of English declaration to Madrid; the action of the French court while awaiting reply. Spanish and Viennese answers received before English; despatch of Spanish answer to London inevitable. Modification of Art. 5 (Louisiana boundaries) of no consequence. Spanish ambassador instructed to act with France: need of a speedy decision on the part of England. Court of Vienna will now do all that France wishes in regard to Germany.

The same to the same. Sending him above letter. War with Portugal must not be allowed to interfere with peace negotiations.

Solar to Viry. Sending him Spanish reply to H.B.M.'s Declaration; letter to Lord Egremont, etc. Gives him certain explanations re Grimaldi, Louisiana, and Mobile. The Duc de Choiseul's real intentions. England has only to insist on terms of former Memorandum. Need of a speedy decision.

The same to the same. The Duc de Choiseul authorized to assure England that His Catholic Majesty undertakes to supply the English with all the Campeachy wood (logwood) they may need

Also feels sure of Spain: Grimaldi ordered to be guided by him in everything. Peace depends upon the Island of St. Lucia.

Same date.

Another letter of the same day. Enclosing despatch for M. de S. Severino. Speaks of him as a very dangerous Prince, and one to be mistrusted. Explanations as to George Grenville, the Neapolitan ambassador (S. Severino), Choiseul, Grimaldi, and present treaty: Viry not to deliver despatch until he has seen English ministers, and warned them against said ambassador. The whole matter has been arranged with Mess<sup>rs</sup> de Choiseul. Again urges haste: "for God's sake, let us hurry, and get a very speedy answer "to this despatch."

June 30.

The same to the same. Re letters despatched, and how his letters are to be sent. French ministers worried at long silence of English.

Notes on the Memorandum of Terms sent to London, June 28, 1762.

1. As agreed between the two Courts.
2. Agreed, as relates to fishing on Banks and in Gulf of St. Lawrence, and drying-places on Nfd. coast, as by treaty of Utrecht. Difficult to define off shore distance, but can easily be arranged in final treaty.
3. France hopes England will admit the justice as well as the moderation of her claim [respecting Ile Royale]: but asks that the expression reasonable inspection of Lord Egremont's Memo of June 28 be used, instead of the commissioner named in th first Memo of the Court of London.
4. Agreed. [Demolition of Dunkirk.]
5. Claim to whole of left bank of Mississippi would involve cession of New Orleans and of Louisiana. Line to pass by lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain—granted. Map annexed.
6. Courts agreed as to this Article, except re Grenada.
7. Principles re Neutral Islands, laid down by England, adopted by France. Not a question of cession, but of defining rights.
8. No trade in Island of Goree: reasons why France asks equal trading rights on Senegal river, and reservation of trading-posts.
9. Granted.
10. Agreed.
11. France adopts proposal of M. de Viry's letter; copy herewith. No troops paid by Great Britain to serve with King of Prussia. That Crown might induce its allies to agree to a suspension of arms when French troops evacuate Germany.
12. This Article is at the disposal of the King of England.
13. Agreed for all time.
14. We do not think it open to any objection.
15. France asks that surrenders on Coromandel and Malabar coasts shall be clearly defined in preliminary Articles. Claim to Bengal post, etc. Asks England to say exactly what her proposed arrangements are.
16. Above explanations seem to remove all difficulties in the way of peace.

Viry to Solar. Re certain pots of tamarinds sent.

The same to the same. Has received duplicate of his letter of the 14th, etc. Need have no anxiety about his confidential letters. Feels sure that what Grimaldi said to the Duc de Choiseul was a "tripotage" between him and M. de St. Severin. Will write more fully on these points.

" 3. Prohibited areas to be referred to the definite Treaty.

" 4. Seems to present no difficulty.

" 5. Copied from the Note.

" 6. Matter not clearly understood hitherto: Art. 5 of Note would have included New Orleans and Louisiana: England now obtains all she could wish for.

" 7. Is the same as Art. 6 of Note, with the addition of Martinique.

" 8. Cession of St. Lucia to France a sine qua non.

" 9. The two nations are agreed, and it seems unnecessary to make stipulations in respect of trade.

" 18. Explanations re time set for various evacuations.

" 19. Was in last year's Preliminaries: just and reciprocal.

" 20. Date of departure of several ambassadors to be agreed upon.

Difference between Preliminaries herewith and Lord Egremont's Note really consists of 3 points:

1. New Orleans, which the King could not cede.

2. St. Lucia, which appears to be the sole real obstacle to peace.

3. Wesel and Guelders.

Allies on either side must be considered. Advantages now granted, to be taken into account.

(a) Much wider limits of Canada conceded. (b) 3 out of 4 Neutral West India islands ceded to Great Britain. (c) The acquisition of Grenada and the Grenadines.

Versailles,
April 22.

Vergennes to Gérard, N<sup>o</sup>. 1. He is not to interfere in the matter which concerns Deane; but must induce him to stay with the Congress, in order to promote unity among its members. France is not yet at war with England. The squadron commanded by D'Estaing is intended to convince the Americans of the King's intention of protecting and strengthening their independence. What Gérard should say to them on this head. Part to be played by the deputies to the Congress in regard to obtaining convoys for the French merchants trading with America. Spain persists in her resolution and in her disapproval. She holds closely to the family compact. The arrival of her fleet may bring about a fortunate change of views on her part. Gérard's conduct in all that relates to this power must be in strict conformity with his instructions.

Vergennes to Gérard N<sup>o</sup>. 2. The alliance between France and the United States has caused universal joy in the latter country. Remarks re an article in the York Town Gazette referring to a speech of Gérard's to the American deputies, and containing the statement that the King was willing that the United States should make a separate peace with England, on the sole condition of a recognition of their independence. Admiral Byron, with 13 ships, is to sail shortly, in order to follow the King's squadron to America. Spain's mediation instigated by England. Negotiations for the restoration of peace in Germany. The Comte d'Estaing has been notified of Admiral Byron's having sailed for America.

p. 16.

Conference with the president of the Congress, and principal members of the War and Naval committees, re the King's squadron. Difficulty as to Gérard's reception by and introduction to, the Congress.

p. 1.

July 15.

Gérard to Vergennes [not numbered.] The Comte d'Estaing's plans for freeing the inhabitants of Ile St. Jean. Remarks on the plan elsewhere referred to; plan and notes relating thereto, being enclosed.

p. 5.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Remarks on the Comte d'Estaing's plans re Ile St. Jean, Newfoundland, the Bermudas, and some of the Windward Islands. The plan in question, according to a note in the margin, was enclosed in Gérard's unnumbered letter of July 15. Extract of a letter from Comte d'Estaing, also enclosed therewith. p. 7.

July 16.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 2. Documents relating to the evacuation of Philadelphia by the English [not enclosed] Congress holds firmly to the principle of independence. Party spirit in Congress, due to the disagreement of certain ambitious members. Vigorous action on the part of Congress, shewing that it counts on a decisive influence. Severity used in keeping up the currency of the paper money; its value is increasing. Secret abuses in trade, which send up the price of everything to an incredible extent; Congress however, moderates them as it sees fit; he himself is disposed to take advantage of this lowering of prices, in respect of supplies of flour for the King's squadron. Advantageous condition of the continental armies. Praises the militia and recruits. The affair at Monmouth would have been fatal to the English, but for General Lee's suspicious behaviour. Plans of military expeditions. Havoc wrought by the Indians. It is thought that the English would become dangerous to the United States in time of peace, were they to retain Florida, as they do now. There is little indication of asking French assistance in this operation. Gérard is reticent on this point.

for the conquest of Florida; proposed conquest of Pensacola, in order to offer it to Spain. Secret agent of Spain in touch with the Congress; favourably regarded by several members of that assembly. He is courting Gérard whom he has not yet put in a position to sound him as to his residence and his intentions; will be very circumspect in his endeavours to ascertain the attitude of the United States towards Spain. He will try to get to the bottom of Don Miralles. Plan for the establishment of a good navy. General Arnold entrusted with this task. Estimation in which this officer is held. Declaration made by the English in the south.

July 18.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 3. Unsuccessful persecution of Deane's enemies. Necessity of assisting Don Juan de Miralles in matters relating to the Court of Spain. Sketch of operations proposed by General Washington and General Gates. Orders received by the English to engage the King's squadron out at sea: zeal of Congress on behalf of the squadron. Reasons that have hitherto delayed transmission of Gérard's credentials.

p. 26.

July 19.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 4. Describes anxiety of Congress, of general officers, and prominent citizens to see him. Their expressions of gratitude for proofs of the King's generosity. Dinner given him (Gérard) by the Congress, of which he took advantage to talk confidentially with a large number of its members. The chief efforts of the English commissioners have been directed towards fostering the traditional prejudices of Americans against France. The alternative which Congress would be willing to accept rather than fail of executing a single point of the treaties. Popular dispositions in favour of France. Joy shewn by the people of Delaware on hearing that the King's squadron had arrived.

p. 30.

July 19.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 5. Fresh letter from the English commissioners to the Congress shewn to him by the president of the Congress. Note on its date. Means used by the English to seduce the Americans [to withdraw them from the French alliance.] Lawrence's objections to the English proposals. Debates in the Congress on the reply to the English letter. Resolution to leave the English Commissioners' letter unanswered. p. 34.

July 25.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 6. Whigs admit that the American government owes its present stability to the King's friendship and generosity. The conditions of the treaty have dispelled the distrust of France instilled into the Americans by the English. Means employed by the latter to foster among Americans their ancient hatred of the French name. The appearance of the King's squadron has wrecked all the means of seduction used on the Americans by the English. Offers made to a doubtful citizen in order to gain a knowledge of the French treaties; their receipt has upset the existence of a faction composed of certain members of the Congress. p. 38.

July 25.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 7. Report of the havoc wrought by the English army on its way through New Jersey, and at the evacuation of Philadelphia. Quakers accused of having given all kinds of assistance to the English army. Means under consideration for the repression of the Tories. The confiscation of their property is regarded as one of the chief financial resources for the payment of the debts incurred by the Congress. Provisions plentiful in all the States, but their price has gone up to the level of the rarest and most unattainable articles. p. 43.

July 25.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 8. Report of his interviews with Don Juan de Miralles, re attitude of Spain towards France and America. Unsuccessful attempts to carry out a plan proposed by the governor of South Carolina. Has induced Miralles to represent to his court that the Congress will not easily give up the navigation of the Mississippi. Result of the expedition undertaken by Major Willing. Plan of offering Pensacola to Spain. Miralles has allowed it to appear in the newspapers that letters received from Havana state that Spain had recognized the independence of America. Don Miralles insists strongly on the total exclusion of the English from the navigation of North America. South Carolina has received the treaty concluded with the King of France, with enthusiasm. Resolution of the Congress, whom he has urged to demand complete satisfaction for the insult offered to its members. p. 47.

Versailles,
July 28.

Vergennes to Gérard. N<sup>o</sup>. 3. The fight between the Bellepoule and the Arethusa goes to shew that hostilities were begun by the English. The French fleet sailed on the 8th of the month; the English on the 9th from Saint Helena. Lord Stormont recalled. Gérard instructed to inform the Congress that, with the rupture between France and England, the former court henceforth regards its conditional alliance with the United States as definite. France suspects England of wishing to make peace proposals to the united provinces, on the basis of a recognition of their independence. It is essential that France should forestall this attempt. The Court looks for a report from Gérard on the state of affairs in America. War declared between the Emperor of Germany and the King of Prussia. p. 54.

Philadelphia,
July 28.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

- August 3. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 9. Unconfirmed rumour of the capture of a French frigate. Force commanded by La Fayette expected to reach Rhode Island shortly, and report on the operations of the main army. The arrangement of the Congress has so far delayed the delivery of Gérard's credentials. His remarks on the French officers who claim to be dissatisfied. His opinion of the production of a writer who has published an article in a newspaper, signed Gallo-Americanus. Plan of establishing unlimited toleration in respect of religion. p. 63.
- August 7. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 10. Public audience granted him by the Congress, and delivery of his credentials as minister plenipotentiary. His speech, and reply of the President of the Congress: the two documents enclosed. Has urged the Congress to declare itself openly as to the positive and permanent existence of the treaty of alliance. Reasons that have hitherto kept the Congress from publishing the treaty of alliance in extenso: its unshaken resolution to stand by the treaties. The evacuation of Philadelphia attributed to the resolutions of the Congress; its members unanimous in assuring Gérard that English intrigues and negotiations will henceforth be unavailing. William,* the member from Georgia, bears witness to the popular approval of the treaty of alliance. p. 67.
- *Sic.
- August 7. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 11. Historical account of the ceremonial of the public audience granted him by the Congress on the occasion of the delivery of his credentials. Cabal against General Washington, in which French officers have taken part. p. 72.
- August 12. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 12. Sketch of the composition and of the internal state of the Congress, also of the individual attitudes of the several States in respect of the authority and constitution of that body. Gives reasons for the delays which the Government's sanction of the plan of confederation and perpetual union formed by the Congress in regard to Maryland has hitherto encountered. This province rightly insists that the resources common to all the States shall be included in the political code. Division caused by the influence of the Congress on the choice of its members. The rivalry between Generals Washington and Gates is a matter over which the Congress is sharply divided. Cabal against General Washington, in which French officers have taken part. p. 76.
- August 12. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 13. Describing the qualities and characters of the members of the Congress. Methods of arriving at membership. The assignment of the details of every part of the administration entrusted to members of the Congress. The ruling motive of Americans, self-interest and personal advantage. Want of order and unity in the details entrusted to members of the Congress, in relation to general administration. Prorogation of the English parliament, and impossibility of renewing any negotiations before next year. p. 86.
- August 12. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 14. Detailed account of the numbers and constitution of the continental army. p. 92.
- August 12. Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 15. Fresh despatch addressed by the English commissioners to the President of the Congress and dated August 7, 1778. Ratification of the convention of Saratoga by the English commissioners, who demand its immediate execution. Resolution of the President of the Congress on this head. Captivity of Burgoyne's force prolonged. p. 100.

Versailles.
August 15.

Vergennes to Gérard. N<sup>o</sup>. 4. English aim in spreading the report of an alleged secret negotiation between them and France, for the restoration of peace. How Gérard must act towards the Americans, should they suspect the good faith of France in fulfilling her engagements with them. Sends account of the fight off Ushant on the 27th of the previous month. No decisive engagement has yet occurred between the armies of the Emperor and of the King of Prussia. p. 104.

Philadelphia
August 16.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 16. Report to the Congress of the execution of the Saratoga convention. Has explained his views to Congress in connexion therewith. It would be a good thing were the King to commemorate, in France, the alliance with the United States, by means of a medal. The Congress has ordered one struck in its name to commemorate the event. p. 107.

August 22.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 17. False alarm caused at Philadelphia by the entrance of seven English ships into the Delaware. General Lee declared guilty by the council of war, and suspended from his duties for a year: the decision has thrown the Congress into a difficulty. Result of the division between the generals of the continental army. General Mifflin has abruptly resigned, and is appealing to the public from the proceedings of the Congress. False impression given by English to Americans concerning the destination of the King's squadron. p. 114.

August 24.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 18. Bill in connexion with a demand for the documents relating to the execution of the capitulation at Saragota, presented by the president of the Congress. Gérard has selected the feast of St. Louis for returning the dinner given him by the Congress on the occasion of his audience. Hessian objections to English commanders. p. 119.

August 29.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 19. Has had news of the King's squadron from General Sullivan; ships unable to communicate on account of fogs. Account of squadron's operations for the reduction of Newport. Condition of squadron after the violent storm it encountered. Reasons which kept the Comte d'Estaing from complying with General Sullivan's wishes to renew a joint attack on Newport. Protest of the latter and of his officers concerning d'Estaing's refusal to act with them. Congress resolves to suppress all proceedings in connexion therewith. p. 123.

Sept. 1.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 20. Encloses return of Washington's army. Account of its order, and of its strength. Report that English are withdrawing part of their forces in New York to Europe, and are merely keeping the points they hold, which they can easily do. It must, however, be otherwise in Canada, or that conquest would go to the Americans. There seems little likelihood of a speedy evacuation of New York, now held by the English; the hopes of it have no solid foundation in fact. Spain's attitude considered doubtful in the United States since the appearance in the New York papers of a paragraph from a London paper. It is difficult to believe that the Americans could ever be dangerous to Spain on the continent (of America). Points out the precautions to be taken in connexion with this matter. Exchange of United States prisoners completed. The number of their English prisoners.

- September 10. Gérard to Vergennes, N° 24. Has drawn up, in conjunction with Draiton, a member of the Congress, a written reply to the English commissioners, for the purpose of enlightening the American people as to England's intentions. The English commissioners' views have not met with success. Tory objections to the wording of the United States Declaration of Independence; has given his support to their contention. Is suspicious of the motives underlying the attachment to the wording referred to. Reasons which keep a large number of the inhabitants of the Southern States from being attached to the English interests. Those on whom the English can count. Is doubtful whether the best methods will be used in drawing the line of separation. Considerations which might lead to salutary decisions. The Tories in league with the Indians are in arms only on the borders of Pennsylvania and Virginia. Effect on Tories of news of evacuation of New York. It is thought not unlikely that the bulk of the English forces will remove to the West Indies. Resolution of the Congress which will weaken the American army by one third. Conjectures re sailing of King's squadron for the Islands; has been careful not to say a word as to its destination. Reasons why he will merely explain, vaguely, that the cause of independence calls for great efforts. A committee is to consult with him as to the further operations in which the King's squadron might take part: does not anticipate anything which might hamper d'Estaing in his operations. Reasons which lead Americans to wish that the King's squadron should betake itself to the Islands. Gérard's answer to the opinion of the members of the Congress as to conclusion of peace by next spring. p. 162.
- September 10. Gérard to Vergennes, N° 25. Particulars concerning the finances of the United States. p. 170.
- September 10. Gérard to Vergennes, N° 26. General Washington is convinced that the English intend to undertake a fresh campaign, and that there seems little likelihood of the evacuation of New York. His interpretation of the movements taking place there. Gérard's own reasons for asserting that General Washington is mistaken on this point. Aim of avisos which de Miralles is having drawn up for Martinique; but which will not be despatched until after the return of a spy sent to New York. The Congress is of opinion that America has nothing to fear from the English armies. The purpose which General Washington had in view in allowing his opinion on the English plan to become known. Aim of the reinforcement sent to General Sullivan; reasons why Americans would like General Clinton to undertake the siege of Boston. The motive underlying the proclamation of freedom of trade in the Islands. The bulk of the army considers the want of success in the attack on New York to be due to bad luck. p. 186

Gérard to Vergennes. No 27. Forwarding the Philadelphia Gazette, containing the English commissioners' letters and declarations. [Not enclosed.] It appears likely that the Court of London may come to see that the recognition of independence must precede any negotiations. News from New York; its evacuation expected shortly. No word of General Clinton's expedition; public opinion concerning it. What the English may possibly do. Date of execution of orders addressed to de Miralles. Encloses a copy of his letter to d'Estaing, giving an account of a conference with members of the Congress, re plans of operations. Has reluctantly yielded to their wish to temporize. The Congress desires and hopes to see a decrease in the English forces on the continent, so as to be able to arrange matters relating to finance. There are no funds available for carrying out the operations enumerated to him by Duer, the president of the committee. He (Gérard) has insisted on the demand of supplies for the King's squadron. There will be no compensation save in case of co-operation; a method he has made use of in order to avoid a claim for compensation on the part of the United States. Encloses letter from General Heath re English squadron. How the English plan is regarded. Confidence shewn by members of the Congress in respect of the English undertaking. Has heard no complaint re the King's squadron. His answer to the question put to him as to the assistance to be looked for from Spain. An Acadian member asks for help in driving out the English. News of the English squadron from General Heath. Letter from General Sullivan on the same subject. Likelihood of New York's being evacuated. English attack on Boston considered probable. The King's squadron is in no danger. Indicates places where the mass of the English forces may be found. Sortie made by 3000 English from Kingsbridge. Speaks of the difficulty encountered in obtaining recruits. Freedom enjoyed by the militia. Commission appointed to reduce the "prodigious" number of officers, and to strengthen various parts of the service. The reduction in the number of officers may lead to dissatisfaction. p. 190 duced to say what it is. Has urged the committee to supply d'Estaing with the forces needed for taking one of the Windward Islands. Has suggested Halifax as a place where a diversion might be made. Members have taken these ideas into consideration, but nothing is decided. Will merely forward the proposals made by the Congress. His remarks to the members re Sullivan's behaviour towards d'Estaing; members express their views concerning d'Estaing's conduct. His opinion as to the Congress plan of attacking one of the English Islands while d'Estaing attacked another.

Vergennes to Gérard. N<sup>o</sup>. 5. Minister's reply to the request of the commissioners of the Congress, asking for a continuation of the subsidies. It is in the negative, but another quarter will be paid, in order to enable the commissioners to pay the drafts that will be presented to them. Fresh request from the commissioners of the Congress, relative to two matters: (1) The auditing of Beaumarchais' account: (2) the ratification of the contract made by the committee of trade with Therenau de Fancé. The King did not supply Beaumarchais with anything for the Congress, but merely allowed him to draw on his arsenals on behalf of that body, with the obligation of replacing what might be taken. The Court is awaiting news, both of Gérard and of the Comte d'Estaing. The French fleet sailed as long ago as August 17.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 29. The writer of an article in the Philadelphia Gazette points out that England might end the war and ensure a large trade with the United States, by recognizing their independence. The Congress, however, is not of this mind as to the method of making peace. Its desire to conquer South Carolina. The three southern provinces are also anxious to take St. Augustine from the English. Gives his reasons for believing that the United States would gladly seize the immediate advantage of a peace, but is not therefore justified in thinking that they would make it without France. Is inclined to assume that if the English were to offer independence, it would be accepted. Does not believe Americans would make peace without France. Certain reflections on this head follow. Believes the American system is only suited to a war of defence, and that, consequently, they will never take New York, Newport, or Halifax. Shews advantage to be derived from stirring up the Congress to the conquest of Canada by promising to keep the English from assisting it by sea. Probability that the American army will be reduced to 8,000 men next year, unless the plans on Canada make a larger number necessary. The campaign against Canada could only take place next autumn. Sullivan's outburst has been condemned by everyone. Reasons why it would be better there should never be any joint operations between the King's forces and the Americans. Plan of asking the help of two or three ships to ensure the success of the attack on St. Augustine, reserved for Spain, which would demand the cession of that place to her. Advantages to be derived by France, were she to protect American trade. General impatience to see war formally declared. A member of the Congress asserted openly in the assembly that France was not in a state of war with England; an assertion from one of its members very ill-received by the Congress. Petitions from the regiments of the ten States re reduction of officers. Georgia and Carolina have no troops in the army. The Virginian regiments have refused to carry out the order in question. Gives particulars of the loss and damage caused by the hurricane of the 11th of August. The state of Pennsylvania has repealed the law which gave the American commander power to take the carts needed, of his own authority; this right is now reserved to the Executive Council of the State. The Gazette of the 19th instant contains a very guarded account of the expedition against Rhode Island. Some reflections on the weakening of England in Europe through her sending naval forces to America, to counterbalance the Comte d'Estaing's squadron. Foresees the necessity of warning the governors to prepare for an attack. Advantages that might ensue, inasmuch as Spain might capture the convoy bound to Jamaica. Miralles resolved on an expedition to Havana and to Martinique. English squadron returns to Sandy Hook. A large number of ships have entered the bay, many of which have suffered severely. It is surmised that the August packet has arrived with instructions for withdrawing a considerable part of the English troops from America who are probably intended for the Islands. The recall of the English commissioners is confidently expected. Measures taken to ensure the defeat of the expedition against Boston. Has induced the committee charged with settling the plan for combined operations with the King's squadron, to forego the proposed attack on Barbadoes. Has informed the Comte d'Estaing that he is at liberty to act as he thinks best. Has accepted the Congress' offer of a ship of six guns to go to the Islands, not having been able to find one for this purpose. The ship in question will leave shortly for Martinique, with Miralles' despatches and his own. A second ship is being sent from Charles Town to Havana. It is hoped that a ship may soon be sent from Baltimore to St. Eustache, whence the despatches will be sent to Porto Rico. Thinks it would be well to consent to the loan of 3 or 4 millions which Congress wishes to make in Holland; gives reasons for supporting the said loan. The sailors of Philadelphia maintain that Admiral Gambier's force will not prevent the King's squadron from leaving Boston when it wishes to do so.

Gérard to d'Estaing. [Copy.] Congress anxious that the King's squadron should proceed to the West Indies. Assistance which the Congress asks of him (d'Estaing) for an attack on Barbadoes and the Bermudas. Forces which the Congress proposes to employ for this purpose. The intention is to cede to the King the right of conquest over Barbadoes. Has asked the United States for a force of 1000 or 1200 men in support of d'Estaing's own expedition against Barbadoes. Refused by the United States. Shews that the United States could spare the assistance asked of them by d'Estaing. Has urged the United States to provision the King's squadron. Proposed arrangements of United States in this connexion. Has offered to go and see General Washington in order to consult with him concerning future operations. The Congress declines to make any proposal of d'Estaing in regard to his operations.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 30. Gives particulars of the alleged intention of the English to evacuate New York and to transport the troops thence to the Islands. ment of Washington's army. It is feared the American army may be forced to go to New England. The Congress is devoting its attention to the establishment and maintenance of a good understanding between the two nations. The Congress able to supply all the military material we may need. Has offered a ship to convey his despatches to Martinique. Is entirely satisfied with their conduct towards him. Praises M<sup>r</sup> Lee, president of the naval committee, in this respect. Great majority of votes in favour of M<sup>r</sup> Deane; article in the Treaty with France for which he (Deane) is blamed. Praises the abilities and intelligence of M<sup>r</sup> Govers Neuremors, the writer of a letter to M<sup>r</sup> Carlisle. Encloses his own letter to the Comte d'Estaing, re his conferences with the committee of the Congress. Proposals made to him re combined operations for next year against Halifax, Quebec and Newfoundland. Americans would cede Newfoundland to France, even though they had assisted in conquering it. [Sept. 26.] News to the effect that the English are about to attack Charlestown with their whole naval force. Advantages they would derive from the success of this attack. The supposed design of the English against Charlestown has caused great alarm; means taken to resist it. General Washington's camp between Fredericksburg and Banbury. Belief in the attack on Boston seems to have been given up. He is personally of opinion that a great part of the preparations made by the English, is intended for Europe. Indians and Tories are infesting the outlying settlements of New York and Pennsylvania. Means taken for the defence of th Dlawr. p. 236

Joy caused by the news brought by a ship in from St. Eustache which reports having seen the King's flag hoisted on the forts of San Domingo. General Clinton informs the Congress that he is authorized to ratify the convention of Saratoga: his ungoverned expressions and threats, which have only excited contempt. Reasons which justify the refusal to release Burgoyne's army; critical condition of the province of Pennsylvania. Advantages accruing to the administration from a published letter of a leader of the Quakers, and from the condemnation of two of them as guilty of high treason. p. 246

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup> 32. Desolation caused on American coasts by scattered English attacks. English troops continue their ravages in the neighbourhood of Newark. Measures taken for the safety of Charlestown and Port Royal. General Clinton's plan of attack becomes known. Detachments sent by Washington. Gives reasons for continuance of disorder among the parties of the administration. The Congress grants compensation to the maimed and wounded. Explains why foreign officers may be excluded from the recompense granted by the Congress to American officers for a fixed period. Aim sought by English generals in their system of destruction. Suggestions which they are trying to make to the American people; but which cause no anxiety. Effects produced by jealousy and the desire of personal independence. Discussion raised in the Congress on the article of the treaty relating to molasses: is the outcome of intrigue and of personal interest. The president's name is mentioned for a post in Europe; conditions on which M<sup>r</sup>. Deane might possibly be chosen. Has endeavoured, without success to combat M<sup>r</sup> Deane's purpose of settling in France. Charges brought against the two Quakers who have been found guilty. It is thought desirable to give the Quakers a lesson by hanging two criminals of their sect: consternation among them. Members of the Congress and judges who have undertaken the defence of the two Quaker criminals. Reasons which led a member of the Congress to yield to the popular outcry; he is to be compensated. Spirit of Pennsylvanian legislation. Particulars of ravages and massacres committed by English off the coasts of Massachusetts and in other places. Arrival of Admiral Byron at Newport. General Clinton's eagerness to carry out his plan of destruction. The recall of Admiral Howe is a loss to America. The Congress is greatly concerned at the barbarity of the English, and is deliberating on the means of making use of reprisals. The Congress has become aware of its miscalculation as to the departure of the English and the evacuation of New York, and of the impossibility of holding the enemy in check everywhere. [Oct. 17]. Encloses copy of a proclamation issued by the English commissioners; its reception by the public. The one point in this proclamation that gives rise to anxiety; the motive to which it is assigned. Unsuccessful English landing at Great Egg harbour. News from New York re various movements of English troops. Two congressional resolutions, one re oath to be tendered to all office-holders in that body, the other re interdiction of dances and spectacles, published in the Philadelphia newspapers; reflections on the point. Differences of opinion re moral laws between members from the north and members from the south, responsible for delays in respect of important matters. The ascendancy of the Presbyterian leaders accounts for the delay in sending the United States plenipotentiary in France his credentials. Letters from Mess<sup>rs</sup> Arthur Lee and Izard, making various charges against Franklin. Law proposed by a member of the Congress, prohibiting any member to accept lucrative employment while in office, rejected. Advantages expected to be gained from it.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 33. Report of conferences between the Marquis de la Fayette and the committee appointed by the Congress for that purpose. Summary of Franklin's instructions as conveyed to Gérard by Morris. The acquisition and preservation of Newfoundland and the fisheries, depends, for the United States, on the possession of Halifax and Quebec; would grant to the French in possession of Newfoundland all the security and the facilities possible. His (Gérard's) own remarks to Morris on the comments wherewith he accompanied the reading of Franklin's instructions. The desire of the Congress that the English should be forced to evacuate United States territory, would make it appear that they are somewhat hampered in their power to act for themselves. Morris excuses himself by means of a general reference to his country's inability to carry on war with profit for any length of time. Proposed attack on Canada; its motives. Morris communicates particulars concerning it to Gérard. The co-operation of a French force is included in the proposal. Gérard questions Morris, re details of campaign in question; suggests that the Americans might be the only ones to suffer. This he knows to be Washington's opinion. Fears expressed by Morris re Spanish objections to campaign against Canada; presumes that Spain wishes Canada to remain English, in order to keep the United States in check in that direction. Morris shews this policy to be a mistaken one; results which he claims, ensue from it. Gérard's reply: claims to be unaware of Spain's views on the matter. His answer to Morris on the views expressed concerning St. Augustine, Pensacola and Mobile. Suggests that it may be necessary for the United States to give up the navigation of the Mississippi, and St. Augustine and Pensacola in order to reassure Spain, if she is really suspicious. Morris, following the advice of several of his friends, submits to Gérard the necessity of establishing a law of coercendo imperio, which would cut short all these negotiations, and would not be likely to meet with serious objections. States amount to which the debt of the Congress has risen. A loan of 3 millions sterling will, it is thought, be needed in order to carry on operations. Gérard praises Lafayette; whom he has advised to ask for leave only and not to resign, as he wished to do. [Oct. 21.] Encloses document relating to instructions to Franklin, re campaign against Canada. The prior evacuation of New York is, however, still looked for; but is not to be counted on. p. 23.

Vergennes to Gérard. N° 6. The protection and assistance given by the King to America, ought to ensure the indissolubility of the alliance which H.M. has formed with the latter country. The first result of the present war is to have made this eventual union definitive. Any peace proposal which failed to recognize the independence of America would be rejected. His Catholic Majesty, who is still endeavouring to bring about a peace, is well aware of this unalterable determination on the part of France. Uncertain attitude assumed by England in respect of an agreement, in order to gain time. The King of Spain's latest effort at the Court of London to bring it about. His instructions to the Marquis d'Almodovar, which are acceptable to the King of France, who has directly authorized that ambassador to present them in his name. The first article is the recognition of the sovereignty and independence of the United States. Spain is of the same mind. It would be well to let the leading members of the Congress know, confidentially, how matters stand. Should circumstances ever make it necessary to conclude a speedy peace with the Court of London, without being able to await the concurrence of the Congress, the interests of the United States would be as carefully looked after as if their representatives had taken part in the negotiations. Explains how it comes to pass that these representatives are unaware of what is going on in this connexion. The Congress ought, ultimately, to send them the necessary full powers and instructions. France thinks it advisable to leave Canada and even Nova Scotia to England. The latter would be preferable, should it be found well to obtain territory for the United States in that part of America. The Floridas are at Spain's disposal. It is doubtful whether England would admit the Americans to the Newfoundland fisheries; concessions which the Congress might reasonably make, their own coasts being sufficiently rich in fish. Instructions which it would be well that the Congress should give its delegates in regard to the navigation of the Mississippi. States personal opinion of

M. Miralles re Canada and the two Floridas, and explains why France holds the opposite opinion on the matter. Reply to be made to the Congress, should it take a wrong view of France's attitude. Peace must not depend on the reunion of Canada with the possessions of the United States. Danger arising from the want of unity in the Congress, and desire of French Court that there should be complete harmony among its members. He will make known the King's displeasure against any Frenchmen who give cause for complaint in Philadelphia. French Court anxious at d'Estaing's silence; the public newspapers speak of various misfortunes which he has met with.

Vergennes to Gérard. N° 7. Refers to passage in latter's letter which seems to convey that the Congress would think itself at liberty to conclude a separate peace with England. The terms and the spirit of the French treaty are against this opinion. If the Congress will declare that it will listen to no peace proposal which does not include France, it will ensure an avoidance of all surprises. France has set the example in this matter. French court does not think the Congress intends to attack Canada, but rather New England and the neighbouring provinces. Spain is in favour of leaving Canada and Acadia to England. France is endeavouring to assist in restoring the credit of American paper. The French court is awaiting particulars of the failure to conquer Rhode Island; but does not think that d'Estaing is to blame. States attitude of France in relation to M. Miralles. Gérard will be careful to treat as a falsehood anything that may be published in the English papers at variance with France's engagements with the United States, or with the spirit of restraint which Spain has hitherto set on herself. France approves of the congressional resolution re Burgoyne's force; it must remain in America. Re establishment of a free port for American products. It might be well for Congress to set certain definite limits which the United provinces should be unable to exceed; such a step would tend to reassure Spain.

Gérard to Vergennes. No. 46. Reasons which led the President of the Congress to resign two days previously. Mr. Jay, member extraordinary from New York, chosen President in place of Mr. Lawrence; former of French origin. Committee engaged on a form for eliminating the constitutional incompatibility of Mr. Jay's two offices. Deputation sent to Gérard: reasons for it being sent. Account of all that was said by the members, and of Gérard's replies to them. Gérard's proposal to the Congress to make concessions to Spain appears likely to be adopted, on condition that the latter country will supply pecuniary assistance towards payment of their debts. Particulars on this head, in case of conquest. Congress resolves to recall Mr. Arthur Lee, its agent in France. Gérard, on being asked, assured them that France would not attach any importance to Lee's recall. Drayton apologizes to Gérard for a paragraph in the paper of Dec. 9. Samuel Adams also explains his connexions with Temple, and goes into particulars on the whole matter with Gérard. [Dec. 14.] Two members from Maryland assure Gérard of their State's anxiety that the King should believe in their unalterable devotion to independence and to the fortunate alliance between the United States and His Majesty. They express the satisfaction of their State, both at the establishment of a Consulate and at the appointment of M. Daumours as Consul. Details of certain particulars concerning the new President of the Congress; who is only to retain his position as a member of the Congress until the month of March. The real reason of Mr. Jay's appointment (as President of the Congress). The State of Vermont, whose inhabitants are a kind of savages, can put into the field five or six thousand trained and resolute men. The State of New York has tried to subdue the State of Vermont by force; this civil war has with difficulty been suppressed for the time being. Means employed to bring about a friendly settlement of this dispute. An anonymous writer asserts in the Gazette of Dec. 10, that the high cost of the necessaries of life is due to the operations of monopolists. Difficulty of establishing regulations for the press. The new President of the Congress pays Gérard a visit on the very day of his inauguration. The Congress replies to Gérard re premium to be given to vessels capturing hostile ships laden with masts. Encloses letter from the new President of the Congress. Resolution of the Congress fixing a salary suitable to the dignity of the new President. Details of the smallness of the allowances made to members of the Congress; their disastrous consequences. Plan of several States to remedy the disadvantages referred to, and thereby give more stability to the changing and fluctuating composition of the Congress. The President consults with Gérard as to how he should act in regard to Temple; Gérard gives him the same answer that he made to the deputation of the Committee. Violent excitement among the citizens over the Tories' proposals, and outcries of the Whigs. Certain particulars as to the clothing of the American Army. General Washington's wish to retire to his Virginia plantations for a while, causes alarm in the Congress. Addition of a premium granted by the Congress to the one offered for the capture of vessels laden with masts. p. 84.

Dec. 19.

Gérard to Vergennes. No. 47. Encloses cutting from the Gazette of Dec. 15, re certain articles relating to M<sup>r</sup> Deane's case. Gives particulars of a letter re M<sup>r</sup> Lawrence's retirement; opinions divided concerning it. Encloses the thanks tendered to Lawrence by the Congress; also the explanation of his reasons for resigning. Mentions Lawrence's plan of being sent to Europe, either to replace Franklin, or to raise the proposed loan in Holland. The Congress divided into parties over Deane's case; his secret has been made generally known in such a way as possibly to have great influence on what is being considered in the Congress, and on the people themselves. Conference between Gérard and the new President re the matters of chief interest to France and the United States. Gérard suggests to the President the importance of not allowing any misunderstandings to affect the alliance with France. He urges him not to lose sight of the reputation of the Congress in respect of the consistency of their administration, and chiefly, to endeavour to regain the Tories, and restore unity among the citizens. Jay takes Gérard's suggestion like a sensible man, and seems well disposed to protect the interests of France with no less zeal than those of the United States. Gérard refers to the disorganized state of the finances, in the general administration, and, most of all, in trade. The President is giving his attention to both these points. The Congress is occupied in settling confederation, and in fixing the plan of operations and expenditure for next year. General Washington's speedy arrival in Philadelphia gives grounds for hoping that the work connected with all these matters will be hastened. Virginia and Carolina are not pleased at the Florida campaign. Encloses the questions printed in the newspapers by the supernumerary retired officers. Also, d'Estaing's proclamation to the Canadians. [Dec. 22.] Reports his strong & successful plea on behalf of Spain at the dinner to the new President, and in Miralles' presence. Shews how necessary it is that the States should fix their boundaries as to leave her (Spain) in possession of such territory as is useful to her. p. 102.

Vergennes to Gérard. N<sup>o</sup> 8. French ministry ignorant of d'Estaing's whereabouts; disadvantages ensuing therefrom. Do not think the English will evacuate New York, but are rather of opinion that they will stay there as long as possible, in order to make it the centre of their intended operations. Efforts which the Americans should make to guard against the designs of the common enemy instead of yielding to a sense of security as they seem to be doing. Gérard has done well in inducing the Congress to desire the departure of d'Estaing's squadron. Re depreciation of paper money; the King has consented to a plan which must certainly have the effect of increasing its value. There is little hope of a reconciliation with England, through the medium of Spain. The proposal of a many years' truce has been privately communicated to Franklin, who saw no objection to it. The full powers furnished him on leaving Philadelphia are not sufficient to authorize him to negotiate a peace with England. It would be well if the Congress were to send him more formal powers in order to take part with France in the negotiations that may take place at any moment. Gérard must do his utmost to induce the Congress to consent to a many years' truce. Assurance which H.M. is prepared to give the Congress as to the certainty of its observance. France and Spain will maintain the English in the possession of Canada and Nova Scotia. As for Newfoundland, the conquest of that island depends on circumstances. News of Mr. Hartwig, a protestant minister, sought for. p. 115

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 49. Clinton's proposal to Washington re exchange of officers misunderstood and ineffective. Resumes his account of the constitution of Pennsylvania. Convocation of the general assembly instead of that of the convention. Discussions in writing for and against the charge that the partizans of the constitution had violated it by fixing the period of its probation. Report of his (Gérard's) various interviews with the President of the Congress and General Washington. Use to be made of all available resources for an active war, a mere war of defence being insufficient. Need of adopting a more vigorous system; the King does not ask efforts beyond the means of the United States; but, by shewing their resources, they can advance the establishment of their independence. The President points on the other hand, to the wretched state of the finances, and the difficulty of getting recruits. These reasons have, however, no force so long as the King employs all his forces against the common enemy. Several members in favour of making an honest admission to the King of the inability of the American Republic to act vigorously on the offensive: Gérard dissuades the President from the idea of this embarrassing declaration, as well as the members most strongly in favour of it. Such an admission would compromise the Congress after solemnly announcing its readiness to carry on the war by itself. Popular murmurs against the size of the debt, without ability to see the consequences of it. Several States ask for a division of the taxes between the States, a long and delicate operation, which would involve fresh difficulties for the working of a system of government. A zealous government must submit to certain domestic disadvantages for the sake of the general good. The only hope shewn is in the assistance of Spain; this matter is to come up at once, without regard to petty considerations of dignity. Washington seems to approve of Gérard's suggestions. He declares the campaign against Canada to be impracticable without the previous evacuation of New York—which becomes daily more unlikely to happen. Indian attacks more to be feared than English. Congress has not yet told Washington of its resolution re Canadian campaign, but keeps repeating to him that no risk must be run of deceiving its ally. No order as yet for a Florida campaign, though many preparations have been made for it. Praise of Washington. Apparent unwillingness of England to cede territories to the United States which do not form an integral part of the Colonies. The latter must not expect their allies to continue the war to gain them an extension foreign to the system of the Union. This consideration will affect the offers to be made to Spain. Washington asks what compensation the King would claim were he to assist in the conquest of Canada. Gérard has no information on this point, but the compensation would be in conformity with the letter and spirit of the treaty of alliance. The enquiry into the finances seems likely to produce a resolution. A loan to be raised in Europe. Paper money to the amount of 30 to 35 million dollars withdrawn from circulation for a period of six months. The reason assigned for this course is the multiplication of forged paper money, and the advantage to be derived from restoring the credit of paper money, which has of late become depreciated. There seems to be little foundation for these views; the operation is, moreover, likely to arouse popular protest, and several States will dispute the competence of the Congress in this matter. Objections to such a regulation; the holders of the suspended paper money will be the only sufferers. The course of trade will also be affected without compensation to the general welfare. According to the year's accounts, the public debt amounts to 110 million dollars. Encloses translation of a letter communicated to him by M<sup>r</sup> Richard Henry Lee, as evidence of his conduct towards that individual. Pressing attentions of Samuel Adams and Francis Lightfoot Lee, to Mr. Gérard, which do not, however, alter the opinion of the last mentioned that it is Adams only who by his devices keeps the Congress from giving him (Gérard) a positive and satisfactory answer re Lee's expressed views. p. 125

The president of the Congress makes open profession of his devotion and gratitude to the King of France, to which he (Gérard) makes a suitable and satisfactory reply. It has been agreed to submit political matters to him, and to ask him to give his opinion on them. A large number of landed proprietors in the state of Pennsylvania have joined in asking the Congress to increase the taxes, thus shewing their zeal for independence, and their conviction that this is the only remedy for the disordered condition of the finances. The depreciation of the paper money would fall on the people; Americans are convinced that its value can only be kept up by means of taxes. General Clinton has offered to ransom Burgoyne's troops, having failed to obtain their exchange. He will, however, be refused. His difficulty in connexion therewith; he stipulates, inter alia, that, in the case of the mutual assistance, which the King should have the right to require of the United States, H. M. should be free to propose another, and to agree with the Congress in regard to it. A junction of the Spanish forces with the American might conquer Florida. His suggestions re Florida and the Mississippi favourably received; a committee formed to devote itself entirely to this matter. The president of the committee on Foreign Affairs has assured him (Gérard) that the committee would take no action without previously consulting him. Differences of opinion among members of this committee, the majority of whom, however, lean towards his (Gérard's) suggestion. Has made it plain to the United States that they have no claims to the possessions of the King of England, or in respect of the navigation of the Mississippi. The King will not prolong the war for a day simply in order to obtain for the United States their former possessions. Creation of two new committees to consult with Gérard in connexion therewith. Debates of members on the point. Specious arguments of a member of the committee, to which Gérard makes an emphatic reply, by drawing the attention of that body to the assistance which the King owes to his allies. Misapprehension of Americans in respect of their treaty with the King, whom they deemed to be thereby exclusively bound to their cause, while leaving them to the quiet enjoyment of their independence. Levy of troops ordered by the Congress, which appears to adopt, unanimously, all Gérard's conclusions concerning the foregoing matters under discussion. p. 21.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 62. The president of the Congress expresses his joy at the immediate prospect of peace negotiations, Conference between Gérard and the committee of the Congress re Spanish matters; communicates the decision of that court to them in confidence. It appears to be agreed to cede the Floridas to that power, without any explanation as to the Mississippi; importance of the speedy deliberations of the Congress on this point. In view of the impossibility of vigorous action, it would be well to make peace as soon as may be. All officials ordered to report immediately on all matters relating to foreign affairs, in order to avoid the usual prolongation of debates. Success of means employed by the Congress to sustain its own credit and the public confidence: good effect on the price of flour and on paper money. Private opinion that peace will be made without the States. In default of subsidies from the King of France, who could not even authorize a loan, the Americans, satisfied with their independence, would be in favour of peace, and would forego all ambitious designs. Congress enquires seriously into Spanish matters, urged thereto by Gérard, in consequence of certain previous vague hints given by M. de Miralles. Grounds for hoping that the Americans will gladly yield to the demands of Spain. The chief difficulty would be in connexion with the limits of American territory. The same applies to claims in respect of Newfoundland fisheries; there is a general desire that it may fall to France. There is a universal sentiment in favour of peace, and of an alliance with Spain. Rise of suspended paper by 25 per cent. Price of gold fallen from 10 to 6 and 7 per cent. Perfect unity among members of the Congress. Everything points to the conclusion of peace.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 63. Conference of Gérard with the Committee of Congress on the affairs of the alliance. The address of Gérard. He began by impressing on the committee the determination of the King to fulfil punctiliously his whole duty towards the alliance. The King would agree to no peace, which did not provide as a preliminary for the independence of the United States. Gérard contrasted the attitude of Great Britain on this subject with the favourable disposition of Spain in seeking to bring about fresh mediation. Told the committee that all considerations pointed to the desirability of peace as soon as the primary object of the war had been attained. The King had no ambition for conquests, but he would not refuse the advantages which the first achievements of his arms might procure. Gérard dwelt upon insufficiency of financial resources and difficulty of obtaining recruits; and the impossibility of the King giving pecuniary aid. He insisted upon this point as otherwise Congress might be reluctant to conclude peace. Congress should have a plan of war and a plan of peace, both equally decisive and well defined. As matters stood the pretensions of the United States should be confined to the integral parts of their territory. Conquest of Canada can only be the last fruits of a successful war. As he had hinted as to the necessity of meeting the views of Spain, Gérard was asked for an explanation. He replied he had no authority to speak on this point, but his personal opinion was, that Spain would confine her attention to securing her frontiers and to preventing trouble with her neighbours. This object would be attained by the possession of Pensacola and the exclusive right of navigation on the Mississippi. On this point there were differences in the committee, several insisting with warmth on preserving the navigation of the Mississippi for the United States. In conclusion it was decided unanimously that efforts be made to satisfy Spain.

Vergennes to Gérard. N° 9. Approves of the means taken by him to forewarn the Congress against the erroneous views of Richard Lee. The honour and interest of the United States prescribe the duty of fidelity to the alliance with France, which is the essential basis of their political existence. The King makes it a matter of conscience to fulfil the obligations which he shares with the United States. He has rejected the overtures made to him by England through the medium of Spain, and will accept none that are not based on the independence of America. A fresh scheme of conciliation, concerning which Spain has consulted France, and to which the King has agreed, since it would actually ensure the independence of America. Confidential communication which it would be well for him to make to the most patriotic and discreet members of the Congress in order to protect that body against the possible misuse, by England, of the overtures made to her by Spain in this connexion. Grounds which lead France to consider the attack on Canada as impracticable. The opinion of Spain on this point, which France is bound to respect, is not favourable to it. Gérard will confine himself to urging the Americans to concentrate all their efforts in doing as much harm as possible to the common enemy. Commends Gérard for having induced the Congress to explain itself in regard to the Floridas. If they offer them to Spain with Pensacola and Mobile, he (Vergennes) will set that court's mind at rest as to the future views of the United States. He (Gérard) will continue to maintain the Congress in its inclinations not to insist on the right of navigation on the Mississippi. In order to protect American trade, France will grant the ships engaged in it the same assistance as to her own. The present high cost of French goods in America can only be temporary. Gérard will consult with M. de Sartine as to the facilities to be given to American captains for recruiting their crews from among English prisoners. No news of the Comte d'Estaing. Quite impossible to continue the subsidies. It seems probable the interests for the payment of which the Congress has drawn on Franklin will be paid, at least in part. Association of bankers pledged to a limited advance. The Congress ought not to have published the treaty of alliance with France, without first consulting the latter country. Gérard might convey a gentle hint to the principal members of the Congress, in this sense. The publication of the treaty will, however, do good. p. 57.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 66. Gérard has been sounding public opinion. There is a general desire for peace. Almost without exception Congress believes peace to be necessary, and the wishes of the people are even more explicit. Their one object is the restoration of quiet, the discontinuance of taxes and the re-establishment of commerce. Congress on the other hand while admitting the difficulties of the situation, are actuated by a desire to gain such advantages from the circumstances as will increase their power and influence. A loan of at least £2,000,000 and a good harvest are necessary for an aggressive campaign, but Congress counts on aid from France and Spain to bring England to her knees. Hence the ambitions of the Americans are unlimited. There are, also, demands on the part of the separate states. Hence from the mere excess of the claims it is probable that the Congress, after some explosions of patriotic zeal, will finally content itself with peace on the simple condition of independence. If Congress prove obstinate, the people will most likely bring them to sober views. Among the various conditions of peace, besides their independence, the Americans contemplated the cession of Nova Scotia to them and the preservation of the fisheries on the coasts of that peninsula. New England insistent on this. Gérard deprecated this idea, particularly as Great Britain was mistress of one entire state and two important places in the centre of the States. The French King would be astonished at those pretentions, particularly as the States could not claim Nova Scotia even by right of conquest; if the States were successful, the Allies must in right and honour make demands; and that the magnitude would drive Great Britain to continue the war. He suggested that the States claim only the fisheries on the Nova Scotia coast, alleging the specious plea of ancient possession, but they should not make this an ultimatum. After discussion the States came to the conclusion to leave all such propositions to the decision of France. As to the Newfoundland fisheries, Gérard's informants stated that the Americans had no pretentions to the fisheries either on the Newfoundland coasts or on the Banks; and that their desire was that France should obtain half of the fisheries, partly to preserve the alliance and partly in the interests of commerce. As to Spain the disposition of the Americans was to leave the key to the Mississippi entirely with Spain; to disclaim any rights of navigation on any parts of that river watering Spanish territory; to allow Spain to have Pensacola and the two Floridas. The Americans would desire merely to have an entrepôt for their Mediterranean trade. In consideration of these sacrifices, Spain should grant a pecuniary subsidy to the United States. These views appear to prevail for the moment, but they will doubtless be subject to modifications. Washington informed Gérard that a convoy with 2500 men left New York a week before; he was assured they were for Georgia. From appearances it would seem that Great Britain was about to evacuate Rhode Island, and make New York, Charlestown and Halifax its sole ports in America.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 67. The committees directed to prepare the instructions to the plenipotentiaries from the United States to Spain have commenced their work. An amicable beginning was interrupted by lively opposition. The objects in dispute were (1) the acquisition of Nova Scotia, (2) the manner in which the instructions to the peace plenipotentiaries were to be carried out. The Eastern party raised the questions, and its views were strongly opposed. Some of those in opposition to the demands of the Eastern party, had recourse to Gérard for arguments. He suggested to them, inter alia, that supposing independence to be granted, the United States should not make a claim to territory, to which they had no right; that France in procuring for the United States their independence, had undertaken no engagement to assist them to make conquests; that as the demands meant continuation of war, the relations of the United States with the Allies would be essentially changed by that fact, and that the Allies would undoubtedly look for indemnities and compensations from the United States; that by insisting on this course the United States would lose character and their reputation would be tarnished by ambition and greed. Gérard assured that the majority of the delegates would favour a peace, the terms of which should be settled by France. On the question of boundaries, it is proposed to take the treaty of Paris and the proclamation of the King of England of the 8th Oct., 1763, which fixed the limits of the English colonies. As regards Spain it is proposed to make as the condition of peace, the cession of the two Floridas to that power. Respecting the Newfoundland fisheries, Gérard was assured of the desire of the United States that France alone should share with England these fisheries. Gérard contrasts the course pursued by the United States during these negotiations with that held by Great Britain, much to the disadvantage of the latter. p. 85.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 68. General predisposition in favour of peace, and on conditions to be determined by the King of France. Confederation regarded as very uncertain by several members of the Congress. They foresee a difficulty from the increased debt as a necessary consequence of the union, and fear a dissolution, when the danger of war is removed. Several years war would, in their opinion, put an end to personal views in men's minds in dealing with public affairs. While admitting the need of peace, the gist of their opinions is that the States have not the means to make war, and are incapable of making a good use of peace. Gérard gives them no hope of obtaining war subsidies from the King of France. Adoption of the principle of only insisting, in respect of the boundaries of the United States, on the cession of the territory held by them prior to the Revolution. They will probably forego their claim to Canada and Nova Scotia. Why the boundary from Lake Ontario to the Mississippi will be the most difficult to settle. Reasons for desiring to include the navigation of Lake Champlain in the ultimatum. Will, as a last resort, hold by the Treaty of Paris, and the King of England's proclamation of October, 1763, while rejecting the Canada Bill, which was never adopted by the United States, but was, on the contrary, one of the grievances which led them to take up arms. Explains why the arrangement of a truce would be hurtful to the common cause of France and the States. [March 6.] The opposition party is bringing its efforts to bear on a specious object, in order to make the peace project impossible: explains what the object is. Crafty motion made by Samuel Adams; rejected by a very large majority. His motives; to which Gérard adds others. Mr Arthur Lee reports to the Congress his conversation with the Comte de Vergennes as to a proposed journey to Spain; he complains of the lack of confidence shewn him by that minister; the motives by which he accounts for it. A suggestion made to Gérard by one of the leading members of the Congress, and declined by him. He dwells strongly on the disadvantages of a truce. A fresh storm raised against Franklin. p. 96.

March 8.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 69. Speaks of the praiseworthy secrecy with which the Congress is dealing with immediate matters. The news of the memorandum presented by the Spanish ambassador to the British ministry has produced good results in America. Debates in the Congress as to navigation of the Mississippi and other boundaries. Claims will be confined to that which may belong to the 13 United States without reference to conquests. Separation between America and England completed, the allies will have no cause to fear the latter power. Assertion of a member of the Congress that the aim of the opposition leaders is to combine an alliance with a peace with England. Mr. John Adams writes to the Congress that the King of France will not assist the States in any way. The Mess<sup>rs</sup> Lee are supposed to have received notice of the speedy arrival of the English Commission. Proposed motion on this subject, and the results expected from it. Another motion proposed to ensure half pay to the officers of the army for life, if they finish the war. Measure considered useful. The Congress protests that its conduct has always been in conformity with the stipulations of the alliance.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 71. Principle discussed of treating with France, and of shewing her every confidence. Mr Samuel Adams makes plain the attitude of the opposition on this point. The majority firm in respect of maintaining the French connexion and independence. Proposed determination of the instructions to be given to the plenipotentiary. Fresh news of the speedy arrival of the English commissioners; it is thought advisable to be in a position to tell them that the points to be negotiated have been decided on, and that, having been settled in France, it is there that the commissioners must make their proposals. Plan of presenting a petition to Congress, in order to hasten operations. Should the English commissioners arrive before the conclusion of the said operations Gérard will endeavour to secure a refusal to admit them. Shews the importance of their being excluded. The alliance does not weaken the prejudices of the American people. Many persons favour an alliance with England, if she will recognize their independence. Explains difficulty in which he would be placed, were the English commissioners to begin by recognizing independence. It would not then be easy to oppose their admission; all that could be done would be to receive their proposals, and refer them to the Congress in Europe. Shews that this is what England wishes to avoid. Motion as to measures to be taken for increasing the army, and putting it in a condition to act. Proposal made to Congress to treat with England as to Mississippi navigation article, on the ground that the States have shared this navigation with her since the treaty of Paris. Has protested strongly against the plan. England cannot grant the United States that which she has no right to dispose of. Spain is under no obligation in respect of the Congress, the two powers not being bound by express conventions. Spain's friendship needed by America; the King would side with the former. Several members of Congress determined not to vote for any peace condition except such as the King's minister shall consider practicable. Proposal to recall all commissioners now abroad. Ill-success of the attempt to define the boundary between the State of Massachusetts and Nova Scotia.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 76. At the time of his last report, the committee were on the point of taking a vote when the opposition again intervened. The point of attack was the Nova Scotia fisheries. Samuel Adams in speaking on the antagonism between the Eastern and Southern states, let drop the words that it was becoming clearer every day that these two empires must eventually separate. On the question of rights of New England in those fisheries, the New Englanders allege that the treaties of peace between France and England gave them a title. On referring to the treaties it is found that their benefits are confined to British subjects, which the Americans were, when the treaties were made. Gérard, consulted, asks from whom the opposition would propose to demand a share in the fishing of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. The members replied, from France and England. Gérard deals vigorously with this proposition, asking if it is from America's ally that the United States would snatch away its possessions. He reminded them that the treaty of alliance provided that if it fell to the allies to share conquest among themselves France was to have Newfoundland: France anxious to help America, but its own interests must not be attacked. Inconsistency of abandoning the principle of liberty to demand a share in a distribution considered unjust. Eagerness of Americans to invade fisheries everywhere, notwithstanding their possession of the most abundant fisheries on their own shores. The views he held prevailed, but vote deferred till following week. All the points in the instructions to plenipotentiaries settled, except the fisheries, and it appears this will be concluded to satisfaction of France. Growing embarrassment of public affairs hampers work of Congress. Paper money discredited. Knows of case where $48 was paid for guinea. Mr. Holker has suspended his drafts. Secret drafts drawn in England at 12 and 15 per cent. Famine in many places. Acrimonious discussions going on, and doubts raised as to authority of Congress. The terms of Samuel Adams and Mr. Lee expire in May. Some chance of their not being returned. Their absence would tend to greater union and vigour in Congress. Gérard gives his reasons for the course he has pursued towards the delegates. Many opulent and distinguished citizens asked Gérard whether overtures of France to Congress were limited to making peace, conditional upon the two points— independence and the maintenance of the alliance. On being assured that such was the case they declared themselves as well as all Pennsylvania for the party supporting that policy, and offered to lead a movement to drive from their seats all delegates opposed to that policy. Gérard thanked them, but advised the employment of peaceful methods to attain the ends desired. Pennsylvania to determine the future of its officers independently of Congress, an arrangement which will perhaps be followed by other states. Uneasiness regarding the last expedition of General Clinton. Washington suspects its purpose may be the burning of Philadelphia. The terror excited is salutary and will lead to measures for the defence of Delaware.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 77. Situation but little changed. His friends in majority, but attendance of members fluctuates so much as to render a vote hazardous. In favourable moment the Spanish business was settled, the only opponent being Mr. Lee. Chief difficulty now is the recall of commissioners employed in Europe. Opposition fear that persons chosen may not be favourable to their views. Anxiety as to the absence of news from their commissioners in France. Their silence attributed to lack of confidence in them on the part of the King. The friends of the alliance will limit the discussion of the fisheries question to the Nova Scotia fisheries, and will exclude from consideration those of Newfoundland. The Gazette of 17th contains ostensible conditions of treaty of reconciliation. General Arnold is to be tried by council of war. New issue of paper money enhances greatly the value of specie. Expenses of coming campaign will exceed 80 million dollars. Opinion as to effect of depreciation of paper money divided in Congress. The Government of Carolina suggests that the French in Charlestown form themselves into a battalion for the defence of the town. Idea approved by Gérard, who hopes this action may inspire Americans with respect for and confidence in the French. Le Sr. de Britigny proposed as Colonel for battalion. Great satisfaction in United States with the declaration of the Duc de la Vauguyon respecting freedom of commerce. Recruiting goes forward with fair success, but the States complain of being hampered by Congress. Some of them have offered to double or triple their contingents in granting an increase of $30 a year in the pay of soldiers. Inaction of Washington's army. Gérard to Vergennes. N° 78. Reports the same spirit, the same animosity, the same tardiness in the proceedings of the Congress. Peace party thought recall of commissioners a good opportunity. Detriment to interests of the States from the animosities that have arisen between the old and new commissioners. Franklin's recall negatived; matter to be debated. Bitterness and indecency of debates re Arthur Lee. Opposition agrees that he ought not to have been accredited to France, but holds that he might be to Spain. Anyone, however, unworthy of the King's confidence could not gain that of His Catholic Majesty. The States were divided 4 against 4 by the manœuvres of those responsible. The validity of this decision is contested by the patriots, who wish to resume the question and are adopting means to uphold it with which Gérard has supplied them; gives details. Publication of the list of personal votes; the majority in favour of the good cause. The King of Spain should, in the interests of the alliance, refuse to accept this decision. Mr Lee insinuates that, on account of the family compact, the French King's affection would always lean exclusively towards Spain. The opposition is in close correspondence with John Temple at Boston, where he has made some converts. He will proceed to France, to arrange means with Mr Lee for bringing about the failure of his real instructions, should they be contrary to their views. Urges his arrest on his arrival in France. The order he received from the Congress to quit Philadelphia might serve as an excuse for doing so. What should be thought of the eagerness of the opposition to warn the people against France, as shewn by the enclosed documents. Should the general Congress wish to do anything against the alliance, the American army would be inclined to revolt. The principal officers are confident of the favourable disposition of the people of their States. General Sullivan has acted in such a manner as to leave no doubt as to his way of thinking. The American army now consists of 8 or 9 thousand men. Those on six months' furlough are returning and will raise it to 14 thousand men during the course of the month. They are to come out of winter quarters on May 16, for an offensive campaign against the Indians towards Lake Ontario and a defensive against the English of New York. Sullivan is to command this expedition. Gérard's many conversations with Washington make it possible to give him the highest and most flattering commendation.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 81. Re opinion that it would be better to substitute a truce for a formal and definite treaty. Several well-intentioned members of the Congress, when sounded on this point on an occasion made use of by Gérard assured him that the American people were greatly averse to such a plan, and that the Congress would not dare to adopt it. Such a proposal coming from France, would give rise to endless suspicion and distrust, which would recoil on the Congress, and endanger its very existence. Several States which desire peace and have nothing to gain by a continuance of the war, would oppose any plan which held out a possibility of its renewal at any period, however remote. The indefinite period of a peace would be too uncertain for Americans. At its conclusion, France and Spain, unable and unwilling to protect America, would leave her to the mercy of England. Gérard's simple remark to the members as to this discussion. They maintain that the outcome would render the truce disastrous to America, since it would destroy the basis on which it is hoped to found a firm government. The disbanding of the troops forms part of the purpose of all the States; danger of such a course during a limited truce, and one looked upon as precarious. The plan offers no advantages to the States, either in respect of administration, of population, of agriculture, or of the arrangement of the finances, etc. Gérard, finding it impossible to allay these apprehensions, drops the whole question as of no importance. He leads his conversation with Washington on to this subject, to whom the idea seemed entirely novel: is struck to find him in complete agreement with the members of the Congress concerning it. His unqualified objections to it. Explains plan he intends to follow in order to carry out the minister's instructions. Takes as his premiss the fact that the Congress has not taken into consideration the possibility of an armistice being proposed. Success of the first move made in this direction eagerly seized upon by three members. p. 28.

[May 8]. The fight over Mr Lee transferred from the general Congress to the public papers. Fears lest the indiscretion of the two parties should endanger the secret of the French negotiations. Plan for guarding against such a danger. Encloses cutting from a Boston newspaper insisting on the conquest of the whole of North America. p. 55.

ted or rejected has been put forward by those in favour of peace, according to their promise. Sittings in connexion therewith taken up with recriminations. Memorandum presented by Gérard to the Congress in order to point out the course it should pursue [Enclosed with this despatch.] Sensation caused by it, without offending any one; those opposing it condemn all delay, and vote in favour of an explanation of its motives; which are merely the common-places of the constitution of the Assembly. The opposition establish the fact that the best answer to the memorandum is to complete the work in hand. General expression of trust in, and gratitude towards the King of France. All this has resulted in taking the contents of the memorandum into special consideration. In replying to the King's letter of notification, strong emphasis will be given to the devotion felt for His Majesty and the gratitude of the United States towards his person. The same expressions will be repeated in another letter, thanking him for having seen to the payment of the interest on their loan, and soliciting the supplies indispensably necessary for a continuation of the war. A strong impression has been made by the passage in the memorandum which refers to the King's willingness to lend the States all the assistance possible; an impression confirmed by the subsequent announcement of d'Estaing's coming. States that he has little hope of bringing about the change which his endeavours have accomplished, and which he supported by means of private conversations, his chief aim having been to allay the prevailing bitterness. Reports the true and firm, but moderate language which he used to them; the reflection which struck them most forcibly. Dangers to the States in inclining towards war. They can only justify themselves to the world by following the prudent course marked out for them by the French proposals. Mr Arthur Lee will not go to Spain. The friends of France have been urged to moderation, thus making it easy for the opposition to return without hurting their self-esteem. Measures to be taken to prevent the compromising of the French negotiations. The Massachusetts members discuss the fisheries article with Gérard, who begs them not to advance any claim which might compromise France's interests in respect of Newfoundland; they adopt the considerations and expedients suggested to them Gérard to Vergennes. N° 85. Satisfactory impression produced in Congress by the reading of memorandum of Gérard's respecting d'Estaing expedition. Mr. Penn of South Carolina gave utterance to very warm expressions of confidence and gratitude towards the King. Resolution adopted by Congress assuring him of their gratitude, and fidelity to the principles laid down by Alliance. Washington was given full power to direct the operations of the campaign in co-operation with Gérard and d'Estaing. Fishery question up again. The majority of members incline to Gérard's views. Assurances received by Gérard from the merchants in the East that peace would not be allowed to depend on the preservation of the fisheries. Quakers solicit Gérard's good will. He advised them to become citizens of the republic. Their number and wealth make them important. Inhabitants of Bermuda desire to join Americans, committee appointed to confer with them, along with Gérard.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 87. Notwithstanding the harmony in Congress on the matter mentioned in his last despatch, the opposition have made notable gains. Owing to accidental circumstances the majority of the peace party has been so reduced that they can only count on 10 votes, against 5 held by the opposition. It is therefore necessary to temporize. The Opposition are skilfully misrepresenting the attitude of France, and are succeeding in misleading Congress. They no longer desire to encroach on French rights in the fisheries, but are limiting their demands to the fisheries reserved or not reserved to England in American waters from Nova Scotia to Hudson's Bay and Davis strait. These claims alarm the Peace party, who see in them the continuation of the war. The Peace party declare they will take no part in the war. In spite of these conflicts, Congress as a whole is with the Peace party. Gérard of opinion that it is only by written memoranda that he will be able to act upon Congress. Among reasons given for this course, is that the propositions of the Opposition party would deprive France of the almost sole advantage secured to her by the treaty of Alliance, that of seizing Newfoundland or of at least increasing her share therein. Gérard has induced a friendly delegate to propose, that, in case of war, it would be agreed to divide these fisheries between France, United States and Spain. In his memoranda he has confined himself to generalities, setting forth the principles of the Alliance, and defining the terms of the treaty. He encloses a copy of a memorandum, and of a résumé thereof in English (see N° 89). Draws attention to a passage towards the end of it, in which he says that his object is to let all America know the course pursued by the King. This is the strongest check on the war party, as the country is all for peace. He has authorized some deputies to let it be known that negotiations for peace are on foot. Active newspaper controversy going on, the Opposition party arguing for their views on the fisheries and for the total expulsion of the English from America. These extravagant schemes are put forward simply as a snare for France, to induce her to refuse co-operation and thus authorize a step of some sort towards the English. Impossible to say where such a step might lead to, as these men of the Opposition are perfectly unscrupulous. In concluding, Gérard believes that the most effective step for France to take would be to take advantage of the delays of Congress and conclude a treaty of truce with England stipulating for independence in accordance with the terms of the Alliance, and have the treaty reach America in the midst of the debate. This direct appeal to the American public would most probably gain the day for peace. Congress is occupied with the settlement of its finances, to convince France of its good faith in this regard. Its plans. Public debt now reaches $120,000,000. Paper money being refused by country people. Army suffering from the disorders in the currency. High prices augmented by monopolies. List of ships put to sea to oppose the English. There are some vessels and several frigates on the stocks, but work has been suspended on account of lack of materials and workmen. p. 96.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 91. Unanimous resolution of Congress to call upon the States to provide taxes to the amount of $45,000,000 in addition to the sum of $15,000,000 imposed in January previous. These two sums are intended to redeem an equal amount of paper money. General determination of people to re-establish the public credit. Well considered arrangements, which include a European loan. France expected to assist. Gérard's memorandum on fisheries well received and has had good effect. Steps taken by leaders in Congress to warn landed proprietors and farmers against ambitions of merchants in the towns, who alone would profit from the extension of the fisheries. Desire for peace prevailing in Congress. Opposition hurting their cause by the delays they occasion. Severities of English in Virginia arouse general hatred. Gratitude and good will of United States towards France. Recall of Mr. Lee.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 95. Development of the plans of the Opposition party. They will insist upon an assurance of quiet enjoyment of the fisheries. They, however, restrict their claims to fishing on the high seas and at suitable distance from the shore to prevent smuggling. They demand that France and Spain shall engage to assist them by force of arms if necessary, in case England should undertake to prevent the enjoyment of these rights. These demands affect the existence of four states. Although Connecticut does not share the views of the other three states, she will not withdraw her support from them. Impossibility of the Peace party coming to a decision against the scheme, owing to terms of Articles of Confederation. Complications arising from the precarious state of the confederation. Danger of an open breach among the States at the existing juncture. The Opposition maintain that in making the future conduct of the States depend upon the decision of France, they will have satisfied all their obligations to that Crown. The alternatives seem to be either an open quarrel among the States, or permission to the Opposition States to address themselves to England, which they would probably do. The only way out of difficulty is in hands of France by means of the declaration suggested respecting the fisheries. The position of the question being changed, the dignity and rights of the King would not compel him to reject this expedient. Gérard has not discouraged these hopes. He points out that instructions to plenipotentiaries are not so limited as to exclude all expedients or modifications; that the United States are not in a position to make demands on Spain, as any engagement would affect the impartiality necessary for mediation. The outlook is not clear as the obstinacy and astuteness of the Opposition turn everything to their advantage. The fall of Charlestown expected momentarily. Ravages and murders of English in Virginia and New Jersey. Acts of violence of Vermonters against inhabitants of State of New York. Congress resolved to repress those with heavy hand. The purpose of the truce explained to Congress, which resolves to accept in an indefinite way, on condition that stipulation is made for the evacuation of United States territory. This resolution furnishes sufficient foundation for the expedients demanded by the circumstances. Gérard cannot but think that a treaty or truce concluded on the principles of the Alliance and presented to the United States would change the posture of affairs. On the other hand he thinks that if the King would bring himself to make the declaration regarding the fisheries desired by the States, it would smooth out matters and furnish new titles to the gratitude of the United States. p. 147.

June 5.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 96. Gérard present at a conference with the Delawares. There were also present the president of Congress, the president of the State and the superintendent of Indian affairs. The grievances of these Indians forcibly and skillfully stated. Vague solutions offered by the presidents in regard to the most important points. The Delaware chief puts little trust in the reality of the language used by them, They rely on the advice and friendship of the King of France, whom they call their father; the King of Spain their second father, whereas they only call the United States their brothers. Gérard's most friendly answer to them. Their applause of it, and satisfaction of the presidents. Difficulties which the Congress will encounter in the plan adopted in regard to the Indians, namely, of not being satisfied with their neutrality. The Congress counts on the effect of Gérard's speech on the other nations, to whom the Delawares will convey it. These latter, however, insist on the fixing of a conference, to which they would bring the nations in question, and at which a French officer should be present, to testify, openly, to the union established between the King of France and the United States. Gérard promises the Congress to name such an officer, at their first request to do so. Reports waste of several sittings of the Congress, intended for the decision of their ultimatum. There is a suspicion that the opposition wishes, at all costs, to await the arrival of reinforcements from England, in the hope of powers given to some plenipotentiary to open a negotiation. They believe that it would fail if it were direct and isolated. Deep impression made by a letter by Americanus, of which Gérard encloses extract. The Congress much occupied with the loan to be raised in Europe. No vote for the re-election of the Mess<sup>rs</sup> Lee as members of the Congress. M<sup>r</sup> Schmid publicly thanked for his conduct. The Virginian and Maryland leaders insist on a more vigorous use of reprisals, on account of the cruelties perpetrated against several Frenchmen. Due attention must be paid to an allied people who are risking life and fortune on behalf of America. Difficulty of finding opportunities of sending to France. Two ships bound for Nantes taken by the English. p. 155.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 98. Opposition submitted its project regarding fisheries to Congress, that is to say, whether it should demand the cession of them from England. Proposition negatived. Many of Opposition against project; and in despair that question had been stirred up; would have desired Congress to throw themselves on good will of France as regards all accessory conditions of treaty. Majority in Congress held this view, but things had got to a point where it seemed necessary to give some satisfaction to New England. Connecticut withdrew its support from New England on this occasion. There is general desire to show deference and gratitude to the King. Situation easier owing to estrangement of Mr. Lee and Samuel Adams, chiefs of the Opposition. Under pressure of public criticism they are now urging peace and blaming their opponents for delays. The delegates from Virginia, New York, Maryland, New Jersey and Connecticut and other States have thanked Gérard for his assistance. He is turning this good will to account, in striving to bring about common action among the well-intentioned deputies. Until then, there was little cooperation among men of common aims and views. Opposition impute to France desire for war. General disbelief in this. Certain delegates instructed to prepare a letter to the King, showed draft to Gérard, who approved, but suggested that they express explicitly the resolution of Congress to come to no peace with England, until there was at the same time peace established between that power and France. As to the truce, some delegates consider that Article 1 of the treaty of Alliance did not authorize Congress to insist on the nature of the act which would terminate the war. This stipulation may serve as a base for the measures to be taken by the King in this regard. Congress has begun to publish its Journals. Salutary effects. Lengthened observations on internal political arrangements in United States. Congress asked Gérard to join with it in soliciting from Mr. de Boville powder, lead and arms, if these can be spared from the arsenals of the King. As they were much required Gérard consented. General lack of provisions and tripled prices. Washington's army contains only 7,000 men, to which are added 3,000 militia. It is supposed that the English have 8,000 men, and 120 flat boats. The New Jersey delegates say that there is everything to fear, but their people will hold steadfastly to independence and the French alliance. They say their people and those of Virginia view with satisfaction the barbarities of the British as tending to augment the alienation of the Americans. The sustained activity of Congress tends to counteract the evils of its work and internal administration. All parts of administrative system undergoing transformation. Public clamour against Congress for its inaction respecting the French negotiations and paper money. p. 161

Philadelphia,

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 99. The relative strength of the parties in Congress is affected by the most trifling and temporary circumstances. Opposition strength rests in casual combinations. The Peace party has the greater power. Delegates exhort Gérard to exercise patience and all will terminate satisfactorily. Peace party endeavouring to give some satisfaction to Eastern delegates. Resolution of Congress not to give up or weaken common right of fishing by any treaty. Two propositions before Congress. (1) To try to obtain a guarantee from the King against all violent interference with the peaceful enjoyment of the fisheries and (2) to propose to the English a regulation for the conduct of the fishermen of the respective countries, without compromising rights. This overture to the English to be made only in case England should demand guarantees from the United States for the possessions retained by England in America. The second proposition favoured by Gérard. Both involve an appeal to the King, but the second tends to the making of a treaty of commerce. The advantage to France in the second proposition is that it offers the alternative of the quiet enjoyment of the fisheries, or no treaty of commerce between the United States and England. Letters from delegates denounce those who advocate other terms of peace than those fixed by the Alliance. Bitter feeling against England. Virginia bent on regaining her predominance, and on holding to the Alliance. Congress disquieted by Virginia's activity. Several other States share Virginia's views. An object towards which the King might work and which his disinterestedness promised success was the union of the several States. Gérard relates of an interesting conference between Virginia and Maryland representatives at which he was present. Both agreed to leave the settlement of their dispute to the King. As to d'Estaing, the total defeat of the English before Charlestown regarded as certain. On the other hand the English position on the Hudson very menacing. Clinton has fortified a tongue of land near Fishkill. From this position, he holds both banks of the river, interrupts the movements of supplies, and divides the American army in two. He is said to have 10,000 men and to expect large reinforcements. While waiting he is constructing a large fort. He appears to have abandoned the idea of an attack on West Point. Though reinforced Washington's army does not exceed 9,000 men. Shortage of provisions and ammunition. The militia cannot be held long enough together as harvest is commencing. Tories on the North river very active and bold. Americans determine to keep their army together, not to attack Stonifort, to confine their activity to annoying the enemy, and to wait for a chance. At Rhode Island, the British have 5,000 men, while Americans have no more than 2,500 there to oppose the British. The success of the enlistments by the States doubtful. This information is trustworthy as it has been furnished to the War Council by Washington. His army is encamped at Smithroes. Elation of Americans at deliverance of Charlestown. The source of the many voluntary errors which have placed the Americans in such an embarrassing position is the hope of augmenting the loans by lulling the people into a perfect security. The products of this policy is $15,000,000. Congress is occupied with a general scheme of finance. A delegate communicated to Gérard a plan to redeem the paper money by taxes. In meantime the presses are busy turning out more and more paper money. Expenses going on at rate of from $18,000,000 to $20,000,000 each month. Astonishing progression in the expenses of the war from year to year. In spite of these facts, many people believe that a loan of a million sterling would put them on their feet, and that the taxes would enable them to continue the war. Mr. Temple has embarked at Boston for Amsterdam. If he lands in France he should be arrested. If he lands in England his conduct will unmask all those involved in his intrigues. Gérard is in ill health and will go home as soon as a frigate can be obtained. In the letter sent by Congress to the King, the request of Congress was limited to arms and ammunition. The value of immediate necessities 400,000 or 500,000 livres. Congress cannot contract with private individuals for these things. Its only resource is the King's goodwill. It is the King's interest to supply to Americans the means of maintaining their resistance. Congress desires portraits of King and Queen to place in the Assembly hall.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 100. Congress has directed a résumé to be laid before it of its resolutions respecting instructions for its minister. Hopes by this act to upset the plans (of the Opposition). Gérard has doubts whether this will succeed as the others are very adroit and persevering. Fresh proofs that there is no desire on the part of leaders to go to the point of war to assure the fisheries, and the fear is to alienate the friendship of the King by extravagant demands. It is not certain however that the deputies will be instructed in this sense. The deputies have not changed their tone but insist peremptorily on securities of some sort. The step taken by Virginia reported in letter of even date has not shaken their determination. They see in it the threat of separation, but it does not disturb them. It is doubtful whether they are acting with approbation of their constituents. Independence of delegates towards the State they represent one of great vices of American Government. The States lose no time in paying their share of the tax of $60,000,000, which appears to be entirely absorbed by current needs. Congress unable to cease issue of paper money. Gérard consulted as to the terms of the truce. In advising, he leans completely on the Truce of 1609. They have always rejected the idea of an armistice, properly so called. Gérard advises that the truce should be for not less than two years; that it should include the evacuation of the territory of the United States, and some expressions favourable to the liberty of the United States. The first point has been agreed to. Gérard has hopes that second way be accepted also. This would in a measure reconcile the arrangement with the project desired by Spain and approved by the King. p. 205

The Virginian delegates have handed to Gérard an authenticated copy of the act by which the legislature has ratified the treaties concluded between the King and the United States. Gérard to Vergennes. N° 102. Long useless debates in Congress. Gérard is giving all his support to the plan of making Great Britain's consent to a regulation concerning the fisheries on the high seas, an ultimatum attached to the proposed treaty of commerce. This will make a serious obstacle to the concluding of the treaty and will thus serve to postpone the resumption of communications between the Americans and the British. Much caballing and scheming respecting the appointment of a plenipotentiary. Expects to see Arthur Lee set aside, and Franklin retain his present commission. Congress has determined to borrow $20,000,000 which it considers sufficient to finish the campaign. Paper money discredited. Impossible to fix a limit to the ills which are threatening from the present disorders. Intelligent people look to an internal revolution as a result. Prices advancing from week to week. Gérard has a Te Deum sung on anniversary of Declaration of Independence. Congress and principal officers of Government were present. Good results from this act for the Catholics, many of whom are suspected. News from Charlestown. Among others that Governor Rutledge proceeded against declared Tories and those receiving protection from the English. He had put to death those seized and declared the others traitors, and confiscated their property. Gérard had taken measures jointly with Congress to investigate charges of cruelty imputed to the English against the subjects of France. No proofs yet discovered. News of the movements of the British from Washington. Gérard thanks Vergennes for acceding to his wish to be recalled. The majority of Congress decided to avoid any course of action that could displease the King. The Peace party not satisfied with these assurances are awaiting the arrival of a delegate from Charlestown, which will give them an incontestible majority.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 103. Division between the two parties in Congress becoming wider and more embittered. Both sides have lost all sense of moderation. Gérard no more than an onlooker in the discussions, who endeavours to temper the heat displayed on both sides. Gérard confesses error as regard the committee of Philadelphia and its affiliated societies. They claim arrogantly the right to decide all matters concerning the public and those for which no provision has been made by law. It is by similar committees that the way was prepared for the revolution. Gérard had conversations with the secret author of this monstrous outgrowth of the Republic. No limit to what they presume to undertake. One of their first objects is to force Congress to restore the credit of paper money and to stop the issue of it. They commence to threaten Congress. The committee in Boston under direction of Samuel Adams is urging Congress to make no peace without an explicit assurance as to fishing rights. Gérard has had several confidential conversations with Mr. Tenifer, president of the Maryland senate. He is satisfied Congress in general is attached to Independence and the French alliance. He deplors the lack of cooperation among the well-intentioned, which gives to their less numerous opponents a position of superiority. Congress indifferent as to matters of public concern. He is convinced that the Americans may be forced to be satisfied with some expedient similar to the Treaty of 1609. Tenifer consulted Gérard as to attitude which Maryland should take towards Confederation. He fears that Confederation may dissolve after peace has been attained. Believes that the alliance with France is only bond of union among the States and that every effort should be made to have the alliance ratified by all the States. Would wish States to make the King of France perpetual arbitrator of their differences. Fears the preponderance which the Western territories would give to some States. New York offered Maryland 5,000,000 acres; Virginia was disposed to give as much. Necessity alone would induce Maryland to accept these offers. If Maryland had joined Confederation there would have been civil war against Vermont. Believes the leaders of the Opposition are in pay of England. Eastern States have always stood for their independence. To offset the designs of this party he would have closer bond between France and America, making the subjects of each State, subjects of the other as well. Gérard points out the difficulties in way of this. On this question whether Maryland should join Confederation, Gérard said that as Maryland was already confederated for all purposes except for the extension of territory, she might well await the course of events before deciding on the final step. Tenifer spoke much of the extreme interest the United States would have in reuniting Canada to the confederation; but he is convinced, as Gérard is, that there would be little hope of conquering that province. He would desire to join Canada by kindly measures and fears that the province will be alienated for ever by the pretensions of the Eastern States, who claim the territory as far northward as the 46th degree. This, if acceded to, would deprive the Indians of Canada of a large part of their present possessions. Maryland seeks to oppose these claims by a league, which would embrace New Jersey, Rhode Island, Delaware and Pennsylvania as well as Maryland. Gérard invites attention to the letter from Americanus, (see ante), and to the address of the committee of Philadelphia which contains doctrines subversive of society. Prudent citizens have no sympathy with these doctrines but hesitate to oppose them because of the popular fury. A Wilmington merchant has been murdered, because he was suspected of selling flour to Philadelphia, without the permission of the committee. A couple of Irishmen have just arrived, who report that their compatriots are under arms to the number of 15,000, following the example of America. The Vermont Commissioner states that inhabitants of Vermont to number of 10,000 in arms. A proposition from the State of New York to disarm the Vermonters dismissed as impracticable. The fear of forcing them to declare for England will lead to ways of conciliation. The affair is the more delicate, as New York suspects Massachusetts of fomenting the resistance of Vermont. p. 45

Philadelphia,
July 9.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 104. Acknowledges receipt of despatch No. 9, to which he replies. As to the plan of pacification proposed by Spain which Franklin is disposed to recommend to Congress, Vergennes directs Gérard to prepare the way for it by confidentially communicating its terms to a few members of Congress. Gérard will defer carrying out these instructions until the decision of the King on the fisheries question has been received. It would, in his opinion, be well that Congress should decide that it desired peace on terms, which would present no difficulties to it. A truce unsatisfactory to either party thereto would give an advantage to the war faction, if the question were raised before acceptable conditions were fixed. Faction reigns here, and he would have no assurance that the best intentioned members would not abuse his confidence. Thinks it well that the overture should reach Congress first through Franklin, but he will be watchful for any opportunity to assist matters. The distrust in which Mr. Lee is held is safeguard against the danger that England may accuse France in the eyes of Americans of conniving at the Spanish proposition for a truce. There is always a vague hope that formal guarantees will be given regarding the fisheries; the proposal of the King to make with the United States a treaty still wider against any attempt which England might afterwards make against the United States, would not seem to guarantee the fisheries also. Gérard hopes that his course towards Canada has been approved. Since Washington has declared decidedly against this expedition, no person else has dared to raise the question. While England remains on the defensive, the Americans have enough to occupy them in the south and west of the lakes, as well as in New York and Rhode Island. No attempt will be made against Halifax without a concourse of naval forces. There is then every appearance that the plan of Spain in this regard will not be exposed except in the case of extraordinary success, and of an exertion on the part of the United States which is entirely improbable. No person during the course of the present negotiation has proposed to demand Canada even on the supposition of the indefinite continuance of the war. Gérard therefore foresees no difficulty to carrying out his instructions in this regard. The resolutions of Congress are entirely satisfactory to Spain. Doubt as to the projected loan in Europe. They will confine themselves to asking aid in the way of munitions, and to the product of the loan of $20,000,000 opened in America since the beginning of the month. Congress will be informed of the satisfaction of the French ministry on the appointment of Franklin. They agree with France in the question of the publication of the treaties. The article regarding Spain not understood here. The motives of France for desiring to arouse the Americans to activity are fully appreciated by the better people. Gérard remarks again on the anarchy which reigns in the administration and which hampers all useful action. p. 58

Philadelphia,
July 14.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 105. Gives an account of the debate in Congress on the Peace propositions. The first day the Peace party gained the advantage, but a day or two later there was a complete reversal, the Opposition, being strengthened by four new members, managed to secure adhesion to their views. Great distress among the Peace party. The Opposition renewed its former demands, but did not insist on their being in nature of ultimatum. In place of that, the plenipotentiaries were to be instructed that in case of refusal to give the guarantees, they were to await fresh orders before signing any treaty. The propositions adopted by the majority were (1) that the right of fishing belonged to the United States and was essential to their subsistence and that treaties should be made with France; (2) that an article should be proposed to extend the guarantee of the French Crown to the fisheries and that this obligation should be submitted to the King as being essentially included in the treaties as much by title of inherent right to the sovereignty as being comprised in the necessity of the liberty of the States in point of commerce; (3) that peace should not be made without having it mentioned in the treaty that England should not trouble the States in that enjoyment; (4) that no treaty of commerce should be concluded with that power without setting forth in it the regulations on this subject; (5) the propositions above mentioned. The Opposition offered a resolution that the States would continue the war alone, if France and Spain declined to go on. Four States declared positively that they would separate from the Confederation, if this scheme was adopted. On the vote the first two propositions passed, in spite of the protestations of the Peace party; the others were postponed. Gérard had a long conference with the President of the Congress and two friendly delegates. As the result of their deliberations, an invitation was extended to Gérard to communicate to Congress the views of the King as contained in his last despatches. He appeared before Congress and made a speech. In the course of his speech he took steps to prepare Congress for Franklin's communication respecting the treaty. Thanked for speech. Gérard's plan is to make assurance on part of England respecting the fisheries on ultimatum, bound up with the treaty of commerce, and if possible not to call upon France for anything except goodwill. As for the truce for a long term, he would leave it to circumstances to prescribe the method. He is urging his friends to have matter definitely settled, so that the mind of Congress may be prepared for the communication from Franklin. He advises friends of his early departure and they are endeavouring to get matters concluded before he goes. English have taken New Haven and Fairfield, Connecticut, and are carrying on usual barbarities. p. 67

Gérard to Vergennes, No 106. The Committee of Foreign Affairs asks Gérard, confidentially, for the notes on which his speech was based: he gives them accordingly. Good effects of the reports drawn up therefrom. There is no sign, however, of any more favourable attitude on the part of the opposition. Gives the President of the Congress and the advocates of peace due credit for their zeal. His interviews with both parties. Explains necessity of producing the present crisis, by joining the matter of the truce to other matters of greater import to the leaders of the opposition. Gives details on the subject, with observations relative thereto. Letter of apology received from Arthur Lee, together with the one written by him to Gérard, on the occasion of his (Lee's) correspondence with Dr. Berkenhout. Also encloses his own answer; its skilful reticence admired by every one. Suspicions aroused against the Messrs. Lee and their adherents by the correspondence in question. Return of John Adams, who is inclined to wait on him (Gérard) in order to end the present deliberations, which might otherwise be prolonged by the despatch of a plenipotentiary. Neither party has much trust in Franklin. Various contradictory resolutions on the matter of the fisheries. Changes in regard to other articles, namely in regard to boundaries and in regard to Spain. Latest resolutions satisfactory to France. The determination of boundaries deferred till after peace. The offers to be made to Spain follow the lines suggested by Gérard. The opposition leaders intend to submit these resolutions to a reconsideration; their plan in connexion therewith. Gérard's note on the points. Arguments used by opposition leaders: An attack on the confidence inspired by the King's attitude towards the United States and its people. Course to be followed, should the advocates of peace fail to succeed. Last attempt to obstruct peace negotiations. Has come as a surprise to the advocates of peace, and to Gérard himself. Temple sails for Holland, not for France. Expresses his suspicion in regard to this decision: it would be well to intercept his correspondence. p. 93

Gérard to Vergennes, No. 107. Gives full report of matters connected with the capitulation offered to the English General before Charles Town. Troops delighted at the refusal to capitulate. Measures recently taken by Virginia: that State feels that the indifference of the people and the States lays them open to very great dangers. It will receive taxes in kind, and pay its troops and its requirements in the same way. Believes that the State and trade will benefit thereby. Invites the other members of the Union to follow its example. The ravages and incursions of the English appear to predispose the members of the Congress to regard the proposal favourably. Virginia is losing no opportunity of consolidating the system, which she has caused to be communicated to Gérard. The Eastern States, while of the same opinion, rely entirely on their militia, and wish to do away with the army. Their action is inspired by the spirit of republicanism. Popular committees reorganized. Their disadvantages. Differences of opinion. The western army continues its march. Hopes based on General Sullivan's activity and ambition; his objective. Difficulties which he may meet with. The English are pushing forward reinforcements. The withdrawal of so large a force has weakened Washington; it is difficult for him even to act on the defensive. Repeats a story, connected with the undertaking, which he thinks worthy the Minister's attention. General Reed's objective. The Congress decides on reprisals. Ill-treatment of American soldiers shewn by the latest exchanges. A force of 800 men has left Halifax for the Penobscot river; it is proposed to attack them by land and by sea. Subscription of a Philadelphia society to tender for the loan of 20 millions, recently opened by the Congress. Other measures taken to enable the Congress to cope with its difficulties; flattering hopes on this point. A despatch from Charles Town states that the English left their entrenchments to attack General Lincoln. Advantage gained by the latter; capture of two English galleys. Other successes hoped for. Encloses a Baltimore newspaper.

Vergennes to La Luzerne. N° 1. Opposition party in the Congress, which favours the views of England: its leaders. The system at variance with the (French) alliance which they support. French ministers cannot believe the sensible members of the Congress so ignorant as to follow the lead of the opposition. Means of persuasion which the opposition may have used in order to secure the adoption of their plan. Arguments to be set against those of the opposition. Effect which Spain's declaration must produce in the Congress. The Congress must be convinced that the King would not hear of a peace nor of a truce, without having first obtained the independence of the United States. Endeavours to be used to keep the Congress from listening to the suggestions of the opposition in favour of England. Advantages which France may have gained from Gérard's suggestions to the Congress on behalf of peace. Representations to be made to the Congress of the disadvantages arising from their not having made any offensive movement against England. Efforts which the King is making against England in Europe and in the Islands; necessary that the Congress should make France aware of its plans, in order to ensure joint action. Also, of its settling, at the earliest possible moment, the various matters that may be at issue between it and Spain. Three matters that may come under this heading. It concerns the Congress to determine the boundaries of the United States on the Mississippi. It would be well for the Congress to declare that the United States advance no claim to the navigation of the Mississippi, and confine themselves to petitioning the goodwill of Spain in this matter. The United States have no claim to the Floridas, and Spain is at liberty to conquer them. The United States would, indeed, have nothing to gain by possessing the Floridas. Reasons which may lead Spain to make the conquest in question. Difficulties of the United States in respect of their finances; depreciation of their paper money. Quite impossible for France to lend them any pecuniary assistance; she can, however, furnish the Congress with supplies of arms and ammunition. The King cannot grant the Congress a peace subsidy. It would be well, Gérard to Vergennes. N° 108. News received that on the midnight of the 15 and 16th July, General Wayne captured fort at Stony Point. Gérard to Vergennes. N° 109. The conference mentioned in the last letter took place to-day. Mr. Laurens alone was present, General Whipple being unwell. The arguments were the same as have been spoken of many times, and resolved themselves into this: that fishery rights are rights inherent in sovereignty, and as such are comprised implicitly in the Treaty of Alliance. Gérard pointed out the absurdity of these views. He dwelt on the contradiction and impossibility of the demands as regards England, and the injustice and indecency of the Opposition attitude towards France, and argued that, in attempting to force the King to withdraw from course of action taken when he espoused the cause of the Americans, they were exposing the King to the loss of his reputation for justice, good faith, and moderation, which were of more consequence to him than the independence of America. Such a course would strengthen the case of England with other European powers. If America's plans were pursued with an eye single to her own interests, France must have equal liberty to consult hers. The course taken by the Opposition was making it impossible for the King to negotiate satisfactorily, and would eventually expose the Opposition to the resentment of their own people. He regretted that a union so frank, so noble, and so generous on the part of the King should be degraded by the views and proceedings of a small number who cared nothing for the engagements, honour and interests of the States. Spain would probably withdraw from its offices as mediator when the ends aimed at and the means by which they were to be attained were essentially changed. The Spanish King could not fail to be disgusted with the Americans, and would not be disposed to continue an alliance with them. After some protestations that his views were not what they were supposed to be, Mr. Laurens asked Gérard whether it would not be well to make the fisheries a sine qua non of a treaty of commerce. Gérard supported this idea heartily. Cannot tell how Mr. Laurens will vote, as several congressmen are quite unreliable. Desire for peace on reasonable terms strong and growing. Congress resolved to carry on reprisals in England. English barbarities serve Alliance better than victories. (23rd.) Motion made day before that in a Treaty of Peace, England should not be asked to recognize American fishing rights, but an ultimatum should be presented that England would not molest American fishermen on the high seas at fixed distances from English coasts.

3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

Four Eastern States, New York, New Jersey, Delaware and South Carolina supported motion. Congress anxious to know how far King could be induced to go in support of this proposition. The only ultimatum Congress seems disposed to adopt is that the territories of the States shall remain as they were before the Revolution troubles began. Moderation must prevail. Consequently the pretensions in the North which would hem in and trouble Canada must be put aside. Boundaries in the South. Better tone in Congress and press toward France. Dangers of indiscreet disclosures through unrestrained press. Gérard urges the appointment of a permanent commission for foreign affairs. Activity and public spirit of Virginia. (25th.) Congress has made progress in Peace affairs. It was decided, (1) to make no mention of fisheries in Treaty of Peace; but (2) that a stipulation against interference with American fishermen should be sine qua non of Treaty of Commerce; (3) that the right to fish should be restricted to the Newfoundland and other American Banks, and at a distance of three leagues from English coasts. It was tacitly agreed that if France should desire a greater distance from these coasts, United States would comply; (4) that France should be asked for explicit guarantee of fisheries, which they regard as implicit in the treaty. But they would be content with a guarantee of any sort which would give the United States the security they desire; (5) it was proposed to renounce the ultimatum of the treaty of commerce, if France should give the guarantee. This was objected. But there was a disposition to leave France free to give or refuse the guarantee; (6) it was proposed to revoke the two resolutions concerning the essential right of America to the fisheries and the obligation of France to support this view, but the Eastern States induced Congress to regard the subsequent resolutions as sufficient modification of the two mentioned; (7) it was resolved that the Peace treaty should be a recognition, formal or tacit, of independence within the territories of the 13 States and that they should content themselves with the simple stipulation that England would not molest the inhabitants within these territories; (8) that they should fix without delay the propositions to be made to Spain in accordance with these resolutions; (9) it was suggested that France had been put in a position to prevent forever the making of a treaty of commerce between England and the United States. The suggestion was rejected. Proposal for a truce put aside. Gérard hopes King will be fairly satisfied with the resolutions.

Gérard to Vergennes. N° 110. Congress occupied with Pacification projects. Motion to rescind the two resolutions respecting essential rights to fisheries and obligations of France under Alliance defeated. On the 29th Opposition proposed that should Americans be molested in the fisheries after the Peace all the States should unite to oppose force to force. After violent debate, proposition adopted. Southern delegates protest, and seek means to have resolution rescinded, as well as that making England's toleration of American fishermen a sine qua non of treaty of commerce. They hope for France's influence in holding Union together. As a way out of the tangle, and to save the Americans from themselves, Gérard proposed that the King should make use of the delay to conclude a peace analogous to the plan of the Alliance. Disposition towards peace general. Attachment of army to Alliance pronounced. Its firmness alone prevented negotiations with English commissioners. Secret caballing going on against army. Washington urged to attack English at King's Ferry, but considers risks too great. Inferiority of his army in numbers and discipline. Internal troubles. Gérard to Vergennes. N° 111. Opposition made motion at Rhode Island that settlement of fisheries question be included in treaty of peace. After long debate this was negatived. Opposition moved that steps be taken to assure declaration of Congress that no negotiations would be entered upon with the English, which did not provide for independence or evacuation of the territory of the States. After discussion this was not pressed as it might hamper future liberty of action. The declaration would remain on record. The question of a short truce during negotiations was considered and was left to be determined by circumstances. Gérard strives to find why New York delegates yielded to Eastern States regarding the fisheries. His conclusions. A project on foot to dissolve existing Congress and call a new one and so break up intrigues. Mission of Messrs. Berkenhaut and Temple to announce England's concession of independence and to fix the other conditions the United States would be disposed to accept. (5th August.) Congress has settled all the points which should be dealt with in a treaty of peace. Committee appointed to draw up resolutions and instructions to plenipotentiaries. Gérard to Vergennes. N° 114. The Committee ask for a fixed basis whereon to draw up instructions. The draft of peace conditions must be in harmony with the scheme of the Treaty of Alliance. Proposed conditional plan, in the event of the non-success of peace. Plan defined: debates in connexion therewith. The great majority aroused against these proposals makes it impossible to submit a motion on the point. The notion of an offensive league and of an indefinite war, has been rejected. There is a general desire not to hamper an immediate and future peace by means of fresh claims. The chimera of South Carolina has not misled the majority, but there seems to be an agreement as to desiring that of Nova Scotia; which goes to shew the manner in which these matters are discussed. Debate on the treaty to be submitted to Spain. The United States will offer her the security of the Floridas; no decision has as yet been come to in respect of assisting in conquering them. and Spain. This was rejected as Congress thought affairs were taking favourable turn, and the proposition would not be necessary. There is a disposition to give up claims to Florida and guarantee it to Spain; also to disclaim any right to navigation on Mississippi, provided the Spaniards will give the Americans a free port for the exchange of foreign goods. Instructions as regards other points are divided into 4 parts. (a) respecting peace with England, (b) respecting a treaty of commerce with England, (c) respecting the attitude of United States to France, (d) respecting attitude towards Spain. (a) As regards peace, they insist upon a recognition, at least tacit, of their independence. Peace should also be conformable to the treaty of Alliance. Indications of the limits of the States in the powers given to plenipotentiary. If agreeable to France, a truce will be agreed to, but with the stipulation of the evacuation of the territories of the United States. (b) Treaty of Commerce. This will be based on treaty with France. A declaration on the part of England that her people will not molest the Americans in their fishing off the shores of British territory, beyond a distance agreed upon, a sine qua non of the treaty. (c) As regards the relations with France, the American plenipotentiary should co-operate with France in all matters relating to the negotiations. As regards the fisheries, a proposed article giving effect to the views of New England was submitted, but it was decided to leave this article to the action of circumstances. These resolutions were approved unanimously by Congress. Notice of the approaching arrival of Luzerne. Information received that Spain had declared against England. This news tended to upset all the proceedings for Peace, but Gérard showed the necessity of binding the United States more closely to the scheme of Alliance. These considerations prevailed and the plenipotentiary was assured by several delegates that their States regarded the alliance with France as the sheet anchor of America. Virginia has determined to put itself at the head of a Confederation opposed to that of the East and to that end is establishing its forces on a respectable footing. Maryland seems ready to move on same lines and for same reason. The local committees cause anxiety. Their aim seems to be to throw the authority of the State into the hands of the ignorant populace. Resolutions taken by Maryland to recruit troops and naturalize strangers principally the French. It was also resolved that the exportation of commodities would be permitted to the French on the expressed desire of himself or other agent of France. Gérard is taking advantage of this to send some provisions to the French West Indian Islands.

Gives particulars into which he enters in order to settle the ideas of Americans in regard to Spain's declaration. He represents the attitude of that Power as being wholly determined by its relations with France, and causes it to be communicated to the Congress in such wise as to make it less set on the form of recognition of independence; to increase the gratitude of Americans towards Spain, and their attachment to the alliance. Spain's proposal is published in the newspapers, and produces an impression which is lost in the general delight caused by that Power's declaration. The analysis of Spain's motives troubles the minds of Americans. Gérard endeavours to correct their notions by assuring them that it is the conviction of England's being a long way from the recognition of independence which has led the King of Spain to use force instead of mediation. He is careful, however, to assign all Spain's views to her affection for France. Gérard never omits to impress on the Congress that the cost to France of supporting their cause makes it impossible for her to give them any pecuniary assistance. Ineffectual measures taken to raise the credit of the paper money. Estimate of expenses for the current year. [Aug., 25.] The endeavour to secure an alliance with Spain makes good progress among the well-intentioned, in spite of the opposition of the Eastern party. Mr Arthur Lee assures the Congress that the Court of Spain is eager to ally itself with America, and the reports of its ministers in France represent to him the intentions of the latter country in the same light. Reduction and discouragement of the American army. South Carolina appears to be threatened with the fate of Georgia, unless d'Estaing comes to its assistance. p. 218

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 3. Leaves following day for Philadelphia. Takes advantage of his stay there to study conditions in Massachusetts. Clash between Massachusetts men and English, in which Americans suffered severely. Rich prizes of merchant vessels brought into Boston by an American fleet. Several members of the Council of Massachusetts called on Luzerne and Samuel Adams their spokesman urged that as there was nothing to fear from the English in the Antilles, part of the French fleet might be detached to assist the American fleet to attack the English fleet in New York harbour. Control of New York harbour would greatly forward American plans on land. Luzerne expressed the greatest sympathy, but said he would have to consult Gérard who was more fully au courant with conditions. He also intimated that the request should more properly come from Congress than from Council of any single State. A few days later, these same members again visited Luzerne bringing with them a Canadian, and some papers relating to a proposed expedition into Canada. The Canadian who was recommended by General Gates gave assurances of the desire of the habitants to throw off British control, if they could obtain sufficient assistance. He declared that the farmers were despoiled of their cattle and grain, and that the money they received as payment was quite discredited. The gentilshommes were favoured by the British, and were well disposed towards them. The clergy, though discreet, were eager for liberty, and the Canadian nation as a whole desired ardently to be independent and united to the United States. The Indians were loyal to the English. The English in Canada number not more than 4,000 men. As this force has to protect the extensive frontiers of Canada a body of 3,000 French men sailing up the St. Lawrence, would have an easy task to take Quebec. An American general who was present showed how the Americans might cooperate effectively in this conquest. Luzerne was much impressed with the whole scheme, but foresaw difficulties arising from lateness of season, and inability of allies in this delicate plan to communicate with one another. New England has greatly at heart the conquest or independence of Canada and Nova Scotia. If choice had to be made of one of the two, New England would prefer Nova Scotia, on account of the fisheries, as well as the impossibility of the English holding Canada should Nova Scotia be lost to England. It was impressed on Luzerne that the fisheries were of as much importance to Massachusetts, as rice, tobacco and indigo were to the Southern States, or grain to the inland States. Luzerne discreetly refused to be drawn into a discussion on these matters. He is pretty well persuaded of the loyalty of this State to the alliance and to independence. The newspapers and preachers are strong for both. He has heard warm prayers for the French King and the Royal family in spite of the prejudice against Roman Catholicism. Tories extremely repugnant to mass of people. They are fugitives and their property is confiscated. Though well disposed to the alliance and resolute for independence, the New Englanders will be found troublesome and obstinate in adherence to their own schemes.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup> 121. Relates chiefly to propositions respecting the entrance of Spain into the Alliance. A motion was made in Congress that the American plenipotentiary be authorized to conclude a treaty of alliance with France and Spain, the conditions of which were that the two Crowns should guarantee to the United States, the Floridas, free navigation of Mississippi, Canada, Nova Scotia and the fisheries. If these terms should be rejected by the two powers the plenipotentiary should guarantee on behalf of the United States, that Spain should have the Floridas, and the Bahamas, in case she should gain them by conquest, and the navigation of the Mississippi with certain restrictions, and that France and Spain on their part should guarantee Canada and Nova Scotia to the United States. Gérard, when consulted, declared that if the object of the authors of the motion was to repel Spain, they had set about it in the most effective way. It meant the indefinite continuance of the war. Southern States utterly opposed to the propositions. The gains would go to the Northern and Eastern States, while the burdens would fall on the South as they were convinced that the Northern States would not lift a finger to make effective the guarantee as regards the Floridas. As the interests of Spain were opposed to the propositions before Congress, all the ill-consequences of a disagreement with that power would fall on the Southern States. The views of the Southern members were that Spain should be asked simply to join the alliance, or, better still, that the question of an alliance should not be raised with Spain at all, as in that case Spain would be free to take the part of mediator, and would be able to prevent France from falling in with the plans of the Eastern States. If either proposition were accepted by France and Spain, the States would call on those powers to assist in the conquest of Canada, and Nova Scotia, as there is no American sufficiently presumptuous to suppose that the United States could succeed in such an enterprise unaided. The Virginian deputies have drawn up, in concert with Gérard, a resolution to the effect that, as the United States are bound by their relations with France to meet the requirements of Spain, the American plenipotentiaries should confide to the King of Spain the resolutions mentioned earlier, but the deputies insisted also upon adding, in spite of Gérard's advice, a clause calling for a free port for the United States on the Mississippi, south of the 31st degree. Matter not concluded there being warm discussions. The serious nature of the reverse suffered by the Boston troops on the Penobscot. English attacks on shipping on the Rapahannock river. Means of sustaining army precarious, though commodities are abundant. Talk of making Washington dictator to provide for the maintenance of the army, and to prevent it disbanding. Pennsylvania taking steps to remedy the disorders in the State. The committee of Philadelphia is being dissolved. The American army requires large quantities of powder and muskets. The Opposition less extravagant, but persist in demanding free navigation of Mississippi. The South supporting them since, though the Southern deputies would prefer a free port without free navigation, to free navigation without a free port, they despair of bringing the Opposition around to their views.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup>. 122. It is not to be supposed that England will buy the defection of America (from France) by recognizing her independence. The system of Committees is the means used by the faction [the opposition] in order to strengthen its power and to gain popularity. The whole scheme built up by it would come to nothing were Spain to refuse to treat with the Congress until after gaining possession of the Floridas.

Gérard to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup> 123. The Congress, after long debates, has at last decided to offer Spain the secure possession of the Floridas. The plenipotentiary authorized to make this offer, on condition of Spain's granting the navigation of the Mississippi. The Congress orders powers to be drawn up for the negotiation of peace, and for the agreement with Spain. The appointment of the plenipotentiaries gives rise to great debates, the decision by ballot passes unanimously. (Sept. 27.) Jay is finally chosen for Spain and John Adams as plenipotentiary to treat of peace. A description of these ministers. After having laid a foundation in American policy, Gérard hands over the conduct of the King's business to the Chev. de la Luzerne. The wish to please Spain seems to be almost unanimous.

Vergennes to Luzerne. N°. 2. Instructions on entering on [duties as Agent to Congress. Luzerne will probably find great discussions going on respecting the Peace overtures suggested by Spain. There is no party in Congress actually insisting on the prolongation of the war, but the party under the direction of Lee and Adams is working indirectly to that end by making difficulties in the conditions of peace. The two points on which this Opposition party make its stand are the fisheries and the lands situated on the shores of the Mississippi. Vergennes states their pretensions on these points and discusses the former at length. As to the fisheries, there are two sorts: that on the high seas, and that along the coasts. The fisheries on the high seas cannot be in question; they must be as free as the seas themselves are. The shore fisheries are quite different. They belong to the countries owning the shores, who are within their rights in dealing with them as they please. Thus the fisheries on the shores of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and Canada belong to Great Britain. The Americans have no claims whatever to them, and any rights exercised by the French are in virtue of express treaties. The Americans claim that, as they have always fished on those coasts concurrently with the English, the right still remains with them. This, however, is not the case, since they enjoyed the fishing as subjects of England, and having divested themselves of that state, they lose the privileges appertaining thereto. The United States claims that the Treaty of Alliance with France binds the latter country to guarantee these fisheries to them. The article, however, on which they rely only guarantees to the United States their independence and the enjoyment of such possessions as they have at the time the peace is made. This point is elaborated. While the United States are within their rights in endeavouring to secure Canada and other British possessions by conquest, until they have done so, no rights arise under the Treaty which France is bound to guarantee. It should be remembered also that France has most legitimate rights towards these British possessions, but it relinquishes them, in order not to embarrass the United States. This generosity should be an example to the United States, and should extinguish any jealousy they might feel at the slight advantages France enjoys in those fisheries at the expense of Great Britain. As the Mississippi matter was fully dealt with in despatch No. 1, it need not be further discussed except to say that the United States have every interest in satisfying all legitimate desires of Spain. Luzerne will find many deputies holding perverse views on public questions. He must follow the steps of his predecessor, and as far as he can inculcate correct ideas among the deputies. But he must be careful to do so discreetly and not raise antagonisms. The news which Luzerne is carrying to the United States of the Spanish declaration ought to have good effect. If questioned on the subject in the United States Luzerne may say that the Kings of France and Spain are determined not to close the war except by a definitive treaty, unless overriding and unforeseen circumstances should make a truce a necessity. If the deputies should object that a mere truce would not be a fulfilment of the guarantee given by France, Luzerne may reply by pointing out that while France has guaranteed independence nothing is said as to the mode by which this is to be affected. A truce followed, if necessary, by suitable measures may meet all requirements, as well as would be done by express stipulations in a treaty with England. In any case Luzerne must not provoke discussion on these subjects. Regarding assistance in way of arms and ammunitions. Conduct to be observed towards Delaware and other Indian tribes. Luzerne authorized to continue the gifts or promises made by Gérard to different American authors. There is a possibility that divergence of interest may break up the Confederation into smaller groups. This, though unfortunate for them, would be no concern of France, whose whole wishes would be fulfilled in seeing the United States independent and peaceful. These however are considerations for the future. At present it is essential that union should be maintained among all the States. Luzerne should see that, if possible, all treaties between France and the La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 4. His arrival in Philadelphia. Description of the countries through which he has passed. Dwells on the political advantages derived by France from American independence. Is received by General Washington, who shows him the forts built for the defence of his position. Washington is of opinion that the United States should facilitate the acquisition of the Floridas by Spain, which by giving, in turn, a subsidy to the Americans, would revive the vigour of his operations. The benefit of any pecuniary assistance which Spain might give to the United States. The American general appears to have no anxiety as to the rest of the campaign; he will remain on the defensive. Encloses a copy of his own letter to d'Estaing, re difficulties in the way of joint action on the part of the said Vice-Admiral and Washington. The Congress leaves the former at liberty to come to whatever decision he may judge to be the most advantageous.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 11. Account of the Savannah campaign. D'Estaing's praiseworthy conduct during the siege of Savannah. Although d'Estaing's arrival in America has not had all the good results expected of it, still, those who mean well [towards France] note that it has produced several. Garrison of Rhode Island arrive at New York, on transport ships. Clinton intends to strengthen the garrison at Halifax. p. 103

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 15. M. de Miralles receives instructions to urge the United States to direct their operations in such wise as to facilitate and ensure the successful conquest of Eastern Florida. Proposals well received by the Congress, who do not, however, consider it possible to attack S. Augustine, so long as the English hold Georgia. M. de Miralles asks that the King's squadron shall take part in the proposed campaign against Florida, and that La Luzerne shall support the request in the Congress. La Luzerne yields to these importunities, but makes no positive statement. Western Florida will be ceded to the Spanish, should it be successfully conquered. Certain members propose to put a price on the cession of Florida, in order to restore the finances of the Congress. The plan is, however, rejected by the saner portion of the Congress. Debates re plenipotentiaries in Europe continue, while the needs (of the country) grow daily greater. Motives of this method of acting. The Congress admits that it would be unfair to ask the King for fresh pecuniary assistance. They rely, rather, in this respect, on the generosity of His Catholic Majesty. Adams seems to have left with the intention of complying purely and simply with the wishes of the Congress. Encloses a newspaper cutting which he has had drawn up, in order to weaken the impression made by the unbounded demonstrations of delight of the English at events in Georgia. p. 107

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 17. General Gates intends to invade Canada, in order to invite the people to return to the American union, under conditions for which the King should stand surety. La Luzerne, without disapproving or approving of the plan, points out that France could not possibly render financial assistance. Gates considers the evacuation of Rhode Island to be due less to the fear aroused in the English by d'Estaing's arrival, than to a design, on the part of these latter, of some secret undertaking. As the embarkations preparing at New York seem aimed at the Antilles in general, La Luzerne and de Miralles intend to notify their respective commandants. Estimate of the English forces in New York and the adjacent islands. Americans take possession of Newport, on its evacuation by the English. Washington's army cantoned in the Jerseys. p. 114

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 18. The State of New Jersey relieves a Frenchman in the amount to which he had been made liable in the apportionment of public taxes. Don Juan de Miralles, although holding no official standing, has met with no less consideration on the part of the Congress in respect of his request for a campaign against Eastern Florida. He does not, however, think that Spain can supply the ships and troops that the Congress asks for. Encloses the letter and the resolution of the Congress, stating that the conquest of Florida is to be undertaken on behalf of His Catholic Majesty. Number of troops which the Congress will have to support the Spanish operations against the Floridas. M. de Miralles appointed minister plenipotentiary to the Congress. The Congress says nothing concerning the conquest to be made of parts of Louisiana and its dependencies. Virginia lays claim to the parts of Louisiana now in the possession of the English. Spain appears to expect the cession of these same territories, which the State of Virginia intends to conquer on her own account. She also shews signs of a jealousy of Spain. An officer of Virginian troops makes an incursion into the farther side of the Mississippi, and takes possession of the country traversed, in the name of his State. Encloses account of the check sustained by this officer from the Indians. The Congress takes cognizance of the acts of ownership exercised by Virginia in order to consolidate her alleged conquests, and recommends to refrain from making grants of land while the present war lasts. p. 120

Jan. 17.

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 26. The Congress grants 1,700 men to the southern States, to protect them against the English invasion. The Congress undecided whether to evacuate or to defend Charlestown. Resolution to compensate soldiers for the depreciation of the paper money: to raise a monument to Count Pulawski. General Lee's disgrace due to his rashness of speech. Arnold's trial instituted before a court-martial; motives based largely on plots and personal hatreds. Conditions of peace granted by the Congress to the Six Nations Indians. p. 8

Jan. 25.

La Luzerne to Vergennes. No 27. American army reduced to 7,000 men, and about to undergo a still greater reduction. Eagerness of certain members of the Congress whose attitude is doubtful, spreads the report that a mediation has been begun in Europe, in order to lead the Americans to confine themselves to a war of defence. The English have left only 11,000 men in New York. Washington uneasy at the reduction of the army; he sends a despatch to the Congress to draw its attention to the matter. Note sent to a committee for the purpose of leading America to make extraordinary efforts to drive the English from the continent. La Luzerne transmits to the Committee the ultimatum submitted by Spain to England, on the occasion of her mediation. A member of the Committee expresses his surprise at it; he looks on it as destructive of the American union. Shews how he went to work to remove the impression produced by it. A representative states positively that news from Europe announce the existence of a mediation for obtaining peace. Reports on how he explained to the Committee the principles governing the mediation of a Power that was not bound by engagements to France. Recommends to the Committee the vigorous action by which alone the United States can win support and dwells on the trust shewn by other powers in the King of France. The members agree to draw up a plan of campaign, to be submitted to France. One member suggests the idea of asking the King for a squadron of 4 or 5 ships of the line; La Luzerne undertakes to forward the request [to the French government]. Explains why he allowed the Committee to hope that a squadron might be sent. A member proposes to employ a French squadron in the conquest of Nova Scotia. La Luzerne states that he has no instructions on the point. He points out to the Committee that there can be no question of gaining Canada or Nova Scotia, until after the English have been driven out of the territory (the "continent") of the 13 United States. The opposition fear the rivalry of the Southern States, and would abandon them without regret if such a sacrifice would facilitate the conquest of Canada. The Congress returns thanks for the arms and ammunition supplied to the United States by the King of France. It begs the King for clothes and garments of which the army is in the most immediate need. La Luzerne hopes there may be no further cause to fear requests from the Congress for pecuniary assistance. Explains how he will act when the question of a peace subsidy shall arise. In the event of Spain's consenting to grant the United States a peace subsidy, M. de Miralles should be authorized to communicate the fact to the Congress. La Luzerne is assured that the report of his conference (with the Committee), when made to the Congress, had the best possible effect. The need of making every possible effort, during the coming campaign, is clearly recognized. La Luzerne writes to the Governors of the different States urging them to rouse the people to do their utmost for the common cause. According to the President of the State of Pennsylvania, the people are making extraordinary efforts to finish the war. Reports all the members of the Congress as being unanimous in their attachment to independence and to the (French) alliance.

Vergennes to La Luzerne. N° 4. Regrets the infrequency of news received from him. Squadron and body of troops about to be sent to support the efforts of the United States in the coming campaign. The Marquis de LaFayette is proceeding to America to confide the French plan to General Washington. Precautions to be taken to guard the secret; limits of the information to be given to the Congress. Efforts to which the Americans must be stirred up against the English. Spain silent as to her intentions in regard to the United States; attitude which the latter should maintain towards Spain. Adams arrives at Versailles; he believes himself to be sent to treat immediately of peace. Deceit practised by Arthur Lee in regard to Gérard and Holker; must be exposed. Special motive of the present received by Lee from the King. Reflections on the difficulties which might ensue from Lawrence's mission to Holland. Refutes La Luzerne's opinion that the United States will soon be able to do without European manufactures. Loan of 3 millions which France has obtained for Franklin.

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 30. Reports view of the Congress re the incontestable rights of the United States in regard to extending their possessions as far as the banks of the Mississippi. and limits wherein they are willing to confine it. Compensation expected from Spain in return for this concession. Letters whereby Don Juan Miralles is instructed to urge the Americans to undertake the conquest of the parts of Louisiana now held by the English. Views of various members as to the United States ownership of the territories between the Atlantic ocean and the Mississippi. Difficulties which may arise in connexion with the boundaries of the Floridas, as defined in the Ultimatum transmitted to Jay. Encloses translation of the King of England's proclamation of 1763, defining the boundaries of the English colonies. Boundaries thereby assigned to the Floridas. It is thought that the United States will submit to the conditions imposed by Spain for the navigation of the Mississippi. Enumerates the only Mississippi districts which are likely to cause real difficulties. Describes cautious manner in which Miralles wishes him to ascertain the views of the United States re possession of the Mississippi. Miralles tells him in confidence that he is authorized to purchase the Floridas, should the United States conquer them. News received at Philadelphia of Spanish victories over the English on the Mississippi. News received with mingled satisfaction and anxiety in America. Committee appointed to receive La Luzerne's communication, who points out in a speech to the committee, the need of a speedy settlement of the joint interests of Spain and America. He informs the committee of Spain's claims to the Floridas and to the navigation of the Mississippi. A member protests against the claim. Grounds whereon he contests the United States claims in both these respects. He examines, with the members of the Congress, the bearing of the charters on which the United States found their claims to the Floridas and to the navigation of the Mississippi; these charters actually favour the United States view. He discusses, with the committee, the respective claims of the United States and of Spain to the possession of the Mississippi. The determination of Spain to take possession of the countries in dispute, is the best way of solving the difficulties. p. 45

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N<sup>o</sup> 33. Encloses cutting from Pennsylvania paper giving an account of His Catholic Majesty's operations on the Mississippi, and of the conquest of some 500 leagues of country on the western bank of that river. It was Miralles who had the news put in all the public papers; it has aroused the greatest excitement. Several persons living in Philadelphia lay claim to these countries, as well as various States. Defines individual claims referred to. Grant of land on the Mississippi made to a company known as the Indian. A private individual opens an office for the sale in parcels of lands situated between the Ohio and the Mississippi. Spain's claims to the territories in question cause anxiety to several members of the Congress; La Luzerne induces them to postpone the raising of any discussion on this point. Miralles insists that La Luzerne shall confine himself to saying, when the territories situated on the Mississippi are spoken of, that he has no instructions from the Court of Madrid, to treat of that matter. Miralles has Galves' promise of appointment as minister to the United States; the Congress will, however, only treat with him through the medium of the French King's minister (La Luzerne). Mutual confidence between La Luzerne and Miralles. Means taken by La Luzerne to induce the members of the Congress to change their views re Spain's right to conquer the countries on the Mississippi. His interview with Matthews re Spanish claims in question; principles on which the United States base their rights to these same territories. p. 64

March 18.

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 35. Acknowledges receipt of despatch No. 2. The question of right to fisheries on the shores and Banks of Newfoundland no longer occupies public attention since it is known that John Adams is the bearer to Europe of the ultimatum of Congress on the matter. Luzerne cannot learn whether the fisheries are sine qua non, or whether Adams, after having exhausted his means of obtaining all that his people desire, will yield to the pressure of circumstances. It should be noted that in Massachusetts itself, while the merchants are resolute to obtain full freedom in fishing, the agricultural population are eager for peace. The prejudices of the United States against Spain have increased since the success of M. de Galves against the fort of Natchez on Mississippi. Moderate opinion in United States favours the union of the forces of Spain with those of France. Luzerne promises to conform to the Minister's instructions on the several points set forth in his letter. On the question of having the treaties between France and the United States ratified by the several States, Luzerne points out difficulties and asks for further instructions. The articles of Confederation forbade individual States from entering into relations or negotiations with any Prince or foreign State without consent of Congress; and the action of Virginia and Maryland in ratifying the treaties has given rise to much disquietude. The President of Congress sent a copy of each treaty (omitting the secret article) to each State, and the acceptance by each gave all necessary authenticity to the treaties so far as the States were concerned. Great difficulties would arise if the custom grew of requiring the acquiescence of each State to treaties. If, for instance, a treaty of peace required to be accepted by each State, there would surely be embarrassments over the fisheries question. Misunderstanding arising from the publication in the English copy of two articles in the last treaty with France which did not appear in the French copy. These were actually annulled, but having been published, were operative for some time to disadvantage of the French Islands. Great gratification of Congress at reply from King to request for portraits of their Majesties. p. 76

La Luzerne to Vergennes. N° 41. Negotiation begun and broken off in connexion with a cartel whereby it was proposed to exchange the prisoners made at Saratoga against an equal number of American militia forces. La Luzerne's protest against the inequality of such a cartel. New shipment intended to reinforce Clinton before Charlestown. Translation of a letter said to have been written by Clinton to Lord Germaine. English ship, laden with 18,000 bushels of oats, captured by an American privateer. p. 94 neighborhood, but they were said to be Whigs. The writer, not being "warm for Liberty," was not permitted, as formerly, to preach in the Independent meeting-house near Inglisdale. An account is given of the engagements, and exchange of prisoners, at the Cedars,

Halifax, Nov. 14. To the Churchwardens and Vestry of St. Johns Church, Lunenburg. [Signed "Charles Nova Scotia."]. Regrets their embarrassed state; they are under displeasure of the Society [for the Propagation of the Gospel], which may be misinformed. It is the trustee for contributions from well-disposed persons, and is justly careful in applying these. It requires that the congregation provide a glebe or parsonage house for its missionary, and contribute according to ability to his support. Requests information as to possibility of fulfilling these conditions at Lunenburg, and as to attendance and prospects of growth; and that a similar communication be made to the Society. 25
- Halifax, Dec. 27. To Lord Dorchester. Relies on his Lordship's support in promoting religion, virtue, literature, loyalty and order. Is pleased at the prospect of the establishment of a university in Quebec. Makes suggestions as to the staff, endowment, curriculum, location, &c. Approves of proposal for teaching botany and scientific agriculture. Makes observations on the exclusion of clergymen from the offices, and of theology from the curriculum, especially in relation to the conciliation of the Canadians. Transmits a sermon on the unity of the King's subjects: in appendix thereto, reference made to a legislative grant for a seminary. Fears efforts to frustrate this design. Proposes calling together the clergy of Nova Scotia, and visiting New Brunswick. Has not yet fixed a time for visiting Canada. Mr. Mongan proposed as commissary in Canada; should he not go, which of the clergy there would he (Lord Dorchester) recommend? 26

Halifax,
Dec. 26.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Arrived Oct. 15th, after seven week's voyage. Has made Halifax his place of residence: only there could the leading personages be met. Was received with kindness. Gave assurance that his office did not interfere with the civil departments. Even Dissenters seem satisfied, and come to his sermons. As a result of his representations and the King's Instructions, the Assembly granted £400 for an Academy. Some difficulty in getting concurrence of the Council, who wished the Academy to be at Halifax. Preached before the Legislature at their request, sermon published, and is being translated into German by Mr. Houseill, the German missionary. Requests the Archbishop to recommend a principal for the Academy: he is to be a clergyman. The character of the position described. Refers to Lord Dorchester's statement that the people of Canada desire a university, and to his own reply. The need of Commissaries in Canada and New Brunswick: is ready to appoint Mr. Cooke for New Brunswick. Refers to the method of obtaining his own salary. Must rely on advice and assistance of His Grace in the difficulties he will encounter. Met Prince William Henry when he was in Halifax: gave him the message of loyalty and attachment which he intended to give the King in person at the time of his presentation, but was prevented by embarrassment. The Prince very sensible, and attentive observer. Refers to local matters: decline of congregation of Halifax; presence of two popular preachers, a Roman Catholic and a Presbyterian, each of whom has had a place of worship built; also a Methodist meeting-house lately erected; Mr. Weeks, the curate, a poor speaker; Dr. Breynton, the rector, though in England, draws his salary; it would be well to admonish him on the subject; best that a clergyman come from England in his place; Dr. Byles, who is in Halifax, not popular; the Church has little property; divine service is now solemnized on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saints' days; preaches in person frequently. Refers to proposal of the S.P.G. to withdraw Mr. Money and their mission from Lunenburg; this should not be done. The last two missionaries there, Messrs. Brizaliers and De la Roche, were unsatisfactory. Has had friendly correspondence with most of the clergy of the diocese; they have little intercourse with each other; will call them together for his first visitation, issue a circular letter, and then visit New Brunswick and the interior missions of Nova Scotia. Will communicate later as to appropriation of lands for a bishop. More clergymen needed, but his nephew, Arch. Peans Inglis, the only candidate for Orders: his good character. 30

Halifax,
Dec. 18.

To Dr. Morice [Secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel]. Refers at length to the proposal to withdraw Mr. Money from Lunenburg. Has not insisted on immediate compliance, owing to the danger and difficulty of withdrawal. The decline of the congregation there due to a disagreement with the last missionary. The inhabitants poor, industrious, universally loyal; about 300 Anglicans church attendants, including some respectable Loyalists: they are now doing much for the Church. Advises the continuance of the mission. Has directed the missionaries to continue their correspondence with the Society. Mr. Rowland to be at Shelburne in the spring. Mr. Cosset, missionary in Cape Breton, has gone to New Hampshire for his family. "There appears to be a laxness in all ecclesiastical matters here, than in the southern colonies formerly." To remedy this will be his endeavour. 39

(To Mr. Cumberland. Discusses the method of drawing allowance from Government. Also the application of money granted by Parliament for building churches; it should be distributed with regard to the numbers and ability of the people; half should be advanced when the building materials are collected, the remainder when the edifice is entirely roofed in; it should be paid to two or three principal inhabitants,—under bond, if deemed expedient. Refers to personal matters. 43

Halifax,
Jan. 16.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. [Extract.] [Has sent circular letters to the clergy of the diocese, and to those of Quebec, New Brunswick, and Newfoundland. Finds expences very heavy, Dr. Breynton, whose leave of absence is extended, should return to Halifax or resign. Requests copy of Instructions to American Governors as to appointment of a bishop. Is on good terms with the Governor, who is good-natured, but his ideas too entirely military. His own two great objects are the proper establishment of the Church by act of Legislature, and establishment of a college. 45

Halifax,
March 1.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Refers to former communications. Finds a general and deplorable lukewarmness in the province. Explains some claims of the Governor which have caused alarm. At a meeting of churchwardens and vestry of Halifax to investigate the church debt, a proposal was made regarding Dr. Breynton's leave of absence. [The Governor disapproved, claiming both right of presentation and of granting absences. The law gives the right of presentation to the parish; claim of granting leave of absence strikes at episcopal authority. Asks advice. Gives another example of improper interference. Is on best terms with the Governor. Is preparing to open Sunday-schools. Refers to death of Bishop Lowth of London, and succession of Bishop Porteus. 46

March 8.

[Postscript to above letter.] Has received a letter from Lord Dorchester, promising his support, and desiring assistance in forming a general system of education. Remains neutral in feuds which tear the province. Will take steps to obtain lands for the Bishops of the Province from Governor Parr. Is attempting to obtain information as to the different settlements. 49

Halifax,
Feb. 22.

To Lord Dorchester. Sends a duplicate of his last letter. Refers to the proposed seminary in Quebec, and gives a statement of the topics as to which particular regulations would be required. Suggests text-books on agriculture. 51

Halifax,
April 7.

To Dr. Morice. Hopes that mission at Lunenburg will be continued. Mr. Bisset, missionary at St. John, N.B., died 3rd March. Had contemplated sending Dr. Byles to succeed him, when a letter was received from the churchwardens, requesting the appointment of

Mr. Thomas Moore, of Hampsted, Long Island. Mr. Moore's character and career. Has written to Mr. Moore, and submits the matter to the Society. Encloses certificate regarding Mr. Foreman school master at Digby, whose bills on the Society have been protested. Inhabitants at Sissiboo and St. Mary's Bay have applied for a clergyman: a subscription being raised. Capt. Moody, who reads prayers on Sundays, will furnish a house; will himself apply to the Governor for a glebe. Requests that copies of Society's abstracts be sent. 53

[Memorandum.] Postscript to above letter recommended appointment of a school-master to Tracadie: about one hundred families there, three-fourths negroes; also thirty French families, and a priest. 56

Halifax,

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Sends copy of questions sent to the Clergy of the Diocese, to which they are to bring answers at his invitation on the 18th June. Wishes the Archbishop to be informed fully of his procedure, that he may interfere or give advice; shall have little difficulty with the clergy; but many are old and infirm, whereas active men are required. Refers to death of Mr. Bisset, and measures taken to replace him. Should have authority to fill vacancies, since a great evil hitherto has been the long delays is doing this: but the Society's consent to appointments should also be obtained. Explains with some detail the expence to missionaries of moving their families, which must be done by water. Only road, that between Halifax and Annapolis, is scarcely passable. Is preparing a map for the Society. Has obtained Sunday-school teachers in Halifax; hopes for the establishment of similar schools elsewhere; they are much needed. Mr. Toosey is at Quebec. Report that Mr. Mongan has gone to Ireland. 56

Halifax,
April 5.

To Lord Dorchester. Returns thanks for assurance of support. Approves of plan for one or more universities, with subordinate seminaries. Principal difficulty will be the procuring of funds. That and other difficulties in connection with the academy in Nova Scotia. Some interested persons wish it located at Halifax, an unsuitable place, contrary to the wish of the Assembly, who chose Windsor. Having been informed that Mr. Mongan has gone to Ireland, requests opinion on appointment of Rector and Commissary of Quebec. Hopes that report of his Lordship's ill-health is not true. 59

To Rashleigh & Co. Business matters. 61

To Mr. Cumberland. Will do all possible to fulfill the expectations of his friends, but great exertions demanded by the difficulties of the ecclesiastical situation. Has received Treasury orders concerning the £2,000 granted for building churches. States promises made by Governor Parr to eight settlements, the performance of which would be preferable to the proposal of building four churches. States the rules which will be observed in transmitting the certificates authorising the payment of this money. Explains the circumstances which make his own allowance scanty. 61

Halifax,

To Mr. Rowland. Has learned of his arrival at Shelburne. Recommends that all revenues of Shelburne be divided equally between him and Dr. Walter, incumbent of the other parish there. The money granted by the British Treasury for building churches will be issued

To the Rev. Mr. Wiswall. Has received answers to questions, and letter giving excuse for non-attendance at visitations because of infirmities, expence, &c. While wishing the welfare of the clergy, is distressed that bodily infirmities should prevent the performance of duty, and apprehensive as to how the Society may view such a situation. Expence will not be great, as he himself will provide diet, and obtain beds in private families. Temporal damage should not come in competition with a clergyman's duties. Should the clergy manifest lukewarmness to the effort now being made to remedy the deplorable state of religion in the province? 68

Halifax,
May 20.

To Lord Dorchester. Is glad to hear of his improved health. Returns thanks for the list of Protestant clergymen and school-masters of Quebec. Approves the allowance made Mr. Bethune, although he is of another communion. Is glad Messrs. Scott and Lucas were discountenanced: intends to be rigid in requiring letters of ordination and testimonials from strange clergymen, as his patents have made it his duty. Applications for clergymen will increase with accessions of settlers from the revolted colonies; to meet them seminaries should be established. It would be proper that the Jesuit and Sulpician estates should be appropriated to support a seminary and a Protestant bishop. To transfer them to Lord Amherst will cause discontent. States the qualifications necessary in a Commissary at Quebec, and asks if Mr. Toosey possesses them. If he does not, will apply to the Archbishop of Canterbury for a proper person. Wishes to know what settlements in Quebec most need missionaries and schoolmasters, that application may be made to the Society. Hopes that his Lordship's proposed tour to the west will confirm his health. Regards the sentence of Court Martial against Capt. Coffin as extraordinary: the same charge could be made against many others in the Navy. Recommends four Loyalists of merit: Isaac Wilkins, Maj. Thos. Barclay, Maj. Philip Cortland, Maj. Samuel Baynard. 69

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. A letter of condolence on the death of his daughter. 73

Halifax,
June 28.

To Dr. Morice. Is pleased at the appointment of Mr. Money to Lunenburg, which will soon be one of the most flourishing missions. Has taken steps to secure glebes at Lunenburg, Shelburne, Digby, and Parrsborough. The visitation is just ended. Has obtained information, some of which he lays before the Society. In Mr. Eagleson's mission at Cumberland but one family professing the Church of England: many Papists, a priest, and two mass-houses; the others sectaries, among whom fanaticism is prevalent. The salaries allowed Messrs. Neumann and Bailly for teaching French and German at Lunenburg not needed; they have no pupils, the inhabitants wishing their children taught English. The Loyalists settled in Campbelltown at Sheet Harbour have asked for a missionary and a schoolmaster in a memorial signed by 53 persons: there are 51 children. Has sent tracts, &c. Recommends appointment of schoolmaster. Loyalists of Clements township, settled in 1784, recommend in memorial signed by 44 persons, the appointment of Denis Casey as schoolmaster. Inhabitants of Amherst in Cumberland County have applied for a schoolmaster. Churches are to be built at Preston and at Rawdon: people of each place have applied for a missionary. Letters from Col. Fanning, Governor of the Island of St. John [Prince Edward Island], and Mr. Desbrisay, the only clergyman there, described the state of religion. Has urged the Governor to recover the Parliamentary grant of 1771 for building a church. Urges an additional allowance to Mr. Desbrisay, and that the schoolmaster's salary, now withdrawn, be restored. Has sent tracts, &c.: these are much needed. Mrs. Bisset asks that her young son be educated by the Society. Shall send Dr. Byles to St. John's, since Mr. Moore has declined the invitation. Suggests that the Society employ two clergymen from the revolted colonies, Mr. Bowden formerly assistant of Trinity Church, New York, now at Norwalk, Connecticut, and Mr. Wright, from Ireland, now teaching school in New York and officiating at a church in Brooklyn. Recommends his nephew, Arch'd P. Inglis, to be a missionary of the Society. Mr. Rowland arrived at Shelburne in May: hopes harmony may be restored there. The church has been begun at Shelburne. Has drawn up plans for all the new churches. 74

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Halifax,

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Gives thanks for copy of Gov. Parr's Instructions, also for the addition of £100 to his own salary. Encloses copy of printed account of visitation. Adds some details. Eleven clergymen assembled—all in province but two, one prevented by bad weather, other by poverty. The Rev. Mr. Peters, formerly of Connecticut, wrote urging the clergy to have nothing to do with a bishop appointed by the King, not elected by themselves. As much solemnity as possible given the visitation: a large confirmation at the same time. Visitation began Wednesday, June 18th: a sermon preached by a clergyman on each day. Describes the delivery of the Bishop's charge, examination of the clergy's credentials, presentation of address from the clergy, investigation of the state of the missions, measures to procure glebes. Religious state of the diocese unsatisfactory. Gave private exhortation to Mr. Eagleson of Cumberland, who had been represented as a drunkard. Presented a memorial to the Governor for land for a Bishop, but he cannot grant more than 1,000 acres. Instructions should be obtained from England, since grant should be of at least 30,000 acres. Also the Bishop's school, and glebe lands should be exempted from quit rent. Explains at length the controversy as to right of patronage between the Governor and the churchwardens and vestry: the Governor's claim applies at present to the church of Halifax, but it could be extended to many others. Inconveniences and discontent which result. This is one example of the military spirit which has always characterized the administration of the province. Suggests that an order be obtained from the King, confirming the provincial law, which gave the patronage to the parishes; by "Parish" to be understood "Churchwardens and Vestry." Is preparing to set out for Fredericton, N.B. 79

To Mr. Cumberland. Returns thanks for his (Cumberland's) work, the Observer. Explains the drafts made for his allowance. Is pleased to hear of a further grant of £1,000 for building churches. 3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

Halifax,
Sept. 13.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Returned last evening from tour, undertaken the beginning of July, covering 700 miles in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Visited Windsor (church a wretched hovel), Falmouth, Cornwallis (church a mere shell), Aylesford, Wilmot (church soon to be built), Granville (old and populous settlement; desires church and clergyman), Annapolis, and Digby. Here most of the inhabitants his old parishioners. The Rev. Mr. Veits, the churchwardens and vestry presented an address. Laid corner stone of new church. Crossed bay of Fundy to city of St. John, where Dr. Byles is giving satisfaction. Refused ordination of a Mr. James, one of Lady Huntington's preachers, but disapproved by her. Fears he may distract the congregation. Went to Fredericton, touching at Gagetown and Maugerville. At Fredericton had much conversation with General Carleton, the Governor, on the state of the Church. Induced him to accept principle that churchwardens and vestry should recommend ministers for appointment. Annual revenue from college reserve at Fredericton £100. Divine service performed for first time in new church there: 55 persons confirmed. Returned to St. John, held a visitation, confirmed 95 persons, and laid corner-stone of church. Churchwardens and vestry have recommended Dr. Byles to the Governor to be their rector. Crossed to Digby, and visited Sissiboo, "the worst road I ever travelled." People Loyalists, much scattered; no church, glebe, or parsonage. Confirmed 42 persons at Digby. Held confirmation at Annapolis. Steps have been taken towards building a church at Granville. At Cornwallis was invited, on the suggestion of the Dissenting minister, Mr. Graham, to use his meeting-house. Did so: confirmed 42 persons. At Windsor measures have been taken to build a church and establish the academy. Confirmed about 40 persons there. Inhabitants of Newport have opened subscription for a church. About £1,400 needed to assist old settlements in building churches. Did not visit Cumberland, as had intended, but wrote to magistrates. The excursion has done much good. Met everywhere with attention and politeness. Advertises to Archbishop's letter. Thanks for addition to salary. Is disappointed that no tutor has been obtained for the academy. May prevail on his nephew to take charge temporarily. Dr. Morice disapproves of appointment of Dr. Byles to St. John, because he holds chaplaincy of garrison at Halifax. Urges confirmation of the appointment: Dr. Byles has no duties at Halifax; has leave of absence; has appointed Mr. Houseall his deputy; and is greatly needed at St. John. [Remainder of letter is in paraphrase only]. Will appoint Mr. Cooke to be Commissary. Presbyterians of Shelburne having petitioned Mr. Pitt for £1,000 to build churches: advises against it. Some parts of Dr. Morice's last letter peevish. Suggests that Society's abstracts be prepared by some judicious persons not by the secretary. Paragraph from letter of Mr. Clarke published in the abstract, gave offence in New Brunswick. 87

Halifax,
Sept. 13.

To Lord Dorchester. Refers to his tour. Is glad Mr. Toosey's character is so respectable; some delay advisable, but if he continues satisfactory will appoint him Commissary. Introduction of foreign clergymen into Quebec had bad effect. Arrival of Mr. Tunstall at Montreal will help to obviate the evil. Recommends Mr. Toosey to take charge of congregation in Quebec City, receiving part of the salary of Mr. Montmollin, who is too old for duty; also a similar arrangement between Mr. Tunstall and Mr. De Lisle at Montreal; Mr. De Lisle might continue ministrations to German Protestants in French. Bad pronounciation of English by Messrs. Montmollin and De Lisle causes disgust. Found Gov. Carleton happy and successful in his government at Fredericton. Found many Loyalists there prosperous and contented. Proposes to visit Quebec next summer; also to visit Shelburne and other missions on the sea-coast next month.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Halifax,

To Mr. Cumberland. Having completed his tour, is able to give information regarding the old settlements. Describes with some details conditions in Windsor, (a miserable log church), Newport (no church), Falmouth (shell of a small church), Cornwallis (shell of a church, too small), Horton (churchmen few, no church), Aylesford (thinly inhabited, no church), Wilmot (many Loyalists settled here, a new church begun), Granville (old populous settlement, no church; annexed to Annapolis, but attendance of missionary difficult), Annapolis (shell of neat little church), Lunenburg (church much decayed; will be repaired), Cumberland (no church). Old settlers of province were poor and indolent; a spirit of industry introduced by the Loyalists. Now a general inclination to have divine worship regularly established. This should be promoted by Government: it will increase loyalty; but bounty must be bestowed with caution. As majority must pay subscriptions chiefly in labour and materials, a small sum necessary for each place. Recommends £200 each at Windsor, Newport, Cornwallis, Granville, and Cumberland. Has met with utmost politeness from all ranks and denominations throughout Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. His knowledge of Americans enabled him to act so as to remove prejudices entertained especially by Dissenters, against bishops. The provinces though poor, will, by the protection of Great Britain and the observation of the new Navigation Act, soon be flourishing; the people, except for some trifling circumstances, are perfectly contented. Describes the health, fertility, and resources of the country. Has been disappointed as to obtaining tutors for the academy; his nephew will take temporary charge. Expects to open the academy with about 30 scholars. Help is needed for building another church at Halifax. 96

Halifax,
Nov. 6.

To Dr. Morice. Has completed his tour, and requests that certain particulars be communicated to the Society. Found the missionaries properly employed. The state of the country, with respect to churches, deplorable. [Much of the information, being already catalogued under the preceding letters, is not here repeated]. The use of the church at Falmouth, built with a grant from the Provincial Assembly, is claimed by Dissenters. Wilmot is improperly annexed to Cornwallis, the distance being 40 miles. Is sending a map to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Found the missions of New Brunswick in a flourishing condition for so new a country. Mr. Andrews, missionary at St. Andrews, diligent, but weakened by a stroke of palsy. His wish that his son be appointed assistant seems reasonable. This mission contains 100 families. Mrs. Bisset still awaits an answer to application for her son. Returning to Digby, visited Sissiboo: on north side of Sissiboo river are 37 Loyalists families, on south side, called New Edinburgh, 17 families, all scattered; near New Edinburgh a large French settlement, with resident priest; on west side of St. Mary's Bay many Loyalists settled. Confirmed nearly 400 persons in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, besides 125 at Halifax in June. States the proposals of the people of Granville, which contains upwards of 200 families, one-third Loyalists, re church and missionary; if carried out, earnestly recommends a new mission for Granville, Wilmot, and western part of Aylesford. Missionaries of Cornwallis and Annapolis will still have extensive fields; attached to latter is new township of Clements, containing 60 families, almost all Loyalists. There are glebes at Granville and Wilmot. Building operations proposed at Cornwallis, Windsor, and Newport. Report of but one church family in Cumberland inaccurate; many such, and some classed as Methodists are church people in principle. Explains in detail the circumstances connected with the sending of Dr. Byles to St. John, of which the Society disapproves. He is now at Halifax and will remain, but is needed at St. John, where a Methodist minister is gaining ground fast. Is glad of Mr. Foreman's appointment as teacher at Digby. Recommends Mr. Casey for Clements. Has received memorial signed by 114 Loyalists of New Oswegatchy [now eastern Ontario], Canada, asking that the Rev. Mr. Bostwick be appointed missionary to them. Has left appointments of Messrs. Toosey and Tunstall at Quebec and Montreal in the hands of Lord Dorchester. Agrees that caution is necessary in selecting missionaries and comments thereon. The Academy was opened 1st inst., with his nephew acting President. A Mr. William Cochran, educated in Dublin, lately professor of languages of the College of New York, is applying to be appointed a missionary. Requests that the two sets of church-plate from the Archbishop be given to Trinity Church, St. John, and the church at Windsor. Refers to some peevish passages in his (Dr. Morice's) last letter which require no answer. 100

Halifax,
Nov. 20.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Academy opened, with his nephew, Mr. A. P. Inglis, in charge. As the Provincial Act required the President and principal tutor to be clergymen of the Church of England, admitted him to Deacon's Orders. Describes the preliminary examination, &c., and the ordination,—his first,—which took place in St. Paul's Church, Halifax, on October 19th. Drew up regulations for the Academy, approved by the other Governors. Opened the Academy at Windsor on November 1st: 17 pupils entered; there are now 20. Gov. Parr has written to Lord Sydney on the subject of patronage. States the arguments for the churchwardens and vestry, and for the Lieut. Governor. Agrees himself with the Attorney-General that the latter claim is not well founded. "It would be very dangerous in this country to broach such a doctrine as that the laws of the province which have been ratified by the Crown may be dispensed with." The vestry of Halifax are requesting Dr. Breynon either to resign or to return to his mission. Wishes the Archbishop to send out a worthy clergyman; states qualifications necessary; a good preacher and able man needed to counteract activities of Presbyterians and Methodists. Requests his Grace's support in a proposal to the Society for a new mission at Granville; suggests Mr. Inglis as missionary. Earnestly requests that no missionaries be sent who are not well and favourably known. Some unsatisfactory persons have been sent to Canada, as Mr. Langhorne and Mr. Bryant. Refers to application of William Cochran. Also to disposal of Jesuit estates in Canada. The Blacks in Nova Scotia have been in general indolent and improvident, the natural consequence of their former state, and sudden emancipation. Considers that slaves should be well treated, and given the opportunity of winning freedom, but should not be suddenly emancipated. Inhabitants of Island of St. John refuse to subscribe for a church till money granted therefor be returned by Patterson, the former governor, who is alleged to have misappropriated it. 110

December.

To Dr. Porteus, Bishop of London. Mr. John Mitchell, who carries this, says he was ordained by a previous Bishop of London, officiated in Maryland, and, being a Loyalist, moved to western Canada. Having lost his credentials, he wishes to obtain copies, and to be appointed a missionary. Expresses pleasure at the transfer of Dr. Porteus to London. States the good results from the appointment of a Bishop in America. Refers to the need of caution in the choice of missionaries; to the opening of the Academy; and to the establishment of Sunday-schools. Has appointed a Black as schoolmaster to the settlement of his race at Tracadie, and given him tracts, &c. Explains the charge against Mr. Patterson of embezzling or misapplying £3,000 voted for church-building, &c., in the Island of St. John, which should be refunded. Recommends allowances to Mr. Desbrisay, the clergyman there, and for a schoolmaster. 117

Dec. 12.

To Mr. Cooke. Is sending commission as Commissary of New Brunswick. Trusts that the appointment will have good results. Recommends that the Clergy be convened annually. Discusses the terms of glebes: in England they are not held in fee simple, but in abeyance; does not approve of the system of empowering the justices to hold them. Refers to the Society's disapproval of the removal of Dr. Byles to St. John. The Methodists are making rapid progress there. Personal matters. 121

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Announces the appointment of Mr. Cooke as Commissary for New Brunswick, and suggests the granting of a salary of £100. The Academy and the Sunday-schools are succeeding well. Diocesan affairs much improved during the past year. Of the eleven missionaries of the province, four are diligent, three indifferent, and four harmful. Supremely important that missionaries sent out should be fit for their office. The absence of a missionary has caused the utmost confusion at St. John. If the Society still objects to Dr. Byles, Mr. Cochran might be sent. Suggests Mr. Inglis for Granville, and a clergyman from the revolted colonies for Sissiboo. 124

Dec. 20.

[Memorandum.] Wrote to Dr. Morice, announcing appointment of Thomas Brownsprigg schoolmaster to the Blacks at Tracadie. 126

To Lord Dorchester. Announces the opening of the Academy; hopes in time to have agriculture taught. Care taken to inculcate principles of loyalty, and of attachment to the Sovereign. Wishes to know whether Lord Dorchester is coming to Nova Scotia, in order to decide with regard to his own visit to Quebec. Also wishes advice as to the fixing of Mr. Toosey at Quebec, and of Mr. Tunstall at Montreal. 127

- Halifax,
Jan. 22. To Col. Gab. Ludlow [Mayor of St. John]. Has been informed, by Mr. Whitlock, that he himself has been accused of immoral conduct when in St. John last summer. Dr. Calef said to be the instigator: his only motive would be the opposition (of the Bishop) to the Methodist teachers whom he (Calef) wished to introduce into the Church. Suspects that Peters, formerly a missionary of Connecticut, and Sam Hake are responsible. A deposition of denial has been taken. Denounces the calumny, and requests investigation. [The following note is added.] "Not this, but the other that follows Gov. Carleton's letter, was sent to Col. Ludlow." 131
- Halifax,
Jan. 22. To Governor Carleton. Requests that he assist Col. Ludlow in the investigation of the slander which has been circulated in St. John. 133
- Halifax,
Jan. 22. To Col. Ludlow. States the information he has received of a calumnious charge of immoral conduct circulated against himself at St. John. Its absurdity makes a formal refutation ridiculous. Suspects that Sam. Hake is at the bottom of the affair. Requests a searching scrutiny that the villians responsible may be restrained. 134
- Halifax,
July 9. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Repeats the account of the slander, with some additional details. Dr. Calef is a physician from New England, a weak, "enthusiastical" man, who was offended because one of Lady Huntington's preachers—whom she patronizes—was not ordained. Hake, who is supposed to be responsible, is a commissary to the garrison of St. John. He and Peters were considered the fabricators of the falsehoods published against him [Bishop Inglis] in London. Peters had attempted to get the clergy of the province to recommend him to be Bishop. Lord Dorchester leaves adjustment of matters in Canada till his [the Bishop's] arrival: requests advice. Mr. Eagleson's conduct has greatly improved. 135
- Halifax,
Jan. 27. To Mr. Cumberland. Recommends the bearer, Michael Wallace, a member of the Assembly. Governor Parr has allowed £100 from the church grant to Annapolis, and an additional £100 to Shelburne. During last year five churches begun, of which three are covered in, and two others repaired. Will endeavour to have Assembly's allowance of £400 a year for the Academy made permanent. If successful, will apply to the Government for further help. 137
- Halifax,
March 2. To Lord Dorchester. Is distressed at news of King's illness. Will go to Quebec at earliest opportunity. 139
- Halifax,
March 14. To Col. Ludlow. Dr. Calef has admitted his attempt to obtain perjured evidence against his [the Bishop's] character, and offered to make a public declaration, authorises Col. Ludlow, Judge Putnam, and Attorney-General Bliss to act as they deem best. 139
- Halifax,
March 17. To Dr. Morice. Inhabitants of Granville have taken steps towards building churches and maintaining a clergyman; they number 1,031, more than one-third Church people, and of these four-fifths are Loyal emigrants. In the eastern part the Dissenters will surrender their meeting-house to the Established Church; in the middle part a subscription for a church opened; in western part inhabitants, though not numerous, will probably build a church. A church will be built in Wilmot, where there are 500 inhabitants, mostly Loyalists. A missionary for these townships and western Aylesford will have care of about 2,000 souls. The inhabitants desire Mr. Inglis. Dr. Byles is pleased at his appointment to St. John. It is right that the people be impressed that the Society's bounty is not permanent. Proper superintendence can be maintained over the schoolmasters at Clements and Campbelltown. Not many Germans at Clements. "Never was able to see the good policy of sending foreign missionaries or schoolmasters to the colonies." Again recommends Wm. Cochran. A Mr. Cheever, formerly an independent minister at Liverpool, wishes to be admitted to Holy Orders. Inhabitants of Liverpool have applied for a schoolmaster; those of Chester, 133 persons, for a missionary and schoolmaster. At Cumberland a subscription has been opened for a church, and the people will contribute to support a clergyman. 141

Halifax,
March 18.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Is forwarding, under cover to Lord Sydney, various papers regarding diocesan business. Is obliged for appointment of Dr. Byles to St. John. The cancellation of his former appointment encouraged Dr. Calef in his slander. States how that affair stands. Refers to the news of the King's illness. Will use the prayer ordered by the Privy Council. The Legislature, now sitting, will probably adopt some measures re the Academy. 144

To Col. Ludlow. Accepts Dr. Calef's recantation, and forgives him. Sees no necessity for publishing it, but requires a signed copy. Thanks his friends for their exertions, which were necessary in the cause of religion. The Assembly has granted in perpetuity £400 for the Academy, to be levied on the revenue from sugars; the Lieut. Governor, Bishop and others are constituted Governors and made a corporation; the institution is to be called King's College. 146

Halifax,
April 20.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Explains the action of the Assembly in regard to the Academy, which is to be erected into a College when matters are ripe for it. Consent of Governor, Lieut. Governor and Bishop necessary for the validity of regulations; President to be a clergyman of the Church of England; grant of £500 to purchase land near Windsor on which the edifice may be erected. Is much pleased. Hopes the Home Government will give assistance to the Academy, the great importance of which is pointed out. 147

Halifax,
April 20.

To Mr. Cumberland. Announces the Assembly's action re the Academy. "No other British Colony in North America ever did so much for promoting literature." Hopes for assistance from the Home Government, which will strengthen their hands and increase attachment to Government. Explains the importance of the Academy to the Government. At the quarterly visitation next week the Governor will fix on a site. Requests assistance in obtaining a grant for the building, which may cost £3,000. The number of students is 30, including some midshipmen, and the institution is flourishing. 149

To Governor Macormick [of Cape Breton]. Importance of the diffusion of Church principles. Will be glad to meet wishes in this respect in Cape Breton. Explains the condition of the Academy. Halifax, Aug. 27.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Has arrived from Quebec, after a passage of nine days and an absence of four months. Wrote from Quebec giving account of what he had done in the Island of St. John, where he stayed ten days. Gives a detailed description of conditions in Canada, and of his actions there. At Quebec but few English, surrounded by French Catholics; have no church, no vestry, no churchwardens; have services in the Recollet Church after the Roman Catholic services are finished. The clergyman, Mr. Montmollin, speaks very bad English. Held a meeting of principal gentlemen of the congregation: at their request urged Lord Dorchester to appropriate the Recollet or some other church. He refused. Steps taken towards building a church. Informed Mr. Montmollin that an English preacher should be settled at Quebec. Visited Three Rivers, where are about 24 Protestant families, and a clergyman, Mr. Veysiere, who speaks English very badly. As there was a great dearth in the province gave 100 loaves to the poor—one-half to the Grand Vicar, Mr. St. Onge, for Catholics. Visited a Protestant settlement of 15 families at the River Du Loup; also Mr. Doty's mission at Sorel, now William Henry. At Montreal the congregation will give £100 a year to an English preacher: Mr. Tunstall to be settled there. The clergyman, Mr. De Lisle, is a sensible man, but poor speaker of English. Dissenters are numerous, but will join the Anglican Church. Gave 100 loaves to be distributed as at Three Rivers. Confirmed 170 persons. Visited the Island of Montreal, the Indian settlement of Caughnawaga, and the Cedars. Returned to Quebec. Mr. Toosey appointed minister, and churchwardens and a vestry selected. Project of building a church stopped because land belonged to Jesuit's Estate. Had induced congregations of Montreal and Three Rivers to memorialise Lord Dorchester for a Jesuit and a Recollet church, which he granted. Congregation of Quebec did likewise, but result not known. Held visitation at Quebec August 5th: all clergy attended except Mr. Bryan. Mr. Stuart came from Kingston and Mr. Langhorne from Ernest Town. Describes proceedings of the visitation. Appointed Mr. Stuart Commissary for the Western Settlements [i.e., the later Upper Canada]. Issued a set of injunctions covering points on which complaints had been made. Wrote to inhabitants of Niagara, "consisting of many thousands of Protestants," who had made application, promising a clergyman if they would fulfil the requisitions. 154 summary of the report he has sent to the Archbishop regarding his tour in Canada [some of the topics referred to are not in the letter catalogued above]. Has hopes of better things in Quebec. Gives thanks for Lord Dorchester's kindness and support. 160

Halifax,
Oct. 9.

To Lord Hood. Inadequate provision for religious welfare of the seamen of the Navy at Halifax. Suggest that religious books and tracts be provided on ship-board, and that a resident chaplain be fixed at Halifax. The 4d. per day deducted from the wages of every seaman for the purpose would afford a competent maintenance. Sir R. Hughes approves of the scheme. 162

Halifax,
Oct. 16.

To Dr. Morice. Refers to his visit to Canada. Explains proposal that part of salary of Mr. Veysièrè be applied to the support of an English clergyman at Three Rivers. Refers to events in Nova Scotia during his absence: Mr. Twining arrived at Cornwallis—he has since married, and been instituted to the parish of Cornwallis and cure of Horton; Mr. Wiswall has removed to Wilmot—as he is old and infirm, he refuses to serve Granville also, as had been the design; Mr. Eagleson of Cumberland again charged with intemperance and neglect of duty; church-building at a standstill; people of Granville discontented. Set out for Windsor Sept. 11th. Visited Granville: population about 1,500 (not 1,031 as formerly estimated) and increasing rapidly; a set of enthusiastic anabaptists, called New Lights, causing much disorder. Besides Christ Church, a former Dissenter meeting-house given up by them to off-set the work of the fanatics, two more churches will be built. Recommends that a mission be established in Granville under Mr. Inglis, and endowed with one of the three new allowances of £75 from the Society. These were intended for Messrs. Twining, Shreve, and Rowland, but the last two have Government allowances. Mr. Wiswall will have Wilmot and Aylesford, containing about 600 and 300 inhabitants; churches will be built; has himself given 200 acres in Aylesford towards a glebe. Put Mr. Fox, the Society's schoolmaster, in possession of the school lands at Cornwallis. Held investigation into the conduct of Mr. Eagleson: he has been suspended, and is to appear next June to vindicate his character. [Memoranda only are given of the remainder of the letter.] Recommends allowance to Mr. Bailey for expences in defending his glebe. Has written to Mr. Cooke re new mission in New Brunswick. Mr. Arnold applies to be settled in Sussex Vale. Wm. Sutherland opened school at Campbelltown on May 26th with 17 scholars; Thomas Brownspriggs has 23 negro scholars at Tracadie; a schoolmaster should be appointed at Campobello, where are 88 children. Churches at Digby, Shelburne, Manchester, Parrsborough and Preston covered in. 163

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Requests his interposition for establishing of mission of Granville. The Governor's right of patronage should be decided: he is inducting clergymen to livings without invitation from the Bishop; requires registrations of livings to be made to him, although that right belongs to the Bishop by the King's Patent; and denies right of the Society to send clergymen to parishes without his consent. [Here the copy of the letter ends abruptly]. 169

Halifax,
Oct. 24.

To Governor Carleton. Is sending his observations on the Marriage Act, a copy of which had been sent by the Governor. Magistrates should not be authorized to publish the banns during divine service. They should not be permitted to solemnize marriages except in cases of necessity. 170

Halifax,
Oct. 15.

To Governor Parr. Announces the institution of Wm. Twining to the Church of St. John in Cornwallis. 172

Halifax,
Nov. 21.

To the Bishop of London. Preached in the course of visitation, in Halifax, Island of St. John, and Quebec on the King's recovery. Brought the news to the last two places. Encloses observations on the New Brunswick marriage bill. It is very imperfect, and injurious to the Church. A useful bill brought forward in New Brunswick to constitute the rector, churchwardens, and vestry a body corporate. 172

Halifax,
Nov. 30.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Returns thanks for assurance of support to his recommendations. Gov. Parr has rectified the irregularity of the induction of Mr. Twining to Cornwallis. Right of presentation still undecided. Congratulates the Archbishop on his successful resistance to Lord Stanhope's bill. Encloses account of religious, literary and political state of Canada. Likewise an account of the scrutiny into Mr. Eagleson's conduct. It is desired that a clergyman be sent out to succeed Dr. Breynton in Halifax. The Governors will appoint Mr. Cochran, President of the Academy, where there are now 33 pupils: 70 acres of land purchased, and a stone-quarry discovered. Importance of the Academy in a country "where the old inhabitants have little sense either of religion, order or loyalty." Wishes Government assistance through the interposition of the Archbishop. Refers to the wish of a Mr. Parker, of Boston, to receive a degree of D.D. from an English university. Encloses a paper by Mr. Monk, late Attorney-General of Quebec, concerning the Sulpician estate. 174

Halifax,
Dec. 4.

To Dr. Morice. Thanks for statement of salaries paid by Government for missionaries. It was necessary, as all the money was not being drawn. Refers to appointment of Mr. Twining to Cornwallis. Again recommends Mr. Inglis to be appointed to Granville, since Mr. Cochran is to be President of the Academy. The proposal of fixing missionaries only on the sea-coast not good. [A paragraph subsequently cancelled, refers to Sissiboo, where the people begin to think seriously of building a church, as an example of the necessity of having matters prepared for the reception of the missionary in a new mission]. Refers to act of New Brunswick incorporating churchwardens, &c. Another missionary should be sent for New Brunswick; or Mr. Hubbard of New Haven might be invited. Encloses copies of his charge to the clergy in 1788. 177

Halifax,
Dec. 4.

To Lord Hawkesbury. Explains the situation of the Academy. Asks for interposition to procure money from Parliament for a building. The natural advantages of Nova Scotia. In a few years grain will be exported; a sloop with wheat sent to Connecticut this autumn. Has instituted a Society for promoting agriculture. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick abound with rock, or bird's eye maple, which makes beautiful furniture. Is sending a tea-table made from it to his Lordship. 180

- Dec. 12. [Memoranda.] Wrote to Lord Dorchester, Gov. Carleton, and Mr. Finlay, enclosing plan of the Society for promoting agriculture. 186
March 6. To Lord Dorchester. Has already done all possible to obtain a worthy clergyman for the people of Nassau [the district from the Trent River to Long Point, Lake Erie, in the present province of Ontario]. The report of the Council of Quebec on education seems good. Difficulties in the way. The Canadians, while possessing several good qualities, appear to have the same blind attachment to their ritual and to the Pope as the French had when Canada first settled: just as the people of New England retain puritanical principles; though these things have long since been thrown aside in the respective parent states. The light of science is the most likely means to expand the minds of the Canadians. The exclusion of the teaching of theology inadvisable: in the British Universities its study is not compulsory. The Church of England in Quebec City cannot appear respectable or flourish without a decent church building of its own. 186
- Halifax,
March 6. To Brooke Watson & Co. Personal and business matters. 188
- Halifax,
March 15. To Dr. Morice. Proposes to visit Shelburne, Lunenburg, Cumberland, and the western missions of the province. Churches will be built in Aylesford, Wilmot, and Granville, where Christ Church will be enlarged. There has been delay in building at Sissiboo. Inhabitants of Clement about 80 families, mostly Loyalists, wish a missionary, and money to build a church: thinks missionaries of Digby and Annapolis may minister to them. Gov. Carleton and Mr. Cooke consider that the new mission in New Brunswick should be at Nashwalk. Believes that Mr. Arnold will have a title for Sussex Vale from the Society for promoting Christianity among the Indians, lately transferred from Massachusetts to New Brunswick. Has received a letter from Col. Butler and R. Hamilton of Niagara: inhabitants of that district 1,000 men, 700 women, 1,400 children, about one-half professing the Church of England; undertake to pay for an Anglican clergyman £100 a year; a general subscription for churches and clergymen has been begun, but the Protestant clergymen, first to arrive, of whatever denomination, will be the first provided for. Requests that an active clergyman be sent. Has received a memorial from the townships of Augusta and Elizabeth Town, in Lunenburg or New Oswegatchie [a district comprising that part of the present province of Ontario from the Quebec boundary to the Gananoque river], asking for Mr. Bostwick or some other clergyman; they number about 1,500; are 'alarmed at the prospect of enthusiasm, which begins to spread its baleful influence among them.' Mr. Bostwick willing to go to Canada, but wishes to know the salary, and whether, like other loyal clergymen from New England, he will be allowed £50 for moving. 188
- Halifax,
March 16. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Is sending a copy of his charge to the clergy of Quebec: the ignorance of the King's Printer here, a Hessian soldier, causes many errors. May be invited to New - York to assist in consecrating a bishop. Again refers to hope of Government assistance for the Seminary. Governor Parr's indifference to it causes difficulties. 191

- Halifax,

To Mr. Bostwick. Wishes him to settle in Lunenburg above Quebec. Thinks he may rely on receiving £50 a year and £50 moving expenses from the Society. 193

To Mr. Macdonell [later first Roman Catholic Bishop of Kingston, Upper Canada.] Acknowledging his letter of Dec. 9th. Approves of plan proposed, and will take certain steps to forward it. 194
- Halifax,
April 13.
To Mr. Dempster. Refers to the Rev. Alex. Macdonell, with whom he had several interviews last summer. His proposal to divide the Popish Bishopric of Quebec and appoint a native of Great Britain to one of the new Sees, appears rational. Describes state of Canada: bigotry and ignorance prevail, Canadians as much a separate people as at the conquest, acting Bishop and leading clergy averse to diffusion of information. Mr. Macdonell complains of these things. By his plan the Jesuit's estate, worth £1,200 a year, and that of the Sulpicians, £10,000 a year, could be appropriated to literature and education without giving offence. If another Popish bishop appointed, Mr. Macdonell should not be overlooked. Returns thanks for his (Mr. Dempster's) exertions in behalf of the Loyalists. 195
- April 14.
To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Is sending copy of report on education by the Legislative Council of Quebec, a result of his visit last summer. It contains a curious letter from the Popish bishop of Quebec. Is sending also a letter to Mr. Dempster, M.P., as to a proposal by Mr. Macdonell. Approves of the proposal. The only objection is that it would increase the number of Popish bishops: but one of the present coadjutor-bishops might be acting bishop of the See. 197
- April 15.
To Lord Dorchester. Comments on the Legislative Council's report on education. Lord Dorchester's wish to unite the Canadians with the Protestants seems impracticable, unless by adopting the proposal of a Catholic clergyman in Quebec. He says that Mr. Baille, the coadjutor, and other Catholics of liberal sentiments are injured and discouraged: Bishop Hubert is weak and narrow, entirely influenced by his Secretary and Grand Vicar at Quebec, two hot-headed men. The proposal is to divide the Bishopric of Quebec into two Sees, one to be given to Mr. Baille, (Bishop Hubert retiring on an allowance), the other to a native of His Majesty's European dominions. It is said that the majority of Romish clergy are in favour of the change; if so, the proposal should come from them, but they are afraid to act. The number of Popish bishops would not be increased, but there would be two acting bishops instead of one, which might be an advantage. 198
- Halifax,
May 5.
To Mr. Cumberland. Is thankful for the hint that encouragement to American-bred divines may cause murmuring. Explains at length that there has been no occasion for murmurs. States in some detail the history and present condition of the seminary, which is designed to prevent the importation of American divines and American politics. 200

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Halifax,
May 6.

To Dr. Morice. Is pleased that the Society concurs in arrangements proposed for Granville, Wilmot, and Aylesford. Mr. Inglis will remove to Granville. It will be prudent for the Society hereafter to consult him (the Bishop) regarding removal of missionaries. Has received church-plate for Windsor and St. John, and books for himself and Mr. Wiswall. Makes suggestions as to Mr. Inglis's library. 204

May 20.

To Mr. Grenville [William Wyndham Grenville, at this time Home Secretary]. Replies to a letter signifying the King's wish for a statement respecting the clergy of the Established Church, their salaries and emoluments, the ministers or priests of other denominations, and the necessary means for promoting religion. Gives some details. [They are to be found in the next letter.] 205

May 20.

To Mr. Grenville. In answer to the same request. From various causes the clergy receive little support. In the Province of Quebec are eight Anglican clergymen, three of whom are foreigners, supported by the Government and the S.P.G.; there are three Dissenting ministers, one having a Government salary; and upwards of two hundred Romish clergy, supported by tithes and contributions. Refers to his Observations on the religious, literary and political state of the province, transmitted to the Archbishop of Canterbury, for further details. In New Brunswick are six missionaries supported by Government and the Society, and one Dissenting minister. In Nova Scotia are thirteen clergymen supported by Government and, except one, by the Society; seven Presbyterian ministers and a multitude of Methodist teachers and sectaries. In Cape Breton are two clergymen, and in the Island of St. John one. On his return from a visit to a distant part of the diocese will give a fuller answer. A church-building is needed at Quebec, and clergymen at Niagara and Detroit. Recommends the need of a building for the Academy to the consideration of the Government. A churchyard should be provided from the parade around the Church at Halifax. 206

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Is pleased to learn that the seminary will be made a royal foundation with exhibitions. Suggestions as to the Board of Governors to be created by charter. Cannot yet form a judgment as to the efficiency of Mr. Cochran, who is now at Windsor. Lands should be appropriated for the seminary and for the bishops of the See, exempt from the usual conditions. Is glad that the right of patronage will be adjusted, and a churchyard allowed at Halifax. Discusses the qualifications necessary in the man to be appointed rector of Halifax. The appointment of a bishop for Canada will be a great benefit: Peters should not receive it; recommends Mr. Boucher. Mr. Toosey has been appointed Commissary at Quebec. Mr. Inglis has gone to Granville. Dissenters near Annapolis may give up a meeting-house to the Church of England. Refers to his answer to Mr. Grenville re the religious state of the province. 210

Halifax,
July 7.

To Dr. Morice. Has just returned from Cumberland: visited Wilmot and Aylesford also. With Mr. Twining and Mr. Shreve investigated charges against Mr. Eagleson, who offered no defence. His suspension continued, and the mission declared vacant. Recommends that a small pension be allowed Mrs. Eagleson. Found a

- clergyman named Jarvis Jones at Cumberland: requests information as to his character. In Sackville, Dorchester, Hillsborough, Hopewell and Moncton are nearly 300 families: Anglicans most numerous, several Lutherans, about 70 French families: inhabitants of Westmorland ( part of Cumberland before the creation of the province of New Brunswick) and Amherst willing to build a church, but need Government assistance. Recommends arrangements for schoolmasters in those townships. Inhabitants of Country Harbour, 30 families with 67 children wish a schoolmaster. In neighbourhood of Preston, where a new church is completed, are 600 inhabitants, of whom 150 are blacks. 213
- July 12. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Refers to scrutiny into conduct of Mr. Eagleson: describes method followed, and care taken not to alarm public opinion. Christ Church at Windsor has been raised: recommends an allowance for it, and for churches at Horton, Cornwallis, and Amherst. Mr. Cochran doing well at the Academy: will make a visitation there with Mr. Strange, the new Chief Justice. Fears the prospect of war with Spain will prevent a grant towards building a college. If grant be made, proposes to move to Windsor during building operations: it is the most suitable place for the episcopal residence. Suggests purchase of land there for such residence. Proposes to live himself on his own property at Aylesford. Requests advice as to whether the clergy of the diocese should take out new licenses. 216
- July 19. A Postscript to the above deals further with the suggestion of purchasing land at Windsor. 220

- Halifax,
Sept. 8. To Mr. Grenville. In answer to letters of Dec. 16th and June 5th, gives a detailed account of the "State of the Church of England in the three provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia." Quebec has population estimated at 145,000, of whom 120,000 are Catholics, who have 147 parishes; 25,000 are Protestants, 20,000 being in the New Settlements. Refers to the degraded state of the Church of England, the appropriation of the Jesuit's Church at Montreal, the unsatisfactory ministrations of foreign clergymen. Recommends the appropriation of a church at Quebec; the deduction of £100 from the salary of the Rev. Mr. Leysspere, of Three Rivers, for an English clergyman; the enforcement of residence on the chaplain of the Quebec Garrison; the establishment of an English school in each parish, and of a college at Quebec, with both Protestant and Romish professors; checking the unjustifiable methods of the Romish clergy in making proselytes, of which an example is given; restraining the pompous processions which are offensive to Protestants and nourish superstition among Catholics and the requirement, after a definite period, that all pleadings and public documents be in English only, and all persons holding civil office be proficient in English. The inhabitants of the New Settlements are mostly Loyalists and Protestants, have few churches or schools, but a glebe in each township, and have three clergymen, settled at Cornwall, Kingston and Ernest Town. Another has been sent to Augusta. Recommends that provision be made for clergymen at Niagara and Detroit, and that a seminary be established and endowed. In New Brunswick, settled by Loyal emigrants, the Church is in as good a state as can be expected. Each township has a glebe, is erected into a parish when it has a regular clergyman; there are five churches and more needed. Recommends the establishment of an itinerant missionary at Sackville. Nova Scotia, the most valuable province in British America, had an estimated population of 14,000 before the Rebellion, now 30,000, although many who came in 1783 have since returned to the revolted colonies. Most of the missions are constituted parishes. The act establishing the Church is rather injurious than serviceable, and there are too many Dissenters in the Assembly to make probable a remedy. Refers to loss, or injudicious location, of glebes; the need of a churchyard at Halifax; the dispute over patronage; the good results from the grant for church-building (six churches are finished, four are building, and two have been enlarged); the need of appropriations for churches at Windsor, Horton, Cornwallis, and Amherst, and of clergymen for the district between Halifax and Canso, and for Sissiboo. A foundation for supporting the clergy by a moderate tax would be desirable, but difficult to obtain. The next best thing is to allot good glebes. But does not wish the clergy to be wholly independent of the parent state. Explains next the condition and importance of the seminary at Windsor. Has taken care that principles of loyalty be strongly inculcated. Encloses list of students. Makes suggestions regarding the royal charter; representation in the Assembly; personnel of the Board of Governors; and visitational power of the Bishop. Besides a president, and the master of the English school, two professors are necessary. Discusses the subjects of the curriculum, the salaries of professors, and the endowment of the college with lands. Suggests the propriety of allotting lands for the use of his successors in the diocese. Describes the plan for the College edifice that he has drawn: one wing will be built, a superstructure of wood on a solid foundation of stone. 222

Sept. 11.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. [Memoranda only.] Informed the Archbishop of his visit to Shelburne, consecration of the new church, and confirmation of 284 persons, and of his indisposition while visiting Lunenburg, where he confirmed about 30 persons. Is glad of answer respecting participation in consecrating an American bishop—had already decided it was impracticable. Recapitulated substance of letter to Mr. Grenville. Endeavoured to remove objections to exhibitions at the English universities for the local college. 234

Halifax,
Nov. 5.

To Dr. Morice. Visited Shelburne and consecrated the church—the first ever consecrated in British America. Gives population returns of Shelburne as derived from careful investigation; 202 heads of families and 50 bachelors, taxables, and many people too poor to be taxed, in all 1,500 to 2,000 souls professing the Church of England; the total population of the township is about 3,500 whites and 1,162 blacks, of whom 350 are in Birch Town, where Col. Bluck teaches 44 black children. There are 12 schools in the town of

Shelburne, with 257 scholars, but it is supposed there are 770 children in the town. Gives returns for more westerly settlements: Barrington has 160 families (6 adhere to the church), led away by Methodists and New Lights; Argyle has 70 English (20 are Church people), and 40 Acadian families, occasionally visited by a priest; Yarmouth has 150 families (12 are Anglican), mostly Dissenters, who have a meeting-house but no minister. Recommends that these settlements be visited by the missionaries at Shelburne, Messrs. Rowland and Walter, alternately. Visited Lunenburg, and urged the vestry to repair the church and build a parsonage. Attempted to compose some differences between Mr. Money and a part of the congregation. Recommends that a supply of books be sent to Mr. Money. Visited Windsor: describes the College lot, and the new church. Visited Aylesford, Wilmot (the new church is raised, but its covering retarded for want of workmen), and Granville. At Granville found perfect harmony between Mr. Inglis and his congregations, Christ church in the upper district enlarged, the middle church raised, and preparations made for building the lower church. Returned and consecrated St. Mary's Church, Aylesford, on the 10th October. Describes it, "the neatest, best finished church in the province." The rapid and excellent work due to James Morden, whom he recommends to be a member of the Society. Has obtained an excellent glebe there. Expects that Granville, Aylesford and Wilmot will be made parishes. Recommends the appointment of a schoolmaster for Aylesford. Objects to a deduction from Mr. Veit's salary. 235

Halifax,
Nov. 10.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Is uneasy at difficulties in procuring a successor to Dr. Breynton: suspects interference from interested persons. In Halifax there are two active parties: the Governor and one or two others wish Mr. Weeks to continue in the parsonage; those who send their children to the school of Mr. Wright (who succeeded Mr. Cochran) wish him to remain assistant to Mr. Weeks. The Governor refuses to induct a rector presented by the parish, and many of the people to support one presented by the Governor. Has urged the Vestry to apply again to the Archbishop, but is told they have resolved to let matters stand. "A few warm men led the Vestry; the serious and most numerous part of the congregation is disgusted; and the Dissenting meeting-houses are crowded. 240

Dec. 20.

To Brooke Watson & Co. Personal and business matters. 241

To Mr. Grenville. Sends a second list of students at the Academy. That Institution "flourishes, and is in good reputation." The work of quarrying stone for the building has begun. Three Popish priests have lately arrived, making ten in the province. Though wishing liberty of conscience to all, cannot regard with pleasure this indication of an increase of Popery, which should be regarded with a jealous eye in Protestant States. There is no law to prevent priests and Dissenting ministers from entering the province. The dispute over the right of presentation has a bad effect on the Established Church. 242

Dec. 20.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Encloses letter to Mr. Grenville. Has received the answer expected from the Vestry of Halifax, though couched in kind language. Their explanations are of no force. Has not accepted Dr. Breynton's resignation, that there may not be a lapse. "The parish resembles an Independent congregation much more than a regular parish of the Church of England, and the example may be contagious." Weeks is a mere cypher. The Church declines fast, while Roman Catholics and others are gaining ground. Refers to the death of Dr. Chandler at Elizabeth Town. 244

Jan. 5.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Refers to the news of peace with Spain. Also to his correspondence with Mr. Grenville. Acknowledges hints that Mr. Weeks was applying for appointment to the Church of Halifax. The business was kept secret from him. Discusses the subject of presentation to benefices: the evil results of entrusting that to the Governors has been witnessed already in the revolted colonies and are now repeated here. Mr. Weeks is disqualified, but is to be forced into the office because he is a Free Mason. If the people are not to have the right, they would be better pleased to see it vested in the Bishop. Suggests that the Vestry's application to the Archbishop be considered as standing, that a worthy man and good preacher be sent over, and that Mr. Grenville write to the Governor in his behalf, and on the general subject of presentation. Is glad that some allowance can be made to Mrs. Eagleson. Wishes to know whether it is customary in England for the clergy to take out licenses from a new bishop. His health is improving after the fatigue of last summer. 247

[Memorandum.] Wrote to Lord Dorchester. 251

Halifax,
Feb. 22.

To Mr. Hubbard. Offers him an appointment to the mission in Cumberland. 251

March 7.

To Dr. Morice. From the account he (Dr. Morice) has given, Mr. Jones is unfit for the mission of Cumberland. Has written to Mr. Hubbard, late missionary at New Haven, Connecticut, to remove there. Has written again to Mr. Bostwick about removing to Canada. Mr. Price has gone to his mission of Nashwalk. Refers to various matters: appointment of schoolmasters at Campo Bello, Cumberland, Amherst and Aylesford; application to make Mr. Arnold, of Sussex Vale, a missionary of the Society; application for a clergyman from the settlement at River Miramichi (200 families,—40 professing the Church of England, and some Catholics promising support); rental of part of his glebe by Mr. Money; the need of a clergyman at Niagara; the death of Dr. Lort; a mistake in the last abstract re the population of Shelburne; the contribution of parishes in Aylesford, Wilmot and Granville. Requests that for schoolmasters at Aylesford a man be procured who understands psalmody and chanting the service. Proposes to introduce this custom, and to restore the English psalm-tunes in place of those brought in from New England. 252

Halifax,
April 5

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. About 1,000 tons of excellent stone have been collected for the College building. Encloses Articles of Enquiry sent to the clergy in preparation for the triennial visitation. Dr. Walter will remove to Boston: suggests that, as one missionary is sufficient at Shelburne, his salary be transferred to Sissiboo. Conditions at Halifax remain as they were. "Celerity in the execution is essential to the success of any measure here"; therefore has pushed on the academy with speed. Encloses a statement of the expenditure of the Parliamentary grant for building churches; it has been faithfully and frugally applied. The Chief Justice and himself will see that the grant for the college is similarly expended. Describes the excellent character of Chief Justice Strange. 255

April 5.

To Lord Grenville. Congratulates him on his elevation to the peerage, and on the peace with Spain. War would have been ruinous for the colonies. Alludes to the progress being made towards building the college. 257

Halifax,
June.

To Mr. Cumberland. Has just finished the triennial visitation, and is preparing for a tour through the diocese. Encloses a statement of the expenditure for building churches. Governor Parr declines drawing any more money for churches or college. Explains at length the probable causes of this. Describes the progress on the college building. Refers to the profligate life of London, and to the unprecedented complexion of European politics. 258

Halifax,
June.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Receives great satisfaction from learning that the dispute about patronage will soon be terminated, and that Mr. Stanser will be rector of Halifax. Will consider the hints given regarding the size of the college, and the methods of tuition. A new plan (described) has been adopted for that building, and work is begun. Relies on further grants to make up the total cost, £3,000. Explains the policy as to public speaking at the academy, to which the Archbishop apprehended too much time was being given. Gives an account of the triennial visitation, held the week before Whitsunday, which was attended by the greater part of the clergy. Some do not like restraints. The Methodists are gaining ground at Windsor because of the missionary's mismanagement. A memorial was presented by the clergy urging an increase of their salaries to an equality with those of New Brunswick. On the 26th inst., consecrated the new church at Preston; the people there wish for a missionary. 260

Halifax,
June 30.

To Lord Grenville. Encloses the plan, and elevation, adopted for the college at Windsor. Describes the proposed building. 264

June 30.

To Brooke Watson & Co. Personal and business matters. 266

Dec. 28.

To Dr. Morice. Gives a report of the triennial visitation. It will be necessary for the Society to use its injunctions and authority to insure more punctual attendance at visitations. Refers to the consecration of the church at Preston. The people wish a mission, which Mr. Wright, master of the grammar school in Halifax, would be willing to serve. The inhabitants of Nashwalk wish assistance in building. They are dissatisfied with Mr. Price, who has opened a school at Fredericton. Dr. Walter has moved to Boston. Mr. Jones, who is represented as quiet and inoffensive, officiates at Cumberland and Sackville: recommends that he have an allowance. Refers to failure to obtain Mr. Hubbard and Mr. Bostwick. John Dunn, recommended as schoolmaster at Cumberland, has taught there since 1790. Has appointed Thos. Cooke to succeed Wm. Sutherland as schoolmaster at Campbelltown. The mission of Windsor is declining. 266

Halifax,
Sept. 30.

To Governor Parr. Announces the institution of the Rev. Robert Stanser as rector of St. Paul's Church, Halifax, and requests his induction. 268

Halifax,
Oct. 3.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Describes the investiture of Mr. Stanser, who gives satisfaction, with the rectory of Halifax.

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

The Governor relinquished his claim to the right of presentation; was delayed by illness beyond his intended time of leaving Halifax for the country. Has selected the property of George Deschamps at Windsor to be purchased as the site of the Bishop's residence. Thinks Windsor will be the seat of Government. Intends himself to move to Windsor for three years. Adheres to his plan as to his own property at Aylesford. Mr. Cochran is giving satisfaction in the academy, and preaches at Falmouth and Newport, abandoned by Mr. Ellis because of infirmity. Is glad that Government will allow the money needed for completing the college. Has consecrated churches at Preston, the upper district of Granville, Annapolis, and Digby; and held confirmations at Halifax, Cornwallis, the middle district of Granville, Annapolis and Digby, confirming 355 persons. Has received letters from Mr. Toosey respecting his salary; and from Mr. Macdonell re his proposal to divide the Romish Bishopric of Quebec. Lord Dorchester, who has gone to England is a worthy man but much attached to the Canadians. Has given letters of introduction to Dr. Brown, the Presbyterian minister of Halifax, who has gone to London to seek a salary from the Treasury. Regards Brown with favour, but sees difficulties in the claim of right made by him: thinks allowing a salary as an act of benevolence to an individual different from granting money to meeting-houses; but fears an allowance from the Treasury may create a troublesome precedent. 269

Halifax,
Oct. 15.

To Mr. Cumberland. Is sending this letter by Chief Justice Strange, who is going to England on family business. Gov. Parr's refusal to draw for money to build churches causes inconvenience: Mr. Turner has made advances for the middle and lower districts of Granville; the churches at Digby and Manchester are finished, but the last payments cannot be obtained. Gov. Parr is allowing his private chagrin to injure public business: he thinks he has an absolute right to draw for the money in the manner he chooses. Suggests that a soothing letter from Cumberland might remove the embarrassment. The cellar-storey of the College is raised. Is experiencing trouble with the building. 273

Halifax,
Oct. 17.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Chief Justice Strange, who carries this letter, is a man of high character and ability; he will be able to give information concerning the province. It would be desirable to obtain the College charter, and provide one or two professors. Finds it difficult to procure a house in Windsor, though his health and the welfare of diocese and college demand his removal thither. There are difficulties also in purchasing Mr. Deschamps's land. Mr. Stanser is satisfactorily settled at Halifax. Is about to ordain to Deacon's orders Mr. Frederick Dibble, son of a former missionary in Connecticut, who has been teaching Indian boys in New Brunswick. States the condition of the mission of Windsor, where Mr. Ellis alleges bad health for his lack of vigor. Mr. Cochran of the academy is doing remarkably good work at Newport and Falmouth. Intends to propose that Mr. Ellis, who spoke of resigning, allow Mr. Cochran part of his salary to officiate on Sundays. 274

CORRESPONDENCE OF BISHOP INGLIS, 1791-1799.

- Halifax,
Nov. 9. To Dr. Morice. Reports the consecration of churches, in various missions visited; number of persons confirmed, etc.; M<sup>r</sup> Stanser's induction as rector of St. Paul's, Halifax. Encloses memorial from the Germans in Montreal, re appointment of rector: thinks case peculiar and deserving of attention. Has received a letter from Gov<sup>r</sup> Fanning, re urgent need of clergy for the Island of St. John; arrival of many hundreds of emigrants from the Highlands of Scotland mostly Roman Catholics. Details re mission at Cumberland, etc. 1
- Halifax,
Nov. 24. State of the Mission of Windsor. Report of the bishop on the charges made against the resident missionary whose conduct is very unsatisfactory. Wishes to submit case to Archbishop of Canterbury before taking action.
- Halifax,
Nov. 26. Encloses report of the Windsor mission. This will give His Grace an idea of the trouble these missions occasion. From one cause or another every mission in Nova Scotia demands an equal amount of attention. Urges grants from Government in aid of church building at Windsor, Cornwallis, Horton and Amherst. Governor Parr's death; supposes successor will be military man, which he deprecates. 13
- Halifax,
Nov. 29. To M<sup>r</sup> Cumberland. Re money allotted for the building of churches; Gov<sup>r</sup> Parr's death; progress of building operations on the college at Windsor. 14 1792.
March 20. To D<sup>r</sup> Morice. Intends to hold a Visitation in New Brunswick in the coming summer. Laments "backwardness of people to contribute towards the support of their Clergy." Attributes it to poverty, indifference and influence of sectaries. Insists on people's contributing to support of missionaries, when applied for. 15
- Halifax,
March 20. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Enclosing the Charge delivered to the clergy the previous June. Anxious to hear who is to be the next Governor. Is entirely satisfied with Mr. Stanser (rector of St. Paul's): Gov<sup>r</sup> Parr's action in relation to deputy chaplains. Reports progress of college-building: desirability of charter. Arrival of Lt. Gov<sup>r</sup> Simcoe, of Upper Canada. Question of a bishop for Canada; suggestions as to the fitness of certain persons mentioned. Matters still unsatisfactory at Windsor. 16
- Halifax,
April 15. To D<sup>r</sup> Morice. Re State of the mission of Cumberland "where an active Clergyman is greatly wanted." Particulars re glebe. Schoolmaster wanted on road between Halifax and Windsor. Question of M<sup>r</sup> Stanser's right to emoluments of Deputy Chaplains at Halifax. Necessity of regulations for chaplains for garrisons, regiments and ships of war. 19
- April 19. To M<sup>r</sup> Toosey. [Extract.] Re his intention of going to England in order to solicit the appointment of Bishop of Canada. Strongly advises him to wait till they hear from England on the subject of a Bishop for Canada. 21
- May 24. To Brooke Watson & Co. Re personal business matters, etc. 22
- May 25. To D<sup>r</sup> Morjee. In reply to letter of March last: a school house at Aylesford is begun; has directed Mr. Jones, who has gone to Miramichi, to insist on security for his salary, etc., and to draw for £20 from the Society [for the Propagation of the Gospel]. Doubts the expediency of leaving Windsor entirely in the hands of Mr. Ellis, because of the encroachments of Methodists, and the evil effects of the popular apathy. Has assigned salary of £40 to Mr. Cochran, who has had much success at Newport and Falmouth. Refers to intended visit to New Brunswick, and to sending to Bishops in England of copies of charge to clergy. 23

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

June 25. To Dr Morice. Is about to set out for New Brunswick. Has requested recommendations for a schoolmaster at Guysborough; refers to similar appointments at Parrsborough and Amherst. Has not heard recently about school master at Tracadie. Has made a will, granting certain conditional bequests to the S.P.G. in trust for his successors, and another for the missionary in Aylesford. Is negotiating for purchase of land near Windsor, to be the residence of his successors, where for various reasons the bishops of that diocese should reside. 25

July 1. To B. Watson, Esq., & Co. Re business and personal matters. 26

June 25. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Account of Mr. Wentworth's appointment to this Government received with universal satisfaction. The instructions re a charter for the Seminary at Windsor must give satisfaction: they will place it on a more respectable footing than any hitherto erected in North America. Doubts suggested as to authority to confer degrees in the Liberal Arts. The importance of such authority. The need of a professor of Natural Philosophy and Mathematics. Hopes that the building of the College, now suspended, will soon be resumed. The progress of the work. Being informed of Mr. Toosey's intention to embark for England to seek appointment as Bishop of Canada, had written advising the suspension of the voyage, but apprehends that the letter did not reach him before his embarkation. 26

July 1. To Brooke Watson, Esq., & Co. Has purchased land at Windsor, to be appropriated to a public use by the S.P.G. Has arranged to have Mr. Dight take up the mortgage on the land. Gives instructions in this regard. 28

June 27. To Mr. Dight. Re personal matters. Also re taking up of mortgage on land purchased. 28

Halifax,
Oct. 15. To Dr. Morice. Gives an account of his visitation of many parts of the Diocese, including most of the new settlements in New Brunswick. Contrary to the orders of Governor Carleton, who is well disposed to promote the Church of England, reservations for glebes in New Brunswick have been improperly made. Has drawn up a memorial to Gov. Carleton on the subject. Mr. Price, of St. Mary's Parish near Fredericton, who is attentive and diligent, has been moved to the principal settlement therein, on the Nashwalk. Incloses a printed report of his tour back to St. John. At the request of the Society, explains the circumstances of appropriations for building parsonage houses at Gagetown and Kingston, and reports on the teacher at Gagetown. In the neighbourhood of Kingston churches have been erected at Belleisle and Oak Point. Explains conditions in Sussex parish, and recommends that it be erected into a Mission, and that Mr. Arnold be appointed to it. Recommends an appropriation to the school teacher of Sussex Vale. The people can spare only a little farm produce—as is the case in almost all the new settlements. At visitation of the city of St. John all the clergy of the Province attended. Mr. Jones has been fixed at Miramichi, where the people have agreed to the terms proposed. Tracts are desired. Has directed the clergy to draw up a memorial to the Governor on the subject of glebes. Has admitted Mr. Dibblee to Priest's Orders: describes his parishes—Woodstock, Northampton, Prince William, Queensborough. The condition of the Indians. Has appointed Mr. Berry schoolmaster at St. Andrews: makes suggestions re schoolmaster at Campo Bello. Is much pleased with the progress, upon the whole, in New Brunswick. Gives a summary account of proceedings in Nova Scotia, to be described in more detail later. The truth has now come to light re the murder by the Rebels in 1776 of Mr. Avery, the Society's missionary at Rye. 29

3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

Halifax,
Nov. 25.

To Dr. Morice. Supplementary to his letter of October 15th, gives an account of conditions in Nova Scotia. Churches are to be built in Clement, Newport, and, as a result of Mr. Cochran's visitation, probably in Rawdon and Douglas townships. Incloses a petition from inhabitants of Fanningsborough for a missionary and schoolmaster; also a letter re deplorable state of inhabitants at Sheet Harbour and along the sea coast, for want of ordinances of religion. Importance of the mission of Lunenburg, where the church has been repaired. A schoolmaster is desired at Stormont in Country Harbour. Recommends that a new mission be opened at Preston in preference to Sissiboo: Preston and adjacent townships have been erected into the Parish of St. John, and a new road has been opened by the extraordinary exertion of Gov. Wentworth. It is probable that there are as many people now in these British Colonies, desiring the Society's assistance, as in North America before the Revolt, although the benefactions are reduced. Gives statistics. The great need of funds and capable men. Mr. Pigeon, who has resigned his commission as Lieutenant of the 65th Regiment, desires admission to Holy Orders and appointment to the mission of Cumberland. Observations on this subject. Has appointed Patrick Patton schoolmaster at Guysborough. Thom. Brown Spriggs has abandoned station of schoolmaster at Tracad. 37

Nov. 26.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Some personal remarks. Refers to letters to Dr. Morice, making observations on need of missionaries and funds, and on action taken re glebes. Recommends that a Doctor's Degree be conferred on Mr. Cook, Missionary at Fredericton and Commissary in New Brunswick. Conditions in the Academy at Windsor. The need of a Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy. There are two students from Upper Canada. The building is to be completed with wood as competent mason cannot be obtained in Maritime provinces. Mr. Cochran, the President a competent man, desires his name, as President, inserted in the Charter. Does not consider it advisable to go to Canada: conditions there are described. Refers to Mr. Toosey's visit to England, seeking appointment as bishop of Canada. 41

Halifax,
Nov. 30.

To Brooke Watson, Esq., & Company. Business matters. 45

BISHOP INGLIS' NOTES OF HIS CORRESPONDENCE.

Nov. 30.

Wrote to Mr. Cumberland re expenditure of money for building churches. 45

March. 1793.

To Governors Fanning, Clarke and Simcoe, re use of Collects for Lieut. Governor and Council, and for the Legislature during its session. 45

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

- March 20. To Dr. Morice re Mr. Pigeon, who is recommended as missionary at Cumberland. Had recommended appointment of a schoolmaster at Shelburne. Churches are to be erected at Clement and at Franklin, near Barrington. To encounter the spirit of wild enthusiasm among the Methodists had instituted a Lending Library. Requested more books, particularly tracts against the mad proceedings in France, which were favoured by a few wrong-headed people here. 46
- April 30. To Dr. Morice in answer to his letter of Jan. 26th. Expressed satisfaction at measures adopted by the Society in New Brunswick but surprise at the appointment of a missionary to Barrington. Observations thereon: most of the people at Barrington were averse from the Church of England. Of the 360 families in the place, only 38 were church people. Schoolmaster more useful than clergyman. Answers the Doctor's queries. 46
- June 4. To Dr. Morice. Re appointments of Messrs. Willoughby Ormond and Pigeon, and distribution of prayer books. 47
- June 4. To Brooke Watson & Company. Re business matters. 47
- June 15. To B. Watson & Company. Re business matters. 47
- End of notes.*
- Halifax,
June 28. To Lord Grenville. Incloses a sermon, preached before the Legislature when accounts received that war with France was likely to take place: having been circulated by the Members, it may have been of some service. Was happy to testify his sentiments concerning our most gracious and amiable sovereign, and his able and upright ministry. Describes conditions in the Seminary: the want of professors and a charter. Proposal of exhibitions for students from the seminary to the English universities most judicious: suggests that part of the money be assigned to scholarships in the seminary 48
- Halifax,
July 3. To Brooke Watson & Company. Re personal and business matters. 49
- July 5. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Mr. Cochran is well qualified to be President of the College; if not appointed, his salary should be increased. Salary of President should be £400 a year. The proposal of exhibitions to the English universities judicious: explains how it could be improved by devoting part to scholarships in the Seminary. The reason is the poverty of the people. The good work of the Seminary in preparing young men for Holy Orders. The building operations are progressing. Refers to departure of Messrs. Willoughby and Ormond to their missions; they had, probably by mistake, obtained the licence of the Bishop of London, as was formerly customary. Refers also to intended ordination of Mr. Pidgeon, summer's tour, &c. 49
- July 4. [Memorandum] Wrote to Dr. Morice re appointment of Messrs. Willoughby and Ormond, assignment of Government allowances, ordination of Mr. Pidgeon, institution of Mr. Weeks at Preston, &c. 52
Jan. 20. To Dr. Morice. A parsonage-house has been purchased at Gagetown. Land purchased at Windsor for the Bishop's residence has been legally secured. By the assistance of Mr. Blowers, Attorney-General, the legal encumbrances were removed. Has conveyed the land to the S.P.G. A description of it is given. Refers to non-arrival of prayer-books, inability to estimate probability of Mr. Ormond's success, and situation of suit re glebe at Digby. 53

- Feb. 8. [Memorandum] Duplicate of above sent, and the Hon. S. S. Blowers recommended to be Member of the Society. 55
- Jan. 20. To Brooke Watson, Esq., & Co. Re business matters. 55
- Feb. 8. [Memorandum] Wrote to Archbishop of Canterbury, re building operations on the College, apprehension of an American war, and doubt as to time of holding Visitation, because of public troubles. 56
- Jan. 25. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Ship Rashleigh detained at Falmouth by stress of weather; a professor for Seminary was on board. This removes apprehension that Government would do nothing further for the Seminary. Industry of the province has been checked by removal of 1200 blacks to Sierra Leone, and of the whale fishers from Halifax to New Haven, and by loss of ships in the war. Nothing done on College building last summer because of apprehension of French invasion: all the men were under arms, and prices doubled. Hopes to remove to Windsor next summer. 56
- May 3. [Memorandum] Wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Preparations for erecting College: the last £1000 granted by Parliament would be required. Would hold Triennial Visitation at Halifax 18th June. April 25th was appointed for a General Fast. Had just heard from Bishop Mountain, who was struck with his difficulties, but not discouraged. Accounts of state of Halifax as given in the Parliamentary debate were exaggerated. Make some statements re military situation. Mr. Ormond has gone to England. 58
- 3,500 men were the most that could be got to defend Halifax; that there were not 9,000 males from 16 to 60 in the whole province; that trade was much depressed owing to removal of blacks and the fishermen of Dartmouth and the war; that in 1793 the militia of Halifax numbered upwards of 700; in 1794, the number but little exceeded 400.
- May 3. [Memorandum] Wrote to Dr. Morice re Mr. Ormond. 59
- June 4. [Memorandum] Wrote to Dr. Morice by Mr. Ormond. 59
- June 28. To Dr. Morice. No reply received to letters re purchase of land at Windsor for Bishop's residence. Refers to various matters in connection with schoolmasters. Will fix Mr. Pidgeon at Newport, with charge of Rawdon and Douglas also. The library for Mr. Ormond will be given to Mr. Pidgeon. Mr. Ormond was not calculated for this country. Is sending copies of his sermon at the General Fast in April. 59 his appointment to Chester, and the conditions there. If church is built at Chester, it will be the seventeenth since the Bishop's arrival,

Halifax,
Jan. 10. To the Bishop of Lincoln. Incloses a copy of letter to the Duke of Portland re the Seminary, and account of disbursements from the Government grant thereto. Returns thanks for being mentioned in a sermon before the Society in 1792. Gives some particulars relative to the Seminary and to religion: the low state of literature at his arrival in 1787—there was not even a good grammar school in the whole province; the opening of an academy at Windsor in 1788; the work it has done, in spite of many difficulties about 150 youths of Nova Scotia and from New Brunswick and Canada have been admitted. Many of these have left owing to want of professors; the importance of the inculcation of good principles, as was seen in the American Rebellion; the efficacy of the College of Windsor for this purpose; the consequence of Nova Scotia to England; the discouraging aspect of ecclesiastical affairs in 1787; the progress since made in building churches.—On his arrival in 1787 there was but one decently finished church in the province, at Halifax. The shells of two others had been raised but not finished. The total number erected and finished since his arrival is nineteen. Expresses thanks for the part taken by the Bishop of Lincoln in promoting Dr.
Mountain to the Bishopric of Canada. 69

- Halifax,
Jan. 26. [Memorandum.] Wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury re good effects of having fixed a rector in St. Pauls Church, Halifax; re-organisation of an Agricultural Society, formed here in 1789; and number of churches erected or finished since 1787, of which a statement is inclosed. 73
- March 25. To Dr. Morice. Announces the death of the Rev. Mr. Lloyd, of Chester, while on a snow-shoe journey: his good work: his death a great loss. The Rev. Mr. Rowland, of Shelburne, also has died; his son was appointed curate before his death. In accordance with the request of the officials of Shelburne, heartily recommends the appointment of the younger Mr. Rowland to be their missionary. In reply to letters of November and January, comments on applications of Messrs. Cochran, Weeks and Ellis, therein announced. Is sorry for the Society's embarrassment, originating from Mr. Willoughby's indisposition at Cumberland, on which some remarks are made, and a failure of funds. Has sent for Mr. Willoughby to confer about his removal to Windsor. 74

SESSIONAL PAPER No. 29b

Clermont,
Sept. 3.

To Dr. Morice. Has been obliged to move to Clermont because of his health. Desired to remove to Windsor but no house available. Has recommended Mr. Pidgeon to investigate certain charges against Mr. Jones of the new parish of Norton. Recommends that a mission be opened at Norton to secure the glebe. Mr. Wiswall, missionary at Aylesford and Wilmot, wishes to give up Aylesford, because of the indifference of the inhabitants: reasons for opposing this proposal. Governor to appoint Mr. Gray to Newport. Bishop is much opposed to re-uniting Newport and Windsor. Refers to need of missionaries at various places, and means of supplying them. 86

Clermont,
Oct. 28.

To Messrs. Watson & Co. Re personal and business matters. 88

Clermont,
Nov. 14.

To Dr. Morice. In reply to letter of June. Frequent change of schoolmasters inconvenient, but unavoidable: the high wages, due to the war, attract them to other pursuits. Mr. John Millidge, ordained priest, has returned to Cumberland and Westmoreland. Mr. Gray, ordained deacon, who was proposed for Newport, Rawdon and Douglas, has been appointed King's Chaplain to some 500 free negroes, known as Maroons, settled at Preston, who had been sent last summer from Jamaica, where they raised an insurrection; suggests that he be made the Society's missionary at Preston. Mr. Charles Weeks wishes to be missionary at Newport, Rawdon and Douglas: the need of a missionary there. Refers to school matters at Country Harbour and at Onslow. Explains the need of missionaries at Yarmouth, Sissiboo (now Weymouth), and Clements. Churches have been erected at Clements, but, as at Wilmot, no workmen could be got to make pews. 89

Clermont,
Dec. 7.

To Gov. Carleton [Extract.] Expresses pleasure and approval of the Duke of Portland's observations re Government allowance for the Rev. Mr. Arnold and the Rev. Mr. Dibblee. Comments on the excellence of the idea in general, and on the particular necessities of these two clergymen. 92

Clermont,
Dec. 12.

To Brooke Watson & Co. Re personal and business matters. If deemed advisable, his bonds and mortgages are to be sent out to be presented to the commissioners for liquidating British debts due from Americans. 93 1797.

Clermont,
Jan. 1.

To Brooke Watson & Co. Re business matters. 94

Clermont,
Jan. 10.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Re method of making reports. Several missionaries' salaries in arrears. They fear of course with grounds that Government has not provided for them. Great increase in general prices makes living difficult under best of circumstances. Has improved in health since removal from Halifax, although infirmities of age remain. Requests opinion as to propriety of applying for the assistance of a Commissary. Halifax was not an eligible situation for a Bishop. Until peace be restored, nothing further to be expected from the Government towards the Seminary. Had intended to send his son to Oxford, but is now very reluctant to part with him, as he is the comfort and stay of his old age. Infidel writing of Thomas Paine and others found their way into the Diocese. 94

Clermont,
Feb. 1.

To Simon Baxter. In reply to letter of Oct. 22 which repeated complaints against Mr. Jones and stated that he (Baxter) had, taking advantage of a legal technicality, withdrawn his grant of a glebe, but would give another if the Gospel should flourish. Remonstrates strongly reminding him of Achan and Ananias. Mr. Jones had been acquitted of the charges after impartial inquiry. However, Mr. Jones will be removed, and no mission established at Norton until a church is built and the glebe granted. 96

Clermont,
Feb. 24.

To Brooke Watson & Company. Re personal and business matters: liquidation of British debts due from Americans, &c. 99

Clermont,
Feb. 28.

To John Macolla and John Bond of Rawdon, and James Campbell and Lewis Ettinger of Douglas. The Society has withdrawn its missionary (stationed at Windsor) from Falmouth, and has united Newport and Windsor; Rawdon and Douglas will, therefore constitute one mission. It remains that the Society's conditions (explained) be complied with. 100

March 14.

To Dr. Morice. Acquiesces in Society's resolution to re-unite Newport to Windsor. Discusses Right of Presentation claimed by Governor. Is of opinion that the grant by Government of an allowance in aid of missions does not give Governor right to present, as Government grant is made to Society to assist it in its work, and the disposal of the grant should be entirely with the Society. There has been no direct insistence on the right, and the Bishop has avoided discussion on the subject. A circumstance contributing to the Governor's view of the right is that the Government allowance has been paid in Nova Scotia through the Governor. In New Brunswick, payments of allowances have been made in London to agents of the different missionaries. On Governor's legal right to present, the law is not quite clear. It simply requests him to induct a minister into a parish that shall make presentation of him. Bishop is of opinion that it is most advisable to let the Presentation remain where custom has fixed it—in the Governor; especially in these times of Democratic rage and delusion. Encloses several applications. (1) from inhabitants of Clements for a missionary. These are very worthy people but as they have occasional service, their application may be deferred for the moment. Sissiboo, now called Weymouth is the first place that should be supplied. (2) from Vestry and Church Wardens of Yarmouth for a clergyman, which he recommends. Mention is made of French settlements and between 600 and 800 persons, young and old, unbaptized at Weymouth, Yarmouth and Argyle. (3) Memorial from Prince William and Queensbury in New Brunswick. Believes they will fulfil any engagement they may enter into. (4) Memorial from Onslow for a schoolmaster. Some details of diocesan business. 101

July 1. To Brooke Watson & Company. Re business and personal matters. 106

July 28. [Memorandum.] Sent duplicate of last. 106

Clermont.
July 10. To Mr. Cossit. Serious charges have been made against Cossit by his parishioners in Cape Breton. As the Episcopal jurisdiction covers the Maritime provinces and Newfoundland the Bishop must take cognizance of the charges. They are: promotion of strife among the inhabitants; defiant disregard of the Ordinance specifying mode of selecting Church Wardens and vestrymen; by an improper appointment of a warden giving occasion to a violent altercation in the Church; and appointing as clerk a man of grossly immoral character. Urges him to take all necessary steps to retrieve his position, and regain confidence of community. 106

Clermont.
July 10. To Mr. Matthews. In reply to letter of June 9th re Cossit. Will institute a scrutiny, if Cossit persists in his conduct. Has written him. Urges delay, and an endeavour to reclaim Cossit. 108

Clermont.
July 21. To Dr. Morice. Mr. Norris has arrived and been fixed at Chester. Is surprised that Messrs. Willoughby and Norris, converts from the Church of Rome, have not brought their letters of Orders. Is satisfied with the character of the diocesan clergy, as seen in the Visitation lately held. The severity of the winter and spring and great heat in summer. Discusses the questions of the improvement of glebes, and their exchange or sale, which he is advised by the ablest lawyers cannot be done without an Act of Parliament, which he would be unwilling to apply for, as giving the Assembly a chance of intermeddling with glebes. In reply to letter of March 20th, refers to appointments of Messrs. Tupper, Green, and C. Weeks. The importance of school appointments. Proposal to employ candidates for Holy Orders as schoolmasters is, in general, good. Defends himself against the suspicion (implied, he thinks, in a passage quoted) that in appointing missionaries he acted contrary to the Canons and Rubrics: explains the practice he has followed in ordinations and appointments. Is apprehensive of trouble in Cape Breton over Mr. Cossit and in New Brunswick (of similar character). 109

Clermont.
July 22. To William Moore Smith. Has seen his (Smith's) advertisement that he was appointed General Agent for assisting British creditors before the commissioners in the United States. Accordingly briefly states his case: was Rector of Trinity Church in New York City; lost his property by confiscation; had bonds and mortgages for land sold before the troubles began; could not obtain allowance for these from the Commissioners in England for compensation of losses. Mentions the following personal details: he was a native of Europe; before the evacuation of New York in 1783, he went to England, where he remained till he was promoted to the See of Nova Scotia in 1787 when it was erected into a diocese. 114

Clermont.
Aug. 25. To the Rt. Hon. Brooke Watson, Lord Mayor of London. Personal. 115

Clermont.
Sept. 9. To B. Watson & Co. Has received the bonds for debts due him in the United States. Requests that the mortgages and certain other papers be forwarded. Refers to other business matters. 116

- Clermont,
Sept. 12. To William Moore Smith. Will send the bonds for the debts due him in the United States, an affidavit attested before Col. Th. Barclay (Speaker of the Assembly, and a Commissioner for settling the Boundary between New Brunswick and New England), and other papers. Comments on the case, and requests opinion as to probable outcome. 117
- Clermont,
Oct. 10. To a Committee of the Church at Windsor. In reply to a letter which stated that Mr. Willoughby had, without notice, gone to New Brunswick, and that Mr. Cochran had declined officiating in his absence without authority. Their expectation that notice be given when service is to be suspended is reasonable. Believes Mr. Willoughby will return, but authorises Mr. Cochran, whose attitude was proper, to officiate till then. Differs in opinion that the Committee is to be considered as Church Wardens. Urges that this irregularity at Windsor be removed. 119
- Clermont,
Nov. 15. To Dr. Morice. Arrival of the Rev. Mr. King, who has been assigned to Rawdon and Douglas. Refers to a list of glebes sent to the Society by Mr. Morris: he was mistaken as to there being glebes at Yarmouth and several other places. Is disposed to serve Mr. Willoughby, recommended for a mission in New Brunswick, when a vacancy offers: Willoughby likes his present place, but not the people; the want of church wardens and vestry makes difficulty. Mr. Norris well satisfied at Chester. Has recently married. Mr. Gray ordained priest and assigned to Preston; Mr. James Bisset ordained and given an assignment at the request of the trustees of the Academy at Fredericton, who found it necessary to annex the duties of Indian Missionary to the appointment of their President. Mr. Tupper has resigned the school at Aylesford. Comments on conditions at Clements and Wilmot. Is thankful for the progress of the diocese during the ten years of his episcopate; when he went to Halifax there were only 4 churches in the province; of these the one in Halifax was the only one finished. These are now completed and some of them enlarged, and 17 new churches have been erected. In 1788 there were 483 communicants in diocese. The last returns give 650, which is much below the mark. In 1788 there were 11 missionaries. At the time of writing there were 15. Refers to some personal matters. 120
- Nov. 15. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Personal matters. Comments on the ravages of the French, "the most sanguinary, unprincipled, and impious men, or rather monsters, that ever disgraced humanity"; who "are undoubtedly to be considered as a scourge in the hands of God." 124

- Clermont,
March 1. To Dr. Morice. Explains dispute between Mr. Cossit, Missionary at Sydney, Cape Breton, and his parishioners: last June Mr. Matthews, President of His Majesty's Council at Cape Breton, complained of Cossit. Wrote to Matthews and Cossit on the subject. Cossit denied the charges, and offered evidence to invalidate them. It appears that Cossit and Matthews are exasperated against each other, and that Cossit was imprudent, though private letters from reliable sources satisfied the bishop that Cossit was diligent in the discharge of his duty as a clergyman, and that his moral character was exemplary and unblemished. Requests that Cossit be given redress should Matthews prevent his receiving the Government allowance. Such altercations are frequent. Mr. Fox now teaches at Sydney. Mr. Baxter, who had recalled his grant of a glebe in Norton, has restored it: suggests that Mr. Jones be appointed missionary at Norton and Bellisle. Mr. Beardsley has declined the mission of Queensberry and Prince William. Will investigate charges against Mr. Price at Triennial Visitation of New Brunswick next summer. Recommends the appointment of Mr. Charles Weeks, who now has the Maroon school, to be itinerant missionary in Eastern Nova Scotia. Recommends the request of Mr. Inglis for a grant towards erecting a parsonage and improving the glebe at Granville. [Note appended: "The preceding letter much altered and abridged and dated March 12, 1798 was transcribed. Having received packets from Messrs. Matthews and Cossit, I was obliged to write it over again, and adapt it to the intelligence from Cape Breton."...]

Clermont,
March 5.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Personal inquiries. The severe winter has interrupted communications with England. Refers to request of January 10, 1797, for assistance of a Commissary; an additional reason was, that it had been hinted that if Prince Edward's Chaplain was appointed, the salary could be procured: to get out of this disagreeable situation, had consulted the Archbishop. Comments at some length on the reuniting of Newport to Windsor, its disadvantages, and the probable motives which influenced the Society's action. Refers briefly to the implication of disregard of ecclesiastic rules with respect to ordination and institutions. 131

Clermont,
March 12.

To Mr. Matthews. [Note: "This was not sent."] Has received a letter from the Rev. Mr. Cossit, inclosing a notice from Matthews that, because of omission to perform divine service in the parish church at Sydney, he (Matthews) will sign no more certificates for the Government allowance. Officiating in a private house during inclement weather is normal throughout the province. Mr. Cossit states that he applied for the Council room, but received no reply. Mr. Cossit's defence made a censure of him improper. Advises that the matter be dropped. 133

Clermont,
March 12.

To Mr. Cossit. [Note: "This was not sent."] In answer to letter of January 24th: advises a conciliating and prudent conduct, in order to assist efforts to soften things with Matthews. 134

March 16.

To Mr. Matthews. In reply to a letter of Feb. 15th. Explains at length his conduct in the Cossit affair. As there were no charges of immorality, and it was evident that the people were much exasperated against each other, his duty was to act as peacemaker. It is not easy to judge re Cossit's removal across the river, and officiating in a private house. The most aggravated charge is re Cossit's conduct towards Mr. Murray on his death-bed; would desire, however, to have it substantiated on oath before proceeding further. Explains that Cossit is the duly appointed parish minister, and can obtain the Government allowance without a certificate. Difficulty of sending a clergyman to investigate. Once more urges peace, and non-interference with the allowance. Will send proper admonishments to Cossit. 135

March 20.

To Mr. Cossit. Acknowledges letter of Jan. 24 and enclosures therein. Is surprised at disavowal of any knowledge of the violent party spirit which manifestly exists in Cape Breton. It exists beyond doubt and is disgraceful to individuals, and ruinous to the settlement. Matthews has written re his refusal to sign certificate for the Government allowance: some of his reasons call for attention: that the church building is neglected because no parish officers are chosen, that as there are stoves service could be held in the church. As in last letter, urges reconciliation. Admonishes Cossit to have church wardens and a vestry elected, not to intermeddle in the choice of vestrymen, and to avoid party. Inquiries as to attendance at death-bed of Mr. Murray, formerly Provost Marshal, and as to divine service at last Christmas. 140

Clermont,
May 9.

To Mr. Smith. Is forwarding documents re claims against American citizens. Some personal remarks. 144

Clermont,
June 22.

To Dr. Morice. Refers to school charges and appointments at Annapolis, Wilmot, Aylesford, Campbell Town (Sheet Harbour), St. Margaret's Bay. Hopes that the appointment of Lieut General Ogilvie to the civil and military command of Cape Breton will have a good effect on the Cossit trouble. The inhabitants of the Province have followed the example of England in contributing liberally to the assistance of Government. Refers to various matters of church business. 144

Clermont,
June 22.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. The inhabitants of Nova Scotia have shown laudable liberality in contributing to the assistance of the Government. He gave £100 and has directed his agent in London to give the same sum annually so long as the war lasts. A subscription in Halifax raised £3000 in 2 or 3 days. Subscriptions are being opened in all the counties, and all classes are contributing generously. Before the subscriptions were opened, the Royal Nova Scotia regiment remitted part of their pay as a contribution to the Government. At a meeting of the Governors of King's College at Windsor, it was reported that there were 14 students. Difficulty of obtaining suitable ward for students. As to Mr. Willoughby. 146

Clermont,
July 1.

To Brooke Watson, Esq., & Co. Re personal and business matters. The ship Earl of Mansfield captured by the French. 148

Clermont,
Sept. 28.

To Dr. Morice. Has held Triennial Visitation in New Brunswick. The missionaries in New Brunswick are respectable men of exemplary lives and diligent in the discharge of their duties. Refers to conditions at Nashwalk, where Mr. Price has resigned rather than face the charges against him. Recommends Mr. Elias Scovil to be missionary at Westfield and Greenwich, on the St. John's River. Explains the situation with regard to glebes. Applications have been made for schoolmasters from the parishes of Springfield, Burton, Prince William, and Fredericton, N.B. In answer to letters received, refers to explanation why Messrs. Norris and Willoughby did not bring their letters of Orders, to the disposition being made of those clergymen, to the assistance suggested to be given Mr.

CORRESPONDENCE, MEMORANDA, ETC., OF BISHOP INGLIS, 1799-1837.

Description (with some extracts) of a volume numbered 673 in the MS. Library of Lambeth, which has title in Archbishop Tension's writing: "These are the original papers which a Cabal of Socinians in London offered to present to the Embessadour of the King of Fez and Morocco when he was taking leave of England, August, 1682." Page 1.

Copy of a reply from the Episcopacy of England to an address from the Clerical and Lay Deputies of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States (dated In Convention Christ Church Philadelphia, Oct. 5, 1785). Expresses willingness to comply with request to provide for an Ecclesiastical Constitution in America, but await explanation re certain alleged alterations adopted in the Convention. "Duplicates.....were put into the hands of Mr. Adams, minister from the United States, to be forwarded to Philadelphia, February 27, 1786—by me—J. Cantuar." 2.

June 7.

To the Committee of the General Convention at Philadelphia. Delay in dealing with request for the consecration of American Bishops by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York due to tardy receipt of liturgical articles and ecclesiastical constitution. Question taken up at a meeting of Archbishops and Bishops. It was observed with concern that, besides a number of verbal alterations in the liturgy, two of the confessions of Christian faith have been entirely laid aside, and that an article has been omitted from the Apostle's Creed. As a proof, however of the desire felt to maintain spiritual communication with the Church in America, and in the hope that their representations as to changes and omissions may have desired effect, a bill has been prepared authorizing the Archbishops and Bishops to give episcopal consecration to persons who shall be recommended without requiring oaths or subscriptions inconsistent with the situation of such persons. There is every prospect of the bill being enacted. Particular care must be exercised to satisfy the requirements as to the qualifications of persons offered for consecration. 3.

Forms of testimonials required from candidates for episcopal consecration. 7.

"An act to empower the Archbishop of Canterbury, or the Archbishop of York, for the time being, to consecrate to the office of a Bishop, persons being subjects or citizens of countries out of his Majesty's Dominions."

"To the Commissioners appointed by Act of Parliament for inquiring into the Losses and Services of American Loyalists. The Memorial of Charles Inglis, Doctor of Divinity, late Rector of the Parish of Trinity Church, in the City of New York," sets forth in some detail his conduct during the American Revolution. Had, before the outbreak, formed a resolution, with the Rev. Dr. Bradbury Chandler, the Rev. Dr. Myles Cooper, the Rev. Dr. Samuel Seabury and others, to watch all publications disrespectful to Government, with a view to their refutation. In 1774 published in the New York Gazette printed by Hugh Gainé, a series of loyalist papers over the signature A New York Farmer. Did much in other ways to confirm the loyalty of his friends and tenants in New York City and Province. Wrote an answer to the pamphlet Common Sense, with the title The Deceiver Unmasked; or Loyalty and Interest United. This was printed in New York, through the agency of the Mayor, David Matthews, but destroyed by the mob. With some alterations, it was printed in Philadelphia by James Humphreys, under the title The True Interest of America impartially stated. In 1776 visited Matthews and other loyalists confined in the jail of New York. On the arrival of Sir William Howe at Staten Island, frequently sent information re the rebels. Gave an account of his conduct, &c., in a letter to the S. P. G., printed in the Society's Abstract for 1777. In March, 1777, delivered a sermon on the duty of loyalty, which was printed. In September preached a sermon to the Provincial Troops, which, at the request of Gov. Tryon and the officers, was printed under the title The Christian Soldiers' Duty briefly delineated. Extract given. In 1778, when the American Congress had violated the Convention of Saratoga and committed other enormities, wrote a series of letters on the subject over the signature Papinian, printed in Rivington's Royal Gazette, Gainé's New York Gazette, and as a pamphlet, The Letters of Papinian. Published a sermon in 1780. [Incomplete.] 9.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Is obliged for offer to assist in appointing a Commissary. Fears he cannot name a person most fitted without giving offence. Mr. Stanser well qualified, but his parochial duties at Halifax are laborious, and he may be appointed Garrison Chaplain succeeding Mr. Wetherall, Prince Edward's Chaplain. No better qualified than Mr. Inglis of Granville. No person would be of more service than his own son: his qualifications. Mr. Willoughby a good man, but would not serve as well as others. Would not choose Mr. Wetherall, and hardly grant him a commission. This a private letter; one which may be shown to the Secretary of State will accompany it. Has heard the happy news of the victory of the Nile. Returns thanks for information that his proceedings re ordination, &c., are approved. 23

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Has received copies of the form of Thanksgiving for the victories of Admirals Duncan and Nelson. If his own son considered too young for Commissary, proposes the Rev. - Clermont, Aug. 16. To Dr. Morice. Acknowledges letter of Jan. 17. The Society has been generous in allowing £100 for improvements at Granville: explains alterations in the situation there. Describes the exertions which have been made by the inhabitants of Greenwich and Westfield, N.B.: Mr. Willoughby may go there. Approves of women being employed as school teachers, but they cannot be obtained. Describes the activities of a sect called "New Lights," the descendants of New Englanders who came on the expulsion of the French Neutrals: they "are, almost to a man, violent Republicans and Democrats." Explains the affair of Mr. Beardsley's marriage. Refers to appointments of schoolmasters at Aylesford, Springfield, and Burton. 33
- Clermont, Aug 31. Memorial to the Duke of Portland. Re claims submitted to the Commissioners for carrying into effect the sixth article of the Treaty of Amity, Commerce and Navigation between His Britannic Majesty and the United States [Jay's Treaty]. - Clermont, Oct. 17. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Condition of King's College, Windsor. Subscriptions originally intended for improving the library room, are now to be used in purchasing books: requests approbation of His Grace, and a list of books. To Sir J. Wentworth. Explains at length the evil consequences of his (Wentworth's) proposal to grant marriage licenses to ministers of all denominations were carried into effect. It would weaken the Church, and probably stir up ill feeling between members of the Church and Protestant dissenters, who now live on excellent terms together. Refers to reports re ecclesiastical irregularities of Mr. Twynning: he is now reformed. 44

To the Duke of Kent. Regrets the suddenness of the Duke's departure for England. Lays before him certain information re the welfare of the province. The dangers to Church and State from the sect of "New Lights", and another body of dissenters from the Church of Scotland, the "Seceders" or "Antiburghers." The promotion of the Seminary at Windsor and an increase of the number of missionaries are the best means of counteracting those evils. Requests for his son an appointment as chaplain to H.R.H. 49

Clermont,
July 26.

To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Refers to allowance for a commissary. Had frequent conferences with Sir John Wentworth re proposed innovation in granting marriage licenses: induced him to promise no change until communication be received from the King's Minister. Has learned that, at the representation of the S.P.G., the Duke of Portland has given assurances that licenses will be granted as before. The cause of the proposal was the Provincial Secretary's desire, for larger perquisites. Mr. Stanser should succeed Mr. Wetherall as Garrison Chaplain at Halifax: Wetherall wishes to retain the office after his return to Europe. 52

- July 18. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Charter for college at Windsor received. The Archbishop appointed Patron. Explains at length the condition of the College, what has been done, and what is required. The English school containing upwards of 20 students has been laid aside. There remain 33 students under instruction by the President in classics and mathematics. The number of students diminished owing to the War. In this early stage, the professors and even the President must act as tutors. Mr. Cochran has strong claims on Presidency—has quite overcome former objections to him. Professors should have at least £200 a year, and perquisites from students' fees. His son has been appointed Commissary: Would it be practicable to obtain a Government allowance for him? 65
- Clermont,

- Clermont,
Dec. 28. To Messrs. Blowers and Croke. States at length the reasons why the offices of President and Professors should be restricted to clergymen of the Church of England, a qualification not mentioned in their letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Relates the history of the establishment of the College showing the evident intention of the King, the founder of the College to use it as a means of promoting the cause of true religion. 78 1803.
Clermont,
Jan. 3. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Chief Justice Blowers and Dr. Croke were joined with the writer in a committee to procure President and Professors and to frame statutes for the College. Explains his reasons for dissenting from their letter to the Archbishop on the subject of restricting offices to clergymen, on the treatment of Mr. Cochran, and on the salaries of Professors. 85
- Clermont,
Jan. 1. To Brooke Watson & Co. Re personal and business matters. 89
- Clermont,
Jan. 18. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Re the apparent design of appointing laymen to the offices of President and Professors in the College. Explains the difficulties he finds in co-operating with the other Governors of the College, who are official men and, with the exception of Sir J. Wentworth and the Secretary of the Province, lawyers. Refers again to Mr. Cochran's claims to the Presidency. 90
- Feb. 18. To Messrs. Blowers & Croke. Has received draft of statutes for College: will consider them. In the matter of Mr. Cochran, he himself is the most proper person to substantiate his claims. Notes the inaccuracy of their statement that the Committee were instructed to seek a President "in England." Discusses at length their arguments in favour of admitting laymen to the Presidency and Professorships. The Provincial law establishing the College requires the President to be a clergyman. Refers to granting of degrees to former pupils, and to the presence of certain books not of the College Library in that room. 93

May 9. To Messrs. Blowers and Croke. In reply to a letter stating intention to submit draft of statutes at an early meeting of the Governors of the College. The draft should not be transmitted to England until the Governors have conferred together, and considered several objections. Refers to the salaries proposed. 109.
- May 16. To Broke Watson, Esq. Re his claims against the United States. 109.

Requests concurrence and assistance in obtaining the royal permission, should it appear necessary for the writer to cross the Atlantic to avert impending evils. 110.

- Clermont,
Sept. 22. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Transmits printed copy of statutes of King's College for revision. Explains manner in which they were adopted. They bear the writer's protest against certain objectionable features. Difficulties which have been experienced in opening the College, as a result of those features. A majority of the Governors have a visionary scheme of a complete University. 111.
- Clermont,
Sept. 27. [Memorandum.] Wrote to Dr. Morice, giving an account in diary form of a diocesan tour: confirmations, conditions of missions, &c. Gen. Despard wrote asking the removal of Mr. Cossitt from Sydney. Recommended Miss Bailey to be schoolmistress at Annapolis. Referred to various other diocesan business. Page 113.
- Clermont,
Nov. 14. [Without superscription, but apparently to Dr. Croke.] Refers in ironical terms to the rectification of his mistakes. Explains action taken re the principalship of the Latin school at Windsor and Mr. Twining. Objection to harsh, unjustifiable language does not come with good grace from his correspondent. Had signed the statutes on condition of his protest being entered; this was prevented except in three copies. Until Dr. Croke writes with decency and temper, the Bishop of Nova Scotia declines correspondence. 115.
- Clermont,
Nov. 12. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Anxious for news from England, because of threatened invasion of Napoleon. Has written to the Governors of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, requesting the appointment of a general fast and humiliation. Renews request that he may go to England; that is, "on the supposition that no public calamity shall happen." The Governors of the College, during his own absence, retracted their agreement to have his protest entered in all copies of the statutes. This due to Dr. Croke, who has procured a judgment against a tax on income for parochial expenses at Halifax, and manifests uniformly an anti-clerical disposition. Through him objection is made to requiring a recommendation from the Archbishop for College officials. Dr. Croke may wish the Presidentship for a friend. If a layman be appointed President, will request permission to resign office of Visitor. 117.

Clermont,
July 30. To Dr. Morice. Is about to set out for New Brunswick. Explains proposed removal of Mr. Shreve from Parrsborough to Lunenburg. Mr. Norris now claims the mission at Lunenburg, although he had applied for Cumberland, which Mr. Twining probably will relinquish. [Note: "This letter somewhat varied was sent to Dr. Morice"....] 122.

Halifax,
Aug. 25. To Dr. Morice. Has just returned from New Brunswick: held triennial visitation at St. John: ecclesiastical conditions are generally satisfactory. The situation in St. John: a chapel at Carleton has been transferred to the Church Corporation. A parsonage erected at Maugerville. The people generally are backward in contributing to the support of the missionaries. Has had difficulty in securing the Government allowance for Mr. Norris against an unjust attempt to deprive him of it. Is sorry to learn of resolve of society to discontinue Lunenburg mission and transfer allowance to Yarmouth: hopes it may be reconsidered. 124.

Clermont,
Nov. 2. To the Church Wardens and Vestry of Clemens. To be delivered by the Rev. J. Inglis. Praises their zeal, and urges that they draw up a memorial to the Society. 129

Oct. 25. "Extract of a letter from Dr. Cochran to Mr. Halliburton, Secretary to the Governors of King's College, to be laid before the Governors." As the statutes have never been executed in full, holds it unjust that he alone should be bound to their letter. 130

Halifax,
Feb. 16. To the Archbishop of Canterbury. Refers to activities of Roman Catholics: application for a charter for a seminary erected at Halifax, visit of their Bishop of Quebec, interference in marriage questions, objections of Acadians of Clare to the erection of a [Church of England] parish near them. Consequently had in his Charge made some general remarks on the nature and tendency of Popery. Edmund Bourke, Popish Priest at Halifax, published a Letter of

3 GEORGE V., A. 1913

Instruction to the Catholic Missionaries of Nova Scotia and its Dependencies, containing, in a postscript, misrepresentation of the Charge and personal abuse. The Letter "seemingly recommends Loyalty," but really advances "the old Popish Creed, so justly alarming to all Protestant Governments." It shows that they should not be assisted, by a license to the Seminary, in propagating their dangerous tenets. Bourke's personal attack aroused indignation, and the Lieut. Governor and the Attorney General wrote him letters of reprehension. A second edition of the Charge, with those letters subjoined, will be issued. The liberty assumed by the Popish Bishop of Quebec in exercising episcopal functions outside his jurisdiction calls for the serious attention of the Government. 130

Halifax,
Feb. 16.

To Lord Hobart. Incloses copy of Bourke's Letter of Instruction, pointing out its democratical tendency, denial of King's supremacy, and assertion of Pope's authority in Church and State. Also incloses copy of his Charge, which called forth Bourke's abuse. Refers to efforts to procure a license for a Roman Catholic seminary: Protestants alarmed at the progress of that sect. Submits to the wisdom of Government whether it be right to allow the Popish Bishop of Quebec to exercise his functions, in the Maritime Provinces, thus animating the Roman Catholics and providing a dangerous bond of political as well as religious union among them. 133

Clermont,
Nov. 12.

To Dr. Morice. Adds some particulars to letter of 25th August. Suggests that Mr. Arnold, missionary at Sussex Vale, be officially appointed to Norton also, to secure the glebe there. Recommends that Robert Payne be appointed schoolmaster at Prince William. In reply to letter of August 25th notes references to Mr. Twining's removal to Annapolis as Mr. Bailey's assistant, discontinuance of mission at Lunenburgh, and farm at Windsor as Bishop's residence. The need of Mr. Twining at Annapolis, especially as he could serve the contiguous settlement of Clemens, where the people have behaved well, but are being perverted by sectaries. Does not "wish to see a clergyman, with cure of souls, in America, wholly independent of the Society and the English government," nor would it be prudent for one with a large family to rely on subscriptions. Discusses reasons assigned for discontinuance of Lunenburgh mission; backwardness in contributions is a condition everywhere: the people of Lunenburgh have solemnly engaged to meet the Society's requisitions; the conjecture that the Germans can never be incorporated with the English is not well founded; Germans are desirous of learning English, and are among the best supporters of the Established Church. Trusts that the resolve will be reconsidered: it would afford a triumph to Methodists and New Lights, and leave unoccupied a long and important line of sea-coast (as is stated in a memorial from Lunenburgh). A more dubious matter is whether Mr. Shreve, who has acted irregularly in his movements from mission to mission, but is a good clergyman, should be continued at Lunenburgh: recommends his continuance, with admonitions. Would Society approve of Mr. Norris going to Cornwallis if Mr. Twining be removed? The failure of the agent for New Brunswick has caused great loss to the clergy there: recommends that Government allowances be paid to the Society. 135

- Clermont,
March 22. To Dr. Morice. Is pleased at continuance of Lunenburg mission; also that Mr. Norris will receive his allowance. Is negotiating re renting Society's farm at Windsor: a reserve is made for building residence for Bishop. As early as 1710 the Society authorized Governor Hunter to purchase a Bishop's residence at Burlington, New Jersey. Has granted a glebe at Aylesford to the Society: there is a doubt whether it can hold lands in trust, which should be resolved. As no missionary is available for Chester, a layman has been appointed to read prayers there; recommends the appointment of a schoolmistress also. Dwells on the dangers from the great number of vacant churches, especially in view of the activities of Methodists, New Lights, and Roman Catholics. Repeats observation that there are now probably as many persons in British America looking to the Society for spiritual aid as in the Revolted Colonies in 1776. Is to ordain Cyrus Perkins, who has been reading prayers at Cumberland recommends him to the Society as a missionary. Maj. Gen. Despard, Commandant and President of Cape Breton, has again applied for the removal of Mr. Cossitt,—transmitting statement of finding of Grand Jury "against the Rev'd R. Cossitt for attempting in September 1800 to persuade people to deprive Major General Despard and Lieut. Col. at conditions in general. Describes the Church situation as he found it at Sussex Vale, Kingston, Gage Town, St. Stephen's Parish (which it is proposed to make a mission), Fredericton (a memorial re glebes was presented to the President of the Province). On return to St. John had some trouble in reinstating divine service in the Chapel of St. John at Carleton. Crossed Bay of Fundy to Nova Scotia and visited, Annapolis, Digby, Clermont, Cornwallis (the new church will be one of the best in the diocese). Refers to school appointments at Woodstock, Springfield in King's Co., Wilmot, and Onslow. Suggests removal of John Campbell, schoolmaster at Stormont, Country Harbour, to Boylston, because of obstruction offered him at Stormont. John Hillyard, Independent missionary at Yarmouth, wishes to conform to the Church of England; recommends that he be employed as schoolmaster at Weymouth in the meantime. 17

To Sir George Prevost. Presents report re religious state of Chester and Aylesford. The evils arising from fanatical teachings can be counteracted only by increasing the number of clergymen; yet it remains almost stationary. 23

Halifax,
Nov. 10.

To Dr. Morice. Sends report re Chester and Aylesford. Greatly to be wished that missions could be increased in proportion to rapid increase of population. Multitudes are being led away by fanatical teachers of dubious loyalty: should these gain an ascendancy in the Legislature, towards which they are making large strides, the consequences would be disastrous. Urges Society's support to application of Prevost for Government grants to Chester and Aylesford. 24

To Goodall & Turner. Re personal and business matters. 25

Halifax,
Nov. 13.

Halifax,

P.S. to letter to Dr. Morice, Nov. 10th. Recommends assistance for a church building at Woodstock, N.B. 26

Halifax,
Dec. 2.

Dr. Inglis (Bishop's secretary) to Dr. Morice. His (Dr. Morice's) letter of June 21st shows a misunderstanding re arrangements for Dr. Cochran and Mr. Willoughby. Writer explains at length the preliminaries of that arrangement, and his own report to the Bishop, as a result of which it was made. Mr. Twining hopes Society will save him from protest of his bills by the Provincial Agent. This evil frequent and causes much loss. Distress caused by 15% income tax. Government never intended to demand this from salaries of £70 or £75, but it is levied on the aggregate of the Provincial estimate, and afterwards distributed among the small salaries. 26

To Messrs. Goodall & Turner. Re personal and business matters. 29

APPENDIX O.

PATENT OF NOBILITY GRANTED TO ROBERT GIFFARD, SEIGNIOR OF BEAUPRE.

The Archives has lately come into possession of the very valuable document, a copy of which is hereunder, conferring a title of nobility on Robert Giffard, Seigneur of Beauport. It was the first patent of nobility granted to a resident in Canada.

Robert Giffard was a native of Perche, the province in France which with Normandy furnished the largest number of first settlers in this country. Born in 1587, he visited Canada in 1627 as ship's surgeon on the vessel by which the annual voyage to the new colony was being made. With the conquest of the country by Kirk, Giffard returned to France. When Canada was restored to France, missionary enterprise among the Indians was revived, and the early letters from the Jesuit Fathers aroused much enthusiasm at home. Companies were formed in different parts of the country, of people who from one motive or another, desired to come to Canada, and among the leaders of this movement was Giffard. Having obtained the seigniorship of Beauport a tract lying between the St. Lawrence and the St. Charles rivers, he gathered together such of his neighbors as he could to accompany him, and with them set out for Canada. On reaching his seigniorship he began to carry his plans into effect. A manor house, outbuildings, and houses for his tenants were at once erected, liberal terms were made with the tenants, and farming operations were soon under weigh. This was the first seigniorship in Canada, in which agriculture was carried on, on any considerable scale.

Giffard occupied an important place in the life of the little colony. He was King's physician for nearly thirty years, and a member of the Council, from at least 1646. In 1647, he was granted the seigniorship of St. Gabriel, which he transferred to the Jesuits in 1667. He died on the 14th April 1668.

ADDENDA—APPENDIX L.

Philadelphia,
May 14.

Gérard to Vergennes. No. 83. Deals with despatches Nos. 7 and 8, so far as they have not been answered by other communications. Correcting a statement in an earlier letter he says the intention of Congress is to continue the War rather than accept an honourable peace, without comprising France in it. He is glad to be advised that either of the allies may receive propositions from the common enemy, but that neither may enter upon isolated negotiations. Has impressed this idea strongly on members of Congress. Hopes King is satisfied with manner English commissioners have been dealt with. Believes Congress will remain faithful to its resolution not to treat with English except on conditions: (1) the evacuation of their territory or the recognition of their independence (2) the association of France in the peace. Thinks it might be dangerous to press too strongly upon the Americans the desirability of relinquishing the idea of conquering Canada. The most reasonable among them are not equal to such moderation. The King would do well to rely upon the impossibility of the Americans succeeding in this enterprise themselves, and trust to the skill of his agent to evade the American demand for French co-operation. Washington has probably some inkling of France's views, but he certainly will make no ill use of his surmises. Gérard is following instructions and eluding schemes presenting themselves every now and then, for an attack on Halifax. Congress pleased with approval of King, respecting its conduct towards Burgoyne's army. Majority of states will refuse to continue the war simply on the question of the fisheries. Principal ground for fear, in Gérard's opinion, is the weakening or even dissolution of confederation when common peril passes. Gérard impresses on Congress that Great Britain is about to push the campaign vigorously. This is necessary as Opposition continue to evade resolutions of Congress as to strengthening the army. Depreciation of the paper money, which is the scourge of America. Lee and one or two of his friends persist in maintaining that the articles advanced by Beaumarchais must be regarded as gifts and that France would not dare to refuse further succour nor even to make War for the fisheries. The other members treat these views with contempt. There is desire that France should guarantee loans of Congress. Gérard recommends this. He is intimating that there are negotiations on foot between Spain and England, in order to bring Congress to a decision. Congress would unanimously reject a long truce. Its acceptance of the truce might be brought about, however, by obtaining England's acceptance of it, as the desire in America for peace is so strong, that if the alternatives were an assured truce for long period or continued war, they would probably decide for former. As to Franklin, Gérard is persuaded that if Lee were out of the way, Franklin would be recalled. Gérard paves the way for greater freedom of action on part of France by warning members of the consequences of their dilatoriness. Intimates that if Americans insist on conditions in treaty with England, which go beyond their independence, they may not find themselves supported by France, as the latter country looks to the terms of the Alliance alone for its guidance. He has to deal with a set of ill intentioned sophists who would take advantage of the smallest opening to bring everything to confusion. He would be afraid of seeming to throw ridicule on Congress if he reported to the King the curious metaphysical arguments by which they support their pretensions to a share in the fisheries on British coasts. Gérard has informed members of Congress that he thought the King would support the United States in their demands as regards the Nova Scotia fisheries, so long as these demands did not offer an obstacle to peace. p. 70

La Luzerne to Vergennes. No. 25. States that neither he nor Congress has received any news from Europe since his arrival. The terms of the Ultimatum, of which Adams is the bearer, are coming to be known in the Eastern States, and are causing so much excitement as to be disquieting were it not for the sincerity of the other states towards the Alliance. The four New England states, already so influential, have made a sort of coalition with Pennsylvania and Delaware, by which they obtain a practical control over the work of Congress. As Georgia is not represented, the States line up 6 against 6, the New England group being perfectly united, while the other is broken up by internal divisions. New York State is exercised over posture of affairs, and is taking steps to counteract the measures of the northern states, when this seems necessary. La Luzerne advises, as best plan, an effort to detach Pennsylvania and Delaware from the New England states. The most intelligent members think there will always be rivalry between the northern and the southern states, and that it will be with the middle states, that is to say, New York, the Jerseys, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware, to hold the balance between the opposing forces. La Luzerne presumes that the fleet which left New York lately is destined for the conquest of South Carolina, and possibly of North Carolina as well. If the English become masters of the two Carolinas, their Assemblies will send no more members to Congress. To offset the weakening of the Southern influence, La Luzerne suggested that the members for those states now in Congress, should be authorized by their constituents to represent them for an indefinite period, at the time their period of representation was limited to one year. p. 1
