New McLaughlin Light Six K-6-63

Is a continuation of and improvement on the H-6-63

This new model embodies all the splendid features which have made the McLaughlin Light Six the outstanding car for power and economy in gasoline consumption. But it includes many new points which make the K-6-63 more efficient from a mechanical standpoint.

Among the outstanding changes are an increased wheelbase 2-115 inches; a stronger frame with box type centre cross member and a much wider rear cross member; new special expensive design cushion and back construction, making the upholstery of the most comfortable and luxurious type; improved fenders, heavier wheel spokes; improved design tire carrier equipment and a specially designed top.

Longer New Springs—Width of plates increased: front from 1 1/2" to 2"; rear from 1 1/4" to 2 1/4". Fitted with special phosphor bronze bushings, eliminating squeaks and improving the riding qualities.

The new K-6-63 McLaughlin Light Six touring car is a genuine McLaughlin model and upholds the established McLaughlin reputation for quality.

This model is finished in green with black fenders and chassis. The upholstery is of genuine black pleated hand-buffed leather. Instrument board is of walnut; the top is made of mohair top material.

New Rector for Athens and Lansdowne Rear

Rev. V. O. Boyle, M.A., of Hillier and Wellington, to Succeed Rev. George Code.

The Lord Bishop of Ontario has appointed the Rev. Victor Osmond Boyle, M.A., Trinity College, Toronto, and now rector of Lansdowne Rear to succeed the Rev. George Code, M.A., who has recently resigned through ill health. The Rev. Mr. Boyle has had a distinguished career both at College and in the ministry. He was ordained deacon in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, May 30, 1915. He was then licensed to the mission of Coe Hill, where he did excellent work. In October 1916 he was appointed curate of St. George's Cathedral and soon became the idol of the youth of that congregation for the keen interest he manifested in all their societies. About June 1917, he was appointed to his present charge as rector of Hillier and Wellington in Prince Edward's County, near Picton. The cry of more army chaplains to serve in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces forced him to volunteer and he obtained leave to absence shortly after his marriage in September, 1917, he was appointed chaplain at Niagara camp. There he did most excellent work among the boys and became most popular. Rev. Mr. Boyle did not get overseas, but after the war he returned to his former parish welcomed by his loyal parishioners. Promotion has come quickly to the Rev. Mr. Boyle, but it is because he is a man who does things and works hard and makes a success of his work that he has been appreciated by his bishop. Congratulations both to Lansdowne Rear and also to Rev. Mr. Boyle in so excellent an appointment. Rev. Mr. Boyle will assume his new duties May 1.

Sunday School Lesson V., May 2, 1920 THE BOY SAMUEL

Commentary—1. Samuel dedicated to the Lord (1: 2-26). When Hannah gave a son, she promised that she would lend him to him all the days of his life; accordingly she took him to the house of the Lord when he was weaned that he might remain there in the service of Jehovah.

At what age he began this service we are not told. He must have been at least two or three years of age and possibly five or six, for Oriental scholars tell us that it is not uncommon for a mother in that country to nurse her child up to the age of five or six years.

When Hannah went to the house of the Lord at Shiloh, a place about twenty miles north of Jerusalem to dedicate her son to the Lord, she took as an offering three bullocks, a half bushel of more of flour and a skin-bottle of wine. It had been suggested that one bullock was for a burnt-offering, one for a "sacrifice performing a vow, and one for a peace-offering (Num. 15: 10).

II. The Call of Samuel (3: 1-10). 1. Samuel—The name means, "Asked of God." Ministered unto the Lord before Eli.—A minister is a servant. Samuel, was according to the opinion of Josephus twenty years old at this time. He had duties to perform about the tabernacle, pertaining to the light (v. 3) and the doors (v. 15). He was also the personal attendant of Eli, who was aged and partially blind.

Word of the Lord was precious.—The word was rare as the moral and spiritual condition of Israel was not favorable to frequent messages from God to the people. Priests and people had departed from the Lord. No open version—"No frequent vision."

R.V. 2. At that time.—It was during the period of the scarcity of revelation. It was a memorable time in the lives of Eli and Samuel. Eli was laid down in his place. He probably slept in one of the buildings surrounding the tabernacle, erected for the accommodation of the priests and other attendants. Samuel slept near by. 3. Ere the lamp of God went out. This was the golden lamp which stood before the most holy place. It was lighted at sunset and burned until morning. Where the ark of God was.—This was the most holy place. The ark was the symbol of God's presence.

4. The Lord called Samuel.—The boy was awakened by the call, "and he answered, Here am I." Samuel was attentive to his duties. The voice must have sounded to him like that of Eli, but being awakened from sleep by the call, he would not be likely to judge clearly when it came. 5. He ran unto Eli.—Inasmuch as he was accustomed to wait upon Eli, it was entirely natural that he should suppose that Eli had called him, thinking he needed some attention. I called not.—Samuel must have been surprised at Eli's answer, but he took it that he himself might have been mistaken. At Eli's direction he obediently lay down again. 6. Thou didst call me.—Samuel's readiness and attention afford an excellent example of the virtue of obedience. 7. Samuel did not yet know of the Lord.—Samuel knew not the Lord in the way of receiving divine communications from him, for, as already stated such communications were at that time rare.—Whedon. The second part of the verse explains the first.

8. Eli perceived that the Lord had called the child.—If Samuel had come to him but once or even twice, thinking that he had called him, he would probably have thought the boy was dreaming; but when he came the third time, positive that Eli had called him, the priest was convinced that the Lord was speaking to him. 9. Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.—No wiser advice could have been given than this. When God calls, and he calls all, this is a most fitting response to make. 10. The Lord came, and stood, and called.—God not only spoke to Samuel, but he also appeared to him in some visible form. He called all children by his Spirit.

11. The Lord's Message to Eli (3: 11-18). 11. The Lord said to Samuel.—God did not at this time speak directly to Eli. He had previously sent a message to him, as regarded in the preceding chapter. He speaks to Samuel now, in calling him to the prophetic office, and for the purpose of preparing him for receiving and conveying other messages from him.

loud, sharp, discordant note thrilled one's ears with pain, so the bitter tidings of Israel's loss in the judgment about to fall on Eli's house would shock all Israel.

Reference is made to the coming defeat of Israel by the Philistines, in which the ark of the covenant would be captured, Eli's sons would lose their lives and Eli himself would die as a consequence of the defeat.

12. Which I have spoken.—By the prophet, as recorded in 1 Sam. 2: 27-36. Make an end.—The Lord would complete the work which he had threatened by His prophet.

13. He sons made themselves vile.—They were greedy and ill-contents. Restrained them not.—Eli contained himself with gentle exhortation (1 Sam. 2: 23), instead of thrusting them out of the sacred office they had so grossly abused. By this weak indulgence he became partaker of their sins.

14-18. Samuel lay until morning, then opened the doors of the house of the Lord as usual, for a report of what God had said to him. When he heard the message, he quietly acknowledged the justice of it all.

19. Samuel recognized as a prophet (3: 19-21). 19. The Lord was with him.—God's presence affords comfort, strength and guidance. God was with Abraham (Gen. 21: 22), Jacob (Gen. 28: 15), Joseph (Gen. 39: 2), Moses (Exod. 3: 12), Joshua (Josh. 1: 5), Gideon (Judges 6: 16), David (1 Sam. 16: 18) and others. Let none of His words fall to the ground.—What Samuel said under divine inspiration came to pass. He was a true prophet.

20. From Dan even to Beer-sheba.—This phrase denotes the total extent of Israel. Dan was at the extreme north and Beer-sheba at the extreme south. 21. The visible abode of Jehovah was in Shiloh and there he revealed himself to his prophet.

Questions.—Who were Elkanah and Hannah? What was the burden of Hannah's prayer at the house of the Lord? To whom did Hannah "lend" Samuel, and for how long? Where did Samuel live? What were some of the boy Samuel's duties? What did the bear one night? How many times was he called? What message did the Lord give Samuel for Eli? How did Eli receive the message? Tell how Samuel became established as a prophet in Israel.

PRACTICAL SURVEY. Topic.—Religious training of children. Samuel, a child of prayer and promise.

II. Religious training of children. The record of Samuel takes up the thread of Israel's history where the Book of Judges leaves it, toward the close of the forty years of Philistinian oppression. The events recorded embrace a period of about one hundred and twenty years. It is the record of the Jewish nation, and indirectly of the kingdom of God on earth.

The Book of Samuel has a special value as revealing the kingdom of Christ, as king, and first announces that the kingdom founded in him will be universal and everlasting (2 Sam. 7: 12-16).

I. Samuel, a child of prayer and promise. The name Samuel, "the asked of God," is significant. In the account of his birth attention is chiefly fixed upon his mother. She was a woman of keen spiritual sensitivities, was almost a Nazirite in practice and possessed prophetic gifts (2: 1).

The gift of the Lord to the child of prayer, of which there is no example in the Old Testament. In keeping with the old of vows in which she lived, she dedicated him before his birth to the calling of a Nazirite. When weaned, he was brought to the tabernacle at Shiloh, where he was solemnly consecrated (1: 24). The prayer hymn which follows has both an historic which follows has both an historic and prophetic significance. A pious and prophetic significance. A pious and prophetic significance.

When Most Accidents Occur. Some interesting facts in regard to safety work have been gleaned from the Safety Committee's experience in connection with the large plants of the General Electric Company industries on the other side of the line. The tabulated data shows that more accidents occur on Monday than on any other day of the week and that the most careful age is found to be 37.

Other striking incidents are that the average woman in the factory is between 22 and 26, and 50 per cent of the accidents occur to new employees or those who have less than six months in one position. Contrary to general belief, the foreign-born employees are quick in acquiring the safety habit, if taught. More accidents occur in the hot season than in the cold. Over 80 per cent of the accidents are due to carelessness. The average woman on the same kind of work meets with an accident only one-third as frequently as the average man.

Why A. J. MacLeod Praises Dodd's Kidney Pills. Nova Scotia Man Gives the Reason Why He Advises Sufferers from Kidney Trouble to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

River Dennis, N.S., April 26.—(Special)—"Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me wonderfully. My back is better and I have never had any other medicine since starting to take them, they must have done me a lot of good."

In these words Alexander J. MacLeod a well-known resident here gives his reason why he praises Dodd's Kidney Pills and why he says, "I would advise anybody who has kidney trouble to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial."

The reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are popular all over Canada is that people have tried them and found them good. Dodd's Kidney Pills have been in use in Canada for more than thirty years. They have been used by thousands of people suffering from various forms of kidney trouble, such as rheumatism, dropsy, sore back, weakness, diabetes and Bright's disease.

Ask any one of these thousands to give you his opinion of Dodd's Kidney Pills. It is on the relief afforded sufferers from kidney trouble that Dodd's Kidney Pills built their reputation as the sovereign remedy for sick kidneys.

EXPLAINING THE EARLY BIRD. First Bird.—(Didn't you come north unusually soon?) Second Bird.—Yes, I heard nests are going to be awfully scarce!

Corns cripple the feet and make walking a torture, yet sure relief in the shape of Holloway's Corn Cure is within reach of all.

THERE ARE PETS AND PETS. (Boston Transcript.) Heck—"My wife has a great fondness for pets, has yours?" Peck—"That depends on whether you refer to animals or the mood."

Miller's Worm Powders do not need the after-help of castor oil or any purgative to complete their thoroughness, because they are thorough in themselves. One dose of them, and they will be found palatable by all children, will end the worm trouble by making the stomach and bowels untenable to the parasites. And not only this, but the powders will be certain to exert most beneficial influences in the digestive organs.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN

It is important that the seeds be selected carefully, and purchases should be made from reliable dealers. As a rule, a small quantity, of excellent quality, is better than a large quantity of poor or cheap seeds.

Frequently cheap seeds contain weed seeds, and these, when sown, will grow and become a menace ever after. Besides there is poor vitality in cheap seeds, they very often dying shortly after germination.

Another objection to cheap seeds is that there is no guarantee that they will turn out what they are represented to be. It is dangerous to buy the least to find that, after a year's nursing the crop is not the variety wanted.

Reliable seeds should be planted in approximate the following quantities: Beans, 2 1/2 to 3 per foot; Swiss chard, 2 1/2 to 3 per foot; peas, 10 to 12 per foot; squash and pumpkins, 4 to 8 per hill. The growth should be carefully watched and the plants thinned as needed.

PREPARING THE GARDEN SOIL. Early preparation of the garden soil is important for best results in making the mechanical condition what it should be. Garden soil is required to produce healthy plants. The soil must be in the best possible mechanical condition. It must be deep, mellow and should be plowed or hoed.

When such soil becomes compacted, it is covered by a film of water, which is retained for some time. The plant food is thus dissolved, and this water-laden plant food is taken by the roots of the plants. The finer soil particles the more pore space between for air and the better it will hold moisture. Other conditions being equal, the soil must have plenty of what is known as humus—decayed vegetable and animal matter that makes up that dark, "stringy" part of the soil. When the soil is in this condition, it is necessary to apply manure, straw and other rubbish to decompose and supply the organic matter.

Commercial fertilizer may be used to good advantage on most gardens. Acid phosphate is especially beneficial in many soils. More phosphate is required for beans, peas, turnips, melons, etc., under conditions prevailing on most farms. A heavy yield of crops. Nitrate where a heavy yield is desired. Nitrate supply of nitrogen; wood ashes or potash salts to supply the potash in case it is needed.

VEGETABLE SOWING TABLE. The following table will be found useful in computing vegetable seed requirements when making out the sowing schedule.

Seed of Sown for a Row. Beet ..... 8 in. apart, 400 ft. Carrot ..... 8 in. apart, 600 ft. Celery ..... 8 in. apart, 600 ft. Lettuce ..... 4 in. apart, 250 ft. Onion ..... 4 in. apart, 250 ft. Broilers of pigs must bear in mind that the only hope of making pig-raising a profitable industry lies in their producing pork of the best quality, and this can only be accomplished by breeding from those animals which are possessed in a marked degree of those points such as early maturity, quick growth, fine quality of bone and offal, and then by selecting a pig should make one pound in weight for every day of its life, and then it will be ready for the market any time after it is 6 months old.

It should cause every farmer to maintain his cows in an attractive, cleanly and sanitary condition every day in the year. In a way the appearance of the cow is an accurate measure of the owner.

A horse, no matter how highly he may be bred, is a great amount of good, honest, cold without any effects even upon his coat, if he is properly clothed; provided, always, and it is an unquestionable fact that if he is allowed to enjoy a fair allowance of fresh air when in the stable he will be less liable to suffer from colds and chills than he would were he always kept in a heated atmosphere. It is the standing about of doors that creates most of the mischief that horses suffer from, and the danger is materially increased when the animals are heated.

It seems reasonable to expect that following the decrease in colt production, which has been evident during recent years, we will have a period in which the price of horses will be materially above cost of production.

Efficient work cannot be done on farms with poor and inadequate farm implements. With labor scarce and high there is now a stronger reason than ever for using improved and necessary farm implements and machines. Use implements and conserve labor.

A Real Asthma Remedy. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has never been advertised by extravagant statements. Its claims are conservative indeed, when judged by the cures which it performs. Exact real relief and permanent benefit when you buy this remedy and you will not have cause for disappointment. It gives permanent relief in many cases where other so-called remedies have utterly failed.

Many agree as to the goal—truth—but never as to the road, the method and criterion.—Amiel.

There is a disease called rickets which is rife throughout Great Britain. It begins in early childhood and always leaves its effect upon an adult, man or woman.

Spinal curvature and other bone deformities, defective teeth, with consequent poorly developed bodies, result from this widely prevalent disease. Many pale, anaemic, stunted men and women frequently seen among the poor and middle classes, owe their present physical condition to this disease contracted during the first and second years of life.

The Medical Research Committee have recently published the results of the investigations which have been carried on during the past three years at the Lister Institute, London, and at Cambridge. These research workers have discovered the cause of this disease, which is undermining the health of the nation. This great discovery has resulted from actual experiments on mice, guinea-pigs and puppies.

Briefly, the results of the investigations are these: Rickets is a deficiency disease. A deficiency disease is one which is caused by the lack of something in the food supply necessary for the proper development and functioning of the body.

Certain foods fall to support nutrition—disease follows because there is absent in these foods minute amounts of certain constituents which are called vitamins.

The disease as seen in human beings can be reproduced in animals fed on certain foods which are lacking in certain fats—the so-called animal fats, of which the best examples are milk, butter and cod-liver oil.

Puppies with artificially produced rickets can be cured when animal fats are added to their diet. The treatment given to puppies with rickets, if applied to children, should lead to equally beneficial results, unless the damage to the bones and other tissues of the bodies has advanced too far.

Milk and butter are the best articles of diet for young and growing children. If there is a shortage of butter, it should be reserved for children; if it is totally lacking, the deficiency can be replaced by margarine made from animal fats, by cod-liver oil and by the fish-oil, and by eggs. The margarines made from vegetable oils are to be condemned.

When there are already signs of rickets a daily dose of cod-liver oil is essential to all other proceedings. Thousands of infants are being deprived of an adequate supply of this essential constituent of their diet. A large proportion of these will grow up and become our future men and women, and many will die as the infant mortality is high in children with rickets.

It Has Many Qualities.—The man who possesses a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is armed against many ills. It will cure a cough, break a cold, prevent sore throat; it will reduce the swelling from a sprain, cure the most persistent sores and will speedily heal cuts and contusions. It is a medicine chest in itself, and can be got for a quarter of a dollar.

Japanese Proverbs. Saito-man, a well-known Japanese journalist, writes as follows in the London Daily Mail: Many foreigners have been pleased to call my country the land of proverbs. A large percentage of our proverbs, it is needless to say, concern women.

Most of the old well-known ones have been freely translated, or stolen, by foreign writers. But we are not worried. New and clever proverbs are fast being created by the new generation of men and women.

It translates below some of the gems which have recently come under my notice. They do not necessarily represent the opinion of the present day Japanese people, but they are at any rate a contribution to the abundant world wisdom on the immortal problem: "Tender and hard is woman's heart."

"If you want to love women begin by spending money."

"Women who remember shop signs and trademarks make good wives."

"Very jealous women are easy to control."

"Fride goes before a fall, especially in beautiful women."

"Women and mountains should be looked on at a distance."

"Men who can neither brag nor flatter need not fear being loved by women."

Mothers can easily know when their children are troubled with worms, and they lose no time in applying the best of remedies—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

Righted in Time

He went on: "So, you see, I'm honest with you. I can't offer you the money—or even part of it. I don't even feel as if it were mine to offer. It's a trust—to spend on far more people's needs than just yours and mine. That's why I wanted to see you—to explain it all."

Moya met his eyes. She still looked wondering and doubtful. So this was why he wanted to see her for no other reason than that had set her mother calculating and scheming. She felt utterly taken aback. He did not even say he was sorry, or make excuses for his appropriation of the money. He cut the ground from right under Moya's feet.

She found herself gasping out, without in the least intending to speak. "Oh, I think it's splendid of you, I'm really glad you've got the money. You can do more with it than I can—I see that now. I should have just spent it on myself. Perhaps it would have spoiled me completely. I darest say it would. Oh, I am glad you told me all this. I—I only wish I had known it before."

She felt deadly ashamed. What would he say if he knew all she had thought, and what she had said to Barry, too?

"Because you've been thinking some hard things of me," he smiled. "But now you understand. I'm shameless, you see—have no scruples in taking the money, not the least! I'd take more if I could get it; all I could, in fact. You were speaking of London just now. If you'd seen only what I've seen just this day! Of people who live all their lives with grimy toil, who never hardly dream of such a place as this, all peaceful sea and sunset and fair sky. Yes, I've no scruples when I think of them. I want all the money I can get—for them."

He turned and looked into her eyes. "So we're friends, aren't we? We understand each other. Ah, I knew we should."

He had held out his hand. Much to her surprise, Moya found hers in his, in a firm, close clasp. She had certainly intended no such compact of friendship with the man she was prepared to dislike and distrust. And in her mind was a howling, barred surprise. She had prepared, with Barry's help, a huge bombshell to stagger her family and Guy Berkeley, too. Perhaps he had hurried a far greater bombshell at her now. Anyhow, Moya knew all her ideas and thoughts were shaken and trembling from their foundations. And she wondered how she was going to build them up again.

When Moya came down the next morning to breakfast her ideas had hardly readjusted themselves even then. One predominant thought whispered—had her mock engagement been so necessary after all?

Not even the most soaring flight of vanity could read into Guy Berkeley's words more than that compact of friendship had avowed. He had come to see her, not for a prospective bride, to see her make reparation for her lost fortune—reparation from which all Moya's honest soul shrank—but to

NURSE STOPS CATARRH

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly-smelling salves or ointments. No use of any medicine. Nothing to smoke or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or plaster. Nothing of the kind. It is something new and different. It is something that is instantly successful. You do not have to wait, and linger, and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it over night—and I will gladly tell you how—write me and I will send you the full particulars.

BE FREE FROM CATARRH!

Catarrh is filthy and loathsome—it dulls one's mind, it undermines your health and weakens your will. The hacking, coughing, spitting is obnoxious to all, and the foul breath and disgusting habits make even loved ones avoid you secretly. Your delight in life is dulled and your faculties are impaired. You know it will bring you to an untimely grave because every moment of the day and night it is slowly yet surely sapling away your vitality. It is ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me and I will send you the full particulars.

SEND NO MONEY

Just say: "I want to try Jan-O-Sun." I will understand, and I will write to you with complete information FREE. Do not send any money. Turn this page until you have asked for this wonderful treatment that can do for you what has done for so many others.

tell her of his work, the work which was plainly his life.

He had not talked to the others as he had spoken on the quiet seashore to Moya. He had laughed and chaffed with the boys, had fallen easily enough into the holiday life of the cottage. But Moya could not help thinking what her mother would say if she knew Guy Berkeley did not look on his money as his own at all, but as a trust to use for others.

"Would she be so eager for me to marry him?" thought Moya, a little sadly. "Oh, dear, life is a funny thing. What would Barry say? How can I tell him?"

She came downstairs to the lower-rattled room where the breakfast was laid, into an atmosphere that grated on this perplexed, troubled mood.

A shout of boyish laughter greeted her. A shrill whistling of the opening bars of the wedding march.

"Congratulations, Moya. Been dreaming of him, eh? Couldn't sleep, perhaps, for joy. You're awfully late, you know. Why didn't you come bathing before breakfast, as you promised?"

"I overslept myself, and forgot all about it. Oh, do stop that awful noise, boys!"—the wedding march intensified—"you'll horrify Mr. Berkeley, if you behave young hooligans."

"He's out for a swim, Miss Moya, and isn't back yet. As for us, we have been round to the Tremonts, consulting Barry, poor chap! Done for himself, he has! But he's as sorry as he can be by now."

Moya's dark eyes flashed fire. She knew Guy might be back any moment, and besides, her mother would come down soon. "If you're going on like this all through breakfast," she threatened, "I won't stand it—I'll—"

The expected happened. Guy came in at the door, and a second later was followed by Mrs. Raleigh.

That lady had a deterrent influence on her sons that was rather surprising. They dared not go too far with her—why, she hardly knew, seeing they were without a father's control. They sniggered a little now, and made hideous grimaces at Moya behind Guy's back. But only Harry, the youngest, plucked up sufficient courage in the face of the icy dignity which was Mrs. Raleigh's breakfast manner.

"Have you congratulated Moya?" he demanded carelessly of their guest. "She's been and gone and done it, you know. It just happened yesterday. Barry has hardly got over the shock yet, poor chap. I say—"

Perhaps Guy may be excused for looking bewildering and uncomprehending. He had not heard the wedding march. He was speaking to Una at that moment about the tides and the best bathing place, and how much he had enjoyed his swim in the sea, the first for many a long month of hard work.

He looked up, but before he had had time to speak, or Moya even to flush with annoyance, Mrs. Raleigh broke in.

"Please take no notice of it, Guy. It's just a mere joke of the children's—a passing thing. Of course I'm annoyed about it. But a—I realize it's only a girl-and-boy affair—not serious enough to forbid. Something to be laughed at, and forgotten."

Hardly knowing what she did, Moya looked up, her face crimsoned. She caught the look of surprise in Guy's deep-grey eyes, she saw the angry, purposeful gleam of her mother's; but most of all, she met Una's gaze, pained and questioning. It seemed to say to her, "Is it really no more than that? Haven't you courage to fight for love—the most sacred thing in life?"

Suddenly Moya got up from the table. She put one trembling hand on the back of her chair.

"It isn't, mater," she said, in a low, choked voice. "You know it. It isn't that—not that!"

The words were incoherent. But Moya did not wait either to say or hear any others. She went away out into the further corner of the garden, and from thence to the cool solitude of the shore.

The morning haze was still over the sea. Everything was lovely and serene. Moya sat down on the arm of the breakwater, the little waves almost under her feet, the cool breeze fanning her hot face.

Back again came Barry's laughing words—that he might be helping her out of one hole into a worse one. She had done this to save her pride. Then why was she sitting there, feeling so humiliated?

She gazed down at the clear spray, leaping gracefully in little jets and eddies of pure crystal, beneath her feet. Then she caught a sound of clattering stones, and looking up, she saw Guy Berkeley coming down the cliff path.

He must see her, of course, outlined as she was against the blue water, as she sat perched on the old breakwater. But he would not come to speak to her—after this.

Yet he came on, and Moya perceived that probably he had come purposely to speak to her. For he picked his way round the pools of outgoing tide till he reached the breakwater. Then he looked at her with a friendly, frank smile.

"I've come to congratulate you," he said. "I've not had a chance before, have I?"

Now those words took Moya back. At best she had expected him to ignore the subject which had occasioned that painful little scene in the breakfast-room. She did not think to find him approach it in so frank and unembarrassed a spirit.

He went on without waiting for her to reply. "I know what you're feeling—but that a mere stranger should see and hear this! But then, I don't want you to think of me as a mere stranger. I want you to think of me as a friend. That's why I came to you on the one which played with clinging strands of seaweed that clothed the ing. It came to her suddenly that he was thinking she was fatherless, and realized that a mother's unselfish love had never filled.

"Are you thinking why I say all this?" Because I want to be your friend. And I think one day perhaps you will need a friend. When you do, think of me."

He laid his hand lightly for a second other, and win the happiness that only true love can give."

Moya looked silently at him. His grey eyes were kind and a little pity-speak about it at once. I want to give you my good wishes for the future. I heard what Mrs. Raleigh said, of course. But I want you to know that I, for one, don't think that I believe that youth often has the best in life—and nearly always knows the best and purest of love. A boy-and-girl affair—why, it means a setting out on life together. It means all the hopes of the future. And when you've known each other pretty well all your lives, as I understand you two have done—no, I wanted you to know that I, for one, don't laugh at it. I, for one, give you all my good wishes, and hope you'll keep true to each breakwater. His whole manner was kind and protecting, like some elder brother who would take the place of a dead father, and protect his little sister from a hard, unympathetic world. And Moya all at once felt a sob in his throat, while a wave of ashamed color swept from brow to chin.

What was she doing—to take this man's sympathy and kindness? What would he say if he knew it was all a pretence? Una's loving words of congratulation had first stirred her uncomfortably. But how much more of this? She had no right to this beautiful offer of sincere friendship. What would he say if he knew what a trivial little wretch she was, that her mother's words plucked the truth far nearer than his own thoughts.

She felt she could not meet those honest grey eyes, that searched hers so kindly. He meant to reassure her. Instead, she felt miserably shaken from her own self-esteem.

"Oh," she said tremblingly, "you mustn't think—I don't want you to think—I and caught herself up quickly. Of course he would have to go on thinking this. She had plunged headlong on a course she had never considered where it might lead.

"I don't think that," he said, misunderstanding her meaning. "I am sure you would not enter on a mere passing fancy—that it must be deeper than that if you have the courage to take your own view in spite of opposition. I am sure your mother is mistaken. And if you are true to yourself and to your lover things will come right in the end."

IN MARS.

A Few Facts About Our Celestial Neighbors.

Sending wireless messages to Mars and Venus, and the possibility of projecting a rocket to the moon are subjects of recent speculation which have excited keener interest in our solar system.

"Mars always challenges interest," says William Joseph Showalter, an eminent scientist.

"Its day is about the same length as ours, but its year is nearly twice as long. Although astronomers generally take less interest than laymen in the sur-: as to whether other planets and stars are inhabited, since they, more than laymen, realize that this is a problem that must in all human probability remain unsolved, the question is more often asked about Mars than any other planet.

"Venus was an unusually interesting object in the sky during July of last year. Not again until February, 1921, will it appear as bright and fair in the evening sky. It has phases like the moon, and these can be seen even through a good field glass. Its day is believed to be the same length as its year, which is 224 of our days.

"It is quite generally believed that Mars has ice-capped poles. The telescope reveals white spots at the poles that have every appearance of being like our ocean Polar region. They advance toward the equator in winter and retreat in summer. In the summer of 1916 Lockyer, who, with Lowell, has led the school of astronomers who believe they can see canals on Mars, said that he found the white caps stretching farther down toward the equator than he had ever seen them before.

"He said that if there was any connection between the weather of Mars and that of the earth the winter of 1916-1917 would be the coldest in many years. And it was. May it yet be possible to do long-range weather forecasting on the earth by studying the waxing and waning of the ice-cap on the South Pole or Mars?"

"Perhaps our most graphic picture of the solar system is given by Herschel. It is a circular field two and a half miles in diameter in the very centre; 82 feet away put a mustard seed. The globe will represent the sun and the mustard seed Mercury.

THE RAINBOW'S SOUNDS.

Incredible as it may seem, a beam of light can be made to produce sound. A ray of sunlight is thrown through a lens on to a glass vessel containing lampblack, colored silk or worsted, or any like substance. A disk having slits or openings cut in it is made to revolve swiftly in this beam of light, so as to "cut it up," thus causing alternate flashes of light and shadow. When one places his ear to the glass vessel he hears strange sounds so long as the flashing beam falls upon the vessel.

A still more extraordinary effect is produced when the beam of sunlight is made to pass through a prism so as to produce what is called the solar spectrum. The disk is turned and the colored light of the rainbow is made to break through it. Now if the ear be placed to the vessel containing the silk or other material, as the colored lights of the spectrum fall upon it, sounds will be given out by the different parts of the spectrum, and there will be silence in other parts.

For instance, if the vessel contains red worsted and the green light flashes upon it loud sounds will be heard forth. Only feeble sounds will be heard when the red and the blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel. Other colors will produce no sounds at all. Green silk gives out sound best in a red light. Every kind of material gives more or less sound in different colors and no sound at all in others.

KILLING THE WALRUS.

Will This Mammal Follow the Buffalo to Oblivion?

The killing off of the walrus had far more than anything else to do with the peril of starvation which menaced the very existence of the Eskimos only a few years ago. Reindeer, imported from Siberia, have saved them, but to the loss of the gigantic marine mammal is a really dreadful misfortune.

The walrus is one of the most useful creatures provided by a bountiful providence for the benefit of mankind, and since time immemorial it has been the main dependence of the Eskimos.

There are to-day comparatively few walrus left alive, and the prospect is that before long this valuable species will be virtually exterminated. Persistent slaughter has reduced its numbers to such a point that there is no longer much profit in hunting it for commercial purposes—wherein lies the only hope for its survival.

Hunters seek the beast for its tusks, which are of very fine ivory; for its hide, which makes first-rate moccasins, and even for its whiskers, which furnish picks for opium pipes. To the Eskimo it is (or was) food, clothing, house, utensils (from bones and tusks) and most other necessities of life.

More than half a century ago the whalers, responding to a commercial demand for ivory, turned their attention to the walrus and proceeded to wipe them out systematically. Some 30,000 as many as 2,000 of the animals were slaughtered on a single cake of ice merely for their tusks.

Thus to-day a walrus is hardly to be found in waters where the creatures used to be so numerous that their howlings were heard above the roar of the waves and the grinding of the ice floes.

The poor animals had no chance at all. Usually the method adopted was to approach a herd of walrus on the ice, and after picking off the most alert bulls from a safe distance with rifles, slaughter the rest at leisure.

SMOKER'S PARADISE.

The Mexican Gets Good Tobacco Cheaply.

Mexico may be called the smoker's paradise. There is plenty of good, cheap tobacco in that country, where the leaf grows freely. Furthermore, no tax is levied upon it. One may buy in Mexico a cigar, every bit as good as the average 15 cent brand in this country for a sum equivalent to 2 1-2 cents of our money. Cigarettes are cheap in proportion. To protect the domestic article Mexico levied a prohibitive tax upon imported tobacco, so that no Mexican thinks of buying an American cigar.

The laboring classes are able to buy two boxes of cigarettes, containing ten each, for 2 1-2 cents in our money. The tobacco in these is the sun dried natural leaf, and of coarse grade, with coarse paper wrappings. The market is abundantly supplied also with cigarettes of high grade tobacco in the best paper wrappings.

For the most part the Mexican takes his tobacco in the form of cigarettes.

In the Spring Time

Any fool knows enough to carry an umbrella when it rains, but the wise man is he who carries one when it is only cloudy. Any man will send for a doctor when he gets bedfast, but the wiser one is he who adopts proper measures before his illness become serious. During a hard winter or the following spring one feels run-down, tired out, weak and nervous. Probably you have suffered from a cold, the Grip or flu, which has left you thin, weak and pale. This is the time to put your system in order. It is time for house-cleaning.

A good, old-fashioned alternative and temperance tonic is one made of wild roots and barks, without the use of alcohol, and called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in tablet or liquid form. This is nature's tonic, which restores the tone of the stomach, activity of the liver and steadiness to the nerves, strengthening the whole system. First put up by Dr. Pierce over 50 years ago, now procurable at any drug store; or send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont., for trial package.

Brandram's BB WHITE GENUINE LEAD

THEY used it for the stage-coach of olden days in England—we use it in Canada today. Compare it with any other white lead or white paint, and you will decide that your house—or anything you wish to have truly white and remain white—must be painted with this brand which has survived as the leading white lead for nearly two centuries.
Thinned with linseed oil and turpentine, it makes a perfect white paint. Combined with coloring matter, it makes the satisfactory tinted paint of any shade. It is the basis for that finest of ready-mixed paint, B-H "English" Paint.
Made in a modern Canadian factory, and by the same process as was employed for its manufacture by its inventor in England, it is today the only survivor of all the patented white lead processes of that earlier generation. It has survived because it results in a white lead of exceptional fineness, whiteness and durability.

Perils of Thunder Mountain

ALBERT E. SMITH and CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

SYNOPSIS.

John Davis and Hawk Morgan, ex-coopers of the estate of John Carr, miner, disagree over the disposition of the profits of the mine. Morgan seeking the gold and Ethel Carr's adopted daughter for himself, and unsuspected by Davis whom Ethel really loves, makes several attempts on the life of Davis, assisted by an accomplice named Spider Ballas. Suspicion is diverted to a mysterious hermit. They go to San Francisco to get machinery to work the mine. Morgan seeks the assistance of Ram Chunder, an Indian fakir, who plots to kill Davis by means of the casket of death.

EPISODE 8.

THE IRON CLUTCH.

John Davis, lured by the sight of the vanishing Ethel into the room where the conspirators had left the Casket of Death of the Hindu god, Siva, and seeing the note lying upon it, grasped the casket by its handles to open it. Immediately the terrible power of the casket asserted itself, and unable to release the horrible thing John stood swaying, his vitals paralyzed by the mysterious force which the casket injected into his body like venom from the fangs of a deadly serpent. Swaying and gasping, his consciousness gradually leaving him, for a minute he managed to retain his feet, then with a gasp collapsed to the carpet. At that moment Ram Chunder, appearing upon the scene with a murderous, curved-edged East Indian knife, came stealing upon him.

"To make sure," he muttered as he approached.

Then in the act of administering the coup de grace he paused as though petrified, lifted his head turtlewise, listened for an instant, then wheeling like a flash vanished into the next room.

"That cursed Indian," growled Morgan who had also heard the sound. "We've got to beat it now." With one accord they rushed to the fire escape with the exception of Ram Chunder, who, pausing only long enough to make a few mystic passes over the head of the trance-walking girl, hurriedly joined them.

Awaking in the middle of the night, Rainface, wholly devoted to the girl, had listened for a moment at her door to make sure that she was sleeping undisturbed. Not hearing her breathing he cautiously stole a glance within only to see that her bed was empty, the coverlet lying half upon the floor. Suspecting mischief and a quick examination of the suite showing that she was not there, he stepped out into the hall, his nose at once becoming aware of the presence of the smell of the incense. Convinced that could he follow the trail of the strange odor to its source he would solve the mystery of the girl's disappearance, he traced it as a setter does the track of a partridge, a minute later finding himself standing before the door behind which she had gone. Throwing it open he entered the room, gun in hand.

His first glance showed him John lying upon the floor, the mysterious casket in his hands. One powerful kick from the Indian sent the thing of death flying from the clutch of the one who held it, bursting it apart and scattering its contents over the floor.

Springs, wires and a pair of electric batteries went rolling about.

Bewildered by it all, Rainface stood staring stupidly first at the uncoiled springs and tangled wires, then at the form of the unconscious John. Instinctively he had brought one of Ethel's wraps across his arm, and as his wits slowly returned he laid it upon a chair and peered from the window. In the courtyard below the party was just disappearing around a corner, the turbaned Ram Chunder following in the rear with one hand raised as though in malediction. Realizing that the escaping ones must have made their exit from the adjoining room he tried the knob. The door was locked, but stepping upon a chair he shattered the transom with the butt of his pistol. Ethel, in the room beyond, aroused from her trance by the sound, gave a little scream, then looking up saw the honest countenance of Rainface staring down at her. Obeying his signal she came unsteadily to the door, unlocked it and stood upon the threshold. Her next glance falling upon the prostrate form of her lover she ran to him, sinking upon her knees at his side.

"Bring me water and spirits of ammonia from my room," she commanded, and the Indian rushed away in swift obedience. Possessed of those articles she quickly revived the unconscious one sufficiently to enable him to sit up.

"Thank God!" she breathed. "John, what are you doing here?"

"Something awakened me and I got up. I saw you crossing the hall and entering a room. I did not know what it meant, but feared that something was wrong and followed. When I came in you had vanished, but I saw a casket and a note. I lifted the box, received a terrible shock and remember no more." Ethel passed her hands across her brow.

"And I had a terrible dream. I saw a horrible old face, brown and scaldish and it was calling me. I had to obey." Rainface, bringing them what was left of the box, held it out without speaking.

"Storage battery," said John with a faint grin.

Back in the inner temple of Ram Chunder's shop, Morgan and the Spider were engaged in a heated discussion with the old fakir, who was defending himself vigorously. The dispute ended by the Hawk saying:

"All right. We will get him here in the morning." Ram Chunder bowed to the god Siva.

"The god will bring him here with the rising sun."

"He'd better," growled the other. The fakir pointed to a couch.

"Will the sahibs sleep under Siva's protection?" Morgan shook his head.

"The sahibs will not. It is safer to keep awake when dealing with you and your gods." Hating both the Hawk and Spider venomously for their blasphemy of his gods, Ram Chunder bowed ironically to the other.

"I go to avert their wrath from the sahibs," saying which he left the room.

Seating himself at a desk in the next room, Ram Chunder began laboriously writing. Having finished his note, he sprinkled incense over it and addressed it, "To Sahib Davis, at the Mackenzie Hotel," then leaning back looked at it malevolently.

"The gods will bring him here with this," he murmured.

He tapped a gong, and the next moment Shallum accompanied by a big Hindu in native costume appeared. The fakir handed the packet to the second Hindu.

"Deliver this, Joost Singh," he commanded.

John, having retired to his own room after his rescue by Rainface, found himself unable to sleep. Getting up he put on his slippers and dressing robe and entered the room across the hall. Once there he began to make a careful exploration of the place and its contents. Next seeing a paper rolled up, he noticed its watermark, then holding it to the light, read:

"—dar Hyderabad—"

Noting that the label on the batteries was "San Francisco Electrical Supply Co. he returned to his own room and sat down to think it all over. With the first break of morning he dressed himself for the day and went to the place of business of the electrical company, arriving there just as it was being opened. Approaching a clerk he showed him the battery and asked if it would be possible to trace it to its original purchaser. The clerk smiled.

"No. We sell hundreds of these. Any particular one could not be identified."

"But do you remember having sold one to anybody from India?" pursued the visitor. The salesman thought.

"I sold a dozen of them last week to a wrinkled old Hindu. But I never saw him before and don't know his name."

"Thanks," replied Davis. Leaving the store he stepped into a Hindu restaurant and ordered his breakfast, engaging the native servant in conversation as he did so.

"Do you know any Hindu fortune tellers? I have a fancy for trying one." The attendant bowed.

"Many, Sahib, will try to tell your future. There are Holkar and others, but the greatest of all is Ram Chunder, the Holy Yogi."

"Where did he come from?" pursued the listener.

"From Hyderabad, I think, most worshiped sir."

Dismissing the other by paying him, John drew the paper from his pocket and looked at the watermark again.

"—dar Hyderabad—" he mused. Thrusting the paper back into his pocket he left the place, and going to the nearest drug store consulted the city directory.

Ethel, meanwhile, had finished her toilet for the day. Going into their living room she asked Rainface where John was, whereupon the old Indian handed her a note.

"Him gone. He leave this talking leaf." Quickly she ran her eyes over it.

"I am going to solve that night's mystery," it read. "I have a good clue, and do not worry, for I will be in no danger. Enjoy the day. I may return at any time. Devotedly yours, John."

Still a trifle uneasy notwithstanding the assuring words of the note, the girl thrust it in the bosom of her dress, and ringing the bell ordered her breakfast from the waiter who answered. Rainface, saying that he had an errand of his own to perform, received her permission to depart and she was left alone. Shortly after the waiter entered with his tray, Joost Singh, following a few paces behind. The waiter spoke.

Full Upon the Threat of Ram Chunder it Landed.

"This foreign party says he has a note for this apartment, Ma'am," and at her nod the Hindu laid his message before her with a salaam.

"For the Sahib Davis," he said respectfully, and turning left the room. Hastily the girl tore the note open. It read:

"If you seek to solve the mystery of the night, knock twice and then once at the rear door of number 27 Horton street. Your conductor will appear and bring you before the gods! May Vishnu and Siva guard you." Wondering what it could mean—whether John was again in danger and who the writer could be, she quickly ate a few mouthfuls and left the apartment, hurrying lest she be too late.

Shallum, dressed in American clothes and on watch outside the shop of Ram Chunder, saw Davis drive up in a taxi and hastened inside, locking the door behind him. Briefly he told his master of the coming of the other man, and the fakir, giving Shallum rapid directions, stepped to the inner room where the Hawk and Spider were.

"Siva has summoned him. He is here," was his announcement.

Throwing their cards out of sight the pair arose. Ram Chunder, leading them to a side of the room, opened a sliding door by pressing on a spring, disclosing a grating. Obeying his wave of command they entered, drawing the curtains together but leaving a crack through which they could both see and hear. Passing to the other side of the room Ram Chunder opened another concealed door, and at the clasp of his hands four Hindus in native costume appeared. Addressing them in a low tone he began filling the incense bowls so that their smoke slowly commenced to arise. While this was being done, two of the newcomers placed a large chair of teakwood at the upper end of the table.

"We will now admit the Sahib," announced the fakir.

Having knocked at the outer door a number of times and received no response, John on the point of turning away discouraged, was confronted by Shallum, who with a low obeisance motioned for him to enter.

Rainface, returning to the hotel, caught a distant view of Ethel as she hurried on her way. Instantly he followed her. Seeing her board a trolley car, the Indian took the one next behind it, standing on the front platform where he could look ahead.

Arriving at Number 27 Horton street, the girl promptly knocked at the door. Joost Singh appeared, and though he was surprised to see a woman instead of the man he expected standing before him, he salaamed and indicated that she was to go with him.

"Where is Mr. Davis?" she demanded as she hesitated. The Hindu spread his hands in a gesture to indicate his ignorance, and finally deciding that her only chance of finding her lover was to trust herself to the other's guidance, she started down the side street on foot. Rainface, who had not lost sight of her, at once followed upon their trail.

John, entering the room of Ram Chunder, glanced about. Under each of the four corbels that supported the roof beams a motionless, statue-like Hindu stood. Even to the sharp eyes of the incomer the figures seemed to be integral parts of the wall, so perfectly did their brown bodies and costumes match the place. As the door closed behind him, Davis stepped before the fakir and addressed him sternly.

"Ram Chunder." The Hindu bowed.

"What were you doing at the Mackenzie hotel last night. Ram strewed a handful of incense in a bowl before an idol.

The Sahib mistakes. I was not at any hotel. Last night I communed with the gods. Behold!"

With an expression of disbelief and disgust, John drew forth the batteries and piece of paper.

"What about these? They are yours."

"Yes, protector of the poor, but stolen from me by a low dog of an imposter—a pariah. Will not the Sahib sit and listen to his servant explain?"

Thrown off his guard by the friendliness of the other's manner and smile, Davis complied.

The room was now heavy with incense. Waiting only till the white man had seated himself in the big chair, Ram Chunder pressed a spring. Instantly four steel bars shot out from the upper back and lower front of the chair, the first two crossing the trapped man's breast and the other pair firmly gripping his legs. John's pistol had seemed to leap into his hand at the first pressure of the bars, and as it exploded a small image of one of the gods fell to the floor with a crash. Ram's escape had been a narrow one, but John had been an instant too late.

No sooner had the bars clamped down upon their victim, holding him securely, than the four living statues stepped forward from their places against the wall and approached the fakir. Laying the revolver upon the table, they stood submissively before their master as he awaited his orders. Ram pointed to the shattered idol.

"This foreign dog has blasphemed the gods and has tried to kill their faithful Yogi. He must die."

At a sign from the fakir one of the Hindus advanced and pressed the back of the chair down and the front up, so that John, still held fast by the bars, lay as one upon a surgeon's table ready for an operation. Crossing his hands they bound his wrists together, a moment later doing the same with his legs. Then removing the restraining levers the four men raised the body of the helpless one, two taking his shoulders and two his knees. Clapping his hands, Ram motioned to two more Hindus who had silently entered at the signal.

"Gag him and wrap him firmly in the ropes," was his command. Round and about the prisoner they drew the bonds until he was powerless to move.

At a signal from the fakir the six men raised the helpless form straight into the air. As they did so, six other brown arms suddenly appeared from some mysterious place in the ceiling, and seizing the prisoner instantly drew him out of sight, while the ones who had bound him again lowered their heads in submissive attence. Motioning for them to leave his presence, Ram looked up at the ceiling just as the leaves of a trap through which the body of Davis had been dragged fell back into place. He bowed low to the image of Siva.

"So perish the offenders of the gods."

From behind their grille where they had been watching it all, the Hawk and Spider grinned at each other approvingly. Then Morgan laughed.

"I'll be cursed if he didn't put it over." Seizing the grating with his hands he began shaking it, but it resisted all his efforts. His voice arose in anger, as he drew his revolver.

"Let us out of here quick, you old fraud, or I'll let daylight out of you."

Carefully keeping to the side of the wall and beyond the range of the other's gun, Ram Chunder made his reply.

"The god has not yet directed your release, oh worthy protector of the poor." Shallum stepped into the room.

"The Mena Sahib you called last night, Master, has come again," he announced. The fakir again addressed Morgan.

"You little know the power of the gods, oh foreign born. The maiden is here also. Siva called." Cursing, the Hawk cried.

"I don't know anything about your infernal gods, but don't you hurt that girl or the whole bunch of you will have to reckon with me. You can do what you like with the man, but—"

"Bring her in," commanded the fakir.

We left Ethel and Joost Singh going down the street together. Arrived at the outer door the Hindu knocked, whereupon Shallum opened it, expressing his satisfaction as he admitted them. Rainface, coming up on a run, found himself locked out and cast his eyes about as he mentally decided upon his plan. Seeing a building close at hand in course of construction with scaffolding surrounding it and no one at work, he at once decided that by means of the scaffolding he could get upon the roof of the next building, and from thence to the top of the place inhabited by the Hindu. Off he went as fast as his legs could take him to carry out his plan.

Within his room, Ram Chunder bowed to the girl as she came in.

"You seek the aid and counsel of Holy Siva, maiden, pearl of beauty? Straight up to him Ethel walked."

"I want Mr. John Davis. Is he here?"

With a nod Ram threw another handful of incense into the brazier, and once more the back of the room became clouded with smoke. Three times he struck a gong, and from the ceiling a gigantic image of Siva, the lower part of which was carved to represent drapery, slowly descended through the smoke. Down upon a dais at the end of the room it settled, while Shallum running to it began making mystic motions, while Ram stepped to the wall opposite the grating.

Before him was a graduated quadrant of metal marked in places and with a perpendicular reversible arm which could be swung along the arc to points on either side. The skinny, bony hand of the fakir seized the armature and began to move it, while the other hand pointed at the idol.

"BEHOLD!" he cried.

Slowly, silently the front of the figure opened and John stood revealed within. He was fastened to the back of the image by an iron collar about his neck, while iron bands bound his waist, arms and legs; holding him erect, rigid and motionless. His mouth was still covered by the cloth. His eyes were open, and he was apparently conscious of all that was taking place. The voice of the girl arose in great distress.

"John! Merciful heaven! What have they done? She sprang toward him, but Ram seizing her with a strength that was astonishing in one of his age, held her back.

"Wait. He has not suffered yet. Siva is sometimes merciful. Perhaps—"

Shallum, approaching, bowed low.

"Oh, reverend and beloved Master! Your elixir of life lacks but one thing."

"Continue," commanded the fakir as the other paused. Shallum lifted a curious drinking cup.

"This, filled with blood from the heart, drawn from beneath the left breast of a pure maiden and mixed with the other ingredients, will give back your youth, if holy Siva wills."

Turning upon the girl, Ram pointed to her heart with a long finger.

"Deer heart?" he said. "Here's life for my youth through thy blood!" Appalled, she shrank back.

"It cannot be."

For a moment he looked at her with an evil smile, then swung the arm of the quadrant and pressed it into a slot. As he did so from each door of the idol rows of spikes which had been lying flat sprang out at right angles to the door, pointing inward. Should the front of the idol now be closed, the sharp pointed iron teeth would be pressed into the man within.

As the terrified girl uttered a scream, Ram Chunder moved the lever again and the two doors closed about half way. Ethel's arms stretched themselves forward in an appeal to the old Hindu.

"Take off the handkerchief and let him speak for himself," was his command to Shallum, and the latter obeyed. Instantly John's voice arose, anger filled, defiant.

"Let me die a thousand deaths, Ethel, before you permit that vile dog to touch you." From behind the grating the voice of the Spider addressed Morgan in a low tone.

"Let's put a stop to this nonsense." The Hawk showed him aside.

"Wait. There is time enough yet. Let's see what she will do. We won't let them put anything over on her." Weapons in hands, they awaited the outcome of the tragic scene in the room beyond.

Ram Chunder spoke again.

"You both refuse? Very well, we shall see. Siva must persuade you a little further it would seem."

Again he moved the lever, and lower doors almost closed. A look of pain shot across the face of the imprisoned man. Quickly he mastered it and smiled at the girl, who stood petrified by terror. Calmly his voice filled the room.

"It will soon be over. You must not give away, dearest girl." Ram Chunder leered at him.

"No. Not so swift as you would desire. See!"

Very slowly, watching their faces with a cruel smile, he again turned the lever a bit and slowly the upper doors began to move. Nearer and nearer the body of the man the deadly fangs of steel drew until they almost touched his person. The face of the threatened one did not change as it looked at them through the ever-narrowing aperture. Suddenly Ethel, unable to endure the torture of suspense longer, screamed.

"Yes, yes. I will grant anything you may ask. For God's sake stop. You are not human—you are fiends." Before the words had fairly left her mouth she had torn open her dress at the breast, standing before them white as death and weeping upon her feet in her mental agony.

Upon one side of her Shallum raised a cup. The fakir, drawing a small but very bright bladed knife such as surgeons use, thrust it slowly toward her breast.

Rainface, having reached the door of a room on the floor above, stood listening a moment with ears that were as keen as a wolf's. Then as a peculiar sound from within reached them, he noiselessly drew his gun with one hand and began opening the door with the other.

Stepping into the room with the tread of a cat, he saw six Hindus upon their knees on the floor looking through an open trap into the room below. Approaching them from behind he jabbed one of them with the muzzle of his weapon, and at that they sprang to their feet with low exclamations of surprise. One look into his fierce, grim old face was enough, and at his gesture their hands flew on high. Driving them silently to a corner of the room where they huddled before the threatening muzzle, Rainface stretched himself upon the floor and keeping one eye upon his victims, peered into the room below. His first glance showed him the girl with her dress torn open across her bosom, Shallum with the cup upon one side of her, Ram Chunder with his glittering blade upon the other.

Cast his eyes upward, Morgan saw the face of the old Indian at the opening, glowing with hatred upon the Hindus below. He seized the Spider by the arm with a grip so fierce that the other winced.

"See that cursed Indian up there. He is going to spoil everything."

And even as he spoke the Indian acted. Still covering the Hindu gang with his gun in his left hand he raised himself a little, whipped out a long and keen hunting knife and raised it on high, then hurried it into the room below.

Spinning through the air with a vicious whistle it came hurtling as a bolt of lightning from the heavens. Full upon the throat of Ram Chunder it landed point first, burying itself there. And Ram with a gasping cry, dropped his lancet and staggered back. Dropping his bowl, Shallum sprang forward to catch him.

"He's done it," cried Morgan from behind the grille.

Thrusting the muzzle of his gun against the lock, the Hawk pulled the trigger and as the heavy bullet tore the bolts apart he seized the grating and wrenched it open. With weapons raised threateningly, he and the Spider burst into the room just as Ram Chunder sank to the floor in the arms of Shallum and at the feet of the terror-stricken girl.

BANANA IS NUTRITIOUS

The old story "that I can't eat bananas, because they give me indigestion" is heard over and over again, but the main reason for this is that the average housewife serves bananas before they are ripe.

You would naturally expect a lot of trouble if you indulged in green apples or cherries—why make the banana the exception? When bananas are ripe the outside skin is quite dark and they should never be eaten, especially in the raw state, until this occurs.

The banana is properly called the "food fruit," because of its high food value. It compares favorably with the white and sweet potato, having slightly less food value and starch and sugar content than the sweet, and more than the white potato.

FRUIT SUGAR. When bananas are perfectly ripe they are easily digested, because the percentage of fruit sugar is then the highest and the amount of non-assimilable starch is lowest.

Two other reasons for the charge of indigestibility are inadequate chewing and the fact that the fruit is a heavy one.

Comma Once "Killed" a Bishop.

A Kent (England) urban council, it is believed, has about reached the limit of "war economy" by forbidding the use of punctuation marks in all official documents, with the result that reports of its proceedings are published without even a comma.

Worse still, a bishop, for want of a comma, was temporarily killed. The present bishop of Bath and Wells, when he held the see of Adelaide, found what he thought was a dead sea serpent near Coffin bay, at a time when an influenza epidemic raged in that district.

He was wired to England in a portmanteau telegram which ran: "Influenza prevalent numerous deaths Bishops Adelaide found dead sea serpent 60 feet Coffin bay." A news agency thought the last six words a separate message, and announced the death of the bishop.

DOES THE AIR SURROUNDING THE EARTH MOVE IT?

This is one of the old puzzling questions which many a high school student has had to struggle with to the great amusement of the teacher who asks for the information and such other scholars who have already had the experience of trying to solve it.

To get at the right answer you have merely to ask one other question: If the air does not revolve with the earth, why can't I go up in a balloon at New York, and stay up long enough for the earth to revolve on its axis beneath me, and come down again when the city of San Francisco appears under the balloon.

BANANA SHORTCAKE.

Banana shortcake is probably well known and the fruit may also be cut in tiny pieces and mixed with either a boiled frosting or sweetened whipped cream and used as a filling for mayer cake.

A little chopped banana should always be added to fruit salads, one banana to every cupful of the salad is a good proportion; as the flavor of the fruit should not predominate, but rather act as a body for the lighter and more acid fruits.

Banana sandwiches are very hearty and go particularly well with cold coffee or tea. Chop the peeled fruit finely and for each cupful add an equal quantity of crisp shredded lettuce, a quarter of an onion finely sliced, a little salt and chopped dates, half a tablespoonful of chopped pimentos and the same of lemon juice. Spread between lightly buttered slices of Graham bread and cut in circles.

SINN FEINERS ARE RELEASED AND STRIKE ENDS

Irish Labor Men Claim a Great Victory Over the Government.

DUE TO MACREADY

Troops Fire Over London-derry Crowd—Revenue Office Fired.

Dublin cable says: There is much speculation regarding the motive of the Government's sudden change of policy toward the Sinn Fein hunger-strikers two hours after Mr. Bonar Law's uncompromising speech in the House of Commons.

Public rumor attributes the decision to the influence of General Macready, who has just taken up his duties as Commander-in-Chief of the force in Ireland.

He is said to have great hopes of making military rule in Ireland both more efficient and more tolerable than heretofore, and he did not want to start with deaths and inquests in Mount Joy.

Dublin cable: Sixty-eight hunger-striking prisoners have been released, apparently unconditionally, and as a result the strike is considered off.

The Lord Mayor, who went to see Lord French at the Vice-Regal Lodge when a hitch arose at Dublin Castle through a stipulation that the prisoners must return to their captivity on their recovery, stated on his return that the prisoners would be released unconditionally.

The prisoners had refused to accept the stipulation, on the ground that it was a reapplication of the "cat-and-mouse" policy.

The release of the prisoners, announced at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, is regarded as a complete triumph for the hunger-strike and its ally, the general strike. It became known early that Viscount French had urged the Lord Mayor, and that it was then only a question of terms.

It is not definitely known what the terms are, and for some days there may be contradictory statements regarding them. The trade unionists, however, had no doubt which side had won, and immediately called off the strike, to the great relief of the citizens.

Earlier it was officially announced that it was not intended to release all the hunger-strikers in Mount Joy Prison unconditionally, but that an order has been issued that those requiring medical treatment outside the prison will be released on parole for periods to be specified in the case of each individual by the prison doctor.

After only four of the prisoners had been removed from Mount Joy Prison the Government intervened with the conditions pertaining to the re-encarceration of the hunger-strikers after hospital treatment.

The prisoners refused the new terms. When a danger arose that there would be a refusal of further departure from the prison by the hunger-strikers, the Lord Mayor again visited the Vice-Regal Lodge, with a view to having the order rescinded.

The Prisons Board also rescinded an order that henceforth, under the Defence of the Realm Act, prisoners should receive ameliorative treatment from the date of their arrest until their trial for a specific offence.

The visit to Dublin of James Henry Thomas, General Secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen and Labor member of Parliament for Derby, is regarded as having had some share in the decision for the release of the men. It is said that an attempt was to have been made to bring about a strike in England, in spite of the Irish case. Mr. Thomas made a speech from a window of the Labor Executive offices this afternoon, endorsing the action of the hunger-strikers.

The absence of military from the streets to-day was conspicuous. There were no tanks or armored cars posted at the jail, and the barbed wire barricades had been removed. The Irish Volunteers assumed charge of maintaining order outside the prison, and were implicitly obeyed.

The released prisoners in the latter Misericordia Hospital say that the prison staffs and military officers at Mount Joy were kind in their treatment of them; their most hardship was uncomfortable beds. They were indignant at two proposals made to them by the authorities which implied that certain of the men should desert their colleagues. Their attitude was, "all or none."

The strike was in full force to-day. If funerals were in progress, hearses and the chief mourners were allowed to proceed; all other vehicles in funeral corteges were turned back. An indication of the universal sentiment regarding the prisoners, apart from political bias, is shown by an appeal from Chief Rabbi Herzog to the Viceroy for clemency for "the unfortunate men at this 13th death in Mount Joy."

FIRE OVER HEADS OF LONDON-DERRY CROWDS

Belfast cable says: Soldiers fired ball cartridges over the heads of crowds gathered at the Londonderry station to-day, and two civilians were wounded by ricocheting bullets.

The crowds at the station assembled with the expectation of greeting the arrival of Stan Fein prisoners. Armed police were summoned to the scene, but the gathering became so threatening that two companies of soldiers, who were accompanied by an armored car, were called and ordered to make a layonet charge.

The military was subjected to a fierce fusillade of stones and fired

British Miners Accept the Government Offer

London, April 23.—The members of the Miners' Federation, by a majority of 65,135 votes, have decided to accept the Government's offer of a twenty per cent. increase on gross earnings. The decision of the men obviates the danger of a strike.

The Government's offer provides for a minimum flat advance of two shillings for all workers over 18 years of age, one shilling for workers between 16 and 18 years, and nine pence for workers under 16 years.

OVERALLS CAMPAIGN AGAINST HIGH CLOTHING COST SPREADS

Is General in Southern and Western States—Detroit Moose Act.

New York dispatch: Despatches received here this morning show that the overall campaign of protest against the high cost of clothing is spreading rapidly through the southern and western states.

At Greenville, S.C., many business and professional men have adopted the overall as their daily garb. Every student at the University of South Carolina, at Columbia, S.C., has pledged himself to wear overalls volleys of blank cartridges in an endeavor to warn the people. The blanks proving ineffective, several rounds of ball cartridges were discharged over the heads of the people, and two civilians received injuries from glancing bullets.

Later in the day the Sinn Fein prisoners arrived and were taken in motor-cars to the Londonderry jail.

INTERNAL REVENUE OFFICE SET ON FIRE

Belfast, April 23.—The Internal Revenue Office at Dundalk was burned this afternoon. A number of men rushed into the building, seized the members of the working staff, and set the office on fire. No effort was made to subdue the flames until after the arrival of the soldiers.

GERMAN WHINE AGAINST FRANCE

Alleged Plot to Hold Line of the Rhine

And Break Germany Into Republics.

Berlin cable says: A semi-official statement, published here, quotes, from what purports to be a report of a conference of French officers of high rank, recently held at Mayence, at which it was said to have been agreed that the "line of the Rhine" was necessary for "the protection of France against the revenge ideas of German military circles."

It was considered, adds the report, that a buffer state must be created, which should include that part of the right bank of the Rhine comprising the Dusseldorf industrial district, the Ruhr region and Frankfurt and its neighborhood.

Every emasculation of Germany should, the report says, be exploited to the best advantage. The statement continues: "The conference also agreed that it would be best to divide Germany into five or six states or republics in alliance with Belgium. France could then, on the basis of the various paragraphs of the Peace Treaty, march into Germany and remain there."

"This definite and clever policy would put France within one or two years in possession of what Marshal Foch wants, namely, a military Rhine frontier, with strong bridgeheads, without any serious opposition on the part of the Allies or Germany."

26 SHOT DEAD BY REICHSWEHR

German Troops Near Essen Got Out of Hand.

Essen cable: (By the Associated Press.)—Twenty-six persons were shot dead, and two seriously wounded, by members of the Reichswehr, who got beyond control of their officers last Wednesday in the triangular district between Bottrop, Essen and Mülheim, according to a statement made to the correspondent by Col. von Baumbach, commanding the Reichswehr. The troops were incensed, said von Baumbach, by reports that the Red army had mistreated prisoners, and also by the abolition of military tribunals by order of the Berlin authorities. The Socialist Commission, Baumbach declared, stated that prisoners had been well treated.

Thomas J. Shaughnessy, managing director of the Canadian Booth Fisheries Company, Winnipeg, and nephew of Lord Shaughnessy, chairman of the C.P.R., was married to Miss Margaret Farrelly, of Chicago.

IRISH GENERAL STRIKE INCREASINGLY OMINOUS

Thousands Parading Dublin Streets, and Clash With Authorities Feared

One Constable Shot Dead—London Papers on the Hunger Strike

Dublin cable: The general strike declared yesterday in protest against the treatment of the Irish hunger strikers in Mountjoy Prison continued to-day with added tenseness, and increased fears of serious developments.

Sixty thousand workers in Dublin alone are on strike, and a feeling of pronounced excitement prevailed throughout the capital.

The day was marked early by a fatality, Constable Harry Kells being shot dead while on plain clothes duty in Camden street this morning. The constable's assailant was an unidentified young man. He fired two shots from his revolver and ran away from the scene before he could be apprehended.

The shooting added to the general excitement. Thousands of people are parading the streets, and collisions between the populace and the military are feared.

There have been rapid developments in connection with the strike. Viscount French, the Viceroy, sent for the Lord Mayor to-day, and later the military was withdrawn from the vicinity of Mountjoy Prison. One of the prisoners among the hunger strikers was removed to the City Hospital in a state of collapse.

Another development was the arrival in Dublin of General Sir Nevill MacCreedy, the new commander of the forces in Ireland, who is expected to assume his duties at once.

The general expectation here with regard to the hunger strikers, based upon last night's debate in the House of Commons in London, is that the Government, although refusing to release the political prisoners, will make some concessions in their treatment to secure the termination of the hunger strike. The feeling appeared to be that some formula for a settlement which would not be held to constitute a backdown by either side, was being sought.

Reports were that the general strike was gaining ground meanwhile. COMMENT RE HUNGER STRIKERS. London, April 23.—Most of the morning newspapers do not comment on Andrew Bonar Law's address in

PLOT TO DISRUPT POLAND AND RESTORE RUSS IMPERIALISM

Russian Arrested in Paris Got Big Subsidies From Berlin.

Paris cable: Alois Omoshkin, a Russian, was arrested here to-day, charged with having had intelligence with the enemy and conspiracy with the Germans to bring about civil war in Poland and restoration of imperialism in Russia.

The leaders in the alleged conspiracy are said to have received subsidies from Berlin. The sum of 30,000,000 francs is mentioned in this connection.

Omoshkin returned to Paris from Berlin last Sunday. Before being locked up he protested friendly sentiments for France.

During the day several Russians, members of a group known as "Integral Russia" were questioned, but were left at large. Search is being made in a score of banks in which it is supposed the alleged conspirators rented strong boxes.

"OVERALL" MOVE SPREADS IN U.S.

Southern Press Refuses Merchants' Request To Suppress News of Spread of Idea.

Birmingham despatch says: Birmingham newspaper publishers have flatly denied the request of a committee of retail clothiers that news of the "overall" movement throughout the South be suppressed on the ground that it was damaging the retail clothing business.

The publishers informed the clothiers' committee that their papers would continue to report the overall movement, which they considered legitimate news.

The "Tampa idea" of wearing overalls as a means of fighting the high cost of clothing, which originated in the city bearing that name, has spread to many cities through the South, where business and professional men, as well as other workers, are going about in blue. It was reported here Saturday that when the demand for overalls began some retailers had raised the prices from $2 to $5 a pair.

Mass meetings and public demonstrations are being held in connection with the movement in many places throughout the South. It was reported to-day that there were 4,000 members of the Overall Club in Birmingham at one, all pledged to wear blue.

Rev. Prof. Ottomar Lincke, who has been a member of the Faculty of the Waterloo Seminary for eight years, and is well-known in Lutheran circles, died after an illness of several months, in his fifty-fourth year.

the House of Commons, in which he announced that the Government would not alter its policy with regard to the hunger strike of Irish political prisoners held in Mountjoy Jail in Dublin. The Times, however, condemns the Government's policy, saying:

"It is based on a too narrow conception, and is consequently wrong. Whatever the cost of the prestige of the Irish Executive Department and the pride of Ministers, broader and more momentous considerations should be permitted to prevail.

Emphasis is laid by the Daily Mail on the fact that many of the hunger strikers have not been convicted in properly constituted courts of justice, and, therefore, should not be allowed to starve.

"On such exceptional and momentous occasions," the newspaper continues, "we look to the Government to take a broad and generous view."

Regret over the possible prospect of some of the strikers dying is expressed by the Chronicle, which is supporting the Government.

"But the alternative," the newspaper adds, "that the Government should capitulate to murder before the threat of suicide is worse still. If no way out can be found, and suicide is persisted in, the Government should make its case absolutely clear to the British Isles and America, so that no dishonest man would be able to entertain an honest doubt as to why the men were imprisoned, or as to the character of their treatment while in jail."

LAND FOR IRISH VOLUNTEERS. Dublin cable: Government officials are negotiating for 2,000 acres of land which will be apportioned among Irishmen who volunteered for service at the front in 1918. Viscount Field Marshal French, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, promised in 1918 that land would be given to those who joined the colors, and in 1919 Parliament passed a bill carrying the Lord Lieutenant's promise into effect. Up to the present, however, only 71 men who took advantage of the offer have been provided with homes.

Four thousand applications for holdings have been filed, and nearly 6,000 soldiers have asked for cottages.

SHEEP KILLING

Raise the Fines On Sheep Killed By Dogs.

Toronto report says: Some rather drastic action must be taken against the increasing destruction of sheep prowling dogs, according to discussion at the Agricultural Committee of the Legislature yesterday.

The revenue from dog taxes in most townships, according to members, is away below the value of the sheep killed. Last year more sheep were killed than in any previous year.

J. W. McLeod, of Stormont, introduced the question to the committee. In his township the value of sheep killed was $2,200, while the dog tax revenue was $954. To get the benefit fit of the dog taxes to the townships in which the sheep are killed, Hon. Manning Doherty suggested that the law be changed to permit dog tax money to be paid into the county treasury, and the damages for sheep killed be paid out of that. The idea was favorably received and Mr. Doherty promised to bring an amendment before the committee at a later meeting.

Some strange incidents came to light. One member told of a farmer having sheep killed by his own dog, and yet not collecting damages. It was suggested that all dogs be tagged.

Hon. Geo. Henry thought this should be optional with municipalities. An amendment to the Noxious Weed Act goes away with the serving of personal notice on owners of vacant lots in cities, towns and incorporated or police villages, but not townships. Notice published in the local paper is regarded as sufficient.

Some slight amendments were suggested in the bill concerning community halls and athletic fields. The whole township does not necessarily have to go into the matter. One school section may take it up. No special vote of the people is required to have community halls, as a majority of voters must sign the petition before anything can be done.

Farewell to Rev. and Mrs.
George Code

On Thursday afternoon, April 22nd the ladies of Christ Church, Athens, numbering about forty, met in the school room to tender a fond farewell to Mrs. Code on the eve of their departure. The following address was read by Miss Berney accompanied by a well filled purse presented by Mrs. G. W. Parish:—

Dear Mrs. Code:—We, the ladies of Christ church are assembled here this afternoon to express to you our very deep regret that you are so soon to be separated from us. During your short sojourn here (less than two years), you have striven heroically and successfully to discharge the duties of our beloved rector, whose illness has made it necessary for him to take an extended rest. These duties you have performed under very adverse conditions owing to the long illness of your mother as well as your husband. In the Womens' Auxiliary, the Ladies' Guild and the Sunday school your services have been invaluable. Our fervent prayer is that Mr. Code may speedily regain his normal health and that you both, with your little family, may be spared for many years of active service in the Church in contentment and happiness.

Please accept this purse as a slight token of our good will and esteem.

Signed on behalf of the ladies,

Mrs. Duffield,
Mrs. S. Gifford,
Mrs. Godkin.

Tea was then served and a short musical programme, solos by Miss Berney and Miss Mary Duffield being very much enjoyed.

Mrs. Code replied very feelingly, thanking the ladies for the gift also for kindness shown them during the time Mr. Code has been rector of the parish and especially during his illness.

On April 18th Rev. J. W. Jones, Kingston, who has been conducting services throughout the Parish of Lansdowne Rear during the illness of the Rev. Mr. Code and before the appointment of the new rector read the following farewell of Mr. Code to his parishioners:—

To the Church Wardens and Parishioners of Lansdowne Rear:

I feel that I must tender you my gratitude as well as appreciation of your very generous gift of $300 in addition to what my stipend called for. I need not tell you how extremely sorry we are that ill health has made it necessary for us to remove from your midst. We will carry with us tender memories of the church and people here and pray that in the Providence of God a faithful clergyman may be appointed and that the Divine blessing may rest upon him and the work.

Faithfully yours,
GEO. CODE.

Township Council
