Class of 160 Candidates For Confirmation Yesterday.

His Lordship Also Touched on Marriage and Divorce.

Race suicide was scathingly de-nounced by Rt. Rev. Thomas Joseph Dowling, Bishop of the Catholic Dio-cese of Hamilton, at the high mass in St. Mary's Cathedral yesterday. Earlier in the morning his Lordship had ier in the morning his Lordship had administered the secrament of confirmation to a class of 160 candidates. "One of the priests," he said, "remarked to me that the size of this class showed no sign of race suicide. Thank God, there is none of that in this parish, and I pray there never will be. The spirit of the age is not the spirit of the love of children." After emphasizing the sacredness of the sacraments instituted by Jesus Christ, he said, "I have no use for the women who hate children. Unfortunately we have such women as shown by the statistics for Ontario, monsters, who murdered their off-spring before birth. I wash my hands of that class."

Before the resolution was carried quite a discussion took place. The people who opposed annexation are those living in the southwest corner of the township, below the mountain, some of whom already have a good many of the city conveniences. As the people of the southwest corner would not be materially benefited it was thought the resolution was in the best interests of all, and it 'coordingly carried. The method of destroying the animals has not been decided on yet, although the aldermen who arranged the cells at the pound almost solved that question by having the stalls built of boards, so close together, that the animals would probably have suffocated after a few hours' imprisonment. Fortunately License Inspector Brick made an inspection and part of the board partition has been replaced by wire netting. The arrangement is for the two dog catchers, with a horse and rig, a cage and nets, to start out at 8.30 to the recommendation of the special committee regarding annexation. It is not likely that there will be any discussion over the matter, for the aldermen are practically a unit in the opinion that the city must take in the whole portion east of Sherman avenue, from the mountain to the bay, or nothing at all. It is evident from the action of the Barton Township Council at a special meeting on Saturday night that there will be strong opposition to the city annexing the southern portion unless exemptions are granted for a number of years. The city will not consent to this. To-night the council will pass a resolution which will be forwarded to the Municipal Board, and which will make it clear that the only reason the city (Continued on Page 5.)

STRUCK HIM.

P. C. May Had a Peculiar Experience Yesterday Morning.

Constable Ernie May nearly met with a similar mishap yesterday morning to that which happened some months ago when he was clubbed into unconsciousness while tracking down crap shooters Getting a tip that there was doing in a building on King William secured a ladder and, putting it up to a third storey window in the rear of the ouilding, had climbed to the top when building, had climbed to the top when someone threw something at him. The obstacle hit May on the head, but did not injure him. Thinking that discretion was the better part of valor, he descended. He then entered the Oriental cafe, where he found a number of men, apparently at supper, in the various stalls in the-place. His xesallants claim that they mistook him for a burglar. May was in plain clothes.

These were the last words the young man was heard to utter by the surviving member of the little party. At the Police Court this morning both pleaded not guilty and declined to elect. Bennett was put in the witness box and told to give an account of what happened to him. The Crown Attorney then attempted to have the witness define some of the expressions used in crap. The negro did so to the best of his ability, but did not have much success. "Well, when I went to pick up the money I got a stiff wallop on the jaw instead," said Bennett. "Then someone came up behind me and soaked me over the head with a piece of hose filled with lead. I fell then and someone kicked me on the chin."

"Dida't you pick up a chair and hold it in a threatening manner?" asked Mr. A. M. Lewis, counsel for the defence.

A Love Affair

A footman threw open the door.

upon them. "Give me ten minutes to

"In her room safe and sound," returned the duchess, laughingly.
"All right; I sha'n't be more than ten minutes," and he went out.
Ten, fifteen minutes passed, during which the duke had consulted his turnip-like timepiece three times, and then the marquis entered, followed by a dapper-looking old gentleman in irreproachable evening dress.
"Mr. Waller," he said, introducing him to the duchess. "Come and see the set-

Mr. Waller was made welcome, and Mr. Waller was made welcome, and the duke lugged out his watch again.
"It isn't like Constance to be late," said Lady Kitty, already enamored of Constance and ready to stand up for her.
"Yes; where on earth is Ruth!" exclaimed the duke. "Hate having dinner kept; spoils everything."
"What have you got there?" asked the duchess of the marquis.
He held up the box he still carried.
"Guess," he said, with a laugh. "It is the family diamonds."
"Oh," exclaimed Lady Kitty, sidling

"Oh," exclaimed Lady Kitty, sidling up to him, "do show them to us, Lord Brakespeare!"

"Five and twenty minutes past."
grumbled the duke, staring at his watch.
"[I] go up and see what is the matter," said Lady Kitty, putting down the diamonds, with a reluctant, lingering glance.

"Yes, do; and knock at Ruth's door," said the duchess.

Lady Kitty ran off, and the rest gathered round the table and examined the diamonds.

Presently the door opened and Lady litty entered.

Kitty entered.

"I—I don't know what is the matter," help said, trying to speak calmly, "but

CHAPTER XXIX.

A silence fell upon them all as Lady Kitty made her announcement and the marquis was the first to speak.

"You look quite alarmed, Kitty," he said, with a smile. "Do you think they have both disappeared?"

The duchess looked up.

"I daresay they are about the house. If it were fine I should say they were on the terrace; Constance is always in the open air."

"I will go and see," said the marquis, and he left the room.

"Go and ring for Constance's maid, Kitty; she will tell us where Constance has gone."

Lady Kitty left the room quickly, and

"Go and ring returned as the marquis re-entered by the opposite door.

"It is very strange." she began, falteringly, "but I can not find the maid. No hours. She has been at work in Con-

"Of course," assented the duchess rising. "Depend upon it, they will both come sailing in by the time we have taken our seats."

They went into the dining-room and took their seats, leaving two chairs vacant, one beside the duke and between him and the marquis for Constance, and the soup was handed round.

"I wonder where they can be hiding?" said Lady Kitty, who thought it odd that of any practical joke was being performed she had not been asked to play a part in it, and was inclined to be rathed jealous of Lady Ruth. "You don't think they are dressing up, duchess?"

Her grace laughed.

The marquis laughed.

"And taken the maid with them," said Kitty; "and that is what seems so strange to me."

"Oh, nonsense!" exclaimed the duchers; "why should they take the maid? She is about the house somewhere, flirting with some of our people. She is a pretty girl. Johnstone!"

The old butler came to her side noise-leasly.

The old butler came to her side noise-lessly.

"Send and see if Miss Grahame's maid has come in, please."

The butler whispered instructions to a footman, who left the room, and the dinner proceeded, but more silently.

The absence of the two ladies had been a matter for amused conjecture during the progress of the soup, but as the courses came and went, the amusement died away, and conjecture took a more serious form.

more serious form.

Still the marquis went on talking; but his face had grown grave, and a look of disappointment crept into his eyes. Every minute was robbing him of the joy of her presence, which he had hastened down from London to experience.

The footman returned and whispered to the butler, who approached the duchess' chair, and the marquis stopped talking and listened.

"Miss Graham'se maid is not in the house, your grace," said the butler; "and Lady Ruth has left in a brougham."

What!" demanded the duchess, turn g upon him with amazeemnt.

"Lady Ruth ordered a brougham some time ago, and left the Towers in it, your grace," he repeated.

The marquis rose, his face rather pale. The duke laid his hand upon his arm.

"Don't agitate yourself, Wolfe," he said, with a chuckle. "I'a part of the plot. Sit down, man; finish your dinner, or they'll have the laugh on you."

But the marquis could not sit down again, much less resume his dinner.

"Did Miss Graham go with Lady Ruth?" he asked, quietly.

"No, my lord. Lady Ruth went alone, and in a hurry."

The duchess stared from one to the other.

"Ao, my lord. Lady Ruth went alone, and in a hurry."

The duchess stared from one to the other.

"It is the most extraordinary thing I ever heard of," she said, slowly. "Can Ruth have received a message from her father? He may be worse. Did Lady Ruth leave any message, Johnstone?"

"No, my lady," replied the butler, standing unregardful of the dinner, like the rest; "none whatever."

"I will go to her room. Don't look so anxious, Wolfe. There is nothing to be alarmed about."

"I am not afraid," he said, forcing a smile. "Why should I be?"

He acompanied the duchess to the door, and after opening it for her, followed her into the hall.

"I can not understand it," she exclaimed "Why on earth should Ruth—" She stopped. "Why, Wolfe, I'll tell you what has happened!"

"Yes?" he said, eagerly.

"She has gone to the castle for something that Constance has forgotten."

He accepted the suggestion for a moment, and his face cleared, but if fell again directly.

"Why should she do that?" he said. "Why not send a servant? Besides, that does not account for Constance's absence and the maid's."

"Come upstairs with me."

He followed her as far as the corridor, and waited there till she returned to him, her face still nore puzzled.

"Ruth is not in her room, and there is no letter or message of any kind," she said.

"And Constance?"

"I did not go into her your "chessid."

"And Constance?"
"I did not go into her room," she said, "I did not go into ner room, see sate, in a lower voice; "I did not like to—"
"Good heaven! You speak as if there were something serious, something tragic, in the business. Go and see the duchess—"

As he spoke, they heard the hall door open, and Lady Ruth's voice.

The duchess started, and was hurrying down, but he touched her arm.

"Don't—don't let her think we attach."

ing down, but he touched her arm.

"Don't—don't let her think we attached too much importance to it." he said.

The duchess comprehended, made a gesture of assent, and they went down the stairs side by side.

Lady Ruth looked up and saw them, and started, her hards clinched nervously. They saw that she was deadly pale. "Ruth!" exclaimed the duchess, and not in the sweetest accents, "where have you been!"

The marquis said nothing, but stood, his eyes fixed upon her face.
She looked at the duchess and at him, and her lips moved. Her agitation was not all acting, for, like all who had come in contact with him, she had a whole-some fear of the marquis, and a difficult, a dangerous part lay before her.

"I—oh, Wolfe!" she broke off.

He did not respond to the exclamation but his lips drew together more tightly.

"Where is Constance!" demanded the duchess. "You have frightened us terribly, and if there is any joke in this business, it is a very stupid one."

"Constance—" murmured Lady Ruth, then stopped, as if unable to continue.

The duchess pushed open the library door, near which they happened to be standing, but Lady Ruth went past her into the room, and signed to the marquis.

"I—I must see him alone, duchess," fasterial and the standing, but Lady Ruth went past her into the room, and signed to the marquis.

"I-I must see him alone, duchess," ahe said; tremulously.

The duchess changed color, and a look of apprehension came into her eyes.

"Very well," she said in a low voice.
"Send for me if you want me; I shall be in the drawing room. Go with her, Wolfe."

He followed Ledy Buth into the room.

Wolfe."

He followed Lady Ruth into the room, and, closing the door, stood before her, and she sunk into a chair and covered her face with her hands.

"Be quick!" he said, his anxiety making him seem stern and hard. "What is the matter? Where is Constance?"

She sobbed, then raised her face from her hands. "Oh, Wolfe, I do not know how to tell you," she breathed.

"Where is Constance?" he demanded again, and his eyes flashed.

"I—I do not know" she realied.

again, and his eyes flashed.

"I—I do not know," she replied,
"You do not know?" His breath came quickly, and he looked at her as if she was the cause of all this trouble.

"Don't, Wolfe," she sobbed. "You frighten me! I do not know where she is!"

"You know she has gone?"
"Yes."

"Yes."

"When did you know it? Where have you been? Come, there has been enough of this mummery! Where have you been? You can answer that. 'Do so quickly."

"To—to the station." she faltered.

"To follow Constance," she replied in a low, awed voice.

"To follow Constance?" he repeated, as if he scarcely comprehended her. "Why should she have gone to the station?"

tion?"
"Because— Oh, Wolfe, this is hard for me! If there was anyone else who could tell you!"
"In God's name, speak plainly and at once!" he exclaimed. "If you know anything, say so; you are driving me mad." mad."
"I—I—don't know all. I—I—Constance sent me a note; just an hour before dinner. That man Rawson Fenton..."

fore dinner. That man Rawson Fenton—""

"Rawson Fenton!" he broke in, with fierce impatience. "What has he to do with it? The note—Constance's note! Where is it? Give it to me!"

"I—burned it. I thought that it might not be too late—"

"Go on—go on, in heaven's name! Too late for what?"

"To stop her, to bring her back, Oh, Wolfe, can't you understand? The note was to tell me that she had gone off, and to ask me to break it to you."

He stared at her like a man who hears something of which he does not understand even the tenor, and repeated her words in a dull, vacant manner.

"Gone off? Where?" he said at last. She shook her head.

"Why, With whom?"

"Oh, Wolfe, you will not understand!

She has gone with Rawson Fenton."

"It is a poor joke," he said; "wretchedly poor. And it is yours alone, I'll be sworn; Constance had no hand in it."

"Wolfe, it is no joke," she said, almost inaudibly. "It is true! She has gone! And with him!"

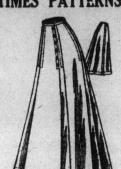

"Take care, Ruth!" he said; and his eyes began to grow red and angry with the savage Brakespeare expression—the look she remembered in him as a boy. "I have borne with this nonsense of yours very well, but my patience is nearly exhausted. It is a miserable, practical joke, and you play it very well, very well, but let there be an end of it. Go and fetch Constance."

She rose and looked at him, half annoyed at the persistence of his increduity, at his faith in the woman he loved. "You will not believe I am serious," she said in a hushed voice. "Oh, Wolfe, it is true! But I am not surprised; I would not believe it myself until I had found she had gone, and then—then I thought that—that I might persuade her to come back."

"What is all this you are chattering?" he demanded, roughly.

(By Vance C; Criss.)

Arch Morgan, civil engineer, read the telegram he held in his hand through the second time. He could not have desired a better offer in some respects, but when he realized that it meant an absence of a year he hesitated. That might ruin his chance of winning Lucile Weston. He was not certain that she cared that much for him, but he felt that in a short time he would make the test.

the test.

Accustomed to thinking rapidly, he decided to find Miss Weston, tell her of his love and ask here if she would wait a year until he could return from a foreign land and claim her as his bride.

Even now there was less than two hours until the hour of departure.
He caught a car and was soon at the fashionable Weston home. He had not taken time to notify the young woman of his visit, and he quickly found that she was not at home. From Mrs. Weston he learned Lucile had gone to the theatre with Morton Walford, the one rival he had reason to fear.
Determined to seize even the limited opportunity afforded he started for the Longman Theatre. When he arrived there he found he had but 20 minutes to locate the young woman, make known his love, and begin his voyage. From the entrance he could see her, sitting in one of the lower front boxes, apparently engrossed in the play. To reach her without attracting the attention of everyone in the house was out of the question, and he had no desire to make the affair conspicuous.

In a moment she turned toward him with a glance of displeasure. Then, with a smile of recognition, she started to turn again toward the stage, when the movements of his right hand caught her eyes. "Listen," the man spelled rapidly, forgetting he was using merely a sign language. Shielding his hand as much as possible with a programme so that he might prevent others from seeing what he was doing, he began to spel out sentences.

"In 15 minutes," he spelled, "I am sailing for South America, to be gone a year. Received telegram to-night, offering me good job."

At that moment Miss Weston's escort said something to her and she glanced away for a second. Almost immediately, however, she again turned her eyes toward Morgan, surprise showing clearly on the face.

"I love you," he hand told her. "If your heart tells you that you love me, I will be ready to provide a cosy home for you."

Once more Morton Walford spoke to Miss Weston, and seemed surprised when she manifested no interest in what he said. With a puzzled expression the turned away and away and a seemed surprised when she manifested no interest in what he said. With a puzzled expression the runned away and away an

"Will you give me your promise?"
motioned the hand, the look of eager expectancy in Morgan's eyes clearly apparent to the woman who was watching every movement.

For almost a minute she sat absolute ly motionless, then her right hand began to move nervously as if to speak, she caught herself, and rapidly spelled the words:

I. O. D. E. Has Meeting at the Battlefield.

Caxton Chapter, I. O. D. E., held the osing meeting of the season at Stoney Creek Battlefield on Saturday afternoon Mrs. Sutherland, Regent, was in the chair. Miss Minnie Woolcott, secretary read the reports of the last regular meeting and of the Dickens Club. Mrs. Petrie, treasurer, reported a balance of Petrie, treasurer, reported a balance of $321.17 on hand. A standing vote of thanks was passed to the popular regent, Mrs. Sutherland, for her valuable work, untiring energy and for her hospitality in giving her house for all the business meetings. The regent spoke with regret of the absence of Mrs. Frank Barber, who was absent on account of ilkness, and the secretary was unanimously asked to write Mrs. Barber a letter, telling her how much she and Miss Barber are missed at the meetings.

and Miss Barber are missed at the meetings.

Mrs. Elmore Richards played a brilliant piano solo, "Il Trovatore"; Mrs. (Dr.) Parry sang very sweetly, accompanied by Miss Buck, of Penetanguishene; Miss Nisbet gave a humorous reading; Mrs. Blatherwick and Miss Dempsey sang solos; Mrs. Richards gave a recitation; Miss Nisbet, by request, gave a brief account of the battle of Stoney Creek; Mrs. Charlton sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. (Dr.) Hess, and Fred Henderson played a delightful violin solo, accompanied by Mrs. Sttherland.

votes of thanks were passed to the different hostesses who had entertained the Dickens Club during the season, and to Miss Nisbet for securing the Battle-field for the meeting.

While the first half of the party were at supper Mrs. Blatherwick, whose singing is always a treat, sang several solos. Later dancing was enjoyed by the yolung folks, Mrs. Sutherland, Mrs. Blatherwick and Miss Nisbet furnishing the music. A number of gentlemen went down for the evening. Most of the party climbed the hill to see where Lady Grey turned the sod, and voted it an ideal spot for the monument.

This has been the best season Caxton has had, the membership has largely increased and every part of the work has been successful.

The moon will rise totally eclipsed, and its totality will last about an hour, while the sun will only be in totality near the north pole.

Of chief interest will be the lunar eclipse, which will be visible over about half the earth. Only a few white men, namely, Commander Robert Peary and his crew, who are now on an Arctic expedition, and perhaps a few whalers will have an opportunity of observing at totality the eclipse of the sun. While this eclipse will be visible in its partial eclipse the region near the north pole is the only part of the globe where it will be seen as a total eclipse.

BRANTFORD FIRE.

Hamilton Men Establish Factory in Brantford.

Fight Against the Bar-Dufferins Honorary Colonel.

(Special Despatch to the Times.)
Brantford, May 31.—Fire early on Sunday morning destroyed the residence of Mr. Isaac Rosenfeldt, on Albion street, and caused a loss of $2,500. The inmates of the house had a narrow escape from being asphyxiated and the fire was one of the hiottest residential blazes the fire department has had to contend with in years. The origin is entirely unknown. At 3 o'clock Mrs. Rosenfeldt was awakened and discovered the fire gaining rapid headway downstairs. She was cut off from the telephone and by the time the alarm was sent in from a neaphy box it had enveloped the entire lower part of the house. It was thought at first that some of the inouschold had perished and the anxiety of the family was great. All got out, however, safely. For two hours the department worked on the fire. A lot of valuable furniture was destroyed. The family are well-to-do local Hebrews.

ANOTHER FACTORY,

Mr. John S, Dowling, the newly-appointed industrial commissioner for the city, is evidently making good in his position, having secured a second industrial enlargement since his appointment. A few months ago Messrs. Pettit, Thatcher & Parsons came here from Hamilton, establishing an emery wheel manufacturing business. Recently a company has been incorporated, at a capital stock of $40,000, local men being shareholders, and a new factory will be built. The management will continue under the original promoters, and the possibilities of the business are considered large.

A capacity audience will doubtless welcome Alice Lloyd, the dainty little English artist, whose fame as the Queen of Vaudeville has been blazed English artist, whose fame as the Queen of Vaudeville has been blazed across the continent during the last two years, when she appears at Bennett's Theatre to-night. Naturally Miss Lloyd's engagement here has attracted more interest than any vaudeville headliner ever booked for this city, not only because she is the highest salaried performer appearing before the footlights on the variety stage this season, but chiefly for the reason that it is seldom in a place with a population the size of Hamilton one has an opportunity of seeing a vaudeville star who has achieved a such success. Of her appearance in Montreal, where she played to packed houses at every performance, the Herald of that city says:

Just as she did a few months ago, when her throat was in a state of health that made it almost dangerous for her to appear on the stage, so yesterday in the full command of all her powers, she fascinated the galleries into a chorus such as cold, restrained, undemonstrative and terribly respectable Montreal has seldom if ever heard in a reputable playhouse. And she did it with a word, without cajoling, bullying, jollying, drilling them, or any other of the tricks of the vaudeville day laborer. Somehow or other she just let them know that she wanted that chorus, and out it came. The balance of the bill, despite the expense incurred by the appearance of Miss Lloyd, fis perhaps the strongest array of vaudeville talent seen here this year. It includes the McNaughtons, English excentriques, in one of the funniest skits produced this season; the famous Asahi Troupe of Japanese acrobats and jugglers; Armstrong and Verne, an Australian duo; Harry Atkinson, who does excellent work in imitation of musical instruments with his voice; Eldora and company in a novelty juggling act; the dainty Hess sisters and the moving pictures, showing beau tiful scenes from Switzerland.

THE FARMERS' INTEREST.

Sir James Whitney, who has been re iterating his cry that, in spite of the position of the British governmental litery and naval authorities to that of help, Canada should have presented two Dreadnoughts, at a cost of probably $20,000,000 to the British navy, the Toornto Farmers' Sun is suspicious raise that clamor. It says: "Those who have been clamoring most loudly for Dreadnoughts and increased expenda-tures in armaments generally have an object to serve. This holds true both of the jingoes in England and their echoes here." Perhaps the Sun is right as to many of these noisy jingoes, but it is probable that Whitney's attitude and language are more easily accounted Sir James did not, probably, see beyond the apparent gallery effects of the immediate present. He wished to pose as a greater "patriot," a more generous statesman, and a more inveterate jingo than any, or all, of the members of the Commons. His language was not that of a responsible and thinking Canadian. It was that of the bidder for cheap applause from the upper gallery. The Sun may be right in its estimate when it says: "The principal noise makers in England hoped to so enlarge the national expenditure, by the outlay on navy and army, that the country would accept a policy of taxing imports of raising the necessary revenue. Those most active in pounding the war-drum in Canada are the men who desire to see the Canadian protecthey think they see in Canadian advenbuilding, and increased tures in navy military preparation generally, with the large expenditures therein involved, the best method of ensuring this." There is not the slightest doubt that pocketpatriots have worked up a great deal of this hullaballoo. Were the cause less dear, they would be stigmatized as common grafters.

effect of this agitation may be of serious import to the agricultural masses of Canada. The Sun, considering it from the farmers' point of view, says that if protection be adopted in Great Britain "it will be made to apply against Canadian agricultural products as well as against German munufactures, and the sales of our farm produce in the British market will thereby be lessened. If the Canadian tariff is increased the farmer will be hit on the other side by being compelled to pay more than now for the manufactured goods he is oblig ed to buy. In short, if the jingoes suc ceed, both here and in England, Canadian farmer will not only find his share of the national expenditures in creased, but he will be hampered even more than now in buying the supplies he needs, and on top of all this will have to face a hostile tariff in making sales in the English market." The vista thus opened to the Canadian farmer is not most inviting. Are his eyes open to the game being played upon him?

TECHNICAL EDUCATION. Technical education is not the narrow subject which some people seem to think it is. It is more than the whittling of sticks; more, even, than the acquiring of a smattering of a few trades. The real work of the technical schools is to develop in the youth, along scientific lines, tastes and capacities which lead to executive proficiency; to broaden the mind, make more definite its grasp, and place the how and why of things upon scientific basis This cannot be done in a day; it can never be done by narrowing the outlook of the student to the mere technique of one trade or one before he begins to specialize if he would education must be progressive, and it must be built upon a foundation laid in intelligence. The breadth demanded makes necessary an organized gradation extending from the earliest and simplest principles of techniques to the latest acquirements of science; and we must rd against the error of making it so exclusively technical as to leave the graduate ignorant of allied branches. In regard to this, Professor Chamberlain, writing in Popular Science Monthly, says: "That the training given in the technical college be not over narrow and restricted, to the science, mathematics drawing and shop work must be added such of the humanities as experience may show to be essential. The graduate of an engineering college or of a school of technology frequently finds himself in possession of sufficient facts connectwith his profession, but with a knowledge of the language he uses so inade quate as to seriously handicap him in pursuing his vocation. The business side of his education he also finds, when too late, has been sadly neglected. To adequately express oneself and to per fectly understand all business forms, such as papers of conveyance, deeds bills of lading, etc., are matters to be cusable. Details of common law, training in questions of national and politica ny, of general history and of com mercial geography are fundamentally essential. Herein is where the failure is so often made. The specialist can perform the task allotted to him, he can onstruct the plant, instal the equipment, but can go no further. The man nvolved, makes failures of his admin tration. The engineer must be an execu-tive engineer. His training must be such as to enable him to the together the various specialties." The old and wellrecognized fact remains that the man of one-sided training is not an educated man; he cannot yield the best results; he cannot reach the ideal. The special a broad and thorough training, the base of which is laid in a large fund of information, and a keen, well-developed intelligence.

ANOTHER TREE PEST

Chatham has a new tree pest. The errapin scale has attacked its maple shade trees, and is threatening to do serious damage. It might be worth while for the Hamilton Parks Board to devote some attention to guarding against the injury of our shade trees the city last year a good deal of dam age was done by the tussock moth. Just how the winter may have affected the pest it is too early to say, terrapin scale has been found in various parts of Ontario, specimens having been sent in to the Ontario Agri cultural College from St. Catharines is a hard hemispherical scale, red in the niddle, with black streaks, proceeding to the sides and a black margin; th colors and markings vary to some ex tent, and individuals may be found with very little red and others with little or no black. When observed on a tree they are usually in immense numbers, thickly clustered together and often overlapping each other. In shape and markings they bear some resemblance to a turtle and have therefore received the name of "the Terrapin Scale." It has done much injury in portions of the United States It attacks a large number of wild and cultivated trees and shrubs, and is especially injurious to neach trees. As it will it is important that any wild trees found to be infested should be cut down and burnt at once.

When fruit trees are attacked by this scale they should be sprayed with kerosene emulsion in the fall or winter, or early spring before the leaves come out The following is the formula recommend ed by Dr. Fletcher (Central Experimenta Farm Bulletin No. 52): Kerosene (coal oil) dissolved; then, while boiling hot, turn it into the kerosene and churn the mix ure constantly and forcibly with a syringe or force pump for five minutes, when it will be of a smooth, creamy nature. If the emulsion is perfect, it will adhere to the surface of glass without oiliness. As it cools it thickens into a jelly-like mass. This gives the stock emulsion, which must be diluted with nine times its measure of warm water before using on vegetation. The above quantity of three gallons of emulsion will make 30 gallons of wash. Some use lime to hold the kerosene in suspension Another method is thus described: The equisite amount of kerosene is placed in a dry vessel and flour added in the pro portion of 8 ounces to one quart of kero sene. It is then thoroughly stirred and 2 gallons of water added for every quart of kerosene; the whole is then vigor ously churned for from 2 to 4 minutes and the emulsion is ready for use. It has been found that by scalding the flour before adding the kerosene, an ex-

NEW BICYCLE POSTMAN (Toronto Mail and Empire.)

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The Hon Rudolphe Lemieux has approved of the adoption of a bicycle brigade in order that as the mail matter grows its delivery may be facilitated. The wheels to be used are painted red, in keeping with the red mail wagons. It is proposed to put on a few of these to ascertain to what extent the delivery of mail is facilitated, and if these bicycles are a success in Toronto, the bicycle brigade will be established in all the leading centres of the Dominion. Chief Superintendent Ross will at once put the service into effect here.

METHODIST BILLET. (Brantford Expositor.)

A couple of days ago The Expositor, published a list of billets which have been made for the delegates to the Hamilton Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada, which will meet in this city next week. Some years since the conference decided, because of its unsatisfactory working, to do away with the billeting system entirely, and the fact that a return has now been made to it, at least to the extent of made to it, at least to the extent of supplying lodging and breakfast, would seem to indicate that in most places the hotel accommodation is found insufficient to meet the full requirements such a large body of men.

THE WASTE OF MILITARISM.

The end will come when the property holding classes and the working classes see that it is to their interest to unite and oppose further financial burdens in this direction. GRAND TRUNK NEW OFFICES

The Grand Trunk Railway system, with their new organization in Europe, have opened a fine suite of offices at 17-19 Cockspur street, London, one of 17-19 Cockspur street, London, one of the best locations in the city. It is just opposite Pall Mall and the majority of the traffic from Westminster and the west end of London passes through this thoroughfare to Piceadilly, Oxford street, and the commercial sections of the metropolis. Canadians who visit London will find these offices complete in every way, and the company are desirous of having all visitors from the colonies make their headquarters in London their rendezvous, where they can have their mail addressed, make appointments and do their correspondence. This is an innovation of the transportation lines of the colonies, and no doubt will be taken advantage of by many overseas' visitors to the mother country.

Patten Let the Shorts Off Easy at the Last.

Sold May Wheat at $1.34-Might Have Charged Any Price.

Chicago, May 29.—What is generconceded to have been the most essful wheat deal in the annals of the Chicago Board of Trade closed to-day, and, what is symptomatic of modern speculative conditions, closed without that squeezing of shorts which in other days was wont to furnish a show to gallery visitors and leave Lasalle street staggering on its fin-ancial feet.

Lasalle street staggering on its financial feet, James A. Patten during the brief hours of to-day's session held May wheat in the hollow of his hand. He fixed the price at $1.34 per bushel. Through his pit clerk he bought or sold at that price, for the most part purely theoretically. He did take in a few thousand bushels from some "trailer," but mainly he disposed of about half a million to shorts, who had hoped against hope to the last moment and then "took their medicine."

moment and then "took their medicine."

Mr. Patten might have put the price at $5, and remaining shorts would have been compelled to pay it or acknowledge bankruptcy. The bull leader, however, according to his friends, continued consistent to his assertion that he had no wish to manipulate prices, but only to secure the legitimate profits of his foresight. Mr. Patten backed with his money his judgment that there was less wheat in the world than was generally believed. A million dollars is a conservative estimate of his profits. The losses will fall mostly on professional speculators.

All morning Patten sat facing the blackboard in his office, chewing gum vigorously. When it was over, every employee of the firm was given a bonus of ten per cent. of his annual salary.

THEIR PASTOR APPRECIATED.

First Methodist Church Prospered Under Mr. Treleaven.

A special meeting of the Quarterly Board of First Methodist Church held at the home of Dr. Day Smith on Saturday night to wind up the affairs of the conference year. The annual reports show the year just closed to have been the best in the church's history. Although First gave 40 of its members to the new Ryerson Church the membership showed a net gain of six, and now stands at 800. The total amount raised for all purposes during the year amounted to over $11,000; the missionary givings to $1,426, not including about $600 given by the Women's Missionary Society, and not including $1,500 subscribed towards the erection of Ryerson Church, of which $1,000 has already been paid.

The Board expressed its appreciation of the work of Miss Jones, the deaconcess, and decided that she be re-engaged, and passed the following resolution with reference to the work of the retiring pastor, Rev. R. J. Treleaven: of the conference year. The annual reand passed the following resolution with reference to the work of the retiring pastor, Rev. R. J. Treleaven:

Resolved—That the fulness of time under the rules of the Methodist Church making it necessary that First Methodist Church should part with its beloved pastor, Rev. R. J. Treleaven, this Quarterly Board desires to place on record its full appreciation of the splendid services rendered the church by Mr. Treleaven during his term as pastor, and its deep regret at the parting.

During the four years of his pastorate the spiritual upbuilding of the church, and the winning of souls for the Master have been, the Board recognizes, his first and constant care. The young people have had in him a true and constant friend and adviser; he has been strength to the weak and comfort the these particles of the pastern of the constant friend and adviser; he

Each year of his pastorate has seen increased growth and prosperity, and he leaves the temporal affairs of the church in the best condition they have every been in; the church membership the largest and all the societies of the church vigorous and progressive.

Mr. Treleaven's work in the pulpit has been of the highest order. He has preached the pure Gospel earnestly and fearlessly, and we feel that all have been bettered by having sat under him. To Mrs. Treleaven and the members of their family we desire also to express our heartfelt thanks for their earnest efforts for and interest in everything connected with the church's welfare, and it is our earnest prayer that in the field

Though the man had not succeeded in cutting the jugular vein, his condition is very serious, as his windpipe was severed. It is doubtful if he will recover.

The man was afterwards identifed by Officer Groves. The policeman says that Halter approached him on the street yesterday and told him he was from New Germany, near Berlin, where his father Edward Halter, lives. He said that he was out of ork and that he was going to telegraph his father to send him money to take him home.

The strikers have a tremendous symuthetic following, due in a large measure to the feeling stirred up by the action of the Traction Company in raising the rate of fare a month ago from six rides for a quarter to five cents traight. Every car is carrying two policemen, and on some lines four of them are sent out with each trolley.

Considering the extensivness of the strike, excellent, order has so far been maintained.

Decoration Day Services Held and Cemeteries Visited.

At the close of the civil war in the nited States in 1865 the 30th day of May was set apart as Memorial Day, and was at once adopted by all of the le le northern States and observed as a holiday. The Grand Army of the Republic held religious services on the Sunday preceding Decoration Day, the sermons being preached by men who had served in the army and who afterward entered in the ministry. Memorial Day has been sacredly observed for forty-four years in every country in which enough versus a majority of whom have long since been "mustered out," and over whose graves "lights out" has been sounded. W. W. Cooke Post, of this city, has not forgotten its comrades who have passed on, and each year the 30th day of May is duly observed with appropriate services and the strewing of flowers on the graves of the departed. There are now living in Hamilton between fifty and saxy veterans of the war and about thirty widows, and all but two or three are drawing pension. The United States Government has been generous to the men who fought its battles, and the amount that is paid the pensioners living in this city helps the widows and the surviving veterans to live in comfort. In the afternoon the veterans and their families again met in the hall, and after a short service and an address by Mr. McLaughlin, proceeded to the cemetery, where the decorating ceremoines were conducted by the commanders of the Post and of the Sons of Veterans. There are some fifty or sixty veterans buried in the city cemetery and fully half that number in the Catholic cemetery. At the close of the ceremonies the solemn roll of the drums and the sounding of "lights out" by the bugler brought back to the memory of the veterans the sad days in the long ago when they heard the same sounds as they stood by the graves of comrades who had fellen in battle.

The great Martell family of cyclists have been engaged and will come here direct from New York where they completed a long engagement at the Hippodrome on Saturday. Their act is one of the best of its kind and will be here for a week. To add to the big free programme the famous three Norhens will perform on the flying trapeze, afternoon and night. They are said to be the most sensational casting experts that ever appeared here.

district for the future.

The filthy condition of the inlet at the foot of Wellington street has caused C. J. Kerr, game and fishery overseer, to write to the city urging that some action be taken at once to abate the nuisance. Mr. Kerr blames the Canada Screw Company, which is permitted to drain overflow water into the Cathcart street sewer. The acid matter in this water, the inspector says, is not only injurious to the fish in the bay, but it eats the paints off the bottom of the launches and sariboats anchored within a considerable distance of the inlet. Mr. Kerr points out that the 1sh and game act makes it an offence to permit chemical or poisonous matter to enter water frequented by fish. He suggests that the Screw Company be given permission to connect with the Wellington street sewer, so that the water can be treated at the Ferguson avenue disposal works.

The firm points out that it has been complaining about this matter for the past three years, but has been unable to get satisfaction, and relies on Mayor McLaren to see that something is done.

The city last year contributed towards collecting some of the garbage. This was before the newly annexed district was taken in.

Without any ceremony the Beach waterworks system was opened to-day. The pumping station is about a quarter of a mile south of the piers.

In connection with the big additions to be made by the Otis-Fensom elevator works the city has arranged for the widening of Mars avenue from Emerald to Wentworth street. The company is contributing four feet five inches and J. J. Scott and others are giving over a reserve of five feet seven inches.

"Howe nothing!" snapped Miss Amelia. "I love my country!"

After that, the little lady cooled a bit and proceeded to instruct Herr Schwarz in the beauties of free government. Soon he regarded things in a different light, and the emblems he had reviled took on a gleaming glory. Bunker Hill—Lincoln— the battleship Maine—congress and the constitution—he came to worship with absolute idolatry. He boycotted all but American goods, and made a patriotic speech at the anti-everything club, until the "reds" chased him from the hall with scraps of furniture. Then, burning with love of country, he proposed to Miss Amelia again. "Himmel! Am I not one goot American?" he urged.

But still Miss Amelia shook her head. "No," she answered. "You are a beautiful patriot, Herr Schwarz, but you are not an American." And Herr Schwarz returned in sadness to the grocery. Pleasures of Trout Fishing.

Catching trout is not the only thing that makes fishing a mountain stream worth while. The early morning ride to the place where you are to commence your day's sport is in itself pleasant to a degree wholly missed by those who take their rides later in the day. During the early hours of the day the air is fresh and invigorating; every leaf and spear of grass by the roadside sparkles with dew, and the forest is pungent with pleasant and health-giving odors that are dispelled as the sun rises above the with dew, and the forest is pungent with pleasant and health-giving odors that are dispelled as the sun rises above the tree tops and dries the moisture on leaf and twig. As you drive quietly along you may have the good fortune to see a deer browsing in a roadside clearing. He stands watching you for a moment or two; then turns quickly and, with graceful leaps, disappears among the trees. An old fox steps out into the road and trots boldly along ahead of you for some distance; but, when he discovers that you are graining on him discovers that you are gaining on him, he turns for an instant, shows his teeth with a snarl, and then slinks away into

WRECKAGE WASHED ASHORE. WRECKAGE WASHED ASHORE.

A surface wave beyond the line of the barrier recf that fronts the bay marks the spot where the vessel is supposed to lie. A few weeks ago a spar stamped with the Admiralty mark, with nitches patched with copper in naval style, after being visible four days, floating attached to the wreck beneath, drifted ashore. Upon the same beach some time ago there drieted a jib-boom spar stamped Condor, a life-buoy similarly marked and several signal rocket cases marked with the name of the ill-starred vessel, mute testimony of the whereabouts of the long-missing sloop.

About a mile and a half out from About a mile and a half out from Long Beach the surface ripples over the ship that is supposed to be the sepulchre of one hundred and forty officers and men of his Majesty's navy. At high tide it is hardly visible, but at extreme low tide the sea boils about the obstruction. Half a dozen residents of the west coast who have gone out to the spot in smooth water and at low tide declared that the hulk of the submerged ship is plainly visible.

THE LAST SEEN OF THE CONDOR. On the morning of December 3, 1901, the sloop of war Condor, in company with H. M. S. Warspite, left Esquimalt, the former never to return, the Condor was bound for Honolulu and Tahiti heavily laden with coal for a long cruise and carrying a large consignment of mails for the British inhabitants in the isolated South Sea Island. When they left Canada it was expected that the match was to take place on Empire Day. The cable from Lord Strathcona, transmitting to the Militia Department the request from Lord Roberts that two representatives be sent from Canada, stated that the match was on Empire Day, whereas it now transpires that it will not be until August, in connection with the empire matches at Bisley camp. Meanwhile the two young Canadians will have three months to become acclimatized and practise shooting. Island.

In the straits a strong southeast gale prevailed and the warships parted company, the Warspite continuing on her way south and the Condor starting to carry out gun practice at the entrance to the straits, prior to making for Honolulu. Whether this gun practice was carried out has never been ascertained. Outside the straits that fateful night a terrific storm was, raging, which compelled every vessel in the region to fight for its life, and in this storm the Condor was seen for a brief moment, laboring was seen for a brief moment, laboring was seen for a brief moment, laboring heavily and flying signals of distress, by Captain James Boyd, now of the Bank Line steamer Aymeric, and then in command of the southbound lumber ship Springbank.

command of the southbound lumber ship Springbank.

Naturally the name of the struggling warship was not made out, but there was no doubt of her identity in the minds of Captain Boyd and his officers. They did not go to the supposedly disabled gunboat's assistance. Indeed, they gave her scant thought or attention at the time, as they were having all they could do to save their own ship and their lives.

The same night was responsible for another mystery of the North Pacific. The collier Mattewan left Nanaimo for San Francisco on December 2 and never reached her port. Some believe she foundered. Some say she crashed into the Condor and both vessels were sunk."

The Condor was of similar type to the Algerine and the Shearwater, now at Esquimalt Station. She had a very low free board, and the theory has been advanced that she shipped a tremendous sea, and before it had time to run through the scruppers she was struck by another, which caused her to founder. Another favored theory is that her coal cargo shifted in the gale, and that she turned turtle.

The ill-fated vessel was the second of her name, taking that of the vessel in which Admiral Lord Charles Beresford gained the title of "Condor Charlie" by taking her under the guns of Alexandria in the bombardment of that port in 1888.

Pain Poured in Torrents After Cyclone Had Passed.

St. Paul, Minn., May 30 .- Special despatches received here state that seven persons are known to be dead, many are dying, and over a score are seriously injured as a result of a tornado which swept over northwestern Dakota late yesterday. The storm was especially severe at Langdon, where the residence section of the city was practically wiped out, four people killed and twenty injured. The tornado swept up the James Rives from Ypsilanti to Jamestown, demolishing farmhouses and destroying much valuable property. The farmhouse of George Graves, near Yipslanti was blown into the James River, and Mrs. Graves and her two young daughters instantly, killed. The other members of the family were injured.

The tornado demolished all of the buildings of the Jamestown Fair Association, the loss being $50,000, and several other large buildings. Forty residences were destroyed at Langdon, and huge elevators were crushed into kindling wood by the terrific wind. Several towns have been completely cut off from communication, and it is feared the death list will be greatly increased by later reports. injured as a result of a tornado which Deranged Kidneys When the Kidneys Are Weak It Is If the girls and women who are si-lently suffering with what they sup-pose is "female trouble" would look to their kidneys they would soon find the source of their ill-health.

Lightning struck a lumber yard and started a fire which destroyed an entire business block. No effort was made to fight the flames, as the care of the dead and wounded demanded all attention. WAR ON BIG HATS. GO FOR YOUR LETTERS

London Ladies' Aid Society Asks Board to Take Action.

London, Ont., May 30 .- The Ladies Aid Society of Askin Street Methodist Church, one of the largest in the city, have declared war on big hats, and at a recent meeting unanimously passed a resolution to the quarterly board asking they issue a request to the ladies to remove the view-obstructing creatures.

The ladies suggest that the request be made this week, in connection with the open meetings of the London Conference, which is to meet in Askin Street Church this week. The move has attracted a lot of interest here.

Back Strained by Heavy Lifting. Lay Helpless in Bed For Four Days, Crippled, Suffering Agony and Terture.

"While engaged with a large construction company," writes Amos E. Wilbur, from Concord, "I wrenched my back while lifting a steel beam. I realized at once that I was hurt, but finished the day out. I was so lame when I reached home that my wife insisted on my going to bed. I applied poultices, hot water bags and other remedies, but at the end of the fifth day my suffering was more intense than at the first. A fellow workman brought me a bottle of NERVI-LINE, and rubbed my back twice during the evening. This gave me relief. Rubbing with Nerviline was continued the next day, and by night I was much improved. Nerviline must have penetrated right into the muscles that were sore, because it took out the stiffness, cured the pain and had me well in four days' time. Of course, to strengthen my back, I put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster and find it a wonderful help to a working man."

The failure of the subscription is atributed mainly to the anger of rich mer at the budget, disgust at the huge profit which the Colnaghis demand, and the doubt raised as to the Duke of Norfolk's right to selling the painting.

MURDER MYSTERY.

A Wealthy Woman in Chicago is the Victim.

Chicago, May 30 .- A murder, which the police declare promises to develop into one of the most sensational crimes ever committed in North Shore sub-urbs, was discovered to-day, when da-tectives entered the home of Dr. Ha.-dane Clemenson, 4,188 Wayne avenue. On entering the luxuriously furnished dwelling the body of Mrs. Norah Jane Clemenson, the daughter of the late John Morgan, a wealthy capitalist, of John Morgan, a wealthy capitalist, of South Haven, Mich., was found lying upon her bed with a cone of medicated gauze, from which chloroform for gauze, from which chloroform fumes could be detected, lying across her face. The body was cold and stiff, showing that the woman had been dead for several hours.

Lying upon the couch in another room was the body of Dr. Clemenson. The physician was alive, and Dr. Paul Hullhorst was attempting to resuscitate him. Dr. Clemenson was apparently not overcome by the anaesthetic, and according to the physicians was simply in a hysterical condition. The house was in disorder.

BRITISH BIRTH RATE.

Its Decrease Due to Recent Factory Legislation.

He instances the low birth rate another has on the average one child in ten years, as against five sixty years mother has on the average one chain then years, as against five sixty years ago. He maintains that it is because of the decreased economic value of a child owing to factory legislation, before the enactment of which a child contributed to the family maintenance from six years of age. In fifteen years, Prof. Pearson thinks, England will be in a similar condition to France.

MISSION WORK OF STUDENTS

Two General Secretaries In This City Yesterday.

Sixty-Fifth Anniversary Services at Knox Church.

Rev. Mr. Harris Begins His Duties at Chalmers'.

In several of the churches of this the earnest work of the Studeats' Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions was laid before the congregations yesterday, the two general Secretaries, Rev. J. Lovell Murray and Mr. Sennel P. Turner, of New York, being here for the day. Rev. Mr. Murray spoke in Ce :tral Church and Mr. Turner in Centenary, and First Methodist.

At Centenary, in the morning, the pening and closing exercises were con ducted by the pastor, Rev. Richard Whiting. The choir sang an anthem, "For now are we ambassadors," "How Lovely are the Messengers," very acceptably.

Mr. Sennel P. Turner, of New York General Secretary of the Student Val

Mr. Sennel P. Turner, of New York General Secretary of the Student Vol unteer Movement, occupied the pulpit. He delivered a very instructive address, taking for his subject, the missionary enterprise and prayer. He chose for his text, Matthew ix., 38: "Pray ye there-fore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into his har-vest." honors to the inventor, to-day ac-complished the most striking feat in

This great commission which left to His disciples after the failure of His life, the continuance of the work by the disciples after they had been scattered abroad is a most sublime en-terprise, but viewed from the standpoint of the worldly man is utter ronsense, and can be classed only with the ravings of a manier.

Newspapermen, men of affairs, atheists, etc., who say that the missionary enterprise is a failure, are right from their own view-point. When men look upon Christ's life as a failure, when they consider solve the upon Christ's life as a failure, when they consider only the disappointments of His followers, the lapse of time from Christ's time to our own and the multitudes who have not yet heard of the glad tidings of the gospel it does certainly appear nonsense to start out on such an undertaking.

But, when viewed in such a light, the fundamental principle of the kingdom of God is lost sight of. By connecting Matt. ix., 36-38, with Acts i. 8, Mr. Turner showed that the commission entrusted by Christ to His disciples is a reasonable one. Some have told us that Christ was moved with compassion toward the multitude because of their physical needs; this is a misconception as Christ always had man's spiritual needs uppermost in His heart. He saw in them the absence of hope, the worship of idols, the need of a Saviour and in them the absence of hope, the worship of idols, the need of a Saviour and ministered to their spiritual needs. We can loast of material progress and of civilization, but in our slums and destitute homes we are put to shame by the heathen. The only great boast we can make is that we can minister to their spiritual needs.

In the great periods of the spiritual depressions of nations there has always

In the great periods of the spiritual depressions of nations there has always been a marked absence of the missionary spirit of Christ. This applies equally to the individual life. The methods of Jesus are forgotten and the spiritual side of life neglected. To grow spiritually man must work and order his life in accordance with spiritual law, must comply with the laws of the life of Christ.

Prayer must be based on a knowled.

must comply with the laws of the life of Christ.

Prayer must be based on a knowledge of those for whom we are praying. The reason why we can pray more fervently for those of our own home and acquaintances than for the Chinese, and other foreign peoples, is because of our more intimate knowledge of them. The heart opens to God, when we know each other's needs. What we need is a clear conception of the compassion which moved Christ toward the multitude.

Secondly, prayer must be based on faith. We must realize that the gospel of Christ is equal to the needs of the soul, which can be known only by experience. If we experience it we can talk with confidence to others, and understand their needs.

Thirdly, there must be the spirit of obedience in prayer. We cannot experience the influence of the spirit of Christ unless we are obedient to Him. Our life begins to deteriorate the moment we the it described a great circle and sailed again for the south. Rebels Forced by Peru's Loyal hundred were killed on each side and a large number wounded.

Last night, following the attempted coup d'etat, was one of anxiety for all the residents of the capital. Occasionally shots were heard here and there, but there was no serious disturbance. Martial law had been proclaimed and strong forces of troops patrolled the streets.

Everything is quiet here to-day, but the troops are still very vigilant. People are not permitted to assemble on the streets. A close search is being made for the leaders of the uprising and they will be punished severely if captured. The temper displayed by the people generally, they warmly supporting the Government, shows that they will not tolerate revolutions which heretofore have done so much to set back the advance and damage the prosperity of Peru.

Mr. Turner concluded his address by Mr. Turner concluded his address by warning the audience not to attempt this enterprise nor to pray for it unless they were willing to pay the price. There is only one spirit with which to take up the work, "I surrender all to Thee, oh God." Prayer is worse than ro prayer unless we are willing to answer it in our own person, in our children, in our all if necessary. The Student Volunteer Movement had been brought about by prayer, has spread and is growing, but we must deny ourselves that the gospel may grow and be spread among all nations. Life becomes cold and hardened when we refuse.

NEW PASTOR AT CHALMERS.

The Rev. F. W. K. Harris, B. A., becan his pastorate of Chalmers' Presby-dead and in pastorate of Chalmers' Presby-dead varies in Chalmers and in the afternoon in Barton Church. His sermons in Chalmers' Church were practical and eloquent and made a most favorable impression upon his hearers. At the even-ing service he made special reference to with the work to which he had been called. It is said that as he stood before them for the first time as their pastor he saw a new era of life opening up before him.

He then drew a vivid picture of Columbus' voyage across the Atlantic, of his first discovered land when they reached it, and c. apared himself to the discoverer, when he spoke of the land beyond—of heaven, whose streets are paved with gold. His text was II. Cor. iv. 5, "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and ourselves your servance of the present of the men was a supplementation. we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and ourselves your ser-vants for Jesus sake." Among other taings he said that he would ever strive to preach Jesus Christ and to live Him. He came to them in a spirit of humility. He realized the greatness of the task before him. They must help him. His watchward would be "save souls." Among the things he wanted for the church was a session of elders and an active board of managers. He wanted them to pray as they professed, and then live as they prayed. He wanted neither hypocrites nor whited sepulchres in his as they prayed. He wanted neither hypocrites nor whited sepulchres in his church. They had found a good thing in Christ. Give it to others. He wanted the choir to be a Christian one. He wanted the strangers to come often; they were welcome. He wanted the Sunday school to have a growing evangelical spirit, and wanted the church to be known as a Gospel church, a church of faith, and of missionary zeal. He also wanted it to be a social church, that is, a church where all are friends, brothers in Christ, and he wanted it to be a praying church.

He also wanted it to be a social church that is, a church where all are friends, brothers in Christ, and he wanted it to be a praying church.

In the morning Rev. Mr. Harris chose Jame ii. 2º "Faith without works is dead," as his text, and from which he preached an impressive sermon. After a few introductory remarks, he said in the course of his discourse the most debatable book in the whole Bible was James. It was the last book to be given a place in the New Testament. Its author was unknown, unless it was written by James, the then head of the Church and the brother of Jesus. Dr. Stevens said the book was written early, fifty years after the birth of Christ. Prof. Kennedy, of Knox College, and others place the book very late, as late as 61 A. D. The question arose, did James read Paul's works? Was he influenced by him, and the great Pauline doctrine of justification by faith, as laid down in Galatians and other books of Paul? Faith was interpreted as belief merely, as receiving what the Church told you. James came with this thundering chapter—faith without works is dead. James wrote this chapter or letter of explanation to the churches. Mr. Harris emphasized and illustrated the duty and theory of faith and works—showed how the one dovetailed into the other. They believed an in God the Father? Did they? Was He their Father? Did they act towards Him as if He were their Father The Macedonian cry of "Come oversand help us" did not refer to some place in Turkey or Asia; Macedonia was Hamilton, it was Chalmers' Church, it was perhaps the pew they were sitting in or their neighbors. He appealed to the members of the congregation to be doers as well as believers.

Mr. MacBeth, who has been Superintendent of the Sunday school for some time, is resigning, and the church is looking out for some one to take his place.

AT CENTRAL CHURCH

AT CENTRAL CHURCH.

In Central Presbyterian Church in the evening a large congregation had the pleasure of hearing an inspiring sermon delivered by Rev. J. Lovell Murray, Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement. Choosing as his text, "My people offer themselves willing in the day of Thy power," the speaker interpreted its meaning in a clear and interesting manner. He first referred to the present-day condition of the non-Christian world—the far east, the near east, and Latin America. Taking each of these countries in turn, he pointed out how they were changing at the persent time, and showed their process. He emphasized the necessity of the strongest influence, of an uplifting nature, being brought to bear upon these changing civilizations. They are changing now—the crisis is at land, and the situation is most acute.

He said there was a summons to the present generation to meet this situation, so direct from God that it was unique. Movements which are now on foot in the church showed that there are many of God's people who are not only willing. church showed that there are many of God's people who are not only willing, but eager, to meet and take advantage of this situation. For example, Mr. Murray pointed out the Laymer's Missionary Movement, the Young People's Missionary Movement, and the Student Volunteer Movement. He concluded his remarks by making a personal appeal to very individual in the congregation to lo his part in this work, and assist as much as possible to render the outcome of the present condition of the non-Christian people a victory for God.

KNOX ANNIVERSARY.

In Knox Presbyterian Church yester day Rev. R. J. Wilson, of St. Andrew's Church, Vancouver, preached the sixty-fifth anniversary sermons and the church also celebrated Rev. A. E. Mitchell's first also celebrated Rev. A. E. Mitchell's first anniversary as pastor. The attendance was very large. In the morning Mr. Wilson selected as his theme Mark iv. 30: "And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it? It is ike a grain of mustard seed, which when Triedly, there must be the spirit of bedience in prayer. We cannot experience the influence of the spirit of Christ in less we are obedient to Him. Our times we are obedient to Him. Our and he were killed on each side and alrage number wounded.

They were inquiring regarding God, and gazing upwards, trying to understand heaven, but from His teachings has branched out the great broad tree of Christianity, which extends throughout the world. The greatest of things lie in small beginnings. He spoke of the humble fishermen who were standing by the seashore. nings. He spoke of the humble fisher-men who were standing by the seashore when Christ called them to follow him, and said that although they had very little to leave, yet there was less to go for if they had not had the fullest con-fidence in His teachings. They obeyed and followed Him and planted the seed that has spread to all countries. Some people have the mistaken idea that the kingdom of heaven is measured by the numerical growth, but that is not so, for very often when there is great numerical numerical growth, but that is not so, for very often when there is great numerical growth there is spiritual deeay. When Christ came into the world civilization was a gilded sepulchre, morality was dead and religion was a mark for hypocrisy, but He planted the seed which has been productive of such wonderful results, and He formed new thoughts of God and mankind. Man was brought to realize his duties to God and to his fellow man. He spoke of the friendliness between nations, and said in times of need the other nations are always.

of need the other nations are always willing to send food and clothing to help the sufferers, and as an example he re-ferred to the massacre in Adana, when Work While the Armenians who were left alive after the Turks had looted the village were without the necessaries of life, but were readily rendered assistance by outside nations. In closing he said it is the embracing of little opportunities that will be productive of greater ones.

In the evening he preached an excellent sermon from the text Mark ix 23: "Jesus said unto him, if thou canst believe all things, all things are possible to him that believeth."

The anniversary social will be held tonight, supper being served at 6.30 in the Sunday school, and the programme will begin at 8.15.

AT TRINITY LUTHERAN.

AT TRINITY LUTHERAN AT TRINITY LUTHERAN.

There were good congregations present at the services of the newly organized Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church yesterday. Rev. M. J. Bieber, the pastor, occupied the pulpit in the morning, and Rev. Dr. Kunzman, of Philadelphia, Superintendent of Home Missions, preached at night. Dr. Kunzman delivered an earnest and thoughtful sermon, taking as his text Acts. xvii. 26: "God hath made of one blood all nations of nien for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." He said that in the that God has determined on their rise and development and success according to their faithfulness, and punished them according to their unfaithfulness. Some things are fixed and determined, and other things optional. These have divided philosophy and religion into fatalism on one hand and absolute free will on the other. Both are half truths. While certain things—such as our birth—are not controllable by ourselves, every man is the architect of his fortune and the maker of his destiny. All things that are fixed are for our good. If the seasons were not fixed the farmer would not know when to sow his seed. If the redemption had not been fixed and deter-

Stare in Her Eyes, Thinking Perhaps of the Fashions-Maybe He Did Object to Blue Stockings

Mr. Gnagg, becoming discursive on the ubject of the tariff and discovering (with pleasure) that Mrs. Gnagg is deficient in information on that topic,

Just wait a minute. I wonder why I Just wait a minute. I wonder why I am sitting here working away at the job of trying to analyze all these things for your benefit. I might just as well climb to the top of the Singer building and explain the tariff muddle to the four winds of heaven. You're sitting there with a glassy stare in your eyes, wondering whether you'd better have that new rajah skirt made with pleats or with bias gores, or something like that, and pretending—merely pretending—that you're hearing what I am saying and that you have a working tending—that you're hearing what I am saying and that you have a working understanding of the subject in hand. Huh? You don't profess to know much about the tariff, but you're willing to find out something about it, and you've heard every word that I've said?

Oh, of course; but I guess I can tell whether a woman is intent upon what's being said to her or whether her mind, or what she elects to call her mind, is whirling in a sort of vapid vortex fifwhirling in a sort of vapid vortex fif

Oh, shucks! What right have I got to expect anything else? What license has a man got these days to expect to enjoy such a thing as mental companion-ship with his wife?

Sometimes, as at present, for instance, I come to and I have a sort of a grisly internal laugh at the thought of what an idiotic picture I must present when I

Oh, yes, I see you plowing through the millinery and white sale ads. You turn to that block type stuff the first thing; but do you ever read any of the news in the paper?

For example, who's the Pressuent the United States at the present time?

How's that? Taft? Great!
Who told you? When did you find that out? By George, maybe I've done you a slight injustice. Hooray! She actually knows the name of the President of the United States and he hasn't held the office three months at that!
Well, I'm wrong in spots, there's no use denying it. I'd have bet a million dollars that you were well-that you.

Well, I'm wrong in spots, there's no use denying it. I'd have bet a million dollars that you were under the impression that Hayes was still President.

Well, of course you couldn't very well dodge the big headlines relating to mortant people like Presidents and such fike. The point that I seek to make is that you hav no natural, inherent desire to keep abreast of the world's doings. Big thngs don't nterest you. It's only the liliputian affiars of your own circumscribed orbit that arouse your fleeting momentary attention.

Inhultian alliars of your own circumscribed orbit that arouse your fleeting momentary attention.

Still, allowing that to be the case, mightn't it naturally be supposed that you'd be willing to overcome your indifference to everything except the gantile, if only for the purpose of being able to respond to my attitude toward the larger things of life?

You wouldn't have to really mean it, you know. I wouldn't be so unfair, so heartless, as to expect that. You could just flatter me, you see, by sort of drumming upon a few of the topics of the day, so that when I began to talk about something that the whole world's all keyed up about you could stick in an intelligible word here and there and thereby make me believe that you really lad some embryonic idea of trying to be a sure enough companion to your husband.

I'm not asking much, you see. I'm even willing to permit you to fool me and make a monkey of me, if you'll only sort of get next to yourself and make believe to be interested in things that interest me even for the sake of pulling the wool over my fool eyes.

Because, you know, you're about the only human being I have to talk to or with. As you perhaps apprehend, I have to work for a living. I have to be on the job and be on it with both feet all day and when I get home I'm tired.

I'm not one of those rummies that stick on their hats and hike off downtown as soon as they've eaten their dinner. Sometimes I wish I did belong to that push. I'd be better off. I'd get a little exercise for my mind. I'd meet people who'd make me smoke up mentally and all that. I'd_genjoy the clash of opinions and the stimulation of controversy.

No, no, instead of following this system what do I do? Why, when I come.

No, no, instead of following this system what do I do? Why, when I come home here from my hard day I stick around my home, and presently something takes hold of my mind or seizes my imagination and I begin to spout a little about it and almost immediately I'm confounded by your glassy-eyed I'm confounded by your glassy-eyed stare; and then, as now, for example, I am made conscious of what a big lum-mox I am for expecting anything else but what I get.

Well, don't you worry. Things won't lways go along this way around here. Situations of this sort can't last always. A man with a mind above that of a wood-tick, has got to have some kind of mental companionship if he's not to dry up and blow away like an abandoned ant hill; and I tell you what, when I reflect upon what a desert place, intellectually exacking my horne it to me if ant hill; and I tell you what, when I reflect upon what a desert place, intellectually speaking, my home is to me it make me desperate, simply desperate.

I don't have to spend all my spare time around here, you know. There's no law compelling me to do it, and I'm not so infernally old that I wouldn't be able to change my habits of living. Even if I'm not crazy just now over that going downtown thing of evenings, why, I could mighty easily form the habit, and if I ever get into that way of going there wouldn't be one chance in eight million that I'd ever resume the old dry as dust scheme of hanging around this dreary dismal plant all the time.

Women—wives—never seem to wake up to it that they're making mistakes until it's too late, and then, when they're lost out and all of their world has come crashing about their ears, why, knows I've had enough argufying with you since I got that idiotic remark out of my system, if I really did say it.

I've learned my little lesson since them. I've had to sing pretty small around here for so long that sometimes I don't recognize the sound of my own volce when I speak in a natural tone downtown, and if I should ever—

Oh, pshaw! The whole business, as I've said time and again, and as I repeat, is my own fault, and it all serves me perfectly right. Here, for example, after swearing off on that fool business a million times, I'm engaged again in an argument with a woman.

Well, maybe I'll learn sometime. Maybe by the time they're ready to carry me out feet foremost I'll have learned just about enough to last me over night, and that's about all.

CLEVER COLLIE

Took Its Master's Plaid and Dried It by the Fire.

by the Fire.

The shepherds who live among the hills and on the plains of Scotland have to travel many miles a day while looking after their flocks of sheep, but they would have to travel a great deal more if they had not with them some very clever collie dogs.

These little four-footed friends are so wise and clever that their masters could not do without them. To show you how clever these doggies are, I will tell you a story of one of them.

One day a Scotch shepherd was caught in a rain shower, and when he arrived home his plaid, which he wore over his

And what do you think he did with it And what do you think he did with it there? Why, to the astonishment of an English gentleman who had followed to watch, doggie went and sat on the hearth in front of a big fire, and there he held out the plaid over his paws.

And he turned it about and about in front of the fire until both sides of the plaid were quite dry. Then he took it back to his master.

AN IDEAL OUTING.

Women—wives—never seem to wake up to it that they're making mistakes until it's too late, and then, when they're lost out and all of their world has come crashing about their ears, why, they go moaning around seeking sympathy and wailing about how they've been abused and outraged and all that sort of moonshine, when the whole infernal mess is all their own fault, only they haven't got the logic or the sense of common justice to admit it.

Of course, I don't expect to have a Mme. de Stael as a wife—oh, no. you wouldn't know who she was if I told you—but I sure would like to experience the satisfaction of feeling that my wife knew something more than face powder. you—but I sure would like to experience the satisfaction of feeling that my wife knew something more than face powder. How's that? I've always said that I despised puffy wuffy women that thought they had brains, and I've said that I'd as soon be married to a green grasshopper as to an intellectual woman of any species, and every time I come to to contact with a woman like that I try to bully her and refuse to treat her civilly and—Oh, go ahead. Go right ahead. Put things in my mouth. Put the whole Koran and Talmud in my mouth. I'm used to it. I'm used to everything.

When you get through, perhaps you'll be good enough to permit me to stick in the statement that I never in my life said such a thing as that I didn't like intellectual women. What I may have said was that I didn't like women of the bluestocking variety. There's a heap of difference between the two, but I haven't got the time or the inclination to draw up diagrams showing you those differences.

Why do you have to mark back at me in that way when I open my face and say a few little needed things to you.

difference between the two, but I haven't got the time or the inclination to draw up diagrams showing you those differences.

Why do you have to mark back at me in that way when I open my face and say a few little needed things to you, anyhow? Why do you persist in following that comeback system?

I haven't said one word that unfair or unreasonable, have I? I haven't tuttered one syllable that isn't absolutely true, have I?

Well, then, is it necessary, when I talk wholly for your own good and entirely with the view of getting you to see the desirability of improving yourself, for you to turn on me with that enraged expression and begin to quote things that I never said in my life or even thought of saying?

How's that? I used to say that I wouldn't give a snap for a woman who had nothing to say for herself in an argument?

There you go again! I may have been pullonut to say something like that, but.

Few Really Rich Men in France

Vicomte d' Avenel tells us that less than 5,000 Frenchmen have an income of £4,000 ($20,000) a year, 1,045 have £8,000 ($40,000), 300 a rent roll of £20,000 ($100,000), 120 £40,000 ($200,000), and about fifty possess £100,000 ($500,000). Although those possessing great riches are few in number in France yet several of the wealthies have large incomes compared with princes and kings several of the wealthies have large in-comes compared with princes and kings of days past. Francis I. and Henry II., the vicomte states, never had revenues of more than 2,500,000 francs ($500,000) a year.—London Globe.

Masons and Bricklayers Trouble at Galt.

Galt, May 29 .- Present indications oint to a strike of the masons and brick lavers of Galt in the very near future. In fact the strike may be called on June 1, although no definite information in this regard can be obtained.

It is understood, however, that the men are asking for an increase of from 35 to 40 cents an hour, and a shorter working day.

A prominent contractor said that in all probability the contractors would hold out against any increase, and in that event a strike seems certain, as the men are determined to take a strong stand.

It is to be hoped*that the difficulty will be settled amicably, as a strike just at this time would result disastrously to the many building operations under way and in contemplation.

Daring Operation Relieves a Woman of Excruciating Pain

Suffering So Great She Had Threatened Suicide

And Gladly Consented to the Critical Operation.

New York, May 31.—Physicians who are here attending the convention of the American Neurological Association saw a woman who had been saved from suicide by a daring and successful operation for ear neuralgia, the first of its kind ever performed.

She appeared before them gladly at the New York Academy of Medicine yes terday, and to-day Dr. L. Pierce Clark, the neurologist who diagnosed the case, and Dr. A. S. Taylor, the surgeon who performed the operation, both of New York, will give a technical description of their work in a paper which they have jointly prepared.

The patient, who is the wife of a Bridgeport physician, was not mentioned by name. She appeared before the association yesterday because it was necessary for her to return to her home sooner than she had expected.

Mrs. A —— had been afflicted for several years with violent and piercing terday, and to-day Dr. L. Pierce Clark was unbearable, and several times she threatened self-destruction.

Seven physicians treated her in vain. She finally came under the care of Dr. Clark, who has paid special attention to all forms of nerve disease. He made an elaborate study and found that the malady was not face neuralgia, as had been supposed, but that it was due to the condition of the nerve connecting the geniculate ganglion with the brain.

Dr. Clark decided it would be necessary to sever this filament, known as the pars intermedia, which lies between the than if she continued to live without finding relief.

She said she would gladly undergo it, as life was not worth living, and that if she died as a result of the operation she would be better off than if she continued to live without finding railer.

Dr. Clark consulted with Dr. Taylor, the well-known surgeon, who performed the operation five times on dead bodies, before Mrs. A—— was placed on the operating table. Her skull was trephined back of the ear and part of the bone was broken down. This gave an opening a quarter of an inch in diameter. An instrument was put down for three inches, the cerebellum was lifted, and by means of a small electric light the nerves were revealed. A small glass drainage tube was put in place, as the use of a sponge or any such substance would have produced a dangerous pressure. By means of a small hook the nerve was raised and then severed.

The surgeons could see plainly the nerve controlling respiration, the disturbing of which would have caused death. The variation of an eighth of an inch through any cause would, in the pointon of Dr. Clark, have proved fatal. He spoke in the highest terms of the skill of Dr. Clark, have proved fatal. He spoke in the highest terms of the skill of Dr. Taylor, who had operated in accordance with his diagnosis. The ganglion is now not deprived of mourshment, although it no longer connects with the brain.

The members' stand and lawn were crowded and presented an attractive appearance as dame fashion moved to and fro. The day was an ideal one. The hot sun soon dried the track that was heavy from the recent rains, but it was far from being fast, remaining dead and slow. Consequently no track records were lowered.

The sport at the Woodbine on Saturday marked a new era in Canadian racing. It was the first time in the history of racing in this country that a purse of $5,000 was added to a race for thoroughbreds, and the Ontario Jockey Club is certainly entitled to credit for the liberal manner in which they have treated the horsemen.

It was one of the greatest day's racing ever run at the Woodbine, and was witnessed by one of the largest crowds that ever gathered on a Canadian track. The cup race had an added value of $5,000. This was won by the favorite, King James. The summary:

WHITEWASHING IN SOCCER LEAGUE GAMES.

Only two games of soccer were played on Saturday as the Dundas team failed to appear and the game that was scheduled between them and the Hamilton city team won by default.

The game between the International Scots and the St. Luke's proved a onesided affair, the final score 8—0 favor a draw-back in that way. Georgeson, for the Scots, was off color for the first time this year, and made some bad plays at times. In the first half the Scots secured 4 goals and the half time score was 4—0, favor of the Scots.

In the second half the St. Luke's were kicking with the wind but it had dropped considerably and the Scots by good combination managed to pile up four more goals before full time. The left wing of the Saints was the strongest spot on the team and they played a very steady game from start to finish, but with poor support from the rest of the team their efforts were of little use.
Some alterations in the line-up of the Saints made the team a little weaker.
The goals were scored as follows:

Inning.

Verity Nine Won at Brantford.

There were some local baseball records broken at Britannia Park on Saturday afternoon, when the Inter-City League Patorick's teams-met for the first time The game went twelve innings and lasted from 3 o'clock until 6.10. The time for nine innings was two hours and twenty minutes. The long game was witnessed by a fairly large crowd, and the rooters seemed to be pretty well divided. There were a lot of talking fans in the stand and during the game some hot packages were handed out, not only to the players, but to the umpire, Eddie Dore. Edward had an off day Saturday, and made some poor decisions, but the teams broke even on these—neither profited by any of the verdiets that met with disapproval of the grand stand critics.

The thing about the game that pleased the crowd was the batting. A good for nine innings was two hours and verdicts that met with disapproval of the grand stand critics.

The thing about the game that pleased the crowd was the batting. A good deal of willow work was done, the St. Patrick's having fourteen hits to their credit and the west iders twelve. Southon, of the Pleasure Club, was a little wild at times, but the support he did not get was enough to make any heaver wild. This club had George, late of the Keystones, in centre garden, and he surprised the fans by his stick work. If made two two-base hits and accepted all chances but one. He made a favorable impression.

With ordinary racing luck, the St. Patrick's would have had the game in the ninth and again in the eleventh, in which Brennen made a two-bagger and Kid Smith followed with a single.

Following is the score:

McCaig, pitching for the plowmakers, was invincible in tight places, struck out eleven men, and pulled himself out of a bad hole in the fifth with three men on bases and no one out. Simpson was touched up hard in spots, alhough he was accorded ragged support. An unfortunate accident happened in the fifth inning, when Garbut in getting back to first stepped on Dingwell's hand, almost severing a digit and leaving the bone protruding. Bradley and Garbut had three hits each off Simpson, while Cancella and Shea proved the best for the windmillers. The latter were weakened by the absence of McCallum at third base. On Sunday:

At Cincinnati.—St. Louis made a new first-inning record in Sunday's game by scoring eleven runs on six hits, three bases on balls and three errors. It required 36 minutes to play the half, 14 men being to bat, and three pitchers being used. Only one run was scored off Karger, who finished the game for the locals. Score:

At Chicago.—Pittsburg took both games from Chicago yesterday. Overall struck out ten men in the first, but issued nine passes and made a wild pitch, three of these battery errors helping the visitors to three of their five runs. Willis outpitched Pfeister in the second contest, doing much the better headwork in pinches. One of the largest crowds ever drawn to the West Side Park witnessed the contests, ground rules accounting for numerous two-baggers. Score (first game):

QUEEN'S COLLEGE PROF. MARATHON CRAZE.

Kingston, Ont., May 31.—Dr. James

These lead to the deterioration of the mental status of the nation. This "swirl" are the keys that unlock the gates to nervous ruin that swing wide open the asylum doors.

AMATEURS YOUNG

The amateur baseball tossers had a great day on Saturday. The weather was ideal, and large crowds turned out to witness the concests. The Victoria Park had the largest crowd of the season, the side line seats being filled, and hundreds stood. The games were all exciting and close. In one game thirteen innings were played. The Keystones and Baysides put up the best exhibition seen at the Victoria Park this season. The first game was between the Broadviews and Maple Leafs, and was won by the Broadviews, 13-6. In every inning up till the fifth the north-end aggregation scored runs on wild throws by the Leafs, but the article of ball played after that was up to the standard. Southpaw Bolton, the twirler for the Broadviews, was in usual form, and served the benders in fine style, while he was ably supported by Dick Beattie, who caught a fine game. Jack Curtis on third played a hard game, as did Buckingham on first. Magley did the heaving for the Leafs, and pitched a rattling good game, but between errors and many wild throws at critical times, the Leafs lost the game. Bular on short was the star for the Maple Leafs. He fielded well, and his home run, with two me non bases, was the feature of the game. The teams lined up as follows:

In the latter part of the game the Barristers began hitting the ball, and, assisted by the poor field work of the Alerts, the Barristers scored four runs. Brooks, the pitcher for the winners, was never in better condition, having fifteen strike-outs, and fielded his position perfectly.

Justice Teetzel Leaves the Proctor Suit For Justice McMahon,

Who Will Also Hear That of Biggar vs. McBrayne.

Non-Jury Sittings Opened With a Long List of Cases.

The spring non-jury sittings of the High Court opened here this morning, Mr. Justice Teetzel presiding. When the court opened Mr. Geo. Lynch Staunton moved for leave to set up a counter aim in the action arising out of the west filed against one of the wills of caveat filed against one of the wills of the late John Proctor, who left an estate valued at several hundred thousand dollars. He stated that the deceased had received the property of his first wife. Other counsel in the case were: S. F. Washington, Martin & Martin; E. D. Cahill; A. C. Beasley; F. W. Harcourt, and J. W. Nesbitt. A warm passage of words took place between Mr. Staunton and Mr. Washington, His Lordship stated that he had decided not to try the gase, knowing the deceased, and in view of questions which would probably arise. He also said he would not try the partnersup action of Biggar vs. McBrayne. He had arranged with Mr. Justice McMahon to come here as soon as he is through with the St. Catharines Court and try these two actions. He expected that His Honor would be able to get here on Thursday or Friday.

J. W. Nesbitt submitted that Proctor disposed of this property, which was trust property, and therefore had no legal right to will it to the children of his second wife.

Mr. Washington maintained that the action was to establish the will, and therefore there was no defence. There could be no action against John Proctor until there was a representative of the said John Proctor. According to Mr. Nesbitt, the late Mr. Proctor had deliberately defrauded his first wife's children of their inheritance, which Mr. Staunton emphatically denied.

Mr. Washington maintained that he had not been given time to prepare to meet the case.

Mr. Staunton replied that he had been given a month.

Mr. Washington stated that that was not sufficient time to look up a transaction which took place twenty-eight years ago. He said he must have time to get evidence.

Mr. Nesbitt replied that there was no preparation they could make.

Judge Teetzel called for the affidavits and asked time to look over the matter.

Mr. McClemont moved that the actions of Balfe vs. Addison, for a declaration that a conveyance is void, and that of Addison vs. Walker, to declare a deed void, be consolidated as they cover the Balme ground. The motion was granted.

The action of Mrs. Emma Martin vs. Tunion Trust Co., executors of the estate of the late James Hinchliffe, of Port Dover, Norfolk, for ten years' wages, was disposed of. Plaintiff was unable to claim any part of her father's estate, being his natural daughter, but was promised compensation by her father for the care she had taken of him. Justice Teetzel gave her judgment for $250.

and which was "t in the United States was launched on Saturday at the Ecorse yards of the Great Lakes Engineering Works, Detroit, under ideal weather conditions. The Stadacean, as the boat is called, is owned by the Inland Navigation Company and is the largest of their 'eet which comprises eleven boats. The Stadacean is 500 feet in length, has a fifty-six foot beam and capacity of 9,500 gross tons and will carry iron ore and grain when east bound and coal when west bound. Not only is she the largest of the Inland Navigation Co. fleet but is the largest Canadian awned steamer on the lakes. Mr. A. B. MacKay explained at a luncheon at the Detroit Club after the launching that the reason the boat was not build in Canada was because the Canadians did not have the facilities to build a boat of the size of the Stadacona as quickly as the American companies. The Hamilton party who were present at the launching were: Mrs. R. O. MacKay. John Milne, J. P. Steadman, A. Hope, A. W. Peene, J. F. Kavanagh, W. G. Walton and daughter, George Spence and F. A. Magee.

see that they had disappeared. For a moment the significance of their disappearance did not appear to him, but in a flash he saw that they must have fallen overboard. Turning the boat around hastily he returned as nearly as possible in the boat's wake. Looking ahead he saw the body of one of the young men about a hundred yards away, rise to the surface. He did not know which it was, but, steering the boat in that direction, he stepped down to turn off the engine so that the launch would stop when it came near the swimmer. After stopping the flow of gasoline he stood up, but the body had disappeared, and did not come to the surface again. McEwen then tried to start the engine, but as he was unacquainted with its workings, his attempt was fruitless, and for over an hour the boat, with its single unhappy occupant, lay stranded in the middle of the bay. He finally succeeded in attracting the notice of Richard Wilson, who was out for a sail in his gasoline launch, and who went to his assistance, and after some difficulty the boat was towed back to the Beach. County Constable William Hazell was notified, and a fruitless attempt was made to recover the bodies. David McEwen then returned to Hamilton, and to him fell the task of breaking the sad news to the bereaved families.

Harry McEwen was 29 years of age, and for a number of years boarded with Mr. William Ford, 476 York street, manager of the Simcoc canning factory, whose wife is a sister of the deceased.
