ALL FOR LOVE.

CHAPTER XV.
PHILIP'S AVOWAL.

All at once the lines in Philip's fine face began to stiffen, his firm chin settled aggressively, and his eyes glowed with the fire of battle that was habitual to him when he found himself on the verge of dealing with any critical problem.

He waited patiently, until she paused to draw breath in the midst of a vivacious description, when he arrested her with a gesture, and, looking straight into her eyes, he said resolutely yet gently:

"My Lady Beth, it won't do. You and I are keeping up a game at cross-purposes. You know, as well as I, that we can never feel at ease with each other, can never settle down to anything like real friendliness, until we have freely discussed a certain subject, and had it out with each other. I mean Miss Crawford's will and plans for us, and that is just what I am here for now. It was my only chance, for you know I have not been able to get a word alone with you during the last week. It is true you wrote me frankly on the subject, asking me to release you from the long-contemplated union, assuming that the idea of it was as repulsive to me as it is to yourself, and—"

"Of course," Beth here interposed, her cheeks like scarlet geraniums. "Could it be anything but repulsive—that scheme to coerce two people to marry each other just to secure a fortune?"

"That part of it I grant," gravely replied Philip, "is a repulsive scheme. I think it was almost a criminal thing to do; for there are men and women in the world who would agree to it just for the sake of the money, without regard to compatibility of temperament or any other conscientious consideration, and be miserable ever after. With that view of it, I immediately signified my willingness to do as you suggested reserving, however, the privilege of discussing the subject further with you. But as I thought more of the matter, especially after Teddy opened my eyes to certain things, and I found you had evaded my visit by going to York Harbor, I began to think there must also be a personal repulsion on your part, so deeply settled that you could not even tolerate meeting me. Tell me, Lady Beth, am I personally repulsive to you?" he concluded in a tone that trembled in spite of his manhood.

Beth's nether lip was fiercely gripped between her small white teeth. This sudden turn in their conversation had taken her wholly by

WOMAN A GREAT SUFFERER

Tells How She Was Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Tilbury, Ont.—"I could praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all around the world because it has done so much for me. For two years I was so run down that I was unable to do my work. I had female weakness and dreadful periodic pains, constipation and a bad backache, but now I am well of all these things. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Liver Pills and Sanative Wash. I give you permission to publish this letter to help others."—Mrs. WILFRED CHAND, Box 464, Tilbury, Ontario, Can.

Case of Mrs. Tully. Chicago, Ill.—"I take pleasure in writing to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with such awful periodic pains, and had a displacement, and received no benefit from the doctors. I was advised to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and am now as well as ever."—Mrs. WILLIAM TULLY, 2082 Ogden Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

surprise, and nearly deprived her of her poise. Philip personally repulsive to her! Oh, if he had even a suspicion of the truth, where should she go to hide her mortification?

Then her quivering soul sprang to arms. He had no right to probe her, thus, and her only refuge against breaking down utterly before him lay in sharply turning the tables upon himself. She sat erect and raised a pair of blazing eyes to him.

"Can you ask me that?" she demanded, and then could have shrieked with agony at what she had done. He went white to the lips; yet he did not flinch a hair. Looking straight back at her, he quietly replied:

"I understand, and I see it was presumptuous question. Still, you have been so kind to me during our visit to Ted, that, with the assurance of your forgiveness, I began to hope you would eventually forget the rash speech. But I see it still rankles in your heart, and I cannot blame you, either."

"He paused, but Beth remained silent. She knew if she attempted to speak she would burst into violent weeping, and shamelessly betray her secret then and there.

"I cannot blame you," he presently repeated in the same quiet, repressed tone. "It was a dreadful thing to say, no matter what the provocation, but surely, Beth, you do not believe that I deliberately gave expression to an actually existent state of thought or sentiment. You cannot believe that I was so disloyal, so hypocritical toward the child of whom I was really very fond in those old days. See here," he interposed, with a slight start, as he drew a wallet from his coat and began to search its pockets. "You would not write to me; you would not even send a message through others; you would not allow me to have a likeness of yourself during all these years, so I have had to content myself with this one, poor little memento of the past."

He had found a yellow, time-worn envelope, from which he slipped a small photograph, and showed it to her. It was a picture that had been taken of her only a few months before he went away. It showed a child of about twelve years in a short dress, her hair drawn straight back from her forehead, and woven into a massive braid that hung over one shoulder. The face was plain, the features irregular, the nose a decided pug, the brow and upper part of the head being too large in proportion to the lower part of the face; the figure undeveloped, the pose stiff and awkward; and, judged by a disinterested person, or at that moment by Beth's sensitive, lacerated pride, it was the likeness of a very unattractive child that seemed to mock her at fresh with cruel memories of that never-to-be-forgotten experience amidst the dense foliage of the old beech. Every nerve in her body prickled as from the shock of an electric battery at the sight, goading her to renewed indignation against, and unjust misinterpretation of, the man sitting beside her.

"So you preserved that as a reminder," she said, with curling lips; then would have snatched the picture from him to reduce it to atoms, and so annihilate forever this last souvenir of that "freckle-faced fright" of long ago.

But he was too quick for her. He arrested her hands, captured and slipped the picture back into its envelope and out of sight, thus preserving it from destruction.

"How you misjudge me," he said, reproachfully; "but, let me tell you, I have kept that picture—and always shall keep it—because I had and could get no other, and—his voice suddenly softening—"because I loved that little girl not for her beauty, as you have just seen, but for her moral worth, her unimpeachable loyalty to her friends, and to principle, young as she was. She had her faults—oh, yes—a temper that could cut and slash at times, for one thing; but from the day she became My Lady Beth to the boy who meddled with her doll, she never really swerved from her allegiance to her. Now have I provided to you that I never felt any personal repulsion for you, in spite of that one cruel bit of evidence against me?"

He concluded with an earnestness that thrilled Beth with secret rapture. He had turned away from him, and was again looking out of the window; or his assertion that he had loved that little girl had evidently made her shy and afraid to meet his glance.

lest he should suspect the truth.

"Do you believe me, Lady Beth?" he questioned appealingly, as she did not respond to his previous question? "Will you prove it?" she asked, her eyes still fastened upon the glittering andscape outside.

"I should be more than glad to do so. How can I?" he eagerly inquired.

"Will you give me that picture? It is hideous."

His face fell. "No," he said gravely, after a moment's thought. "As I told you, I shall keep it always. I am sorry, though, if that is the only convincing proof I can give you of my loyalty."

"Beth's heart bounded within her. She could almost have shouted with joy at his refusal. The very fact that he would not part with the hideous picture at any cost was better proof to her that he had never experienced personal repulsion for her than any he could have offered or she demanded. She suddenly turned a bright face to him, which rather belied her deprecatory tone as she said:

"How childish you must think me, and I have broken our compact to suit the past behind us. I have no reason to doubt your word, Philip, and I promise I will be guilty of no more unpleasant reminders in the future. Now tell me—"

"Yes, there is one thing more I want to tell you just here," Philip hastily interposed as he realized she was about to switch him off upon some subject that was wholly foreign to what they had been talking of. "It may seem premature and even more presumptuous than what I have already said. I told you I loved that little girl as a boy loves a loyal friend, but during the week we have spent together I have learned to love you, Beth, as a man loves the woman whom he wishes to make his wife. Can you believe me, dear? It has come to me suddenly, this awakening, but it is none the less true, none the less absorbing. Will you let me try to win you, My Lady Beth?"

But Beth suddenly froze again at this amazing avowal, her proud and sensitive heart taking instant alarm as the thought suggested itself that, possibly, Aunt Eliza's fortune might hold some temptation for him, after all, and she never, never would marry him for that money.

"No—no—we have settled all that, Philip. It is not to be thought of," she faltered tremulously.

He scanned the flushed, downcast face earnestly. Could she have seen his eyes he must have won. "Beth—I love you," he pleaded. "Have you nothing to give me in return?"

"Please—please drop it," she said, with a queer catch in her breath. "It is impossible!"

"Impossible!" he repeated, with a sudden tightening of his lips. "I will not believe that—yet." But Beth had taken refuge once more at the window and was mute, and the disappointed suitor was also obliged to hold his peace.

Presently he excused himself and went into the smoker, and Beth, glad to be left alone, laid her head back upon her pillow, closed her eyes, and reveled in those blessed words: "I love you now as a man loves the woman whom he wishes to make his wife."

Breaking Down the Barriers.

By RUTH CAMERON.

her own living in almost every field of activity.

But although the barriers are down for her, they are still up for her married sister. The married woman who is not satisfied with housework as a life-long profession, is mathematically to-day with all the vigor with which the unmarried woman who wished to enter a profession twenty-five years ago and the girl who wanted to go to college twenty-five years before that, were attacked.

A friend of mine, a married woman of about forty-five, who has always detested housework, has recently taken a position as a proofreader and hired a woman to do the housework. She has two children, a girl at college and a boy who works. It is not necessary for the welfare of either that she should be at home all the time. The woman whom she has hired to do her housework is a better housekeeper than she was herself, and costs distinctly less than her employer can earn at proofreading. And yet this woman has aroused a storm of adverse criticism by her act. I was talking with one of her critics about parallel since the French revolution. Wherever they appear, the missionaries of the I. W. W. incite violence to the point of civil revolution. They capitalize the unrest of a growing nation and poison ignorance with venom.

Their wild promises of a millennium which will abolish employers, raise the incompetent and shiftless to the level of the efficient and thereby reward the underling in equal measure to the earnest and self-respecting would be ludicrous and ridiculous, were it not that their chief activities are devoted to the prostitution of the most unintelligent, superstitious and illiterate.

There are no constructive ideas nor elevating ideals in the I. W. W. propaganda. Labor has its just causes and grievances, but he who seeks to cancel representative government and declares for the overthrow of legislative machinery, threatens to annihilate the very influences through which labor's wrongs can be most rapidly righted.

So long as human nature manifests itself, there will be weak men and strong men, leaders and followers. The greedy and the callous will always seek to benefit to the full extent of their advantages; but the progress of humanitarianism is swift; the spirit of brotherhood between master and man grows stronger every year; cruelty is rapidly disappearing from industry; wages have never been so high; hours of employment never so short; the paternalism of the employer never so broad.—Herbert Kaufman, in Woman's World for July.

The summer evening wraps are very original in effect, and are made of silk chiffon and transparent crepe. Brilliant eastern colors, embroidered with huge golden dragons or large flower designs, are lined with chiffon. The well-dressed woman turns to the black-and-white hat as the season advances, because such hats can be worn with all costumes. Just now in the shops are some very smart black hats with jaunty white wings, birds and feathers.

The contrasting coat and skirt are enjoying popularity. A pretty costume has a jacket of natter blue moire with a skirt of white serge. The jacket is effectively trimmed with buttons, and has a sailor collar of black and white chiffon.

Dame fashion is working her rage for draperies upon the evening gowns. The materials are actually twisted and tortured into place. Starting in the vicinity of the shoulder, they wriggle and wriggle all the way down the figure.

Labor and capital alike find a common enemy in the "I. W. W." The property-holder and the worker are equally menaced by the spread of its doctrines.

The Industrial Workers of the World declare for the abolition of control over individual liberty deny the right of state or nation to impose its will upon the destruction of property and urge the confiscation of all sources of production.

Its leaders are demagogues without with devastating organisms fresh from the veins of a deathly sick man.

If you must be shaved in a shop, refuse the service of the stypitic stick and wait until you get home to brush your hair. Individual combs and brushes are as logical and imperative as private tooth brushes. Every member of the family should have his own brush and comb, children, especially should not use any article which has touched the head of another.

We will gladly supply further details upon this subject to any reader desiring information. We suggest a crusade in every town against "Community" brushes and combs in offices, lavatories and public schools.

Ask your local newspapers to reprint this article. Editors are always glad to encourage sanitary measures.—Herbert Kaufman, in Woman's World for July.

A Real American Aristocrat.

"Mr. Walter H. Page, the new American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, comes to us as a comparative stranger. His whole working life has been spent in his own country," writes Sydney Brooks, in the Daily Chronicle; "his visits to England have been rare and brief; and while a man of real distinction and achievement, known and esteemed all over America, the lines on which his career has run have not been such as to win for him, outside the circle of his profession, an international reputation. But those who, like myself, have enjoyed his friendship for many years are very confident that he will quickly make himself persona gratissima in the social and literary life of London.

"In appointing Mr. Page, President Wilson has shown his preference for the old scholar-diplomat type of representative; and in doing so he has paid a striking compliment to our national good sense. He has assumed that what we most value in an American Ambassador is not his wealth but his personality and achievements, and the extent to which he brings with him the true favour of American life; and that so far from regarding a huge income as essential to the occupant of the London Embassy, we are more disposed to find something incongruous in the spectacle of the representative of the United States, a Republic that is still officially supposed to be dedicated to 'simplicity,' inhabiting a palace and maintaining a more than dual state.

"Mr. Page is precisely the man to restore a juster and healthier sense of values all round. He is an excellent representative of the real American aristocracy of public service and character. A man of a catholic, discriminating, and thoroughly modern mind, a keen judge of literature, a writer of vivid and supple power, and a publicist who has devoted a lifetime of sincere and practical idealism to great causes, Mr. Page is one of the foremost of the remarkable body of men who within the past 20 years have made of journalism a potent agency for righteousness and reform.

"A thorough American in his fresh and buoyant outlook on life—he is younger at 58 than most men at 45—in his zealous and humorous optimism, and his quick interest in everything that is worth being interested in, Mr. Page, coming to us on his own merits as a citizen and servant of the Republic, will soon find that Englishmen desire no other grounds than these for welcoming him to the best of whatever they have."

The silk ratine is a lovely material and is effective for both morning and afternoon wear. A gown of this in gray shade of yellow or chamamois is very lovely with a similar color of ratine lace.

Ratty and Smelly

The silly season has set in at the Herald Office, and set in hard. It is as dirty as usual. Mr. McGrath apportions his attention to rattling and the sealers ho dubs "smelly."

Indifferent to its truth and reckless as to the defamation, Mr. McGrath reiterates as a "charge" not as a "fact" that Dr. Lloyd disinfects his office every time a sealer from the icefields visits it. We have denied the charge, and there is absolutely not a tittle of truth about it, but still the Editor continues to circulate the defamation as a "charge," apparently believing himself immune from wrong-doing because he circulates it "as a charge" and not as a "truth." He will wake up some fine morning and find his error a costly one. As to the charge, we have denied it and deny it again. During the nine and a half years we have never directed or asked that the office we occupy be disinfects. Nor has it ever been disinfects at our request, either in connection with the visit of sealers or of anybody else, or of anything else.

Because we did not nail the lie immediately it was uttered, Mr. P. T. McGrath and his correspondent express scepticism as to our denial. They are but aggravating the original offence, and showing their malicious intent by their repetition of it and their comments on it. There is another aspect of the defamation which does not touch us directly, but is an imputation of personal offensiveness on the part of those the Herald dubs the "smelly" sealers. The charge against these sealers is that they were in such a condition when they visited the Telegram Office that disinfecting had to be used by the Editor to purify his office. No sealer ever visited Dr.

The thermometer registered 80 degrees in the shade, but he finished in good condition. On Sunday night he slept in a barn with his fellow cadets; turned out at 5 a.m., and washed at the village pump. It was already hot when the march started. Soon after the sun was boiling. After ten miles some of the cadets gave up, and were put in ambulances. During the last five miles when all were getting fagged, some body suggested the Prince should fall out, but he refused. The march was finished at mid-day. The Prince slept for two hours after which he swam across the pond.

LONDON, June 17. The debate to-morrow on the scandals connected with the ministerial transactions in Marconi shares, will likely end in a species of love feasts, instead of heated scenes, as at first threatened. Asquith announced this afternoon that the Government "was not prepared to place on the table any motion connected with the affair. Indications are that after the introduction of the Opposition's motion, expressing regret of the ministerial deals in the Marconi shares, and the lack of frankness on the part of the Cabinet towards the House, Lloyd George and Isaacs will explain the matter, perhaps acknowledging they had been indiscreet. If this course be taken, the Commons, with customary generosity, will probably accept the ministerial explanation and the debate collapse.

THREE DEAD, FOUR MISSING AND PROBABLY DEAD. — DOGGED LUCK WINS THE DAY.

London, June 14.—In a Daily Mail special despatch from Tromson, a harrowing story is told by the survivors of the luckless Schroeder-Stranz Arctic expedition, three members of which are dead, and four missing. They say that from the outset friction was rife in the expedition, and still continues between the survivors.

Their ship, the Herzog Ernest, which was well provided with food, was frozen in at Treurburg Bay, Spitzbergen, in August, 1912. They held a council and unanimously decided to leave her, and on September 23 all quitted her. But after a short march the Norwegian members of the expedition returned. The German members of the expedition pushed on for Polehem on Mossel Bay, but found the travelling difficult because of the snow and fog.

The Germans broke up into two detachments, Dr. Detters and Dr. Mosers determined to make for Advent Bay, while the others decided to return to the ship. Nothing more was heard of the two doctors. Both of them must be dead. Capt. Ritscher, leading the other party, with Dr. Ruediger, Parren, Rave, Eberhardt, Stenerson and Ravold and one dog, finally decided to make for Advent Bay. They marched five days and reached a hut, where they shot four reindeer. They rested for three days. Here, Dr. Ruediger, who was suffering from frostbite, had to be left with Rave, while the others pushed ahead to obtain medical aid. Rave gave the only sleeping bag remaining to Dr. Ruediger and made another of salted reindeer skins. For seven weeks Ruediger and Rave waited with neither aid nor news. Their food dwindled until they had only one meal a day of wildweed, oats and salt meat. Their last shirt was used in making bandages. At last they abandoned all hope of relief and were forced to make a last effort to reach the ship. Dr. Ruediger's foot was so frostbitten that it was crumbling away bit by bit. Although his own fingers were frostbitten and caused him great agony, Rave made a wonderful mechanical boot for him with fragments of leather and cloth from his pocket and the wood of a ski.

Grimly Determined.

With this Dr. Ruediger could just totter along. For food Rave made a cake of scrapings from barrels of spoiled flour and dried meat. Their only protection from the cold was the sleeping bag. They travelled four hours at a time, and then rested. Gradually as their food was consumed, and they were in darkness starving and crippled, but their only chance was to march on and reach Polehem or die. By their grim determination they gained that place on November 27. There they found some mouldy biscuits. Of these Rave made soup, and after they had rested for three days and had recovered some degree of strength, they decided to accomplish the last stretch and get to the ship in a final dash. Rave carried Ruediger along, and they succeeded in gaining the vessel on December 12. Rave behaved splendidly. He amputated the forepart of Dr. Ruediger's left foot and the first joint of his fourth fingers.

Meantime, Captain Ritscher and his party marched on for eight days, arriving at an old trapper's hut. They stayed there five days, making sledges and then struck inland, but were driven back by furious blizzards and compelled to wait until they had the light of the moon. Such terrible weather prevailed they were still further delayed another month. They started once more and gained the head of Westford. Here Eberhardt was so exhausted that he declared he would rather return to the ship than continue the journey. After a consultation Stenerson and Roalde decided to return with Eberhardt. Capt. Ritscher and dog struggled on in the blind weather, living in the open with no shelter, and their rations only a handful of barley a day for a week. After that they had no food. They gained Thordest none the less and tried to make for the observatory, but could not reach it. Suffering from weakness, exhausted, and starving, Captain Ritscher and the dog leaped upon a sheet of young ice floating in the water. Captain Ritscher fell through it twice and his right hand and both feet were frozen, yet this condition, with desperate determination, he crossed the new ice and reached the Arctic company's houses at Advent Bay. He was delirious and fainted.

Horrible Condition.

The company's officials say they saw two objects, which they took for polar bears approaching. It proved to be Capt. Ritscher and the dog. They were white with frost and snow. Capt. Ritscher accomplished the last stages of the journey on his hands and knees. The company's doctor examined Capt. Ritscher, and amputated the toes of his right foot, the big toe of his left foot and the little finger of his right hand. The last act of this Arctic tragedy is shrouded in mystery. On December 19, Stenerson, Rovald and Eberhardt had started back for the ship, leaving Ruediger and Rave. The marching was difficult and the weather fearful. Eberhardt complained of pains in his head, yet the three crossed Wide Bay to Salmon Lake in the cold weather, and struck inland. On the march Eberhardt disappeared. According to Rovald, Eberhardt said in English: "I cannot move." Stenerson replied, in English, "Eberhardt, you know you must do all you can to reach the hut on Mossel Bay. It is not far now. We have no sleeping bag, and cannot stop here." Eberhardt answered, "I will do my best." They all kept together for an hour, and then Stenerson and Rovald reached the top of a hill. When they looked back Eberhardt was gone. Baked apples with figs or dates is an excellent dish. Cover the apples, fill the holes with chopped figs or dates packed tightly, sprinkle with powdered sugar and baste often with butter and lemon juice and hot water.

Another Oldest Woman

Supposed Prehistoric Remains.
The skull and other remains of a woman believed to be of great antiquity, have been unearthed by some workmen excavating for clay in the Fletton yards of the London Brick Company at Peterborough. The bones were found in the superficial gravel and are in a good state of preservation. They were huddled together in the posture peculiar to burials of the Neolithic period, (Stone Age) and local paleontologists believe that they may equal in age the skull of the primitive woman which was discovered last autumn in a pit at Pitt-down Common, Sussex, and which evoked so much interest in the scientific world.

The skull is small, the occipital angle (back part of the head) is acute and the thigh bones are large. The top of the skull is fractured. The place of the discovery is near the site of the prehistoric river which once flowed over England from the Greenland glaciers, and the remains may have been brought down by the ice. There is not a trace of the smaller bones, though most of the teeth are still in the skull. The discovery was reported formally to the police, but the local superintendent facetiously stated that he had no desire to inquire into the death of Adam's aunt. The skull is in the possession of the manager of the company.—Daily Mail.

Civic Management.

Letter From Mr. Gosling.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—When the city of St. John's is under discussion it appears to me that we are very apt to forget that, although it is one of the oldest settlements in the Western Hemisphere, it has only been a city for 25 years. It is not yet 100 years since it became lawful to build a habitation here. No building or erection of any sort was allowed to be fixed to the soil. As an instance of the attitude of the Admiral Governors towards would-be settlers, a petition is on file in which a man asked for permission to build a pig sty, undertaking to place it on rollers so that it could not be called a fixture. After Responsible Government was granted, and until 1888, St. John's was under the governance of the Board of Works, being in the same category as other settlements in the country. The needs of St. John's were consequently modified by reason of jealousy and competition for favours from the outsharers. While St. John's probably got the lion's share of the "givings out," undoubtedly the city did not get all that was required. It cannot be denied also that it was a habit of the wealthier classes not to look upon St. John's as a permanent habitation; and I remember that there was a great deal of opposition to the granting of a charter to St. John's in 1888. Property owners were afraid that they were going to be unduly taxed. To make the city a desirable place to live in, and thus to cause a demand for real estate, and appreciation of property values, did not seem to occur to them as a natural consequence of responsible government for the city. It is a remarkable thing also that until last year, when the Bowring donated $50,000 to the city, no bequest had ever been made by a citizen for the improvement or adornment of the city, or for the welfare of its inhabitants. Seeing that St. John's was built, not only without plan or forethought, but in the face of opposition, and seeing the attitude of its principal citizens, one cannot be surprised to find it a very backward city. Several changes have been made in the constitution of the Municipal Council, which is "unnecessary" to some, nor is there time to do more than touch upon some of the essential features, as they appear to me, of the Municipal Act. The city is governed by a Mayor and six Councillors, elected "at large" by the ratepayers. Their powers are greatly circumscribed by the fact that they are unable to levy taxes, or to borrow money, without the consent of the Legislature of the colony, nor are they allowed to incur any indebtedness over and above the amount of the revenue estimated at the beginning of each year. It will thus be seen at the outset, that no matter how well intentioned and progressive the Municipal Council may be, they are unable to move hand or foot, beyond the limits which are prescribed for them. The remuneration of the Municipal Council is limited to $1,500 per annum, of which the Mayor gets $600 and the balance is divided between the six Councillors. We are therefore paying the men to whom we entrust the management of the city, the beggarly sum of $150 per annum! As might be expected we are getting exactly what we pay for. It has been said that Municipal Government is far more administrative than legislative, and unfortunately we have no leisured class here upon whom we can call to perform the duty of governing the city as a labor of love; also it may be said that every man in the city who is worth employing has plenty to do, and no matter how well disposed has no time for altruistic work. Efficiency, which plans and performs, continuously and tirelessly, is worthy of its kind. Let us suppose for an instant that St. John's was a large public joint stock company in which we were all shareholders, would we offer $150 a year to the men we elected to manage it, and expect it to be properly conducted? I do not mean to cast any reflection upon the present or former Municipal Councils, as I am of opinion that if the Councillors were paid such an amount as would enable them to devote themselves to the work of the city, they would perform their duties faithfully. We are also to be congratulated on one point in connection with our city government; we have not had to contend, as have had so many cities in the U. S. and Canada, with corruption and dishonesty. To put it tersely, therefore, the Municipal Council has no power of itself to make improvements, no money to pay for them, cannot levy taxes, and the Councillors are paid fifty cents a day. How can we expect a clean, healthy, well-governed city?

I have stated the Councillors' stipend in terms of daily pay, because it seems to me that it is daily work that we want. We want men who will be on the job all the time, not to meet for a few hours a week, to discuss trivial matters of detail, and twist one another with endeavoring to catch votes. It must be admitted nevertheless that we have many good men on the Municipal Council and that the town is vastly improved from what it was 30 years ago. But still, the city is dirty, the streets are bad, vibrating between mud and dust, there are numbers of occupied houses in St. John's which are unfit for human habitation, (the Health Officer, I understand condemned 50 last year, and still occupied), others, in which water and sewerage could be put are still without the necessities, many of the streets have neither water mains nor sewerage pipes, the disposal of the garbage to the destruction of our pretty country lanes is disgraceful, an unauthorized, unregulated fishing village has been permitted to grow up in the city limits, and as a result of it all—our heavy death rate and shameful infant mortality. This forms a serious indictment, but will be considered moderate, I think. Besides, it will be noted that I have only mentioned the evils crying for reform, and have said nothing of what might be done on the constructive side to make our city beautiful and pleasant to live in. How far the Municipal Council, under the present system, is able to cope with the situation, I am not prepared to say. No doubt, by proper supervision and organization, some saving could be made in the expenditure, but I am of opinion that the sum would be comparatively unimportant.

It is perfectly clear to me that if we want a clean, healthy, well appointed city, we must be prepared to pay for it. The property value of St. John's is not far short of $30,000,000, the assessed value being, I am told, about $25,000,000. While the total Municipal revenue is about $200,000 per annum, the taxes paid by the people, in the shape of water and sewerage rates and coal duties, amount to only $120,000 per annum, or say 40 cents per $100. Elsewhere the city taxes average from one to two per cent. The comparison is, however, not exact, because we are under no expense for either police or schools, which are generally included in municipal expenditure elsewhere, but allowing for these differences, our taxation is very light compared to other cities.

If it is granted that we are prepared to pay for the necessary civic improvements, we must next arrange for efficient administrators. For reasons given above, I think it utterly hopeless to expect efficiency under our present system, and in another letter I propose to describe a system of municipal government which has been adopted by hundreds of cities in the U. S. and Canada with very satisfactory results, and to discuss its applicability to our own needs. Yours truly,
W. G. GOSLING.

CURES INDIGESTION & DYSPEPSIA IN ALL ITS FORMS.

It is quite a daily occurrence to hear persons say: "Oh, what a feeling of distress I have after meals, fullness of the stomach, heaviness and headache, I feel too tired to do anything, I have no heart to exert myself, and at times I care for nothing. I often have a pain in the pit of my stomach, no appetite, my heart beats rapidly on the slightest exertion. I feel just as tired when rising in the morning as when retiring to bed. My sleep is often disturbed and I often awake with a sense of suffocation and a difficulty of again going to sleep. I have to be careful of what I eat, and my life seems a veritable burden. Now, it seems a shame and a pity for persons to be suffering like that when it is in their power to get cured by taking a bottle of Prescription "A". More Coffins Than Cradles.

"More coffins were being needed than cradles, more hearses than baby-carriages in France," said Father Bernard Vaughan, speaking on his investigations into the birth-rate in France, America, and England at Portsmouth recently. In seventeen departments in France, he said, the death roll was in excess of the birth-rate. For every Frenchman born there were three Germans. The fascinating nation was driving to the cemetery with Germany not as chief mourner. In the United States much the same shrinkage would be recorded but for the incoming foreigner. In England the outlook was dismal enough—a fall in a generation from 35 per 1,000 to 21 and 22 per 1,000. Doctors were being called in for one birth only in a family. Father Vaughan spoke of the noble example set by the people by the King and Queen in all things, especially in matters domestic and social.

Thermometer

By H. L. RANN.

A thermometer is an ingenious device with a long, thin face which lets people know when it is time to take 'em off. It is used to record the feelings of the weather and also to record how many times a weak man has jumped from his winter suit to last summer's linen pants.

The weather was never used as a subject of conversation before the thermometer was brought out and sold to people who were not satisfied that it was hot enough to buy ice. The only way people could tell warm weather from cold was when some neighbor contracted a limp sunstroke while hiving potatoes with his earlars on. Before the thermometer was discovered men could wear the same suit winter and summer and their wives never thought of asking for a $32 lawn dress when the rent was due, but nowadays the thermometer can't get above 100 in the shade without plunging husbands into debt at the lingerie department. On this account, a great many foresighted husbands refuse to have a thermometer around the house.

The thermometer is always hung out doors, where it can catch a lot of heat that is no good to anybody else and cause everybody who looks at it to perspire with great vivacity. A man will walk up to a thermometer in a white flannel suit and a straw hat and be as dry as the 6th chapter of I. Chronicles, and after looking steadily in the face of a hill-climbing thermometer for five minutes will start for a shower bath on the dead run. Some men never separate themselves from a corduroy vest and stiff-bosomed shirt until the thermometer goes as high as it can without running over and spilling its contents on the front porch.

Thermometers are filled at the factory with an uneasy compound known as mercury, which never stays in one spot long enough for a man to change his clothes and feel safe. In some localities the mercury will drive a man down town in a fur coat and by noon have him gasping in front of an electric fan in a dismantled condition.

The barometer is a blood relative of the thermometer which is used for the purpose of fighting the path to the cyclone cellar. By watching the barometer closely, a great many people have emerged from the cellar without breaking anything but some of the canned fruit.

The Servant Problem.

In view of the ever-increasing difficulty of obtaining and retaining satisfactory domestic servants it is highly important to adopt every means which will reduce the work of the house. It has been proved by the experience of many that the use of gas for cooking, heating and hot water supply, makes it possible to do with fewer servants, easier to keep, those you have, and a less serious matter to have none.—June 10, 1911

Benefits of British Rule in Egypt.

Lord Kitchener is the official representative of British rule and influence in the land of Egypt, and his annual report, "The economic progress of the country has just been published.

Dependence Upon Cotton.

"The prosperity of Egypt," says the Times, in summarizing this report, "depends upon cotton and the price of cotton. The production of Egyptian cotton had been doubled by 1894, but the country was no better off, because prices had fallen greatly. At the end of the last century prices bounded upward, the value of cotton exports doubled, and money poured into Egypt. It was largely wasted in the period of inflation which ended in the 'boom' of 1907, with its subsequent disasters. Only a continuance of abundant crops and good prices has enabled Egypt to emerge successfully from that time of trial. There are other precarious aspects of this dependence on cotton. Egypt is fighting the common boll-worm, which has been ravaging the crops, and she has now become aware of the presence of a pink boll-worm which threatens to be a menace. The cultivators are greater enemies to their crops than are these insects. Their wilful adulteration of their cotton has been damaging the high reputation of Egyptian cotton. Legislation is now checking these suicidal practices. "Again, the variation in the flow of the Nile is an important factor. For several years the Nile has been comparatively low, but in accordance with precedent a series of exceptionally high Niles may now be expected, which means a danger of floods in Lower Egypt and possible widespread disaster. The danger was lessened when the raising of the Assuan dam was completed last December, but it is proposed to build a new dam on the White Nile forty miles above Khartoum, by which the supply can be still further regulated.

Protecting the Peasant.

"The fellah has to be still further protected against himself. Egypt is a multitude of small holdings, and the improvident peasantry were rapidly being expropriated from their land by swarms of rapacious money-lenders. The Agricultural Bank was not quite realizing expectations, and the facilities it offered were not a sufficient check. Lord Kitchener turned to his Indian experience for a remedy. He had a share in passing the Punjab Land Alienation Act, and knew how invaluable that measure had proved. He has now been instrumental in passing in Egypt the Five Feddan Law, which exempts the holdings of small farmers from seizure for debt. His Cantonal Justice Law is a reform which will give an effect to local usage and provide the peasantry with swift access to justice from their own notables, without recourse to the elaborate procedure of larger courts. He is establishing rural savings banks upon methods which are encouraging thrift because they make it easy to save.

Developing Natural Resources.

"He has become a roadmaker, and Egypt will soon become covered with a network of good roads and no longer be chiefly dependent upon her railways and her waterways for means of communication. Above all, he has perceived that Egypt's dependence upon cotton must be lessened; and to that end he is stimulating the development of the other resources of the country. Lord Kitchener's report on the progress of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan is equally encouraging. The Sudan is now very nearly self-supporting; in four years its external trade has increased from under two to over three millions sterling, and the great Gezira triangle between the White and Blue Niles should soon be producing large quantities of excellent cotton."

A Bloodless Victory.

Johnnie Northwood, of whom Mr. J. D. Ross writes in "Sixty Years Life and Adventures in the Far East," in the course of his long life had a great many thrilling adventures. None, however, had a happier conclusion than the following:— His trading ship, the "Alastor," had been driven into uncharted waters off the Dewakan Island in the Malay Archipelago. It seemed impossible to get the ship out, for there were dangerous rocks and reefs on every side. To make matters worse, a fleet of proas approached, loaded to the gunwales with villainous looking Dewagans, who are noted for their piratical tastes. After some preliminary parley, accompanied by earnest protestations of peace on the part of the natives, they ran their proas along side the motionless steamer, and with surprising rapidity scrambled to the deck.

They were all armed. Some of them had old-fashioned pistols in their hands, weapons that carried a ball an inch in diameter, which at close range will knock a very large hole in a man's body.

Johnnie Northwood felt that he ought to take the offensive, but he did not find it easy to start the shooting. He had a heavy Colt revolver cocked in his hand. There a few feet in front of him was a group of excited savages discussing something very eagerly in their own dialect—no doubt how they should start the fighting. What was easier than to raise his pistol and open fire on the men before him! Six shots would lay out six of them, and send the rest flying to their boats. But he could not do it; this was too much like murder and too little like fighting. The natives must begin the attack if there was to be one. Coming across McCracken, the engineer, and his firemen, he ordered him aft to what was to be the citadel.

"Not me, sir!" said McCracken. "I shall be busy on the main deck! No, sir! I'm not gain' to direct a stream of bilin' water on them savages. But I'm goin' to wash the deck w' hot water, and if them pirates happen to get what I might call a fitbath, it'll no kill the scoundrels!"

"All right, McCracken, I understand. But be quick, or you have those fellows on top of you!" So saying, Johnnie rushed to the poop, and chatching up his rifle, posted himself so as to beat off an attack on McCracken.

Apparently the natives intended to rush the forecabin first. Their chattering and shouting had at last ceased, and something decisive seemed about to happen, when suddenly a wave of boiling water went hissing along the port side of the main deck and washed in amongst the principal body of islanders. Horny as their naked feet were, the natives danced about in agony and threw themselves overboard in headlong panic.

"Noo, Sandy," shouted McCracken, "come along and we'll wash 'em off the starboard deck!" The mere sight of the big Scotsman and his hose was quite enough for the marauders who had witnessed the discomfiture of their comrades and they promptly went overboard, yelling horribly as they dropped into their boats or into the sea. The Alastor was clear of the invaders.

Relieved of other trouble, the captain at last succeeded in feeling his way out to the open sea. Soon the Dewakan Island, with its treacherous reefs and piratical natives, was far astern.

possibility of unskilled female labor to make a decent living.

Among the exhibits are toys, such as the familiar stuffed lambs which bleat when pressed down on the bellows to which their feet are glued. For fixing the wool on to the toy, painting it, fixing a ribbon around the neck, and attaching it to the stand the manufacturers pay 8 cents a dozen. It is impossible, it is said, for a clever worker to finish more than four dozen in a working day of ten hours.

There are also lampshades, which are given out in pieces and finished for 4 cents a hundred, the maximum going being 20 cents for a ten-hour day.

Brushes are shown which are made up at the rate of 10 cents a thousand holes, or 22 cents a day.

The dressmaking department is particularly instructive. For a bodice which takes a whole day to make, 12 cents is paid. A man's waistcoat, sold to the public for 55 cents, was made up for 20 centimes, or 4 cents, of which 4 centimes is deducted for the cost of thread. Ten of these are the maximum which can be finished in a long day's work.

The flags with which the Parisians cover their houses on days of public rejoicing carry off the record in this competition of industrial slavery. Those who sew and mount them are rewarded at the rate of 87 cents for sixty dozen, representing ten days' work, or about 8 1-2 cents a day.

In the centre of the exhibition hall is spread out a sweated woman's dinner, consisting of a morsel of stale bread, 2 cents worth of cheese, a hard-boiled egg, and a jug of water.

The organizers hope by arousing public indignation to force the authorities to bring a complete change in conditions for this sort of work, and abolish the present exploiting by middlemen and consequent starvation wages.

Luxuries In Prison.

How Convicts Get Odds and Ends Through Wardens.

The conviction of a warden at Portland, England, for supplying prisoners with tobacco soaked in rum, contrary to the Prison Discipline Acts, has drawn attention to the possibilities which occur of trafficking with wardens. It is generally acknowledged that our penal laws are severe. A man, once sentenced, has to undergo his punishment, which includes the deprivation of luxuries to which he has long been accustomed. The "good square meal" is, of course, out of the question. But the bitterest of all is the absence of tobacco and alcohol. The sudden cutting off of these things is often more punishment than the confinement and silence of the prison. Letters and news of the outside world are also ardently desired.

All of them are still obtainable in some convict prisons. Wardens are paid at a low rate, and are subjected to discipline almost as severe as that of the prisoners themselves. Wealthy relatives of convicts occasionally find wardens willing to convey messages and smuggle luxuries to prisoners. They are paid, of course, and generally in gold. One man who has served three terms in penal servitude made it his boast that he had never gone a day without a "chew," and he added, "the cost to my friend would have provided a whole colony with tobacco for a generation."

Portland, despite the vigilance of guards, offers the greatest facilities for smuggling unlawful goods into the prison. It stands on a bleak headland, and the convicts work during the daylight in the open quarries. Civil guards, armed with rifles, stand at definite intervals. But many an ounce of twist tobacco is concealed beneath the stones, and by a sort of Morse code the convicts for whom the luxuries are intended learn where to find them. All manner of things have been smuggled into jails. Not long ago a prisoner in a "local" jail showed evident signs of intoxication, and inquiry showed that a warden had given him capsules containing spirits, but the case did not come before the courts.—STANDARD.

Faith Can Always Find The Way.

Seeing isn't believing; it's the other way round—believing is seeing. The man who relies upon his eyes will pass through life blind to the mightiest forces of the universe; Physical sight is limited, checked by the farthest horizon, restrained by the nearest cloud, blocked by the closest sky line.

If you demand evidence, you can only comprehend the evident, the common-place, the matter-of-fact material forms which everybody knows, and men whose knowledge in confined conditions and subjects with which all of us have always been familiar, will never achieve greatly for themselves or their time.

It is only with the telescope of faith that we can penetrate the clouded dawn and dissipate the mists that mask the promise of hereafter.

When you deny the existence of anything that you can't measure with your five senses, you confess incredulity of history.

Only the winged mind lifted humanity from the estate of beasts to civilization. The great adventures of the past, from the voyage of the Ark down to the wiring of the world were whispered by hope, conceived by imagination and accomplished by faith.

A kodak would be wasted on a man who hadn't sense enough to press the button. He must let in the light before he can get his picture. You will never be able to picture the possibilities of tomorrow with shuttered eyes.

Your brain can't do its best—you will never come into your own—you will never attain to the extent of your undeveloped abilities until you press the button and let in the light of faith.

Faith chared the unsailed vasts of the Atlantic for the puny carvels of Spain; Faith pointed out the Titan who dwelt in a Scotch peasant's tea kettle; Faith saw the lamps glow in the spume of Niagara; Faith laid a trail of steel across the plains over the mountain ridges to the shores of the purple Pacific; Faith spoke in the laboratories of Bell before a humor-vocal could travel a thousand miles; Faith is the God-spark in man the light eternal, the outrider of Progress, the seed of deed.

The darkened brain attempts in vain. There comes an hour in every life when cold reason acknowledges defeat when calculation tables are futile; when test tubes, microscope, logic, philosophy and all the rules of all the schools are useless; when fingers fumble and giants stumble when roads are without goal; when all the future is a pathless, jumbled jungle; when courage hungers for nourishment when will and skill are wearied and numb—then Faith and Failure stand waiting at the door to create or destroy. ## Now Feet Strong and Vigorous and Fit for Any Amount of Work as the Result of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. J. Hurlbert.

It is so easy to overlook the warning given by headaches, indigestion, falling memory, lack of power to concentrate the mind, irritability and worry over little things, that many a man does not realize his danger until on the verge of breakdown. Like the writer of the letter quoted below, you can call a halt to the wasting process and restore vim and energy to the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This great food cure has a wonderful record of cures.

Mr. J. Hurlbert, 28 James street, Brantford, Ont., writes—"I was very much run down in health and as a consequence my nervous system was very much exhausted. Close confinement at my work, I think, brought on the trouble. I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by the time I had used up one box I felt a great improvement. The continued use of this preparation has thoroughly restored my system so that I feel strong and vigorous and fit for any amount of work. I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and am content with splendid satisfaction, and recommend them at every opportunity." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, all dealers or Edmondson Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

CARVELL BROS., C. M. RITCHIE.
