CHAPTER XI
A CHARITABLE DEED.

CLIFFORD REVEL took out his watch as he and Lord Edgar went down Mrs. Drayton's staircase. "Shall we go to the club?" he said. Lord Edgar hesitated. He was not much in the mood for the smoking-room of the club. He was full of the romance of the day, of the novel experience of the evening. He wanted to be quiet, and felt a conviction that the talk and chatter of a score or so of men, in clouds of tobacco smoke, would not chime in with his feelings. Clifford Revel watched him closely. "No? Suppose you come home with me, and we have a cup of coffee and a cigar?"

"That would suit me better," said Lord Edgar. They got into a hansom and were driven to the Temple, in which Clifford Revel had chambers. They were not so luxuriously furnished as Lord Edgar's, but they were extremely comfortable, and, like everything else about their owner, in most accurate taste. There was no valet to wait upon them, but a maid-servant attached to the house brought them coffee, and Clifford drew a chair to the window for his cousin and put the box of cigars at his elbow. While he did this he hummed an air from the burlesque of the day, and seemed to be in his usual free and careless mood, but in reality his acute brain was hard at work.

The enigma that had been revolving in his mind since Lord Edgar's arrival—"What had happened to him in Panaworth?"—was still unanswered, ed, and Clifford Revel resolved that he would solve it before they parted. "Jolly rooms, these of yours," said Lord Edgar, looking through the window on the pretty Temple gardens, which looked quite Arcadian in the faint moonlight.

"Yes," assented Clifford Revel, leaning back in his chair and blowing a cloud of fragrant smoke upward. "Like London better now than you did a few hours ago?" he added, with a smile.

Lord Edgar nodded, and laughed. "Yes, thanks to you. I've spent a wonderfully pleasant evening. How is it you never mentioned them—the Draytons, I mean—Clifford?"

"Haven't I? I think I must have done so, and you have forgotten it." Lord Edgar shook his head. "I don't think so. What a beautiful creature Miss Drayton is!" Clifford Revel nodded.

"Yes, very fine. You will like her better when you know more of her. They will, no doubt, send you a card for their next little whatever it may be."

Lord Edgar smiled. "They have been kind enough to ask me to lunch there to-morrow," he said.

Clifford Revel's face remained impassive. "Are you going?" he asked.

"Yes, though"—he hesitated—"well, I had another engagement, which"—he colored, and the keen eyes watched him—"which I am sorry to break. But I would not refuse Miss Drayton. The fact is, she asked me to look at a horse she has bought, and I could not, of course, refuse."

The thin, clean-cut lips closed tightly, and a streak of light flashed for a moment in Clifford Revel's eyes. "So!" he thought, "that is her game!" But he said, in the pleasant est manner possible: "Of course not, my dear fellow! I envy you, as a score of other lost ones will do when they hear of it."

"Oh, nonsense!" said Lord Edgar, with the blunt shyness of a modest man, unconscious of his great attractions and alive only to his defects. "It is nothing out of the usual—I mean she could have asked any one."

"Just so," assented Clifford Revel; "but you were fortunate enough to be on the spot, and she knows you are an authority on horseflesh, which I am not. But take care, my dear boy; take care!" And he smiled, as he lazily knocked the ash from his cigar.

"What do you mean? Oh, I suppose—what nonsense! Chaff away!" "This isn't chaff; it is corn, or, rather, you may find it to be another kind of fruit—Dead-Sea fruit, that crumbles into ashes when you think you are going to enjoy it. But I don't know, I don't know. She may think it too good a thing to be lost, and, instead of charming you into loving her, and then looking extremely surprised and almost offended when you tell her so, she may graciously accept your love, and—the future Marquise of Farintosh."

Lord Edgar flushed. "You have drawn a downright first, a thoroughly heartless woman!" he said, almost indignantly.

Clifford Revel shrugged his shoulders. "And that is exactly what everyone thinks of her," he said; "but, no doubt, they do her an injustice. All the same, he who is forewarned is forearmed. Beware, my gentle cousin, of the dark eyes and witching smile which have driven better men than you—or I—to—make fools of themselves!"

While he had been speaking in the lowest, slowest, most careless tone, Lord Edgar had arisen from his chair, and was pacing the room.

He took two or three turns in silence, his brows knitted, his hands thrust into his pockets. Clifford Revel watched and waited; he knew that the solution of the enigma was approaching; that in a few minutes he would know all that he wanted.

"Clifford," exclaimed Lord Edgar, abruptly, "these words of yours, this chaff, have decided me to confide in you."

"Yes? You couldn't have a more worthy confidant, my dear Edgar. Proceed. Pour out your sorrows; I am all attention!" he drawled, languidly.

"Sorrows!" echoed Lord Edgar, with a smile, and a thrill of sudden joy. "It is no sorrow, Clifford. You warned me—most unjustly—against this Miss Drayton; it is quite unnecessary. I am not likely to fall in love with her, because—I have already done so with—some one else."

Clifford Revel did not turn his head. He had suspected it. He had looked forward to this hour for years, with a malignant fury and despair. While this cousin of his remained single, there was some slight chance of his—Clifford Revel—becoming my Lord of Farintosh; but married, with an

Admirable actor as he was, it cost him an effort to crush out any traces of bitterness in his voice, as he answered:

"My dear fellow, I congratulate you!"

"Do, do!" returned Lord Edgar, pausing behind him, and laying his hand on Clifford Revel's shoulder. "I knew you would be glad, Clifford! It is just like you—just like your generous nature! Yes, I am the happiest man in all London to-night, I don't care who the next may be!"

My dear fellow, we are such excellent friends, notwithstanding the traditional family feud, that, of course, I am glad you have found something to make you happy—I suppose I ought to say somebody. May one ask whom the lady of your choice may be?" he said. "Or is it a secret for the present?"

"No, it is no secret," answered Lord Edgar, pacing up and down because—because he had the gout when I went to say good-by, and he—he—well, he didn't like to be disturbed."

Clifford Revel grinned sardonically.

"I have heard that my lord the marquis is not the most amiable of men when the gout is about. So he has got to learn that the Lady Arabella, or the Lady Sophonisba, or—"

"Don't chaff, Clifford!" interrupted Lord Edgar, gently. "No, he does not know at present, and the lady is a lady by nature and breeding, not by title." He said this quite naturally, as if it didn't matter in the slightest.

"Indeed?" said Clifford Revel, in a tone of friendly interest.

"No. To tell you all, Clifford, she is the granddaughter of Professor Temple, the librarian—down at the Abbey, you know!"

Clifford Revel looked around at him in speechless surprise, genuine and too great to be masked.

"The granddaughter of—" he exclaimed.

Lord Edgar puffed over a newly lighted cigar.

"Yes; I won't bore you with telling you how I met her—I won't go into the usual raptures about her beauty and her goodness. But she is the most lovely girl—there, I shall have to put the brake on at once, or I shall run on for an hour! I found her, discovered her blooming like a flower in some deserted, hidden-away garden. As pure and innocent as a flower, indeed. Clifford, I don't know whether you know what I mean—I mean, whether you—I beg your pardon, old fellow, if I seem rude and intrusive—but whether you have ever been in love?"

A vision of Edith Drayton arose between the summer sky and the smoke that floated from Clifford Revel's cigar, and his dark face flushed.

"Let us take it that I can sympathise with you," he said, quietly.

"Then you can understand how I feel. It was only this morning that I told her how dearly, how passionately I loved her, and then there came that telegram about that beastly horse, and I was obliged to leave her. I was to have seen her again to-night, and—but there; I shall go off to-morrow—no, confound it,—I had forgotten my appointment with Miss Drayton!"

Clifford Revel scarcely heard him. He was in tortures. What plan could he hit upon that would separate these two, that would prevent this headstrong, impetuous "fool"—for so he thought him—from marrying? As the word crossed his brain, he started. Perhaps, after all, Lord Edgar was not such a fool as he seemed, and did not mean to marry her!

He laughed.

The Path to Health

For many thousands of women the Path to Health has certainly been through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When this great remedy was first introduced, and for many years after, skeptics frowned upon its curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by it has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands—doubt and skepticism have been swept away as by a mighty tidal wave, until today this purely vegetable medicine is recognized as the greatest remedy for woman's special ills in the world. This is because it is a wonderful tonic and reconstructer which acts directly and favorably upon the feminine organization and is a specific for that purpose.

WESLEY METHODIST CHURCH.

Those who braved the sleet-storm and had walking yesterday morning were well repaid in hearing a very able sermon by Rev. W. B. Bugden, B. A.—Having read the record of the crucifixion as given in St. John's Gospel 19 chap., he announced his subject: "The Cross Still Stands" and opened by reading the extract of a letter from Second Lieutenant H. Oxenham, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, to his father, and then gave the beautiful poem which that magnificent writer John Oxenham had composed on the incident referred to:—"In the evening I went for a walk to a village lately shelled by German heavy guns. Their effect was awful, ghastly. It was impossible to imagine the amount of damage done until we really saw it. The church was a mass of rubble, the spire was sticking up like a finger down in the ground, a short distance from the door. The church itself was a mass of debris. Scarcely anything was left unhit. In the churchyard also the destruction was terrific, tombstones thrown all over the place. But the most noticeable thing of all was that the three Crucifixes—one inside and two outside—were untouched! How they came have avoided the shelling is beyond me. It was a wonderful sight though an awful one. There were holes in the churchyard about fifteen feet across—"

The churchyard stones all blasted into shreds.

The dead re-plain within their lowly beds—

But the Cross still stands!

His holy ground all cratered and crevassed,

All hallowed to fragments by the fiery blast

The Cross still stands!

His church a blackened ruin, scarce one stone

Left on another,—yet, untouched alone

The Cross still stands!

His shrines o'erthrown, His altars desecrate,

His priests the victims of a pagans hate

The Cross still stands!

Mid all the horrors of the reddened ways,

The thund'rous nights, the dark and dreadful days

The Cross still stands!

And amid the chaos of the deadlier strife

A Church at odds with its own self and life—

His Cross still stands.

Faith folds her wings, and Hope at times grows dim,

The world goes wandering away from Him—

His Cross still stands.

Love with the lifted hands, and thorn crowned head

Still conquers Death, though life itself be fled

His Cross still stands.

Yes—Love triumphant stands, and stands for more,

In our great need, then e'er it stood before!

His Cross still stands.

Yes, continued the preacher, it still stands above: above all life and cannot alter. Though national life has been destroyed and is disordered; though the crowds are indifferent, and those still are to be found who mock and deride Him, or absorbed in self-seeking gain as those who gambled for his clothes, yet millions confess Him the world's Saviour. The Cross stands as the emblem, the sign post of Salvation and sacrifice; His servant preach Him as the great sacrifice "in Whom we have redemption through His blood even the forgiveness of our sins." Peace of conscience, and heart are only found by believing in Him. It stands as the unifying hope in the Son of God who died to save the world. He alone could make the atonement and through the merit of His death upon the cross is the only pillow upon which a dying head may rest. It becomes effective as it becomes accepted. The cross is a place of deepest sorrow, but it can become a place of the greatest joy, for we can leave every burden there.

The cross still stands for Right,

Against ungodly might—

God's Love is that Eternal Light, that shines forever

Falling never

In the darkest night.

Though the world in ruin lies, Though man oft despairing dies,

Though earth doth still Christ crucify,

The Cross stands ever.

Falling never

Love to glorify.

Unchanged from what it meant, To that first penitent,

Symbol of love omnipotent, The Cross stands ever.

Falling never

Of His great intent.

And His

God's Love, to testify, Man's faith to justify.

All life and death to signify, The cross stands ever.

Falling never

Of His sovereignty.

God's Love hung on the tree, Christ died for you and me,

Christ rose again for you and me, So Lovell's ever,

Falling never

Through eternity.

The hymns "Oh, Love Divine what has Thou done," "There is a green hill far away," "In the Cross of Christ I glory," and "When I survey the wondrous Cross on which the Prince of Glory died," were all very appropriate. There was a large congregation.

DIVIDENDS.

The magic word that gladdens the heart of every shareholder—the reason why you buy shares in oil, mining or industrial enterprises. And, if you were "only sure" that such and such a company would pay dividends, you would invest. You can be reasonably sure of any enterprise if you will only give it careful investigation and consideration. You shouldn't expect to get any more information than you already know, from someone who knows no more about the business than you do, but by a logical process of reasoning, you must arrive at a satisfactory answer. For instance, in the engine business, if you have a fair knowledge of what a company can turn out, if you can get a fair knowledge of normal profit on each engine, if you figure the usual expenses incurred by building and selling—and YOU can do all this, if YOU set it before you—you must be satisfied that Champion Marine and Motor Works, Ltd.—the concern we are interested in just now—will pay YOU, if you invest NOW.

Being as Important as Doing.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"I think she is an asset to the club because she has such a keen active mind that she is a mental stimulus to us all." I heard a woman say the other day.

She was speaking of another woman who had been criticised because she was not ready to serve on a committee which club president wanted her help.

"What's the use of her belonging to the club if she is always so busy with other things that she can't do her work," the club president had said.

And then the other woman had her defense.

Can Make Gifts of Character.

about the merits of this particular I did not know enough to judge, the discussion interested me because it brought up a point which I think is of intense activity I think is sometimes in danger of ignorance. Namely, that one can make one of valuable to the world by being as well as doing.

One can make gifts to the world character as well as of activity. For instance, among my friends there is a woman whose serenity and quietness is a daily gift to all those whom she comes into contact. I heard her talking once at the table yesterday and as I heard theasant serene way in which she thought for her number, corrected the telephone girl's mistake and thanked for service rendered, I thought that a gift of moment of contact with a temperament must be to the world. Something, I should imagine, the shadow of a great rock in a very land.

Happy Disposition A Gift to the World.

A happy disposition, not the professionally cheerful, determinedly glad nor the hectic kind, on the machine-to-day and in the dumps tomorrow, nor the nervously hilarious kind, but the genuine happy optimistic disposition is a gift to the world.

Health and vitality are a gift to the world. Last summer I was much in contact with a personality of this kind, thoroughly sane, thoroughly healthy in mind and body, perfectly balanced, and I cannot say how much the contact did to me.

Even Good Works Made Up for the Missing Smiles.

of course, being does not take the place of doing. It couldn't anyway because if one really is worthwhile one just naturally does worthwhile things. But neither does doing take the place of being. I often think of a woman who is always full of good works, like the widow in the Bible. She had moved recently into our neighbourhood, and I asked her washerwoman if she liked her. "Why yes," she said with a lack of enthusiasm that surprised me, "she's awful kind but, well, she doesn't smile very much does she?"

IN THE CHILDREN'S PRESENCE.

I never look their over, never see their little faces for the coming after while. In the school room at their studies, or in their many sunny places. But behind them in the distance there are shadows that I see. Of the grown up men and women that some day they're going to be.

When I'm in the children's presence, back to every happy smile. There's a subtle hint of splendor for the coming after while. And I think the little fellow bending now o'er book or slate may be the one that some tomorrow shall be ruler of the state.

Here they are, the men and women of the future! Who can read what, great man now sits among them who shall serve his country's need? Here perhaps in frock of gingham with her hair in ringlets curled is the heroine of tomorrow who may rise to bless the world.

In some way we all are teachers, as the children come and go. And perhaps we should be wiser if we might hold to them more closely if we had the power to see the glorious men and women that some day they're going to be.

Billiards.

INMAN ON "POTTING THE WHITE."

Safe, too! Is there a more stubborn defender of his position than the champion? There is not, because there cannot be. He has made himself unpopular with the majority of people who attend the billiards matches because he will "pot the white" when it suits him to do so. And as surely as he sinks the white, so does he set up a double-bank. Now there are few I have yet met who do not consider this kind of game ungentlemanly and unfair.

Prejudice dies hard, and never so much as among those who only think they know. There have been times recently when a murmur of resentment has gone through the company of spectators at the sight of the champion's persistent potting the white and "closing up the game." They could not understand this sort of billiards at all. Their idea was to say "Sorry!"—and not mean it—when they happened to fluke their opponent's ball in.

All in the Game.

Very jocularly, and with a look in his eye that told how far his words fell short of his beliefs, Inman has also been heard to remark, "Sorry!" when he has "shopped" the white. But it never needed a Sherlock Holmes to guess that he did not mean what he said. He is never sorry when he "downs the white." Nor should any sensible man be. It is all in the game.

Looking at the thing in a common-sense light, the player "downed" should be pleased at seeing his ball go in—on less for the striker to score off! And there are very few players I know of—first class or any other class—who can leave themselves a really nice shot to follow on with.

More is more, if you don't set up an easy position you have lost the initiative. Your opponent—if he knows anything about the game—safely misses, and you are left to make the best of a ball "leave." So never get annoyed nor believe it to be an unfair act when your ball is pocketed. You will have the same opportunity some time or another; and do not be squeamish about applying the closure!

Milady's Boudoir.

WHEN YOUR NERVES ARE RAGGED

Ragged nerves and beauty do not go hand in hand. There is no use in trying to make a lively complexion and perfect features if one feels like "running and screaming." Frazzled nerves will undo all the work of the beautifiers. We must learn how to rest as thoroughly as we have learned so splendidly how to be restless. Half the rushing around we do is totally unnecessary and unimportant and without any progression to our credit.

It ages us when we think it is helping us to keep young. It makes us most unpleasant persons to live with, for the poor woman with ragged nerves can't help being irritable and irresponsible, and it makes her inefficient. The first thing such women need is to learn how to let go and rest. Go to some quiet corner and lie down and forget the outside world, and let nature do what all the doctors in the world cannot do without help.

Run away into the lovely pink and green country and let the soft breezes cool your throbbing head and blow the wrinkles out of your strained face, and let the brooks and the birds sing you to sleep. In the meantime we may seek beauty and nerve bath in tonics and baths. We can all manage the soothing luxury of a sea salt bath before we go to bed, and we can have the cool sponge bath in the morning with diluted alcohol. There are other wonderful baths which will make you feel like a new woman. Boil half a pound of pine cones one-half hour and strain the infusion into the bedtub. Mix together one ounce of tincture of champhor, two ounces of cologne and half an ounce of tincture of benzoin. Add enough to the tub to make it milky and soft.

spent in Normandy, it was the custom of the mistress of the house to offer to everyone, on Good Friday morning, a bun and a piece of silver, and to lose either during the ensuing year was considered unfortunate both for the giver and for the receiver. It is possible that the bun, which in Saxony and Wurtemberg, was laid upon the grave of parents and kinsmen, was something of the kind. A curious circumstance, however, connected with the latter custom, was that it was unusual to place the cake upon the tombs of very young children; whereas in the history of the British bun, it is the children who play the most conspicuous part. Originally a heathen offering then adopted by Christians, who discovered in its distinguished token a mystical meaning which it did not bear, this bun has travelled down from age to age, immortalised by a mistake. There are few English towns where it is not known; yet how few among us think that this little piece of bread, with its four lines, has survived the fall of dynasties, and has been left untouched amidst the ruins of centuries. Mention of it is to be found in the earliest uninspired history to which research has guided us; and here it is still, a modern and insignificant custom, which one would imagine a few years would be sufficient to dispel.

Internal Conditions in Poland.

When the world war began, Russia sent hundreds of thousands of soldiers into Finland to guard its coast from a possible German attack. This garrisoning of Finland had also a further purpose, for Russia desired to make use of the war to completely carry out its policy of russification of Finland, which it had unsuccessfully attempted during the preceding twenty years. The aim was to colonize the country with Russians and by this means destroy the semi-independent status of Finland, making of it a Russian province, much after the fashion of the Germans in German Poland. The Russian soldiers were permitted to act most arbitrarily towards the Finns, commit robberies, and impose severe punishment for the very slightest offenses on the part of the people of the country, on the ground that they were dangerous to greater Russia. In short, the German system of punishments and deportations in Belgium was resorted to by the Russians in Finland.

Hot Cross Bun Superstitutions.

There are many very extraordinary superstitutions which are connected with the custom of Hot Cross Buns. In some parts of the country a Good Friday bun is kept for luck, and from the ceiling of many a cottage in Wales will be seen suspended, from Good Friday to Good Friday, a kind of biscuit or cake, which is supposed to be a charm against fire. This is something akin to the old Devonshire rhyme, which is said to be found extant on the borders of Cornwall:—

Save the cake,
Save the rick.
Great care is generally taken by the poor to preserve one or more of these buns. When dry and grated, they are esteemed an infallible cure for many diseases. Cataplasms, in particular, is supposed to be especially amenable to their virtue. The writer once met a lady who mentioned the fact that in her younger days, which were won independent government, and take the power into their own hands and organize it along Bolshevik lines. This caused the civil war in Finland, during which time the country was isolated from the outer world. The food supplies became exhausted, for the revolutionists together with the Russians, robbed the food supplies of all parts of the country in which they were operating or which they had under their control.

When this red revolt was overthrown, the food supplies of the country were merely nominal. The bread in use contained ground lichen, ground pine bark, and other additions containing even a slight amount of nourishment. Dreadful hunger prevailed in the country and many deaths brought on by undernourishment or caused directly by starvation.—Service Bureau.

SPRING DOPE.

Now that spring, so blithe a n d merry, spreads its rugs of living grass, from the learned apothecary we must buy some sassafras. For our blood is coursing slowly, a f t e r winter's long d r a w n games, and a lot of oils unholly soon will break out on our frames; and we'll have a bilious fever and a lot of other ills, and old Death will swing his cleaver if we don't buy yards and pills. Oh, the druggist smiles and whistles, as he labours all alone, as he boils a lot of thistles, for this season is his own; he is brewing tea of tansy and of liverwort and looks, flavored with a dash of panny, and he chortles when he speaks. In the cure of ailments chronic our learned pharmacist delights; he is mixing up a tonic for our livers and our lights. For our blood is slow and sluggish, and we're breaking out with rash, and for portions dire and ruggish we must buy our surplus cash. And we need a hair restorer and an eye-wash for our gisms; dope to stop the elm tree border, which is threatening our limbs. So we see the druggist, wretched, back of his prescription case, with his mortar and his pestle, making dope to save the race.

The silk cloth stitching trims the pockets and collars of many new suits.

Narrow shoulders and tight sleeves mark the smartest suit-coats.

A white silk jersey evening gown is trimmed with white chalk beads and jet.

Mother-of-pearl discs sewn into the fabric are a favorite Paris trimming.

A new butterfly sleeve of tulle is caught at the shoulder by a beaded motif.

A white crepe de chine dress is trimmed with navy blue uncut wool fringe.

This is the day when costumes are designed to go with a bit of beautiful jewelry.

A frock of sand colored gabardine has sleeves of batiste embroidered in black silk.

A tight fitting long sleeve has an outstanding band of the material something like a fish's fin.

To sugar doughnuts put ½ teaspoonful of powdered sugar in a paper bag—twist the neck tight and shake.

A one-egg cake baked in a biscuit pan and cut in squares, then served hot with foamy sauce, is a good dessert.

Add one-half a cupful of grated cheese to white sauce before stirring it into samp. Grate cheese on top and bake.

The Queen of Festivals.

Easter—literally, Spring—has been a religious festival from the days of antiquity, occurring as it does about the vernal equinox. In earlier times it marked the dawn of a New Year, the end of the reign of Winter and the advent of increasing light and heat and the vivifying influence of Spring. It was anciently called Pasch, derived from the Hebrew word signifying Passover, and was observed on the seventh day of the week. At first the festival of Easter synchronised exactly with the Passover of the Jews, but later—following the Resurrection—there was a difference among the Christian Churches as to the day upon which this feast should be held. The Asiatic or Eastern Church kept it on the third day after the fourteenth of the month Nisan, as the actual day of our Lord's resurrection, on whatever day of the week that might happen to occur. The Western Churches however always observed it on the Sunday immediately after the actual day, and it was not until A. D. 325 that the Council of Nicea settled the dispute by decreeing that the feast should be kept everywhere on the same day, and on the first day of the week, it being held that the resurrection itself took place on the first day of the week after the passover and ought therefore to be commemorated on a certain Sunday. That Sunday was, consequently, definitely fixed in the 6th century to be the first Sunday after the full moon that falls on, or next after, March 21st. Should the full moon happen on a Sunday, Easter is celebrated one week later. The date of all the other moveable feasts depend therefore on that of Easter.

Easter is the "queen of festivals," the greatest event in the story of Christianity, transcending perhaps in its effect on mankind the wonderful and miraculous birth of the Redeemer of the World at Christmas, because man's salvation was not, could not be, accomplished by the birth of Christ, but only through His death and resurrection. And so the Church lays particular emphasis on the observance of the great Easter festival, and of the days preceding it—those wonderful days from Palm Sunday to Good Friday, the events of which pass before us in a succession of magnificent but sombre panoramic pictures as in imagination we follow the scenes in the closing hours of the life of Him who was the fruit of the promise, and by whom the fetters binding the spiritual world was broken. He was at once the Resurrection and the Life, and in death triumphed over the grave.

All Christendom has been following His footsteps from Palm Sunday when He made His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, loudly acclaimed with the Hosannas of the multitude, which a little while later was changed into the vengeful cry Crucify Him! and have been present at the Last Supper partaken of by the Master and His disciples, including the traitor Judas. The devout have followed Him to the garden of Gethsemane and there witnessed His agony. The faithful have stood by and seen His betrayal and attended Him to the house of the high priest Caiaphas, who suborned false witnesses to testify against Him. His trial before Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governor, who alone possessed the powers of life or death as vivid to-day as it was over nineteen hundred years ago. The sentence, the malefactor's death upon the Cross of Calvary, with a thief on either hand to show the derision with which His kingship was regarded; the descent from the Cross; the burial in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, and then the glorious and real fact of the Resurrection, rolling away the stone that sealed the sepulchre by the sheer force of His Divinity and proving His superiority to material forces; in all these we have convincing proofs that the Son of Man conquered the grave and became alive for evermore.

Man's salvation and redemption was assured. Christ burst the bonds asunder and the promise of ages was fulfilled. Hence, throughout all time the glad Alleluias of rejoicing will ascend heavenward and man will meet his neighbor on each succeeding festival day with the salutation "Christus surrexit" to be answered joyfully "Christus vere surrexit."

"The day of Resurrection:
Earth tell it out abroad;
The Passover of Gladness,
The Passover of God!
From death to life eternal,
From Earthly unto the Sky,
Our Christ hath brought us over
With hymns of Victory."

At St. Thomas's.

Yesterday at St. Thomas's, Antecommunion Service with Litany was held at 8 o'clock. At 10 o'clock Matins was read, and Rev. A. Clayton preached. In keeping with the day the sermon was on the last moments of Christ on earth. From 12-3 o'clock the Three Hours' Service was held, Rev. Dr. Jones officiating. He took such of the Seven Words from the Cross in succession. Before doing so he told in clear and illuminating language the incidents of the day up to the arrival at Calvary. The Seven Words from the Cross were then translated in such a clear, unmistakable way, as is rarely ever accomplished, and the congregation were ed in awe and reverence, as the preacher word-visualised the scenes enacted on and near Calvary on that first Good Friday. At 7.30 Evensong was held, the story of the Cross being sung at the end of the order. Last night's service brought to a close the chain of services held at St. Thomas's during Lent. For the past two weeks, nightly services have been conducted, and large crowds have nightly gathered to listen to the discourses on the events subsequent to the great feature of the past week, and as a result of the labor expended, Easter will bring to many the message of hope and joy perhaps hitherto denied them.

1500 Seals Taken by Shoremen.

INGRAM LEAVES KING'S COVE TOWING HICKMAN'S SCHOONER. (Special to Evening Telegram.) KING'S COVE, April 19. Upwards of fifteen hundred seals were taken from the patch reported to you on Thursday, nine hundred of them being landed at Tickle Cove and remainder from Keels to here. The larger portion of these are bedlamers; the others young harps. Some men from here were late in returning on Thursday and had to slip their seals a mile off, and make all haste for the shore, as the wind increased and ice began to slacken, and it was with some difficulty they were safely landed. Yesterday's strong S. W. wind put the ice off shore and enabled the S.S. D. P. Ingraham, which was harbored here for the past few days to leave with the new ship, built at Charlottetown, B.B., the past winter, in tow. —COR.

PARIS, April 19. Vice-President of the Chamber of Deputies, M. Luchaire, who followed a session this afternoon following a violent wrangle, presided over a session in which the question of resignation was discussed. The Government held that the time was not ripe, pending signing of treaty. Premier's declaration, in the Chamber, that France has been guaranteed against a renewal of German attacks is interpreted by the official press as meaning that an alliance with Britain and America has been concluded. The Four Council representatives, who were invited to attend, concluded their deliberations with Lloyd George attending.

FOUCH'S OPINION.

LONDON, April 19. The Daily Mail has published an interview with Marshal Foch secured in Paris, in which the Marshal is quoted as declaring: "Europe must have the victor, not of these vanished." Continuing he is reported to have said: "We must stay or perish." Fouch's opinion is that the war must do more to lock the door, do not let the appearance of the moment, but then discussed the possibility of other war, asserting that what saved the Allies at the beginning of the war, the Marshal then argued, was the Russian side. He stated that those side Russia would be in the war. The Marshal then argued that the Allies are now drafting a report, and he thought Germany would have done for another attack, he replied: "Do you know? By the time you get it they had, it would be too late."

"Made in Germany."

LABEL HUNS HOPE TO USE.

Unblushing Germany is getting ready for trade with Britain again. An officer with the Army of Occupation has sent to this journal a collection of recently printed labels bearing the familiar words "Made in Germany."

The labels, intended for the covers of boxes containing razors, scissors, and other cutlery, are gaily printed in red, gold, green, and black, and read as follows:

Superior scissors made of the best double refined cast-steel. Made in Germany.

Finest hollow-ground razors set ready for use; warranted. Made in Germany.

Stahschmidt Tool Co., Ltd., Oremfeld, near Elberfeld, Germany. Hardware and tools of high-class quality. Trade-mark, "Feda."

Antoni's Razors fine razors; warranted English steel. Made in Germany.

Celebrated razors; best quality; warranted. Made in Germany.

A Board of Trade official to whom the labels were shown expressed great interest in them, and asked that they might be left for further inspection.

"There has been," he said, "no change in the regulations affecting imports from Germany, nor can there be until the Government has made a decision. We do not find that the German manufacturers are yet trying to get goods through, but it is interesting to see how thoroughly they are preparing for trade again."—Daily Mail.

Girls! Have Wavy, Thick, Glossy Hair Free From Dandruff

Save your hair! Double its beauty in a few moments—try this!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have such heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scrub robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots flail, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If you hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after, you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

Bristle brushes may be kept in the best order by washing in lukewarm soapsuds to which a little ammonia has been added.

The Cub-Editor Apologizes.

As will be noted by those interested in the week-end feature, "From My Scrap-Book," to-day's issue has gone to press minus this week's installment. A note, received from the Cub-Editor, throws some light on this omission: "Please inform our readers that we are unable, this week, to present the usual dope," but as for the reason—

Unsatisfactory Quarters

Dear Sir,—May I, through your paper, call attention to the fact that some of our recently returned soldiers with wives and children have been unsatisfactorily lodged while awaiting passage to their homes in the outports, either through ignorance of locality on the part of those responsible, or through carelessness. I have in mind, as I write, a house that I had occasion to visit yesterday in which several of the recent arrivals are quartered, and to say that I was surprised is to put it mildly, for it was certainly no place to be provided for a returned soldier and his loved ones.

"Dazzle" Ashore.

Word has been received in town that the schooner "Dazzle" has gone ashore at Trepassey, but that the crew have landed safely.

It is presumed that the ship was forced ashore by the ice. Furniture can be cleaned by rubbing with oiled cotton waste, then dry flannel.

Storm Causes Damage

IN GREEN BAY. From a gentleman just arrived from Green Bay we learn that a storm on Wednesday caused some pretty serious damage, when about $4,000 worth of twine was destroyed. Some forty herring nets also were lost in the storm. One man's loss amounted to more than $1,000, and nearly everybody, near about, suffered some from the storm. Ice blown in by the wind, was the direct cause of the damage.

Viking Arrives.

The S. S. Viking, bringing the key of the sealing voyage, arrived in port yesterday morning. She sails for 30 pelts or thereabouts. The Viking searched the Gulf for the whitecoats and was unable to find them. Thousands of old seals were seen, however, and had there been any guns on board a fair trip would probably have been secured but as the law allowing guns to be carried was not in force when the Viking sailed, the men were, therefore, deprived of this spring's work.

The Battle of Toulouse.

The battle of Toulouse, which was fought on April 19, 1814, between the Allies, under Wellington, and the French, under Marshal Soult, was the last notable engagement in the long series of campaigns waged from Lisbon to the South of France. National partiality has claimed it as a victory for Soult; but inasmuch as he was forced out of a very strong defensive position, abandoning redoubts, falling back across the canal, and taking refuge within the walls of Toulouse itself, it is difficult to understand upon what that claim rests.

England many valuable lives.

Such were the last actions fought by that tried and valorous Peninsular Army, which in a few more weeks was broken up and dispersed for ever.

Saved Materials From the British.

GERMANS NAIVELY EXPLAIN WHY THEY DENUDE INDUSTRIES OF FRANCE AND BELGIUM.

That they found it necessary to remove materials and machinery from France and Belgium to prevent their destruction by the British is now brazenly being explained by German manufacturers through the General Union of Manufacturers and Exporters of Berlin and at the same time they explain that as the result of these removals they are in a position to fill orders with goods which cannot be obtained from any other source. Here is the way they put it in instructions to agents seeking export business:

The systematically brutal and inhuman methods pursued by the Franco-British armies in France and Belgium during the war, and particularly by the English, have brought about the total destruction by gunfire (destruction more than probably premeditated by the English) of all the factories, of all manufacturing centres, stocks of raw material, coal, lines of communication, rolling stock, in all the area which has served as the theatre of war.

Our civil and military services—horrified at the sight of such spectacles of systematic obstruction, which they were unable to avert, saw their way to lessen their intensity in some measure by transporting into German territory practically all the material to be found in the country occupied by our valiant armies.

We have thus been able to save from destruction stocks of raw materials and manufactured goods of inestimable value; these stocks remain at the complete disposal of manufacturers and our merchants.

In this manner our happy foresight has served to assure the populations of the world of the easy re-equipping of the globe in manufactured articles after the war, despite the fact that the savagery of the British troops nearly deprived them of that privilege. —The Financial Post.

Fat Fees.

LAWYERS' AMAZING INCOMES.

Law is a costly luxury. And well it might be, for the finest profession in the world from a money-making point of view is the law. In a recent case Sir Edward Carson and Sir John Sifton had a trifling fee of five thousand guineas on their briefs, each being assisted by a small army of juniors, who were paid in proportion. There are a round dozen leading lawyers who will not read a brief without a preliminary fee of one thousand guineas, while a leader of minor eminence now expects one hundred guineas on a brief and twenty-five guineas a day as a refresher.

The Bar is the strongest trade union in the country. It has forced legal incomes up by leaps and bounds, as may be gathered from the fact that Jessel, the one-time Master of the Rolls, looked upon twenty-five guineas refresher as something exceptional, while Edwin James chronicled as extraordinary two hundred guineas on a brief when he was the leading Queen's Counsel.

The biggest fees on record were those of ten thousand guineas which Serjeant Ballantine and Mr. Balfour Browne, K.C., each received for conducting cases abroad. And yet Ballantine only made four and a half guineas during his first year at the Bar, thirty guineas in the second, and seventy-five in the third.

Lord Birkenhead and Lord Reading have each made enormous fortunes at the Bar. The former, it is said, made a sacrifice of £10,000 a year when he became Lord Chancellor. And when he gets "the sack" a grateful country will give him an out-of-work pension of £5,000 a year. Which calls to mind the fact that Lord Halsbury, now in his 94th year, has drawn more public money than any living subject of the Crown. His modest earnings have been roughly £170,000 as Lord Chancellor for seventeen years, and £280,000 as ex-Chancellor for sixteen years—a total of £250,000.

Has Peace Conference Committed Suicide?

Germany Allowed to Fortify Heligoland and Kiel -- Wholesale Destruction of Life-- Bolsheviks Leave 70,000 People to Perish-- Newfoundlander Drowned on the Banks.

SYSTEMATIC ANNIHILATION.

STOCKHOLM, April 17. (Reuter's).—A despatch from Libau brings terrible news from Riga, indicating the speedy annihilation of all the bourgeoisie there, seventy thousand of whom, including women and children, have been taken to an island in the river and left without food or money.

THE NAVAL TERMS.

PARIS, April 18. The naval terms to be incorporated in the Peace Treaty concerning the Kiel Canal and Heligoland, have been revised in several important particulars. The original plan was to destroy the fortifications of the canal, making it a strictly commercial waterway without defenses. The changes that now have been made leave the present fortifications intact, and provisions have also been inserted permitting of the continuance of the present coast defenses, all of which were to have been destroyed, according to the original plan.

PUNISHMENT OF GERMANS ASKED FOR.

PARIS, April 18. A petition asking for the punishment of Germans responsible for the deportation of women from Lille, Roubaix and Turcoing in the Spring of 1916, will soon be handed to the Peace Conference. It is signed by 15,000 women, including Madame Gaston Calmette and Mrs. Anna Roosevelt.

DAMAGE TO BELGIAN INDUSTRY.

BRUSSELS, April 17. Belgian industry was damaged to the extent of thirty-five billion francs, according to a report made by the Central Industrial Committee of Belgium, which has completed an investigation of the damage done in Belgium, for which an indemnity could be demanded from Germany. The committee has reckoned the cost of materials on the basis of prices prevailing at present, declaring that it is the only just method if Belgian industry is to be restored to the condition it was in August, 1914.

GETTING READY FOR FLIGHT.

EAST CHURCH, April 17. Major Wood announced his intention to-day of flying to Limerick this afternoon. If present improved weather conditions continue he would start his flight across the Atlantic tomorrow.

FLIGHT STARTED.

LONDON, April 18. (Via Reuter's).—Major J. C. Wood, pilot of Short Brothers' biplane, left East Church this afternoon for Limerick, in the first stage of his attempt to fly across the Atlantic. The weather was ideal for flying.

BIG STRIKE THREATENED.

NEW YORK, April 18. A strike of all the trade unionists in the boroughs of Manhattan and Brooklyn was threatened late to-day unless private boat owners made "reasonable concessions" to the men.

ANARCHIST IN CONTROL.

BERLIN, April 17. The Bavarian anarchist, Sondheimer has succeeded in obtaining complete control of the new Communist Government in Munich, according to advices received here from the Bavarian capital.

BOLSHEVISTS SENTENCED.

BUCHAREST, April 18. Four Bolshevik agents arrested some time ago in Bucharest, have been sentenced to long terms of imprisonment by a court martial. Trials of other Bolshevik agents and of persons accused of circulating enemy propaganda continue.

GERMANY OFFERS ASSISTANCE.

BERLIN, April 17. The German National Government is considering seriously the sending of Government troops, or at least German general staff officers, to aid in the relief of Munich from the Communist forces, although neither the Bavarian nor German governments wish to cause such an invasion of state rights if it can be avoided. The bulk of the Bavarian peasants, it is reported, are still loyal to the Government of Premier Hoffmann. The Peasants' Association has issued a declaration asserting that the devastation of the country, the plundering of houses and barns, and murdering of peasants by Communist bands have become intolerable.

ENDORSES BOLSHEVISM.

PARIS, April 18. The first Bolshevik newspaper in France appeared to-day under the name "Le Title Censure," the title censored, as the title originally proposed, "Le Bolshevik," had been censored. The paper is a weekly, and is edited by George's Anquetil, who in an editorial proclaimed himself a Bolshevik doctrinaire. The editor says he will undertake a defense of Bolshevism.

THREAT TO STRIKERS.

COLOGNE, April 16. General Plumer orders the immediate return of the strikers to work in the Cologne district on pain of strongest measures.

WILL DECIDE BY REFERENDUM.

GENEVA, April 16. The Swiss Government announced it will decide by referendum whether or not to enter the League of Nations.

AIRPLANES USED.

SIMLA, April 15. Airplanes were used to-day in suppressing disorders in the Punjab.

GRAND BANK FISHERMAN DROWNED.

HALIFAX, N.S., April 17. Benjamin Tibbo, of Grand Bank, Nfld., was drowned while attending a trawl on April 3rd. This was reported when the schooner arrived to-day at Lunenburg.

RAILWAY DISASTER.

PARIS, April 17. Fourteen Americans and six French soldiers were killed when an express train, carrying American troops crashed into a stationary train with French soldiers on furlough, near Lemans to-day.

EDITH CAVELL'S BODY.

LONDON, April 17. The body of Edith Cavell, the English nurse, who was executed by the Germans in 1915 at Brussels, will be brought to England from Belgium on May 15th and taken to Westminster Abbey, where ceremonies will be held. The body will be brought to Dover on a warship and will be transported on a gun carriage with military escort to Victoria Station, and thence to Westminster Abbey. Interment will be at Norwich, the home town of the Cavells.

SUBS. LOST.

CHEERBOURG, France, April 18. Seven German submarines on the way here from England in tow, have been lost in a storm. Eight of the underses boats were bound here, but only one arrived safely.

NOT YET SETTLED.

PARIS, April 18. The plan of the Council of Four to have Belgium prosecute the former German Emperor on the charge of responsibility for the war, is meeting with objections which are again bringing up the whole subject for revision. These who have the matter in hand divide the question of war responsibility into two distinct classes. The first class includes military and naval offenders like General Ludendorff and Admiral Von Tirpitz, and those accused of various excesses, against the usual rule of warfare. The second class includes former Emperor William, ex-Chancellor Von Bethmann and others whose offence is chiefly of a political nature.

NAME CHANGED.

LONDON, April 18. To emphasize the distinction between the settlement of overseas men within the Empire and emigration to foreign countries, the Imperial Government has changed the name of the Government Emigration Committee established January last, to the Overseas Settlement Committee, thus making the title distinctive of the committee's principal work.

SERVICE BY AIR CRAFT.
