STORY OF LOVE, INTRIGUE AND REVENGE

CHAPTER XII

Not a word more did he say. While her head was bent in bitter sorrow he would not remind her of the past. It was to him as though she were in a sanctuary where no profane thoughts must follow her.

During all these long months he had heard continually from Lola. He did not answer each letter; he merely wrote when politeness required it. He never liked to think about the scene that had taken place between himself and Lola; the glances of her rich, dark beauty, the passion in her face and voice, the intense love for him expressed in her whole demeanor had impressed him as was only natural, and he had in some measure been thrown off his guard. Recalling the scene now, her conduct appeared to him bold and unbecoming. He could not but regret also the solemn pledge of friendship that had been almost wrung from him. It had been given originally against his better judgment, and it was against his better judgment now that the friendship continued.

Sir Karl had decided what his plans should be. He would finish his Continental tour; he would not return to England until Lord Rhysworth had been dead at least fifteen months; but when he did go, he would do his best to win the only woman he loved on earth.

It was the fact of Sir Karl's continued absence, almost more than any other, which gave Lola such hope. She knew so little of his character that she said to herself, if he had really loved Dolores, he would have returned post-haste when he knew that she was free, he would not have allowed a whole year to elapse before he came home. Surely it was a sign that he was not in love with Lady Rhysworth. She determined to make matters clear to Dolores by dropping hints to her that she considered Sir Karl belonged to herself. This she had done frequently, though they were all vague, mysterious hints, unsubstantial as the hopes they rested on. She had gone over to Deeping Hurst on that bright morning because she had received a note from Sir Karl. She had written, asking him, if he returned by way of Genoa, to execute some trifling commission for her; and he had replied, saying that he should take quite another route, but hoped to be back in England in a few weeks. By return of post she wrote to remind him of his promise that he would see her before any one else on his arrival. Sir Karl tore that letter into shreds; if he kept his promise, Lola would not gain any advantage by it.

CHAPTER XIII

Sir Karl had not given the date of his return, nor could Lola guess when it would be. She was watching for it impatiently. At last she thought of an ingenious device. She persuaded one of madame's servants to go over to Scarsdale on some pretext, and while there to ascertain the precise day that Sir Karl was expected home. It was cleverly managed. Her messenger told her that he was to return on the third of July; and, from the moment Lola heard the news until he stood before her, those words never left her—"The third of July." On that day all her sorrows were to end, and the Paradise on earth for which she had been waiting was to begin.

The third of July had come at last; and, when Lola rose in the morning and opened her window, letting in the balmy air, her heart beat with happiness. Well might the birds sing joyously, well might the green earth look its fairest; he was coming who would make all things bright to her. She resolved, lest she should miss him, not to leave home that day at least. He might come in the morning, at noon, or at night; but let him come when he would, she must be there. She would not for all the treasures on earth miss the first look into his face, the first sound of his voice. She had longed for his presence all these months, and now she was to see him.

In vain, during that lovely, sunlit day, did Madame de Ferras beg that Lola would either drive out or walk out with her; the girl was resolute; she would not have risked missing Sir Karl to have been made a queen. She could not plead headache, for she looked so well and happy. All that she could answer was—"I am not inclined to go out to-day, mamma. Will you excuse me?"

"There is no fear," she said to herself; "he could never hesitate between Lady Rhysworth and myself—no man could. Setting aside the fact that I love him, and that my great love must win some return, he could never prefer her to me."

Madame de Ferras guessed a little of the truth when she saw her daughter's face suddenly grow deathly pale. It was at the sound of carriage-wheels, followed by a loud peal at the hall bell.

"Who can that be?" cried madame. Lola had said something in a vague way about Sir Karl's return, but had not told her the date.

"Surely," said madame. "It cannot be Sir Karl!"

One glance at Lola was a revelation to her. Now she could see why her daughter had refused one lover after another, why, in the very springtime of her loveliness, she had cared apparently for no one; it was all because she loved Sir Karl. Madame felt a thrill of terror. What if Sir Karl did not return that day? Before she had time to say more, before she had recovered from her surprise, or Lola from her emotion, the young baronet was announced. He came in, looking handsomer than ever. The warm suns of France and Italy had bronzed his face, and he was altogether greatly improved. Madame de Ferras, as she looked at him, owned that it was no wonder her daughter was infatuated with him but Sir Karl and madame herself were both startled when Lola went forward to greet him. They had never seen anything like her face then, and probably never would again—the mingled pleasure and pain, the happiness, the expectation, the fear.

She could not speak to him; but she went forward with outstretched hands. Madame watched the whole scene with tremulous anxiety. She saw that her daughter loved Sir Karl, but she was by no means so sure of the state of his feelings. She saw nothing but simple pleasure in his face—there was no light of love in the frank blue eyes.

"I am very pleased," he said, "to see you once more, madame, and you, Miss de Ferras."

There was no rapture in his voice or manner. He looked, as he said, pleased, and nothing more.

Little by little the color came to Lola's face again and words to her lips.

"I cannot tell you how pleased I am to see you, Sir Karl," she replied. "You must stay for dinner—it will be ready in ten minutes."

"Yes, do, Sir Karl," said madame. "It will be like old times to have you with us again."

But he had intended to go over to Deeping Hurst that night, and he hesitated. It was still broad daylight yet, if he remained here he would not have time to go.

Lola looked at him imploringly. "Surely," she said, "you could never think of leaving us to-night; it would be too unkind."

"I did not come prepared to stay," he answered, still half hesitatingly. "I have been travelling all night and all day, and my dress is unsuited for ladies' company."

"We will excuse all that," returned Lola, quickly. "There is no need even to mention it. Let me ring and order your horses to be taken to the stables. You will not refuse me, I am sure."

"It is very kind of you, but—" "But me no buts!" laughed Lola. "Now you must consent. I have heard you say that a line from Shakespeare would reconcile you to anything."

He laughed, and with the laugh yielded. It was pleasant to be welcomed so warmly by those two graceful women, to be made to feel that he had brought brightness and happiness with him, to know that their delight at seeing him was perfectly genuine. It was more, like coming home than going to Scarsdale would be; so he yielded to the temptation of the impulse, and remained.

Madame, noting her daughter's delight, felt her heart sink. She could see that Sir Karl did not care for her except as a friend; and it dawned upon her that an unfortunate love affair would be the one thing in this world which would be most harmful to Lola.

They had a pleasant dinner. Madame ordered some of her choicest wines to be brought; the viands were recherche, the fruit was delicious. Afterward all three repaired to the drawing-room. The long windows opened on to the lawn, the turf of which was smooth as velvet. The room itself was filled with the perfume of odoriferous flowers and sweet with the breath of the summer wind.

Harbor Grace Notes

The marriage of Capt. Sadie S. Fry, of Charlottown, B.B., to Capt. Sidney Rideout, of the Salvation Army here, was solemnized at the S. A. Citadel on Wednesday evening last, June 25th, the ceremony being performed by Commandant P. Sainsbury, before a large number of friends and well wishers. Capt. E. Brown acted as best man, while Capt. Janie Brown was bridesmaid. The S. A. Band from Carbonear was present, and rendered appropriate music through the evening. At the conclusion of the ceremony, a reception was held at the quarters, some thirty-five guests being present, and a very pleasant evening spent. Capt. Rideout and his bride will leave here during this month for Jackson's Cove, N.D.B., where they will take up duty. We extend best wishes to Capt. and Mrs. Rideout for many years of happiness.

The following members of the 1st Harbor Grace Troop of Boy Scouts have gone to St. John's to take part in the Celebrations:—Patrol Leader, D. Burke; Asst. Patrol Leader, G. Simmons; H. Stevenson, C. ### Meeting of American, Canadian and British Bar Associations

WINNIPEG.—The programme of the British and Canadian Bar Associations, which will act as joint hosts to the American Bar Association at the meeting in London in July, as announced by E. H. Coleman, Secretary of the Canadian Bar Association, says it is expected that nearly 1,000 American Judges and Barristers will attend, while the Canadian Bar Association will be represented by more than 250 members. Many of these will be accompanied by their wives and children.

On Sunday, July 20, special arrangements have been made for services in Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Cathedral.

The formal opening of the meeting will take place on Monday, July 21, in historic Westminster Hall, where the Courts of England sat for more than 800 years and which may be regarded as the birthplace of the common law which forms the foundation of the legal system of the United States as well as of England and most of the Provinces of Canada. It is planned that addresses of welcome will be made by the Lord High Chancellor, Viscount Haldane, the Attorney-General of England, Sir Patrick Hastings, the President of the Canadian Bar Association, Sir James Aikins K. C., and that responses will be made by the Chief Justice of the United States, William H. Taft, and the President of the American Bar Association, who is likely to be the United States Secretary of State, Charles E. Hughes.

On Monday evening and again on Tuesday night there will be a brilliant series of dinners at the Four Inns of Court, the Middle Temple, the Inner Temple, Lincoln's Inn and Gray's Inn, as well as the Law Society.

Tuesday afternoon will be devoted to reception by the American Ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg, at Crews House.

On Wednesday afternoon the American Bar Association will present to the lawyers of England a life-sized statue of Sir William Blackstone, the great author of the commentaries on the laws of England. Following the presentation ceremony, there will be garden parties at Lincoln's Inn and Gray's Inn. In the evening the Lord Mayor of London will entertain at a banquet in the Guildhall to which 100 of the Canadian lawyers will be invited.

Thursday will be marked by a garden party given by Their Majesties the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace. Invitations will be sent to all the visiting Canadian and United States members.

On Thursday evening there will be receptions by the Master of the Rolls, the City of London Solicitors' Company and the University of London. Friday will be devoted to visits to Sulgrave Manor and to Cliveden. At Cliveden the Viscount and Lady Astor will entertain at a garden fete. On Friday night there will be a great state reception in the Houses of Parliament, which, it is expected, will be attended by the leading members of the British Government. Visits to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge will be made on Saturday, July 26.

On the Right Road

The remedy for the industry which found itself ground between rising cost and a consuming public insisting upon lower prices lies, we believe, in customer-employee ownership. This new development in industry which the wisest of the old companies are adopting will not bring Utopia. The spendthrift will continue to have less than the saver, the unusual man, the better trader to overreach the poorer trader. But it promises a continuation of our marvellous economic progress; a continuance of the physical well being, comfort, and entertainment of the people; wider distribution of the general welfare, a surer reward for the virtues; while it will furnish a check to those dangerous and alien doctrines which range all the way from pernicious governmental interference in business and ruinous taxation to palsied Government ownership and operation of the activities upon which our civilization is based.—Chicago Tribune.

The Loss of Revenue DUE TO REPEAL OF MCKENNA DUTIES.

The total net revenue collected from the so-called McKenna duties which expired in accordance with the recommendations of the latter government on the first of July of this year, as reported to the Finance Trust Company of New York by its English Information Service, amounted from the time such duties were first imposed in 1915 to March 31, 1924, at par of exchange to $94,300,000. Of these duties, 55 per cent of $51,482,000 came from motor cars, motor bicycles (including accessories); 26 per cent, or $24,589,000 from clocks, watches and component parts; 10 per cent, or $9,284,000 came from cinematograph films; and 9 per cent, or $8,895,000 came from musical instruments. From the first of April, 1922, the above figures include those relating to collections in Great Britain and Northern Ireland only.

June has been a progressive month for our centre. This is the Hub of the wheel of our Welfare Work and we want our centre to have its influence in every home in St. John's.

At present we are dealing largely with the sick baby as institutional treatment to any extent is impossible, there being no Children's Hospital in St. John's. This makes our centre a treatment centre, not a Welfare Centre, and the work, curative instead of preventative. If a little thought is given to the truth of the saying "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" it will be understood how economically our true work is being hindered to the detriment of the community.

New Quarters—For any extensive progressive work we need a "home" for our centre away from the office. By the kindness of the Girl Guides Organization we have had this wish granted for one afternoon a week, and therefore hold our Thursday afternoon consultations in their Headquarters on Duckworth Street. This is a large hall and we are most grateful for their help in letting us have the use of it. We still want a "home" of our own where we can hold all our centres, our classes and our clinics.

A Sewing Afternoon—Every Friday afternoon we hold a small sewing class for mothers. This is a big step forward as it gives the mother a quiet afternoon and also it is an opportunity for "talks" which have a great deal of educational value.

A Dental Office—We have been fortunate in being able to start a Dental Clinic. Dr. James has very kindly consented to give us an afternoon a month free, for examinations of our centre. This is for mothers and children to the age of five years. It is but a beginning but we have great hopes that it is going to be one of the most successful ventures, and therefore the health of the community greatly benefited.

If there are those in St. John's interested in Social Service and do not fully realize the work of the Community we would be so grateful if they would visit us, as every interest and enquiry is of value to our work. We offer our grateful thanks to:—Harvey & Co., Ltd., for Biscuits for Welfare Centre.

Mr. Thistle, for papers.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

Rescued After Six Days in Open Boat

SCHOONER BLUENOSE PICKED UP MISSING MEN FROM THE STEAMER METAGAMA.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 30.—The two men who went adrift in the fog a week ago when the Italian steamer Clara Camus rammed the C. P. liner Metagama, were landed at Cape Broyle, Nfld., from the schooner Glacier to-day. When the collision occurred, a number of lifeboats were lowered to be ready for emergencies. The line fastening the boat to the Metagama parted and the two men, Thomas Reynolds, a passenger, and John Hall, a seaman, disappeared into the fog in their small craft. For six days they drifted about on the Atlantic ocean at the mercy of the wind, waves and tides until when forty five miles off Cape Race they were rescued by the Lunenburg schooner Bluenose. From this craft they were transferred to the Glacier on the Grand Banks and were brought to the Newfoundland coast.

The rescued men tell a tale of great hardship and suffering. During the week of their aimless and helpless drift they had to subsist on a few biscuits which were on board the lifeboat when it was launched from the Metagama. For four days they were absolutely without water. Of shelter they had none and they felt keenly the cold breezes of the Atlantic which drifted from continuously off the land. They had abandoned all hope of rescue when they were sighted by the crack Lunenburg schooner and when taken on board Hall was in the last stages of exhaustion while Reynolds was in very bad shape owing to the privations he had suffered and to a crushed hand which he suffered while helping to get the boat clear of the ship.

Hall is still too weak to be moved from Cape Broyle, but is rapidly recovering his strength. At the time of the collision the lifeboat was ordered lowered, as she swung down from the davits she was struck by the falls to help handle her. He got his hand caught in the hook of the boat and sustained rather serious injury. Hall was sent down to his assistance and before he could do more than relieve Reynolds the line fastening the boat to the ship snapped and the two men were carried away into the dense fog that then pallied the waters. The boatswain noticed their predicament and shouting them a warning look out for the propellers, the last words they heard, until they were taken on board the Bluenose. For a week the waters were scourged by local steamers, by American coastguard cutters, and by various other craft which were notified of the occurrence by wireless. The most careful search failed to find a trace of the missing men who were at length regarded as having perished. On Saturday last the steamer Coastworth reported having sighted off the Newfoundland coast a lifeboat bearing the name of her bows. As the boat was empty it was supposed that the two men had either fallen or been swept overboard.—Morning Chronicle.

TO-NIGHT'S BOXING TOURNAMENT—PRINCE OF WALES RINK.

Sporting fans and the public in general are reminded that a boxing tournament takes place in the Prince of Wales' Rink to-night, commencing at 8.30. This event is included in the Veterans' Week programme, and will be held under the full control of the G.W.V.A. A big night's fun will be in store for all fans because of the fact that our own local glove artists will be pitted against the 'Jack Tars' of H.M.S. Constance, in the various weights. Vandersteen, of the lightweight class and Davis, a heavyweight, are champions of the British North Atlantic Squadron. Phelan, our local champion will try conclusions against the former, while Ken Goodyear of Grand Falls, will be seen in action against the latter. Both these bouts promise to be real thrillers.

The programme carded for to-night is as follows:—Flyweight—A. B. Purdie (Constance) vs. J. Bishop (St. John's). Featherweight—A. B. Hawkins (Constance) vs. C. Brooklehurst (St. John's). R. Bunt (Wireless Station) vs. C. Stone (St. John's). Lightweight—Vandersteen (Constance) vs. J. Phelan (St. John's). Welterweight—A. B. Snow (Constance) vs. H. Parsons (St. John's). Middleweight—A. B. Dabs (Constance) vs. H. Diamond (St. John's). Heavyweight—A. B. Davis ("Light Heavy" Constance) vs. Ken Goodyear (Grand Falls). The medals won at the last championship boxing tournament will be presented to the winners at the close. Reserved seats are now on sale at Messrs. Gray and Goodland's at $2.00 and $6.00. General admission is 25c. Naval men and G.W.V.A. members will be admitted free.

NEWFOUNDLANDER IN BOSTON WRITES.

Dear Sir.—We went out to see the Olympic trials, and surely saw some running, broad and high jumping, pole vaulting, etc. The 100 yards was done in 9 3/5 seconds, the 220 in 21 flat, and the 440 in 51 seconds. There were several world records broken. The pole vault was only 13ft. 3 3/4 in. the high jump 6ft. 3 3/4 in. and the broad jump 25ft. 3 in.

We saw all the stars that are in America. Paddock didn't get much show; he was second in the 100, and last in the 220, a chap named Soles from New York winning both events. To my mind Paddock is too fat, he carries around too much surplus. Frank Huesey, Loren Marchison, and goodness knows who else, took part. Scholtz is about Freddie Phelan's size, and he surely can travel—last year he couldn't run at all. Jole Ray won the 880; he is some runner, although 38 years old. Gourdin won the broad jump, and Osborne and another chap tied in the high.

Unless the other nations have been keeping things very quiet, America will certainly clean up.

MEETING TO-NIGHT.

A meeting of the Regatta Committee will be held in the T.A. Armoury to-night, when several important matters in connection with the annual Derby Day will be discussed. The annual derby takes place this year on Wednesday, August 6th, and promises to eclipse all previous efforts. Several crews were out for a spin last night.

LAST NIGHT'S FOOTBALL.

City 2 Goals; Constance 1. Before a large attendance of fans and spectators, a splendid exhibition of football was witnessed at St. George's last night, between a City team and H.M.S. Constance, the result terminating in a win for the City by 2 goals to 1. The ship winning the toss, elected to defend the western goal. From the face-off play became very fast and found the leather moving rapidly all over the field. The ship's team were putting up an excellent exhibition of combination and head work, which for a time baffled the City players. The locals increased the pace, however, and making a determined attack on the ship's goal, Callahan sent in a hot one, scoring first blood, after 12 minutes of play. From this until the end of the period the ball was played rapidly from one end of the field to the other, a feature of the play being the stalwart defence set up by the Constance's backs.

Second Half.

Upon resumption of play the Navy tried hard to squallize, and Joyce, the City goalie, was called upon to clear the ball from danger. The Navy forwards combined very nicely during this half, but luck was always against them. The City halves were given a busy time in keeping the opposing forwards at bay. Drover and Thistle played well and were a tower of strength to the team. After twenty minutes of play the City forwards played the ball nicely down field when Phelan, Callahan, and Young each had a try but without success. A scrimmage soon followed and Young gaining control, availed of a good opening and sent the ball swiftly into the twines, over the goalie's head. The Navy players, quite undaunted, made several vigorous attacks in the City territory, and were soon awarded a penalty kick. This was nicely placed by Kyte, thus registering the Navy's first and only goal. During the balance of play the Navy played well, but all attempts of doing any further scoring proved futile. The game ended, City 2 goals, Constance 1.

The Navy team, considering they had very little practice, did very well. The Regatta game would be greatly welcomed by all fans.

TOO EASY.

Isn't it funny that the young girl who has a married man interested in her often seems to regard this conquest as a greater tribute to her prowess than the attentions of her unmarried friends.

When, as a matter of fact, it is far less of a conquest and far less of a tribute.

Perhaps some young woman who is intensely flattered by the attentions of her employer, a mature, successful, good looking man of 40 or 50, and who regards the evident attraction she has for this superior being as an evidence of her unusual charm will want to dispute those statements.

But let her analyze the thing for herself.

More Choosy.

Let her ask herself, first of all, if she feels sure that if he was looking about for a wife instead of for a pleasant young girl to have a mild and harmless affair (with the decent man never expects it to go beyond that, at first), he would have chosen her among all the women he knows.

A young man who is subconsciously looking for a wife is apt to be far more particular than a married man.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Alfred A. Winslow, United States Consul-General at St. John's, Nfld., will be retired from the Consular service July 1st, on pension as a result of the most sweeping reorganization since the Consular service came into being, according to an announcement made here to-day. The reorganization is at the express command of President Coolidge and closely follows passage of the Rogers Bill, some weeks ago. The Rogers Bill consolidates all the present services, below the rank of Minister, into a new organization known as the Foreign Service of the United States. The present classes—diplomatic secretaries, consular-generals, consuls, vice-consuls of career, consular assistants, interpreters and student interpreters—are given different status in the new services and the old titles and classes are abolished.

Consul-General, Winslow is being retired because he has reached the retirement age—65—and has 15 years' service behind him. He is 70 years old and receives a salary of $5,500. There are between 30 and 35 veteran members of the service being retired under the order and 15 of them are in the Canadian service.

In Commemoration

By H. W. QUINTON, Lieut. Late Royal Nfld. Regiment.

The years have rolled past since Armistice, silently, rapidly observing much of the once prominent spirit of patriotism and outward display of patriotism which marked the years of strife and we had almost forgotten. But the old Regimental spirit still lives, the boys of Ours scattered around the various hamlets of our island home have responded once again, this time in peaceful pursuit of the path of duty to pay homage to our Commander-in-Chief and to our Glorious Dead.

The many thousands who welcomed Earl Haig on Sunday morning, the vast procession which stood with bowed heads in awful solemnity through the unveiling ceremony have dispersed, but the remembrance lingers, reviving old longings, old feelings touching again the tender and sacred heart strings which time has been trying to heal with memories of those who passing we have just commemorated. Could we but have looked through the veil which separates the living from the dead, what should we have seen?

A host of men with set faces calm but determined pressing onward with eyes fixed on the goal of Sacrifice. For a brief moment they view the strong which surrounds the Memorial then they have passed on. Shall we forget? Can we forget? The last link of material commemoration has been forged, the National Memorial stands a silent witness to the part they played those Gallant Dead, and we are left spared to lift high the torch thrown to us as they passed on through the gateway of Supreme Sacrifice.

Amidst the whirl of traffic and the rush of business let each one of us ex-service man or civilian carry in our hearts a spark of that flame which has been almost allowed to smoulder among the care and worry of everyday life, and let our path of duty be clearly recognized. The war is over as far as armed forces are concerned, but the war still goes on, the struggle to maintain the high ideals for which "Ours" fought, the fostering of a spirit of brotherly love and a moral standard of living which every citizen of Greater Britain should fight to attain.

Shall we keep that torch burning? Shall we help those whose efforts are lax, whose enthusiasm may wane? There is only one way to do so. By recognizing the path of service and sacrifice and following it closely, remembering that our comrades have passed that way and are beckoning to us from the spirit world whither they have gone.

The honoured Kitchener's call still remains and is particularly applicable to the future as it was inspiring in the past. Does the call of duty find no response in you until reinforced, let us rather say unperceived by the call of Compulsion? We are face to face with grim reality now as then if the world is to be a fit element to contain the greaves and numerous materials to those who paid the price of devotion to duty, protection of homeland and liberty. The day of cheers and of national rejoicing has merged into another day, that of intense purpose to fight the cause of right without the inspiration which martial attitude brings, and we the members of the Old Guard must carry on with never relaxing zeal, steady and firm as worthy to still bear that high souled compliment "Better than the Best," no that when we meet our comrades in the after a while our heads shall be lifted with pride as having maintained the standard and obtained the reward of veterans in a lifelong struggle.

JAMES TOBIN.

At Tewkesbury, Mass., on Tuesday, there passed away, one well known in this city, in the person of Mr. James Tobin. Mr. Tobin was for six years employed as salesman for Messrs. Teasler & Co., and as such gained a reputation for efficiency that won for him the appreciation, both of his employees and the people with whom he did business. His health failing, he left here about eighteen months ago to undergo an operation for a serious ailment, but although he had three such operations performed they were unable to stay the progress of the malady. Left to mourn in the city is one brother, Mr. Lawrence Tobin, stevedore with Godden & Co., and one sister, Mrs. Crocker, in Maynard, Mass., are two brothers, Messrs. John and Eric Tobin, and three sisters; and all these the sympathy of their many friends will be extended.

Two on a Holiday

We strolled along the hill at eve
And gazed upon the placid bay,
We watched the fisher ply his nets,
We watched the white sails far away
We dreamed—but what's the use of
All lovers dream, too oft in vain,
Our reverie was shattered, alas,
By the shrill whistle of the train.
Too brief indeed the hours we snatch
From the hot city's dust to fly,
We don't possess a moment's ease,
We're poor as Job, my love and I,
Yet there is rapture in her sigh,
And gladness in her heart of gold,
We're walking hand in hand with joy,
For I the missing ticket hold!
No, sir, her hair it hasn't bobbed,
That freak of treason I detest;
Her fingers fell in native grace,
Whose charm becomes a maiden's best.
Her tresses caught the sunlights glow,
Was ruffled by the zephyrs mild,
And if I kissed her—well—I did!
And the bliss bay looked up and smiled!

WHEN AUTOMOBILE HITS POLE.
American papers just received to hand, give a graphic story as to how Miss Gertrude Murphy, of this city, met her death a few weeks ago, at Whitinsville, Mass. Miss Murphy, with a party of three, all of the Blue Eagle Inn Hotel, were out motoring, and while they were making the return trip from Providence, R.I. into Whitinsville, the automobile got beyond control of the driver in the Worcester County Road, opposite the North Uxbridge Baptist Church, in North Uxbridge, left the road, struck a tree, turned around and stove in the rear end against a telegraph pole, moving the pole 15 inches in the ground and breaking it off. Miss Murphy and Thomas McKaig who were riding in the back seat were crushed in the wreckage when the end of the automobile crashed into the pole. McKaig died of a fractured skull a few hours later, whilst Miss Murphy expired from internal injuries shortly after the accident. The couple in the front seat, Mrs. Sadie Durrell, and the driver, Robert Wilson, escaped with minor injuries.

"Why Worry,"

GUARANTEED GLOOM-CHASER.
Don't Miss it at the Nickel To-Night. "Why Worry," the title of Harold Lloyd's newest Pathedomey production to make the world a merrier place to live in, gives a splendid idea of just the type of picture it is.
When he made "Safety Last," Lloyd sought to produce a picture that would shake the spine with thrills and laughter. How successful he was in his efforts, picture followers know by this time. The picture has become established as the greatest thriller in screen annals.
In "Why Worry," Lloyd set out to make a light farce, with a little romance and plenty of action. Again he has triumphed, for "Why Worry" is a laugh from start to finish. The chances are that there are more "gag" laughs in this attraction than in any picture Lloyd ever made. There is little that is serious in the production. It is just what the comedian aimed for—a laugh picture.
The story is laid in a romantic atmosphere, with carefree scenes and dancing serenades, fighting henchmen and pompous generals. Throughout this farce runs a little vein of satire—a jibe here and there at the blood-curdling picture of South American revolutions.
There have been many pictures built around the custom and habit of our neighboring republics in tossing their Presidents out of office very frequently and very frequently, but none that contains the speed, the pep, the laughs and romance of "Why Worry." It remains at the Nickel Theatre until Saturday.
The musical adaptations to this wonderful comedy were put over in good style by the Nickel musicians, Prof. P. J. McCarthy and Jack Cronan.

Reception at Bannerman Park

Citizens' Address to Earl Haig.

Yesterday afternoon Field Marshal and Lady Haig held a reception in Bannerman Park for the purpose of meeting the citizens of Newfoundland. Earl Haig accompanied by Countess Haig, Colonel Talbot and Capt. Sidney Bennett, arrived at the Park shortly after 3.30 and were met by Col. Nangle and Capt. G. J. Whitty, from the G.W.V.A. The Mayor, City Councilors and City Clerk were present. The Mayor on behalf of the citizens of St. John's presented Earl Haig with a beautifully engrossed address of welcome enclosed in a silver casket bearing on its cover the Coat of Arms of the city and was surmounted by a caribou, the badge of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment. The illuminated part of the address was the work of Sister Mary Joseph Fox of the Academy of Mercy, Military Road. It bore the emblem of Earl Haig's native Scotland, the thistle, and was quite in keeping with Sister M. Joseph's former artistic achievements, notably that of the address presented by the city during the visit of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales some few years ago. The silver casket was the work of Mr. J. T. Lamb, Jeweller, Water St., reference to which was made last week in the Telegram. The following is the address presented to Earl Haig and his reply.

ADDRESS.
To Field Marshal Earl Haig, K.T., G.C.B., G.M., G.C.V.O., K.G.L.E.

May it please your Lordship: On behalf of the Citizens of St. John's and in their name, we, the Municipal Council, offer you the warmest and most sincere of welcomes to our shores and to this our city. Permit us also to express our sense of the honour and gracious favour you confer upon us in coming thus far to be present on this, to us, most memorable of occasions.

It is hard to realize that a decade has passed, almost to the day, since the outbreak of the terrible armed struggle which convulsed the whole civilized world and altered the course of history. When the call sounded, not by nature warlike and almost unskilled in military arts, were not the last to spring to arms. Our sailors, who already formed a unit of the service as a Naval Reserve, entered at once into the conflict and on many occasions, in various theatres of war, played a part upon which we feel we can justly look back with pride. And while you, Sir, as one of the outstanding figures of the First Expeditionary Force, whom we prefer to call by their immortal name of the Old Contemptibles, were fighting at Mons, on the Aisne, and in Flanders, that most unequal but most glorious of battles, our own volunteer Regiment was already in the training camp, fitting itself for the part it was so soon destined to play.

Thenceforth, the record of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment is written and can be traced in names that are now historic—first in far-off Gallipoli and Egypt, later in France at Beaumont Hamel, Guedecourt, Monchy-le-Preux and Cambrai, and in Belgium in the historic Ypres Salient. To us these names and others are household words; to you they are, we know, equally familiar and fraught with the same mingled associations of pride and sorrow. As often as its ranks were thinned, so often, as with many another brave regiment, they were filled again, and it returned to the line, where it was proudly found when the final glorious victory under your distinguished leadership, was at length achieved.

Reference should also be made to our Mercantile Marine who manped small fishing schooners—men and the gauntlet in submarine areas, and to our Forestry Corps—men unit for active service who did their part in your own native Scotland.

It is fitting that the Monument which will perpetuate the memory of Newfoundland's brave sons should stand in her Capital City on the historic spot where Sir Humphrey Gilbert planted the first British Flag Overseas; it is more than fitting—it is our good fortune and a matter of grateful pride to us—that the act of unveiling and dedicating it was performed by the first soldier of the Empire, under whom so many of them served.

We trust that the short time you and Lady Haig are able to spend among us will be pleasantly passed, and may we presume to ask, Sir, that upon your return you will convey to his Majesty, whom you have the honour to serve, an expression of the abiding loyalty and devotion of the people of his Most Ancient Colony, and to his people, where opportunity offers, an assurance of the continuing feeling of comradeship and affection which we have for them and which was so greatly strengthened and deepened during the years of a common service and a common sacrifice.

TASKER COOK, Mayor.

EARL HAIG'S REPLY.
Most Worshipful Mayor, members of the Municipal Council and Citizens of St. John's.

It is most kind of you, members of the Municipal Council, to come here to-day and to present me with this most beautiful address. I heartily thank you for it and I beg to express to you, Worshipful Mayor, and through you, to all the citizens of St. John's, my sincere appreciation of the very warm and the whole-hearted welcome which has been extended to my wife and myself by all classes ever since we landed on your shores. The very generous and the flattering terms of your address have touched me greatly, and I am proud to be the recipient of it because I feel that in thus honouring me you are also paying tribute to the gallant men whom I was privileged to command during the long years of the Great War, and whose devoted services to King and Country can never adequately be rewarded. I deeply appreciate all that you have said, and the manner in which your words have been received by those present.

It is a great pleasure to me to be here in Newfoundland and to be given the opportunity to meet some of the gallant officers and men you sent over to Europe to serve in the Army. I was privileged to command. If it is a long way for me to come, it is no further than was the journey they took when they came over to help us to win the war; and though we were very glad indeed to see them, and have them with us, I fear that their experiences were far less enjoyable than you have made this visit of mine.

Yet I do not believe that any of the men you sent, not even those who made the supreme sacrifice, if they could speak to us now, would say that they regret the decision they took when they left all and risked all to fight the Empire's battles. They were about to fight for something bigger than any one part of the Empire, bigger perhaps than the Empire itself, and in their going and all through the long struggle which followed they were strengthened by the conviction that their cause was just.

Upon us now who have survived the war rests a great responsibility. We have to see that a proper use is made of the victory we have won, and that the lives of our own people—and so far as possible the lives of all peoples—are ultimately the better and the happier for the triumph of the cause for which we fought.

It is no easy task, and the picture of the world to-day is not in all its details a pleasant or an encouraging one. Yet it is far pleasanter and more encouraging than the picture would have been for us and other free democracies if victory had gone to the other side. We cannot write off in a year or even in a decade the whole costs of so mighty a conflict as that in which, but a few short years ago, half the world was engaged. But victory has given us our chance, if we will use it; and it is my hope and belief that to us members of the British Empire, who went to war reluctantly, yet went deliberately and of conviction for the sake of a great principle, is offered before all other peoples the opportunity to carry the world a real step forward towards liberty and lasting peace.

There is no influence in the world to-day more potent for peace, more firmly pledged to the ideal of justice and goodwill among men and nations, than is the mighty Empire to which we all belong. That influence, however, is only powerful so long as mutual trust, good understanding and affection is preserved among the commonwealth of nations of which that Empire is to-day composed. We can only serve ourselves and the world to the full extent of the opportunity now presented to us if we remain in the big things of life a united people with a single purpose, as we were in the days of the Great War.

That is why I am so anxious to maintain, first among ex-service men but not among them only, that spirit of true comradeship, and brotherhood which the war did indeed create, but to which the war gave open expression and a new consciousness and strength.

Communities, even though of the same blood and possessed of the same ideals, cannot grow up through the years on far-severed continents, parted by width of oceans, without developing their own special characteristics and individualities. Even in our small islands at home, centuries of peace and intercourse have not broken down altogether differences of race and origin.

Let me illustrate what I mean. A man dying left a will in which he gave legacies to three friends—an Englishman, an Irishman and a Scot—on condition that they each of them put £5 in his coffin to be buried with him. The Englishman, after the manner of his kind, put in a £5 note. The Irishman put in another, which he had thoughtfully borrowed from the Englishman. The Scot took out both £5 notes, and put in a cheque for £5 payable to bearer.

To the Scot's great surprise, he heard two days later that his cheque had been presented and cashed. He had forgotten that the undertaker was a Welshman.

So you see, how, even when there is no great natural barrier between the free intercourse of different peoples, yet national characteristics persist. Similarly, Englishman and Newfoundlanders, Scot and Canadian, Canadian and Australian, each have developed and are developing characteristics of their own, born of their special environment and mode of life. That is inevitable; but in these days of quick communications and wide commercial intercourse there is no need of such differences to be allowed to widen into misunderstanding. National characteristics, when they are such as mark the several branches of the Anglo-Saxon race, are things of which to be proud. But though we cherish them—even to the point of being able to tell stories against ourselves—let us never forget the greater fundamental similarities which unite us all to-day, and I pray will continue to hold us together in mutual sympathy and understanding for all time to come.

We have things in common which no period of separation can altogether overcome. It is probable that we are most of us sentimental, but we are few of us demonstrative. We give rein to our emotions only on rare occasion and under uncommon stress, and the "hands across the ocean" tune can easily be overplayed. I do not want to dwell on it too much to-day, though to me this is indeed a rare occasion. But without fuss and without display it is open for each one of us, in our daily life and intercourse with our fellows, to seize every opportunity that presents itself to strengthen our common ties of material interest and moral understanding, and to adopt towards those occasional hitches and mistakes, which must occur in the working out of this great experiment which is the British Empire, a tolerant and reasonable calm.

We have to help us our age-long and traditional loyalty to the throne, and to those free institutions which wise and far seeing monarchs have known how to foster and encourage. We have our several loyalties to the lands where we were born, or in which we have made our homes. And embracing all and in harmony with all we have our loyalty to our common inheritance, the Empire which is indeed less "ours" than "ourselves."

If, having come so far, I may be permitted to give you a message, it is that we should be true to ourselves; realizing all that that means, and that we are each individual of us part of a great whole which stretches far beyond the confines of our particular homelands, yet if it prosper will bring prosperity to each constituent part and if it fall will drag down each part with it.

When I look around me, when I think of the way in which the ex-service men of Newfoundland have come together to greet through me their old comrades of the Armies I commanded, when I realize that the spirit which inspired them in 1914 and in the long years of war still lives among them and among those whom they left to join the colours, I have no fear of failure. It is more than a welcome which you have given me. You have given me encouragement and a strengthened faith which I shall carry home to the ex-service men of the British Legion to inspire them in their turn, as you have heartened and encouraged me.

Following the reception Field-Marshal and Countess Haig returned to Government House and as they left the Park they were loudly cheered by the large gathering present.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

July 3rd.—The weather still hot, and is indeed very fortunate that it is so, since it has added to much to the success of my lord Haig, his visit. But strange to see how few do wear straw hats, and seems how the fashion is not now for the wearing of them as once it was. Albeit they may become more popular as the season advances. This morning, to visit H.M.S. Constance, and much pleasant discourse with the officers in the ward room. And, indeed, nowhere are there to be found jollier fellows than the officers of H.M. Navy. The Constance a much smaller cruiser than was the Raleigh, which I did know well, being among the last that did dine on her before she was wrecked, and is now two years gone almost. In fact, I did take the last photograph of her before she was lost, and is a thing I value most highly. To Mr. Tooton's store, there to get some photographs of the Haig celebration, and find him mighty busy, he doing a thriving trade and has many fine pictures. In one of these, with which he did present me, was a good likeness of myself, which even my wife did think well of. By despatches out of London, news of the Labour Cabal, they defeated a seventh time, and yet, show no thought of resigning, and do intend to keep the Government so long as is possible for them to do so.

But Lord, what to make of the Whigs, I do not know, since for reasons best known to themselves, they do maintain the Socialist in power. This day polling day in Harbor Grace, in the bye election. Little interest, however, in the contest, and I do hear none to talk of it. I learn to-night how the illiterate vote goes in favor of Bennett and Russell, and is the best possible sign of their success. My wife now recovered of her indisposition. So much so indeed, that she goes abroad this night to play at bridge, and needs must I wait up, till night two of the clock for her return, and was constrained to curse the wretch mightily for her silliness. Forey helps me beguile the time of waiting, and talks of the strange orders which the American naval officers give their men. It seems how they do say for "form tours," from two into four—Get. And "Slope Arms" is in their parlance "guns on shoulders—put." This the strangest thing, and cannot, methinks, make for smartness in their drill.

TAKING UP TRAPS.—According to a report from Bonne Bay the fishery is very poor, and the men are taking up their traps. The highest catch does not exceed forty quintals.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE
Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and am taking it now for the Change of Life and my troubles, and receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my letter-box and read it carefully, and that is how I came to take the Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to my friends and relatives."—Mrs. EUGENIE MANN, 2032 Palmetto St., Ridgewood, Brooklyn, N. Y.

For the woman suffering from nervous troubles causing sleeplessness, headache, hysteria, "the blues," Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine. For the woman of middle age who is passing through the trials of that period, it can be depended upon to relieve the troubles common at that time.

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of nearly fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Engemann.

You should give it a fair trial now.

Methodist Conference

MONDAY, June 30th.

Dr. Liddy addressed the Conference. About 10 per cent of any English-speaking country have the intellectual ability to benefit by a university education. About one per cent take such a training. Probably less than that go from Newfoundland where there must be an unusual number of "mute inglorious Miltons." The glory of Scotland was that the humblest homes of that land demanded that there should be education. Mr. Allison last year introduced the practice of intelligence tests for every new student. The results have been very great in enabling the faculty in keeping track of the work of individuals. This is the first instance in Canada as is also the new four-year course of Bachelor of Science in Household Science. Mr. Allison will hold her first Summer Session this year commencing July 6th. Dr. Liddy for a number of years has been the leader of a College Men's Bible Class. There as in all life the emphasis has been and must be laid on conduct rather than theological theory.

Sometimes ago a skilful driver lost his ball bearings from two wheels the other side of Topsail. He came to the city without any assistance whatever and without injury to the car. The secret was that every mile or so he replaced the space with hard grease. That is something of the function of a good presiding officer. President Broughton is an expert in this direction not because he is trained in the rules of order, but because he uses grease. After all the sounds of grease and grace are so much alike that maybe there is more than a school boy derivation in the suggestion.

A conference was suggested that one of those who takes quite a part in the debates should be arrested for arson. More seriously, there is no doubt that the men criticize each other sharply. On the other hand there is equally little doubt that it is a family affair and that the "brother" of address is also the brother of heart. In fact this is so real that sometimes there is a shade of danger of heart. In fact this is so real that sometimes there is a shade of danger of too great excess being made when final decisions have to be made.

Rev. Walter Milson introduced his remarks with a humorous story of a Newfoundland reporter whose use of a big word in the wrong place made the speaker out to be of a most homely appearance. The reporter once knew a child clown of a traveling circus who was the greatly loved elder of a sister church. His case was a fine instance of the union of true humour and real piety. So the Conference laughed and shouted and alternately at brief intervals.

He had heard a lot of talk about the Government control of liquor. All that was meant by Government Control was Government Sale. The infamous business can never be controlled. The only way to cut off the tail of the liquor dog is right behind the ears.

Gambling will damn a man as wholly and as quickly as liquor. Gambling includes lotteries. Gambling strips the shoes from children's feet no matter if it be on the floor of a dock, the parlor of a society woman or of a church bazaar.

"Nevertheless nothing in the above clauses shall be construed as applying to any charitable or religious purpose."

This is paragraph 42 section 7 of the Canadian Law. It's the joker so-called.

EVENING.

The Ordination service must always be the chief service of a Methodist Conference. When it ceases to attract the largest audience spiritual interests will be on the down grade. There were no signs of any such decadence on Monday evening. The crowd was good. The singing went with a swing. Eight senior men occupied the pulpit.

Mr. Lester Burry, B.A., was first called upon to state his experience. A Christian home at Greenspond, and the impression left by Messrs. E. Broughton and E. C. French, while they were on that Circuit. Later while working in St. John's and attending Wesley Church he made a clear decision to serve God and from that was rapidly pushed into the work.

Mr. Uriah Laité dated his choice to a walk across Random Island with Rev. A. S. Adams. Mr. William Soper was his Sunday School teacher in that early day and helped to make him what he was, as did Messrs. Newman and Dotchon, former Ministers under whom he sat.

Mr. Maxwell Parsons felt that all the currents of his life flowed toward the moment of his address. A widowed mother's prayers were answered in the little school house at Flatrock under the preaching of Rev. Ezra Broughton. A great critical time came in St. John's city, in George Street Sunday School, under the teaching of Mr. C. P. Ayre.

Mr. Jesse Reynolds, M.A., was the last of the four splendid candidates. His Sunday School teacher made a great impression by laying his hand upon his head and saying, "I hope you will be a Christian Minister." His day school teacher helped him to decide to unite with the Church. In the Church Rev. George Fraser moved him very powerfully even when very young.

These men in their order might be said to be exemplifications of the spirit of common sense, idealism, unction and philosophy. Specialists in each of these is needed that the work of the perfecting of the Saints may go on.

Question by question these men then answered individually the questions asked, upon which the congregation joined in the impressive responsive prayer, "Come Holy Ghost our Souls inspire" which would have been infinitely more impressive if the great audience present had more generally joined therein.

Those, in addition to the officers, who take part in each laying on of hands are chosen by the candidates. In one case it was pathetic to see a veteran of a (idently feeble steps walking slowly back to his seat having laid his hands upon a youth whom he had influenced and was now to fill the veteran's place.

The Methodist Church needs no such protection. All these matters would be bettered if only the revival fires burned. The only thing that makes a worth-while ministry is the joy of seeing men and women brought to Christ. Men are not brought to Christ by Social Service but are brought into Social Service by coming to Christ.

Three young men who arrived by the Schem to take up work in this Conference—Messrs. Young, Taylor and Peacock—were introduced.

AFTERNOON.

The Orphanage report showed probably the best condition of affairs for many years. A credit balance in the Finance Department, improved grounds, reorganization of internal management and widely increased and quickened interest of the Board's constituency, were all noted with delight. The officers were unanimously re-elected, Dr. Robinson, Mr. Philip Hudson and Mr. J. C. Pratt.

The Social Service Fund amounted to some $415.00, which is less than last year, but that fund was greatly swelled last year by the visit of Dr. Goodwin, so that the fund stands about normal.

Very kindly resolutions were passed expressing the pleasure of the Conference at the visits of Messrs. Stronhard, Liddy, Milson and Dr. Heartz. The latter in reply made a short, but as usual fiery response, his voice ringing across the church like a great clarion. The well known singer, Earle Spicer, was also a visitor at Conference, greeting a dozen of his old friends from Mount Allison.

The charge was given by the ex-President, Rev. Sidney Bennett, an unusually fine specimen of physical manhood. His faith is as simple and forthright as his countenance. His first sentence "We are in need of men—men who will give honest attention to the finances of our country. We need men to sit down by the side of childhood and with its friendships. Above all the Church needs men. No Church can make Ministers. Like their Master it must be said of every Minister, "My servant whom I have chosen."

The patriarchs colored the light that shone through them, but Jesus was the very effulgence of the Father's glory. The business of the Minister is to continue the revealing of the light. In many cases that light will have to be carried to the very depths of men's lives and that is only to be done by getting into the homes of the people and being willing at the call of every duty. Jesus could not save others but by spending himself, neither can you.

The next Conference is to be held in Carbonear. The sum of $100 was pledged towards a joint scheme with N. S. and N. B. Conferences for the production of a history of Maritime Methodism covering the past fifty years. Elliston is to give every third Sunday from once a week to Newman's Cove, from Sept. 1 to May 1. Carmansville is to give Alder Harbour a monthly service. Happy Adventure is transferred from Deer Island to Glovertown. As the brethren were "not able to understand French" the new Chairman (Mr. French, of Burn) was excused from the speech generally demanded at such times. Mr. Wilson was re-appointed Hospital visitor. The minutes were then signed, and the Conference for 1924 closed with singing and prayer. —C.H.J.

LIFE.
Life is a song and a jest,
A task and a duty done,
A babe at his mother's breast,
A man with his battles won.
A dream and a touch of care,
A tear and a passing smile,
Sunrise and a sunset fair,
And a journey, mile by mile.
To-day it is bright with peace,
To-morrow the clouds are grey,
The jests and the laughter cease,
And the good things go away.
Life is a changing thing
As the future years unfold,
With the joys and the acries they bring,
So new and yet oh, so old!

Mrs. Winttingham, M.P., on Man-Like Woman

"The Victorian Age was an age of bondage which bequeathed to modern women was allowed to express themselves as individuals, and it was taken for granted that every woman was necessarily born a cook, or more than every man was born a racketeer.
"Unfortunately, along with that freedom went the idea that it was a little unfashionable to know anything about housework—to sew, cook, or look after the home—and that the right thing for women to do was to go into the world and become man-like.
"Mrs. Winttingham at a recent meeting of the Association of Teachers of Domestic Subjects.
"The greatest calling for a woman, she said, was to be a home-maker and to make the best use of her home.
"Twenty years ago, when cookery was introduced into a school with which she was associated, one child told the teacher that she was not to learn to cook because her mother kept a servant.
"Thank goodness that day was gone and they now recognized that the foundation of the national life is the home."

THE GUNMAN.
The gunman shoots with wondrous skill; he draws his gat and shoots to kill; for any small excuse he'll drill a stranger thro' the head; through movie films and books he goes, exterminating all his foes and leaves behind, in rows and rows, his harvest of the dead. My nephews, young and tender swains, behold this hero of the films as he shoots people through the brains, and think him something else; they see him in the films, gads, and read about him in the books, and death or swift design keeps me talking all the time to the end his course of crime will bring him to the pen; his fate will be to see, and haply on the gallows-tree he'll have to swing, while three crows loudly and again, my nephews yawn, and still I talk till it's nearly twelve o'clock; a heavy bunch are those who walk the paths of sin; a beastly villain is the one who grows proficient with a gun, and thinks it is a sort of thing it is to tool a pin behind a mule that furnish carnage for corpses in a stack; that of here I detest who makes the law hold his quest, who's only ending at his best when deadly lions crack.
