The boys who entered the room went there to perform the ordinary duties of bell-ringers. The bell-rope was in that room. They did not, he supposed, act in any other way than usual. When he let Flora out she appeared very cheerful and did not seem to mind being locked up. He had never locked up any other of his girls. He was emphatically positive that he did not bruise her hands in any way. Flora was the most refractory child in the school. She was impulsive and full of animal energy. She often grew hysterical and disturbed the whole school by her crying. One day she cried for an hour. Mr. Clarke then asserted that the locking-up punishment was in vogue in the Collegiate institute, the Normal school, and quoted acouple of authorities to show that it was preferable to corporal punishment. He was sure he had inflicted no physical pain on the girl.

Inspector Hughes having made a statement that the regulation school strap would not leave any marks on even the softest hand for any length of time, he found plenty of disbelievers around the table. The conversation was then turned on straps and other instruments of school torture, and half an hour was spent in personal reminiscences. After further irrelevant discussion Dr. McConnell and Clarke were requested to withdraw. The committee commenced to show their hands in an undertone. Mr. Lee was positively opposed to locking up little school girls. So was Dr. Ogden. Mr. Crombie said it was a very frivolous charge. Mr. Bell was half-and-half. Also Mr. Johnston and Mr. Roden.

Your committee beg to report that it has investigated the charges made by Dr. McConneil against Harold C Clarke, head master of the Mabel street school, of having unduly puni-hed his little daughter by slapping her severely on the hands and by locking her up in a room alone. Your committee heard the evidence of Dr. McConneil and his daughter and Mr Clarke, and after the most careful consideration of the matter it was clearly ascertained: 1st, That the teacher admitted having slapped the child once on the left hand and twice on the other. He also admitted that he shut her up in a room for from 10 to 20 minutes in the morning and lock of her up for 32 minutes in the afternoon because he wished to punish her for disobedience, an because no work could be done in the room while she was vigorously crying. 2d, While regretting that the child was placed in solitary confinement, still your committee does not think that the master did not do so for any other reason than for a good effect on the school. Still your committee deel that it wou'd have been preferable if he had exercised his authority and suspended her, believing that this course would have produced better results by having the inspector deal with the case, which seems to have been of an exceptionable nature.

One Brander, a clerk in the employ of Habson & Co., was the first witness called. He said his employers carried on an employment agency in the regular way. Habson was then put in the box and denied in toto the allegations in The World.

Now it was Hanson & Co., "though Hanson was the only partner. There were generally four parties in these labor deals: the New York labor bureau that sent the laborers on, the Toronto firm that received them and the contractors that hired them. The New York labor agency, Henry Zander & Co., and the Toronto labor agency got percentages from the railway companies on the fares, and the contractors paid them also. Hanson decined to say what were the percentages he got from the railway.

Mr. Maclean pressed Hanson to $2000.

Hanson was next put on his trial harged with defrauding an Irish laborer amed Wm. Fulton out of $3 50. On Oct.

He then walked to the end of the line at the junction, asked every "sub" for work, but could get none. He was compelled to walk back to Toronto and beg bread from the farmers to keep himself alive. He had a bitrer experience. Mr. Fenton said he would have to prove that Brander had no interest in the firm of Hanson & Co. A person might be an innocent agent for a guilty principal. Not Parallel Cases

A few days ago we ventured to mai tain this contention: that whatever demand there is for labor in Canada is mostly created by the people of this country, and that they have the best right to the labor, or the demand for it, thus created. We, by our enterprise, create a demand for labor, the Chinese, who in no way help to create such a demand, come in and want a share of what we have created. We say they have no right to it whatever. If they want to work on railways, let them build these in their own country, where railways are much required, and where, but for native fanaticism, they would soon be built too. On which the Montreal Herald

Suppose the Chinese in China should take similar ground in reference to the Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotchmen and Frenchmen who go to China. Suppose they were to say. "These Europeans are doing nothing to encourage our domestic institutions and industries. They will not eat mice, or rats, or birds mests. They care little for our rice. They won't us the same clothing we do. All they use of what we produce is tea. Nearly everything they consume they bring from abroad. They spend little here. They won't marry our women. They don't intend to remain; all they want is to make money out of us and then go elsewhere and spend it and die. Now we require for our ewn people the civilization we have created; we want for our own people the foreigners will not assimilate with us let us boot them out." This would be a parallel argument to that of the World's, one quite as reasonable and convincing.

We reply that the two cases are not parallel. Who are the classes of people, f our own race, that go to China, and what do they go for? Here let us leave out missionaries, whose calling takes them out of the sphere of commercial calculations. We need not include sailors either, who stay in port only while their ship does. Englishmen and Americans, who go to China and stay there any time to speak of, all belong to the com mercial class-merchants, clerks, and assistants in various capacities. Not any Chinaman, but, owing to the needs of to many a native, and at better wages than he is accustomed to. The foreign colony in China-British, continental European and American altogether-does as matter of fact spend millions money there every year, diffusing trade, and profits, and work, and wages all around. Besides employing or the spot Chinese labor to a large aggregate, British and Americans in China buy annually from the Chinese a great deal more than they sell to the latter-though we cannot just now say how the India opiun trade would affect the balance, as far as the British empire is concerned. But nothing like this is done by the Chinese who enter either Canada or the United

If the Chinese came here as merchant only, bringing money with them, spending it here, and creating a demand for more labor-then they would be doing what the English and the Americans do in China But what they do is the very reverse they come here to take labor and wages which our own people reed and ought to have. The two cases are not parallel; but are wide are the poles asunder. When English or American laborers invade Chin by thousands, and take work from the na tives, then the Herald's argument may be in order. To say that Europeans and Americans spend little in China is nonsense. They spend millions there, and al in hard cash, too. British merchants and their aids go to China; we are perfectly willing that Chinese of the same clas should come here, as buyers of our wares, as our people buy Chinese merchandise there. Surely the Herald must see that its presumed parallel does not hold good.

The Grand Trunk Half-Yearly Meeting The Grand Trunk has of late had the experience of some sharp criticism from London financial journals. Nothing of the kind, however, turned up at the recent half-yearly meeting on Oct. 23, reports of which are just to hand by mail. The coloquial expression, "everything is lovely and the goose hangs high," would have been rather out of place, seeing that the able chairman had all he could do to present the adverse circumstances of the pres ent in anything like a favorable light for monly well too, which shows Sir Henry Tyler is just the man for chairman of the Grand Trunk. There was nobody to say nay, and the foggling out of the expected cheers and laughter.

The falling off in receipts caused by reduced freight rates had been enormous Grain rates from Chicago to New York, before from 25 to 30 cents, had come down to 15 cents, and the result was that the Grand Trunk was £190,000 sterling worse off on the half year than it would have been had the old rates been obtained co the business done. I was discussing Mr. Hickson in a friendly manner with one of the ministers of Canada—a minister, I am bound to say, not altogether friendly to the Grand Trunk interest; but he said, "You may take it, Lord Claude, that you could not get a man who fights harder and more strongly and better for the Grand Trunk interest than Mr. Hickson; but I must do him this credit, that he always fights like a gent leman."

All which will be most fully subscribed to in Canada. It is Mr. Hickson's business to do the best he can for the Grand Trunk, and for Grand Trunk interests he fights well.

English Party Politics. The British parliament is almost rivaling the French chamber of deputies in the diersity and multiplicity of its parties. There are, first of all, the ordinary or oderate liberals or conservatives, folowers of Gladstone and Salisbury. There are the extremes of each of these, followers of Chamberlain and Churchill. And to these must be added the Irish home rulers. What with the franchise bill, the edistribution scheme, the Gordon relief expedition, the action of the lords on the arst mentioned, and the question of the reform of the house of lords, the ultimate result of these five different influential parties is curious to consider.

The franchise bill is in all probability safe till it reaches the lords. Then will come in the disturbing influence of the extreme radicals, who no doubt will make a reform of that hereditary body hinge upon one of these takes a day's work from the results of any want of harmony. The home rulers, not much caring what the retheir superior style of living, they give work sults of any particular measura may be, will in all likelihood throw in their vote with the extreme radicals—a policy most conducive to bringing about a general disturbance of parties. The Gordon difficulty—if that gallant general is still safe at Khartoum—will hardly be made a party question; nevertheless, if the relief expedition turns out unsuccessful, the Gladstone government must be prepared to hear some severe criticisms.

Still another fallacy on the Chinese question is that of saying that these foreigners must be allowed to come in until the railway is completed. But there are will in all likelihood throw in their vote sewing machine inventor, alleg he railway is completed. But there are already in British Columbia, to-day, more Chinese than the country can employ. As far as the railway is concerned, the time when we need to import no more Chinese has come already; and it is simply dodging the issue to talk about what is now past as if it were something still to come, and in

The epidemic of student outbreaks is sweeping the land. At King's college, Windsor, N.S., they have been burning the president in effigy and acting riotously in other respects. At the provincial university of New Brunswick they have been the means of suspending instruction in all the classes. In Toronto, what with cannon explosions and street fights with police, they are gaining rotoriety.

Communications have passed between the Japanese steamship company and Canada and the Canadian Pacific railway respecting the establishment of a line of steamers between Japan, China and British Columbia. The Japanese president wrote to Sir John Macdonald, who turned the letter over to President Stephen, by whom negotiations were opened with the Japanese company. If the line is established it is said that the route to Liverpool or London from Japan and China via the Canadian Pacific route will be about ten days shorter than any other route.

"A Christian Reader," in a letter to the Mail, understands religious freedom in this land to mean "that men and institutions may be, without interference from the 'powers that be,' unchristian or atheistical." We think that the majority of "A Christian Reader's" readers will think this the narrowest meaning that can be put upon the term religious freedom. Surely it may also mean that an institution may be so conducted that its teachings will not hurt the susceptibilities of any class of christians or theists. That because it is religiously free, therefore it is atheistical

Medical science will not let anything alone in these days. We have been taught the atiology of "lawn tennis elbow" and "lawn tennis wrist;" now we are treated to discourses on the maladies incurred by bicycle riding. The Canadian Practitioner for November tells of obscure nervous and other diseases which may be traced to an immoderate use of the "bike."

To the Editor of The World. SIR: Your assumption that the Scott act was defeated in Prince Edward county "probably by reason of the barley argument" is not correct. Little or no argu petition, the Canadian competition having been extinguished, to the sorrow of this province of Ontario, let us add.

Lord Claude Hamilton gave his testimony as to the good condition of the line throughout, from recent personal observation. He thought Mr. Hickson the right man in the right place, and said:

I was discussing Mr. Hickson in a friendly in 1871 by an immense majority, but was in 1871 by an immense majority, but was repealed as soon as possible by a disgusted and disappointed people. It proved to be an abomination and a fraud; under its reime drunkenness increased, and vice and mmorality in an equal ratio. The people had no assurance that these pernicious results would not be repeated under the Scott act, and they rejected it at the polis. voting, or the majority (125) would have peen much larger.

THE THIMBLE.

From the Dorcas Me The thimble is a Dutch invention that vas first brought to England in 1695 by one John Lofting, who began its manufacture at Islington, near London, gaining ereby both honor and profit. Its name was derived from the words thumb and bell, being for a long time called thumble, and only lately thimble. Old records say that thimbles were first worn on the thumbs, but we can scarcely conceive how merly they were made of brass and iron only, but of late years steel, silver, gold, horn, ivory, and even pearl and glass have all been used for making thimbles. I saw some very beautiful ones in China, that were exquisitely carved, of pearl, and bound with gold, and the end also of gold. These pearl thimbles are quite as costly Usually there is a pearl sheath for the scissors, and a dainty needlebook of pearl edged with gold to accompany the thimble, and the whole is inclosed in a neat little pocketcase shaped like a book and and bound in satin and pearl.

A thimble owned by a queen consort of Siam is shaped like a lotus bud, this being the royal flower of that country, and almost everything about the court bearing, in a greater or less degree, some impress of the lotus. This thimble is of gold, thickly studded with diamonds, that are so arranged as to form the lady's name and the date of her marriage. It was a bridal gift from the king, who, having seen the English and American ladies at his court using thimbles, took this method of introducing them among his own people.

In Naples, very protty thimbles composed of lava from Mount Vesuvius are occasionally sold, but rather as curiosities than for real utility, being, from the extreme brittleness of the lava, very easily broken. I have heard also of thimbles broken. I have heard also of talimotes made of asphaltum from the Dead sea, and of one composed of a fragment of the old elm tree at Cambridge, Mass., under which General Washington stood when taking command of the United States army in July, 1775; but I do not suppose that any of these were intended to be used in sew-

But in Paris the French have a way of their own, quite different from ours, for making gold thimbles that are said to be much more durable than those made in the usual way. Pieces of very thin sheetiron are cut into discs of about two inches diameter. These, after being heated to redness, are stuck by means of a punch into a succession of holes of gradually increasing depth, to give the proper shape. The thimble is then trimmed, polished and indented around its outer surface with tiny holes. It is next converted into steel by a process called cementation, then tempered, scoured pletes the operation and turns cut a very beautiful thimbie that will last for years. Catarrh-A New Treatment. has been achieved in modern science has bee sained by the Dixon treatment for catar Out of 2000 patients treated during the pas six months, fully ninety per cent, have be cured of this stubborn malady. This is no is months, the hour malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent, of the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are constitued, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissues, Mr. Dixon at once adepted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished, the catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. At. DiXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.—Montreal Star. 26 its bank stood an old saw-mill and race-way.

The mill had long since ceased to be used, for the great forest of oak and maple and beech which once covered the hill-side had long since vanished away beneath the ax of the sturdy woodsman.

Slowly the eyes of Hugh Campbell turned from the scene of beauty before him till they rested on the face of the woman beside him.

"How beautiful!" he thought, and indeed she was beautiful. A tender light beamed in her great, soft hazel eyes as deed she was beautiful. A tender light beamed in her great, soft hazel eyes as they wandered over the landscape, resting longest on the old farm-house. Sighing sadly, she turned her liquid orbs full upon her companion's manly face. A sad look was in their brown depths. Her ripe lips parted, displaying a set of pearly teeth, and she said in a low, sweet voice.

"Hugh, I must leave the dear old place to morrow. I go early in the morning."
"What, so soon, Miriam?" he said, quickly, almost sharply. "It is such a little while since you have been with us. I thought you were here for the summer.

thought you were here for the summer. Why go so soon?"

"You are mistaken, Hugh," she replied; "I have been here now far beyond the time I originally intended to stay, and I received a letter from mamma to-day, making it imperative that I should return home immediately, for she starts for Saratoga next week, and as my wardrobe remains to be put in order yet, I have determined to return to-morrow. Sadness fills my heart to-night, as I think how near is my parting from this quiet place, and the dear old folks in the house, and from you Hugh."

And the tender brown eyes drooped, and the scarlet lip quivered, as she ceased speaking.

A bright, red spot burned in the centre of Hug 's otherwise pale cheeks, and a passionate love-light gleamed in his dark eyes, as seizing the little soft hand that lay in her lap, he fleaned over till his breath fanned her peachy cheek, and said in a rapid but suppressed voice:

"Miriam, I am about to say that which I had thought never to utter, or at least not for years yet; but as I look into your lovely eyes, and know that we must soon part the feeling that I had hoped to crush within me rises stronger than my will, and I must speak. I love you, Miriam, with all the passionate ardor of my strong nature, I worship you. Will you be my wife? I do not ask it now; but will you promise me your heart and hand, when, sometime in the future, I come to claim them," and he breathlessly awaited the answer

This she said as only a woman can say such things, her manner adding an indescribable force to the words.

"No, Hugh," she continued, a slight "No, Hugh," she continued, a slight change in her tone and manner. "It can never be what you ask—your wife, and it will be best for you to drop the thought immediately. But——" and a gentleness took the place of the look of a moment before together with a sort of pitying expression to think that he should be so foolish as to even dream of such a possibility. There was no sorrow in that countenance for the cutting pain her words inflicted upon the noble heart whose love she knew she had exerted all her arts to attain. It was in midsummer; the heightof the glorious harvest time. A great, round, mellow moon hung in the deep, blue vault of heaver, shedding its soft, silvery light on land and water.

It was New Year's eve, and a grand It was New Year's eve, and a grand party was to be given at one of the fashionable mansions of the capital in honor of Senator Campbell, a new light in the political world—a man handsome in form and feature, and intellectual to a high degree. Rich and a bachelor, he was much courted and flattered by society, no gathering being deemed perfect without his presence. The guests had nearly all arrived, and among their number was Miriam Wild. She is changed somewhat in the years that have gone by. Her form is not so lithe and subtle as formerly, but is more rounded and fully developed, and through a close inspection would reveal signs of decay.

She was still very beautiful.

She has experienced the usual fate of or quettes, triling away the spring-time of her life. Now, as dissipation and the passing years began to show upon her face and form, she remains still unmarried. Tonight she was in her gayest mood, and was according in a lively manner the groun entertaining in a lively manner the group of admirers which her presence still at-tracted, when there was a hush in the hum of conversation as the handsome per-son of Senator Campbell was ushered into

As her eyes fell apon him she started, turning first red, and then deathly pale, as she recognised—a fact of which she was before in utter ignorance—in the stately senator, the Hugh Campbell of the country farm-house.

Following her surprise, came a feeling of exultation that brought the color back to her cheeks before its paleness had been noticed by any of the party, as she thought:

"He is still unmarried—true to his first love, perhaps. Who knows but I may yet secure him; and what a glorious catch it would be !"

THE GENUINE PIANO, MANUFACTURED BY

RAINER & CO., Guelph, Ontario.

The undersigned respectfully announce that on the 9th day of April, 1884, Joseph F. Rainer dissolved partnership with Frank Sweetnam and John Haselton, as piano manufacturers, and that said Joseph F. Rainer, in connection with his son, will continue to manuacture the original cross-scale Pianos, of which the said Joseph F. Rainer is the sole inventor.

These Pianos have now been before the public for 23 years, and have always ranked among the very best, and are celebrated for quality of tone, great power and durability of action, prompt elastic touch, fine finish and elegant style of case, combined with every known improvement. The most complete and unbrokes prompt elastic touch, the limit and cognistyle of case, combined with every known improvement. The most complete and unbroken list on record, embracing a period of 30 years, and made up of 28 first prizes, medals and diplomes received at the principal exhibitions
in Canada—Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton and London. At the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia, in 1876, we secured a medal and diploma for our piano. The great favor with which the cross-scale pianos have been received for so long a period, and the reputation they bear, has induced others to imitate them. We therefore caution intending purchasers and dealers wishing to obtain the original cross-scale piano to see that the name of "Rainer & Son" is on each instrument. We "ake the Upright and Square Grand Pianos.

The Pacific-Alberta Collision.

Judge Boyd held maritime court chambers yesterday. W. A. Foster, Toronto, and Mr. Paterson, Windsor, appeared on the motion asking for the postponement of the trial against the owners of the steamer Pacific, which collided with the Alberta last summer, until Nov. 16. Hon. R. N. Wells opposed the motion, and asked that if it be granted Mr. Foster should undertake that the cause in this court should be heard before the caused in the American court. The hearing of the case was post-poned until Nov. 16.

Ruin after a most bountiful harvest ha a far greater interest for the counties than any redistribution scheme, while for the manufacturing districts themselves there is nothing more moving in all Mr. Chamberlain's speeches than two little bits of recent news: 1, that Canada is about to be supplied from the United States with ten thousand tons of steel rails; 2, that that unimpeachable political economist Mr. Fawcett has contracted with a Ger-

Mr. Fawcett has contracted with a German firm for oneaper post-cards than can be got in England.

Now, in his last speech Lord Salisbury touched upon this great question at considerable length. He pointed to the effect which hostile obstructive tariffs have upon the disappointments which the free upon the disappointments which the free trade prophets prepared for us when they insisted that their doctrines must prevail over the whole civilized world. He quoted the opinion of the liberal Lord Melbourne, who said: "I admire free trade exceedingly, but it seems to me absurd to introduce it without some communication with the other nations of the world; because, if we do so, we sacrifice the only brite that we have to offer them when we admit their produce free to induce them to do the produce free to induce them to do the produce free to induce them added these to the contracted with a German says it will continue as usual every week day throughout this and next month until owners refuse to enter their horses or the public refuse to support it. we have to effer them when we admit their produce free to induce them to do the same." More or less silently, it has gone on breeding ever since; and now, we have not the smallest doubt that the working classes in many a great "centre of industry" are losing all faith in free trade, and may not improbably be found demonstrating on that subject too before long. This is a very important matter; and we are persuaded that from this time forward, unless the trade of the country takes a very considerable turn for the better, we shall hear more and more of it.

Knecked Out in One Round. Efforts are being made by the friends of Adams, the pawnbroker, to induce F. Fenon to let the charges drop which Adams has preferred against him. They allege that he is very sick, and that it will be dangerous for him to give further evidence, but the county crown attorney does not see it in that light, and wants the charges investigated. He save he is willing to see it in that light, and wants the charges investigated. He says he is willing to wait until Adams is well enough to give evidence. Some fun may be expected out of this case, as the county crown attorney has knocked his man out in one round, and is waiting impatiently for the next.

Hit on the Head With a Bottle. Robert Scott and Albert Hastings, two bell boys, were tongue thrashing each bell boys, were torgue thrashing each other yesterday afternoon, when Scott got mad and thought he would see if he could hit Hastings' head with a bottle. His aim would have done credit to an old shot, and Hastings dropped to the floor like a log. The boy did not recover consciousness for nearly half an hour, when he went to Dr. Bethune's office and had the wound stitched up. The wound is right behind the left car, and is a very serious one. Scott was not arrested. cott was not arrested.

Four Young Thieves. Robert and Richard Madock, John Mc Leed and David Irwin, four small boys, Leed and David Irwin, four small boys, thought they would strike terror to the hearts of the community if they turned thieves and slept in old barns. They carried the idea out, but instead of being looked upon as heroes they now languish in a cell at No. 3 station. The principal charge against them was stealing two horse blankets and a waterproof from Harvey Crocker and entering Mr. Davidson's office on Lippincott street.

In the Theatre. It's a trial when a lady Sits before you with a cady
That's too high.
You will strain your neck to pieces
By the time the drama ceases—
If you try.

Ask her if she'll move a little—
She wont stir a jot or tittle,
But sit there,
Calmly sweet, and quite unheeding
All your low, pathetic pleading
To her hair.

Ask her ever so politely
To remove the thing unsightly,
And, O my!
If a glance could paralyze you,
And then quite pulverize you,
You would die. — The Judge. A Coming Terror.
