"Everything is Broken Up."

"All Gone to Smash."

These expressions aptly describe the state of affairs in many homes at this time of the year. Of course the words apply more to CROCKERY, CHINA and GLASS than to anything else.

Stop lamenting about such small misfortunes when they can be easily replaced right in your home town. Never before have goods been off red so cheaply and the quality never was better than at present.

We sell "good goods cheap," and ask you to give us a trial when you want CROCKERY, CHINA, GLASS or GRANITEWARE.

Public Accounts Tell Tale in Gold Fig-Far in Excess of Ordinary Receipts Both Sides as They Appear in Pro-

Toronto, April 1.—The public accounts and financial statement of the Province of Ontario, has again been issued, but in justice to Hon. Col. Matheson, it ought to be said that it is not his work. It shows a surplus, through the extraordinary sales of timber wealth and increased succession dues. Col. Matheson gave it to the Legislature yesterday without comment, he will analyze the figures on a later date.

ment, he will analyze the figures on a later date.

The receipts for the year, according to the volume, total $6,128,358.57. The expenditures total $5,267,453.02, showing a balance of $856,905,55. Col. Matheson will likely show that there is an actual deficit on the year's operations of something like $326,767.45. A large portion of the receipts is derived from the disposal of the assets of the Prevince in the shape of timber limits. vince in the shape of timber limits.

Pere Marquette Releases Men.
Detroit, April 1.—A general order will be posted to-day all over the Pere Marquette system calling for a reduction of from 15 to 20 per cent. In the entire mechanical force. Perhaps 500 men will lose their positions: The explanation is that there is no work for the men.

EXPERIENCE

Mr. and Mrs. James Rise borough were Passengers on the Illfated Parisian.

Were Eating Supper When the Boat was Struck-Had a Very Rough Voyage-One Man Killed.

Bridge, was in the city to-day. Mr. and Mrs. Riseborough went to England last December on the Lucania, of the Cunard Line, and returned last Saturday on the Parisian, and had a very eventful experience in Halifax Harbor, when the Parisian and the Albano collided and both boats came near sinking. The Parisian was in the worst shape and barely reached her dock before the sank.

"We had just sat down to tea," remarked Mr. Riseborough this morning, "when, without the alightest warning, the crash came and the huge ship shivered. I thought the boat had struck a rock. It was a nice, bright evening. The Parisian had just stopped to take a pilot on when the other boat struck us near the stern. It was reported that the captain of the Albano gave orders to reverse, but the engineer misunderstood the orders and instead of reversing, put on steam. When the crash came everbody rushed to the deck and there was great consternation amongst the passengers. The captain gave orders for the lifeboats to be got ready. The Parisian engines were run at full speed and the boat made for the dock. She listed to the opposite side from which she had been struck. This helped to save the post from sinking, as consave the poat from sinking, as considerable water was thus prevented rushing into the boat. Many of the passengers were very much frightened. Some of them jumped auto the lifeboats before they were towered, others put on life preservers and many ladies went into hysteriac. Tugs, were waiting around to lend assistance, but were unable to do so. The Parisian with her own engines ran to the dock and it took her about half an hour to make the five miles. As soon as the beat reached the dock she commenced to settle. Many of the steerage passengers lost all their luggage. Some of their boxes were out in two and fell out into the sea. All the second and first class passengers saved their luggage and all the mail was saved. Fortunately, all our luggage was packed ready to go ashore. As soon as we got in the captain gave orders for all to go ashore, and as much of the steerage luggage as possible was taken ashore. We had a very rough voyage," continued Mr. Riseborough. "On the 6th, one of the steerage passengers was killed and was buried at sea. The waves were washing over the ship and the danger board was up. He and three others attempted to cross the danger zone when a huge wave washed over and caught him, throwing him against an iron stanchion and crushing his head. The other three escaped. He left a widow and three children. About $100 was collected amongst the passengers for the children. sderable water was thus prevented

"In England," Mr. Riseborough sald, "trade was dull, but it was hoped that a revival would be experienced in a few weeks. There was quite a large number of unemploy-

Wants to Know Just Why Mr. Sifton Resigned From Cabinet.

Absence of the Minister of Public Works Commented Upon-Sir Wi frid Laurier Says Mr. Sifton Re signed Over the School Question and Nothing Else-Mr. Water Scott Favors the Autonomy Bills.

Ottawa, April 1.—In the House yes-terday when the orders of the day wer-reached R. L. Borden called attention to the unprecedented state of affair to the unprecedented state of affairs at present in connection with the Dominion Cabinet. The Minister, of Public Works had been absent from his duties for some time. Mr. Borden quoted English precedents to show that the position should be filled by a permanent head instead of being left, as it has been, to an acting Minister. He also referred to the vacant portfolio of the Interior, and the Premier's conduct in withholding the knowledge from Parliament that his colleagues had not been consulted with regard to the autonomy bill. The Premier's conduct in this respect was "an insult to this Parliament." Moreover, it had been stated in the press that the assigned cause for Mr. Sifton's resignation was not the true cause.

not the true cause.

Mr. Borden moved the adjournment of the House.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier described Mr. Borden's speech as "Another little joke." The reason why Mr. Sutherland was not in his seat was from a cause which should arruse symmethy. The which should arouse sympathy. The Minister of Public Works had not plac-

He had informed Mr. Sutherland that his work would be done during his absence, and every man in the House would be glad when his health was restered. School issue and Nothing Else. The only thing which had passed between himself and Mr. Sifton was that Mr. Sifton has resigned on account of the school question and nothing else. As to not filling the position, perhaps it was that the Government was suffering from te great abundance of material, instead of not having enough.

"Make two Ministers," suggested Mr. Borden.

Sir Wilfrid replied that if the Government were to suggest an appropriation for an extra Minister Mr. Borden would be the first to object. He promised that the portfolio would not be vacant for as much as three months, and he declared that in due time and before long a new Minister would be named. Sir Wilfrid replied that if the Gov

Mr. Barker (Conservative) of West Mr. Barker (Conservative) of West Hamilton asked the Prime Minister if the Government were in possession of correspondence carried on between them and G. W. Ross, late Premier of Ontario, respecting the extension northward of the boundaries of that Province. The Prime Minister replied Province. The Prime Minister replies that he was not aware of such correspondence, but if there were any it would be brought down.

The Autonomy Debate.

The adjourned debate on the auton-

The education clause now in the bill was no compromise, it was just what he wanted and just what the Northwest wanted. Mr. Scott concluded by expressing satisfaction with the bill which provided the best solution of the school question yet offered in any part of Canada, and which at the same time would enable the new Provinces to carry or self-government.

Mr. Scott concluded at 11.05 o'clock, when on motion of Dr. Roche, Conservative, of Marquette, the debate was adjourned. This concluded the business of the sitting.

GREENWAY BLAMES ONTARIO.

For Manitoba's Plight, but West Will Not Excuse Laurier.

Not Excuse Laurier.

Winnipes, April 1.—Nothing positive transpired yesterday regarding the sensational rumors of an early dissolution, beyond the announcement by Premier, after the Cabinet meeting, that the statement on the boundary question would be handed out in a few days. But Dame Gossip is busy, and if she may be believed, an announcement of dissolution is to be made in the early part of next week, and will be accompanied by revelations that will make a straight sectarian issue in the elections, and will lift the whole question of boundary extension into the arena of Dominion politics, constituting a direct challenge which Sir Wilfrid Laurier can neither deny nor evade.

The Free Prees yesterday afternoon publishes a telegraphed interview from Hon. Mr. Greenway at Ottawa, in which he declares Ontario responsible for the delay in the granting of Manitoba's claims, saying that Premier Whitney's action in putting forward the claims of that Province have tied up the whole matter. But the west is not to be deceived into transferring its righteous anger from Ottawa to Queen's Park, for people are well aware that Mr. Whitney was practically forced into that course by the explicit invitation given Ontario by Mr. Laurier when introducing the autonomy bill.

Rvery mother should be able to treat the minor aliments of her little ones. Prompt action may prevent serious illness—perhaps save a child's life. A simple remedy in the home is therefore an absolute necessity, and for this purpose there is nothing else so good as Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, allay fevers, destroy worms, aid teething, and make little ones healthy and cheerful. Guaranteed to contain no opiate or poisonous sothing stuff. Mrs. John N. Pringle, Forest Falls, Ont., says:—"I think I can thank Baby's Own Tablets for my Baby's life. He was badly constipated, but after giving him the Tablets he was relieved at once. I also find them good when he is at all restless, and feel I cannot say too much in their favor." GAME OF SKILL

Why Poker Was So Declared by Mis souri Jury-Interesting Case.

It is not merely in the United States that politics makes strange beddellows and necessitates curious decisions. Even in the Duchy of Oldenburg it has become necessary to decide that poker is not a game of chance. This decision was requisite to convict certain editors of libels. They had said that the Minister of Justice, Mr. Ruhstratt, was a yambler, or participated in games of chance. Mr. Ruhstratt, stated that he had eschewed roulette, but admitted that he played poker. So he swore, in effect, that poker is not a game of chance. The editors were convicted of libel, but are not yet satisfied that poker is purely a game of skill.

It is not at all surprising that this question should be treated in Europe as still an open ome—res integra, as the lawyers sometimes say.

tegra, as the lawyers sometimes say, at all events, if it is res adjudicate they wish to know it. It is recalled that our excellent friend, former Governor J. Proctor Knott, has a story of a case that occurred in the early history of Missouri.

story of a case that occurred in the early history of Missouri.
According to the story, somebody in northeast Missouri—perhaps in Lewis county—was indicted for playing a certain game of chance known as draw poker. The defendant came duly and demurred to the indictment, on the ground that draw poker is not a game of chance, but a game of skill. The judge thought that the court, whatever might have been the experience of the judge as an individual, could not judicially show that poker is a game of skill, and not of chance. Accordingly, he decided that this was a question of fact, and not a question of law, and he let it go to the jury. The jury was made up of six skilful poker players and six whose knowledge of the game was rudimentary. When the jury took up the question of the nature of the game they divided themselves into two sections, the experienced poker players on one side and the inexperienced on the other. They sent out for a sufficient number of decks of eards and sat down to see what chance would do for the men who lacked skill. The court. ber of decks of eards and sat down to see what chance would do for the men who lacked skill. The court, the lawyers and the defendant went to bed, but the jury remained in session all night, determined to find out by actual experience the real nature of the game.

Whem morning dawned the half dozen experienced players were masters of all the wealth of the jury. By the time that court reassembled

By the time that court reassemble in the morning the jury was agreed upon a verdiet, and unanimously de-cided that poker is a game of skill, and not of chance.—Louisville Cour-jer-Journal.

"No, there weren't any real points about Abner Saunders," said the man slowly. "I guess I'm an unprejudiced judge, and I should say there weren't. As for relatives, there's no one left but an aged brother. I guess you'd better mention him. "Twould kind of please him. You might say that he's always done his best and that 'twas a great privilege for the deceased to have him near by at the last."

Some were for outdoor planting, and are expected to bloom this spring; others were for pots and boxes indoors, that they might bloom during the past winter. As a result of this generous distribution, there will be one million tulips, etc., flowering along the system this spring. Before the department was established, the only flowers and plants along the company's various lines were those planted and cultivated at the expense of those agents who wished them for their own enjoyment. Now the company bears all expense in connection with the purchase of thousands of the best bulbs procurable, and not only sends them to every employe who wishes them, but also issues folders giving information. In addition to this seeds are sent every spring to employes along the system, who have exhibited an interest in flower culture. For this year the money appropriation made interest in flower culture. For this year the money appropriation made by the company to its floral department is almost double that of last year, so that the coming summer

"A RUSSIAN VOLUNTEER,"

It is often said that Russians are soldiers "born"; occasionally, however, one is made to order. An English visitor in Moscow was in one of the side streets recently when his attention was attracted by a souffling of feet, the awish of a whip, and the sound of loud words.

Looking across the way, he saw a stocky fellow in a blouse, flat on the ground and stoutly resisting the efforts of two soldiers to set him on his feet and make him go along.

The Englishman turned to a man in official uniform at his side, who also was watching the struggle, but without excitement or interest.

"What's the trouble?" asked the Englishman.

The official shrugged his shoulders. "There's no trouble," he replied. "It's only a peasant turning volunteer."

CECILIA A LOIZEAUX

Ned Cramer shoved the little canoe into the water and waited a moment the tying rope in his hand. While he waited he looked at Anne Prescott, who was standing on the very edge of the wharf reading a letter. Anne's dress was of cerulean blue linen, and the set-was of cerulean blue linen, and the setting sun made her hair red gold. Finally Ned spoke, albeit the picture was earely pretty and appealed to him. "Ready, Anne?" he called.

"All right!" said Anne, but she didn't move, and Ned waited some more patiently, for he knew he was soon to have his innings and was in no hurry to take the het. But when he snoke the to take the bat. But when he spoke the second time he said firmly:

Anne tore the letter in two, threw it "Come, Anne." into the water and came to the little bark, where she settled herself Indian fashion on her knees in the business end of the canoe. She held it steadily while he stepped in and bestowed his long length of limb opposite; then she let the boat drift while she rolled up her cerulean blue sleeves. It was one of Anne's peculiarities that she always did the paddling herself. It was not merely that the attitude and motion were becoming to her, though she was aware of her good points, like most well balanced girls. It was simply that she preferred having the men at a disadvantage—at her mercy, as it were. They always looked awkward with nothing to do, and it seemed hard for them to keep up the conversation.

Ned Cramer was a little different.
He always made himself supremely comfortable, and, while he didn't look at her as much as most of the fellows did, his glance always put her on her mettle.

The quick strokes of her paddle sent them rapidly downstream. When they reached the first bend they passed the letter, which was skimming along the surface.
"We'll go down to the island and see how long it will take for the letter to get there," said Anne, and Ned assent-ed lazily. He lit a cigarette and smoked awhile in silence. When he spoke his words were, as usual, to the point. "When are you going to marry me,

The blood rose under the tan on her cheeks, but her only answer was a vigorous and renewed paddling. Ned threw away the stub of his cigarette and felt in his hip pocket for his to-bacco pouch. If he was nervous he did not show it.

"Shall we say October, then?" he queried, adding with a note of tender-ness in his voice: "You have made me very happy, Anne. You will not re-Special One Way Excursions didn't, but I know you do." He looked serious. "Why, it stands to reason, Anne, that you love me or you wouldn't get so mad when I tell you about it."

"Ned Oramer," she blazed out, "if you ever try to make love to me again

I'll-I'll make you sorry! Now, you either talk about something else or either talk about something else of keep quiet."

She had evidently forgotten about her intention of reaching the island, for she put down her paddle and let the cance drift idly along shore. It was growing dark, and a crescent moon was faintly shining in the east. Anne, looking attentively upstream, saw a white speck in the water and, taking her paddle, fished it out and deposited it, dripping on his knee.

die, fished it out and deposited it, dripping, on his knee.

"It's the letter," he announced, touching it. Anne started.

"Give it to me," she demanded, holding out her hand.

"After I've read it," he said calmly.

"Ned Cramer, that's my letter, and you have no right to read it."

you have no right to read it."

"On the contrary, it's mine since, firstly, you threw it away, and, secondity, picked it up again and gave it to me

Anne quaked, but she tried bravado.

"Well, it's too dark to read it anyhow; besides, it's all soaked and bleared," she said.

"My avecalent avec are not the least

"My excellent eyes are not the least of my many good points," said Ned, spreading it out carefully. Anne looked about for means of escape. She saw Ned lean out and snatch something out of the water.

"It's the other half," he beamed.
"Now, I'll read it to you." He patched the halves together, held them to his eyes a moment, ladd them down again on his knee and glanced over at Anne.

She looked relieved.
"I told you it was too dark," she said triumphantly.

Anne's heart panted to say "Yes," but her stubborn will would not yield. She said weakly, "Ned, I"—
"Time!" called out Ned, and then he lit a match and leaned over the letter. Anne bent forward, her lips parted, her fingers twitching. The canoe rocked dangerously.

dangerously.
"'Of course I love Ned," read the man slowly. "The letter," he interrupted himself, "seems to be from—er some one to Clara Carlton. 'Of course I love Ned, but he is too sure of it, and I

He never finished the sentence, for in her attempt to snatch the letter Anne upset the canoe and landed Ned, her-self and the letter in the muddy river. When she regained her balance and thought of Ned she discovered him turning the canoe right side up and paying no attention at all to her. Her first thought was that it was fortunate he had caught hold of the boat. Then she gasped in amazement, for he had let it go, and it was floating down stream.

"Ned Cramer, are you crazy?" she screamed, "Catch it!"

"I'il take you to the island first," he answered and waded through the shal-low water to the bald, sandy spot they called an island. It happened that when he set her down her feet touched something hard, but which moved nevertheless.

"Ned," she screamed, "it's a turtle!"

"Ned," she screamed, "it's a turtle!"
Ned had started away, and he called ever his shoulder:
"They won't bite if you den't scare them or the snakes either."
Snakes! She held her dripping skirts tightly around her and stood, a pathetic but nevertheless a funny figure, fear written in every line of her body. She was too frightened to move when she saw the great turtle she had stepped on come straight toward her, craning its bald, snaky head from side to side. The tears rolled unheeded down to side. The tears rolled unneceded down her face and mingled with the water that dripped from her stringy, wet hair. She sobbed helplessly and with horrified eyes was still watching the turtle, which had stopped in his tracks and was leering at her, when she heard Ned's voice. Never had anything sounded so good to her ears.

"Do you love me, Anne?" How one will suffer for pride's sake! She turned her face toward him, unnindful of tears:

"I hate you!" she sobbed."
"All right," he called cheerfully; "I'll just paddle around a little, and when you're ready you call, and I'll come. As said before, the snakes won't be apt to bite unless you should happen to step on them or something."

He turned the cance and took a dozen strokes, feeling like a beastly cad every time the paddle touched the water. Then a voice, wild and desperate with fear, shrieked:

"Ned, come back!" "Coming," he called. "Wait, Anne." But Anne, terrified beyond endurance by the advancing turtle, ran into the water, and he pulled her, a drip-ping, sobbing, disheveled figure, into the shelter of the canoe and his arms. "You'll never regret it, Anne," he said softly. "But you will," she sobbed. "I'll-I'll lead you an awful life!"

Some queer things are done by thoughtless persons who try by descriptions to supply the lack of a definite address for their letters.

One such letter was directed: "To my sister Jean, up the Canongate, down a close, Edinburgh. She has a wooden leg." Jean safely received her brother's culty at all for the postman. It was superscribed, "This is for the young girl that wears spectacles, who minds girl that wears spectacles, who minds two babies, 30 Sheriff street, off Prince Edward street, Liverpool."

Another was addressed, "This is for her that makes dresses for ladies that live at tother side of rode to James." Brocklip, Edensover, Chesterfield." This, too, was delivered.

This, too, was denvered.

The following specimen, however, proved too much for the mail carrier. It could not be delivered: "E. R—, a cook as lived tempery with a Mrs. L, or some such name, a shoemaker in Castle street, about No. 20 Hobern, in 1851."

"She is a Welsh person, about five feet and stoutish, lives in service some ware in London or nabourede London" was the superscription of a letter that recently passed through the general postoffice. To pick that short and stoutish Welsh person out of some 7,000,000 people was a task at which the officials threw up their hands. The missive had to go to the dead letter office.—London Weekly.

Her Comprehensive Glance. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson were passengers in an elevated train.
It whizzed past a house that was brilliantly lighted.
"I wonder what was going on there,"

"I wonder what was going on there," ejaculated Mr. Ferguson.

"It was a wedding," replied his wife. "Didn't you see them standing before the preacher? He was in a white gown. The groom was in fall evening suit. The bride wore a robe of chiffon cloth, with bertha and yoke of duchesse lace on the bodice and lace flounce on the skirt. She had a full length tulle veil and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Where were your eyes?"

Mr. Ferguson, realizing his utter worthlessness, resumed the reading of his paper and said nothing—Chicago Tribune.

blood corpuscies. If the blood must be in active, healthy condition, what is the best way to set about putting it into shape? Certainly we should not turn to some blood medicine or tonic which contains a great deal of alcohol, hasmuch as alcohol shrinks up the red blood corpuscles. In order to put the blood in the best condition we must eliminate the bacteria from the body in the best way possible. The kidneys and liver play an important part in this and must be urged to their utmost action to assist in carrying away the poisons in the blood. The only medicine we know of to do this in the best way and at the same time put the stomach in a healthy condition so that the digestive tract will take from the food what is needed to feed the blood, is an old remedy but a good one—It is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, it contains no alcohol and offers a reasonable and scientific method of treating the stomach and blood—and helps to keep the balance of health.

Character Our Greatest Asset. Earl Grey's reply to the Ottaws Civic address presented to him on his arrival in the Capital was of a high order. "It will I am certain," he said, be a source of the greatest satisfac-tion to our Sovereign to know that his French-Canadian and other sub-jects in the Dominion are in hearty co-operation in working out together the magnificent destiny which await this country, and in making avail able for the uses of manking the imable for the uses of manking the immense resources with which this country has been endowed by a bountiful Providence.

"But there is one asset which you possess even more important than those to which I have referred—than those of area, riches, mystery, seenery, and climate—namely, that which is represented by your national charis represented by your national char-acter. If you do not jealously guard the sacred fire of that asset, the oth-ers to which I have referred will be as dross and as the crumbling clay. If, on the other hand, you keep, as your address informs me you will keep, the character of your people high, strenuous, virile, imaginative. heroical, and Imperial, no one can wenture to set a limit to the degree of the influence which will be exer-cised on the future of mankind by the great Canadian nation, composed as it is of all that is best in England, Scotland, freiand, and France, and privileged as it is to be a factor, and a factor of ever-increasing importance, in that British Empire, representing already over 400,000,000 beings, which is the greatest and most beneficent organization that has ever attempted to be the instru-ment of God on this earth.

"There is no reason, gentlemen, why the sons of Canada, if they are worthy of their fathers, and of the worthy of their fathers, and of the country to which they belong, there is no reason why they should not in the lifetime of your children, by reason of their numbers and of their character, exercise an all-powerful, and in time to come perhaps a controlling, influence on the development of the majesty and destiny of the Empire whose standard is righteouspeers and whose rath is duty." ness, and whose path is duty."

Three admirably suggestive little models are included in the accompanying group, the uppermost following very ely the shape stamped by traditional approval, while the others meet more modern requirements and suggest pos sibilities for original developments of the idea. Included with these is a fan-ciful neck piece that combines a long, jabot-like arrangement of ribbon bows with a lace stock.

The "dressmaker's frock" represents fashion's latest move, and the practical delights of the "whole gown," the gown of one color and material, are once more permissible. Any woman who so desires can again have the satisfaction of feeling herself an entirety in a single harmonious garment rather than a omposition clothed upon with shreds and patches of this and that.

The blouse, of course, has its devotee and the trim whole confection may be slow in attracting the great mass of fashion's crowd, but so much the better for the select contingent with whom tis now the thing of chic. J. VERNON-WALDER.

Window Washing.

Do not wash windows when the sun is shining on them, as they will look cloudy and streaky from drying before they are well polished. The glass and sash should be first dusted, and the window washed on the inside with water and a little ammonia. at Shepherd, N. W. T., witnessed a most wonderful mirage. An image of the Town of McLeod, which lies about 100 miles to the south, was clearly depict-ed in the sky. Not only was the town visible, but a large circle of the surrounding country, dotted with ranches and other features of the landscare. People could be seen of the landscape. People could be seen walking or driving on the streets. The Old Man's River, with the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge crossing it, the railway station itself with the cars standing on the track, were all clearly shown

The mirage lasted for fully ten min ites and then disappeared as quickly as it came. Of late a number of won-derful mirages have been seen in Alber-ta, usually shortly after the break of day. In some instances unknown lakes and towns have been pictured on the heavens with such a distinctness and realism as to make them appear but a few miles away, when in reality they were perhaps many hundreds.

Dyspepsia Tablets,

"I suffered for several years with Dyspepsia. Nothing I ate would digest without giving me great pain. I could not get anything to relieve me till a friend of mine advised me to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, One box oured me and I have had no return of the trouble since." Such is the experience of Miss Lizzie Wathing, 177 King William street, Hamilton, Ont. It should come as a message of hope to thousands of Canadians. It is only one of thousands of similar statements that prove conclusively that Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets never fail to cure indigestion and Dyspepsia of all stages. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets digest the food themselves. They do the atomach's work and give it a chance to rest and recuperate. They are thus a natural cure.

Help your stomach and it will help you. If you would eat what you like when you like use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

An Alarming Symptom. Z. "Patients often have such absurd deas about things!" sighed the doctor n charge of the tubercule of the hospital, says the New York Tribune. "Now, there's the subject of hemorrhages. I had a patient brought in here who was said to be a bad case. He had been on an egg and milk diet, yet was no better. I asked him if he had ever had a hemorrhage, and he said that he had had one very bad one.

"Tell me about it," said I. "How were you taken?"
"'Well," said he, "I got hit on the head with a stick. It bled awful, and the doctor said it was a bad hemor-rhage. He had to take eight stitches to stop it.'

"An Irishman occupied a bed in the tuberculosis ward, and one morning as I passed his bed I asked: "Well, Pat, do you raise anything?" "He didn't understand me. "Do you raise anything when you cough? I said again, but as he couldn't get what I meant through his head I went off. In a few moments he called

"'Oh. doctor.' he said. T've been noticing, and I do. Every time I cough I raise me right leg."

Spain, is Held.

New York, April 1.—There was an unusual turn at a private hearing before Magistrate Barlow in the Jefferson Market Police Court. Thursday, in the case of Capt. Reginald Salmon, formerly of the British army, who was recently arrested charged with causing the illness of the wife of Capt. O. G. V. Spain, who was discovered ill in a boarding house in Second avenue by the husband, who came here from their home, in Ottawa, Canada. Capt. Salmon was held in $1,000 bonds, addournment was taken to April 13, and Champe Andrews, counsel for the County Medical Society, who is conducting the prosecution, asked that the former soldier be held until a new charge could be made.

Held on Old Statutes.

Mr. Andrews drew up a complaint under section 562 of the Penal Code, which makes the impersonation by any party as a husband guilty of a felony, and subject to a possible sentence of ten years in the penitentiary. The statute, which is an old one, provides that the real husband is the aggrieved party, and alone can proseque. Cart party, and alone can prosecute. Capt. Salmon, it is alleged, posed as the husband of Mrs. Spain, and so represented himself to Dr. Andrew Eviter and the control of the con band of Mrs. Spain, and so represented, himself to Dr. Andrew Fulton, who was arrested with him. He was held on the additional charge.

COMMANDER LAW.

From Poop-Deck to Govern His Sea Pictures-Captain as Much of an Old Salt as Ever.

For many years after I became Sec-"For many years after I became Secretary to the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, I refused to take any naval papers whatever. I was afraid my old passion for the sea would come back."

At his home, 504 Sherbourne street, Toronto, amid pictures, many of scurrying ships on green seas, Commander Frederick Law thus delivered himself to a reporter. The captain had just resigned his desk at Government House, where, since '74, with a break of but a single term, he has been a thorough landsman, and almost as far from the sea as a man may get.

Cadet on board H. M. S. Hannibal in the Black Sea during the Crimean War, afterwards, midshipmite, officer and ultimately captain of the Royal Alfred, the commander came to Canada in '74. Since leaving the navy he has added to his secretaryship the career of a successful architect, and the diversion of an amateur painter. He built the Church of "Our Lady of Lourdes" on Sherbourne street, next to his house.

Most of his paintings are of ships at to his house. Most of his paintings are of ships at

Most of his paintings are of snips at sea, and they are as true to the briny deep as the captain is himself still every inch a sailor.

Gray-headed, ruddy and bluff, hearty in laugh, and quick in stride, he half fancies as he pilots the visitor about the drawing-room to view his sea pictures that the floor is a deck once more. He would rather talk ships than rollities.

From Poop-Deck to Desk.

"Well, of course," he said, in his breezy nautical style, "a Lieutenant-Governor's secretary can have no politics when his chief has none."
"How did you come to change the sea for a secretaryship, captain?"

"Mr. Crawford, Governor up till May, "Mr. Crawford, Governor up till May, 1875, was my father-in-law," he replied. "He didn't want me to go to sea again. That's about the whole reason why I have been secretary to all the Lieutenant-Governors in Ontario since 1874, though I was with Mr. D. A. Macdonald but seven months of his term. It was during my temporary retirement at that time that I learned architecture with Mr. Darling."

"You must have missed the sea?"

"Did I? Well; I've told you I didn't dare take a naval paper for years afterwards, knowing that the old hankering would come back. When at last I did—for I've a son at sea, also a com-of Tive a son at sea, also a commander now—I found that the British navy was a new creation altogether.

Back to the Navy Again.

Back to the Navy Again.

"The old Hannibal there for instance," pointing to a pieture, "was one of the pioneers of the transition stage from sail to steam. I was thirteen when I looked out of her port-holes in the Crimea. Our speed in those days depended on auxiliary engines. Nine knots was our limit. Modern warships double that and more. Yes, the Hannibal was the first ship I was ever on, and a beauty she was, too."

"What was your last ship, captain?"

"Here she is." pointing out a picture of a white-bearded green sea, a dark sky and a climbing ship with two carwas sails and a third one of spray, his own painting. "The Royal Alfred."

There we were; sir, off the Bermudas in a hurricane, foretopsail gone, maintopsail followed her, oh! that's the place where a man sees life and knows what men are men."

what men are men."

The Real Thing.

Capt. Law's enthusiasm was not reminiscence. It was the real thing. Painting after painting he pointed out, all from his own brush, some in the Mediterranean, others in various parts of the Atlantic, both far south and north. Most of them showed a green fury of a sea, with a ship struggling through the spray, broadside or beam end, but always natural, so the captain insisted.

end, but always natural, so the captain insisted.

"Why, my dear fellow," he said joyfully, "when you're at sea the ship is your house, your land, your wife-everything! Your study her moods and caprices as those of a beautiful woman—yes, sir. Now, you can understand why the change to a generation of secretaryship in Government House seemed a dull landsman's job to me."

Suppose the present war ended; that Japan makes a pupil of China; the Chinese learn modern warfare; Australia and Canada exclude the Chinese by a heavy capitation tax; China retaliates; where is Australia's protection but in the British navy? And you may be sure that if a Japanese navy ever faces the British navy the great naval battles of history will seem like Sunday-school plenies in comparison."

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF MU-NICIPAL CHLOROFORMATORY.

A Pleasant Morning With the Candidates for "Snuffing Out" in 1955, Under the Law Enacted in 1905-A Splendid-Looking Physical Specimen Explains the Beneficent Law While Waiting for His Call Hence.

On the fiftien anniversary of the enactment of the humane laws providing for the snuffing out of all persons who had reached the age of 60 years, I made my way to the municipal chloroformatory and for a time held pleasant conversation with the useless, but still genial men who were gathered there in the morning awaiting the final call. All were in a pleasant mood. They seemed to feel that even at 60 they had long outlived their usefulness in this world. Some of them had been great men in their early years, had been expairmen in their early pears of science and letters, but by middle age their intellectual light had grown dim; from the front rank they had at 40 retired to small clerkships, and now, worn out with the drudgery of the office and the tame pleasures of the golf links, they halled with joy the arrival of the moment when they would pass to conditions in which a few thousand years of age, more or less, would make no difference in their standing. A young man myself, I could not but experience a sense of regret as I wandered among this waiting company, thinking that under our wise. Oslerian laws, these men, outwardly hale and hearty fellows, bright-eyed and firm-footed, must step aside, though Nature would On the fiftieth anniversary of the enmen, entwardy hate and firm-footed, must step aside, though Nature would allow them full twenty years more of life. But, after all, they were really only empty husks, Fifty years ago they would have been selling puts and calls, running our great industrial combines. calls, running our great industrial com-bines, wearing the judicial gown, or filling some profitable police post. But Dr. Osler had exposed them. For the moment he had turned the world upside down, but after all, in so doing, he had placed it right side up Even among these sexagenarians that was admitted.

Explaining the Law. Explaining the Law.

One of them, a splendid-looking physical specimen, led me to a bench in a quiet corner of the chloroformatory gardens, and while he awaited the summons, outlined briefly for me the history of the enactment of the law.

"I was 60 years old yesterday," he began, "and according to our custom self-specially of the processing of the processing the self-special special spe said good-bye to my family and pre-sented myself here. You know that previous to the year 1905 the impression prevailed in civilized countries that experience counted for something; that a man of counted for something; that a man of, 60 was mere capable than one of 30, consequently elderly men were at the head of all our great institutions. The fallacy of this was shown by Dr. Osler in the year 1905. The youth of the country being in the majority, took the reins in their own hands; the Osler laws, named in honor of the Doctor, were enacted, and municipal chloroformatories were established."

"You think, then, that the present conditions are the best?" I enquired.
"Most certainly," said the old man. "It used to be that a man worked and worked until he was enfeebled by age, always spurred on by the hope that he would do something worth doing, or make something worth doing. To make something worth having. To many death was terrible because it ended all opportunities to make money. Our few years in this world were of more value than the hereafter, because we lived backwards. Osterian theory changed all this. Now, instead of having to leave behind us the consummation of all our years of labor and ambition, we attain that in early age, every year strips us of something, and by sixty we realize our utter uselessness. lessness. By sixty we are bored to death."

"Do you mean to tell me, sir, that formerly the college graduate had to work himself up instead of down?"

"Certainly. People did not realize that a man knows more the day he graduates that at any other time in life. For centuries it had been the custom to take these highly educated, energetic, original creatures and devote years into knocking all the sense out of them. They were made to struggle and grovel for years. Thousands of the most talented succumbed to disappointment. Others struggled on and on to win recognition by the time they were sixty, and then die. Absurd? Of course it was absurd. This waste of youthful intelligence had been one of the crimes of the world's history. But we have been brought to see the light."

The stranger paused a moment to catch his breath.

"You are tired, sir?" said I sympathetically.

"Not at all," said he, "I never was in better health. I was just thinking over the great things I did in my early years. Tou see, I was ten years of age when the Osler laws went into effect, so I was among the first to benefit. When I was graduated from Harvard I was swamped with offers of splendid positions. The world was awakening to the value of college men then, and every corporation in the country was hunting for a young president. Well, I chose the management of the Stove-Lifter Trust, a corporation of $200,000,000 capital, and, naturally, knowing nothing about the business, I was able to do things that no one else would have thought of, and the concern prospered tremendously. It was hard at my 30th year to have to retire into the secretaryship atta salary of only $20,000 annually, but I realized that I was rapidly becoming middle-aged, and must expect to give way to the young and strong. THE PREFIX "HONORABLE." Do Provincial ex-Ministers Retain the

Title for Life-Mr. Joseph Pope Says "No."

Pope Says "No."

Mr. Joseph Pope, of Ottawa, in reply to The Mall and Empire gives some authorities in the course of an interesting letter respecting a current subject of interest as follows:

I have read with no little surprise your criticism of the timely protest by The Halifax Chronicle against the practice of continuing to style members of the provincial Executive Councils "Honorable" after they have retired from office.

You say that this province "is not going to penalize anybody for continuing to use the title "Honorable" when addressing an ex-minister." That is no doubt true. It is equally true that the province is not solve to penalize no doubt true. It is equally true that this province is not going to penalize anybody for styling ex-members of Executive Councils "Your Lordship," which would be a very silly thing to do, no doubt, though less improper than the course you apparently defend. There are two ways to regard titles of honor. One is to proclaim that this is a new and democratic country, where all such distinctions are entirely out of place, and then proceed arbitrarily to confer the title of "Honorable" upon every man in the community who holds, or who has ever held, any political office. This is the United States custom, and I am sorry to see that it is beginning to infect Canadians. The British plan, and, indeed, that of all monarchial countries, deed, that of all monarchial countries deed, that of all monarchial countries, is to regard titles as emanating from the Sovereign—the fount of honor—and to be governed accordingly. As a part of the British Empire we necessarily adhere to the latter system. The King has not left us in any doubt as to the application of titles of honor in Canada. On the contrary, he has embodied his direction in words so plain that they cannot possibly be misunderstood. (I quote from the authorized table of titles):—

"6. Executive Councillors of provinces to be styled 'Honorable,' but only while in office, and the title not to be continued afterwards."

The King here does not explicitly command that retired Executive Councommand that retired Executive. Coun-cillors of Canada may be styled by some other title, and, therefore, I maintain that it involves a less flagrant disre-spect of authority to style a retired Executive Councillor "Your Lordship" than to style him "Honorable," be-cause the latter is the one title His Majesty has categorically declared he is not to enjoy.

The ostentatious distegard of the authorized regulations which you excuse or defend, scarcely seems to me justified by the argument that this is a free country, and a man can call him-free country, and a man can said film-self what he pleases in it.

I am equally unable to share your view, that because members of the King's Privy Council for Canada re-tain the title "Honorable" for life, therefore retired Executive Councillors of provinces should be accorded the same privilege. A cursory examination same privilege. A cursory examination of the authorized table of titles would of the authorized table of titles would show that it is based on the principle of gradation—that the more honorable position should enjoy the more honorable globe distinction. Few persons will be found to dispute that the advisers of found to dispute that the advisers of His Excellency the Governor-General in respect of the Government of Canada, are charged with higher duties and responsibilities than the advisers of the Governor-General's deputy in respect of the local affairs of one province of the Dominion. So impressed was Sir John Macdonald by the dignity of the office of Privy Councillor, that he desired that the title "Right Honorable" should appertain thereto, and he thus gives his reasons in 1867.—
"Canada will soon have as large a population as Ireland, and the duties and responsibilities of Privy Councillors of Canada are much greater than those attaching to similar offices in Ireland."

Lord Monck, the first Governor-Gen-

practice of the indiscriminate application of the title of "Honorable," I would recall the wise and true remark made by Mr. Edward Blake on the floor of the Ontario Legislature when the attributes of the Lieutenant-Governowere up for discussion many years ago, "That it adds to no man's dignity to assume unjust and unfounded pretensions."

While I am on the subject, may I be permitted to call your attention to another misapplication of terms, which is just now rife. I refer to the constant use in the press and elsewhere of the word "Parliament," meaning thereby the Provincial Legislature. This is altogether a misnomer, as the most casual reference to the Act of Union will show. That Act declares that there shall be "one Parliament for Canada," and a Legislature for Ontario, and throughout it carefully differentiates between the two expressions. This incorrect use of the word "Parliament" has frequently been called attention to, notably by Sir John Macdonald, as Minister of Justice, in his report on the Statutes of Ontario, dated ist July, 1868, and by Hon. Edward Blake in his review of the legislation of Manitoba and Quebec for the year 1876. In the latter report Mr. Blake explicitly states that the expression "Parliament" is "objectionable," as applied to the Local Legislature.

"Thefice arose negotiations resulting in agreements proclaiming that France possesses a special standing in Moroco. The Anglo-French treaty recognizes that it is France's task to assist in opening Morocoo to civilization, and also that from the economic point of view all nations have an equal footing there. The Franco-Spanish agreement confirms these views. The terms of the Anglo-French treaty were immediately there. The Franco-Spanish agreement confirms these views. The terms of the Anglo-French treaty were immediately communicated to the Sultan, of this fact the issue of Moroccan loan by France is proof. If France sought a pretext for intervention one existed in the disturbed state of the Algerian frontier. However, from triendship for Morocco and a clear conception of her own interests, France merely pointed on the necessity for establishing order.

"That position we still hold. The resistance of parties interested in maintaining the present anarchial condition of affairs leaves no room for illusion, but that will not modify our policy. Morocce is aware both of our good will and our strength, and also that we do not seek to expand a naturally thoughtout program of Moroccan policy. It, therefore, appears that France will succeed in assuring its foure in the western Mediterranean without offending any right or clashing with any interest."

Queen A'exandra, whom Dean Stanley termed "the angel in the palace," has for over forty years endeared herself to the hearts of the British people since 1863, when a girl of nineteen in her quaint, little, old-fashioned poplin frock and shawl, she landed at Gravesend as the bride of the Prince of Wales.

Her early life was passed in extreme plainness and simplicity, because of the smallness of the family income. When she was born, her father, then Prince Christian, had no hope of ever being King of Denmark, for his relation to the reigning king was so distant. He had nothing but his military pay and his wife's modest dowry. The life in their home, the Yellow Palace at Copenhagen, was pretentious only in name. The daughters, Alexandra and Dagma, who became Empress of Russia, wore garments of cheap material-wut in the plainest style.

When Alexandra was seventeen, the Prince of Wales, while speaking to one of his friends, jestingly asked to see the portrait of his sweetheart. Insavertently, the wrong picture was handed to the Prince, and instead of the face of his friend's fiancée, he saw the likeness of "the most beautiful woman in Europe." The future king of England promptly fell in love with the portrait which led to his marriage two years has ever clung to the Queen; though in the court she has not been of it, and for society she has cared little. Her home circle has been her throne, where she has reigned with sweetness and love, Her kindness, gentleness, tact and generosity have been always at the call of need, and since she went to England has been instrumental in raising or causing to be raised over $250,000,000 for charity.

In one of King Christian's weekly letters to her, he wrote that an elderly lady-in-waiting to the late Queen of Denmark was dying, and that her one wish was to speak again to her dear "Princess Alex." At that time it was impossible for Alexandra to leave England, but a long tender message of love and hope spoken by her into a phonograph, was sent by special courier to Capenhagen. Its compensation. P. H. Bowyer, the energetic member for East Kent, has taken the matter in hand and those tractively decorated to suit the ocrights the matter in hand and those interested may now rest assured that their just claims will be attended to Yesterday he brought the matter up in the legislature and in answer to Mr. Bowyer, Hon. For some years I was so badly used up with rheumatism in my hip and leg that I could not walk without suffering severe pain and finally got so bad that I was confined to my bed. I tried almost every kind of patent medicines beside consulting physicians, but obtained no relief. At last I was persuaded to try the mineral water and used it in liberal quantities. From the first I felt a decided change for the better, and now I can say I have entirely recoved. I cannot recommend the mineral water too highly and am pleased to such a magnificent establishment prected for the treatment of cases like mine.

THERMOMETER. ******************

According to Sir Samuel Wilkes, Fahrenheit constructed his therbefore by Sir Isaac Newton, says The Chicago News. "In the transactions of the Royal Society for 1701 will be found the paper written by Sir Isaac Newton, who was at that time Secretary to the society," says Sir Samcel. "He invented an instrument for retary to the society," says Sir Samdel. "He invented an instrument for measuring the degree of heat in fluids by taking a tube and filling it with linseed oil. On this he marked the freezing point as zero by putting the tube on ice, and in the same way he marked the point when plaeed in boiling water. The very awkward scale which we now use is evidently that of Newton, for, the desimal system not being then in use, he took the number 12 to denote the heat of the body; this he found, and made it the starting point of his scale, both upward and downward.

"It was some time after this that, for the sake of convenience, the degrees were divided into two, and thus the body heat was 24 above zero and boiling point 53. When, many years afterward, Fahrenheit made his instrument and used mercury instead of linseed oil, which was far more convenient, he again divided these degrees into four, so if the number be multiplied accordingly we have 212 for the boiling point and 96 for the body heat.

"Fahrenheit, finding he could get a lower temperature than freezing, made this point zero, which brought the number 8 of Newton's to 32 of Fahrenheit. In this way the thermometer was constructed.

A QUEER

"It is a singular fact," says A. to planters for eastern parties, said Roy Knabenshue, "that when one is the judge, "and one day a planter going as much as 15 or 20 miles an hour in an airship one has no sensation of moving whatever. The air beats in your face as you move along but it only creates the impression that one is standing still in a strong breeze. There are no objects flying past you as when you are travelling you must keep your eyes looking ahead of you, you observe only distant objects, so distant because of your high point of view that you approach them apparently so slowly you do not seem to move at all. I consider this one of the gueerest sensations in a trip through the air, and the impression of scarcely moving or of not moving at all is so strong even on the most experienced aeronaut that it is probably due to this so many of them rush their motor to the extreme limit and it dies' in consequence. When a speed gauge is invented for an airship it will cause fewer breakdowns of motors due to crowding power." you must keep your eyes looking sons should be relieved from anxiety concerning disease. The mind has great power over the body. For a great power over the body. For a person to think he has a disease, will often produce that disease. This we see effected when the mind is intensely concentrated upon the disease of another. It is found in the hospitals that surgeons and physicians whe make a specialty of certain diseases are liable to die of them themselves; and the mental power is so great that sometimes people die of diseases which they have only in imagination. We have seen a person sea-sick in anticipation of a voyage, before reaching the vessel. We have known a person to die of cancer in the stomach, when they had no canoer nor any other mortal disease. A blindford man, slightly pricked in the arm, has fainted and died from believing he was bleeding to death.

Therefore, well persons, to remain well, should be cheerful and happy; and sick persons should have their attention directed as much as possible from themselves. It is by their faith that men are saved; and it is by their faith they die. As a man thinketh so is he. If he wills not to die he can often live in spite of disease; and if he has little or no attachment to life, he will slip away as easily as a child will fall asleep. Men live by their souls and not by their bodies. Their bodies have no life of themselves; they are only receptacles of life—tenements of their souls; and the will has much to do in continuing the physical occupancy or giving it up. person to think he has a disease, will

To the astonishment of everybody, the tenderfoot saw the raise.

What on earth have you got, anyway? asked the surprised gambler.

TWO PAPERS' ADVERTISING.

On a recent Sunday, said Manly M. Gillam, in an address to the London Sphinx Club, the New York Herald contained 380 1-2 columns of adversising. The net price of this ad wertising, said Mr. Gillam, was $85 a column. (Think of that, Chatham erchants). The Daily Planet of Saturday last contained 43 columns of advertising and about 35 columns of reading matter. Not an inch of this advertising space was of the mushroom class. The merchants of Chatham believe in persistent adwertising and use space regularly in the newspapers, . They find The Planet a specially valuable medium for reaching the masses, and we are pleased to say that the call on our space was never greater than at present. THE RUSSIAN POSITION.

Imperative orders are said to have been sent to General Linevitch to make a stand at or below Kirin, because the immediate result of a defeat at Harbin would be the destruction of the Trans-Siberian Railroad. While the Japanese can be kept at a safe distance south of the railroad troops and supplies can be forwarded to the army and to Vladivostok But even though Harbin should hold out, the Japanese might destroy the railroad to the west if they should reach it, and both the army in the field and Vladivostok would be isolated.

But Linevitch has a far smaller force than Kuropatkin had and the army has had to sacrifice a great part of its artillery and stores. With the somewhat dubious exception of Kirin-to which point it would not be absolutely necessary for Oyama to follow Linevitch-the Russians have no fortifications to make a stand behind as at Mukden and even at Tie Pass. What chance, then, is there of Linevitch being able to keep Oyama at a distance from the Trans-Siberian Railroad if Oyama has designs further up that road?

The Russian censorship has permitted the publication of a newspaper dispatch from Linevitch's army to the effect that 200,000 troops are imperatively needed. The estimate is moderate, for it would not do much more than to replace the killed, wounded and prisoners of the Russians at Mukden and Tie Pass, If Kuropatkin's army could not keep the Japanese out of Mukden, what can Linevitch do with a force not much larger? But can such a force reach Linewitch before, in his disabled condition, he shall be overwhelmed? Twelve hundred men a day are now being forwarded to the army. At that rate it would take six months to get the 200,600 men to the front. Where will the front be inside of six months? Naturally, the Russians are contemplating the abandonment of all dation to roof is a sectarian school Manchuria and of the Amur district of Siberia, with the exception of Vladivostok, which might resist a long siege. But since Port Arthur no one can doubt the result of such Great Mistakes That People Make Reading the News-Several Hints That Will Profit the Wide-Awake Man and Woman-Dumont's Works on the Subject Seem to Cover the Whole Situation.

A newspaper is not to be read like a novel, or, on the other hand, like a scientific treatise. It is not fiction, it is news.

Some time since an acquaintance of mine was swindled in a peculiarly absurd manner. Swindles of the kind had been exposed in the newspapers over and over again. I pointed out that fact to him and expressed my surprise that he, a man who read the newspapers, should be so taken it, writes Prof. E. C. Minnick in The Chicago Tribune.

Tribune.

"Of course, now you mention it," he remarked ruefully, "Tve read it over and over again. But one never applies these things to oneself, you know. They just amuse you and you forget them."

News is a narration of actual fact—of things going on in the world which may, in the homely phrase, "come to your doorstep." When you read of an outbreak of typhold fever through bad outbreak of typhoid fever through bad drains in Madrid do not dismiss the drains in madrid do not dismiss the news as having no concern with you because Madrid is in Spain and you are not. Your own drains may be bad. I remarked to an official at my railway station the other day that the ac-count I had read in the newspapers of a terrible accident to a passenger who tried to get on a car while the train was in motion would probably have a great effect upon persons who, I noticed, were in the habit of doing the same thing at our station.

"You'd think so," he replied; "but it's too far off, sir. If we'd had a passenger killed here we'd see a differ-

He was quite right. People read news like fiction and do not seek to ap-ply the incidents to themselves. That is why what judges term "hoary headed frauds" still succeed with so many in spite of constant exposure.

m spite of constant exposure.

How is it that young women still believe in the dramatic agent who for $50 will make them into Sarah Bernhardts and secure them princely salaries on the stage? How is it that men will still confide their money blindly to gentlemen who kindly undertake ly to gentlemen who kindly undertake to make fortunes for them by stock to make fortunes for them by stock exchange speculations? The victims have read exposures of these swindles time after time, but after all they "never dreamt such things could be."

Some people, on the other hand, read a newspaper as if it were a scientific treatise. They want to begin at the beginning and read it through word for word—even the advertisement. The consequence is that they never seem to have sequence is that they never seem to have sequence is that they never seem to have time to read just the part of the newspaper which might be of special good to them. It is wonderful how, if you ask one of these laborious readers about something in the papers, he has never seen it. He has never had time to read it.

This kind of reader commences his newspaper with the leading articles, and he prefers the newspaper that has the longest, so long as they agree with his own particular point of view. In time he never takes the trouble to form any he never takes the trouble to form any opinion of his own on matters of the day. Like the man who was so afraid lest he should wear out his brains that he kept a man to think for him, this reader looks to his paper to think for him. If you know his newspaper you can tell what his opinion will be upon any matter of the day.

Now, newspaper leading articles, admirably written as they often are, and by men of splendid gifts as regards literary expression, are not to be always accepted as serious productions. They are written in haste and are sometimes considerably biased. I have not lived long enough yet to read in a democralong enough yet to read in a democratic newspaper an article which was ex-actly fair to republicans, nor have I seen one in a republican paper which did democrats justice for virtues they did democrats justice for virtues they possess.

A newspaper is not to be despised because it is cheap. It is not to be studied as if it were a guide to serious matters. It is not. You must seek elsewhere for "the wells of knowledge." Gladstone was reported to read the London Times in twenty minutes—that is, he had managed to skim over it, gleaning all the facts in it worth noting. It is a habit to be acquired. When a young man asked Sale once what he should read in order to acquire all round intelligence for journalistic work he received the startling advice—"Read everything."

One of our busiest politicians told me that when it was necessary for him to test applicants for the post of secretary to himself he used to take the morning paper and put it in the candidate's hand.

"Take a sheat of nears." he ordered. sents a direct antithesis to that of the German scholar. The English ing at the same time every morning. A friend of the author who has seen him lately says that he has grown tary to himself he used to take the morning paper and put it in the candidate's hand.

"Take a sheet of paper," he ordered, "and write down, in the fewest words possible, the chief things noted in this paper. I'll give you half an hour for it." He declared that the test was an infallible one as a guide to acuteness of mental perception of quick judgment. I have known it also applied to candidates for vacancles in commercial houses. One of my acquaintances falled miserably over it some time ago. He could not understand his unsuccess and deployed to me the fact that his would-be employer, a merchant, was evidently an ignorant person and of poor judgment. My acquaintance's list of important matters in the newspaper was long and accurate, he felt certain. "What did you put first?" I asked. "Football," he replied. "There were five columns of it. Nothing else had half the space given to it."

Some people have a lamentable faculty of noting one fact they find recorded in fa newspaper and ignoring all others in antagonism with it.

I met a medical friend of mine some weeks agd. He was in an ill temper, and as he is usually a man of agreeable disposition I asked him the reason. "I cannot understand why newspapers print such things," he said.

He was attending a woman for indiscreet induigence in strong liquids. His patient had seen a paragraph in a newspaper recording the death of a continued drunkard at 95 and had eagen.

SOME AFRICAN GIANTS.

They Are Strong and Cunning and Nine Feet High.

There are many giants in Africa nine eet high. Some of them weigh 300 pounds and are strong enough to kill a panther at one blow. Perhaps you think such big fellows must be clumsy, but they are not. They can run faster than any horse, springing twelve to fourteen feet at a leap. This all sounds like a fairy story, but not so when you hear that these African

The Mask In Italy. The Italian nation is especially appealed to by the charm of mystery and all those indefinite possibilities which lurk behind the secrecy of the mask. Not but that this license of masks was frequently abused. Alessandro VI., who with Madonna Lucrezia, was so fond of watching the maskers go past from the balcony of Castel St. Angele, had to forbid masks in 1499 under pain of the gallows, to such an extent did the factions and ill disposed at Bome take advantage of them to pay off old scores, and so many people were killed or seriously wounded every day in the

CHANNING POLLOCK

Copyright, 1904, by Channing Pollock

Sallie Marshall went to Red Bank for her vacation almost entirely be-cause Frank Ewing was there. To her friends in the offices of the American Opera Chair company she said that she felt the quiet of the place to be what she most needed. In point of fact, however, what she most needed was the love of the young bookkeeper who had dropped his pen a week before with the avowed intention of rus ticating at Red Bank.

The ordinary, sensible woman of thirty-two, which was the exact age of Miss Marshall, probably would not have sympathized with her much con-cerning this requirement. Ewing was just twenty-eight, and his "gray mat-ter" was not gray because of maturity or overexertion. He was exceedingly good looking, exceedingly tall and broad and debonair, and these virtues had appealed at once to little Miss Marshall, whose eyes were accustomed to grayness of mind and of other

Ewing liked Miss Marshall, too, in a patronizing sort of fashion, his regard having been deepened considerably by the discovery that she was mistress of "double entry" and not at all averse to double labor. His affection never melted into words, and it was suffi ciently adjustable to permit of being put quite out of the way when its pos sessor met so fluffy and alluring a per sessor heet so hand an armount son as Neille Carruth.

"Frank Ewing's gone with your girl again," Miss Marshall heard an idler remark banteringly to another as she climbed the steps of the Globe hotel. She stopped to fumble a handkerchief out of her bag.

"Who? Nellie Carruth?" inquired the youth addressed. "Looks as if I was cut out, doesn't it?"

That he was not the only individual "cut out" Miss Mashall learned immediately upon the return of the pair. Fluttering about the piazza, she discerned them at the end of the street the bookkeeper hanging on the words of his companion as no amount of mere appreciation of wisdom ever made man hang on the words of woman. Ewing was greatly embarrassed, too, when saw Miss Marshall, although she tried to seem uninterested alike in his presence and in his attention to the blue frocked girl to whom he presented her. Ewing was acting quite within his rights, she told herself later, obeying the impulse that bade her justify him even to herself. He had made no part with her, at least no verbal pact, and she knew that few men recognized the validity of unspoken contracts. Why should a fine, strong fellow whose life was before him be tied to a neutral tinted woman who already realized that her future was to be only her past stripped of its illusions? If Frank Ewing wanted to marry Nellie Carruth

Nevertheless while presenting an im perturbable front to that part of the world located at Red Bank she suffered keenly the next few days. Miss Carruth and her widowed mother occupied a cottage near the river, and between walking, riding and boating she and her new admirer were together almost constantly. Ewing glanced at Miss Marshall once or twice, assured him-self that she didn't care and was glad that he had not committed himself. Ewing was not a bad sort of a man; he was just a man. This was the state of affairs when a fire at the Carruth cottage upset Red Bank and permitted to the bookkeeper Balk and permitted to the cookkeeper a display of courage which seemed to write "finis" to his romance. The blaze broke out at dead of night and gained such headway in the front part of the such headway in the front part of the dwelling that there appeared scant probability that the two inmates could be rescued. Red Bank's volunteer fire brigade propped its ladders against the veranda before the bedroom windows, but very wisely refused to mount them through the blast furnace of the blazlike a toy monkey on a stick and carried both women to places of safety.

Miss Marshall, who thought it risky to be among the spectators at a fire, did not witness this deed, but she heard of it, and her heart swelled with pride. She had known all along that Ewing was capable of just such heroism. Forgetting her previous reserve, she hastened to congratulate him,

This burn, the result of contact with a falling brand, kept the bookkeeper wrapped in darkness and oil silk for a formight. His right eye had been endangered and had to be treated carefully. Miss Marshall forfeited a considerable amount of salary and remainfully. Miss Marshall forfeited a considerable amount of salary and remained at Red Bank. She really was needed after Miss Carruth, to whom the fire soon became only an impersonal occurrence which made good material for story telling, found a rowboat shared with her earlier admirer rather preferable to a stuffy room shared with her later suiter and the odor of lodoform.

The injured man missed her greatly and inquired of Miss Marshall concerning her. Miss Marshall, with bravery in the feminine gender of that which he exhibited at the fire, replied that she supposed Miss Carruth much occupied with getting furniture for her new cottage.

"Her new cottage?" exclaimed Ewing. "I may be interested in that myself some day."

Miss Marshall tried to change the "She's a brick!" the convalence went on. "Pretty as a picture too. Don't you think she's pretty, Miss Mar-

Miss Marshall did.
She concluded that Miss Carruth was something better than pretty when she witnessed her first meeting with Ewing after the bandages had been taken from his face. The brand had penciled an indelible mark of seared scarlet from his forehead to his throat. Miss Carruth gave vent to an abbreviated scream when she saw it and then, mastering herself, grasped the victim's hand firmly. "I didn't realize," she said, "how much you had done for me."

Manifestly Miss Marshall had been unjust in considering her a mere doll. One evening soon after, however, when she was sitting at her window, looking into the mist of her life, she was given reason to resurrect her first opinion. Ewing and Miss Carruth were seated below, and Ewing was propos-ing marriage. The woman upstairs knew that she ought not to listen, but her breath was quivering in her throat, and she could not move away to save her soul.

"Don't!" Miss Carroth was urging when her voice first became audible. 'Don't, Frank! Please don't!"

"But why?" he persisted. "I love you. Until this moment I was sure that you loved me.",
"I did!" cried the girl, "Oh, I did until- You mustn't ever ask me to mar Why?" repeated Ewing. The repetition was determined. "I think I have earned the right to a reason."

"That is the reason!"
"What?" The word was spoken sharply, like a military command Miss Carruth quailed.

"What-what happened when you earned the right? Oh, I know I'm hor rid! I know I'll be ashamed all the rest of my life. But-your cheek! couldn't bear to look at that scar." "Oh!" said Ewing.

"If it hadn't been for wouldn't have been burned," Miss Carruth went on, sobbing almost hysterically. "I realize that. I'm sorry; indeed I'm sorry! Won't you say you forgive me?"

"Yes," said Ewing. "It's not your fault. I've just been a fool. I see it now. I'm going away tomorrow." "And you won't think too harshly of heard him push back his chair. "Til try not to think of you at all," he an-swered. "I'll try to remember a little woman who has never forgotten me. Her love was too fine for me to comprehend at first, but somehow I see
