NEWCASTLE, NEW BRUNSWICK, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER, 22 1910.

PRICE THREE CENTS.

SENT INNOCENT MEN TO PRISON

Two New York Merchants, Sentenced for Forgery, Ordered Released by Appellate Court—Judges Doubtful if any Crime was Committed.

New York, Nov. 18—An order for the immediate release from Sing Sing prison of Morris Taub and Louis Brown, formerly engaged in the cotton goods business here, as Brown & Taub, was issued tonight by the appellate division of the supreme court. The men were convicted in February, 1910, by a jury in general sessions and were sentenced by Judge Malone to Sing Sing for not less than two years and six months on a charge of forgery in the third degree. According to the appellate division, they should not have been prosecuted at all on the charge of forgery, and it appears to be a case of grave doubt if any offense warranting criminal prosecution was committed. It was charged by the district attorney's office that Brown & Taub "with intent to defraud," made an entry in their ledger of $26,345.84, which purported to indicate that the share of Brown in the business amounted to that sum, "whereas the share of Brown in the business was $5,787.32." The order of the court will be taken to Sing Sing tomorrow by a lawyer.

MIRAMICHI CARIBOU.

DIARY OF DISTINGUISHED AMERICAN HUNTER

Saw 168 Caribou in Six Days in the Bald Mountain District—Shot Three Fine Specimens.

The following is the diary of Mr. C. S. Winer, assistant Curator of the University of Maine, who saw 168 caribou and several in one while hunting caribou on Bald Mountain for the museum of his university, with Sydney B. Thomas as guide, Mr. Winer secured three fine specimens. The hunter had a special permit from the provincial government. His notes are intensely interesting and show what a Paradise for sportsmen are the border lands of Northumberland and Gloucester county easily reached by way of Newcastle.

Our teams and camping outfit, which upon the advice of American sportsmen we had engaged from the old and reliable liveryman, R. H. Grenley of Newcastle, we found perfectly up-to-date and satisfactory. Mr. Grenley did everything possible for our comfort and convenience. We would advise any sportsman looking for first class service to ring up Mr. Grenley.

OCTOBER 30.

Left camp Sunday October 30 bound for the Caribou grounds 12 miles to walk. Arrived at Camp Wait at 1 o'clock. Rested an hour. Then we started for the lookout. We were up there an hour before we sighted any Caribou, when all at once the guide called out, "there there are five of them lying down three miles off." We started and worked up to within 75 yards of them, so we could look them over carefully, 2 small bulls, 2 cows and 1 large calf. I decided they would not do, so we started back for camp. When we were about half way, the guide stopped and pointed and there stood a fine bull caribou with 24 points, a fine large animal. We looked him over carefully and I decided that I did not want him, the brown antlers were very poor; no tops; patchy on neck. Just then I looked to my left and there was a caribou just coming out of the trees, and quickly followed by 4 more, 2 cows and 2 calves; but, it being the first day, I concluded to wait. Before we reached camp, we saw 2 more small bulls, making in all 4 cows, 3 calves and 4 bulls.

OCTOBER 31.

Left camp at 6:40 a. m. saw 43 caribou before dinner and 33 in the afternoon. Returned to camp at 6 p. m. 76 caribou in all, 18 of them were bulls but none of them suited me, they were not just what I wanted. There was a lot of calves, but they were too big for my purpose all but one. He was a nice little fellow; we tried for an hour to get him but the wind was against us; they winded us and off he went. Saw 1 big bull moose. Guide called him up to within 200 yards.

NOVEMBER 1.

Left camp at 6:30, went up to the lookout. Soon as it was light enough to see, we saw 4 caribou through the glasses about a mile away. We tried to work up on them but they heard us and got away. We went to another lookout, 4 more, but they smelled us and started off on the run. We sighted 4 more feeding away across the valley, 2 cows and 2 calves, one a fine little calf. We walked up to within 150 yards when they started to run, I shot twice at the calf but missed, so we went back to the lookout. We were there but a few minutes when we spied a big bull caribou coming along. We watched him. When he struck our trail, he stopped short, threw up his head and gave a snort and turned back the way he came. 13 caribou for the day, 3 bulls, 5 cows and 5 calves. Of all the caribou I have seen up to now, I had seen only 3 cows with horns and 2 of them were broken. While we were at the lookout 2 cow moose went across the burnt land about 200 yards from us.

NOVEMBER 2.

Went over to the lookout at 7:10 a. m. Watched for an hour. Finally we saw 4 caribou 1 1/2 miles off, so we started to work over to them. It was too noisy and, they ran over into Neal Menzies territory. Then we went over to the next lookout, saw no caribou, so we started for Bald Mountain, 8 miles away. On our way we saw 5 caribou, 79 caribou in all today, 5 small bulls, 2 cows and 2 calves. The calves were large so I did not try to kill any. Tomorrow we will hunt the Bald Mountain country.

BALD MOUNTAIN NOV. 3.

Left camp for South Mountain 2 1/2 miles away at 7:10. Started 2 bunches of caribou, but could not see them; it was in thick brush growth; the moss was frozen and we made as much noise as a Brass Band. We went up on top of the mountain and took a look; could see nothing but cows, calves and a few small bulls. At 2 o'clock a big bull walked out on the bog, his head looked pretty good from the mountain, he was a mile off, but the guide said he would take a run down and look at him and I watched him from the mountain; but the head did not look good to

A DEER OF THE NORTH-WEST

PRIVY COUNCIL WILL NOT HEAR APPEAL IN THE CURREY CASE

London, Nov. 15—The Privy Council to-day gave judgment in the New Brunswick case of Eliza Currey, versus Lemuel A. Currey. The point was whether the petitioner was entitled or not to a divorce on the ground of alleged cruelty by the husband. The petition for special leave to appeal was dismissed.

The effect of this decision is that the original judgment of His Honor Mr. Justice McKeown stands and the marriage tie is not dissolved.

TOWN COUNCIL'S MONTHLY MEETING

Town Council met Thursday evening, the full board present.

Communication from Union of N. B. Municipalities asking suggestions on reform of Assessment Laws, was read and laid on the table till next meeting.

Ald. Morrison presented a complaint from Mrs. D. K. Cool that her taxes are excessive and praying for relief from part of same. Request was laid over till next meeting.

On recommendation Finance Committee the bill of P. J. McEvoy and O. Nicholson, revisors, for revising Voters' Lists, $20.00. On recommendation Light and Water committee the following bills were ordered paid:

Garlock Packing Co.	24.20
Millers Foundry	3.86
Can. Gen. Electric Co.	2.04
Can. Gen. Electric Co.	67.55
	97.65

On recommendation of Public Works Committee W. A. Hickson's bill of $94.88 for lumber was ordered paid.

Chairman Russell of the Police committee presented report of Police Magistrate for quarter ending Sept. 30, showing balance of $86.50 paid Town Treasurer. He made no report on Scott Act matters.

Park & Fire Committee recommended payment of J. H. Sargeant $26 for horses at 6 fires; and Edward Dalton for horse at one fire $3.00.

Bye Law committee reported progress. Bye Laws were not yet finished.

Park and Fire committee reported placing a fire bell down town on J. R. Lawlor's property, at a rental of $8.00 yearly. Also proposed to divide the town into fire districts, and distribute cards about same, and to have names of streets labelled. Report was taken up section by section: Naming of streets was laid over and other sections were adopted.

The need of a new and up-to-date hose cart was discussed.

The Park and Fire committee were empowered to pay policemen as last winter, for keeping continual fire during winter season in hose room.

Ald. Allison brought in verbally a request of the W. C. T. U. for Council to do something re children running round streets late at night.

Ald. Layton said that girls from twelve to sixteen were walking the streets very late at night. They should be looked after as well as small children. They were on the streets for no good.

Other aldermen spoke along the same line. It was decided to leave matter over to next meeting, enquiry to be made in the meantime concerning powers of the town in the matter, and W. C. T. U. to be consulted.

Ald Russell congratulated Ald. Layton on his able management of the Park and Fire committee. He advocated opening up of new street into middle of district bounded by Henry, McCullam, Jane and Pleasant streets, the street into which has now only one outlet. Had the night of the last fire been windy immense damage would have been done because of delay in reaching the place of the fire.

On motion of Ald. Russell and Layton, this matter was left to Public Works committee for a report next meeting.

Ald. Clark advised selling town horse.

Ald. Morrison said that town was now as hard pushed as ever to make both ends meet. It was duty of Council to save all they can. Driver's wages is $40 a month. Horsekeep costs at least $10. The Mayor and Alds. Sargeant and Russell thought it false economy to make any change.

Matter was left to chairman of Board of Works, Ald. Russell voting nay.

Ald. Clark said that some ratepayers were dissatisfied at Choral Society having free use of Town Hall, while other societies and persons had to pay for use of Hall.

Ald. Morrison said that Choral Society was unique among societies. It belonged to the whole town, made no money, and should not be charged rent. Mayor McMurdo and Ald. Allison spoke in same strain. Ald. Morrison and Allison moved that the Choral Society be given free use of Hall on payment for fuel used.

Two aldermen said that the Police Magistrate said that that part of the hall used as a court room was under his sole control. The Mayor and several aldermen stoutly opposed this idea.

Motion carried. Resignation of Dr. Nicholson from Board of Health was further held over.

Re auctioneers selling goods without license, it was laid down that it was the Marshal's duty to prevent unlicensed persons selling. Adjourned.

P. E. ISLAND CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Spark From Stove Ignited Little One's Clothes; Mother Absent at Time Attending to Chores.

Charlottetown, Nov. 18—A deplorable accident occurred at Iona today, when the two-year-old child of Benjamin Walsh, section foreman, was burned to death. Mr. Walsh was at work on the railway, and Mrs. Walsh was outside the house attending the cattle, the two children being left sitting by the wood stove. A spark flew out and ignited the little one's dress. Two neighbors who were passing heard the child's cries and rushed to her aid, but she was so badly burned that death came a few hours later.

TERMINUS OF CANADA EASTERN BRANCH

Nothing Settled Yet, Says Deputy Minister A. W. Campbell.

Chatham, N. B., Nov. 14—Mr. W. B. Snowball, as president of the Board of Trade, wrote to Deputy Minister Campbell, regarding the Canada Eastern terminus question. Today he received the following reply:

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter dated 9th instant, enclosing clipping from the St. John Globe with reference to Newcastle being made the terminus of the Canada Eastern branch. Some suggestions have been made to the board of management that it would be well to abandon that section of the Canada Eastern from Chatham Junction to Blackville, carrying traffic by Derby Junction. Beyond going over the line and giving the matter some little thought nothing has been done. I can assure you that no change in this direction will be made without giving your Board of Trade and all parties interested, ample opportunity of expressing their views as to suggestions.

Yours truly,
(Signed) A. W. CAMPBELL.

"Reasonably. If there was such a law I'll bet my head two-thirds of the men in Ararat would be getting rid of their wives before night."

"I'm tired," said Lady Deppingham suddenly. She yawned and stretched her arms. "It's been very entertaining, Saunders, but really I think we'd better dress for dinner. Come, Mr. Browne. Shall we look for the princess?"

"With pleasure, if you'll promise to spare Deppingham's life."

"On condition that you will spare Deppingham's wife," very prettily and airily. Mrs. Browne laughed with amazing good grace, but there was a new expression in her eyes.

"Your ladyship," called Saunders desperately, "do you approve of my plan? It's only a subterfuge—"

"Heartily!" she exclaimed, with one of her rarest laughs. "The only objection that I can see to it is that it leaves out my husband and Mrs. Browne. They are very nice people, Saunders, and you should be more considerate of them. Come, Mr. Browne." She took the American's arm and gayly danced from the room. Lord Deppingham's eyes glowed with pride in his charming wife as he followed with the heartick Drusilla.

"I would have won them over if Britt had not interfered," almost Genevra gently waved her handkerchief, waited little Mr. Saunders, his eyes glazed with mortification.

"I'm getting to hate that man," said Miss Pelham loyally. "And the other! They give me a pain! Don't mind them, Tommy, dear."

Lady Deppingham and Browne came upon the princess quite unexpectedly. She was in the upper gallery, leaning against the stone rail and gazing steadily through the fieldglasses in the direction of the bungalow. They held back and watched her, unseen. The soft light of early evening fell upon her figure as she stood erect, lithe and sinuous, in the open space between the ivy clad posts.

"Genevra smiled securely in her supposed aloofness from the world. Then, suddenly moved by a strange impulse, she gently waved her handkerchief as if in greeting to some one far off in the gloaming. The action was a mischievous one, no doubt, and it had its consequences—rather sudden and startling, if the observers were to judge by her subsequent movements. She

CHAPTER XIV.

TWO CALLS FROM THE ENEMY.

DEPPINGHAM was up and about quite early the next morning—that is, quite early for him. He had his rolls and coffee and strolled out in the shady park for a smoke. The princess, whose sense of humiliation had not been lessened by the fitful sleep of the night before, was walking in the shade of the trees on the lower terrace, beyond the fountains and the artificial lake.

"I was thinking of you," she said in greeting as he came up.

"How nice you are," he said. "But, my dear, is it wise in you to be thinking of us handsome devils? It's a most dangerous habit—thinking of other men."

"But, Deppy, dear, the prince isn't here," she said, falling into his humor. "That makes quite a difference, doesn't it?"

"Your logic is splendid. Pray resume your thoughts of me—if they were pleasant and agreeable. I'll not blow on you to Karl. By the way, I have a compliment for you. Browne says your hair is more beautiful than Pong's. That's quite a compliment. Fritan never even dreamed of hair like Pong's."

"You know, Deppy," she said, with a pout, "I am very unhappy about my hair. It is quite red. I don't see why I should have hair like that of a red cocker. It seems so animalish."

"Rubbish! Why should you complain? Look at my hair. It's been likened more than once to that of a Jersey cow."

"Oh, how I adore Jersey cows! Now, I wouldn't mind that a bit."

They were looking toward the lower gates while carrying on this frivolous conversation. A man had just entered and was coming toward them. Both recognized the tall figure in gray flannels.

"I trust I am not intruding," Chase said as he came up. His gaze was as much for Deppingham as for the princess, his remark quite impersonal.

"Not at all, not at all," said Deppingham quickly, his heart leaping to the conclusion that the way to the American bar was likely to be opened at last. "Charm'd to have you here, Mr. Chase. You've been most unneighborly. Have you been presented to her highness, then—Oh, to be sure. Of course you have. Stupid of me."

"We met ages ago," she said, with an ingenuous smile, which would have disarmed Chase if he had been prepared for anything else. As a matter of fact, he had approached her in the light of an adventurer who expects nothing and grasps at straws.

"In the dark ages," said he so ruefully that her smile grew. He had come, in truth, to ascertain why her husband had not come with her.

"But not the forgotten variety, I fancy," said Deppingham shrewdly.

"It would be impossible for the princess to forget the greatest of all fools," said Chase.

"He was no worse than other mortals," said she.

"Thank you," said Chase. Then he turned to Lord Deppingham. "My visit requires some explanation, Lord Deppingham. You have said that I am unneighborly. No doubt you appreciate my reasons. One has to respect appearances," with a dry smile.

"When one is in doubt he must do as the Moslems do, especially if the Moslems don't want him to do as he wants to do."

"No doubt you're right, but it sounds a bit involved," murmured Deppingham. "Lady Deppingham will be delighted to see you. Are you ready to come in, princess?"

They started toward the chateau, keeping well in the shade of the boxed trees, the princess between the two men.

"I say, Chase, do you mind relieving the traces at any moment and raise the very old Harry at somebody else's expense. I'd like to know if my head is really safe."

"I came to see you in regard to that very thing, Lord Deppingham. I don't want to alarm you, but I do not like the appearance of things. They don't trust me and they hate you—quite naturally. I'm rather sorry that our British man-of-war is out of reach. Pray don't be alarmed, princess. It is most improbable that anything evil will happen. And, in any event, we can hold out against them until relief comes."

"We?" demanded Deppingham.

"Certainly. If it comes to an assault of any kind upon the chateau I trust that I may be considered as one of you. I won't serve assassins and bandits—at least not after they've got beyond my control. Besides, if the worst should come they won't discriminate in my favor."

"Why do you stay here, Mr. Chase?" asked the princess. "You admit that they do not like you or trust you. Why do you stay?"

"I came out here to escape certain consequences," said he candidly. "I'll stay to enjoy the uncertain ones. I am not in the least alarmed on my own account. The object of my visit, Lord Deppingham, is to ask you to be on your guard up here. After the next steamer arrives and they learn that Sir John Brodney is in the island, permission to Russia's demand, with the additional news that your solicitors have filed injunctions and have begun a bitter contest that may tie up the estate for years—then, I say, we may have trouble. It is best that you should know what to expect. I am not a traitor to my cause in telling you this. It is no more than I would expect from you were the conditions reversed."

"It's mighty decent in you, Chase, to put us on our guard. Would you mind talking it over with Browne and me after luncheon? You'll stay to luncheon, of course?"

"Thank you. It may be my death sentence, but I'll stay."

In the wide east gallery they saw Lady Deppingham and Bobby Browne deeply engrossed in conversation. Deppingham started and involuntarily allowed his hand to go to his temple as if to check the thought that flitted through his brain.

"Good Lord," he said to himself, "is it possible that they are considering that—Saunders' proposition? Surely they can't be thinking of that!"

As he came in a guarantee that we consider the will valid. It is an admission that we regard it as sound. If not, why should we recognize its provisions, even in the slightest detail? Britt is looking for hallucinations and all!"

"Sh!" came in a loud hiss from somewhere near at hand, and the two in the gallery looked down with startled eyes upon the distressed face of Lord Deppingham. They started to their feet at once, astonishment and wonder in their faces. They could scarcely believe their eyes. The enemy!

He was smiling broadly as he lifted his helmet, smiling in spite of the discomfort that showed so plainly in Deppingham's manner.

Chase was warmly welcomed by the two heirs. Lady Agnes was especially cordial. Her eyes gleamed joyously as she lifted them to meet his admiring gaze. She was amazingly pretty. The conviction that Chase had mistaken her for Lady Agnes the evening before took a fresh grasp upon the mind of the Princess Geneva. A shameless wave of relief surged through her heart.

Chase was presented to Drusilla Browne, who appeared suddenly upon the scene, coming from a no one knew where. There was a certain strained look in the Boston woman's face and a suspicious redness near the bridge of her little nose.

"It's very good of you," said the enemy after all of them had joined in the invitation. "Why is it that I am more fortunate than your own attorneys? I am but a humble lawyer, after all, no better than they. Would you mind telling me why I am honored by an invitation to sit at the table with you?" The touch of easy sarcasm was softened by the frank smile that went with it. Deppingham felt it his duty to explain.

"It's—it's—oh, yes, it's because you're a diplomat," he finally remarked in triumph. "It was a grand recovery, thought he. "Saunders is an ass, and Britt would be one if Browne could only admit it, as I do. Rubbish! Don't let that trouble you. Eh, Browne?"

"Besides," said Bobby Browne breezily, "I haven't heard of your clients inviting you to lunch, Mr. Chase. The cases are parallel."

"I'm not so sure about his clients' wives," said Deppingham, with a vast haw-haw! Chase looked extremely uncomfortable.

"I am told that some of them are very beautiful," said Geneva sedately.

"Other men's wives always are, I've discovered," said Chase gallantly.

The party had moved over to the great stone steps which led down into the gardens. Chase was standing beside Lady Deppingham, and both of them were looking toward his distant bungalow.

"That is my home, princess. It is the first time I have seen it from your point of view, Lady Deppingham. I must say that it doesn't seem as far the chateau seemed to be thousands of miles away."

"When in reality it was at your very feet," she said, with a bright look into his eyes. For some unaccountable reason Geneva resented that look and speech.

"Is that really where you live?" she asked, so innocently that Chase had difficulty in controlling his expression.

At that instant something struck sharply against the stone column above Chase's head. At least three persons saw the little puff of smoke in the hills far to the right. Every one heard the distant crack of a rifle. The bullet had dropped at Chase's feet before the sound of the report came floating to their ears. No one spoke as he stooped and picked up the warm, deadly missile. Turning it over in his fingers, he said coolly, although his check had gone white:

"With Von Blitz's compliments, ladies and gentlemen. He is calling on me by proxy."

"Good God, Chase," cried Browne, "they're trying to murder us! Get back, every one! Inside the doors!"

"I'm sorry to bring my troubles to your door," said Chase. "It was meant for me, not for any of you. The man who fired that did not intend to kill me. He was merely giving voice to his pain and regret at seeing me in such bad company." He was smiling calmly and did not take a single step to follow them to safety.

"Come in, Chase! Don't stand out there to be shot at!"

"I'll stay here for a few minutes, Mr. Browne, if you don't mind, just to convince you all that the shot was not intended to kill. They're not ready to kill me yet. I'm sure Lord Deppingham will understand. He has been shot at often enough since he came to the island."

He lighted a cigarette and coolly leaned against the column, his gaze bent on the spot where the smoke had been seen. The others were grouped inside the doors, where they could see without being seen. A certain sense of horror possessed all of the watchers.

"For heaven's sake, why does he stand there?" cried the princess at last. "I can endure it no longer. It may be as he says it is, but it is foolhardy to stand there and taunt the pride of that marksman. I can't stay here and wait for it to come. How can?"

"He's been there for ten minutes, princess," said Browne—"plenty of time for another try."

Before they were aware of her intention the princess left the shelter and boldly walked across the open space to the side of the man. He started and opened his lips to give vent to a sharp command.

"It is so easy to be a hero, Mr. Chase, when one is quite sure there is no real danger," she said, with distinct irony in her tones. "One can afford to be melodramatic if he knows his part so well as you know yours."

Chase felt his face burn. It was a direct declaration that he had planned the whole affair in advance. He flicked the ashes from his cigarette and then tossed it away, hesitating long before replying.

"Nevertheless I have the greatest respect for the courage which brings you to my side. I dare say you are quite justified in your opinion of me. It all must seem very theatrical to you. I had not thought of it in that light. I shall now retire from the center of the stage. It will be perfectly safe for you to remain here—just as it was for me." He was leaving her without another word or look. She repeated:

"I am sorry for what I said," she said eagerly. "And"—she looked up at the hills with a sudden widening of her eyes—"I think I shall not remain."

Chase made light of the occurrence, but sought to impress upon the others the fact that it was prophetic of more serious events in the future. In a perfectly cold blooded manner he told them that the islanders might rise against them at any time.

"The people are angry, and they will become desperate. Their interests are mine, of course. I am perfectly sincere in saying to you, Lady Deppingham, and to you, Mr. Browne, that in time they will win out against you in the courts. But they are impatient. They are not the kind who can wait and be content. It is impossible for you to carry out the provisions of the will, and they know it. That is why they resent the delays that are impending."

Deppingham told him of the scheme proposed by Saunders, treating it as a vast joke. Chase showed a momentary sign of uneasiness, but covered it instantly by laughing with the others. Strange to say, he had been instructed from London to look out for just such a coup on the part of the heirs—not that the marriage could be legally established, but that it might create a complication worth avoiding.

He could not help looking from Lady Deppingham to Bobby Browne, a calculating gleam in his gray eyes. How very dangerous she could be! He was quite ready to feel very sorry for pretty Mrs. Browne. He sat opposite to the princess. His eyes were refreshing themselves after months of fatigue; his blood was coursing through new veins. And yet his head was calling his heart a fool.

CHAPTER XV.

THE PRINCESS GOES GALLANT.

A WEEK passed—an interesting week in which few things happened openly, but in which the entire situation underwent a subtle but complete change. The mail steamer brought discouraging news from London. Chase was obliged to tell the islanders that notice of

True Household Economy

MOTHERS, we owe it as a duty to our husbands and families to take good care of them. We all want, of course, to have our loved ones cheerful and comfortable. Our dominant part is to give them the very best that we can make or bake. But sometimes we are tempted to save a few pennies in food and think that in so doing we are economizing. But is it so? Is this the kind of economy that is wise and profitable? Is it doing our full duty to our loved ones?

Royal Household Flour

We wouldn't think of buying the lowest priced eggs in the market just for the sake of economy. We would feel that because they were cheap they would be good eggs to avoid. The low price would give us a suspicion of their freshness and quality.

But when it comes to flour, for example, we may be tempted to buy the second best instead of the best because of the few pennies difference in price. We may think that economy in flour is different from economy in eggs. But it isn't. The principle is the same. The difference in cost between the best flour in the world and ordinary flour is so little that in justice to our responsibility as wives and mothers we can not afford to take chances.

From every point of view Royal Household Flour is more economical than any other. It produces more loaves to the barrel. It is richest in food value. It is more uniform. It is best for Pastry as well as Bread and yields more baked product in either bread or pastry than any other flour.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR furnishes more nourishment, more real food value per pound and per penny's worth than any other flour in the world.

SCIENCE CURES THE KIDNEYS

THROUGH "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

The Famous Medicine Made of Fruit Juices

After careful consideration, it has been determined that "Fruit-a-tives" is a thoroughly scientific remedy. It is based on scientific facts and it cures in a scientific manner. In fact "Fruit-a-tives" is known to be the most scientific remedy ever discovered for Kidney and Bladder Troubles. Mr. Placey thinks so, and his experience proves it:

Ulverton, P.Q., March 17th.

I suffered for many years with Kidney Trouble and Pain in the Back. I took every known Kidney remedy and kidney pill, but nothing gave me relief. I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives," and this fruit medicine cured me when every other remedy failed. I used fifteen boxes of "Fruit-a-tives." From the first, "Fruit-a-tives" gave me relief and I am now well—no pain, no suffering—and every symptom of Kidney Disease gone.

CLARENCE J. PLACEY.

the council and the relief committee.

The finance committee was authorized to negotiate a temporary loan, not exceeding $2,000 to meet urgent demands. Carried.

The Town Solicitor submitted the agreement between the town and the Shives Lumber Co., in reference to the proposed mill on the Shives site. This agreement states that the company's property shall be taxed on a nominal valuation and water shall be supplied at a nominal charge of $125 per year for a term of fifteen years. The amount of taxes agreed to was $375.00 per year. This mill will have 20 shingle machines and employ about 100 men. Some necessary amendments were discussed and the agreement was held over until next meeting.

Standing committee reports were passed. These dealt largely with accounts.

Council then adjourned.

THE GOVERNMENTS GRANT

The Dominion Government has by an order in council granted $70,000 towards the town of Campbellton. This amount will be devoted to the paying of interest on the bonds. This amount invested at four per cent. will pay interest to the amount of $8000 for nearly eleven years, while at three per cent. it will pay it for ten years and leave a little more than $2,000 to the good.

This is a generous donation toward the town's finances and if wisely invested will do much to reestablish the town's financial standing.

At a meeting of the Council and Relief Committee Tuesday evening the matter of the disposal of this amount, and the amount promised by the Local Government was discussed. It was the unanimous opinion that the amount should be deposited in a chartered bank and that legislation be secured to safeguard it for the purpose it was voted. The paying of the interest on the town bonds.

Now that the town's finances are again in good shape, and the financial standing of the town back to when it was before the fire, we hope the Council will at once take steps to provide an ample sinking fund to provide for bonds when they mature. The interest on the bonds is provided for for ten years, and during that ten years a substantial sinking fund should be created.

DESERVING OF REWARD

During the exacting time after the fire, when everyone was, to a greater or lesser degree, thinking of his own future, and all were busy, one town official seemed to forget himself and devoted his entire time, night and day to the interests of the town, and his fellow citizens, and working without hope or thought of remuneration other than the commendation of his fellows. That official was Mayor Murray. With his office in a shack he was busy from early morning until late at night directing the work of various departments and seeing that matters were being properly looked after.

During the first six weeks his practise was neglected and virtually lost, but never a word of complaint was heard. He kept at his work until he was able to hand it over to others competent to look after it.

We understand that the matter of presenting some slight token of appreciation to His Worship has been discussed among the members of the Relief Committee and other citizens, and we hope such will be speedily accomplished. Such recognition is merited and should come spontaneously from the Relief Committee and also the citizens of the town at large through the Town Council.

Wednesday evening a serious accident took place, just west of Andrew street crossing in the rock cut, which blocked traffic for a time, but fortunately no one was injured.

Dickie's freight special was just pulling into the depot here, when she was overtaken by number 351 the local from east. The special had not reported so the semaphore was showing clear when the local came along, running at her usual lively clip. In the rear of the special van was a box car which obscured the lights and it was not until the headlight of No. 351 showed the car on the track did the engineer realize that he was in danger. The emergency brakes were put on but the engine struck the car, lifting it and the van clear of the track. The car mounted the engine. Both crews stuck to their posts and fortunately escaped injury. A brakeman was on the box car with a lantern, but he escaped in a most marvellous manner. Con. Dickie was in the van getting up his way bills when the crash came. He had to crawl out a window.

Passengers got a severe shaking up, but none were injured.

TOWN COUNCIL HOLDS MEETING

Town Committee and Councillors Confer on Civic Matters—Committee Reports.

A meeting of the town council was held in the treasurer's office Tuesday evening. There were present His Worship Mayor Murray and Couns. McDonald, Mowat, McLennan, White, Moores, Alexander. The resignation of B. B. Lutz as assessor for the town of Campbellton was read and accepted.

A communication from the Caledonian Fire Insurance Co., asking if saw mills were to be erected in the town, and if so what precautions are being taken to prevent fires. The clerk was authorized to answer said letter.

Coun Alexander asked if the Shives Co., had submitted any plans or specifications of proposed mill. Had they obtained a permit.

His Worship—He was not aware of any such steps being taken.

A communication from Peter Clinch in insurance matters was read and laid on the table.

The residents of a reserved street on Jos. Duncan's property petition that water and sewerage be extended along said street. Referred to water and sewerage committee.

Judge McLatchey from the relief committee addressed the council in reference to the amount to be received from the Dominion and Local governments. He suggested that an act should be passed so that this money would be set aside for the payment of interest on the bonds only. Some such steps should be taken and Campbellton bonds would again be in the gilt edge list of investments. He also suggested that the local government be interviewed in reference to their share of amount promised toward payment of bond interest.

An informal discussion on the installing of water in the relief cottages was carried on and a basis of agreement arrived at between

WHEN REUBEN GETS THE AX.

(By Herbert Quick in Collier's)

"If all the seas were one sea, what a great sea that would be!
"If all the trees were one tree, what a great tree that would be!
"If all the axes were one ax, what a great ax that would be!
"And if the great man should take the great ax and fell the great tree into the great sea—what a splash splash that would be!"

What a splash splash there will be when the American farmers, our real Colossus, find out their strength, and, ax in hand, begin to act as one man! If, of course, he ever turns out to possess the organizing ability to do it.

Physically, it would be interesting to see the merger of all farmers take the financier—who can without much difficulty be imagined as merged—place him under a microscope slide, and study him. For the consolidated denizen of Wall street would, in such a way, be microscopic or ultra-microscopic. Greater Reuben would look on him with something of the fearful respect with which we examine the bacillus of cholera or bubonic plague. He would squeeze his eyelids together, shift the light, peer through the eyepiece, and when he finally got the MORGANISSIMUS GIGANTEUS in focus, he would exclaim: "Wa-ah! I snuu! That little cuss!"

And yet the real tug-of-war would be between the big fellow and the man under the microscope slide, rather than with any of the giants in whom the other occupations should be embodied—some of whom might be able to reach to his knees. For the man under the slide would have control of the railways, the mines, the wharves and docks, the banks and trust companies, the iron and steel and oil and copper and agricultural machinery, the strategic sites in cities and canyons and power lands, the lumber and coal, and almost everything except the lands of the farmer. He would be in control of the government and, through the government of the army and navy.

In Greene County, Iowa, a "home" telephone system built lines along almost every public road in the country. After a while the farmers made up their minds that this company was becoming trustified, and began building their own lines parallel with the ones with which they had so recently been identified. At last accounts the second movement had also spread to the county limits, and almost every country road had its telephone line on both sides. A waste of capital—of course; but the farmers when they made up their minds they wanted a thing, being united, got it—and then got it the second time. It was their own money, and they spent it as they pleased.

And yet the farmers are not very influential in this country. A man who has had more to do with the American farmer than any one I know, in the way of working for and teaching him, said to me: "The farmers of this country are like dry sand in the hand—they lack cohesion. They run out and leave you empty handed after you think you have grasped them." You remember that the verse with which we began contains the line, "If all the men were one man, what a great man he would be!" The farmer can be all-powerful when he acts as one man. He could then say to the Midget Magistrate under the cover slide: "You own the railroads? Well, we'll build railroads of our own, if you don't do the right thing!" They did that with the telephone lines in that Iowa county whereof we spoke. And if all the farmers were one farmer he could mine his own coal, and refine his own oil, and operate his own packing houses, and run his own elevators and warehouses, and buy his merchandise of all sorts in carloads and trainloads, and run his own banks, and deliver his fruits and eggs and everything he grows in car lots to the ultimate consumer—and the price of living might be lower for us all.

The other word for this teamwork on the part of the farmers is cooperation through agricultural organization.

It has been suggested here that if all the farmers were one farmer they might own their own packing houses. The farmers of Denmark do this—their cooperative pork packing house bought and defeated a British bacon trust formed to beat down the price of their meats in England.

Denmark has cooperative organizations for farm insurance, poultry raising and marketing eggs and poultry, for buying farm necessities, including seeds, feeds, fertilizers, and machinery, and for keeping bees and selling honey. There are also many cooperative breeding associations. The farmers buy together and buy cheap, and sell together and reach the ultimate consumer or pretty nearly to him. The result is that nowhere do the farmers get as much of the consumer's dollar as in Denmark; and there can be no doubt that the results of this system of cooperation are equally beneficial to the consumer and the producer. The middleman? Well, he can always go to producing, can he not?

European agriculture is being transformed by this massing of farmers into cooperative societies. Some Danish peasants belong to as many as ten of these societies. Such a farmer touches elbows with his fellows and is confident in their collective strength.

The American farmer has done comparatively little in this, but he will do more. We have now, in fact, some of the most efficient cooperative organizations in the world, mostly in the fruit, truck-farming, and dairying industries; but THE URGE TOWARD COLLECTIVE ACTION IS ON. Most of the agricultural papers are advocating in one form or another the cooperative idea. The great agricultural organizations—the American Society of Equity, the Farmers' Union, and the Grange—are in large measure favorable to the cooperative idea. Independent cooperative organizations are springing up all over the land. The error of those Missouri farmers who started the bank—that of overlooking the importance of expert management and expert leadership—is finding recognition as the dangerous thing for cooperation. The agricultural colleges are studying the problems of cooperation, and teaching, in the language of the Austrian law, "its importance and utility." The prediction may be ventured that within the next ten years we shall enter the era of agricultural organization in America, and that, taking the best tried features of European experience, and building with them on our own, we shall make of it a success equal, at least, to that of the Danes.

In those days the farmers will all be one farmer. In recognition of the underlying identity of interest subsisting between producers everywhere, THERE IS QUITE LIKELY TO BE COMMUNITY OF FEELING BETWEEN FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS AND THOSE OF LABORERS. The cordial relations that were established at the Farmers' Congress at St. Louis and the American Federation of Labor seems to forecast something of the sort. For a hint as to what may occur, one may again go to Denmark, where the organized farmers—organized in business ways—have gained such power that nearly half the seats in the chief governing body of the Kingdom are held by farmers—men who work with their hands, and support families on holdings of from three to fifteen acres. Denmark has perhaps the best government in the world. THE FARMERS HAVE NO INTEREST IN BAD GOVERNMENT—good government is good for them. What will happen when all the farmers—or even half of them—are one farmer? Doubtless he will cut some wood. There may or may not be a great splash. But thus we may take for truth—there are symptoms that OUR NATIONAL COLOSSUS IS STIRRING WITH THE PREVALENT MANIA FOR COLLECTIVIST ACTION, and that a lot of things are likely to happen when Reuben gets his ax.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disordered and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for the weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good."

It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures. If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

NERVE AGONIES
All Nervous Diseases Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Nerves that are overworked or weak quickly indicate their distress by pain. That pain may be neuralgia or inflamed nerves, usually affecting the head, but often the spine and limbs. It may be nervous dyspepsia, easily started by worry, excitement or weakness. It may be St. Vitus dance, a common affliction among children, or neurasthenia, a condition of general nervous exhaustion accompanied by acute melancholy. Worst of all the pain may signal the early stages of paralysis or nervous decay. All these disorders signify that the hungry nerves are clamoring for nourishment in the form of good, rich blood. The numerous cures of the above named nervous diseases and weakness in both sexes by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, are accounted for by the fact that these Pills actually make new, rich blood and so supply the starved nerves with the vitals needed to strengthen them. Mr. Wm. G. Jones, Westmead-Man, says: "A few years ago it was my misfortune to suffer from nervous debility, brought about through a severe attack of influenza. When the first effects were felt I used to wake up in the middle of sleep trembling like a leaf, and in a bath of cold perspiration. Later the trouble grew so bad that I scarcely got a wink of sleep, and would toss about in bed, growing so weak that I feared for my life. A doctor was called in, and then another but without avail. I became more and more low spirited, and without any apparent reason would have fits of crying. While in this condition, a nervous wreck, a pamphlet was given me telling what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done for others, and I determined to give them a trial. By the time I had finished a few boxes I began to get some sleep, and this greatly encouraged me. Then my strength began to return, my nerves grew staidier and in a few weeks more I was feeling as well as ever I did in my life, and you may be sure I will always gratefully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every one sick or ailing, as they restored me to health and strength after all other medicines had failed."

Editor's Mail
Letter on Scott Act Matters from Rev. W. J. Dean.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ADVOCATE. My name having appeared in the ADVOCATE in connection with a "Temperance Sermon," preached here last week, will you kindly allow me a word of explanation. The report, of course, gives but a few isolated remarks, and these, to a casual reader, may seem very vigorous and unguarded.

It is due to the town to say that there are some truly honorable, temperate people here, but they are hopelessly handicapped in any good work by the dishonorable and the intemperate not to mention the indifferent. This is a Scott Act town, yet there are not only those who deliberately tempt others to drink, but those who deliberately defy the law and sell the fiery fluid to both the white man and the red. He, who thus starts or speeds another on the down grade to a drunkard's hell, will find that in spite of any religion, he may or may not profess, when he too passes to his just deserts, his own quarters will be not a little uncomfortable. It is a notorious fact that people of the upper class (save the mark) do these things and apparently without interference while some poor beggars are hounded and prosecuted. Is this British fair play? Let the law be enforced against all justly and firmly. Let the senseless farce of "first" offences cease when a man repeatedly breaks the law. In fact there are no "offences" now, as far as the courts are concerned, except in regard to the drunkards, whose numbers are on the increase.

We pity and pray for the poor, hapless victim of intemperance and sympathize with the helpless, heart-aching wives and mothers, but we call high Heaven to mark the moral degenerates, who care nothing about filling these hearts with woe as long as they make money of the sin. Do not such human fiends predict a perdition? China has an ideal way in dealing with breakers of the opium laws. Let a farmer be found growing poppies after being warned, soldiers promptly arrest him, make him kneel among the tall-tale plants and very kindly relieve him of his head. It is needless to say that the results are highly satisfactory. We might point out that the offender never gives the officials any more trouble. A word to a wise council is sufficient. No intelligent man in these days needs to be told of the curse of liquor and the blight it brings upon communities.

Newcastle is beautiful for situation and has on the majestic river, immense natural advantages, but it cannot afford to harbor a monster that takes its daily toll of human hearts and eternal souls. That we are better or worse than other towns, is not the question, but that prominent men among us should openly violate our laws is pitiable indeed. How then can we expect the common people to have any respect for law—any law? But who is to enforce the Scott Act in Newcastle? The county council cannot, the town council dare not. We say "dare not" for the drink-sellers dictate as they please. Prosecute us, they say, and we will boycott you. The threat crows the council—at least in working majority, leaving the honest, but impotent, minority to bear the brunt of the battle.

We again, protest against the breaking of the Temperance laws. We plead for higher civic ideals and a truer moral code in our council. We beg for a sterner sense of duty in our Scott Act inspectors. And above all we strive to arouse public sentiment so that this shameful stigma may no longer characterize our otherwise fair town.

Yours Sincerely,
W. J. DEAN.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON

The eclipse of the moon was plainly visible here Wednesday night, although it was somewhat cloudy and foggy during the evening. The moon entered the eclipse about 3.40 and the total eclipse was on from about 8 o'clock until 8.50, the moon emerging brightly from the eclipse about ten o'clock.

BEAVER FLOUR

combines the rich gluten of Manitoba Spring wheat and the lighter, but equally important, properties of Ontario Fall wheat. The two combined form a perfectly blended flour that makes bread light, white, nutritious and extremely palatable, while pastry made with Beaver Flour has a crisp, flaky texture that brings many a compliment to the cook.

You don't need to be an expert in baking to attain the best results with BEAVER FLOUR.

But if you are an expert, you will readily recognize its incomparable qualities.

Your grocer has BEAVER FLOUR, and will recommend it.

The Man From Brodney's
 By GEORGE BARR M'GUTCHEON
 Copyright, 1908, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

a contest had been filed. The lineal heirs had pooled their issues and were now fighting side by side. The matter would be in chancery for months, even years. He could almost feel the gust of rage and disappointment that swept over the island, although not a word came from the lips of the sullen population. The very silence was foreboding.

He did not visit the chateau during that perplexing week. It was hard, but he resolutely kept to the path of duty, disdaining the pleasures that beckoned to him. Every day he saw and talked with Britt and Saunders. They, as well as the brisk Miss Pelham, gave him the "family news" from the chateau. It did not require extraordinary keenness on Chase's part to gather that her ladyship and Brodney had suddenly decided to engage in what he would call a mild flirtation, but what Saunders looked upon as a real attack of love.

"If I had the nerve I'd call Brodney good and hard," said Britt over his julep. "It isn't right. It isn't decent. The disappear for hours at a time, and they've always got their heads together. Poor little Drustila! She's from Boston, Chase, and can't retaliate. Besides, Deppingham wouldn't take notice if she tried. The worst of it is Deppingham has got an idea that they may try to put him out of the way—him and Drustila. Awful, isn't it? And, say, by the way, Saunders is getting to dislike you intensely."

"I can't help it if he loves the only stenographer on the island," said Chase easily. "You seem to be the only one who isn't in hot water all the time, Britt."

"Me and the princess," said Britt innocently. Chase looked up quickly, but the other's face was as straight as could be. "If you were a real gentleman you would come around once in awhile and give her something to talk to instead of about."

"Does she talk about me?" quite steadily. "They all do. I've even heard the white handmaids discussing you in glowing terms. You're a regular martinez hero up there, my man."

"Selim!" broke in Chase. The Arab came to the table immediately. "Don't put so much liquor in Mr. Britt's drinks after this—mostly water." Britt grinned amiably. "I say, Britt, you're not responsible for this affair between Brodney and Lady Deppingham, are you?" demanded Chase abruptly.

"What do you mean?" "I was just wondering if you could have put Brodney up to the game in the hope that a divorce or two might solve a very difficult problem."

"Now that you mention it, I'm going to look up the church and colonial divorce laws," said Britt noncommittally after a moment. "I advise you to hurry," said Chase coolly. "If you can divorce and marry 'em inside of four weeks, with no court qualified to try the case nearer than India, you are a wonder."

Chase was in the habit of visiting the mines two or three times a week, during work hours. The next morning after his conversation with Britt he rode out to the mines. When he reached the brow of the last hill, overlooking the wide expanse in which the men toiled, he drew rein sharply and stared aghast at what lay before him. Five hundred half-naked brown men were congregated in the shade of the trees far to the right. By the aid of his glasses he could see that one of their number was addressing them in an earnest, violent harangue. It was Von Blitz. From time to time faint sounds of shouts came across the valley.

Chase was in the mood to curse her temerity. As he came up over the slope she turned in the saddle to watch his approach. He had time to see that two men from the stables were in the rear. She smiled as he drew up beside her, not noticing his unconscious frown.

"So those are the fabulous mines of Japan?" she said gayly, without other greeting. "Where is the red glow from the rubies?"

"Who gave you permission to ride so far from the chateau?" he demanded, almost harshly. She looked at him in amazement.

"Am I a trespasser?" she asked coldly. "I beg your pardon," he said quickly. "I did not mean to offend. Don't you know that it is not safe for you to—"

"Nonsense!" she exclaimed. "I am not afraid of your shadows. Why should they disturb me?"

"Look!" He pointed to the distant assemblage. "Those are not shadows. They are men, and they are making ready to transform themselves into beasts. Before long they will strike. Von Blitz and Rasula have sunk my warships. You must understand that it is dangerous to leave the chateau on such rides as this. Come! We will start back together—at once."

"I protest, Mr. Chase, that you have no right to say what I shall do or—"

"It isn't a question of right. You are nearly ten miles from the chateau, in the most unfrequented part of the island. Some day you will not return to your friends. It will be too late to hunt for you then."

"How very thrilling!" she said, with a laugh. "I beg of you, do not treat it so lightly," he said, so sharply that she flushed. He was looking intently in the direction of the men. She was not slow to see that their position had been discovered by the miners. "Will you come with me now?"

"It seems so absurd! But I will come, of course. I have no desire to cause you any uneasiness."

As they rode swiftly back to the tree-lined road a faint chorus of yells came to them across the valley. For some distance they rode without speaking a word to each other. They had traversed two miles of the soft dirt road before Chase discovered that Selim was the only man following them. The two men who had come out with the princess were not in sight.

"The dogs! So, you see, princess, your escort was not to be trusted," said Chase grimly. "But they have stolen the horses," she murmured irrelevantly. "They belong to the chateau stables."

"Which direction did they take, Selim?" "They rode off by the Carter's highway, excellency, toward Ararat."

"It may not appeal to your vanity, your highness, but it is my duty to inform you that they have gone to report our clandestine meeting."

"Glandestine! What do you mean, sir?" "The islanders are watching me like hawks. Every time I am seen with any one from the chateau they add a fresh nail to the coffin they are preparing for me. It's really more serious than you imagine. I must therefore forbid you to ride outside of the park."

"I dare say you are right, Mr. Chase," she said at last, quite frankly. "I thank you."

"I am glad that you understand," he said simply. His gaze was set straight before him, keen, alert, anxious.

"Will you come with me now?" no longer required. I told them to go to—

"I understand," she said quickly. "It required courage to tell them that." He smiled.

"They protested friendship, but I can read very well as I run. But can't we find something more agreeable to talk about? May I say that I have not seen a newspaper in three months? There must be news that you can give me. I am hungry for it."

"You poor man! No newspapers! Then you don't know what has happened in all these months?"

"Nothing since before Christmas. Would you like to see a bit of news that I clipped from the last Paris paper that came into my hands?"

"Yes," she said, vaguely disturbed. He drew forth his pocketbook and took from its interior a small bit of paper. She read it at a glance and handed it back. A faint touch of red came into her cheeks.

"How very odd! Why should you have kept that bit of paper all these months?"

"You have been married nearly three months," he said reflectively—"three months and two days, to be precise." She laughed outright, a bewitching, merry laugh that startled him.

"How accurate you would be!" she exclaimed. "It would be a highly interesting achievement, Mr. Chase, if it were only borne out by facts. You see, I have not been married so much as three minutes."

He stared at her, uncomprehending. She went on, "Do you consider it bad luck to postpone a wedding?"

Involuntarily he drew his horse closer to hers. There was a new gleam in his eyes. Her blood leaped at the challenge they carried.

"Very bad luck," he said quite steadily, "for the bridegroom."

In an instant they seemed to understand something that had not even been considered before. She looked away, but he kept his eyes fast upon her half-turned face, finding delight in the warm tint that surged so shamelessly to her brow. He wondered if she could hear the pounding of his heart above the thud of the horses' feet.

"We are to be married in June," she said, somewhat defiantly. Some of the light died in his eyes. "Prince Karl was very ill. They thought he might die. His—his studies—his music, I mean, proved more than he could carry. It—it is not serious. A nervous breakdown," she explained haltingly. "It was necessary to postpone the marriage. He will be quite well again, they say, by June."

"I hope he may be fully recovered, for your sake," he managed to say. "Thank you." After a long pause she turned to him again and said, "We are to live in Paris for a year or two at least."

A TRAIN ROWDY RECEIVES A LESSON

Fined For Swearing on a Train and Acting Disorderly.

Amherst, Nov. 18.—The summary manner in which Johnston Cameron of Chignecto Mines, Cumberland County was dealt with by the Police of the Intercolonial Railway yesterday should be a warning to young men who think they can use profane and insulting language on railway trains. On the evening of the 15th inst., Cameron took No. 84 train at Amherst for Maccan. He had been drinking and on the way down he conceived an idea that he would show the passengers and train crew just what a terror he was and divesting himself of his coat he dared any of the passengers to fight. The train crew kept him within bounds until Maccan was reached and he was put off. Not feeling that he had sufficiently distinguished himself, he proceeded to take charge of the station. On the morning of the 16th, Special Agent Tingley was advised of the matter and he immediately had Inspector Jones go to Amherst and get a warrant for Cameron's arrest. Armed with the warrant Mr. Jones proceeded to Chignecto Mines and placed Cameron under arrest. He was brought to Amherst the same day where he was fined $15.00.

There was a bottle of port wine in the house, and in mistake for this Harry took a cruse of carbolic acid and drank some of it. He was a well known fisherman of the village and was fifty years of age.

him so he did not signal me. He came back to the mountain and we sat down and watched until 4.30. We saw a bull come out of the woods across to the next mountain. We took a look at him through the glasses. He was 1/2 mile off but his head looked good to me. Just then he looked up for a minute, then dodged into the woods, so the guide and I started for him making a big circle. We got pretty well down the mountain. It was getting quite thick and we thought we had lost him, when all of a sudden he jumped up in front of us and ran. The guide put up his horn and grunted a few times and the caribou stopped for a minute then started to circle us. The guide grunted again; he stopped behind a spruce and all that I could see of him was his hind parts. Then it was now or never. The first shot struck him just front of the hips; then he ran across an open place. The next shot caught him through the shoulders and down he went I called him a very fine specimen of a caribou, a typical representative caribou of the family; perfect coat and a fine set of antlers, 24 points with a good brow antler. I would like to take it home in the flesh but I am afraid of damaging the hide and another thing, I am 58 miles in the woods from Newcastle and 16 miles up in the mountain where the team left us at the home camp. We have got to pack it out to there. Have seen 43 caribou, 13 bulls, the balance cows and calves. The calves are getting quite large. We have seen only 2 little ones, but they were a long way off; we tried to get one but they got out. Have seen only 3 cows with horns. I always thought that a cow caribou had horns, but I find that only a small percentage have horns—4 per cent.

NOVEMBER 4. Left Bald Mountain camp at 7.10, went over and skinned the big bull that we got last night, 34 miles from camp; got him skinned and packed on the horse ready to start for Camp Wait at 9.30, 9 miles away. Arrived there at 12.30 killed a fine calf on the way and could have killed a cow, but the guide thought I had better not for I could get one near Camp Wait. Went out after dinner and tramped all the afternoon and saw just one little bull. It has rained all day. Saw 15 caribou today. Tomorrow I must kill a cow for we have got to start for the home camp. Sunday morning the team will be in after us. The cook went over this afternoon with the bull and calf and will be back tomorrow. Noon; it is still raining. 5 bulls.

NOVEMBER 5. Left Camp Wait at 9.45, raining hard, went out on the open ground in hopes to see a cow caribou. The wind was in our favor for once. We went up to the lookout. Nothing in sight, so we started across the flat and at the south branch of the hut to a little opening. While we were standing there thinking what to do next, out walked a cow caribou about 75 yards off. I missed the first shot but the second shot her a little far back and she started to run, but the third shot brought her down. Think I have got three very fine specimens. Just one caribou today. Saw 168 caribou, 47 were bulls.
