A New Thrill For Blase Motorists

Driving a Willys-Knight is a greater en-joyment than the novelty of your first motor

It registers an altogether new and different motoring experience.

While many engines perform well when new, the Willys-Knight retains its maximum efficiency, in fact grows better with use.

Can you conceive of a greater boon? It explains why the passive tolerance of many motorists has been changed into active enthusiasm by the Willys-Knight.

Brighter Outlook.

To-day's summary of wa news is a cheerful bud get. It paints a picture of brighter colours that we have seen for long gains west of Cambrai, the value of which will soon be made apparent while the peril that has hung for fateful week and more like a dar cloud over the Italians has been diss pated, we are told. Great British and and artillery have been streamin on be in the thickest of the fray. the metaphor that we have chosen t apply to this phase of the war, that the boomerang has reached the end of its forward flight and is about In thirty months of continuous war fare, marked by extraordinary feats and deeds of high heroism, the Italians have done nothing more glorious and heroic than this defence of the Plave. The full story of it wi he told until the war is over, if then but it is enough to know that our Allies have held at bay superior for ces advancing to attack after attack with a savage desperation born of the knowledge that success is an imperative necessity. They have had no success and failure now stares them in the face. Not the least valuable par to the Allies' cause of the grea achievement is the toll exacted from the ranks of the enemy. The losses have been great on both sides, but i is only reasonable to expect they have been greater on the side of the at tack. If we dismiss from our minds the misleading regard for territory the exact locus of the battle, which is comparatively immaterial, and omit the much more important bolstering up of Austrian hopes and morale, we will see how great a gain the whole business has been to the Allies. For the enemy, with dwindling reserves, has come into the open and been held

If it is, it will be ceded voluntarily, that the Allies may the more easily assume the offensive; but this would not the offensive; but this would be seem to be necessary now. plains. It is not enough to hold the enemy. The boomerang—we are at it again—must not merely fall spent to the earth: it must be guided back upon the heads of those who threw it. We believe that it will. We believe that if a few short weeks, or even days, the foe will be in retreat back to the Tagliamento and to the mountain defiles from which, the ground prepared by spies and traitors, they emerged so triumphantly a month ago. If that happens there will be little stomach left in Austria for what remains of the war.

Telegraphing last evening, the correspondent says the enemy is vigorously pressing at three points. The first is Tomba Mountain and Monferena. The latter, being the spur of the Tomba Crescent, has fallen, but the heroic defence has rendered the situation sta-tionary. Behind Tomba and Monferena supplementary defences are being prepared with the idea of minimizing the loss of Tomba and Monferena, although a considerable advance here might force the Piave. The second point of attack is San Martino, on the Brenta, and the third point is the Asiage Plateau, especially Mount Meleta, where the enemy has maintained a steady pressure among the snows the past fornight. People shouted themselves hoarse and waved Union Jack's and Stars and Stripes.
