It is false economy to postpone painting your property. Many months—perhaps years—must elapse before paint will return to 1913 prices, if ever. Meanwhile the wear and tear of weather is working more harm than any future reduction of paint prices would cover. Insure your house against decay by painting it with Matchless Paint.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
THROUGH THE NIGHT.

IT was a wintry night, and yet not an unpeaceful one; there was little or no wind, and the snow fell as softly and as silently as down from the breast of a dove, but it fell quickly and thickly, and the second keeper, as he trudged on his beat through the snow-clad woods, looked like the image which the boys had been hard at work at on the green, ever since the snow commenced to fall. It was a night, with all its peacefulness, in which a man might be tempted to wish himself indoors, and betake himself there if he got the chance; but the under keeper either did not mind the snow, or was too faithful to his duty to think of shirking it. So he trudged on, keeping his gun under the shelter of his coat, and occasionally putting up his gloved hand to wipe the white sky-fleece from his tawny beard and moustache. Once or twice he swung round in his steady trudge and looked with a curiously wistful look at the brilliantly lighted windows of the house, especially at those of the dining and drawing rooms. And he always resumed his onward trudge, after these stray glances, with a sigh that was very mournful and longing. At last he turned off to the footpath which led toward his cottage, muttering: "Too snowy even for a poacher—I may as well get in!"

In a few minutes he came within sight of his solitary home, and having shaken himself like a Polar bear to get rid of the snow from his clothes, and well scraped his heavy boots, he struck a light and entered. It was, of course, all dark and cold, but the second keeper was not a man to be disheartened by a look of welcome, and with business-like promptitude, set to work and ignited a fire, watched it with grave assiduity, and soon had a cheerful blaze and glow all over the little room. Then he lit his lamp, and put on his kettle for tea, and made the other preparations for the same meal, which being at last prepared, he sat down thereto, after a most elaborate ablution and general brush-up, and ate as heartily as a stalwart Englishman should do, who has been tramping about in snow for three hours. Then with the orderly neatness of the most precise housewife, he cleared the remains of the meal away, and of course, got out his pipe.

As he stood up to light it, the gleam of the fire fell upon his face, and for the first time because hitherto it had been concealed—we can see that it is a frank, handsome face, that would have to be described as a gay and genial one also but for the wistful, waiting expression about the delicate, dark blue eyes. The figure is no less striking than the face; the artist would at once have pictured it clothed in the romantic garb of bygone medieval days, and easily realized how well the gay trappings would have been set off. But it looked graceful and stalwart enough in the rough, dark brown velvet of his class to warrant the aforesaid artist making a sketch of it on the spot. But there was no artist nor anyone else to see it; all was as silent and solitary as the grave, and as he sat over the fire, puffing at his pipe, he looked like a youthful Rip Van Winkle who had awakened—to reverse the scene—in a sleeping world.

He sat for some time, smoking and thinking, and by degrees his eyes softened and his lips moved in that audible soliloquy and self-communing which solitary people invariably grow into. A man must talk, and if there is no other listener, then he must talk to himself.

"Yes," he mused, poking the fire, as if resolved to attract its attention, "say what you like, I am right—I have been quite right all through. What! force myself on a pure, innocent girl, who does not love me!—take advantage of a right over her which I acquired by a trick, and which she yielded by an impulse! Not while I've got an ounce of honor or left! No—I gave her her freedom when she asked for it, and I won't take it from her—certainly not now when she is rich and powerful—not now, certainly! What would the world say?—not that I care for the world!—but what would she think? God bless her! She'd shrink from me as a mercenary villain, who knew what was going to happen, and caught her in a trap! No, you are free from me, dear little one. I can watch over you and guard you still, but it is not for me to break the vow I took never to claim you while I lived!"

He looked at the fire, and his face grew dark; and, mechanically, as if the habit were a confirmed one with him, he slid his hand into the breast of his coat, and drew out a silk neckerchief. It was a lady's, though it was spotted with blood; and he laid it on his hand caressingly, and looked at it as a man looks at the relic of a dead-and-gone love.

I don't think the under keeper was a man given to tears, but there was something suspicious in the way in which he suddenly thrust the stained neck handkerchief into his breast, and reached for the tobacco for a second pipe.

"Yes," he muttered, as he lighted the pipe, "I can watch over her, and there's need for it, if I'm not mistaken. Take care, my fine gentleman, how far you go. I can trust her, as I would an angel, but I trust you just as far as I can see you. I'll keep my vow, and lay no claim to her; but, by the heaven above us, if ever there was a dog in the manger, here is one!" and he struck his broad chest with a sudden, passionate thoroughness which was ominous. Then he strolled to the window, and looked out.

"Snowing still! How cozy and comfortable the windows of the house look! There you are, my darling, inside there, like a rare and lovely gem in a casket! My gem—no, not mine, for I yielded you back to yourself, ere I had done more than wear you for a moment on my breast! There you are, my darling, rich and safe, and happy! I wonder are you singing now, or laughing, perhaps, as you used to laugh? It is strange," he broke off, addressing himself with a curious questioning, "I have not seen you laugh, and there is not much laughter in your face! But you must be happy; you have forgotten the old times, that scamp to Basle; you look upon it as an absurd piece of girlish romance, no doubt—no doubt! Yes," and he sighed, "you have forgotten it—and me!"

Then his soliloquy ended, if his musing did not. He went back to the fire and sat down—not to read, but to dream of that which he assured himself she had forgotten.

Meanwhile the mistress of Rosedene, the young heiress whom all the world was envying, as the possessor of youth, beauty and a million of money, and who, therefore, the world argued, must be the happiest of mortals, stood hesitating for a moment outside her own house, undecided which way to fly.

She knew that only a few minutes would elapse before the man from whom she was flying would return to the room and discover her absence; she did not stop to consider from what she was flying, or whether she could not best insure her own safety from his dominant will and bold audacity by seeking refuge in her own apartments. The one idea—flight—away from him and the house—pre-empted; and after that half moment of hesitation she sped lightly across the lawn and the ornamental garden, which ran quite round the house, made for the preserves, drawn there by the instinct which prompts the pursued to seek the nearest shelter that gives promise of concealment.

The snow was thick, and her weight, light as it was, buried her at each step ankle deep in the soft impudgment, so that she could not make much progress, but at last, after what seemed an age of minutes, she gained the edge of the shrubbery, and still panting hard like a hunted roe, she leaned against a tree, her ears and eyes strained acutely, her whole frame strung up to its utmost tension.

It was only breathing time she required—not time for thought. That would come after. As she stood there, trembling and panting, it came upon her like a heavy hand laid across her heart. She would have all the rest of her life for thought! For thought and remorse! For what had she done?—the cruellest, the weakest piece of folly that woman had ever committed.

She had sent him from her side at the instigation of a few, perhaps false, certainly uncorroborated words of a strange woman—the man who loved her, who had made her his wife, whom she had loved—and, yes, whom she still loved, though he lay cold and dead in a distant battlefield.

She had sent him to that death. She, a weak, foolish girl, had sent him from her to plunge into a reckless life that had brought him to the grave.

Then there rose before her the stalwart, manly form, and bold, joyous face, so full of life and youthful manhood. She saw him as he stood over her whispering the sweet words of love and passionate devotion. She saw him as he looked that night, though she, blind girl that she had been, had not known him; saw him dash to the onset, with blood-stained sword waved aloft, his voice and very form reanimating his men, and winning the cause for which he died. She saw him—oh, God, how plainly, out here in the snow! lying at her feet, his noble face, which still told its story to her deaf ears and sightless eyes, cool that she had been! wet with the blood and dew of death!

Zam-Buk
Saved me a lot of money!

writes Mr. R. Howard, Sr., of Bracebridge, Ont. He continues: "Four years ago I sustained a scratch on my leg, which turned to an ulcer. I was confined to my bed for six months under doctors' treatment, during which time I did not earn a cent, and in addition, spent dollars upon dollars before a cure was effected.

"Recently I sustained a scratch on my other leg. It became very inflamed and swollen, and finally turned to an ulcer. This time, however, I knew about Zam-Buk, and I acted very differently. I used Zam-Buk alone, with the result that not only was the ulcer healed in much shorter time than the previous one, but I was able to go to work all the time it was healing, and I did not lose a single day's pay. I sincerely hope that my experience may be the means of showing other working people the great healing value of Zam-Buk and of saving many from needless expense and unnecessary suffering."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema and all skin diseases, ringworm, boils, piles, cuts, burns, etc. 50c box, 3 for $1.25, all druggists, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c stamp for postage on free trial box.

"Oh, my love! my love!" she cried, throwing up her hands toward heaven. "Take me to you! take me to you!"

But the snow dropped down upon her face in mockery, and no voice answered in his well-remembered tones, "Come!"

Suddenly a sound, which seemed to come from the direction of the house, startled and recalled her to her danger.

The man who exercised so fearful a power over her, from whose inflexible will she was flying, was in pursuit. He would catch her in the snow, and wring consent from her! No! Anywhere—the silent hut in the forest—anywhere out of his reach! With a great gush, but a firm clench of the dainty teeth, the half-demented woman turned and fled into the wood.

Poor Edna! She had just awakened to the full consciousness of the extent of her passion; had just learned to feel what the word "wife" should mean in all its deep and tender mysteries; had just, from her own inner consciousness, discovered that the passion which she had thought she had mastered was still great and powerful, and dominant as a giant's, but to be told, at the same time, that the object of that passion had died, unrecognized, unforgetting, and un-forgiven, at her feet.

She turned and fled.

Before her, in the deep recesses of the forest, there lies, half hidden by the frost and snow, a dark pool; half mad with grief, passion and terror, instinctively she seemed drawn to it.

Even in the woods the snow was thick, it hid the undergrowth from her bewildered eyes, great boughs of trees seemed to rise like ghosts and impede her flight—her strength, made flutinous by excitement and the crisp, cold air, began to fail. She would not be able to reach that awful place of refuge before the pursuer was upon her.

What should she do?

Suddenly, as if in answer to the mentally half-formed question, there shone before her a bright little light. Instinctively she made for it, and found that it shone through the tiny window of the keeper's hut.

Make your Motoring season an enjoyable one by owning the Car that all other motorists look upon with envy—the Buick Six is the most envied car in St. John's.

The Buick is always ready to take you anywhere you desire to go—it never falters.

When you press the starting pedal of the Buick, you are assured immediate response—the Delco starter is always on the job to turn over your engine every time you require it.

Buick Cars are luxuriously equipped, and upholstered in genuine black leather—no imitation. Strength of construction is an inherent quality of all Buicks. With the new Sixty Horsepower Valve in Head engine sixty miles an hour is easily accomplished, besides hills are made short work of.

A new and valuable feature is the entirely enclosed valves and engine, thus keeping out all grit and dust and giving longer life to the car, consequently the Engine is noiseless.

We shall be happy to let you look over our 1919 Buick Six which recently arrived—you will be convinced why it is the most envied car once you have examined it.

GETTING SERIOUS.
WARSAW, March 16.
The Bolshevik advance into the Ukraine is assuming serious proportions, according to advices from Transilva. The objective of the Bolsheviks apparently is the old frontier line of Russia on the west, with probable diversion towards Odessa. General Fetina's Government is recruiting from Winnitza to Poskuraw, and the battle for the possession of Winnitza is continuing unabated.

POLES THREATEN ADVANCE.
BERLIN, March 16.
Despatches to Berlin newspapers from Graudenz allege that the Poles are preparing for a general advance against the Germans, and have notified the German outposts that the armistice is no longer in effect. The despatches say that the Poles are charged with eighty-four violations of the armistice. The German authorities at Loken near Allenstein, as added, have seized the Polish supplies which were smuggle across the Polish frontier. A non-commissioned officer and five civil

Ypres--The Martyred City of Belgimm.

LANCE-CORPORAL J. J. RYAN

Incidentally a few days ago I glanced a copy of one of the daily papers. a "Ypres Lie Dead," such were they my thoughts went rolling back the months and into the land death, desolation, desecration destruction were evidently its possessions. Memory led me over grand Ypres-Menin Road, past the remaining Cafe's and into the city will stand forever, a monument "Flemish Kultur" and attempted the taking the outskirts of the once town I passed the remnants of the splendid railway station; an over-ground reservoir lay on my left and a turning to the right still show-line of houses in fairly good condition though the blue sky was ble through the roofs in many places.
I have often heard the soldiers say the Kaiser had sworn to plant shells in Ypres than any student could count. I have never heard or seen anything official of this vow, but the appearance of the city, one could think that more than an orinary amount of "hate" was poured it.
I went through some bye streets noticed the small shops that were minus everything but shell-holes, and on strolling into the big wonderful square I saw what remained of the beautiful Cloth Hall that was famed the world over for its splendid architecture and its valued paintings from every famous brush. But my reverence was brought to a very abrupt halt on hearing a shell scream cross the buildings and go crash into the ruins of St. Martin's Cathedral, sending up a shower of splinters and debris. I moved further on into the main city and watched the steady bombing. It seemed as tho' Fritz could never leave off his dirty work.
The destruction of the "Temple" of peace could not have been more complete than the leveling of Ypres.
The road leading over the bridge that crosses the Canal. This bridge is known as the Menin Gate; turn neither left nor right but keep straight on and you have an ounce of British blood in the soil at the spot before you. I was told that this was one of the best parts of Ypres and now it remains a desolation. If a rock breaker away into his trenches and his casualties must have been heavy. One night we had a very narrow escape from his frightfulness, we were caught by the gas, but we got our helmets on quick enough to baulk his purpose. A few nights later we returned the compliment and caught Mr. Hun napping, consequently the enemy Red Cross trains were on the move the following morning.

We had a week at Elverdinghe, a little village a few kilometres from the city, and we worked mighty hard mixing concrete for the defenses in the reserve line. This land for miles all round had suffered quite as much as Ypres, except the Chateau, once the residence of an Austrian General; their guns spared this but not the grounds around it.
It is very hard to give a clear picture of everything I saw and heard in Belgium. The things should be seen to be realised. You can see a small particle of the price of War and it looks like a cheque for the cost; drawn, signed and endorsed. Folk "way back here, two thousand miles from the bark of the guns have no idea what Belgium suffered. They gave their contributions however large, however small, and said "that will help." But little they know that money or anything earthly will ever remake those who could not fly before the sweep of the Hun. Things have happened that gold is unable to redeem and forever will a Teuton read it in the eyes of a Belgian.

War is no less terrible to a Britisher who fights in No-Man's Land than to those who, unable to help themselves, had to meet the tide of brute invasion.

You Can't Find Any Dandruff and Hair
Strops Coming Out.

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy, glossy and beautiful at once.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking only one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or collet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A small bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

Household Notes.

The tendency is decidedly towards

The lingerie blouse is implied by the return to favor of the smart plain

The long straight close-fitting coat over a slim skirt can be worn by almost any figure.

White confirmation dresses are of Obituary.

SISTER M. GABRIELLA MURPHY.

There died at Alverno Home, Clinton, Iowa, on March 14th, 1919, Sister M. Gabriella Murphy. The deceased religious was the second youngest daughter of Mr. Matthew J. and the late Alice Murphy, this city. On Saturday last her father received a wire conveying the sad intelligence of her death in the 23rd year of her age. The deceased young lady left here in August, 1915 to enter the teaching community of the Third Order of St.
Francis, with, in our human calculations, a long and useful life before her, but that fell disease, consumption, which is no respecter of youth or age, claimed her as a victim, and for the past four months she has been perfectly resigned, and calmly and hopefully awaiting the summons which came to her on the above mentioned date. Being an accomplished musician she was a valuable asset as a teacher to her community and will be missed by the teaching staff. Of an amiable and gentle disposition she was beloved by all who came in contact with her. Here was one of those exceptional young lives, "whom to know was to love, and her early taking away will be regretted by a large circle of friends, especially in the West End of the city. Her death comes as a sad blow to her bereaved father, whose only son, two years ago, offered up a promising young life in the cause of right and justice on the blood-stained fields of France, and quite recently lost another daughter, two years younger than the subject of these remarks. Besides her father, Sister M. Gabriella is survived by one sister to whom the Telegram extends its sympathy.—R.I.P.

MARY FREEMAN.

We regret to announce the passing of Mrs. Mary Freeman, relict of the late Thomas Freeman, H.M.C. Placentia, and daughter of the late Patrick Grant, of the same place, which occurred at the residence of her son, Mr. T. J. Freeman, 382 Water Street, last evening. Deceased who had attained the good old age of 92, was descended from a long-living, Irish-English stock, and up to the end retained all her faculties. Nine years ago Mrs. Freeman met with a painful accident, as an unfortunate result of which her hip was broken, and never since, in fact, has she full recovered from the bad effects of this. Her late husband, a well known citizen of Pla-centia, died some twenty years ago ago, and one son, Mr. Thomas J., and three daughters, Misses Mary and Sarah, and Mrs. P. Butler, Water St.
West, survive. To them we extend sincere sympathy.

MRS. MARY A. TOBIN.

Mrs. Mary A. Tobin, widow of the late Lawrence Tobin, died at the General Hospital yesterday, after a brief illness. Less than two weeks ago deceased entered hospital to undergo an operation, but her condition did not improve, and she died at 11 o'clock yesterday. Four sons—Michael, of Moore & Co.'s; John, of the R. N. Co.; Lawrence, foreman with Godden & Bartlett; and James, of Teat and Co.'s; and five daughters, three residing in the United States, are left to mourn.
The funeral takes place at 11.30 tomorrow from her late residence, No. 8 Nunmary Hill.

BEARING IT.

When I am full realize that kicks are vain. I'd rant around in gorgeous style, and burn up language by the mile if I believed it would help me out when I have flu or mumps or gout.

I've had most kinds of cheap disease; I've had rheumatism in my knees; some asthma in my bosom lurks, and indigestion in my works;
my valves are otten out of whack and I've lumbago in my back, ingrowing tooth and "tits" things, and everything that aches and stings. When I was young I thought relief might come from springing roars of grief, but age brings wisdom —or it should—and shows what's good, and what's no good. The man who calmly bears his cross is never quite a total loss.
He'll always have a herd of friends until his little journey ends. But no one loves the sweating swain who beefs about a little pain. When I am crippled up and sore, I try to sing and smile the more; tears will not make my anguish quit and now's the time to make a hit by stacking up as Sunny Jim—I'll work that graft or lose a limb. And so the cheery neighbors come,
and bring me jam
of quince and plum,
and chicken soup,
and things like those; they wouldn't if I made my woes the punk excuse for briny weeps; they'd dodge my coop, and that for keeps.

Sir,—I beg to forward you with copies of correspondence received by Major Sullivan, Officer Commanding, Newfoundland Forestry Companies, having reference to the performed by the Foresters during their stay in Scotland. These letters speak in very flattering terms of work performed by our Men, and another instance of the appreciation of Newfoundland's efforts during the war.

Major Sullivan,
Kenmore, I want to express to you on behalf of the Scots Branch of Timber Supply Department, our very thanks for the assistance we received from yourself, your men and your men, and from Mr. Gordon who has been such a good aid to the enterprise. You have had two of the most difficult operations which have come within the scope of the Department's work in Scotland. The first has been finished to complete success. We greatly regret and I know you regret that second should be left uncompleted since the end of the war was uncertain date, we have always been that this risk had to be run in larger operations. Preliminary Notice to the Trade. WELCH'S GRAPELADÉ, A Pure Grape Jam.

Grapelade is a real food product that takes rank with Welch's Grape Juice and is made by the same company. It is a new asset to the grocer—a product on which constantly increasing and always profitable sales can be counted. Its permanence is assured by its enthusiastic reception and big repeat sales wherever it has been introduced.

Remember that Grapelade is not simply another grape jam. It is a new product, a real discovery in grape goodness. It can be enjoyed in many delightful ways.

As we are cutting out the Jobbing end of our business we will not be carrying Grapelade in stock, but we are now booking orders for direct shipment to the retail trade by boat from New York. For further particulars and prices see or telephone

At St. Thomas's.

St. Thomas's Church was filled on Sunday night, when Rev. Dr. Jones spoke especially to the sailors and soldiers, taking his text from the Book of Ecclesiastes. "There is no discharge in this war." The preacher first of all stated that his subject had been suggested by a soldier's mother and that he wished to speak pointedly to the sailors and soldiers. He then spoke of the many soldiers who died in France, and had their resting place marked by the wooden crosses. These wooden crosses suggest three things, by their pointing upwards, downwards, and outwards. These suggestions give us certain thoughts, which, if acted upon, mould the character. The cross pointing upward speaks of duty, which is the highest expression of human character, and which brings its own reward. Adopting a personal note, he continued, telling the young men that they were often told that their discharge from the army meant that their duty was done, but he declared that the spiritual warfare was not over, and that the duties of citizenship were as strenuous as those of soldiering. As far as the reward was concerned, he advised them to avoid all Government jobs, as the later often tended to destroy the independence of the men, in voting on possibly vital questions of the country's welfare. He further warned them not to be pessimists or revolutionists, as the life of Jesus, in His three years of preaching, during which time he spoke not a word against the Roman power, was a living example of the force of personal social service. He told them that money, legislation and organization were only subsidiary things, and that the real moralising force was personal service of the individual man, and emphasized the need of high ideals, and loyalty to the same, asserting that from such would spring a regenerated people. Taking the lesson from the base of the cross as pointing downwards, he declared that manhood was at its best on the battlefield, as character was shown among the soldiers. He quoted the words of Mr. Moody, "character is what a man is in the dark." To develop this character two axioms were to be kept in view, "aim high," and "fight hard." Men were to live up to the high standard set, and to stand and fight together. They were to battle against three evils: (1) drunkenness, and to make the prohibition law more effective, (2) gambling, and to counteract the evil and demoralizing influences of this habit, (3) impurity. In the last named he made a plea for ignorance and hatred of sin, and gave the words of Sir Gallahad: "My strength is as the strength of ten, because my heart is pure." He pleaded for ignorance and hatred of evil, and also for loyalty to truth, that the passions of evil might be kept down, and character strengthened. The cross pointing upward beamed the need of God. God was not optional. He was the inspiration of duty, and the foundation of morality. Finally, the preacher commended them to God, declaring that it was no little thing to become a Christian, but that it required heroism to fight against the foes of righteousness. "We have no time to sport away the hours," quoted the preacher, and as a shining example, worthy of following, he instanced General Gordon, the noble Christian and soldier, who so lived and died that men spoke of him as one who gave "his heart to God."

Market Notes.

Codfish—With but few transactions last week prices stood at $14 @ $14.50 for No. 1 Shore and $9.50 to $10 for Labrador Soft Cure.

Cod Oil—This article is at a trade standstill, the nominal price being $130 per tun, with no prospect of any advance. Refined continues dull at $2.25 per gallon.

Herring—With prices gone to the dogs in the New York Market, a corresponding drop has taken place locally, $14.50 being the highest price for Scotch pack, with sales slow. Spits, which are now in demand for West India requirements are selling at $7 to $7.50 according to quality.

Provisions—Standard Flour is being quoted at from $14 to $14.50, and a few barrels of "all white" are being offered at prices upon application. Judging by the recent advance in Chicago we are likely to have dearer Pork than ever the coming season. Local prices are unchanged and trade in this commodity holds dull. Beef values go from $46.50 to $47.50, according to grade. Sugar is now released from all restrictions, as will be seen by referring to the official notice elsewhere in our columns. White is selling at $12.70 per hundred pounds, but there are prospects of a decline in the price of subsequent importations. Because of Food Control regulations, Molasses keeps up to $1.00 per gallon, wholesale, though it is quite possible that with the arrival of new shipments from Barbados, this figure will be considerably reduced. The quantity now held in stock here is small and the quality of it is decidedly not superior.

Anti-Social Strikes.

The cables informed the world that the strike of port workers at Buenos Aires had prevented 600,000 tons of cargo from entering the port, and had prevented the export of 100,000 tons of meat from that port. That is a sorry sequel to Argentina's advance of $200,000,000 by the Allies to be used in payment for foodstuffs and raw materials. To be sure, the strike makes a better market for others who have such goods for sale, but nobody except strikers would create such conditions. Their selfish benefit is not so clear as the injury to others, both in Argentina and in the hungry countries. Such incidents are too common, and their reaction upon the strikers is invariable.

In Seattle the strikers lost $3,500,000 in wages, and damaged trade unionism beyond estimate by the disclosure of the extent to which some laborers are willing to go when they are receiving not only the highest wages ever known, but so high that they prejudice other laborers and disturb the nation's scale of prevailing wages. In Butte, too, the conditions were revolutionary, although wages and prices in the copper industry are on a sliding scale agreed to be fair when prices were rising, but open to forcible resistance when prices are falling. What can capital do more to persuade labor that it is receiving a fair deal and has a stake in the industry? Labor cannot have the feelings of a partner, and therefore cannot be qualified for partnership, unless it is willing to share the fat with the lean.

Reason should be met with reason, but force can be met only with force. Collective bargaining should be allowed, but not unlawful duress. Humane considerations should be favored, but there should be no parleying with those who create disorders, or who combine less for the betterment of their own conditions than to prevent others from accepting what they decline. Workers who have claims over strikers raise a presumption of bad faith in denouncing as unfair wages that others are willing to take. They who take low wages need them more than those who decline them. Wages increase production, and production is for the interest of everybody. Strikers decrease production, and this is against the interest of everybody, including the strikers. The solidarity of the whole mass is superior to the solidarity of the class. Class patriotism is anti-social. Mass patriotism is the patriotism of country, the patriotism of a nation, and therefore necessary to a degree surpassing humane qualities, which sometimes are manifested in the manner of revolutionary and the assassin. This is a unionism which is beneficent, and unionists are responsible for the necessity of drawing distinctions.—Y. Times chute which you constructed at Craignivean will long be remembered as marking an epoch in forest utilisation in Scotland. If it had not been for the difficulty of arranging matters with the Railway Company at Killin, I have no doubt that the floating of the timber down Loch Tay, as you proposed, would have lent similar distinction to your work at Kenmore, I am sorry to think how much you have been hampered in that case by the difficulty of the road transport.

Your work has been of the greatest value to this country at a time when timber was sorely needed for war purposes and labor impossible to obtain. The gallant part so many of your men played with the army in France has increased the interest felt by Scotsmen in your work, as has also the method of recruiting under which only men unfit for Military Service have served in the Forestry Companies. I am delighted to hear that it is proposed to erect a permanent monument to their work at Craignivean.
All of us in this Office, who have had occasion to work with yourself, Major Baird, and your other Officers, will look back with pleasure to the two years you have spent with us in Scotland. I shall be grateful if you can find any means of conveying our thanks to both officers and men.
Yours very truly,
(Signed), JOHN STIRLING MAXWELL,
Assistant Controller of Timber Supplies, Scotland.
Major M. S. Sullivan,
Nfld. Forestry Companies, Kenmore, Aberfeldy.

Board of Trade, Timber Supply Dept., Edinburgh, 21st Jan. 1919.
Dear Major Sullivan,
Now that you are beginning to wind up your work at Kenmore, I want to express to you on behalf of the Scots Branch of the Timber Supply Department, our very thanks for the assistance we received from yourself, your men and your men, and from Mr. Kenmore who has been such a good help to the enterprise. You have had two of the most difficult operations which have come within the scope of the Department's work in Scotland. The first has been finished to complete success. We greatly regret and I know you regret that the second should be left uncompleted since the end of the war was uncertain date, we have always been that this risk had to be run in larger operations. The 3000 ft.

Watch the Tongue of your Young!

Your little Pets need Cascarets

Children think Cascarets just dandy; They are safe and mild cathartic candy. Sell for a dime—"work" every time.

MOTHERS! Clean the clogged-up places. Do away with the flat fermentations and constipation which is keeping your little cross, feverish and sick. Children love Cascarets, because to them they are like eating candy. Cascarets act better than castor oil, calomel or any other medicine on the tender stomach, liver and bowels. Cascarets never gripe, never injure, and do not disappoint the worried mother. Give harmless Cascarets to children one year old and upwards. Each ten cent box contains full directions.

have just received from Sir Jas. Ball, I should like to take the opportunity of associating myself with the work which has been accomplished by the Newfoundland Forestry Companies in the Old Country.

As godfather, so to speak, of the Corps, I made promises in its behalf to the Controller before its arrival in this country, that it would prove equal to tackling the hardest proposition which might be selected for the operations of the Force.

It was certainly given one of the hardest operations undertaken anywhere in the United Kingdom and carried through the first with complete success, and was well on its way with the second with even better prospects of success, when the Armistice came and with it Demobilization.

Yours has been the main burden of responsibility, and therefore, the credit of achieving success, and you have been most ably and loyally seconded, by Major Baird, in particular, and by your officers generally, each in their sphere of work and responsibility. My warmest thanks and congratulations to you all for the good work which has been done, and my best wishes for you all in the future.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) MAYSON M. BEETON.

Board of Trade, Timber Supply Dept., 80, Newman Street, Oxford St., W.L., 18th Feb. 1918.

Dear Mr. Beeton,

Now that the work of the Newfoundland Forestry Corps is being wound up, I give myself the pleasure of putting upon record my very high appreciation of the work of the Corps, and more especially of the services rendered by those responsible for its organization and direction, Major Sullivan, Major Baird, and Capt. Ross in particular.

The promptitude with which the Corps was raised, and the concurrence of all concerned to do their utmost to assist the Old Country by developing the production of timber in Britain, deserves to go down into history along with many patriotic achievements of Britain's Oldest Colony. Please convey to the Officers and Men of the Corps the expression of my deep appreciation of all they have done, and allow me at the same time to express to you how very highly your own personal services in connection with the Corps, which have been of inestimable assistance throughout. Your willingness at all times to help and your cordial cooperation have been of the very highest service.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) J. B. BALL,

W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. met last Thursday in the ladies' parlor of Thorpe Street Church, President Mrs. Hunter officiating. The preliminary part was conducted by Mesdames Penman and Cross. All deeply regretted the demise of Mrs. Whiteway, one of the earliest members of the Union in Newfoundland. The reports presented by the Visiting Committee showed that body to have been busily engaged the past weeks. The reports commented on, business occupied the remaining time, when the President closed the meeting with the Benediction. Next regular meeting will be held on the 27th inst., but a special meeting will take place beginning at 8 p.m. on Wednesday next at the home of Mrs. Mitchell, Devon Row.

Purim.

The Festival of Purim was celebrated by the Jewish community on Sunday, March 16th, in Shushan, Persia. Also on the 17th, in accordance with the statement of the Book of Esther that "the Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not fail, that they would keep these two days year after year, and that these days should be remembered and kept throughout every generation and every family in every province and every city." Reminiscence of a deliverance of the Jews from destruction in the Persian Empire, the day is naturally kept as a festival of mirth and gladness. Presents are exchanged and the poor are not forgotten. The Book of Esther, detailing the plots of Haman, the watchfulness and loyalty of Mordecai and Esther, form the special reading of the day at the religious services in the Jewish Houses of Worship.
