One of the jurors said last evening that there never was a moment since the evidence was complete when the jurors were not ready to render a verdict. He did not believe the arguments of counsel made any impressions one way or the other upon the jurors. The jury, he said, had been absolutely ignorant of the drift of public opinion during the trial: They had not been at all impressed with the belief that Guiteau was insane, the unanimous opini on being that his insanity was shammed. In the cell to-day the assassin ate and drank sparingly. Two guards have been assigned to the cell to prevent any attempt

They are both fine gentlemen, and did the best they could, but their theory was wrong. Their defence was in the wrong line. The inspiration idea should have been pounded into the jury's head." Guiteau said a prominent lawyer of Baltimore named Atkinson had volunteered to argue the question of jurisdiction before the court in banc. In a sad voice Guiteau said, "It is appointed unto all men to die, and no man will die before his time. No man can say to-day that he will be alive tomorrow. Clarkson N. The widow and the mother of the illustrious victim had anticipated no other result. They could not bring themselves to believe that justice would fail to overtake the vile reptile whose infamous deed had overwhelmed them with grief, but they are women whose hearts are too full of sorrow to have room for revengeful feelings, and the news of the conviction of Guiteau comes to them rather as the vindication of national wrongs. They do not see how the result of the trial could have been different. They accept it as a foregone conclusion and as more important to the public, who will have other presidents to guard and protest, than to them selves, whose great stay and reliance was so causelessly taken from them."

THE LOCAL LEGISLATURE. AN EXCITING DEBATE YESTERDAY

ON THE BOUNDARY.

Treasen Threatened—Mr. Mowat Prefers
Provincial Rights to Confederation. A good deal of excitement characterized the proceedings of the legislature yesterday. Mr. Pardee effectually answered Mr. Merrick's speech, charging inconsistency on the part of the government in their policy of making sales of timber limits without the authority of the house, and there was a hot cross-fire of interruptions while he was quoting the journals to prove his position dith was dealing with an act of the same character as the rivers and streams act, which had been passed by John Sandfield principles which were taken in connection with this matter were not those contended for by liberals formerly on other questions.

As to the disallowance the confederation As to the disallowance the confederation act interpreted by the speeches made at the time, showed that the Deminion government were intended not only to have the power but the right of disallowance. He quoted Mr. Blake to show that other reasons than those set down by Sir John Macdonald were given by him as grounds for disallowance. But the rivers and streams bill was within both the first and least of the reasons given in the memorandum last of the reasons given in the memorandum of Sir John for although legal, it was not constitutional, and it would have injuriously affected the rights of property in the whole Dominion. As to the boundary award it was the intention of both coverns An audience highly respectable and large, in view of the inclemency of the weather, assembled in Shaftesbury hall last night to hear the recitals of this eminent reader. The rapt attention with which his several recitals were listened to and the delight and laughter which his humorous selections excited were the best evidence of his success. Mr. Roberts has a voice of great power and rariety of imitations, and his exhibition of passion, especially in the display of terror, hatred or revenge, were masterly and thrilling in their effects. In the recitation of The Shipwrecked he gave the finest realizations of that passion, terror, tenderness, hatred, succeeding each other with intensely natural force and truthfulness. Mr. Roberts displays great power of facial expression, and his gesticulations, though sometimes bordering on excess, were dramatic, graceful and in perfect harmony with the passion he interpreted. His humorous recitals may be pronounced the best in his program. Every point of humor presented by the author is rendered with effective and expressive tone and look—the twinkle of the eye, the nervous twitch of the lip and the whole facial exhibition are beaming with fun and marrimeut. There will be an entire change of program to-night. The

Mr. Sinclair (North Bruca) moved in amendment to the amendment to restore the original paragraph in the address struck out by the amendment, approving the course which the government had taken in the matter, expressing confidence in them in regard to it, and promising to uphold them in any steps which they might take to uphold and enforce the award.

Once Mr. Meredith had to be called to order by the speaker for charges of treason and endeavoring to raise civil war, which he made against the government.

Hon Mr. Pardee showed how mistaken Mr. Meredith was in asserting that there were one hundred and twenty million acres of timber limits inder license, while there were only twelve million acres. He also showed clearly by quoting from the journals of the house that no position had ever been taken by the liberals in tavor of consulting the house before selling timber limits, but that on the contrary liberals had voted down resolutions in favor of the even or other there is not the consumers in the consumers the wood interested, but the consumers in the city. enquire-In what way the coal duties, even supposing them to be greater on British coal than on American, can injure the British coal producer provided the Globe is correct when it contends that, the Canadian consumer pays all the duty?

We cannot afford the space to critici all the Globe's figures on cotton and woolen imports, and will merely glange at a few in order to show the desperate straits to which a desperate case reduces an unscrupulous journal.

Our contemporary puts imports of cotton, bleached and unbleached from Britain in 1880 $229,321. The trade and navigation returns put them $259,041. It puts the duty on this item $69,089, the trade and navigation returns say $49,439. Same class of goods from the United night, appear to have acted as if they had faith in the old saying that "second thoughts are best." There has certainly been a great change of opinion among the shareholders generally, and among the public too, we may add, since the November meeting. Then the old board of directors seemed in danger of getting something like "Jeddart justice"-which consists of hanging first and trial afterwards-while Mr. Glass loomed up largely before the public view as the capable, energetic business man, thoroughly honest and unselfish withal, who had turned up almost miraculously to save innocent investors from being plundered. We said then that time was of the essence of the contract in estimating the action of the old board-of the president especially-and that losses incurred years back, in great part during the period stale. of depression, did not by any means prove that the bank had not been well managed during the last two years. It was quite possible, we urged, that the old board might in recent time have been making about the best that could be made of a bad situation. And just before the meeting of this week we pointed out that, in the surprise and confusion of the former meeting, there had not really been a hearing of both sides, and that this meeting would have the advantage of a great deal of new light the advantage of a great deal of new light, on the subject. The "new light," and plenty of it, appears to have come in the meantime. The revelations made recently at the London tean company meeting were unquestionably what gave rise to the second thought upon which the majority acted the other day.

The NPISSING RAILWAY appears to be manipulated in the interest of a wood which the majority acted the other day.

The NPISSING RAILWAY appears to be manipulated in the interest of a wood which the majority acted the other day.

The stalwart grits and the stalwart tories do not see any room for a third party. We shall point out to them one of the most significant signs of the quiet but sure growth of this new factor in our political life. It is the stand taken by Mr. Neelon on the N. P. and by Mr. Bell on the boundary question.

Mr. Neelon represents Lincoln local house and has been a lifelong reformer. He is largely engaged in shipping and milling, and is representative of the financial interests of the country. Regardless of the pressure of the Globe and undeterred by the subserviency of men of the Hay stamp, he told the house that the national policy was beneficial in its effects. Mr. Bell is a representative of the mechanics of Toronto, and he saw fit to stand up for the boundary rights of the province, unmindful of appeals to stick by Sir John and the conservative party at Ottawa. The two old parties are weakening; a strong young and clean third party is com-

In other words on two articles of imports the Globe wilfully falsifies to the tune of $378,638 in values, and $10,166 in duties.

Nor is this the Globe's only sin against the truth when dealing with these two items? It tries to make its readers believe that the Canadian consumer of grey and bleached cottons and ginghams is being robbed by the N. Two little girls let loose from school Queried what each other would be.
One said, "I'd be a queen and rule,"
And one, "The world I'd see." The years went on. Again they met.
And queried what had been.
"A poor man's wife am I, and yet,"
Said one, "I am a queen."

"My realm a happy household is, My king a husband true; How has it been with you?"

One answered, "Still the great world lies' Beyond me as it laid; O'er love's and duty's boundaries My feet have never strayed. Faint murmurs of the wide world come Unheeded to my ear; My widowed mother's sick bedroom Sufficeth for my sphere." They clasped each other's hands, with tears Of solemn joy they cried:

God gave the wish of our young years.
And we are satisfied."
