Phipps said there were four persons in Philps who know his course and he at privy council of England, has soiemnly decided that the provincial government is, under the British North America act, the source of power and the regularly constituted authority for the administration of the license system. We know more, too, that if the applicants for licenses are disposed to rest upon the McCarthy act, that the Ontario legislature has the power to raise the fee for a license issued by the dominion government to such a price as to virtually prohibit such licenses being taken out. There is no question—there is no dispute concerning the fact that the Ontario government can place just what price they please upon a license which the dominion commissioners may see fit to grant. And if Sir John Macdonald is determined to force the fighting on this legislation he has seen fit to pass, it will be the duty of the local legislature, in defense of its rights, and to meet such disreputable tactics, to use the power they are acknowledged on all hands to have, in virtually restricting the issue of such licenses by the imposition of a prohibitory fee. We had better take what was General Grant's view on a certain occasion, and say, let us have peace. It is for the interest both of the country and the Grand Trunk to bring things to the complexion waste of railway war and of war in business matters generally, is enormous. The money and the effort spent in needless railway war would make double tracks and pay dividends to shareholders. Monopoly the country cannot stand, but neither does it want reckless competition. Live and let live is the best plan for all. Few more melancholy events have even taken place in Toronto than the somewhat sudden and entirely unexpected death of Mr. Lauder. He had been ill for a week, but few of his fellow-members of the legislative assembly had heard that his illness was more than serious He was in his place in the house on Tuesday week, taking part as usual with proceedings. Owing to the nature of his disorder a painful and somewhat dangerous surgical operation was necessary and after its successful performance he felt so much better that he wrote to his friends on the opposition side of the house to get him passed off for a few days until his return to the discharge of yesterday morning he became suddenly very much worse, and during the forenoon alarming rumors were circulated about the lobbies respecting his condition. The presentiments thus excited proved to be only too well founded, for about noon he Afterwards several questions were put to Mr. Ross, all of which he answered satisfactorily. The worthy master then called on Peter Graham, M.P.P., of East Lambton, who addressed the meeting at some length. At the afternoon session J. Herbert Mason and Beverley Jones were heard in favor of the Torrens system of land transfer, and the treasurer's report was adopted as follows: Balance at close 1882 $995.92, receivals from divs. $1724.64, proceeds from pro. ex. $298.77, interest on deposit $25.77, total $3045.10. The disbursements were $1891.85. Balance at close of 1883 $1153.25.

The evening session was taken up with

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD. of the Bill to Sell the Jarvis

Street Property. At a special meeting of the separate school board held last night the following members were present: Very Rev. F. P. Rooney, chairman, Very Rev. J. M. Laurent, Rev. Father Sheahan, C. Burns, D. Kelly, M. O'Connor, W. Petley, J. Kelz, J. Murphy, J. Gibson, Jas. Ryan, W. Burns, J. Herbert and W. Louney.

Vicar General Rooney stated that the meeting had been called to consider the proposed bill now before the legislature to give Roman catholic episcopal corporation of Toronto power to sell the school reserve on Jarvis street, 180 ft. frontage and son, Dr. Willoughby, Dr. Bogart, Dr. Can-149 feet depth. This property was inniff, Dr. Spohn, Rev. W. Forneri and others vested in the Roman catholic church in 1829 for the use of the Roman catholic parochial schools for all time, by the Hon. Wm. Dummer Powell, Hon. James Baby, Rev. John Strachan, D.D. Other smaller properties on Duke and Richmond streets are also included in the bill.

Mr. Kelly said he knew nothing about the subject whatever and asked for information.

Mr. G. Sullivan, agent of the episcopal corporation was called upon to explain. He read a letter from Chief Justice Wilson and Justice Galt to Col. Gillmor, clerk of Direct connection between Toronto and the legislative assembly, recommending that the bill be passed. The reason that the matter had been brought before the higher court of parliament was this: The episcopal corporation considered the property theirs, while as the property had been bequeathed to the Roman catholic pachial schools, it belonged to these scho whatever that might mean. As the school board represented these schools it was their duty to consider the matter. The episcopal corporation would not in any way consent to the Roman catholic school rd getting any money out of the sale of Jarvis street property.

Mr. Foy, solicitor for the board, went over the matter at great length and objected to some clauses in the bill which would permit the episcopal corporation to sell at any figure and at any time no matter whether it was at a sacrifice or not, without reference to the board. After a long discussion, it was moved by

Mr. Petley, seconded by Mr. Murphy, and carried:

That Mr. Foy be authorized to appear before the private bills committee of the Oriario legislature, and ask that body to postpone the consideration of the bill re the Richmond street property now before them until Tuesday next, as this board bas had no opportunity to consider said bill until this Wednesday evening, Feb. 20.

A communication was received from Ald inication was received from Ald.

Piper of the Zoo regretting the inability of the separate school teachers and pupils to attend the zoological gardens on Satur day last. It was arranged, however, to have the lecture postponed until next Saturday.

The board adjourned until Friday.

NOTICE. Irving In The Bells

The chief emotions involved in the char The chief emotions involved in the character of Mathias (in The Bells) are remorse, suspicion, dread, greed and cunning, all curiously blended with a capacity for warm family affection. The nature of it is complicated, but the portrayal of the different elements composing it, as will be seen upon reflection, does not call for the source of the Directors for the ensuing year, and for all other general purposes relating to the mathiagement and business of the company.

By order, A. W. SMITH, Sec.-Treas.

Toronto, Feb. 20, 1884. seen upon reflection, does not call for the manifestation of genuine passion. In other words, the character has in it no attribute that is either great or noble, and is not, therefore, capable of great or noble treatment. Its phases, either individually or ment. Its phases, either individually or collectively, can be interpreted by means distinctly mechanical, without the aid of inspiration. If, indeed, the part was raised by the glow of genius above the level of ordinary humanity, it would cease to be Mathias. It is the humanity of Mr. Irving's impersonation—apart, of course, from his inhuman mannerisms—which gives it its true significance and value. There from his inhuman mannerisms—which gives it its true significance and value. There are few, if any, really broad strokes in the portrait. There are rigid angularities which only mar the beauty of the outline, but none of those bold masses of color which the painter of the highest type dashes in, as if by instinct. The effect is created by innumerable devices wrought with the utmost premeditation, although the execution is so neat, firm and free that it has much of the effect of spontaneity. These devices represent the sum of artistic attainment.
