The careful observer may see rather than the political firmament at the present time. But how shall we read these signs!

As to the signs themselves. The most significant is a discussion, principally in the Reform papers in regard to the leadership majority.

Reform papers, in regard to the leadership that Mr. Laurier, a French-Canadian was not the man for leader—that Mr. Blake was the proper captain of the craft. There-The Banner in round terms, told it that Laurier was sound for free trade while Mr. Blake was guilty of the "Malvern heresy" [his well' known speech in which he favored incidental ction] and until he "recented" that error he was not qualified fer the leadership nor have believed what he said [at Malvern] but his nown better," was the coarse way in which known better," was the coarse way in which The Times referred to him. Then The Globe in a hypocritical way directed attention to the discussion which certain Tory journals" (The Banner and Times, to with had started concerning the leadership, and wound up by a strong declaration in favor of Laurier and an indirect hint that Mr. Blake had better remain where he is. And now another prominent paper in Reform councils,
The Berlin Telegraph, rebutes The Globe and
The Times that beyond "the readjustment" of the tariff "no government would be justified in going."

The next significant sign is the change in The Globe. Sir Richard Cattwright is now the inspiration and the political beacon of that paper, and Mr. Ned Farrer is to reflect his light. Sir Richard Cattwright is now phrase of the movement.

As a third sign there is Mr. Blake's reticence: so far he has declined to accept "continental free trade" or "unrestricted reciprocity" and has gone so far at least as to declare at Malvern in favor of incidental protection. Nor has Mr. Blake ever been to Washington on the same mission as Cartwright, Farrer and Charlton, nor has he ever, so far as we know, been lured to share Wiman's hospitality and view the fakes at Erastina, Long Island, New York. Mr. Blake, we take it, is, has been and always will be a particute Canadian.

How then do we read these signs! That the Reform party is splitting into halves; a particute wing and a disloyal faction. Carty are found in the continuous proposed by a long throw. Gordon got away from his man and Scholfield took a wild shot, we have added a point, but a delay lost the ball to Moore, Gale's dow shot was also valueless. Close play on the Shamrocks grounds was stopped by Brophy's long throw. Gordon got away from his man and Scholfield took a wild shot, soon Gale secured passed to Scholfield. The fourth game destroyed the imponetra-the Reform party is splitting into halves; a patriotic wing and a disloyal faction. Cartwright, The Globe, The Times and Wiman are in for contintental free trade or annex ation straight; Laurier is with them so far, but will probably give way to Sir Richard.

Mr. Blake will not go with them and he may yet coalesce with the Conservatives who are also patriotic, especially after the refirement of Sir John. Mr. Blake may not go to the Conservatives; but once Sir John is gone his followers may readily go to Mr. Blake in order "to save the country" and effectively upset the plots of Cartwright and Wiman. In such a move Mr. Blake could not only take a lot of Conservatives, all the patriotic Reformers, but he, and no other man, could take the Frgnch-Canadians solid.

RED-LETTER DAY FOR

At 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon a special rain moved out of Union Station carrying letween four and five hundred people. They were the guests of the Mimico factory projectorate and were on their way to see the corner-stone laying of four of the factories. A short run brought the train to Mimico station. Here it stopped, much to the surprise and indignation of the syndicate people, who had chartered it to run to the factory sites. Nothing daunted, however, the crowd gaily tramped up to the sites. Here signs of the coming manufacturing suburb-were appar-ent. The foundations for four large factoralready under construction. of laying the corner-stones was proceeded with, Mr. Warring Kennedy pronouncing those of James Morrison's and the Pease Furnace Company's factories well and truly laid, Mr. R. W. Elliot being sponsor for T. McDonald's factory and Mr. A. McRoberts acting in a similar capacity for Barrett & Co.'s establishment. The speeches were a prominent feature of the day's proceedings. Mr. Morrison called the meeting to order and introduced the speakers.

Mr. Elliot was the first to hold forth. He said they gathered to celebrate one step further in the manufacturing industry of Canada. He eulogized the capability of Mr. McDonald, the corner-stone of whose factory he had just laid, declaring that this manufacturer had become so thorough in his business that articles were produced 2% times as cheap as what they were imported for a few years ago. He expressed his confidence in the other manufacturers and in Mimico. The factories just begun would be the nucleus of a new town and very likely of a city. Schools, churches, stores, houses would follow the factories, as well as many subsidiary interests. [Applause.]

Mr. Kennedy said this was a red-letter day, It was the 52nd anniversary of the coronation of the Queen. [Cheers.] It was also a red-letter day for Mimico. To-day was the beginning of days for Mimico. To-day was the beginning of days for Mimico. To-day was the beginning of days for Mimico. The cornerstones of four factories had been laid and five others would be begun within a year. He had the utmost confidence in the enterprise, as the firms were all highly rated and were under heavy bonds to have their factories running within the year. He then discussed sloquently about the greatness of the British Empire and of Canada, arguing that no country could be great without manufacturing enterprises. It remained for them as good Canadians to develop their heritage, and these proceedings were an index to the development which would follow in our manufacturing interests. He had so doubt of the successfully in the Canadian market was commenced and the C.P.R. was determined to get in. No place in Canada had such a bright future as Mimico. (Applause.)

Mr. McRoberts said he wanted to say to them a few words on a matter of business, and that business was Mimico business. He quoted the remark of Johnson at a brewery sale: "You have come here to day to buy the potentialities of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice." Now he would not go that far in connection with Mimico, but what he would say was that the nucleus was started to day for a thriving suburb of Ontario's great metropolis, and all that was necessary to make it an unqualified success was unity of action and of Contario's great metropolis, and all that was necessary to make it an unqualified success was unity of action and pushing work on the part of all interested in the new town of the future. The last speaker had suggested a watchwerd. When talking of Pullman he thought if the "a" was replaced by an "e" it would fill the bill—pull—men—that was, pull like men for the welfare of Mimico. [Laughter and applause.] All the proprietors in Mimico were working harmoniously, and he was glad of it. It bespoke success for the place and credit for all concerned. He might announce that two of the largest plano and organ companies on the continent were on the eve of consolidating and it was probable that they would locate their works in Mimico. He had seen the members of the firm to-day, and found out their greatest objection to the place. The people in West Toronto Junction had heen telling them that if they located in Mimico the fog would swell up the key-boards and it would be impossible to operate their factories. [Laughter.] He was glad to find that this was the most serious objection. He had been around Mimico a good deal and had never seen any more fog than there was to-day. [Applause.] He again impressed the importance of everyone interested in the place working for it steadily and vigorously, and if that were done there would, be a different tale to tell a year from this day. [Loud applause.]

Lunch was then served, the train boarded and the party was landed at Union Station at 6 o'clock.

Cherries are coming in slowly and the demand is not very active. A few baskets sold at $1, a better quality bringing $1.25. The quality is hardly up to the standard and holders consequently hurried off their stock.

The sale of gooseberries was not large, a few baskets being sold at 70c.

Tomatics are in good demand, but the supply
