LARRY'S LIGHTHOUSE

When Larry Delmore was ten years old, he had stood on the beach at Quetchet and flung a taunt at the little girl with flaming hair who had wrinkled her nose at him.

"Redhead!" taunted Larry ungallantly. "Lighthouse!" he added, as the little girl pulled her white sunbonnet over her gorgeous curls and scurried away to her nurse.

"Nurse!" pouted Jean. "Am I a lighthouse because my hair is red?"

"No—Miss Jean," laughed nurse, looking up from her sewing; your hair is very pretty indeed, just like your mamma's; you mustn't mind what that naughty little Delmore boy says!"

"I shan't mind a bit," said Jean comforted; but in spite of her resolution the memory of the taunt lingered and rankled, so that as the years went by she grew positively to dislike the name of Delmore—especially Larry Delmore—and she was always hearing it, although they never met after that summer.

Larry Delmore was the sort of young man whose name is always confronting one. He excelled in everything. He was honor man of his class at college, a famous halfback, the driver of a winning automobile in a famous race, an aviator, a musician, and last, but not least, an excellent business man.

Jean Lloyd heard of these things in her remote boarding school and later at the fashionable finishing school, but always she discounted his cleverness by her bitter recollections of his taunt that midsummer day, fifteen years ago.

"I could never bear him," she told her best friend one day. "A horrid, grubby little tow-headed boy! I can just fancy how disagreeable he must be now."

Miriam Smith looked wide-eyed at Jean. "Haven't you met him since then?" she wondered.

Jean shook her glorious, ruddy-crowned head.

From his towering height Larry Delmore looked across the hotel ballroom and saw a tall graceful girl in white. About her snowy throat was twisted a wonderful string of pearls, and, save for the high-piled masses of her hair, there was not a bit of color about her.

"Who is that girl?" he asked the first man he met.

The man gazed in the direction indicated by Larry's gray eyes. "You mean the one with golden hair?" he asked.

"No, no," protested Larry, "the tall girl in white—the girl with auburn hair."

"Oh, you mean Miss Lloyd—Jean Lloyd. May I present you?"

"Not just now," decided Larry, and for some inexplicable reason he turned his back on Miss Lloyd's beautiful face and waded out to the balcony.

"There's something very striking about that girl," thought Larry, plucking at the geraniums in the flower boxes. "Confounded funny feeling I had when Morton offered to introduce me. I wanted to go like the Dickens, but—somehow, she had such a haughty poise to her head that I'm decidedly afraid she wouldn't be as charming as she looked. I'm going to find out later."

When he returned to the ballroom Miss Lloyd had disappeared, and he saw her no more that night. By careful inquiry he learned that she and her father were stopping at the Quetchet hotel for the season.

The next morning he arose with the sun and went down to the ocean for his early swim. He had the beach to himself save for one lone swimmer, who was breasting the surf with easy grace. It was a woman wearing a red bathing cap he decided at first.

A further inspection revealed that the glistening copper glory was crowning the head of Jean Lloyd and that her head was uncovered.

So Larry plunged himself in the sea and departed himself like a young porpoise. Larry Delmore was a swimmer of note in addition to his other accomplishments, and when he saw Miss Lloyd's glowing head turned steadily out to sea while the flash of her white arms cut the blue green surface of the waves like a vertebrae mermaid, he followed her, in a masculine spirit not to be outdone by a mere woman.

But the water was cold that morning and perhaps Mr. Delmore was not up to his usual form; at any rate, he suddenly stopped his long steady strokes, blanched at the agonizing cramp that seized his limbs, uttered a low cry of alarm and went down.

SOME SALESMAN

The girl heard the cry and turned just as he disappeared. When he came up she was calling to him to hold up—that she was coming—coming—! Through the flying spray and the rocking green and white of the waves he caught the glimpse of her red hair and her white face coming nearer.

When he rose to the surface again still wreathing in that awful cramp, it was to see the soiling red of her hair close beside him, to feel the support of her arms under his shoulders.

"I cannot carry you in," she panted, "but I can hold you up until help comes. Can you shout?"

He nodded and shouted hoarsely.

A boat put hastily off from shore and two or three life-savers took them in.

"I declare if it isn't Mr. Delmore!" marvelled one of the men as he applied a flask to Larry's pale lips.

Jean, white and exhausted, sat up and looked at the young giant she had rescued. Was it possible that this handsome blond youth had been the tow-headed little boy, whose taunt had rankled so long? It could not be possible that she, Jean Lloyd, had been the means of saving this champion swimmer's life!

About that time Jean fainted away, and it was a half hour later in her room at the hotel that she sat up in bed warm and dry, and uttered a remark that caused her worried father to stare.

"I suppose I must have looked like a lighthouse to Mr. Delmore," she said.

"Then you are alright, my dear?" asked Mr. Lloyd.

"Right as can be, daddy," she smiled.

It was late in the afternoon when Larry Delmore was admitted to the Lloyd's private parlor to express his gratitude.

Jean, pale and lovely, met him with a curious look in her eyes.

Larry stumbingly expressed his thanks. No man, he declared afterward, could govern his tongue while that vision smiled at him.

"You looked like an angel to me," he finished in a rush of words; "you were a lighthouse of hope toward which I tried to swim!"

Jean laughed musically. Her eyes sparkled. "Do you know, Mr. Delmore, that this is not the first time you have referred to my hair by calling me a lighthouse?"

"Oh, you don't understand," he protested. "I never thought of your lovely hair. I swear I never saw anything save your eyes and they are blue. You never heard of a blue light?"

"No, I never did," interrupted Jean, "but I have been on Quetchet beach before, Mr. Delmore. Fifteen years ago I was a five year old girl with red curls; you were a tow-headed boy, who called me a lighthouse, because of the color of my hair. I've hated you ever since," she ended calmly.

Larry Delmore stared. "I remember," he confessed. "I was a little duffer in those days. Believe me, Miss Lloyd, I've gotten over it, really! I recollect that you pulled your sun-bonnet down over your curls and ran away crying. I was ashamed of myself. Why didn't you slap me?"

Jean laughed, and with her laughter went the last flicker of her resentment toward Larry Delmore.

One morning he went down to the sea again and as it had happened before he saw Jean's head far out in the surf. He plunged out in the water and soon came up with her. They faced each other in the golden glory of a new day.

"Jean," he said quietly, "I'm going to call you my lighthouse once more. You have shown me a safe harbor of love; the light of your eyes has guarded its entrance. Shall I have a safe voyage home?"

And the steady glance of her eyes wavered for a moment and then met his fairly. Their first kiss was bathed in the golden rays of the rising sun.

The Will to Win.
 (From the Canadian Mining Journal)
 In thousands of industrial establishments in the United States the workers are taking this pledge; and it is being widely adopted in the coal regions:

"So long as the war lasts, I'll stick to my job and do an honest day's work, six days a week, and overtime if necessary. I'll do anything else the President of the United States asks me to do. So help me God."

Recently at Butte the above oath was taken by 10,000 miners as the men were lowered under ground.

Got the Price of Three Calendars in One Family and Delivered One

A man, wearing a sunburnt suit, with a face full of whiskers and his arms full of calendars, was stopped at the door of a banker in Wall Street by the guard stationed there, who asked him his business. The bearded one regarded the question as leading and exceedingly silly, and made so much noise that the banker's secretary went out and later reported to the banker that a man was anxious that the banker should buy a church calendar.

"Oh, let him in," said the banker, pleasantly. The man entered, took a tattered derby from his ears and rattled off in his native tongue all his reasons why the banker should part with a dollar for a church calendar.

"Here is the dollar, my man," said the banker, "and you may keep the calendar."

An hour later the bell of the banker's home was pulled vigorously. The butler put down his knitting and responded. A man wearing a sunburnt suit told him that he had been sent up from the banker's office to see the banker's wife regarding a church calendar, and that the banker expressly asked that he explain in person the method of reading the calendar.

There was considerable argument, but finally the banker's wife saw the man, heard all about the calendar, declined to receive it, but gave a dollar to him.

As the man with the calendars was leaving the house, an automobile, in which was the banker, drove up. The banker saw the man vaguely recalled him, and asked his wife who he was.

"That's the man you sent here with a calendar," explained the banker's wife. "I didn't take the calendar, but I gave him a dollar."

"Well, I declare," said the banker, and summoned the butler. "Slip on your coat and ask that man to come back here, Hurry!" The butler did.

The man in the sunburnt suit explained that it was impossible for him to go back. He was in the greatest of hurries. He knew, however, what the banker wanted him for, and he would give it to the butler. It was a church calendar, and if the butler, by any chance, had a dollar with him, it would save the trouble of a long trip down to the banker's office on the morrow.

The butler had the dollar.

Since then the private detectives directed by the banker have been seeking the calendar man.

The banker wants to make him a member of the firm.

Potato Seed Selection

(Experimental Farms Note)
 Like begets like in the potato field as elsewhere, but judging by the quantities of inferior tubers used for seed purposes, the importance of this law is not appreciated by many. The use of small potatoes taken from the bulk of the crop, year after year, and used for seed will eventually lead to yields of inferior potatoes.

At potato digging time the great opportunity for seed selection is offered. With the product of each plant spread on the soil it is an easy matter to select out those plants that have given the largest yield of the most desirable type of potato and are free from disease. The potatoes from such plants only should be gathered and saved for use as seed the following year. This saving of seed at digging time may seem to many as an extra burden during a rush of work, but it is not.

There is less actual labour attached to seed selection at the time of the potato harvest than there is by practicing any other method of seed selection. Furthermore, the results from hill selection are reasonably certain, while with other methods there is some speculation. Potato growers would do well to watch closely for exceptionally good plants. These, harvested and saved apart from the main crop, may become the grand-dads of fine potato fields in the future.

Egg Record Broken.

A Black Orpington hen beats the world's record by laying 335 eggs, 27½ dozen in twelve months in the egg-laying contest just completed at Victoria, Australia. This record is all the more remarkable when it is stated that the average weight of the eggs laid by this hen totalled 26½ ounces a dozen.

CROSSED RIVER VIA AUTO

Overland Car Performs Remarkable Feats in South Africa.

To travel 1800 miles overland in a motor car through the wilds of South Africa without a mishap is considered a remarkable accomplishment, according to a story in the "African Motor," of Johannesburg, South Africa.

In this article B. Asher of Port Elizabeth, tells of a successful trip in his Model 88—B Overland Car. "The roads in this country are notoriously bad which makes the feat performed by the car the more striking," says Mr. Asher.

The journey took him through Grahamstown, City of the Saints, Fort Beaufort and through Bedford, a typical Overland city with 33 Overlands in the town, and many other places.

In spite of rainstorms and almost impassable roads no difficulty was experienced throughout the whole trip aside from tire trouble. Some portions of the journey were made at the rate of 37 miles per imperial gallon of gasoline.

Parts of the journey through Montagu Pass and Kysna Hills had to be negotiated in second speed, yet through all of this mountainous travel, the remarkable feature was the coolness of the motor. Mr. Asher reported that no water was put in the radiator from Oudshoorn to Port Elizabeth, which are at opposite sides of this hilly country.

Describing parts of the trip and commenting upon the appalling road conditions in places, Mr. Asher says that after plunging and struggling through almost impassable roads, a river was encountered which had to be forded. It was necessary to take the plunge with the car into a swift torrent, so deep that he could not open the car door.

The radiator was partly submerged but the car plowed through successfully. Mr. Asher was highly elated over the performance of his Overland during this hazardous journey.

Belgium Pleased to Help.

Paris, Oct. 7.—President Poincare received from King Albert of Belgium a telegram replying to congratulations sent by M. Poincare on the success of the Belgians in the fighting against the Germans in Flanders.

"The Belgians," said King Albert, "are proud to contribute by every means to the triumph of the sacred cause of the Allies."

Prevention of Influenza

(Issued by the Department of the Public Health, Nova Scotia)

As is the case with any infectious disorder of the respiratory (breathing) system, influenza infection is usually if not always acquired by coming into contact with someone actually suffering from the disease.

The disease may exist in any grade of severity, but it is especially the milder cases which resemble an ordinary cold, and do not excite suspicion of the real nature of the trouble, which are responsible for the spread of infection. Those who do not feel ill enough to lay up are apt to go about quite innocently communicating the disease to others.

There is little danger of being infected in the open air, or in well ventilated houses, shops and offices where there is no crowding. But those who would avoid the disease should shun crowds, and especially indoor crowds, as in theatres, tram cars, ferries, etc.

The infective germ is given off in the discharges from the throat and nose, and in the spray which is ejected in sneezing, coughing and loud speaking. Discharges should be immediately destroyed by burning or be covered with a disinfectant fluid. A handkerchief or preferably a small square of gauze or soft paper should be held over the mouth and nose when one has to cough or sneeze. The cheaper articles may be destroyed at once by burning, or may be enclosed in a paper bag until an opportunity to burn them comes. Handkerchiefs should not be shaken when taken from the pocket, and it would be an excellent idea to have a removable lining inserted in the handkerchief pocket, which could be boiled frequently, and which would prevent soiling of the pocket.

Keep out of range of anyone who does not "cover every cough and sneeze" for such a one is "sure to spread disease." Those who must minister to influenza patients should protect themselves by wearing a covering of gauze, at least three ply in thickness over the mouth and nose. A few of these should be prepared so that when one is removed another will be at once available. Such masks should not be worn for more than two hours at a time, and when removed should either be burned or boiled for five minutes and dried before being again used.

One's power of resisting infection should be maintained by doing everything possible to keep the general health good. Houses, offices, etc. should be well ventilated. Get several hours in the open air daily. Have sufficient sleep in a well ventilated room. Do not overeat, but eat enough of plain, nourishing food, easily digested food. Keep bowels regular. Avoid chilling. Keep clothing and footwear dry.

Let everyone try to escape infection, and to avoid infecting others should be so unfortunate as to develop the disease.

Remember that ordinary colds are infectious, so that even if influenza did not threaten, anyone suffering from a cold should endeavour not to infect others.

Every year during the shooting season there are fatal accidents through carelessness. There is insufficient caution exercised in the handling of the loaded gun. Somebody's blunder is paid for often in the twinkling of an eye, with a toll of human life. There are a hundred ways of causing fatalities with the gun through sheer indifference and thoughtlessness for the safety of the other man, and in many cases there is exhibited a foolhardiness for one's own welfare too. Perhaps the biggest blunder is that of the over-enthusiastic sportsman who mistakes his game; a rustle among the bushes; some object spotted; the crack of the gun re-echoes through the woods—but what then? Perhaps a grown of human anguish and all is still. The sequel is given in the newspaper headline "Shot in Mistake"

We would not wish, however, to dampen the ardor of our sportsmen by presenting a too dismal picture. But don't forget that men are scarce!

"Spanish Influenza."

(Issued by the Department of the Public Health, Nova Scotia.)

In the last issue of the "Quarterly Bulletin" the opinion was expressed that this province was unlikely to escape an invasion by the condition known as Spanish Influenza, which at that time had for some months prevailed in epidemic form throughout Europe.

The condition resembles in many particulars the old-fashioned la grippe, but the bacteriological investigations, which have been made have shown the influenza bacillus to be present in but a small percentage of cases, while other organisms, causative of inflammatory conditions of the respiratory tract, are quite common.

Clinically the disease has been characterized by an acute onset, symptoms developing with such rapidity that the victim may have to stop work within a few minutes. Pains in the head, back and other parts of the body, dizziness and weakness, slight soreness of the throat and sensitiveness to light are commonly complained of.

As a rule the attack is of short duration, but it is important to note that relapse is not uncommon, so the patient should be warned against too early a return to duty. Occasionally the course is somewhat erratic, with an irregular fever which may be due to bronchitis, bronchiolitis, bronchopneumonia or a bacterial invasion of the blood stream.

The disease generally runs a favourable course, and fatalities have been rare. In contrast with previous experiences with influenza, serious complications and disabling sequelae have been unusual, though weakness sometimes persists for a considerable time.

In treatment, rest in bed is requisite and should not be abandoned too soon. A preliminary purge is advised. Aspirin and the salicylates give relief from the discomfort, but care is to be exercised in the use of any drug which may add to depression, and such drugs should be taken only upon a physician's advice.

Crowding and imperfect ventilation appear to have a marked influence in spreading the disease. Free ventilation is therefore imperative as a preventive measure. The infective element is given off particularly in the discharges from the respiratory tract. Such discharges should consequently be promptly destroyed, and every effort should be made to limit the issuance of the organisms in the spray caused by coughing, sneezing and loud speaking. Prophylaxis is therefore similar to that in any infectious respiratory condition.

"Cover every cough and sneeze. For if you don't you'll spread disease." To avoid infection, keep away from crowds, dodge the careless cougher and sneezer, get plenty of fresh air indoors and out of doors, and endeavour to keep general health good.

Unhomelike.

The late Mr. Herpeck, having arrived in heaven, had been checked in, and was sitting comfortably on a pale pink cloud, tuning his harp. Suddenly he paused and looked apprehensively around. "No," he said, setting back to his tuning, "this is not a bit like home. I have been sitting here ten minutes, and no angel has yet asked me to move, declaring that I always sit just where she wants to sweep."

Harvesting Nuts as Patriotic Pastime

(Experimental Farms Note)

Throughout Canada there is a generous supply of nut-bearing trees which yield an abundance of edible nuts rich in food value, as the butternut, black walnut, the hickories, hazelnuts and beech nuts. Nuts are more nutritious than milk, eggs, bread and meat, one ounce of nut kernels being equal in food value to a pint of milk. Nuts are ready to eat without the labour and cost of cooking. They may be served in the form of delicious sandwiches, in salads, in fruit jellies and cakes, or a handful may be kneaded into a loaf of bread before it goes into the oven.

This important food crop is waiting in the woods to be gathered in. A few afternoons spent nutting in the woods during the bright autumn days will supply the home with nuts for the winter and will save the meat supply for our country's defense. After gathering the nuts should be spread on the attic floor or on shelves in a dry place to allow the surface moisture to escape. They may be cracked at leisure by the boys and girls in dull weather and stored in glass jars.

A few of the finest nuts should be saved for planting near home. Nothing will give the children greater pleasure than to choose a nut tree for their own nut trees. If space allows, a future nut orchard might be planned or young trees transplanted as shade trees. The beech is a very beautiful tree, both in winter and summer and the butternut, walnut and hickory make good garden shade trees and their wood is very valuable.

The butternut occurs from New Brunswick to Ontario, while the black walnut is found in the southern part of Ontario. The shagbark hickory ranges from Quebec to the north shore of Lake Huron, the mockernut hickory occurring in Ontario only. The hazelnut extends from the Maritime Provinces to Saskatchewan, the beaked hazelnut has an even greater range extending into British Columbia. The beech ranges from Nova Scotia to Ontario.

HER WAY

It Would Have Paid to Have Read the Monitor's Ads. and Bought at Home.

She checked this list with the greatest care. She said: "I think that it's all down there—a pound of tea and a box of soap, a bag of flour and a clothesline rope, two pairs of socks and a gingham dress, a laundry tub and a toy express. Then there's curtain rods and a window shade, a cut glass jug to hold lemonade, some kitchen spoons and a box of tacks, a spool of thread and a good strong axe. There's that silk dress length and the art of sateen, a driving belt for my old machine, a pail of lard and a kit of pork, a poultry house and a stable fork. There's my winter coat and my hat of course, those sheepskin mitts and that rocking-horse, a folding bed and a bunch of lace and nickle watch with a radium face, some liver pills and a pound of glue. My lands!" she said, as she checked it through. "I've clean forgotten the paint and books, the mustard pot and picture hooks, the frying pan and the dairy pail. It's great to order all these by mail, to shop at home in my easy chair, from my catalogue, when I've time to spare to look it through for the things I need. It's a most convenient way indeed—on a list like mine they repay the freight, and they'll arrive at an early date. The time it saves, and the bother too!" And she seemed so sure that she judged she knew!

The "Mayflower" Built by a Nova Scotian

"Occasional" in Halifax Recorder: The first month of the year 1855 saw the construction and completion of a section of the Nova Scotia railroad. The first passenger cars to run over the road left Richmond on the 20th January. The engine with two passenger cars, filled with citizens of every degree, made two trips from the depot at Richmond to the vicinity of Three-Mile House and back, to the great delight and gratification of a large number of spectators. The first locomotive on the Nova Scotia Railway was the "Mayflower," which was built by a Nova Scotian, Mr. Elias Woodworth, a native of that village when a youth, and learned his trade in the United States, where by his ability and assiduity he became a master builder of engines. He came to Halifax to see one of his engines start on the road, the first on a public line in Nova Scotia.

The Turning of Stones No More Required.

A countryman on a visit to London found he had lost his pin. Fortunately he had a friend at the police station, so he went and told him of his loss. The friend assured him he would not leave a stone unturned until the tie pin had been found.

When the man got back to his lodging he discovered the pin on his dressing table and immediately started off to the police station again. As he wended his way along one of the principal streets he saw some workmen pulling up the roadway to lay some new gas pipes. "Don't trouble to take up any more, my lads," he cried, "I found the pin."

A Good Thing to Have

This is the Rev. A. D. McLeod's opinion of Zam-Buk. This clergyman, who lives at Harcourt, N.B., writing to the proprietors, remarks upon the unusual popularity which Zam-Buk enjoys in the homes of the people of his parish. He says: "I know of nothing that can compare with it. Having charge of an extensive mission, over which I travel constantly, I meet with many sick and afflicted people, and I have been amazed at the good which Zam-Buk is doing daily. I have learned, as an absolute fact, that for bad ulcers, old wounds, eczema and skin diseases, of all kinds the healing powers of Zam-Buk are simply marvellous. For the painful ailment, piles, also, it is excellent. Many a doctor's bill is saved by the use of Zam-Buk." For cuts, burns and scalds Zam-Buk is equally good. A LETTER FROM THE FRONT

Describes the Death of Pte. Chester Brinton—The Writer Has Since Been Killed

France, Aug. 24, 1918.
Mr. and Mrs. Brinton:

Dear Friends: It is not often that I claim friendship to people whom I have never seen before, but when you learn the reason why I am writing you, I think you will feel satisfied that such a claim is not unjustifiable. I have been a friend of your late son Chester, and having been in the same "funk hole" with him when the sad catastrophe, which caused his death, occurred, I thought you might like to know the full particulars from me.

Chester and I had lived together in this particular funk hole for two or three days. It was one which we had dug ourselves and was simply a hole about seven feet long, 3 or 4 feet wide and about three feet deep, cut in the side of the trench and at right angles to it. The top, we roofed over with corrugated iron and earth. When inside, we felt comparatively safe, taking into consideration the fact that the enemy's shells never landed very near us.

On the morning of the 23rd, however, before breakfast, we noticed that the "scream" of the shells seemed nearer. Chester, or "Pete," as we generally called him, got up and took a look around and then lay down again. A few minutes later, Pugh, another fellow out of our section, come over to our funk hole and began to tell Chester how near the shells were coming to his funk hole. Chester got up again, adjusted his kit, and evidently intended to get his breakfast, which was then ready, before lying down again.

He did not go away from the funk hole, though, but stood at its entrance talking to Pugh. The "scream" of another shell indicated its near arrival and Chester made haste to get into the funk hole again. Sad to relate, however, he was a second too late. The shell burst against the back of the trench and almost opposite the entrance of the funk hole. The flying shrapnel struck Chester on the legs, cutting them up pretty badly, just as he was in the act of laying down. At the same time the roof and corners of the funk hole were blown in and Pugh, who sought cover in the trench and close to the mouth of the funk hole, was struck and killed almost instantly. That I too, was not killed, is miraculous as the full burst of the shell drove almost directly into the funk hole. As it was I only received a slight wound in the skin. Undoubtedly, I was shielded by Chester and Pugh, who were between me and the spot where the shell burst. We got stretchers and had both boys carried to the regimental aid post immediately. Neither ever regained consciousness and it is doubtful whether they ever knew what happened.

The sadness of it all came to every one of us as a great shock, for Chester was certainly one of the favorites of the platoon, to say nothing of the section, over which he was second in command, loved by all, and the "THE" favorite.

I have not been a member of this Battalion very long and so have not known Chester very long. But when he was informally introduced to me, it was as "that dark boy, 'Pete' Brinton." And then the fun began, and with a lovely good nature, which no one could help but admire, Chester and the third party had one of those fun-loving tongue and chase, rough and tumble combats that so characterized "Pete" and made him such a favorite with everybody—Sgt. Major, Platoon Sgt., fellow corporals and privates, "Pete" was the same with them all.

As I watched him then, as I have often done since, I thought, "what a lovely nature he has and what a fun-loving, kind hearted expression he has" and those thoughts have never altered.

It was not until the day before that fateful morning that I really got into real close personal conversation with him. (This was through no fault of his, but is rather attributable to my own reticent nature). On that afternoon, however, I was showing him some snapshots, some taken at my home in Picton, N. S., and some in England. This started us talking about our homes and as he told me of his home I felt that I had discovered another beautiful trait of character in him—love of home. After quite a nice long talk, we lay quietly for a time. What his thoughts were, I know not, but before long he began quietly to sing over the words of that hymn, "Ho, my comrades, see the signal waving in the sky. Reinforcements now appearing, Victory is nigh. Hold the fort for I am coming, Jesus signals still. Wave the answer back to heaven, By thy grace we will." He sang these lines over and over again and it is by those words that I shall always remember "Pete." I was on a working party practically all the rest of the night and then had no chance to converse with him after that.

For personal reasons his sad death in particular and my own narrow escape have impressed me tremendously and I can assure you that my sympathy for you in your bereavement is most heartfelt and sincere and what I express personally is also the feeling of the whole platoon, who sympathize with you sincerely.

Hoping and praying that a God of love, whose "ways are not our ways" may comfort you when human comfort fails.

I remain, very sincerely and sympathetically,
No. 902091,

No. 3 Platoon, "A" Coy.

Mrs. Brinton, Port Lorne, N. S.

MY DEAR MRS. BRINTON: You have already been notified from Ottawa that your son, Lance Corporal C. P. Brinton, was killed in action on August 22nd.

I know also that one of the boys, who was with him at the time, has written you, telling exactly what happened.

I only wish to express the very deep sympathy of the platoon to you in your loss.

"Pete," as everyone called him, was not only a very good soldier, but one of the most popular boys in the platoon. The gun, which he was in charge of, was called "Pete" too. He took charge of it after Passchendaele and when he was killed, the gun was all smashed by shrapnel also. Both "Pete" had done excellent work and died together.

I am very sorry to tell you that MacKenzie, who wrote you about Pete was killed about a week ago in the Arras battle.

When I was censoring his letter to you I felt he had said all I could have and as I was pretty busy I waited for a better opportunity to write you a better opportunity to write you a friend and good comrade as you do the loss of your son. I know it must be a great blow to you and I assure you that we all feel very deeply for you.

Yours very sincerely,
W. E. MacDonald, Lt.

FLAVOR-FULL

Undoubtedly there are degrees of flavor. Take Fruit for instance—you select an orange, and on eating it you find it to be "flavorful," certainly, but sharp—acid; choose another, a riper more matured fruit, and it is luscious, the flavor is mellowed and rounded—it is FLAVOR-FULL. Nature made a better job of the second orange. Exactly the same is true of Tea. Nature is not equally kind to all. It requires expert knowledge and continual care to select and combine FLAVOR-FULL Teas to produce the delicious cup obtained from KING COLE Orange Pekoe. MEMORIAL SERVICE

Many Were Present From Bridgetown and Elsewhere.

[Special to the Monitor]

At the Baptist Church of Paradise, on Sunday morning, Sept. 29th, a memorial service was conducted by the Rev. I. A. Corbett for two of our Paradise boys, who have recently fallen on the field of battle, Lieut. Lloyd Ernest Longley, son of deacon Joseph S. Longley and Sgt. George Appleton Jackson, son of Mrs. Martha Jackson. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The day was fine and the audience filled the house.

A large number of the Masonic brotherhood were in attendance from Bridgetown, Paradise and Middleton. The music by the choir, under the leadership of H. W. Longley, was sweet and excellent. The Rev. Mr. Corbett delivered an impressive sermon from Jer. 6:14. "Peace, peace, but there is no peace." He showed that the peace of the world of nations had been disturbed by the evil designs of Germany on other nations, which she sought to accomplish by starting and waging the most terrible, cruel and barbarous war in the history of the world.

As much as we long for peace there can be no peace until the enemy is defeated and driven back to his own land with a changed mind, spirit and purpose. Then and only then can we have peace on the basis of impartial justice to all nations.

This is the holy cause for which unutterable suffering has been and for which these heroes have made the supreme sacrifice. They fought nobly and well; they went like kings in a pageant to the imminent death.

For their relatives there is comfort in the thought that their loved ones heroically and for a noble cause, and that they left behind them the record and evidence of their faith in God.

Lieut. Lloyd Ernest Longley was a highly esteemed member of this church and Sgt. George Appleton Jackson was a member of the Episcopal church of Lawrencetown. After prayer and music, Mrs. G. L. Pearson was called to the platform and gave a beautiful tribute to mothers of the sacrifice in this war.

The greatest of the mothers is the greatest. Then J. P. Martin, Worshipful Master, Ionic Lodge, Middleton, of which Lieut. Longley was a member, addressed the congregation. In well chosen words he referred to the fundamental principles of masculinity, expressed their sorrow over the loss of a highly esteemed brother, and conveyed the sympathy of their brotherhood to the bereaved relatives.

Married in Paradise

BALCOM-DANIELS

The marriage took place on Wednesday morning, October 2nd, in the Baptist church, Paradise, of Gladys King, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Millogie C. Daniels, to Erik Harmon Balcom, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Balcom, Paradise. The church had been beautifully decorated by the friends of the bride.

The decorations consisted of a central arch and four smaller arches with sprigs of fern and autumn flowers and an abundance of flowers everywhere. The ushers were Messrs. Neil Balcom and Kenneth M. Brooks.

To the strains of the wedding march, beautifully rendered by Mrs. I. A. Corbett, the bridal party took their places. Two little flower girls, Dorothy Balcom and Freda Shaffner, cousins of the groom, carrying bouquets of flowers, preceded the bride, who followed on the arm of her father. The bride wore a white crepe de chene, hand embroidered with a bridal veil and orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet. The ceremony was performed by Rev. I. A. Corbett, assisted by Rev. J. H. Balcom, uncle of the groom, the double ring service being used.

The general interest in this event was evidenced by the large number who witnessed the ceremony, as even the gallery of the church was filled.

After the ceremony the guests assembled at the home of the bride's parents, where a tasteful and dainty wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Balcom left amid showers of rice in an automobile to tour the western part of the province and St. John. The bride's going away suit was of navy blue serge, with hat to match.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of valuable gifts, consisting of cut glass, silver, china, money and furniture, together with a miscellaneous shower giving a few evenings previous.

Among guests from other parts of the province were Sgt. Major and Mrs. Hatcher, of Halifax, Miss Lynda Tupper of Stellarton, and Miss Hazel Morse, an Acadia classmate of the bride.

Married in Lawrencetown

PIDGEON-BALCOM

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage, Lawrencetown, by the Rev. Sidney Boyce, when Pearl Lydia Balcom, G. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Morse Balcom, was united in marriage to No. 126144 Gunner Thomas Dewey Pidgeon, of Watley River, P. E. I., on Saturday evening, September twenty-eight, nineteen hundred and eighteen.

WOMAN WORKS 15 HOURS A DAY

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Peru, Ind.—"I suffered from a displacement with backache and dragging down pains so badly that at times I could not be on my feet and it did not seem as though I could stand it. I tried different medicines without any benefit and several doctors told me nothing but an operation would do me any good. My druggist told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with the result that I am now well and strong. I get up in the morning at four o'clock, do my housework, then go to factory and work all day, come home and get supper and feel good. I don't know how many of my friends I have told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. ANNA METERIANO, 36 West 10th St., Peru, Ind.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Fertilizers For 1919

(Experimental Farms Note)

Now is the time for the farmer to plan his croppings for 1919 and in doing so to decide upon what fertilizers, if any, he purposes to use. Last spring there was considerable disappointment among farmers, especially among those who had delayed placing their orders till a few weeks before the season opened, as there was not only a shortage of material but transportation facilities were such that quick deliveries could not be made. There is no prospect that conditions will be better next spring and it therefore behooves the farmer this fall to carefully consider his needs, scan the prices and having made his selection to place his orders, stipulating an early delivery. Co-operation in ordering may effect the saving of a considerable amount in purchasing and freight rates.

During the last ten years there has been considerable increase in the number of farmers in British Columbia, Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces using fertilizers, but unfortunately but a small percentage of them have any definite knowledge of the profit that may have resulted from their application. There will always be a degree of uncertainty as regards results from fertilizers, chiefly owing to the fact that seasonal conditions cannot be predicted, but with close conservation from carefully planned work, a very great knowledge may be gained as to the kind and amount of fertilizer which will prove profitable. A series of adjacent plots on fairly uniform soil, each with a different amount or combination of fertilizer sown to the same crop, furnishes the most reliable means of learning the most profitable application, but at time and labor do not permit of the adoption of this plan, a strip of the field, well staked, should be left unfertilized, and its yield weighed against that of a similar sized strip on the fertilized area. From the results so obtained the profit or loss from the application of the fertilizer may be readily obtained.

A considerable saving may be usually effected by buying fertilizer ingredients—nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia, superphosphate, basic slag, etc., than by purchasing ready mixed fertilizers, and this course also furnishes valuable information for future guidance obtainable in no other way.

Information and advice regarding the use of fertilizers will be gladly given as far as may be practicable, by the Division of Chemistry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Met Him In Prison.

He was one of those smart men who like to show their cleverness. "Watch me take a rise out of him," he said, as the tramp approached. Then he listened solemnly to the tale of hard luck. "That's the same old story you told me the last time you accosted me," he said, when the vagrant had finished. "Is it?" was the answering question. "When did I tell it to you?" "Last week." "Maybe I did, maybe I did," admitted the tramp. "I'd forgotten meeting you I was in prison all last week."

Timely Health Rules

With the reopening of the public schools, and a general and growing disposition to pay more attention to the health of school children, it may be well to republish here some health rules prepared by the Massachusetts State Board of Education. These rules contain many valuable suggestions as to guarding and preserving the health of the young, and not a few of them could be followed to advantage by grown up people. Some of them follow:

Begin the day by drinking a glass of water, and drink at least six glasses during the day. Do not go to school without breakfast. Eat regularly three times a day. Eat slowly and chew all food well. Drink milk every day—four glasses are not too much. Eat some breakfast cereal every day. Eat some vegetables besides potato every day. Eat bread and butter at every meal; dark breads are best. Eat some fruit every day. Spend the pennies for apples instead of candy. Do not eat candy between meals; eat candy and other sweets only at the end of regular meal. Do not eat or touch food without first washing the hands. Do not eat fruit without first washing it. Do not eat with a spoon or fork which has been used by any other person without first washing it. Observe the same rule with reference to a glass or cup. Do not eat from the same dish with any other person.

Too often neglect is fatal. In health matters the process of repair is often slow and difficult. The great thing is prevention, and, failing that, the early detection of any form of disease. Both the city and the province have recently taken steps forward in the matter of guarding the public health, and what has already been done should make a much greater advance easier and more certain.

Keeping the Nest Egg.

Times are good financially. Everybody is making more money and enjoying more prosperity undoubtedly than in those dark days when wheat sold for 60 cents, eggs for 10 cents, pork for 5 cents, beef for 4 cents, and labor went begging for a dollar a day or less. No one would so dispute the fact as to volunteer a return to those struggling times.

Such prices as we are receiving today, and such wealth as the savings banks are accumulating, and as every individual is getting, carry prosperity from the Great Lakes to the Sea. Unfortunately as it may be that this is one of the accompaniments of war, it is nevertheless true that everything which is produced commands its maximum price under abnormal conditions.

Equally certain follows the corollary that the valley of depression will open up when the pendulum has swung the other way. When that time comes, as it assuredly will, the savings of today will be the only bulwarks to defeat the hunger offensive of the after-war drive.

The conserved surpluses from the flowing coffers of our farms and business interests will place any one of us in a position to ride the bumps of adversity with comparative ease. Save the surplus, is a mighty fine slogan for anyone to march under as we reap the wide advantages of big returns. Be sure that the nest egg is kept.

Poets, Attention!

The Dominion Press News and Feature Committee of the Victory Loan 1918 organization announces a poem contest in connection with the coming campaign. Canadians with poetical talent are invited to submit offerings not exceeding 200 words, which will be judged largely on their effectiveness as publicity designed to persuade Canadians to buy Victory Bonds. A prize of a $50.00 bond of the new issue will be awarded for the best poem submitted. The next best 24 will be awarded special mention and $5.00 will be paid for those which the committee decides to use in the course of the campaign. Professor M. W. Wallace, of the Toronto University, and the editor of Victory Loan National Press News and Feature Service will be the judges.

The committee offers to supply information concerning the urgency of the situation necessitating the coming loan, to all contestants, who may apply to the committee's office, 18 King Street West, Toronto.

The contest closes on October 15th, and award will be announced a few days later.

A Land of Promise

The Bishop was addressing the Sunday School. In his most expressive tones he was saying: "And now, children, let me tell you a very sad fact. In Africa, there are ten million square miles of territory without a single Sunday School, where little boys and girls can spend their Sundays. Now what should we all try and save up our money and do?" And the class, as one voice, replied in ecstatic union, "Go to Africa!"

THERE'S A WARNING IN TRADE FIGURES

Our Unstable Financial Position Indicated—Thrift Will Make Canada Secure

For those who understand Canada's financial conditions there is a significant lesson in the trade figures recently issued from Ottawa.

For the first five months of the present fiscal year there was a decrease in Canada's foreign trade of $270,000,000, or about twenty per cent. There was a great falling off alike in manufactures and agricultural products exported. The trade was $875,000,000, compared with $1,145,000,000, a year ago.

These figures tell in potent terms of the instability of present conditions. Our trade, though still large and healthy, is on an insecure and unenduring foundation. War conditions have created a fictitious prosperity. There may be no reason for alarm, but there is reason for caution. The Government must watch and prepare, so should the individuals. Few Canadians but are effected in some way by the present conditions. The wise ones will prepare by practising thrift now. The Nation can be no stronger than its individual citizens.

One on the Navigator.

A captain returned from sea on some holidays, was arguing and discussing with a farmer in the midst of a company at a country inn one evening.

Captain—"Allow me to say, sir, that you have no idea of the world, or of what I am talking about. I have sailed around the world several times and I have practical experience and have seen the wonders I'm telling ye of."

Farmer—"Well, sir, I can boast of a navigation record that you have not achieved. My mate and I have sailed a ship to the United States, only two of us, mind."

Captain—"Impossible, my friend, seeing you have never been at sea. What ship was it, pray?"

Farmer—"A courtship, sir, and you are a bachelor still."

"The worst winter I remember was when we were besieged," said the old soldier. "We had only one bite a day for two weeks and that was horse-flesh."

"I remember," said Pat O'Brien, his companion, "living for a month on one bite, and that was out of my leg."

"You old cannibal, do you expect me to believe that?" roared the soldier.

"It's true, believe it or not," said Pat, calmly. "A dog took a bite out of my leg, and the insurance kept me like a lord for four weeks."

To every home there comes a time when every thought, every hope, every prayer for the future centres on the recovery of one loved one. In that hour of anguish, every means to recovery is sought—the highest medical skill, trained nurses, costly treatment. Does the price matter?

It may be so great as to stagger the imagination—a sum beyond the possible.

But does anyone ask, "Can we do it?" Money or no money, they do it. And somehow they pay.

It may mean doing without things they think they need. It may mean privations, sacrifices, hardships. They make unbelievable savings, they achieve the impossible, but they get the money to pay.

***

Today in this critical period of our nationhood, there is imperative need for MONEY—vast sums of money. Only one way now remains to obtain it.

The nation must save, every community, every family, every individual Canadian must save.

If anyone says "I cannot save" let him consider to what extent he would pinch himself to relieve the sufferings of a loved one at home; and surely he would not pinch less for our fighting brothers in France.

Without suffering actual privations, nearly every family in Canada can reduce its standard of living, can practice reasonable thrift, can make cheerful sacrifice to enrich the life-blood of the nation.

You who read this, get out pencil and paper NOW. Set down the items of your living expense. Surely you will find some items there you can do without.

Determine to do without them.

Start TO-DAY. Save your money so that you may be in a position to lend it to your country in its time of need.

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-LIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is not neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rash, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-lives" are taken to correct Constipation.

Unexaggerated Fishing

YOU should read this story. I am a fisherman and I have been fishing for most people to waste through; but this one deals with dry land, mountains and ripples. So you see it is different from the ordinary tale where the young hero goes forth with a tattered outfit and catches the giant trout of the deep still pool for whom anglers from all parts of the world had cast in profane vain. It is all right to tell about lying on one's stomach with the face against the water, watching the flies to learn what kind the trout were eating. It is all right to then walk to the fishing outfit, sit down and bring forth an inexhaustible supply of flies from which one selects the very duplicate of the insect the trout like at that particular instant. And it is fine to tell how the angler cast his delicate lure, dropping it lightly as a shimmering insect on the very swirl of water where the big trout lay hungrily waiting. Then the whirl of the reel and the three-hour fight, ending in the thrill of victory which comes when a well-manipulated landing net embraces the exhausted fish.

It makes good stuff; but many fishermen know more of broken leads, frayed hooks and snappy little eight-ouncers. I am undertaking to tell about a real fishing trip. They told me I would get good fishing at Banff, so I took the Canadian Pacific westbound out of Calgary and went. On board I noticed an elderly person whose physical idiosyncrasies included the lean, leathery, brown characteristics of westernism. He eyed me and my outfit, he edged closer and he spoke of tobacco and predicted sunshine. Then he mentioned fishing.

It was not what it used to be he declared between tobacco clouds. He remembered when seven or ten or fifty cases meant seven or ten or fifty rises of the biggest, living, most voracious fish that ever lived; all cutthroats, none less than a pound and a half, many exceeding five pounds each. "Them days was real fishing," and them fish were game fighters. He minded one ole feller what everyone had tried to "it. This fish was grand of all of them, and he lived in a deep hole beside a perpendicular rock wall ever bit higher than any 'net' but when he found himself hooked he jest naturally run to this wall of flat rock and rubbed his nose against the stone wearing out 't' gut on freckle' himself." But my informant, being more canny and wise than other fishermen of his day, befouled the giant trout by not using gut. He tuk uh hunk uh fine steel wire, jointed it with swivels and hooked the monster. Then Zam! The fish was so astonished that he did not wiggle an inch of his twelve-pound body until he felt himself on the grass above the gravel bar. But those days were over and one did not catch any more big fish. Eventually I reached Banff, and was told to fish either up the Spray or up the Bow. They added that the waters were rising and fish would not be hungry, but again I might succeed. With weapons rigged I went up the Bow to a promising place I was told about. It had deep water with big eddies and a nice back-drift a few big rocks, and a submerged ledge just below the feeding rapids above the pool. Fine. Feverishly and eagerly I cast. Then steadily and doggedly, I went slowly and sullenly. Then, glory! The line went out. I had a nine inch fish. Much cheered I went on casting. The sun went down, the sky began to darken, the mountains stood black against the dimming azure. I staggered in my efforts. I sat on a log and let the line drag. B-z-z-z went the reel. A fish flashed in the rapids.

Having a new landing net I was very anxious to try it. It was the kind that fastens to a hook on a belt and comes off with the flick of a hand whenever necessary. I had no hook and had buttoned it on my suspender button. Having passed through much brush on my way to the pool I knew the net was going to require care in getting ready for use. Having hooked a fish I very calmly brought my self first of how to land him; so I plucked the net, and the button came, to the consternation of my suspenders.

Now my fish gave the one pound pull and the two pound bite all right. He also was there with the scheduled weight of nine. Things looked good for him to keep up the first scale, too.

but when it came to the five pound bend—the gut broke and I went home to the hotel.

Next morning with the bright sunlight just tipping the eastern slopes of Mount Rundle and lesser peaks, I went alone up river. Here and there and everywhere I dropped the seductive fly in the rising glacial flood with no results.

"Darn," I remarked. My line fell slack and uncared for into swift water and I looked up the river for some better seeming point. "Bang!" Something hit my rod like an express train, and like an express train the silk ran out and out. Aghast I stood and merely checked. Something was on. Out went the line, straight across the swift water; then I saw a large black streak break far out in the edge of white water. Once, twice, three times the fish took the air, and the reel kept singing all the time. He sounded, he rushed, he drove upstream and then zig-zagged down. Again and again he broke, two feet clear of the current. Forty yards of line was out and I had but five left, so I hopelessly checked tight, deciding that if I was going to break my lead it was no use worrying. But lead, rod, line and hook held, and the fish swung down on the surface, mouth open and gasping. There was brush all around, and no space to either work up or down. The full sweep of the river raced by with no restful eddies. More hopelessly still I reeled in, his troutship putting up frequent but lessening surries. Finally he was close and I tried the new landing net. Praise be to cord and rod and hook and gut the net worked! As the line slackened the hook dropped out, but there was the fish; three pounds of sparkling, spotted cutthroat trout, twenty-three inches long.

There was no more fishing. I went home satisfied. The gentle reader will note even this story ends in the usual way with the big fish safely netted.

Wedding Anniversary On Tuesday evening October 1st, a very pleasant social event occurred at Granville Ferry, when Mr. and Mrs. John L. Amberman celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding. Many friends, young and old, gathered from far and near and numerous were the congratulations and good wishes showered upon the smiling bride and groom. We had almost said, the bride and groom, so happy did they appear. The old homestead never looked better, with every room brilliantly lighted and decorated with autumn flowers and much interest was expressed in its history dating back over two hundred years. Its wonderful, spacious fireplaces, its fine ceilings and quaint pictures and furnishings were greatly admired. Games, readings, vocal and instrumental music made the evening pass all too quickly and many a burst of laughter and applause testified to the enjoyment of the guests. As midnight approached, delicious refreshments were served and finally the happy company parted with renewed good wishes and expressions of much pleasure. Many gifts of tin, granite ware, aluminum, china and glass were received to remind Mr. and Mrs. Amberman of their "tin" wedding and of the esteem of their many friends.

The hospital was only a short distance behind the fighting line. It is possible that it was a stray shell, but it appears probable that a deliberate attempt was made to attack the hospital.
