There has also been some improvement in that area because many of those supervisors have been given further training and it is hoped that they will have a more human and professional attitude towards their employees, their workers, the people for whom they are responsible.

However, we will have to work tremendously hard. And I think the union leaders are quite aware of those problems and are ready to forget those bad souvenirs of the days when they felt they were in constant conflict with management, with those supervisors with whom they had to deal, and that there will now be close co-operation between the management of Canada Post and its workers. However, there is still much to be done.

Mr. Speaker, I believe this is an excellent opportunity to create a climate of trust. As suggested by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), I believe also that we should sit down with these unions and workers—we need to be able to speak directly to the workers, not just their leaders—to see how we could achieve this self-sufficiency as a discipline—this is a term used by the President of Canada Post—and not as something imposed by the Government. We should be increasing the revenues rather than raising the prices of stamps. If Canadians are sick and tired of the poor service, Mr. Speaker, they are also sick and tired of the price increases for stamps. Mr. Speaker, even a one cent increase is felt as an insult by a public which presently has to put up with a service which is really abominable.

Therefore, no price increase for stamps before a marked improvement in the service; find ways to increase revenues; try to co-operate with workers and their unions to develop ways to increase these revenues.

As to self-sufficiency, there is a plan calling for the Crown corporation to become self-sufficient by the end of 1986-87. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) gave the Crown corporation an extension when he said that it could take one more year to achieve this self-sufficiency. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the Opposition is wrong when it says that we asked the corporation to achieve this self-sufficiency over a shorter period of time. Quite the contrary. We have extended by one more year the initial period granted to achieve self-sufficiency but we said also that it had to conform to the discipline it had accepted when it was established.

Therefore, this deficit will have to be cut by nearly $200 million, but this should not be done by increasing the prices of stamps. It will be necessary to make cuts in the expenditures—I do not mean through reduction of wages which have been negotiated— but by eliminating dead wood among higher paid management where, based on my personal experience, there is duplication of jobs which could be done better, more competently and at a much lower cost by workers already there. Therefore, there are ways to cut expenditures.

There are also ways of cutting expenses by improving the mechanization of certain processes, and this is where we will gauge the good will of the union leaders when they are faced with that possibility. If we are to improve operations at Canada Post in order to improve the service, some of the tasks will have to be done faster, more competently and at a lower cost. And this is where I hope union leaders will use the flexibility needed to enable a quality-conscious management to make some changes in the working methods without jeopardizing people's jobs. This is therefore an area where both unions and management could work together.

With respect to increasing revenues, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre referred earlier to parcel post delivery. Clearly, this is an area that could generate revenues. But it must be remembered that at one point, parcel service in the Post Office—because perhaps of a bad labour relations climate, because perhaps of the tremendous size of those new plants that were added without too much consultation with employees—the existing parcel service was really inadequate. There was a considerable amount of parcel damage, which means a new way will have to be found to provide that parcel service. But what we have seen since Canada Post Corporation has ceased to be involved in parcel post is that today, there are all sorts of very able and competitive private businesses which have come to this area. In order then for Canada Post Corporation to compete effectively with those new operations that make use of very modern equipment and have now acquired so much experience, it will have to develop a system that will be truly different from the one it used to have. Then increased revenues will become possible.

There is another aspect, which is that if we refer to increased revenues, we are then entering into competition with small and medium businesses. We saw that, for instance in the case of advertising inserts, where weeklies complained that Canada Post Corporation was trying to get revenues with those inserts. It was competing with SMBs and it was really unfair that a Crown corporation should use taxpayers' money to compete with SMBs. So there is a danger in increasing revenues.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I believe there is hope for Canada Post, but there will have to be very close co-operation between labour and management, a disciplined management, and a lot of courage on the part of the President of the Canada Post Corporation to really meet his greatest challenge, to improve service before anything else.

Mr. Deputy-Speaker: Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper).

Mr. Keeper: Yes, I have a few comments to make and a few questions to ask my colleague, Mr. Speaker. She says that it is normal for a Crown corporation to submit a plan to the Government and for the Government to make a decision. What I want to know is whether it is normal for a Crown corporation responsible for mail delivery to make plans behind closed doors with the Government and for decisions to be made without public input. Is this normal? Is it the policy of Canada Post to make decisions without giving the public an opportunity to have some input and to be informed about the plans and the options being considered by the Government?

A few Government Members have already referred to the Marchment Report. They have indicated that this was sufficient public input. What I want to know is this: Does the Hon. Member believe that ordinary people are convinced that they have already had an opportunity to take part in the decision-making process regarding the Canada Post Corporation, especially when the Government is now on the point of making decisions which affect all Canadians? Finally and briefly, to give the Hon. Member enough time to reply, I would like to know this: Is it normal for the person who will be making the decision, that is the Minister responsible, to be absent from this place when we are considering this important matter which affects all Canadians?

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I have personally headed a delegation of my constituents before the Marchment Commission which has tabled this report at the Government's request, precisely because we wanted to seek the advice of Canadians on the problems experienced by Canada Post and its priorities. In this report, the message was clear. Canadians want above all an improved service. I believe this was an honest consultation. The delegation I was heading, made up of people from my riding, told the Marchment Commission, which has prepared this report, that it would prefer an improved service to a self-sufficiency which could prejudice an improved service. The message was loud and clear. Everybody agrees. The problem is that when the Crown corporation was set up, it was mandated to achieve self-sufficiency by fiscal year 1986-87.

Mr. Keeper: It was not there.

Mrs. Mailly: Yes it was, I am sorry, the Hon. Member says no, but he is wrong.

As to the Minister, as I said earlier, he is in Montreal where he is meeting a provincial Minister to address a most urgent issue, and that meeting had been scheduled a long time ago. He was in the House during the Oral Question Period to answer the questions directed to him by my colleague the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) in spite of the fact that he was on a very tight schedule to arrive in Montreal. He was here to give him an opportunity—

Mr. Ouellet: He was not in the House during the Oral Question Period.

Mrs. Mailly: He had intended to come but he realized that if he did, he would not be able to arrive in Montreal in time for his appointment, but the Hon. Member himself told me that he intended to come during the Oral Question Period. I was away in my riding. I wish therefore to thank the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) for setting me straight, but the fact is that the Minister had a very important appointment and that this allotted day was decided upon by the House Leaders this week for today. These things happen.

As I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre should co-operate to solve this problem and above all improve the service, rather than moving motions which he contradicts himself by asking us to intervene directly in the operation of Canada Post, contrary to the accepted practice.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I too was informed yesterday of this opposition day, and I too had other plans and very important engagements in Winnipeg. I consider Canada Post as essential to all Canadians.

And I would like the Minister to view Canada Post in the same way. Why is the Minister not here? Why did he not change his agenda? Is he not aware of the fact that this policy concerns every Canadian, every citizen of this country?

You also said that the date set for self-sufficiency is in the legislation. It is not. There is no date mentioned. There are goals including self-sufficiency and services, but there is no specific date for the achievement of those goals. The date set for those goals is in your budget, but not in the legislation. It is not in the legislation.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I regret to say that the Hon. Member is mistaken. The request or the terms of reference including self-sufficiency were drafted in the first plan, in English the corporate plan, the operating plan of the Crown corporation. It was not in the legislation to establish that Crown corporation because the business plan becomes part of the operations of a company after it has been established under the bill. However, we did not impose that, and indeed we gave them one more year to meet the mandate that had been set out jointly by the Corporation and the Minister responsible at the time. I should think the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) probably was the Minister in charge at the time.

I am therefore sure that he can, in his remarks this afternoon if he intends to rise on this matter, explain that it was part of the obligations of the new Crown corporation.

It was therefore not initiated by our Government, and in fact we allowed for some flexibility by extending that period to make things easier for the Corporation which was going through difficult times as its president was replaced by another, services deteriorated and consumers no longer tolerated increases in postage rates. So we actually tried to make things easier.

However, we cannot back off from the adamant stand on the deficit or we would be doing just what the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) said we should not be doing. We would be converting a Crown corporation into an unprofitable Government department.

If it is a Crown corporation, it should be self-sufficient like Petro-Canada, like Air Canada, like the CN, and a host of others.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, why does the Hon. Member suggest that a communication service cannot be subsidized? Airports are subsidized, and so are other means of communication in our society.

Why should a service like Canada Post not be subsidized to a reasonable extent?

Mrs. Mailly: Again, Mr. Speaker, I repeat that a Crown corporation is given a mandate. Normally, when a corporation's main responsibility is to provide a service it is expected to become self-sufficient. Otherwise it will for ever need injections of public funds, so much so that the management of the Crown corporation are left with the very clear impression that the door is always wide open and that they are not really expected to run the corporation as a self-supporting operation.

That is precisely why I believe that when the corporation was established, probably by the then Minister of Finance, he told his colleague the Postmaster General that such a Crown corporation would be expected to eliminate the huge deficit running close to $1 billion, as I pointed out. Such were the facts then, we did not invent anything.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let us get on with the debate. The Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet).

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I have some short comments to make in this debate this afternoon, but first of all, I want to say that I support the motion moved by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper). The motion says, and I have the text here:

• (1550)

[English]

That this House demands that the Government require Canada Post to immediately provide, for tabling in the House, all of the options and the studies related thereto that are currently being considered for the future operation of the corporation, in order that public opinion and especially input from—

A series of people that are outlined here.

—be considered prior to any decision being taken.

[Translation]

I think the Government should ensure that the Canada Post Corporation immediately table its options, which are currently being examined and considered by the Corporation's directors.

To ensure that the public is informed of the decisions that will be taken very shortly, I believe, by the Government and by the Corporation, I think these decisions should be made after a public debate. I believe that is the purpose of the motion by my hon. colleague from Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper), namely to have an intelligent public debate on the matter. Actually, we know there is a small group of Conservative Members who have taken it upon themselves to mastermind the operations of Canada Post. Today, we have these Tory backbench managers who think they can operate a Crown corporation which happens to be Canada Post. And I think this is unacceptable. It is not only that, it is regrettable as well, and I think that the attitude of these Conservative Members will destroy all the improvements we have seen in recent months at Canada Post. I don't think there can be two tiers of management at Canada Post. Those who are appointed as such and who work full time at Canada Post should be entirely free to act and have full authority over the Corporation. Otherwise, it is back to the difficult times of labour disputes. We will have major labour conflicts, and we will have a situation that will deteriorate steadily instead of improving.

I think the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre must have read the Toronto Star, which said this morning, and this may be what inspired today's motion: Ottawa plan, a secret. And I quote the Toronto Star:

[English]

Don't blame Donald Lander, the new President of Canada Post Corp., for the thick fog that hangs over our national mail service. It is not his fault that the Progressive Conservative Government in Ottawa seems intent on ducking a public debate on the future of the Post Office.

More than three months after his appointment as President, Mr. Lander emerged for a public appearance before a House of Commons committee, but he had little to say because, as he informed the MPs, the Government still has not told him how it expects him to eliminate the $243 million Post Office deficit by April 1, 1988, while improving service at the same time.

[Translation]

I think the Toronto Star is absolutely right. We cannot expect Donald Landers, the new President of Canada Post, to work miracles. If he doesn't know what kind of action plan he should act upon and if he has no clear and specific directions from his boss, the Government of Canada, then the shareholders, in other words, Canadian taxpayers should make themselves heard through the present Conservative Government and tell Mr. Landers and the directors for Canada Post how they want things to be run in the future.

I find it extremeley unfortunate that we have now come to this point, because the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) who spoke a while ago has worked for Canada Post. She knows the concept on which Canada Post was based. She knows quite well that both the Post Office authorities and the unions wanted the Canada Post Corporation to be set up. Moreover, she also knows quite well that when the former Government passed that legislation and hired Michael Warren to become President of the Corporation, it had given Mr. Warren a clear, specific, and full mandate.

And I can add that not only his mandate was specific, but Mr. Warren knew what to do without any untimely interference from the Government. The President of Canada Post had unlimited powers to make the necessary decisions and manage the Corporation.

Now I am in a position to say that during the first years, the experience was quite satisfactory and I only have to quote the Parliamentary Secretary to the present Minister responsible for Canada Post (Mr. Domm) who said earlier that Canada Post should operate at arm's length from the Government, that the latter should not interfere and give improper orders to the authorities of the Corporation and he also praised the work it has performed up to now.

Now, I did not praise the Corporation. I am only reporting what the Parliamentary Secretary said earlier.

And, secondly, another authority that will perhaps be acceptable to Members opposite, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) himself said in his Budget speech on February 26, last:

• (1600)

[English]

Over the past year the Corporation has made progress in reducing overhead costs, cutting the number of managers and staff and increasing productivity.

[Translation]

So the Government itself admits that the corporation was under sound management, that it was clearly on the right track, and that it was making progress in the three areas which had been singled out: first, improved services; second, better labour relations; and, third, reduction of the deficit which the Post Office Department used to incur.

But the new Conservative Government threw a monkey wrench into the whole operation. Shortly after it took office we learned that Members made representations to the corporation to have people hired, that in some cases—like the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie)—they wanted an employee rehired and promoted. Indeed this was the issue of an investigation which cost thousands of dollars to the Canadian taxpayers and which never led to anything. It was a sheer waste of money to gratify the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine and nothing ever came out of it. The impartial authorities who reviewed Mr. Varga's allegations concluded, as did before them both the Auditor General and the management of Canada Post, that there was absolutely nothing to warrant a change in operations.

We even learned that on several occasions the Prime Minister's Office would call one or more Canada Post employees to intervene in the daily operations of the corporation. There can be no doubt that all this did not help postal operations and, in the end, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) made this comment after receiving the Marchment Committe report, and I quote:

[English]

We must also restrain spending in a number of specific areas.

The Government is determined to come to grips with the financial and operating problems of Canada Post—

The Marchment Committee has recommended another five years to reach the break-even point. This is not acceptable.

Following discussions with the President of Canada Post, the Government has requested a new operating plan to improve productivity at Canada Post so that the Corporation will reduce its operating deficit to zero by the end of fiscal 1987-88.

[Translation]

That, Mr. Speaker, was the last straw. Obviously, the postal authorities who had a specific action plan, who knew where they were going and had a very clear mandate not only to increase the revenue of Canada Post but also to make the appropriate administrative decisions that would improve labour relations and service, these authorities could not continue to function in the same way when dictated to every blessed day by third parties, either from the Prime Minister's Office or from a small secret society of Tory backbenchers, and so the President at the time, Mr. Michael Warren, resigned.

I understand why he resigned, and I think it was a serious mistake on the part of the Minister responsible for Canada Post to let him go. And it was an even more serious mistake on the part of the Minister responsible for Canada Post when he did not warn his backbenchers to keep their hands off the Corporation. If Canada Post is to make the kind of progress that is required, it must first be free to act according to its operating plan, without the kind of political intervention certain Tory Members want to indulge in.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is too bad that the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) . . . I am sorry she left—mentioned—because if she were here I would be able to—

Mrs. Duplessis: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The point of order probably refers to the fact that the Hon. Member should not mention the absence of the Member—

Mrs. Duplessis: He has no right—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please! I am sure the Hon. Member did not do it intentionally.

Mr. Ouellet: This is because I have to refer to a speech that has just been made, and I want to respond to some contributions made earlier in this House. And, of course, I would like the Hon. Member who made that contribution to be here in order to hear my response.

What I mean is the Hon. Member for Gatineau, who just spoke, seems to let the responsibility for future solutions to the problems of Canada Post Corporation lie on the shoulders of the labour unions. She made a thinly veiled threat when she suggested labour leaders should understand and act differently in the future. As if problems that may exist within the Canada Post Corporation were the exclusive responsibility of labour leaders. It may be easy for the Conservatives to constantly blame labour unions for existing problems, but the facts are, Mr. Speaker, that unions in the Post Office have given evidence of their good faith since the Canada Post Corporation was established. Since we established the Canada Post Corporation, there has not been one single strike. Not one union went on strike since the Corporation was established, some two and a half or three years ago. However, there seems to be an attempt to perpetuate in the minds of some Conservatives the idea that Post Office unions are responsible for all existing problems. It is time in my view that we recognize that labour unions in Canada Post are willing to co-operate, to do what is possible to improve conditions. That they did not go on strike but signed year after year collective agreements without ever striking since the Canada Post Corporation was established is clear evidence of their good faith, of their good intentions and of their desire to co-operate in order to improve operations, to provide a better service.

But there is a commitment which had been made to Canada Post by the former Government and which has not been met by the present Conservative Government. It was to allow this corporation to diversify, to streamline its operations, because the area of communication is not made up only of mail sorting and handling. It is a fact that we are entering into an era of advanced technology and sophisticated communication media. When creating Canada Post, we, the previous Liberal Government, had given it a clear mandate to move forward, modernize its operations and thus collect the additional revenues it needed to subsidize the least lucrative parts of its operations.

It is clear that if you send a letter from one end of the country to the other, the 34 cents or 68 cents stamp you may have to buy will not cover the costs which Canada Post will incur to deliver this letter to its destination. What am I saying is that, unfortunately, the lack of additional revenues which Post Canada could gain through technological developments that are now denied by the present Government is making the situation very difficult, if not impossible, for the present administrators of Canada Post.

To conclude, I want to say that I have the fullest confidence in Mr. Lander, the new president, as well as in Hon. Justice René Marin, the chairman of the corporation, who are both competent, fully dedicated to the cause of Canada Post and who, with a staff which is committed to improve things, could succeed, if only the present Government will allow them to do their work in total freedom and peace of mind. What is most regrettable and why I support the motion moved by my colleague the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre is the fact that a small group of Conservative Members meet in secret to try and plan the future of Canada Post. These self-appointed administrators are wrong. If the Minister allows them to continue, they will ruin the fine efforts made to improve the situation within Canada Post.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper).

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member.

When his Party was in power, the objective of his Government was to phase out subsidies to the Canada Post Corporation by the year 1986-87. This was the objective of his Government and the Conservatives have postponed the target date by a few years. The result of this policy has been an increase in postage costs and service cut-backs.

Does this policy remain similar to that of the Liberal Party?

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) was right earlier when, during his discussion with the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly), he said that there was no requirement in the Act for Canada Post to become self-sufficient at one date rather than another.

The objectives set in Section 4 of the Post Office Act consist first and foremost in improving the service and maintaining the quality of service which the people of Canada are used to receiving in all our communities. Indeed, it is explicitely stated in the Act that the Canada Post Corporation shall not close post offices in small communities or discontinue home delivery or rural mail runs in isolated areas, because we did not want to live the same experience as in the United States where, after the creation of a public corporation independant from Government, thousands of small post offices were closed down. We therefore specified in the Act that the Corporation would have to continue to provide the service given to the public in the past.

In answer to the Hon. Member's question, I would point out that obviously the previous government had only set objectives to be met. And it was understood with Canada Post management that a year before the expiry of the five-year operation plan there would be new discussions and a new timetable might be set, because we could not draw a figure out of a hat and say without any risk of error, in all certainty, that by a given date, by a given moment, Canada Post Corporation would have become fully profitable.

However, we never put in the legislation any constraint for Canada Post Corporation, and if the present government now wants to do it, they are doing it on their own and without any legislative obligation to do so.

• (1610)

[English]

Mr. Domm: Mr. Speaker, I will take this opportunity to bring to the attention of the House through you, Mr. Speaker, a rebuttal to the statement made by the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) that our Government is meddling in an area in which it should not meddle in trying to give Canada Post direction or advice on matters of concern to the corporation. At the same time, the Hon. Member for Papineau is implying that his Government, the previous Government, did not create this kind of dilemma for Canada Post. Would the Hon. Member mind advising the House why, during the former administration from 1980 to 1984, the Government went so far as to appoint rural postmasters, with the approval of Liberal Members of Parliament? Is this not taking some of the decision-making process away from Canada Post? Would the Hon. Member also confirm or deny that his Government approved appointments, through Orders in Council, of all the vice-presidents? Who does the important decision-making at Canada Post if it is not the Vice-President of this or that department? Why would the former Government condone the approval of appointments to rural postmaster positions by Liberal MPs as well as cabinet decisions to approve all vice-presidential appointments? That is the first question.

• (1620)

The second question deals with the Hon. Member's perception of the difference between this Government and the former administration which made claims that it did not do what we are endeavouring to do at this point in time. I have before me a document which came about as a result of the Crown corporation being formed in 1981. The Hon. Member tries to take credit for the fact that there were no strikes in 1981, 1982 and 1983 when his Government brought in a Bill which fixed salaries and made negotiations with unions over salary increases impossible as a result of the six and five program. The former Government fixed salaries without arbitration and without labour negotiations. What we are saying is that through good working relations between Government and Canada Post we have avoided strikes at Canada Post without legislation. So if any Government has directly interfered with Canada Post in terms of salaries, unions and labour relations, it was the former administration.

The former Government set objectives for different types of matters, including volume of deficit. Objectives were set to improve service. In the literature of Canada Post an agreement to the former Government's challenge is set out. The former Government gave the Post Office three challenges. One was very specifically to cut the deficit; but no help was offered to Canada Post when it had no money for capital expenditures. That is one of the dilemmas which it faces today. How did the Hon. Member expect the corporation to keep pace with modern times and technology when the former Government cut off all possibility for capital involvement?

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I find it very interesting that the Parliamentary Secretary is now starting to behave like a member of the Opposition. He is here to defend Canada Post, not to attack it. Clearly, he has the answers to all the questions which he has asked of me. He should be supplying the answers instead of asking the questions.

I wish to tell the Hon. Member, in relation to expenditures which Canada Post needs to be more efficient, more operative and more modern in its activities, that it is not up to me as a member of the Opposition to supply the money. It is up to the Government of the Hon. Member opposite to find the money and to allow the Post Office to purchase any new equipment necessary to improve its operations.

As far as the Hon. Member's remark is concerned with respect to the three objectives established by the Government, I remind him that these objectives were established by Parliament. The legislation creating Canada Post Corporation was unanimously passed by all Members, including the Hon. Member who just asked me the questions. He was a Member of Parliament at the time sitting on this side of the House. He voted in favour of the creation of the Canada Post Corporation, unless he was absent that day. However, it was a unanimous decision by the Members present. All the Liberals, all the Conservatives and all the members of the NDP present in the House that day voted in favour of the Bill. These three objectives were outlined in the Bill.

As far as appointments are concerned, I wish to reassure the Hon. Member that in 1969 the then Postmaster General, Eric Kierans, changed the method of appointment of officials in the Post Office through competitions to be presided over by the Public Service Commission. All appointments of postmasters since that time have been made under the auspicies of the Public Service Commission.

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Government now has the Marchment Report. We have had it for some time now and it has been studied extensively. We also have the Laventhol & Horwath Report which pointed out that there is gross mismanagement at Canada Post.

I wish to offer my congratulations to the present Minister responsible for Canada Post who has spent a great deal of time trying to find a solution to the very serious problems we have had with postal delivery in Canada. I have had the pleasure of working with the Minister in some of his deliberations. He will be announcing a mandate next month. It will be a public statement and not a private one. I have never heard anything as ridiculous as the comment about his being involved in the day-to-day operations of Canada Post. Members of Parliament were swamped with letters of protest concerning mail delivery. It is our responsibility to do something about this, just as we had to do something about Air Canada in the 1970s when there was gross mismanagement within that company. At that time, thousands of airline tickets were missing and air safety regulations were not being adhered to. After we finished with Air Canada, the President had to resign. We had to bring in a new President, as well as a new Vice-President of Maintenance. So there is nothing new about our having to become involved with Crown corporations. I cannot tell a constituent who writes me a letter concerning poor mail delivery that it has nothing to do with me because it concerns a Crown corporation. That is a lot of nonsense. If we continue to receive complaints, we will raise them with Canada Post officials.

I wish to contain my remarks in the most part to the employees of Canada Post and to labour relations within the corporation. The Marchment Report states that outside postal workers, letter carriers and parcel post delivery men are highly regarded by Canadians who have come in contact with them and who have an opinion on the subject. Outside postal workers are seen as being courteous, efficient, helpful and knowledgeable. Only 5 per cent or less of the population are critical of outside postal workers on any of the four dimensions that were measured.

I think there is potential for a great deal of improvement in the Post Office. I will touch on other recommendations which have been made to management to deal with better labour relations. However, Canadians have a different opinion of inside workers. The Marchment Report states that the majority of Canadians are also positive in their attitudes toward inside postal workers but that the frequency of criticism of them is higher than of outside postal workers. The report states that almost one in five Canadians, or 18 per cent, feel that Post Office employees are not efficient, while one in seven say that they are not courteous or helpful. So there is some concern with regard to the inside postal employees. Marchment made some recommendations in his report which will be up to Canada Post to implement. I think they are excellent suggestions.

We will not go into Canada Post to implement the recommendations which have been made with respect to labour relations. The Marchment Report states that the corporation should investigate the use of incentives, including a team leader approach, to improve output and employee morale, particularly in terms of mail processing. Another recommendation is with respect to the corporation re-examining its employees' suggestion award plan to ensure that adequate encouragement and recognition is provided for employees to generate suggestions which will improve productivity.

I am sure that Canada Post is working on some of these recommendations since labour relations seem to have improved over the last period of time. One cannot talk about service without taking into account labour relations. If reasonable and affordable settlements cannot be reached with employees and their unions, then there can be no service. If there is no service for a long period of time, then there will be no customers. This is part of the price the public and the Post Office has had to pay for the labour turmoil of the 1960s and 1970s. There were nine national strikes in 15 years, some of a few days' duration and some of many weeks' duration. There were thousands of days lost due to sporadic work stoppages and wildcat strikes. The long-term cost to the Post Office and to employees has been the rise of a courier industry. Born in emergency, this industry stays on as an aggressive, expanding competitor in certain lucrative postal markets. As well, a general crisis of confidence in the Post Office's ability to deliver has probably hastened investment in alternative delivery methods and technologies.

During this period the capacity of the Post Office to pay for itself and deliver on traditional and new expectations of Canadians was weakened. It was to bring about a state of normality to this downward spiral in labour relations and to impose upon the postal service the disciplines as well as the opportunities of a private-sector labour relations system and the Canadian Labour Code that Canada Post was made a Crown corporation. This step was welcomed by all parties.

What has been the result of this step? The Crown corporation came into being on the heels of a disastrous 45-day strike. Since then, however, almost five years have gone by without a national strike. Days lost due to wildcats or illegal stoppages have shrunk. Stoppages have been brief and have been dealt with promptly. Negotiated pay settlements have been kept within the level of inflation of 2 per cent to 4 per cent, and the move to trend-setting wage packets has been stopped.

Labour relations and negotiations are so complex and are influenced by so many factors that it is foolhardy to assign blame or credit for their success or failure. I would only repeat that since the move to a Crown corporation, five years have gone by without a national postal strike. That is a fair record for a business.

I would remind Hon. Members of the House that it has taken 20 years to pollute the atmosphere. The corporation is saddled with a massive clean-up campaign. If management and past administrations are to be held accountable for past labour relations failures, then some credit must be given to the corporation and the measures taken by its managers for those five years without national mail stoppages.

Reasonable Members will recognize what private-sector managers have rediscovered, which is, that managing change is easier in a growth situation when money and resources are plentiful. The degree of normality brought to labour relations at Canada Post has been achieved in a time of down-sizing and change and within the labour relations structure inherited from its days as a government Department. I would like to discuss that structure for a few moments and outline what is being done to reform it.

Canada Post Corporation has slightly more than 60,000 employees. Only a few thousand are non-unionized. For labour relations and collective bargaining purposes, unionized staff are divided among 30 recognized bargaining units and eight different unions. This is a structure that has its roots in employee associations formed shortly after Confederation, and that is related to the organization and purpose of Government Departments. For a Crown corporation which must function in many ways like an industrial, businesslike and commercial enterprise, it is a cumbersome and complex framework within which to work and change.

Some of the postal bargaining units are comprised of many thousands of employees and others of none or just a handful. For example, it has been 20 years since trains ran with sufficient frequency to make mail sorting on board a practical proposition. Railway cars made their last runs in 1971, yet today there is still a lone railway mail clerk working in a postal plant in western Canada. There is a separate collective agreement for this one-man unit. Can you believe that, Mr. Speaker? This is only an example, but it illustrates the need to take a hard look at whether or not this structure makes sense in the 1980s and 1990s.

The large number of units and collective agreements, some large and some small, that must be negotiated means that the corporation is almost constantly at the bargaining table. This puts a terrible burden on the management of Canada Post. It is administratively complex and costly. It is also costly in terms of business and customer confidence.

Negotiations, by their nature, carry with them the possibility of a strike, whether or not one in fact occurs. As deadlines approach, customers react. Business is lost and the climate of uncertainty and conflict lasts in the public mind long after a settlement is achieved. In an environment in which collective agreements are being signed at the rate of one a month, good labour relations are not easy to achieve.

The Marchment Commission recommended a consolidation of postal unions. Steps in this direction have been going on quietly, professionally and without controversy for at least two years. In 1984, the Canada Labour Relations Board recognized the need for a global review of bargaining units at Canada Post. In May 1985, the corporation filed an application with the board to get this process under way. Management is not alone in seeing this review as being necessary and positive. Several union leaders have been quoted in the press as having a similar view.

The board has since held a number of meetings with the corporation and the unions. In the last month, the corporation and the unions filed recommendations that they think will help the board improve and bring into the 20th century the labour relations framework at Canada Post. On Tuesday, May 27, the Canada Labour Relations Board will open its formal hearings into the restructuring of postal bargaining units. We hope this will be a step in the right direction and will eventually provide for better postal service and better labour relations. These hearings will be public and they will be lengthy as this is an extremely complex issue.

My point is that the complex issues, many years in the making, are not being neglected. The corporation is addressing them quietly, professionally and in the appropriate forums. There is a tremendous amount of spade work that must go on behind the scenes before issues of this magnitude are resolved and the results apparent. All Members of the House know how much work was put in by two Governments and members of all Parties before we had a postal corporation Act to show for it. If this step had been taken earlier, the difficulties the corporation faces today might have been smaller.

I assure Hon. Members that the Government is deeply concerned about the size of these problems and the need to provide Canadians with a reliable service which the country can afford. I also think that Hon. Members of the House should not forget that this corporation which they created has not been without achievement. Behind the rhetoric, speculation and headlines there is a change and reform and more than four years have gone by without the kind of postal disruptions that have so devastated the public and business in the past.

That is just one of the major areas which must be improved upon. Of course, the number one problem with which Canada Post must deal is mail delivery to all the new developments across Canada. About a million residents are affected. Canada Post will have to come up with a plan to handle this and will have to decide what kind of mail delivery service there will be in these new areas.

I can assure Hon. Members that we are not going to be involved in the day-to-day operations. This is going to be up to Canada Post. If we continue to receive letters dealing with poor mail service, particularly from the business community, then we will need to have some serious talks with Mr. Lander and his executives. I think the start of these labour hearings next week is going to be a step in the right direction and I am sure we will learn a lot from them.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, the former Post Office critic for the Conservative Party mentioned today that there will be a policy directive made next month. Perhaps he could explain what sort of policy directive the Post Office is working on now as it concerns rural post offices. Two rural communities in my riding, Elstow and Bradwell, have been notified that after the end of May, they will no longer have post offices. I find this very hard to swallow, particularly since the Government is intending to bring down a policy on new post offices just a few days after those post offices are to be closed.

Just so that the Hon. Member understands the situation, let me tell him that Bradwell has been in existence since 1912. There are currently 98 families living there and the population is something in the order of 220 or 230 people. It is not a shrinking community. There are 18 serviced lots which will be built upon in the next couple of years. However, in the last year there was a slight deficit at that station, and the postmaster or postmistress retired. It is the current policy of Canada Post to shut down marginal post offices in rural areas in the event of a retirement. Rather than being faced with someone obtaining a permanent job, Canada Post prefers to shut it down and put it out of business.

Why could those kinds of shut-downs not have been delayed until the June policy was in place?

Mr. McKenzie: Mr. Speaker, there are also Members on this side of the House who have the same problem. Mr. Lander might have to reverse his policy next month or come up with some alternative to the closing of these stations. I hope the Hon. Member has made a representation to him. I would certainly keep putting pressure upon him. I cannot tell the Hon. Member anything further at this time, until the Minister makes his complete statement next month. There might have to be reversals in terms of what the Hon. Member was talking about, but I could not say at this time.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, the same point emerges in constituencies in which expansion is taking place from urban areas into rural areas. There is a lack of mail delivery which affects both home owners and businesses. In areas of my constituency such as Devonshire Heights and the new areas around Amherstberg, there are established suburbs which lack door-to-door service. For example, River Canard was promised such service in the past. People across my constituency in those areas and in small towns with populations of 3,000 or 4,000 feel themselves to be part of the greater Windsor area, yet they do not receive door-to-door mail delivery.

Is it the Hon. Member's opinion that the policy which will come down in June will address this issue? Of course we have addressed upon these various issues with the Crown corporation itself, but I hope that the policy will try to deal with some of these dilemmas which are causing as much inflow of concerned mail, if it reaches us, as did the dilemmas of the past.

Mr. McKenzie: Mr. Speaker, I hope the policy will refer to such situations. Of course the situation which the Hon. Member described is not confined to Canada. There has been growth all around the world. It is interesting to note that the United States has not added a new postal route since 1978. There are many developments in the United States which have postal boxes or in which the residents have to go to local post offices to pick up their mail.

Mr. Keeper: Do you support that?

Mr. McKenzie: Well, we will be discussing all these points. I hope the committee is making arrangements to have Mr. Lander back again. I hope members of the committee did not arrange for him to appear only once.

Mr. Keeper: Why weren't you at the committee meetings?

Mr. McKenzie: I happen to be a Parliamentary Secretary, and the rules do not allow us to be involved in committee.

Mr. Keeper: Every Member of Parliament has that right, and you chose to be away.

Mr. McKenzie: When I was a back-bencher, I took full advantage of committees. Parliamentary Secretaries do not become involved in committees.

Mr. Keeper: You ignored this committee.

Mr. McKenzie: I hope Members will have him back. Heads of the Post Office used to appear before the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Estimates. I hope Members will make arrangements with the Chairman of the committee to keep Mr. Lander coming back, so that every one of them will have an opportunity to ask him about their problems. We cannot have Government interference in the day-to-day operations of Canada Post. The Hon. Member will just have to be patient and wait for the Minister to make his policy statement next month.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary has a new mathematical method. How will he be able to achieve all these improvements in delivery—and delivery has been going downhill since his Government took office—at the same time as Canada Post achieves self-sufficiency by 1988? Does the Parliamentary Secretary in fact know how to create something from nothing?

Mr. McKenzie: Mr. Speaker, it will not be up to me to implement these policies; it will be up to Mr. Lander.

I should like to point out to the Hon. Member that in the sixties the Post Office used to make money. In 1960-61, under the Diefenbaker Government, there was a deficit of $4,726,000. At that time a directive was given to the Post Office Department to reduce the deficit, and it was reduced. By 1962-63 it made a profit of $3,486,000. That was not accomplished by reducing the quality of service; it was done by improved management.

I believe Mr. Lander will have to prove himself as a good manager. He will have to improve labour relations and manage better. If he manages better, he will be able to look after some of these rural post offices. He might be able to expand delivery. That is his responsibility.

I was a civil servant for 35 years. I implemented a plan designed by Bell Canada for the Manitoba telephone system. It concerned the installation of telephones. After implementing it, productivity doubled and the cost per installation dropped by 50 per cent. It just shows what can be done with the right management, and that is what Mr. Lander and his team will have to do. He will have to manage better and, if he manages better, he will be able to expand and provide better delivery in these new areas. He will just have to prove himself in the next year or two.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that there are only 12 minutes remaining this afternoon within which to address this topic. I could carry on for a considerable length of time if I had the opportunity to do so.

The state of Canada Post and the reason for bringing forward this Opposition Day motion should be evident to everyone. Canada Post is being used as a victim by the Government. Frankly that is a scandal. It is something which will resound, very much to the detriment of all Canadians. I believe it is something which has to be reversed.

It became clear to my colleagues and me—those of us who attended the committee hearing two nights ago—that little practical difference was allowed to occur between Canada Post as a Crown corporation or as a Department of Government. The Government is simply not giving Canada Post direction or the freedom to follow direction, which are essential in the exercise of a mandate of a Crown corporation rather than the exercise of a departmental mandate.

The President of Canada Post stonewalled and dodged questions before the committee. I believe he did not do it because it was his desire to do so. He did it because he was told he had better defend the Government's position or else. We know what happens to Government servants who do not defend the Government's position. It was very sad to see someone with a distinguished career in the corporate sector forced to go through that sort of charade because the Government wanted it.

Since Mr. Lander was appointed President of Canada Post, he has not been allowed to talk to the press or to the unions. He has not even been allowed to return telephone calls from Members of Parliament. His appearance before the committee was essentially the first opportunity that the public of Canada had to interview him on the intentions of Canada Post. What a disappointment it turned out to be! However, it was a disappointment because of the Government's action, or lack of it, rather than that of Canada Post.

In the Budget Speech the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) severely curtailed the corporation's Estimates and stated that he was giving it until fiscal year 1987-88 to become financially self-sufficient. At the same time, he directed the Corporation to come up with a corporate plan for presentation to the Government. Frankly, that is not good enough. As anyone who has an understanding of the private sector should know, turnarounds do not happen overnight. The Government knew very well that Canada Post was having difficulty meeting the improved financial specifications which were previously set down. This is mostly because of lack of political direction or the wrong sort of political direction.

Instead of coming out at that time with a mandate and clear directions for which it took responsibility, the Government laid down these unrealistic financial targets. This corporation is in a mature industry and has deliberately been kept out of growing sectors of the communications industry. It had a deficit equivalent to 9 per cent of its gross revenues. That situation meant that an unrealistic target was being set for a turn-around with no direction being given as to how it might be accomplished. No support or assistance was given in terms of a guarantee that the Government would take the political responsibility and flak as it should.

Thank heavens we have had some leaks. The Minister let it out that alternate day delivery was being considered. I do not have time to go into all of the problems. I will only say that three separate studies in the last 12 years have determined that this would not save money for the corporation.

We have reason to believe that the privatization of Canada Post is the Government's hidden agenda. Having kept Canada Post out of the potentially profitable sectors, the Government would now like to turn over to the private sector those potentially profitable sectors which still remain within the corporation's mandate. The board of directors has not approved any budget or operating plan. Let us see how the funding cuts are to be accomplished. In 1985-86, Government funding was $370 million, of which $170 million represented a cultural publications subsidy payment, leaving $200 million for operating funds. In the current Estimates the Government has cut the subsidy to $121 million, of which the cultural publications subsidy makes up $100 million. Reducing the cultural publications subsidy from $170 million to $100 million is in itself unreasonable and unfair to Canada Post.

What is even more unreasonable and unfair is the decimation, to use the Latin term in its full meaning, of the operating subsidy. That operating subsidy is now being cut from $200 million to $21 million in a one-year period. That is totally unreasonable. It is the sort of cut that the Government has not applied to any other Crown corporation. It is being applied to Canada Post to make an example of that organization, to intimidate its employees, and to send a message to all parts of the Government's Crown corporation sector that when the Government says "Jump" they have to answer: "How high?" or perhaps when the Government says "Cut" they have to answer: "How far?"

The Government's Marchment Commission Report closed the door to the potentially profitable parcel sector by refusing to allow any reasonable planning horizon investments in that sector. Since the 1960s, Canada Post has been kept out of those sectors which might have served to support its business. It has been kept out of financial services in rural communities. It has been kept out of telecommunciations and it has been driven out of mail order, not necessarily for bad reasons, but without recognition of the fact that these exclusions have been taking place.

All Canadian taxpayers pay for the mail and, frankly, the Government is floating some trial balloons to see how the outcry goes. Canada Post is a confused organization. It has received no clear direction from the Government and it is not receiving fair treatment. It is being used as the target of indiscriminate union bashing by certain members of the Government. Management is also being treated in an unfair fashion, and there is a total lack of recognition, apart from the cultural subsidies payment which we know is being cut, of the other very significant national roles of Canada Post.

Canada Post has a national significance. There are thousands of communities in the country in which the Post Office is the only federal presence. In many remote communities it is the only federal presence, the only visible symbol that these communities are indeed part of Canada. The social role of the Post Office is something which I could wax lyrical about. However, other than simply being the meeting place on rural routes, it has a very valuable social role to play in remote communities such as those in my own riding. For the last three years people have been allowed to ship groceries in through the mail so that they can get the price of their groceries down from two-and-a-half times the southern Canadian price to merely double the southern Canadian price. That is worth maintaining as well.

I have mentioned the difficulties which are occurring, the internal divisions and the low morale. This is not to criticize Canada Post but merely to point out how the lack of responsibility on the part of the Government and the lack of direction from the Government is producing these dissentions, difficulties, confusions and disfunctions in an organization in which the vast majority of the workers, be they union or management, are anxious to serve the people of Canada well. The size of the turn-around demanded is unreasonable. The Post Office is forced to bear the burden of government policy and also of government failure to set policy, which is even worse.

The Government is taking a scythe to rural routes. In doing so it is increasing the cost to individuals out of all proportion. There are people in the community of Pinewood in my constituency whose rural route is threatened who are looking at a 60 mile return trip to pick up their mail. I understand that in other ridings the trips would be even longer. Some of the other cut-backs with which they are being threatened, or other service alternatives, do not give them much choice at all. They already suffer from slower mailing time, which is, unfortunately, a very strong complaint which I hear. I have heard complaints from an organization in Sioux Lookout which sent out an important letter that did not arrive in a month. Businessmen have been let down by Priority Post. Mail takes a month to get to some remote communities from Ottawa during freeze-up. People are having to wait four to six days for mail which should arrive in two to three days.

That is not to say that there has been no progress made. I, personally, have been satisfied with the co-operation of Canada Post officials as it relates to my riding. However, these people are under a terrible handicap. They are trying to do their best, but they are being ball-and-chained by the Government. That is what is preventing them from delivering an effective sevice. The largest part of my work-load relates to Canada Post complaints. I trace it back to the Government and its willingness to exercise its so-called private sector agenda at the expense of service to Canadian people, particularly those who live in remote communities and areas which are in every way under-serviced.

The goods by mail issue is an important one to me. Let the Government say if it is going to forbid Canada Post to provide that very necessary service to people living in remote native communities. Let the Government say if it is prepared to tell Canada Post that it cannot break any of its existing contracts with a view to passing the contracts over to native organizations which could, in many cases, deliver a better service cheaper. Let the Government say if its policy is to decimate Canada's rural route mail network. Let the Government say if it is prepared to sacrifice the people on the back roads across the country in the interest of an agenda that concentrates far more on budget savings than it does on the measure of service to Canadians which the unions and the management of Canada Post will be only too willing to provide.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

DESIGNATION OF ALLOTTED DAY

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would like to designate tomorrow as an allotted day.

DISPOSITION OF BILL C-94

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations between the Parties with respect to the first item of business to be considered today under Orders of the Day, Bill C-96. I think you will find there is unanimous consent to accept an amendment to the motion. The agreement between the Parties is that this Bill would be referred to the legislative committee now seized of Bill C-92.

Mr. Deans: 94 and 92.

Mr. Waddell: They are seized of C-92.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They are seized of C-92. We are now considering C-94. If that is clear, Sir, then congratulations.

Mr. Speaker: It sounds like Monday morning bingo.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, the latter part of that is correct, if I understood it. The problem I raise again is that tomorrow is an allotted day. Presumably there will be a Private Members' hour. I am most eager to find a way to resolve the ongoing problem of Private Members' hour and what happens to the sequence. I would very much like if, together with my two colleagues, we might spend some time today trying to find a satisfactory solution.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, that certainly is something I think we should try and address again today. There are quite a number of Bills which have accumulated and I think we can resolve it, but we will meet later on and try and bring something to the House which meets with the satisfaction of all Members.

Mr. Speaker: I take it there is unanimous consent for the introduction of the motion that the order later this day be amended to read that the matter be sent to the same legislative committee now seized of Bill C-92?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the motion carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CANADA-NEWFOUNDLAND ATLANTIC ACCORD IMPLEMENTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that Bill C-94, an Act to implement an agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador on offshore petroleum resource management and revenue sharing and to make related and consequential amendments, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased and honoured to speak to the House on second reading of the Atlantic Accord Implementation Bill. Second reading and the legislative work that goes on towards implementing the Accord can be compared with getting your pilot's licence. I am a private pilot and the greatest thrill was my first solo flight. Getting the licence was second. I think we can say the same thing about this legislation. The great thrill, the excitement, the euphoria, came when the Atlantic Accord was signed. Now we have to get down to the nitty-gritty and get this legislation through to implement what has been signed.

This historical agreement was signed by the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador on February 11, 1985. It was a truly historic occasion which inspired the Premier of Newfoundland and Labrador to say that his province had finally become an equal partner in Confederation. This Accord represents the most important agreement reached between Ottawa and St. John's since Newfoundland and Labrador entered Confederation 37 years ago. It means the people of Newfoundland and Labrador will share in the development of and revenues from their offshore oil and gas resources. It means that the people of Newfoundland and Labrador will have a greater degree of influence in the social, political and economic affairs of Canada. The greatest potential by-product of the Accord could be the restoration of national unity itself. We have done what the Liberals have not been able to do; we have opened a long neglected door that allows the people of Newfoundland and Labrador to become full partners in the economic life of the country.

The Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) and the Premier of Newfoundland and Labrador were able to agree on what should have been the genuine rights of that province for a very long time. The failure to reach agreement with Newfoundland and Labrador was symptomatic of what was wrong with the previous Government's energy policy. It was a policy dictated from Ottawa without regard for the rights and needs of the provinces and the oil and gas industry.

The Accord will ensure that oil and gas development will provide full social and economic benefits to Canada and, particularly, to Newfoundland and Labrador. The Accord will provide a stable and permanent management regime that recognizes the equality of the federal and provincial Governments in the development of offshore resources. It will provide a clear regulatory regime for industry, welcome news indeed after five years of a Liberal energy policy that inspired very little fairness. The Atlantic Accord will encourage increased energy security and economic benefits for the country as a whole. It will provide rigorous protection of the environment, and Newfoundland and Labrador's all important fishing industry. The Accord will also provide improved safety in offshore work.

The Atlantic Accord legislation encompasses two major policy initiatives. It implements the Atlantic Accord agreement and incorporates the Canada Petroleum Resources Act. The Canadian Petroleum Resources Act, that we debated recently in the House, replaces the Canada Oil and Gas Act of 1982, and includes an amended Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act.

One important feature of the Accord must be underlined. It will provide for revenue sharing on the same basis as if these resources were on land. This provision shows that this Government is serious about fairness, equality and opportunity. It shows that we intended to negotiate with the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador. We did not merely legislate with a greedy eye on potential revenue. It shows that we were serious when we said that the people of Newfoundland and Labrador should have greater control over their own destiny. We have sealed this commitment with the creation of a strong, independent, and impartial board, the Canada-Newfoundland Offshore Petroleum Board, which will oversee oil and gas activity off the province's coast. The board will provide local and regional administrative guidance to the development of a resource that is national and international in its scope and importance.

The board is composed of six members, and a chairman, who are appointed jointly by the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador. Members of the board are not public servants of either Governments. All appointments under the Accord have been made jointly by the two levels of Government. There are no "we" and they divisions that mark the attitude of the previous Government.

I see the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) over there smiling. I am reading a very interesting book right now, "The One-Eyed Jacks", which is reviewing the current Prime Minister and the previous Prime Ministers. It is interesting to read in there the style of the previous Government and how it enjoyed conflicts. Its leader at the time enjoyed the "we" and "they" attitudes of federal-provincial relationships. We are trying to put an end to that, because I think it is all "we". We have to work together in this country, and this Accord probably speaks most clearly of that co-operation.

On October 17, 1985, the chairman and two vice-chairman were appointed to the board. On January 6, 1986, the board and staff assumed the operational responsibilities previously assigned to the Canada Oil and Gas Lands administration, and the Newfoundland and Labrador Petroleum Directorate. On January 27, 1986, the appointments of the remaining board members were made.

When the Atlantic Accord becomes law the board will assume full responsibility for managing oil and gas activity off Newfoundland. The board will be responsible for such measures as the adminsitration of the issuance of exploration rights, good oil field practices, the granting of production licences and approval of development and benefit plans, the collection of royalties, and recommending amendments to the legislation and regulations of the Atlantic Accord. The board will also have emergency powers where and when required.

The joint management of the offshore Newfoundland development is built on sensible and sound principles. Joint management will be achieved through the independence of the board. This independence is not without checks and balances. Under the terms of the Accord the two levels of Government will be able to provide direction to the board and be able to veto policies, if required. The board will ensure that the development of the offshore resources will be fair to Newfoundlanders, to the people of Canada and, of course, to the oil and gas industry.

The Atlantic Accord implementation Bill confirms our commitment that the province will be able to establish and collect resource revenues as if they were on land. Newfoundland and Labrador will receive the proceeds from royalties, provincial corporate income taxes, sales taxes, bonus payments, rentals and fees, and other forms of provincial revenues and taxes that may be established.

The Bill establishes in law the Canada-Newfoundland offshore development fund with grants totalling $300 million. Seventy-five cent of this $300 million will come from the federal treasury and 25 per cent from the provincial treasury. The development fund will enable the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador to develop the infrastructure to meet the demands of oil and gas development and to capture the economic benefits of that development.

On January 27, 1986, the first four projects under the Canada-Newfoundland offshore development fund were approved in principle. Funding for these projects will be available when the implementation legislation is passed. It is important that this legislation be passed as expeditiously as possible so these funds can flow to Newfoundland for these development projects. Subsequent projects under the Canada-Newfoundland offshore development fund will continue to be approved jointly by the federal and provincial energy Minsiters.

Another feature of the Atlantic Accord is the equalization offset payment formula that was developed to ensure that there will not be a dollar-for-dollar loss of equalization payments as a result of offshore revenues. Beginning in the first year of production Newfoundland and Labrador will receive offset payments from the federal Government that are equal to 90 per cent of the year's reduction in equalization payments. Starting in the fifth year of production the offset rate will be reduced by 10 per cent for each subsequent year. We feel this is a very important part of the Bill, to ensure that Newfoundland is not just cut off in year one from equalization payments because of the new revenues being derived from the offshore. In fact, this formula we feel is very fair, as do the people of Newfoundland.

One important concern expressed in the Bill is the protection of Newfoundland's vital offshore fishing industry.

This Bill provides for the same environmental protection as on all frontier lands, by incorporating the environmental protection provisions of the federal Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act. This is very imporant. In the event that something happens in the offshore, this legislation includes an oil pollution compensation regime that ensures financial compensation to fishermen and others for any damages from oil spills and debris. The board will promote and monitor industry-sponsored fishermen's compensation policies in the case of non-attributable damages to the fishery.

We have established a committee to monitor the provisions of the pollution and fisheries compensation plan. This committee has representatives from federal and provincial Governments, from the petroleum industry and, probably most important, from the fishing industry.

I want to speak briefly about the Petroleum Resources Bill which provides the legislative framework for the Atlantic Accord. Bill C-94 incorporates the Canada Petroleum Resources Act which will ensure that the legal foundation for oil and gas interests will be the same in Newfoundland offshore areas as in the rest of Canada's frontier lands. The Canada Petroleum Resources Act will replace the existing Canada Oil and Gas Act with a simplified and fair set of rules designed to encourage frontier resource development. We have just completed second reading of the Bill and we hope that the legislative committee will start work on it soon. It introduces a simplified competitive system for issuing exploration rights based on a single criterion, one in which the best bid wins. This will ensure fair treatment of companies bidding for exploration rights.

The Bill requires a minimum of 50 per cent Canadian ownership in frontier projects but, unlike the flexible policy of the former Government, will be applied in a way that is not retroactive and confiscatory. It will look to the private sector to achieve the 50 per cent minimum ownership level.

The Canada Petroleum resources Bill is fair to provincial and territorial Governments and to all Canadians as resource owners. It is market responsive and sensitive to the concerns of companies operating in the high risk frontier regions.

Our Government has always believed that Canadians should participate fully in energy development. The Atlantic Accord and this Bill provide for fair and realistic Canadianization of a vital resource at Hiberia. They will also provide for ample returns on Canadian investment.

Declining world oil prices have created an uncertainty about high cost frontier oil projects such as Hibernia. I stress that we cannot let the apparent over-supply of oil blind us to the fact that those supplies will eventually decline. Canada's conventional oil reserves have been declining for years and they continue to decline. Domestic projects such as Hiberia will be needed to take up the slack. The alternative of increasing reliance on foreign sources of oil is unacceptable to the Government and, I believe, to the people of Canada. It is also unnecessary. We saw the result of relying too heavily on non-Canadian oil in the 1970s. Foreign interests manipulated supply in order to dramatically and suddenly increase the price. Canada and other countries scrambled to deal with the inflationary impact of higher prices. We scrambled to use oil more efficiently and to bring new domestic supplies on stream.

The current oil pricing and supply situation provides us with a brief breathing space to proceed with projects like Hibernia in an orderly manner. However, it is not the time to fall asleep at the switch.

The Government of Canada is currently discussing fiscal arrangements with companies developing Hiberia and with the Government of Newfoundland. Low oil prices make it more difficult to proceed, but I am confident that we will. I hope that we will soon approve a development plan and a Canada benefits plan for Hiberia because these are important steps in the process leading to production from Hiberia. These are signs of the Government's continuing commitment to the development of this valuable offshore resource.

During Hiberia's development phase alone it is estimated that $4.2 billion will be invested in the project. This will create some 14,500 person years of direct employment in Canada, of which about 9,500 person years of employment will be created in Newfoundland. The Newfoundland work will include the construction and outfitting of a gravity base structure for drilling platform and production facilities, the installation of subsea facilities and an articulated loading platform. It will also include the ongoing management of the project and onshore and offshore hook-up and commissioning.

I had the pleasure of visiting one of these rigs in Stavanger, Norway. Mobil, which is working on the Hibernia rig, made the arrangements for us to see this engineering feat that I found very difficult to conceive as a lay person. The work involved in this magnificent project is phenomenal and will provide very challenging and interesting jobs for Canadians in the near future.

Mobil Oil has explained that other required facilities, such as the fabrication of half of the modules and the construction of an ice-cleaning vessel, will occur in Canada. We can see that billions of dollars will be spent over the next decade to develop new and secure technology and industry, which will create thousands of jobs for Newfoundland and Labrador and Canada as a whole.

There are already strong indications that our new frontier lands policy is a success. I refer the House to the results of a call for proposals which was issued in December, 1985 for exploration rights to three parcels of land on the Grand Banks. There was considerable competitive interest in these parcels of land, indicating that our policies are indeed working. In March, the industry showed its commitment with total bids of $4.75 million for the exploration rights during the initial terms of the three exploration agreements that have been awarded. Five companies were successful in the bids, which were evaluated by the Canada-Newfoundland offshore petroleum board. I hoped to be able to read the list of those on the board into the record. Perhaps I can do so later.

The Atlantic Accord represents one of the greatest events in our country's history. Indeed, when the Canada-Newfoundland offshore agreement was signed on February 11, 1985 Premier Peckford said: "History is being made today." It is hard to disagree with that statement.

At the same signing on February 11, 1985, the Prime Minister said:

> —this agreement is about dignity for Newfoundland and Labrador, long a "have-not" province. Today marks the beginning of a new era—one that will enhance provincial economic well-being and collective accomplishment. This agreement reflects important Newfoundland values and accommodates legitimate provincial aspirations in a generous Canadian perspective.

It is hard to disagree with that statement.

It has been a pleasure for me to begin the debate on second reading of Bill C-94, a legislation enacting the famous Atlantic Accord. I look forward to this debate and would urge the House to pass Bill C-94 on second reading as expeditiously as possible so that we might study the Bill in more detail in our legislative committee.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I was interested to hear of the Parliamentary Secretary's experience regarding to his flying. He stated it was not the licence which gave him the greatest thrill, it was his first solo. He related this to the the signing of the Atlantic Accord as the most important thrill, as far as he was concerned, and not this legislation. I would ask him to check because I think his propeller has fallen off.

This Bill relates to probably the greatest academic exercise in this House of Commons for quite some time, with very little practical relationship as far as the people of Newfoundland are concerned. The Parliamentary Secretary stated that this does away with the back-in provisions, the Canada Land provisions, that now all companies will be treated as one.

What is interesting about the Government is that it worries so darn much about foreign companies. That seems to be the whole thrust of this Act. The Government wants to do away with the last vestiges of the National Energy Program. It is apopletic when it comes to the National Energy Program. It is not very good when it comes to replacing the NEP, but apopletic and determined when it comes to getting rid of it. As a result, the Government is not giving any consideration to what it is doing away with. Certainly it is doing away with the back-in provisions because it wants to help foreign companies.

When is the Government going to be concerned with Canadian companies? When is it going to be worried about the producers of cedar shakes and shingles? When is it going to be concerned about the attitude of the United States which looks upon Canada with the philosophy of "familiary breeds contempt"? That is what is happening to our relations with the United States right now, with the resultant devastation of our economy.

The Government talks about this Bill giving Newfoundlanders full partnership; they have 50 per cent. But as it stands right now, because of the policies of the Government, they have 50 per cent of nothing. On February 11, 1985, when this agreement was signed, Premier Peckford said, as the Parliamentary Secretary has stated:

> This is a historic day for the people of Newfoundland and Labrador. At last we in Newfoundland will be treated as an equal partner in offshore development and will be in a position to establish and collect revenues in the same way as other oil and gas producing provinces of Canada.

What they have, as I have said, is 50 per cent of nothing. Because of the policies of the Government there is no move, no generation of activity which will bring on development in Hibernia. The Government is concerned that there is a downturn in the price. It is seizing on that downturn in oil and gas prices to do absolutely nothing.

Let us be realistic. Let us look at the state of the oil and gas industry today. Can we honestly believe that without the assistance and reasonable approach of the Government the oil companies are going to come forward right now? They are not Canadian companies, the Government has seen to that. The Government has driven the Canadian companies out of the offshore and other frontier areas.

The fact is that the Government did away with the Petroleum Incentives Program and with it many of the exploration activities which were taking place on the east coast. The fact is that on April 24 of this year Newfoundland businessmen got together for a news conference and called on the Government to step in and prevent a collapse of the offshore drilling activity. The fact is that 800 jobs have already been lost in the supply vessel sector and those who are working are only on short term contract. That is all they have to look forward to.

Mr. Ron Strong, the President of the Newfoundland Ocean Industries Association, warned of "dire consequences for the province's fledgling offshore industry if exploration is allowed to slow down", and it is now almost at a stop.

When new parcels of land were put up for bid on the Grand Banks it was not, as the Parliamentary Secretary said, a glorious and red letter day. The industry did not respond. It bid on only half of the seven parcels on which they had a right to call for proposals and offered only $4.75 million for exploration rights lasting four to five years. Most importantly, these companies are not committed to drill any wells during this leasing period. Had these lands been offered by the Canada Oil and Gas Lands Administration instead of by this new Canada-Newfoundland Offshore Petroleum Board, the Canada Oil and Gas Lands Administration would have received more bids with more moneys behind them and, most important, there would have been drilling commitments.

The Government has said before that this is a new age with no confrontation. There is no confrontaion between provinces, no confrontation with foreign countries, just a complete devastation of our economy. The fact is that we can have agreement if there is nothing going on.

The Canada-Newfoundland Offshore Petroleum Board is scaring the oil industry because it does not know who is in charge or what is going to happen if activity does take place. With the Canada Oil and Gas Administration, the industry at least knew who was in charge. It does not know that now and that is of vital concern.

We have a disastrous response to this new system. No one is bidding for the parcels of land. No one is committed to drilling. Where does this leave Newfoundlanders? We can use the term which was used before "freezing in the dark" under the new policies of the Government. Obviously the promised day for Newfoundlanders as a "have" province will not come to pass because of the oil and gas industry and because of the politics and policies of the federal Government, at least not by 1992 when we hoped it would happen.

It is easy to see that the Government and the people of Newfoundland are going to have 50 per cent of nothing. Even the provincial Finance Minister, Dr. John Collins, realizes that. Last April he warned that Newfoundlanders "should not depend on the proverbial pot of gold at the end of the rainbow as the saviour of the provincial economy". He was referring to the offshore activity and potential at Hibernia.

Instead of activity in exploration occurring in Newfoundland, we are going to see acquisitions, foreign companies being able to buy up Canadian companies, and we will see that, of course, in Alberta. We are going to see our small Canadian companies going bankrupt because of the low prices and because of the multinationals and Petro-Canada, our own Crown corporation, which is not only not paying the low posted price for oil and gas in Canada, but is paying $3 to $4 under the posted price. It is paying the spot price, if it is paying that. As a result, small producers are not even receiving the low price they should be receiving.

The Parliamentary Secretary has stated that we now must have 50 per cent ownership in the development stage in our offshore; we must have 50 per cent Canadian content. The figure of 50 per cent applies only to development and production and relates only to oil and gas found after March, 1982. Thus oil and gas which was discovered prior to March, 1982 does not require this 50 per cent Canadian content. The Government's policies are doing absolutely nothing for Canadian companies.

In a speech to an energy management conference the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) stated:

> If we do not conserve our oil and gas resources—and if we do not find and develop new supplies—we'll end up back where we were in the 1970s. OPEC will dictate price and supply to us.

Yet the policies of the Government are moving completely away from the development of the resources in the offshore. It is moving away from further exploration of our offshore and other frontier areas. When the Minister says that we must find and development new resources I am in complete agreement. We must do that now; we cannot wait until the crisis has hit us. However, it cannot be achieved as a result of the policies that this Government has put in place. If the Minister meant what she said, then I want to know what she plans to do to ensure that new supplies will be developed. I am sure Newfoundlanders would also like to know.

We have come to a point past that of idle rhetoric. The economies of all the Atlantic provinces are being faced with devastation, and Newfoundland is suffering more than any. Newfoundlanders have heard about this idea of riches, and of this 50 per cent factor. They have heard that equalization will not be taken away right away, that they will be allowed to keep it, initially at least. That is great, but it is nothing but empty rhetoric unless something is done to give some meaning and focus to the actual development of the resources in Hibernia. This is something which has to be done. The Bill before us and the Atlantic Accord will mean nothing unless the Government has some type of resolve to do something about it. It will cost between $15 U.S. and $17 U.S. per barrel to develop this oil. Thus there has to be something done by the Government.

The Government has to look at this question, and it has to do so in conjunction with the Province of Newfoundland. The two parties must decide what will be done to bring these developments forward. The people of Newfoundland do not want just to hear about new legislation which the Government says will bring this end closer. Newfoundlanders know that it will not bring anything closer unless there is a resolve on behalf of both the federal Government and the provincial Government of Newfoundland. The federal Government must promote the development of Hibernia.

The uncertainties with respect to offshore development should not distract from the economic potential and significance of Hibernia. The long lead time to initial production, which is 1992 as stated by Mobil, may provide ample time for a price recovery in terms of oil and gas world wide. Between now and 1992 oil prices could go up and down three or four times. We should not freeze saying: "Let's not do anything until we are absoltuely sure". With the unstable situation in the oil and gas field and the unstable situation in terms of OPEC, even if the price goes up how can we be sure it will stay up? It might come right down again. What is this certainty? What is this level? What is this quotient of certainty for which the Government is waiting in order to do something to develop a fiscal regime and a framework that will help the people of Newfoundland to develop this very important resource?

Clause 41 of the Bill states that Newfoundlanders are not really slated to benefit that much from the downstream activity of their own resource in Hibernia. Granted, if the end use is for consumption and feedstock requirements then they are to be directed to industrial facilities in Newfoundland. If those targets are met then the next targets will be with respect to feedstock requirements for Come-By-Chance. The limited need for these feedstocks and consumption from Hibernia right now means that there will be a great deal of oil which will not undergo a value-added stage in Newfoundland. Good heavens, Come-By-Chance is up in the air. Why is it up in the air? Because the Government's own Crown corporation, Petro-Canada, is balking at doing anything constructive with this refinery. It has indicated that it wants to dismantle it and sell it piecemeal to whomever will pay for the parts. So Newfoundlanders really cannot look forward to a great deal of benefit as a result of the consumption of feedstocks from existing industry or from Come-By-Chance. Then the feedstock requirements of the rest of the refineries in Atlantic Canada must be met, which brings us back to the remaining feedstocks being used for new industrial possibilities in the downstream in Newfoundland.

What about training and education to develop more jobs and more potential? The Bill does not deal with either of those aspects. If this was such a promising move for Newfoundland, why have businessmen called for aid to stop the collapse of the drilling in the offshore? Why has that happened? Why has this call for aid gone unanswered by the federal Government? Newfoundlanders want to know, as do all Canadians. The Government feels that Newfoundlanders and people in Atlantic Canada will be satisfied just by knowing that Bill C-94 has been presented in the House of Commons, been given second reading and referred to a committee for further hearings. That is not enough. Newfoundlanders do not buy that as a positive step. They want to see something concrete. They want to feel that the Government wants to do something to bring this measure forward as soon as it possibly can.

As the Parliamentary Secretary pointed out, what about the industry bid on the parcels of land where the calls for proposals were granted? The industry bid on only one-half of the six parcels. It offered only $4.75 million for exploration rights lasting for between four and five years. As I pointed out before, no wells were committed. The federal and provincial Ministers of Energy say that the results of the disastrous sales show that their new frontier lands policy is working, as the Parliamentary Secretary echoed this morning. If that is the case then someone failed in terms of the timing. Newfoundlanders do not have the right to question whether the new Canada-Newfoundland Offshore Petroleum Board has done the right thing. They cannot question it now. They have no way of asking the Board if what it has done will be in the best interests of Newfoundland. What has been done has indicated that there is not a great deal of interest in the offshore, primarily because of the policies of the Government.

The Government has stated that Canadian companies do not matter and that a fiscal requirement for aiding the development of the offshore in Newfoundland does not matter. It has been stated that all that matters is waving around these pieces of paper, and if everyone does that then everything will be all right. However, these pieces of paper can provide a framework of a regulatory and management type, but unless there is the determination and the political will to do something in Hibernia then all these Bills and all these accords are not going to mean a darn thing.

The Government has already brought forward Bill C-85, legislation dealing with the Petroleum Incentives Program. The Government has managed to reduce the number of wells which were to be drilled in the grandfathering period of the Petroleum Incentives Program. As the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has mentioned, the Government has brought forward Bill C-92 which has reduced from 80 per cent to 10 per cent the financial assistance available to Canadian companies not able to pay taxes to further discourage Canadian companies except for Petro-Canada to participate in frontier exploration.

What about Petro-Canada? This is the company that was developed to find new reserves of oil and gas and to be in the vanguard of offshore and other frontier exploration. Petro-Canada is now backing away from the agreements in which it already had an interest. It is not going to take up some of its back-in rights and it is not going to participate in the 25 per cent in which it could participate in some of the arrangements and joint ventures that exist on certain wells in the offshore. Does this mean that the other partners who pick up the 25 per cent will be able to get the benefit of the Petroleum Incentives Program? No, the Government has seen to it that they will not. The Government has caught them twice. It is taking away the assistance of the Crown corporation which was helping to develop these possibilities in the offshore, and now that Petro-Canada has backed away, the Government is not going to apply the Petroleum Incentives Program to that 25 per cent.

What has the Government done? It has added insult to injury as far as the offshore is concerned. The Government very nicely stated that this year's estimates include $950 million for the Petroleum Incentives Program, knowing that with its policies and with the general downturn in interest on the offshore the $950 million will not be picked up. We will be lucky if a fraction of that money is used. The remainder will go somewhere else, but not to Atlantic Canada. That has always been the way. It started with the fiscal statement of November 8, 1984, continued with the Budget of May 23, 1985, continued again with the recent Budget of February 1986 and continued again with the oil and gas legislation Bills that have been put before the House by the Government. It is a complete devastation of the economy of Atlantic Canada, and a large part of this devastation has been caused by the Government's offshore policy.

I think it is very sad that the great promise that was once held out to the people of Newfoundland is in jeopardy of slipping away, and this at a time when Newfoundlanders need employment and hope more than at any other time since they entered confederation in 1949. This is being done by the Government and by its own Crown corporation.

I would ask the Government to reconsider these disastrous policies and to take into account the interests of Atlantic Canada and particularly Newfoundland. These people had hoped that this oil would be coming onstream in the next few years, but they are now seeing this hope evaporate. This hope will not be fulfilled by 1992, something for which Newfoundlanders had initially hoped.

It is obvious that the Government is not concerned about people. I would ask that in this particular situation at least, the Government make an exception.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this Bill on behalf of the New Democratic Party and as the New Democratic Party energy critic. This is a most important Bill for Newfoundlanders and a vital Bill, as we would see if we could look into the future, for the future of Canada.

I come from the West coast. I might say that that does not qualify me to speak about Newfoundland.

An Hon. Member: Don't let that stop you.

Mr. Waddell: That does not mean that I do not have a great deal of interest in Newfoundland and Newfoundlanders. My family emigrated to Canada in 1947. I was a young boy of four, just about to turn five. I can vaguely remember arriving by plane in Gander, Newfoundland from Glasgow. On that day, Newfoundland was not a part of Canada; therefore, I was in Newfoundland before it was a part of Canada. I am ashamed to say that I did not return to Newfoundland for many years. From Gander, we picked up a Trans-Canada Airlines plane and went on to Montreal. I will never forget arriving in Toronto during a snowstorm. Ultimately, I moved to Vancouver, later on in life.

I never returned to Newfoundland until a couple of years ago when I went to Corner Brook. The second day I was there, I was to be interviewed on the CBC television station in Corner Brook. Before being interviewed I watched television as the Atlantic Accord was announced in St. John's, just down the road a bit. I had to comment on the Atlantic Accord while in Newfoundland, and I will never forget that day. It meant a lot to me.

I would like to tackle this Bill in some detail and deal with some general principles. There are some tremendously interesting Canadian issues, as well as Newfoundland and Atlantic issues that will come up. However, I am sure Newfoundlanders will understand if I begin my speech by reading an urgent telegram that I just received from a group in my riding. Later on, I will refer to this telegram and tie it in with the different aspects of the policies of the Conservative Government.

This is a copy of a telegram that was sent to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) today by Local 1-217 of the International Woodworkers of America. That local is located in my riding. The telegram reads as follows:

Local 1-217 of the International Woodworkers of America is calling on your Government to immediately withdraw from the free trade discussions with the U.S. On May 22, 1986 the U.S. imposed a 35 per cent tariff on the imports of Canadian red cedar shakes and shingles.

This arbitrary decision is not consistent with the concept of free trade and it has become blatantly obvious that the U.S. has no interest in free trade whatsoever. The imposition of a tariff on B.C. shakes and shingles will effectively destroy the shake and shingle industry and result in the unemployment of thousands of workers. As you are aware, the U.S. has launched a countervailing duty suit against imports of all Canadian softwood lumber products. If that suit is successful the entire forest industry in Canada—

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Point of order!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I foresee two points of order. The first point of order is that there is a clear rule in Beauchesne's indicating that the Hon. Member should not be quoting from telegrams as there is no way of verifying their authenticity. The second point of order probably deals with a point of relevancy. The Hon. Member has said that he will tie the telegram into the debate so the Chair must take his word for that.

Mr. Waddell: If Hon. Members opposite will not let me continue the telegram from the IWA—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Waddell: It is from Doug Evans, the President of the local union, and for these people, it is a life and death issue. If that is what Conservative Members think of—

An Hon. Member: It's a Speaker's ruling.

Mr. Waddell: I am not talking about the Speaker, I am talking about the people across from me.

Mr. Foster: They always want to muzzle Parliament.

Mr. Cassidy: No courtesy!

Mr. Waddell: When they were over here—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Could we allow the Hon. Member to complete his speech, please?

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I will complete my speech. I do not understand Conservative Members. If they want to muzzle Parliament, it is up to them.

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense. You have a time and a place to do that.

Mr. Waddell: It has been only 22 months, and they will not be around for much longer.

Mr. Blenkarn: Why don't you say something on the Bill?

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Member says that I should speak on the Bill. Let me suggest to Conservative Members—

• (1200)

Mr. Blenkarn: Quit hamming it up and say something about the Bill.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, when it hurts, Government Members do not want to hear it.

Some Hon. Members: Nonsense!

Mr. McDermid: Speak to the Bill.

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary wants me to get down to the nitty-gritty of the Bill which he described.

Some Hon. Members: Yes!

Mr. Waddell: I will deal with the nitty-gritty of the Bill, then. The Government should stop misleading the people of Newfoundland and the people of Canada in general on the offshore. It should forget about short-term rhetoric and dig in for the long-term development of Hibernia. We must consider together in committee how that will come about. The New Democratic Party is committed to the long-term development of Hibernia. We will need that resource in the 1990s. We should figure out how it can be done and not mislead people about what is happening right now.

I should like to give an example of what is going on. When I was viewing television in Corner Brook I heard the Prime Minister speaking in St. John's. I took notes at the time, and I should like to refer to what he said. He said: "I am not afraid to inflict prosperity on Newfoundland and Labrador". That was his promise. Today the Parliamentary Secretary rose in the House and said that they were doing nicely, that they were getting bids, and that the system was working.

I should like to refer to an April 9 article which appeared in The Chronicle Herald. In part it read:

The Mulroney Government's first attempt to auction East Coast acreage for oil and gas exploration has ended in what one analyst called a "disaster".

In all, the industry has grabbed about one million hectares of offshore land without committing itself to drilling one well on the Grand Banks, an area which includes the Hibernia oil field.

Calgary oil analyst Ian Doig called the auction a "disaster" after only seven bids were received on six tracts of land on the Grand Banks, off Newfoundland.

No bids were received at all for three of the blocks, with groups led by Shell Canada, Amoco Canada, and Esso Resources Canada winning the other three blocks.

Bids on all three parcels totalled $4.75 million, a figure which underlines the industry's "commitment" to offshore exploration, according to Energy Minister Pat Carney.

It was also according to the Parliamentary Secretary speaking in the debate this morning. The article continued:

However, well costs in the high-cost exploration area off Newfoundland start at about $25 million, and can go as high as $40 million.

Government officials confirmed Tuesday that committed spending on the offshore lands compels the companies to conduct seismic work only—

One industry executive, who asked not to be identified, said—the bids were not an "auspicious beginning" for the new Newfoundland-Canada board, or the new bidding system.

"You could hardly call this a showcase kickoff for the bidding system"—

Let us level with the people. Let us tell them what is really happening.

The New Democratic Party position on the Bill can be summarized in about five points. First I should like to outline them, and I will refer to them in detail later. We agree with the general principle of the Bill which recognizes the need for genuine provincial involvement in the exploitation of the Newfoundland offshore. We want the Newfoundland people and the Newfoundland Government involved directly in developing their own resources.

As a westerner I understand what it is like to have control of resources on land. They can be developed for the province and result in revenues for the province. It can make a "have-not" province into a "have" province. The best example in the country would be Alberta. Why should Newfoundland not have the same advantages?

The NDP has in fact led the way on the issue of provincial jurisdiction on the offshore. At the time of our 1979 convention, the NDP had Members in both the East and West. It was an important time. The Liberal Party did not have members in western Canada. In effect we were speaking on this issue as a national Party, and we took the position that the provinces, which of course would include Newfoundland, should have offshore jurisdiction. This was at the beginning of the fights between the Trudeau administration and the offshore provinces, especially Newfoundland.

As the Hon. Member who spoke before me said, currently the Atlantic Accord is a hollow document, despite the good principles contained in it, because of the international price of oil. The fact is that offshore oil activity has died over the last year. The Government has done nothing to restore the real pace of activity in the offshore.

We in the New Democratic Party also have some concerns about the Conservative Government's reliance upon tax-based incentives to steer the future course of petroleum development in the East Coast offshore. We have a feeling that it will simply not work. If it works, it will mean that large multinational oil companies, not Canadian oil companies, will have control of the offshore. I will return to that point in some detail later.

In respect of the general principle, that is, the need for genuine provincial involvement in the offshore, I spoke in the House on Tuesday, February 12, 1985 after having returned from Newfoundland and after the signing of the Atlantic Accord. I should like to refer to my statement at that time when I said:

Mr. Speaker, we in the New Democratic Party, as do all reasonable Canadians, rejoice that finally there is an agreement between Canada and Newfoundland to pave the way for the development of the Hibernia oil field.

Yesterday I was in Corner Brook, watching the signing ceremony on television. A Newfoundlander next to me said: "Those boys are going to get sore arms from patting themselves on the back so much". Be that as it may, I am glad there has been an agreement.

I have three positive suggestions. First, we should consider a constitutional amendment to enshrine provincial control of offshore resources in the Constitution. As a western Canadian, I realize how important that is.

Second, we have to be careful about the pace of development and about the creation of jobs. Energy, Mines and Resources officials told the energy committee this year that there would only be 6,000 jobs in the development of the field. Expectations are very high. Let us have some hearings by the energy committee to see if we can get more jobs, and to see whether we can get some jobs for western Newfoundland and Labrador which often feel left out of the development.

Finally, I would urge that the federal and provincial Governments not forget the traditional industries like fisheries and forestry where there really are jobs for the future. I am glad that there is a deal. Let us work on it and try to create more and better jobs. Let us not forget the fish and the forests as well.

In retrospect, if I might say, I think those principles hold. The fact is that there was a lot of rhetoric at that signing ceremony which has not been delivered on. It is very important to have offshore resources under provincial control. There has also been much rhetoric about the number of jobs involved but very little detailed examination of how those jobs will be delivered to Newfondlanders. We must also be careful about regional development in Newfoundland, and ensure that western Newfoundland and Labrador take part in the offshore development. As well, the province must not forget that there are traditional industries like fishing and forestry which should not be ignored in the rush to have offshore oil development. I think those principles hold.

As I said, in our 1979 convention the NDP favoured the control of the offshore being with the provinces. We saw it in terms of what happened in western Canada where resources under the land belong to the provinces. It has helped western provinces, especially, attain economic development. Otherwise they would just be hinterlands with nothing happening. Alberta is a good example, as I said earlier. That is not to say that there is not a role for the federal Government. A resource such as oil is a strategic resource. Society cannot work without it, and there is big money involved in it. There must be a role for the federal Government in terms of the importation and exportation of the resource, the taxation of the resource, and the sharing of the revenues. That is a very important principle, Mr. Speaker. I was proud that our Party took this constitutional principle on the offshore resources, and I was proud to be part of the constitutional committee of this House in the last Parliament in which the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), the leader of our Party, proposed a constitutional amendment that would give some further control to the provinces over their own resources.

I know sometimes people from Ontario and Quebec find this a little hard to understand. You hear such things as "We own those resources too. They are Canadian resources." Ultimately they are Canadian resources, but they must be controlled and managed by the provincial Governments because this control is very important to the provinces. We westerners understand what Newfoundland and Nova Scotia feel on that point. It was embodied in the Atlantic Accord, and so far as that principle is embodied in the Accord, we agree with that principle. So far as that principle is embodied in Bill C-94, this humungus Bill, we agree with that principle in the Bill.

This has not been an easy road and previous speakers have mentioned the constitutional fights over the control of resources. One would ask why Pierre Trudeau took such a strong position that the federal Government should have control over the offshore resources rather than the provincial governments? I suppose we will have to wait for him to write his autobiography. It seems to me that the seeds may lay in his views of Quebec and Canada. Trudeau and some of his colleagues came into politics, I think, with a view of Canada in the sense of fighting separatism in their own province. They were fighting for a strong central Government in order to deal with very powerful provincial Governments. In Quebec's case it was a separatist Government, and I think it colored their view somewhat. It made it more difficult to accept the fact that you could give provinces control over their resources and that would not mean the end of Canada, that there was a way of dealing with federal-provincial affairs, less dramatic and with less conflict than what the Trudeau Government did. If there is a fault—and I am speaking as a western Canadian—and there were many faults, one is the Trudeau Government's failure to understand western Canada, which probably came from his feeling of needing a strong federal Government to face the situation in Quebec. This same attitude was evident in the federal Government's dealings with Newfoundland.

I have made speeches in the House, but I never really thought anyone watched the proceedings or read Hansard. I supposed a few people did but I did not think there were a great many. I once made a speech on the offshore and I received a letter from the Premier of Newfoundland objecting to some of the things I said. I wrote to him and said that I doubted his constitutional strategy. I asked why he went into the courts because he was bound to lose the case of the offshore in the Supreme Court of Canada. It is a Federal court appointed by the federal Prime Minister. While the judges are as unbiased as possible, there is a built-in bias. The Prime Minister appoints the judges. He would be inhuman if he did not look for great lawyers who have a federalist outlook. I wrote to the Premier, and I want to read into the record a letter I received from him dated June 18, 1984. It reads:

Dear Mr. Waddell:

Thank you for your letter—perhaps we shall meet at some time during our travels.

In any case, I should point out that going to court was never our preferred option. However, right in the middle of a set of negotiations with the federal Government, a labour relations case involving the SIU and the offshore went before the Federal Court of Canada. Right out of the blue, even though we were at the bargaining table, the Feds made a motion to expand the SIU labour case into a fullblown offshore ownership case. The Federal court agreed to hear the ownership arguments but declined to indicate if it would rule on that aspect of the case. We were thus in a dilemma. If the Federal court ruled on ownership, the ruling was only appealable to the Supreme Court of Canada. In other words, the case could reach the High Court without being heard first by the Newfoundland Supreme Court. Faced with such a prospect, we referred the ownership case ourselves to the Newfoundland Supreme Court. With a slick piece of legal manoeuvering, the Trudeau administration got us where it wanted us all along—into the Supreme Court of Canada.

I might add, the Premier forgets to point out that he referred the case. The letter goes on:

To say the least, it could be said that the scenario forced upon us was less than honourable. However, the Prime Minister Elect, Mr. Turner, has made a number of statements to indicate he has a different approach to Federal/Provincial relations. We have just recently struck an accord with the Opposition Leader, Mr. Mulroney, wherein, if elected, his administration would agree to real joint management and revenue sharing as if the offshore oil were on land in the Prairie Provinces.

In any case, my point is that we have been and are willing to be fair and reasonable on the offshore issue. The Trudeau administration, however, was not inclined to reciprocate.

Yours sincerely,

The letter was signed by A. Brian Peckford, P.C., M.H.A., Premier.

I thought it was an interesting letter, Mr. Speaker, and it is part of Canadian history. The case went into the court system and the courts held that the offshore really belonged to the federal Government.

The new federal Government had to deal with the issue. It made an agreement, an accord. But that still leaves open the constitutional issue of the offshore, hence my suggestion that we might look to a constitutional amendment to enshrine the issue in the Constitution so it could not be changed in the future.

I do not want to leave the constitutional point without expressing one further aspect. Having said that there is some justice now delivered to Newfoundland, having said that the Trudeau administration had gone too far in the interests of the strong central Government clubbing the provinces in federal-provincial negotiations, nevertheless there is a national interest that we as federal Members of Parliament have to consider. We must have a balance in the national interest. When we look in some detail at this Bill in committee, we will want to know how much the federal Government has given up. I am very suspicious of this present Conservative Government when it negotiates. In negotiations with Alberta, it gave Alberta everything. In negotiations with the oil companies, it gave the oil companies everything. The question is, did the federal Government give the whole federal store away?

Let me draw the attention of the House to a good article published by the Institute of Resource Law in Calgary. It is dated August 1985 and called "A Critical Evaluation of the Atlantic Accord." It is written by D. Paul Emond of Osgoode Law Law School, York University in Toronto. I shall just read his conclusion:

> Offshore exploration activity is partly the result of massive federal subsidies. While costly, these expenditures have made good political and even economic sense. They have enabled us to learn more about the size and accessibility of frontier oil and gas. They have benefitted have-not provinces such as Newfoundland. They have also benefitted other Canadians, as owners of the frontier lands. How else can Canada justify paying such large subsidies for offshore exploration? One would have expected, therefore, that the federal Government would be reluctant to give up almost all of the financial benefits that development of the Newfoundland offshore might bring.
> The Atlantic Accord expresses the federal interest in the Newfoundland offshore in terms of national self-sufficiency, security of supply and, to a lesser extent, Canadianization of the industry. This seriously understates the federal interest. In the past, Canadian energy policy has reflected a multiplicity of interest, including conservation, environmental protection, economic development, regional disparity, and consumer price protection.
> This apparent narrowing of federal policy interest would be less disturbing if the Accord provided for periodic review and mechanisms by which it could be adjusted. But, without Newfoundland's consent, that option is not available (Clause 2 (g)). Indeed, if Newfoundland achieves the requisite support from other provinces, clause 64 commits the federal Government to introduce a mutually agreeable solution into Parliament to constitutionally entrench the Accord. If that should happen, the Accord and the Board would be effectively insulated from any government review.
> The Atlantic Accord offers an interesting approach to federal-provincial energy relations; however, it is an approach that should not be extended to other coastal provinces.

That is a very interesting critique and we will have to consider it when the Bill goes to committee.

I will conclude on federal-provincial relations by saying this. We have to determine what is good for the provinces, what will enable them to develop the diverse regions that are Canada, and at the same time keep a federal interest. There are going to be conflicts. It is ridiculous to say, as the Prime Minister has said, we will not have conflicts. Look at the free trade negotiations. We will always have conflict between the federal and provincial Governments. That is the genius of Canada. That is the system we invented. The problem with the last Liberal Government was that the conflicts were too accentuated. You could legitimally criticize the Trudeau Government for not being able to deal with the provinces. We are still watching to see how the Mulroney Government deals with them. We cannot give everything away. We cannot hope to have a conflict-free situation. What we can hope is to be fair, to look after the national interest, and try and minimize so far as possible any conflicts. However, there will be conflicts on offshore oil or free trade.

Let me turn now to an examination of the regime itself and what is happening. I said that in the real world this was a hollow document. The Prime Minister said he was going to inflict prosperity on Newfoundland and Labrador. The question is, since it was signed has it in fact implemented prosperity on Newfoundland and Labrador? I want to quote Jim Meek, a very good energy reporter for The Chronicle Herald, on April 30 of this year. He says:

> Sad to say, but 1987 will be a wipeout as far as frontier exploration goes. The signs are everywhere.
> Last week in Newfoundland, organizations representing 700 companies told reporters that spending on offshore exploration would plummet to $100 million in 1987.
> That spending figure equates to as many as four exploration wells, and as few as two.
> To put that in perspective, remember 1985 when 33 wells were drilled.
> Mobil and Chevron—the two major players in Hibernia—will not push the $4 billion oil project ahead at current oil prices.
> Both companies have already announced major cutbacks in exploration expenditures in 1986. And both carry heavy debt loads.
> One senior federal government official told me the "whole island" is in a grey depression as the implications of lower oil prices sink in.
> "The Peckford government put all its eggs in one basket—and when they tried to pick it up all the eggs fell out."

He goes on to talk about the downturn in Nova Scotia.

In spite of that reality we have Government officials saying Hibernia may get the green light soon. The $6 billion Hibernia oil project could get approval for development in late spring or early summer, said an official with the Canada-Newfoundland Offshore Petroleum Resource Board. That fellow is dreaming in Technicolor. Hibernia is not going to be developed at current oil prices. That should be honestly stated to the Newfoundland people.

Another article says that the federal Government is saying Hibernia will go ahead this summer. The article says:

> Canadian officials are saying at the prestigious Offshore Technology Conference in Houston, Texas this week that Hibernia will go ahead in June or July, a Newfoundland conference delegates says.

With current oil prices this is simply not true. It simply cannot happen. We should be honest with the Canadian people.

I remember at the signing ceremony I took some notes. Mr. Marshall, the energy Minister for Newfoundland, said that what we have in this agreement is a perfect melding of the interests of the federal and provincial Governments. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) said we will not recognize Newfoundland in 15 years. It will be a newer world. The rhetoric goes on and on. All we are asking is that the politicians in Atlantic Canada and the federal politicians cut the rhetoric and try and deal with the reality. At $15 a barrel U.S. Hibernia cannot go. I stood up in the House of Commons and asked the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) what price was needed for Hibernia to go. She would not answer that question and I cannot get the answer out of officials. It must be at least $20 a barrel. However, that does not mean we should not plan for the future.

When this Bill goes to committee we should look at a number of things. We should combine Bill C-94 and Bill C-92 in the legislative committee. They both deal with the offshore. I was pleased to see the Government House Leader agree to that in principle today if we can work out the technicalities.

Second, I think the committee should visit Halifax and St. John's to hear some people and look at the Bill. I hope government speakers address that suggestion in their speeches today, because we are going to need some help from the Government to do that. Third, I think we have to look at the development fund and a joint board in real detail in committee. Fourth, we have to look at safety. Let us not forget that before the Accord was signed many men were lost on that rig—Was it 82?

Mr. Tobin: Eighty-five, and sixty-nine were Newfoundlanders.

Mr. Waddell: Hibernia is in iceberg alley and it is a very difficult place. There was a Member in the previous House, from Calgary, and I did not always agree with his philosophy. However, he knew a lot about the mechanics of drilling. I remember him saying to the House that he did not think we had the technology for Hibernia. We were almost going ahead too quickly. We should look at that. We should look at safety so that, through greed and the hype of politicians and developers, we do not go ahead too quickly and lose more human lives, as in the Ocean Ranger accident.

We should look at the hiring of local people and how that squares with constititional rights and so on. We should look at the regional aspect. I was in western Newfoundland. I know the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) will tell the House about this because he is far more expert on it than I am, but I understand people in those areas say, wait a minute, if you are going to put all your eggs in the Hibernia basket what are you going to do for our forest industry? I remember in Corner Brook they could not even get a regional forestry centre building.

Mr. Tobin: It was cancelled.

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Member's Government promised it a number of times, I understand, and the new Government cancelled it. However, that is an example of ignoring a region and putting so much money into Hibernia. We should not forget about the forest and fisheries which are part of the development of Newfoundland. It is not all oil.

We should be looking at Canadianization. The Liberal energy critic spoke briefly about that in his speech. If I can simplify it, the problem is this. There were $8 billion in PIP grants given to to the offshore. What that did was get some medium-sized Canadian companies like Husky Bow Valley and others involved in the offshore. Now, because we have eliminated that regime through Bill C-92, we run the risk that the only ones able to get into Hibernia when it eventually goes, as I think it will in the 1990s, will be the big American oil giants like Mobil.

Mobil Oil is a difficult company, a tough company to deal with. It is centralized in New York. The Government of Newfoundland will have to be very strong, quite frankly. These joint boards will have to be very strong in order to deal with such large companies such as Mobil. They are more powerful than the Newfoundland Government. We will to need to look at that very carefully. We will need to look at how we can get Canadian private companies involved in the offshore development.

The other thing we will have to look at is the role of Petro-Canada. What happens if this Government privatizes part of Petro-Canada, as it promised, and there are minority shareholder in Petro-Canada. Then the Government wants Petro-Canada to go out and develop Hibernia, when the time comes. What is going to happen? Maybe the minority shareholders will say no, the want safe things like gas stations where they can make some money, or they want to drill in Alberta.

If you want Petro-Canada to go to the offshore to develop Hibernia in the early stages, let us say it has to be done and you have privatized part of Petro-Canada and you have minority shareholders who perhaps do not want to go. It may then be possible that Petro-Canada could not go to the offshore, it could not be directed by the Government of Canada to go there. I draw the attention of this House and Newfoundlanders to that situation. How are you going to develop Hibernia if Mobil and Petro-Canada will not do it. You will have no means of doing it. You could never develop Hibernia under that scenario. That is a thing we may want to look at in committee.

I will conclude by saying that there are a lot of things in this Bill that we have to look at in committee. We should remember that right now it is a hollow document because of the world price of oil and some of the policies of the Conservative Government in the offshore. In the future I think Hibernia will go. We have to look at this Bill to make sure it is the best Bill we can put through committee. We need some hearings in Atlantic Canada so we can get the benefit of the wisdom of the people down there. We need to look ahead at some of the matters I raised about safety, the development funds, the hiring of local people, about Canadianization and about the role of Petro-Canada in the development. We have to look at federal-provincial matters, the matter of entrenching what this Bill does in the Constitution, that is, giving the province the basic right over ownership of the offshore. Those are momentous tasks for a committee.

Finally, we have to be honest with the people of Newfoundland and the Canadian people. There has been so much rhetoric, the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. Referring to Hibernia, the Minister of Justice said, "You won't recognize Newfoundland in 15 years". Perhaps that is too much rhetoric. We have to be honest with the people.

I just conclude by quoting William Marshall, the Energy Minister for Newfoundland who was there and signed the Atlantic Accord over glasses of champagn, and whatever in the hotel in St. John's. He says, "the shrug—" meaning Trudeau, "—has been replaced by the hug—", meaning the present Prime Minister, I guess. "The shrug has been replaced by the hug". Mr. Speaker, we will wait and see.

Mr. Morrissey Johnson (Bonavista—Trinity—Conception): Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the two previous opposition speakers, prompt me to say something that was said a long time ago by a great leader to his followers, "Oh, ye of little faith". I want to say that I have never heard a more compounded, negative attitude displayed in this House than they have displayed today. They should be jumping around in their seats. They should be that glad that this Bill was brought in today for what it means to Newfoundland. If I have time at the end of my prepared text I will respond to some of the things they had to say.

It is a great pleasure for me today to speak on the Atlantic Accord implementation Bill, which is one of the most significant and important pieces of legislation ever tabled in this House. The Bill allows Newfoundland and Labrador to become, after 37 long, and often frustrating years, a full and equal partner in Confederation. The Premier of Newfoundland and Labrador and the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) have both indicated that this Bill will change the course of history in Atlantic Canada, and I believe them.

Through the Accord, on which this Bill is based, we have taken a giant leap forward in federal-provincial relations. In a very short period of time we have achieved what the previous Government could not achieve after countless years in power. Dismal years of the previous Government's rule also brought a dismal record of negotiation with the provinces. While they preached the gospel of conciliation, they engaged in the politics of polorization. They could not reach agreement with Newfoundland and Labrador because they were unwilling to even bend a little bit to the virtues of common sense.

The people of Newfoundland and Labrador deserve a fair share of the resource that is, after all, right on their doorstep. Our Government gave them a fair deal. The Atlantic Accord demonstrates that a Bill passed in this House can be strong and flexible at the same time, and that it can serve national interests and regional aspirations at the same time.

The proceedings leading up to the signing of the Atlantic Accord, and the signing itself, are vivid examples of this Government's commitment to national unity and national reconciliation. Here was a federal Energy Minister, a citizen of the westernmost province in Canada, meeting on equal footing with a provincial Minister, a citizen of the easternmost province of Canada. I am glad the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) mentioned that he was from Vancouver. That was the only thing he said that I really enjoyed, because it was the Energy Minister from British Columbia who signed the Atlantic Accord.

Both the Ministers recognized that Canadians were first and foremost. Neither dictated terms to the other; neither assumed dominance over the other; neither insinuated that one Government was more important than the other. Both parties wanted an Accord that was sensible, reasonable and durable. Most of all, they wanted an agreement that was mutually fair and just, one that would benefit the national interests of all Canadians. These representatives from the two levels of Government got their Accord, and we, as a country, are richer for it. Under this Accord the Government of this land of Labrador and the Government of Canada will form a partnership to manage, jointly, the resource recovery off the Newfoundland coast. That, in itself, is a landmark of negotiation.

We have arranged for joint management but we will also encourage the private sector to take the lead in offshore development in every possible way. I am not surprised that the private sector is pleased, because under the previous Government it had become one of the forgotten partners in resource development. The days of ignoring and excluding the private sector in this country are over. Private enterprise is at the very heart of Canada's economy. It built this country, continues to build this country and we want private enterprise in the forefront of the development of Hibernia.

There are many exciting aspects of the Atlantic Accord and this Bill. I want to concentrate on just a few of them. Government revenues from the exploration and ensuing production of resources on Newfoundland's offshore will be shared as if these resources were on land. The reason the Government of Newfondland could not reach an agreement with the previous federal Government is that it was unwilling to recognize that fact. Over the next decade, billions of dollars will be spent on Newfoundland and Labrador's vast resources and long overdue economic and social benefits will accrue to Newfoundland and Labrador. At the same time, there will be increased energy security and economic prosperity for the country as a whole. New Canadian jobs will be created, particularly in Newfoundland which has suffered badly in the past from chronic unemployment and lack of job opportunities.

The petroleum industry will be provided with fairness, something that was clearly absent during the five disastrous years of the National Energy Program. There will be permanent management regimes which will ensure that both levels of Government are recognized as equals in the day-to-day management of Newfoundland's offshore resources. There will be improved offshore safety and rigorous protection of the environment and the fishing industry in Newfoundland and Labrador.

The Atlantic Accord implementation Bill incorporates the Canada petroleum resources Bill which was introduced in the House on December 20, 1985. This Bill will replace the Canada Oil and Gas Act of 1982 and includes an amended Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act. The Canada petroleum resources Bill provides the legislative framework for the Atlantic Accord. The essence of the Bill has been included in the Atlantic Accord implementation Bill itself.

The Canada Petroleum Resources Act provides a simplified competitive system for exploration rights, one based on the principle that the best bid wins. This ensures fair treatment of companies bidding for exploration rights. Disciples of the National Energy Program probably cannot understand why we would insist on fair treatment for the private sector. Their policy, after all, was incubated and hatched in Ottawa under the direction of centralist rule.

The Canada Petroleum Resources Act calls for 50 per cent minimum Canadian ownership in frontier production projects. However, unlike the policies of the previous regime, we will not confiscate property or sneak through the back door to grab revenues retroactively. We will be looking to the private sector to achieve this 50 per cent minimum Canadian ownership.

The Canada Petroleum Resources Act is fair to provincial and territorial governments, it is responsive to markets, and it is sensitive to private companies operating in the high risk frontier regions.

The Atlantic Accord implementation Bill will guarantee decentralization of regulatory authority through the Canada-Newfoundland Offshore Petroleum Board, which will manage and administer oil and gas activity and development off the coast of Newfoundland. Seven people will serve on this board, six members who have been appointed jointly by the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador, and a chairman who has been jointly appointed by both governments. This is another demonstration of conciliation. Already, we have filled all the posts on the board and we have begun to appoint the staff that will support it. This is yet another example of what can be achieved by believing in the co-operation, mutual respect and understanding between the federal Government and the provinces.

It is important to note that joint management of offshore Newfoundland resources means that we have an independent board. It will have emergency powers if required and it will be responsible for such matters as the administration of good oilfield practices, the granting of production licences and the collection of royalties.

The Atlantic Accord implementation Bill enables the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador to establish and collect royalties, general resource revenues and taxes related to the offshore that may accrue to provincial jurisdiction. The Province of Newfoundland and Labrador will receive the proceeds from these royalties, provincial corporate income taxes, sales taxes, bonus payments, rentals and fees, and other forms of provincial revenues and taxes that may be established.

The Bill provides for the new Canada-Newfoundland offshore development fund, with grants totalling $300 million, 75 per cent of which will come from the federal treasury and 25 per cent from the provincial treasury. This differs from the previous Government that signed an agreement with Nova Scotia for some $225 million. That province must pay that back when it can ill-afford to do so, and I hope that because of the common sense that prevailed in the Newfoundland Government, to wait for a proper deal for Newfoundland, Nova Scotia will be able to reach an agreement with the present Government. I am sure that we will be considerate of Nova Scotia because it cannot afford to pay back that $225 million.

Mr. Tobin: You agree that the Premier made a bad deal in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Johnson (Bonavista—Trinity—Conception): No, I agree that the Liberal Government gave them a bad deal because they had no other choice. The Liberal Government was trying to bully the Newfoundland Government into signing the same accord that Nova Scotia was forced to accept because of economic conditions. We have been poor in Newfoundland for so long, as you well know, that we were not willing to accept anything but the best. That is what we have here, Mr. Speaker, with this agreement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Johnson (Bonavista—Trinity—Conception): By the time Hibernia comes on stream, about $4.2 billion will have been spent on the project. Total direct employment of about 14,500 person years will have been created in Canada.

We recognize that low oil prices have created uncertainty about higher cost oil projects. However, as the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) has said, we cannot be fooled by temporary declines in world oil prices. As supplies diminish the price will rise again. Will Canada be ready for that day? Will we have continued with the development of projects like Hibernia so that we are not again the unwilling victims of price and supply manipulations as we were in the 1970s? I am confident that we will be ready. I am confident Hibernia will be a key contributor to oil supply down the road and I am confident that Hibernia will provide an important economic stimulus to Newfoundland and to the rest of Canada as part of the Government's national economic policy. That economic policy is working. We have created 630,000 new jobs since September 1984. In Newfoundland and Labrador several thousands of people obtained work during that period. The total investment in Newfoundland and Labrador in 1985 was $2.2 billion. Housing starts have gone up and inflation has gone down.

Recently there was considerable competitive interest in the parcels of land offshore. One of the previous speakers said there has not been much exploration activity going on in Newfoundland. I want to assure you, Mr. Speaker, that the Atlantic Accord is already having an impact on Newfoundland. I refer to the results of the call for proposals which was issued in December 1985. Exploration rights to three parcels of land on the Grand Banks were granted. We all realize that corporations which do this kind of development are able to plan far ahead. That is why the private sector is more responsible fiscally to its shareholders than we are as a Government to the people we represent. We cannot always get into the planning stages beyond the budget of one year. I suspect the industry knew that oil prices were going to come down, and perhaps that is the reason it did not look for more grants to go toward exploration. But that will come. The industry wants to make a profit when it invests its money, otherwise it would be safer to buy Canada Savings Bonds. If the Opposition would be willing to be patient while the economy climbs I am sure it will find that these companies are anxious to go out and do exploration.

The bids for those parcels of land total $4.75 million. This indicates that the industry is confident in both Newfoundland offshore and the joint management regime we have created. There were five companies that were successful in bidding.

The Atlantic Accord shows the people of Newfoundland and Labrador that we are serious about rebuilding federal-provincial co-ooperation and confidence. It also serves as a signal to the rest of the country. It shows we are serious about rebuilding the economy and about making Canada the greatest country in the world in which to live, work and invest.

Twenty-one months ago the Canadian people gave us a mandate to create fundamental change in the country. The Atlantic Accord implementation Bill, is one of the important elements of our strategy. If Hon. Members of the Opposition are really concerned about the people of Atlantic Canada, they will ensure speedy passage of this Bill instead of being negative and critical of all its good points. We could then get on with the job we started.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment and a question to ask my colleague. First, let me say that I have great admiration for the enthusiasm and energy the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinty—Conception (Mr. Johnson) brings to his commitment and belief in the work of his Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) in devising the Atlantic Accord. However, to be brutally frank, I must say I would be amazed if I thought in reality the Hon. Member fully believes the full extent of the rhetoric he has just promoted about the impact of the Atlantic Accord.

I want to refresh the memory of the Hon. Member because I am sure everyone in Canada recalls very well Newfoundland's position on the offshore. The Premier was on the front page of Maclean's magazine. At one point he was called "the bad boy of Confederation". His position essentially during the days of the previous administration was that Newfoundland's ownership of the offshore should be recognized outright; second, that Newfoundland's ownership be entrenched in the Constitution; third, that 100 per cent of the revenues of the offshore should go to the Province of Newfoundland; four, the Government of Newfoundland would have absolute and total control and final say over the pace of development of the offshore; and five, we would have a guarantee of Hibernia crude for use in the petrochemical industry in Newfoundland. Those were the conditions in his negotiation with the previous Government. It is history that he did not reach a deal with the previous Government.

Let us look at what he did get with the Atlantic Accord. Did he get ownership? Is it recognized? Yes, ownership is recognized. In the Atlantic Accord the Canadian Government is recognized as being the owner of the resource. The first thing which was demanded was not given. Did the Premier get 100 per cent of the revenues? No. We do not know even now what the revenue sharing will be in the offshore. It is up in the air. We know that the PGRT which we thought we were going to get 50 per cent of, is gone. Did we get a guarantee about the pace of development? Under Section 35(2) of this Act, the federal Minister has the final authority over five-year intervals to declare whether or not security of supply is met or not met. So we do not control the pace of development.

Mr. McDermid: Yes, you do.

Mr. Tobin: Does the Government of Newfoundland get a guarantee of crude to be used in Newfoundland for the petrochemical industry?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Tobin: Other than a commitment to Hibernia, which the chairman of Petro-Canada says he cannot give away, we are told that the existing refining capacity of eastern Canada must be met first before Newfoundland's needs for new petrochemical facilities can be considered. That is a brief summary of the reality versus the flights of fantasy which confront us when we look at Bill C-94.

Mr. Doug House, a professor at Memorial University, who is currently the chairman of the Royal Commission on Unemployment and Employment in Newfoundland, in an article he wrote about the Atlantic Accord called "The Challenge of Oil", identifies, in addition to the matters I raised, a number of other points he says are weaknesses in the Atlantic Accord.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but there is only one minute left before one o'clock.

Mr. Tobin: I will put the question quickly. Ten seconds or less.

Mr. McDermid: Give him to time to answer it.

Mr. Tobin: If Hon. Members would be quiet, I would ask the question. Mr. House points out that there was an absence of adequate provisions for downstream processing industries. He points out there is no participation once the agreement is in place by Governments. Section 40 of the accord wipes out the Crown share. He points out that the commitment by companies to conduct research and development is extremely weak. This is the gentleman who chairs a Royal Commission on behalf of the Government. Does the Hon. Member concur or disagree with his synopsis of the failure and weakness of the Atlantic Accord.

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I see I have only one minute to answer. I want to say that I think three parts of the criticism from people in the opposition Party are pure bunkum; that is my answer. Bunkum to all their questions. That is all I have to say.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At one p.m. the House took recess.

BILINGUALISM

DECISION TO DESIGNATE CITY OF KAPUSKASING OFFICIALLY BILINGUAL

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, today, I want to say that I am proud of the Town of Kapuskasing in the riding of Cochrane—Superior, in Northern Ontario. I am proud because the local council has decided to make the town officially bilingual. The decision was adopted by council, with four votes in favour and two against. I would like to express my appreciation to the Council of Kapuskasing and to all citizens who supported this decision, a decision that reflects the spirit of Canada and of our new Constitution.

LABOUR RELATIONS

THUNDER BAY GRAIN HANDLERS—WAGE ROLL-BACK DEMAND

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the grain terminal companies in Thunder Bay are making contract demands which threaten the movement of grain through the St. Lawrence Seaway. Members of BRAC's Lodge 650 received their last wage increase in February of 1984 and have been awaiting a new contract since January of 1985. The grainhandlers have worked patiently while their leaders negotiated a new contract. They know times are difficult in wheat farming and in the grain trade.

The companies have now suddenly turned from offering no wage increases to demanding a 20 per cent roll-back in grainhandlers' wages. They argue that the workers should suffer the same type of reduction in their incomes as farmers face in the initial wheat payment for the next crop year. European and American farm subsidies threaten to disrupt the Canadian grain trade.

The grain companies could not celebrate National Transportation Week in any better way than by abandoning this cruel demand for wage reductions and by assuring Thunder Bay workers, prairie farmers, and all Canadians that grain will continue to move down the St. Lawrence Seaway.

TERRORISM

DEPORTATION URGED FOR FANATICS COMMITTING VIOLENCE

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in light of yet another act of violence committed by religious fanatics I call upon the Government of Canada to introduce a policy whereby any non-Canadian who is convicted of an act of violence based on political or religious grounds be immediately deported to their homeland. Canadians do not want or need the political or religious wars of other nations fought in Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

TERRORISM

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF PUNJABI MINISTER VISITING BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, on an isolated stretch of highway in British Columbia, a Punjabi cabinet Minister was ambushed and shot. This man was not in Canada on any political or diplomatic mission, but was here to attend the wedding of a family member.

This senseless act of terrorism should never have occurred on Canadian soil. Battles being waged in one's homeland cannot be allowed to be carried over into our country. We open our country to people from many lands who are looking for peace, freedom, and democracy. Yet it is these very principles which are being taken advantage of when terrorism of this type occurs.

For the majority of new Canadians the actions of this very small segment of fanatics is a constant source of pain and embarrassment. The Government of Canada must move swiftly to condemn this type of violent terrorism. Extremists must be made to understand that we do not regard their actions as a political statement but simply as an act of senseless violence.

In my opinion there is no cause, be it political or religious, which could possibly justify the senseless act of terrorism which took place yesterday in B.C.

REFUGEES

CRITICISM OF NEW REFUGEE DETERMINATION PROCESS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, this past weekend the Standing Conference of Canadian Organizations Concerned for Refugees strongly condemned the Government's proposed refugee determination process. The conference, representing over 100 organizations, passed the following resolution declaring:

—non-confidence in the Government for its failure to respect the fundamental principles unanimously recommended by non-governmental groups across Canada—and for its failure to adhere to the rule of law as required by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

As we on this side of the House have argued, the Government's plan fails on three counts—the principle of universal access; the right to appeal based on merit, and not on questions of law; and the right to legal counsel.

Instead of imposing a badly flawed policy the Government should accommodate the grave concerns that have emerged so quickly after last week's announcement. Our international reputation as a humanitarian nation is at stake. Canada must not be seen to be closing its doors on legitimate and genuine refugee claimants.

THE STANLEY CUP

SUCCESS OF MONTREAL CANADIENS

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, after an absence of seven years, the Stanley Cup is back in la belle province. It gives me great pleasure to mention this remarkable sports achievement here in the House. On May 24, the Montreal Canadiens won their twenty-third Stanley Cup, which means that this hockey club has become the greatest dynasty in professional sport, having broken the twenty-two win record of the New York Yankees in the World Series.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that the people of Abitibi-Témiscamingue, who have always been faithful supporters of this team, are especially proud of this magnificient victory and have in fact contributed to a very great extent to that victory. I would like to extend my sincere congratulations to men such as Serge Savard, Jacques Laperrière and of course the young Gaston Gingras—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

ENERGY

PRICE OF HOME HEATING OIL AND OF AVIATION FUEL

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the House of Commons was informed in early April that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) was expecting the savings in home heating oil and diesel fuel costs resulting from the drop in world oil prices to be passed on by the oil companies to Canadian consumers. Consumers want to know why the price of home heating oil has not dropped. The price of aviation fuel is another concern. Why has that price not reflected the drop? I have been informed by tourist outfitters that aviation fuel has actually increased in price since last fall.

Canadians are asking when the Minister is going to exert some pressure on the oil companies to reduce prices. Several months have elapsed since the price dropped and the Government's previous excuse for inaction, the backlog of higher priced fuel, is no longer applicable. I think I begin to understand why the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources was named "Oilman of the Year" when I see retail prices remaining the same, or rising slightly, at a time of falling oil prices.

TRANSPORTATION OF DANGEROUS GOODS

SPEED LIMIT REDUCED FOR TRAINS IN TORONTO AREA

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I was pleased to see how quickly the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) acted on the Toronto Area Dangerous Goods Rail Task Force's recommendations. Special dangerous goods freight trains travelling in densely populated areas in North York, including my riding of Don Valley East, will be slowed down immediately to 25 miles per hour from 35 miles per hour.

Last summer I travelled a main CP line with officials from CP to gain first-hand knowledge of the problems. CP Rail is to be commended for its efforts in upgrading the track to increase safety, and other groups like M-Trac are also to be commended for their concerns and constructive recommendations. We look forward to the final report of the task force within two years. This report will address such issues as the feasibility of re-routing or relocating dangerous goods shipments around Metro-Toronto.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Mr. Speaker, I would like to compare performances. We have created an average of 33,000 jobs a month in this country, compared to 7,000 under the Liberals. We have created 630,000 jobs in 19 months, and 75 per cent of these were full-time jobs, compared with 404,000 in 55 months for the Liberals, of which 82 per cent were part-time jobs.

During the last four and a half years the Liberals were in power, 581,000 more individuals were unemployed, but since September 1984, 229,000 less Canadians were unemployed.

Mr. Speaker, that is a performance. That is the result of our intelligent policies.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

APPLICATION OF MERIT PRINCIPLE IN HIRING PRACTICES

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, when tabling her annual report, the Chairman of the Public Service Commission said that the Government would be tabling amendments to the Public Service Employment Act by the end of this year.

As we all know, the Commission's mandate is above all to apply the merit principle in hiring public servants. Today, 55 per cent of the work done by the Commission has no connection with its mandate but is delegated to the Commission by the Government. The Conservative Government should tell us whether it intends to lighten the Commission's part of its burden and what changes we can expect.

At this time, the Commission is responsible for a number of activities that have no connection at all with its mandate. I am referring to training and development, language training, Interchange Canada, career assignment programs and many other administrative tasks. There are those who say there not only appears to be, but indeed, is a conflict when an agent of Parliament,an agent of this Parliament, receives orders from the Government. A thorough House cleaning is necessary so that the Commission can play its main role which is to maintain the merit system in our hiring practices.

TRADE

IMPOSITION OF U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, President Ronald Reagan has shown a grave error in judgment by taking action against the Canadian cedar shake and shingle industry. This Canadian industry received no Government subsidies, is not dumping, and cannot possibly be deemed to be competing unfairly against an American industry that has no source of raw materials from which to expand production. Actions like this will achieve nothing more than to denigrate the spirit of free trade negotiations. The Americans should consider reversing their decision as a show of good faith.

The strong, definitive action taken by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has clearly shown that the Canadian Government is prepared to defend Canada against any action that would be harmful.

• (1410)

However, this is a sensitive issue, and cool heads must prevail. It is imperative that no retaliation is taken which might result in a trade war. In any actions which are taken, we must not cloud the real issue—the fate of the people involved in the cedar shake and shingle industry in British Columbia. Their jobs, their families, and their future are what really count.

DISASTERS

NEW BRUNSWICK FOREST FIRES—COMPENSATION SOUGHT FOR WOODLOT OWNERS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, recent severe forest fires have devastated the forest industry in the Province of New Brunswick. Today much of the prime timberland in that province is wasteland, with over 120,000 acres destroyed. While the vast majority of lost timber reserves involves Crown land, some 300 to 400 private woodlot owners are now without their prime source of income. In all, some 10,000 to 12,000 acres of private forest reserves have now been lost for many years to come.

While the federal Government has publicly offered sympathy to private owners, no Government assistance has been offered. I ask the Government to look into this very serious matter with compassion, and to provide adequate compensation immediately to these unfortunate private woodlot owners whose livelihoods have been destroyed through no fault of their own.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

ACTIVITIES OF MEMBER FOR WINNIPEG—FORT GARRY

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, all Canadians should be concerned about the activities of a Member of this House of Commons, the Liberal Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). This Member, well known for his frequent and scathing attacks on the policies of the United States Government, has now approached an American congressional committee to obtain information on Canada's role in the case of lobbyist Michael Deaver.

However, in so doing, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry is co-operating with the same Congressmen who are attempting to block tighter controls over acid rain. It would appear that we have a Canadian politician in—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

UNITED NATION

SPECIAL CONFERENCE ON AFRICA

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Canadians join with me in welcoming the Special Conference of the United Nations on Africa. This will be the first time that the United Nations will have addressed itself to the needs of one continent. I hope the conference will include not only justifiable concern about the environment, but justifiable concern about the militaristic policies of many Governments in Africa. These policies mean that $11 billion per year are spent on military equipment by Governments which preside over the affairs of people who are going hungry.

In the armed forces of African countries there are in excess of 1,800,000 men. If a fraction of that money were devoted to food production, there would not be a need for the crisis conference which we are about to convene.

I hope our Government and our representative to the United Nations will ensure that this item is on the agenda of that conference.

IMMIGRATION

DEPORTATION OF BATTERED WIFE HALTED

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, a week ago Friday I informed the House that Employment and Immigration Canada had sent a letter to Mrs. Helga Muselmann of Hawkesbury, telling her that she and her children had to leave Canada because her husband was in breach of a ministerial permit which allowed them to enter the country. The crime in question was that the man beat up his wife. She rightfully reported him and therefore they had to leave Canada.

I am happy to say that the Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. McLean) has since changed that decision. I want to thank him and his assistant, Mrs. Kay Stanley, for seeing the light and realizing that this situation was absolutely intolerable. I am pleased that they had the good sense to change that decision.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES—B.C. PREMIER'S LETTER

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It concerns President Reagan's decision to impose a 35 per cent tariff on British Columbia shakes and shingles, putting at risk at least 10,000 direct and indirect jobs in that province. In a CTV interview yesterday, the Secretary of State said that he told Secretary Shultz that the decision was "a shock to us", that it "came as a surprise to us" and "to our Embassy". How could this be correct if at least two weeks ago, as I am informed, the Premier of British Columbia sent a formal written communication to the Prime Minister warning him of this impending decision and asking him to intervene with the President to head it off? How come this communication was ignored and this comes as a surprise to us?

• (1415)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Premier of British Columbia, as is his duty, and he exercises it very vigorously, had expressed concern about a range of threats in the American Congress to the lumber industry in British Columbia and in Canada. We have been acting to try to reduce or prevent those threats from taking effect. My comment yesterday related to the specific action announced without any precise warning to the Government of Canada.

Mr. Broadbent: Precise warning?

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER SEEK SUSPENSION OF U.S. TARIFF

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I am informed that Premier Bennett's communication relates specifically to the 35 per cent duty that was impending on British Columbia shakes and shingles. Will the Secretary of State get the Prime Minister to call President Reagan immediately and ask him to suspend that 35 per cent tariff decision, and all other pending and intended trade actions against Canada, including Canadian lumber, as a condition of the free trade talks with Canada continuing? Will the Prime Minister take that step to protect Canadian interests?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, one thing that has become abundantly clear is that now more Canadians, I would think even members of the Official Opposition, know how virulent is the force of protectionism in the United States—

Mr. Broadbent: We always knew.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —and how important it is for us to have a system that works more effectively than the system that is now in place. That is why we attach such a high priority to the question of seeking, through negotiations with the United States, to put in place a better system than one which leaves Canadian producers of shingles and shakes, and other Canadian producers, in some kind of jeopardy.

The Prime Minister has communicated to the President. I have Communicated to Secretary Shultz. We are now considering a wide range of other measures that the Government of Canada might take, including assistance to those producers in British Columbia who might be affected.

Mr. Frith: UIC.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER TELEPHONE UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, why is the Prime Minister afraid to call his supposed good friend, President Reagan? If he doesn't know the phone number, I will give it to him. It is 456-1414. Why won't he pick up the phone and make that call? Why is the Government standing idly by while some 10,000 British Columbia jobs are going down the tube because of the way this Government is bungling our trade relations with the United States?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we believe that the President has Canada's message.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO TRADE ADVISER

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Minister ought to know that Canadians are wondering today which is more bizarre, the U.S. tariff action or the Government's contrived and phoney response to it.

Mr. Crosbie: Sit down.

Mr. Tobin: How can the Minister expect Canadians to believe anything other than British Columbia interests were sold as the price for Senate Finance Committee votes for free trade, when this morning we have a member of Canada's International Trade Advisory Committee to the Minister for International Trade, Professor Alan Rugman of Dalhousie University, saying, according to The Chronicle-Herald, Halifax, that the shingles decision was no surprise? How can a Government adviser in Halifax be aware of something of which the Government in Ottawa claims it is ignorant?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as I have made clear in answer to the House Leader of the hon. gentleman's Party we were, of course, aware that the United States was considering action in this field. We were surprised that the action came in the form it did and without notice to Canada.

POSITION OF UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Did the President of the United States or the President's representatives at any time indicate to the Government of Canada that in order to acquire the votes to send free trade talks to the Senate Finance Committee a price would have to be paid? Was it indicated to the Government of Canada that the price was B.C. cedar shakes and shingles? Did the Government of Canada express strong opposition to that kind of position by the United States Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member, if he has been listening in this House of Commons, knows that the answer to his first two questions is in the negative. He would also know that to pretend otherwise is to do a great disservice to the truth.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs and it is on the same subject matter. The Government knew that the Americans had to reach a decision by May 24 at the latest on shakes and shingles. The Premier some two weeks ago specifically addressed the subject matter of shakes and shingles, and I assume also that the heads of the companies directly involved in British Columbia were also concerned about that. Given its importance to thousands of workers in British Columbia, did the Minister get in touch with his equivalent in advance? Did the Prime Minister get in touch with the President in advance? Did our ambassador call in advance? Who was down there fighting for jobs in British Columbia before the decision was made?

• (1420)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we were all there fighting for jobs in British Columbia and other—

Mr. Broadbent: Specifically on shakes and shingles?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Yes, on the question of shakes and shingles representations were made by a variety of Canadian government officials to American authorities. We are now proceeding with consideration of a range of responses which might be open to Canada in order to make sure that a decision we regard as an erratic act does not become a pattern and put in further jeopardy the understandings agreed to by the President regarding trade with Canada when he signed the Quebec Declaration.

SOFTWOOD EXPORTS—IMPENDING U.S. DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, obviously we on this side of the House hope the Government is successful in getting the American President to reverse that decision. However, I have a question about another decision which will affect thousands more jobs than even the shakes and shingles. I refer to the U.S. decision which has to be made before June 9 on the softwood lumber industry. This decision, to be made at the administrative level, to go ahead or not with a tariff, will affect thousands of jobs. Given that, has the Canadian Government now told the Americans that as a condition for continuing these talks they must say no to an additional tariff on Canadian softwood lumber?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have made very strong and direct representations, as I have personally, regarding the softwood question. However, let me be clear. We in this country now face a growing threat to jobs across the country from protectionist pressures in the U.S. One way to deal with that threat is to try to put in place a new trade arrangement. The NDP is suggesting that we should not protect those Canadian workers. I will not accept that.

Mr. Broadbent: All Canadians, particularly those in B.C., will see how phoney that answer is.

REQUEST THAT TRADE TALKS BE SUSPENDED

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister is concerned about these jobs, if he wants to put President Reagan to the test of living up to his commitment to free trade, will he say to the U.S. that there will be no continuation of these talks unless the Americans are prepared to stop taking countervailing action against Canadian products during the talks, specifically not take action against softwood lumber which will throw thousands of Canadians out of work?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the NDP has simply rephrased his question. He is asking us to suggest to the Americans that unless they take a particular action on softwood we should cut off talks whose result would be in the interest of Canada.

Mr. Deans: May be.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): We should maybe cut. Now they are changing their position.

Mr. Deans: No, may be in the interest of Canada.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Maybe we should cut off the talks. There may be some confusion in the NDP. There is none here. We believe it is in Canada's interest to try to put in place, through trade talks with the U.S., a system better than the one which now puts at risk our softwood producers, cedar producers and others. We believe the status quo has to be changed and can be changed. We intend to try.

TARIFFS IMPOSED BY UNITED STATES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. First of all, I would like to remind him that ever since the Polar Sea cruised through our territorial waters in the Arctic, the Americans have known that Canada was vulnerable and could be attacked without fear of reprisals.

I would like to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs, who was one of those who let the ship go through, what he intends to do. What does he have in mind, after all the talk we have heard for two or three days, to make the Americans understand that free trade negotiations cannot be allowed to continue, considering the steady rain of tariffs being showered on Canada?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can advise the Hon. Member that first of all, today we are considering certain measures that are open to Canada, both measures within the purview of international trade and measures designed to help Canadian producers who are affected by the U.S. action.

Second, we are continuing negotiations for the purpose of reaching an agreement with the United States, so that in future, Canadians who today are threatened by protectionist forces in the U.S. will be better protected.

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION CONCERNING QUESTION POSED BY MEMBER FOR WINDSOR WEST

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I realize we have to negotiate with the Americans, but we should not go into this with our eyes closed. I want to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs: How could he answer my hon. friend from Windsor West, who on April 28 asked him about the letter President Reagan sent to Senator Packwood, which referred to the possibility of imposing import duties on lumber: "The Hon. Member is raising a set of fears that are groundless", if he didn't have his eyes closed? That was your position April 28. Did you wake up since? We told you so!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): The answer was an answer to a specific question which concerned an unjustified allegation.

REQUEST FOR ACTION TO REVERSE U.S. DECISION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Secretary of State for External Affairs told Question Period on CTV the Americans were trying to spook us last week to prove what tough negotiators they were. After the Minister's weekend of sending his bright boys in the Ministry out to look for answers, what specific detailed actions is the Government going to take to reverse those moves made against us and our 4,000 producers in B.C.?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member wants to retain a reputation for honesty, which he has worked for through his career and brought to the House. He would not want to leave the impression that I did not accept, from references to any American attempts to spook Canada, the action to which his question relates. As I have indicated earlier in the House today, twice, I think, we are considering a range of appropriate responses for Canada. Some are in the field of international trade, some might offer assistance to those Canadians who are affected. They will be considered by the Priorities and Planning Committee of the Cabinet of Canada tomorrow morning.

REQUEST THAT TRADE TALKS BE SUSPENDED

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, that answer might have done on Friday; it does not do on Monday. You need to give us specifics. Does the Minister not see that the most effective, immediate way to counter this bizarre and eccentric act, as he has called it, is to suspend the free trade talks with the United States until U.S. unilateral moves are ruled out for the future? Wouldn't that give us the most bang for the buck right now?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has risen in this House several times since this debate began, suggesting that we stop a negotiation that could result in advantages to Canada. In this case what we have—

An Hon. Member: A confirmed spokesman for the NDP.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —we now have another member for the Canadian Labour Congress indicating to us that the New Democratic Party position was right. Let me make it clear that what was demonstrated clearly on Thursday is the vulnerability of Canada to protectionist forces in the United States. We have to take action and we must seek to try to protect Canadians better against those kinds of protectionist forces than they are protected now. We must try to negotiate a better trade arrangement. The NDP should be supporting that, not simply leaving Canadian workers exposed.

• (1430)

PRESIDENT'S LETTER TO U.S. SENATOR

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. On May 8 President Reagan wrote Senator Robert Packwood and said in part:

—I am committed to finding a rapid and effective solution to the Canadian softwood lumber problem . . . I will take such action as may be necessary to resolve this problem consistent with U.S. law.

Will the Minister not agree that 4,000 British Columbia families have paid the price for Senator Packwood's signature on the fast track free trade agreement?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker, I would not.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, last Friday the Government said it would have swift and prompt retaliatory measures ready for this week. Yet today the Chairman of the PC caucus, the Member for Mission—Port Moody, is advocating no retaliatory measures—

Mr. Speaker: Order. This is a preamble. Just a supplementary question.

Mr. Frith: What is the position of the Government on this issue?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, for the fourth time in 15 minutes in this Question Period, the answer is that the Government of Canada has been considering a range of responses—some commercial, some that might offer assistance to those Canadians who are affected. Those responses will be considered by the Priorities and Planning Committee of Cabinet tomorrow morning. Then we intend to act on them as quickly as would be effective.

This happened Thursday night. The Government of Canada responded on Friday morning. At this time we are preparing a range of other responses that might be open to us. We intend to continue to defend and protect the interests of Canada.

EFFECT ON WORKERS IN MISSION, B.C.

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. One thousand five hundred of Mission's population of 22,000 work in the shake and shingle industry. All of them face an imminent lay-off from work, adding to the already 25 per cent unemployment rate in Mission. In view of these facts, can the Minister not now at least give us some idea of what the Government will do, perhaps in co-operation with the province and the municipality, to ensure the export markets of the shake and shingle industry in British Columbia?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will deal with that question in the House for the sixth time. We are considering actions now and expect to be in a position to announce them fairly shortly. Some will take effect internationally, others are actions which might bring assistance for those British Columbians who are affected. I should take the opportunity to express my very real appreciation for the help by the Member for Mission—Port Moody in these discussions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An Hon. Member: He looks embarrassed.

REQUEST FOR EXPORTS GUARANTEE

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): He looks embarrassed because he has been able to do nothing since the Minister will not say to the industry, which has been most competitive, has never had a subsidy and has operated under free trade—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Ms. Jewett: He will not say to that industry—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Ms. Jewett: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister not say to that industry that, because of the facts I just mentioned, the Government will guarantee its exports in the U.S. market?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: What a question.

Mr. McDermid: Thank God you are in opposition.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the actions we are considering are designed precisely to do whatever is open to Canada now. They are to try to protect and help Canadians in that industry, and also to try to return the United States to a commitment to freer trade and a commitment not to take these kinds of actions against Canada.

FISHERIES

APPREHENSION OF SPANISH TRAWLERS—REPORTED BLOCKADE THREAT

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Marine Radio reported this morning that 40 foreign boats are to form a blockade tonight to prevent the Canadian Fisheries patrol vessel Leonard J. Cowley from bringing two Spanish trawlers to justice in St. John's. Is the Government prepared to give a naval escort, as it should, to prevent such a blockade from forming, or is the policy of the Government one of wait and see, which could endanger the safety of our Fisheries officers?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, of course the Hon. Member would know that every necessary measure would be taken to bring our Fisheries officers safely back to Canada. However, he should also know that when Members of Parliament engage in irresponsible blabbering, extracting from fragmentary—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Siddon: —extracting from fragmentary information and gossip, they are jeopardizing the very safety and success of the mission in question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

VIOLATIONS OF CANADIAN LAW

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the number of reported violations—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: Perilous George.

Mr. Baker: —the number of reported violations by foreign countries has multiplied by more than 12 times over the past year. The prosecutions have increased by only a small margin. Yet you prosecute a Newfoundland boat for being a half inch too short—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Baker: My supplementary question is directed to the Minister. Will he give Canadian boats the same leeway as he gives foreign boats? Canadian boats don't want to kidnap Fisheries officers; they want a share of their resource that foreigners are destroying.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, in fact, these are the very reasons why the Government is using stringent measures to enforce effectively the 200-mile economic limit where some of the richest groundfish stocks in Atlantic Canada are to be found. The Hon. Member talks about violations. In 1984, under the Government of which he was a member, there were 24 violations with collected fines totalling $13,000. In 1985 the same number of violations lead to fines approaching $1 million. That is the the Government that left us that sorry state.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Where were you when you were needed? That is when you should have been howling and yowling and jowling.

An Hon. Member: You got the shakes, Crosbie.

Mr. Crosbie: Blabbermouth Baker.

Mr. Rossi: There is the big fish himself.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Tobin: There is just as much noise—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe.

TRADE

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES—EXPORT ON CEDAR LOGS

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In view of the U.S. protectionist tariff action against Canada's cedar shake and shingle industry, will the Minister take action to prevent raw materials such as cedar blocks and logs from British Columbia being imported into the United States, effectively transferring the Canadian shake and shingle production and Canadian jobs across the border and, if so, what action will he take?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada and the Province of British Columbia already have mechanisms in place to control the export of logs to all countries. We intend to enforce that mechanism vigorously and completely. I can give the Hon. Member the assurance that the Government will not permit the Canadian shake and shingle industry to be exported across the border.

REQUEST THAT ISSUE BE MOVED TO TOP OF TRADE TALKS AGENDA

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, is the Secretary of State for External Affairs considering giving specific direction to our free trade ambassador to bring the shake and shingle tariff issue to the top of the bilateral talks agenda?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we trust that we have done that and will be able to deal with that question outside the trade negotiations mandate. That is a responsibility of the Government of Canada, to which the Government of Canada is responding.

FISHERIES

INCURSIONS BY SPANISH FISHING FLEET

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External affairs. It concerns the Spanish trawler incident. Would the Secretary of State for External Affairs indicate exactly what action is being taken with the Spanish Government to prevent any more of these incursions by the Spanish fishing fleet into Canadian waters?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this has been a matter, as my colleague, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans has made clear, which has caused very serious strain on the relations between Canada and Spain. I will be meeting on Friday, I believe, of this week in Halifax with the Spanish Foreign Minister. Certainly this issue is at the top of my agenda. I hope we can take advantage of the very unpleasant incident which happened over the last weekend finally to achieve a resolution to a problem which was rampant during the former Government—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —which continues now and with which we want to deal.

PROTECTION OF CANADIAN WATERS

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. One is cerainly tempted to ask whether or not the Canadian Navy has sufficient strength should the Spanish fishing armada attempt to blockade the return of those vessels. In reality, what is required is some monitoring during the interim period by the Canadian Navy. Is it the intention of the Government to provide naval vessels to protect Canadian waters until we have a firm agreement with the Spanish on this matter?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, as I announced in my answer to a previous question by the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate, all necessary measures at the present time are being taken. Those who would wish to sensationalize this issue at a time when silence and trust are important, are jeopardizing the safety and success of that mission.

Some Hon. Members: Come on.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Oh, do your job.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTO PACT

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. Almost six months ago provincial Premiers and the Prime Minister agreed to "establishing a common basis of facts and analysis in advance of free trade discussions". Does the Minister believe that that commmon basis includes forcing the Ontario Government to appeal, through the freedom of information route, for a censored version of the impact of the free trade talks on the Auto Pact?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member well knows, the provinces and the federal Government, under the auspices of Mr. Reisman, have been meeting on a regular basis several times a month. There has been an excellent exchange of information and, to the best of my knowledge, the provinces are quite satisfied with the information they have received to date.

IMPACT OF TRADE NEGOTIATIONS ON ONTARIO

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, obviously the Minister for International Trade does not know the facts. I would like to ask him to comment on the fact that when the federal Government sent an information package to the provinces eight items, eight reports, were denied the Province of Ontario, including even the censored version of the Auto Pact study. Again, can he tell us whether he feels it is full disclosure and participation by the provinces to force them to apply through Freedom of Information to get information on the critical impact on jobs in the Province of Ontario?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can only once again repeat for the Hon. Member that I am not aware of any concerns expressed to us by the provinces about a lack of information from the federal Government.

TERRORISM

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF PUNJABI MINISTER IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. What protective action was undertaken by Canada when our security services became aware of the presence in British Columbia of a high-ranking Indian Government official from the Punjab?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately the high-ranking official to whom the hon. gentleman refers—who, I assume, was the person who was shot yesterday—did not make any request for security to the Government of Canada, nor did he advise the Government of Canada he was visiting Canada. He arrived on May 15. Therefore no security protection was provided because his presence in the country was not known to either the Department of External Affairs or to the Department of the Solicitor General.

ENTRY TO CANADA OF FOREIGN GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, is it not normal practice for high-ranking officials from other countries to notify the Canadian authorities prior to their entry into the country? Is it not further normal practice when the passports of persons entering the country show they are officials of Governments that they are at least noted in the journals and notification is given to the Department of External Affairs?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this is a very regrettable affair. I have, on behalf of the Government, and I am sure of the Parliament of Canada, expressed to the Indian High Commissioner by telephone this morning our very great regret about the matter, and our further regret that neither the Indian Government nor the Canadian Government was informed by Mr. Sidhu of his intention to come to Canada or his presence here. Mr. Sidhu, when he applied for a visa to come to Canada, was not then a member of the Cabinet of the Punjab, so there was no way through our records that we would have been able to learn of his intention to come to Canada.

I have indicated informally to the Indian High Commissioner my great personal concern that we have to put in place some system which offers more effective protection for people who might be coming here. May I also say that the Government believes it is part of the understanding of persons who come to Canada from other countries that they should leave old quarrels behind. That is also a view which is very actively supported by the overwhelming majority of the members of the Canadian Sikh community.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

REPORTED ACTIVITIES BY STAFF OF MEMBER FOR WINNIPEG—FORT GARRY

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr Speaker, my question is also directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It has been reported that the staff of an Hon. Member of this House is actively co-operating with a committee of the United States Congress chaired by a Congressman described as one of the most vociferous opponents of acid rain controls and one of the most hostile to Canadian interests. What concern does the Minister have that this exchange may work against Canadian-American co-operation in combating acid rain?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am, of course, concerned about the news reports published in The New York Times quoting an assistant of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry as saying: "We are helping a congressional committee try to block acid rain legislation".

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Read the rest of the sentence.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Acid rain legislation has been something very vigorously sought by this Parliament for a very long time. There are problems enough in trying to achieve that kind of progress without Hon. Members of the House of Commons or their staff working to try to block progress for Canada.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF PUNJABI MINISTER IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Solicitor General. It also concerns the ambush and attempted assassination of the Indian Cabinet Minister in British Columbia yesterday. The Minister says the Government of Canada was not aware of his presence in Canada. I would submit that the senseless act of terrorism could have and should have been prevented. How can the Minister say that the Government of Canada was not aware of the Minister's presence in Canada when it was common knowledge in British Columbia that the Minister was in British Columbia, and the Indian Consul General in British Columbia was aware of the presence of the Cabinet Minister? Can the Minister explain?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member was in possession of information which might have indicted some threat to an official of the Minister of the Government of Punjab, who was here without having taken the precaution to advise either his High Commissioner or our Government, then I would have hoped that the Hon. Member would have advised relevant officials so we could have taken action to prevent the kind of event which occurred on Vancouver Island.

We did not know. Apparently the Hon. Member did know. If he did, I think he had a duty to let us know.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I find it absolutely incredible—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: —that the Government did not know of the presence of the Cabinet Minister.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE'S KNOWLEDGE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Will the Government not admit that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police knew some weeks ago that Sikh terrorists in British Columbia were plotting a terrorist act? Will he admit that the RCMP knew in advance that Sikh terrorists were planning to strike?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can only take that as notice. I doubt it would be appropriate for us to reveal on the floor of the House of Commons information which the RCMP may or may not have. But I would like to know when the Hon. Member became aware of the presence in Canada of this cabinet Minister from the Punjab.

CHALLENGE '86

EMPLOYMENT FUNDING OF NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration who was here this morning to meet with the delegation concerning Challenge '86 but could not bother to be here for Question Period.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Some Hon. Members: Next question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows such a comment is out of order.

Some Hon. Members: Next question.

Mr. Broadbent: There is only one Speaker here, you guys.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will have one question.

• (1450)

Mr. Keeper: My question to the Government is this. Why is it reducing the funding to non-profit community groups under Challenge '86 and the Canadian Jobs Strategy while it is increasing funding to private companies? Why is it financing job creation and training in the private sector by taking the money from non-profit community groups?

[Translation]

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, there has never been any question of shifting funds from one sector to the other. It is true that there were more applications from the private sector this year, but my colleague might be interested to know that in his own province of Manitoba the private sector was given $1.3 million to create jobs, against $2.812 million for the other sector. So I do not see why he too should be complaining.

[English]

Mr. Keeper: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York East.

LAW REFORM

INTRODUCTION OF POLLUTION CONTROL LEGISLATION

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. Last week, because of our very ineffective pollution laws, a judge in Toronto was required to use contempt of court proceedings to deal with a polluter who continued to dump toxic chemicals despite previous court orders. When will the Minister introduce in the House effective pollution control legislation outlining offences and penalties which will deal with the matter, including jail terms, as recommended by the Law Reform Commission of Canada?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Law Reform Commission of Canada made a report on this subject last November. As a result of its report the procedure is that it will receive comments from interested parties, after which it will make a final report to the Government. It has not yet made that final report. I am sure the hon. gentleman would be pleased to pass his views on to the commission for consideration in its final report and conclusions.

PUBLIC WORKS

PROCEDURE FOR AWARDING CONTRACTS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public Works. Some time ago we heard about a contract award procedure used by the Hon. Member for Quebec East. Last week we all learned about the existence of a political agent of the Minister at the Montreal regional office, and finally an article by Mr. O'Neil in Le Devoir of Saturday mentioned a system of kickbacks—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The preambles are becoming longer and longer. I ask the Hon. Member to come to his question, please.

Mr. Boudria: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister confirm to the House the existence of these 5 per cent kickbacks, how long has this practice been going on, and who collects them?

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, in light of the Hon. Member's last remark, I cannot confirm anything at all. I never heard of such a practice. If the Hon. Member is familiar with this system, he must have heard about it from his Party, not ours.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is addressed to the Acting Solicitor General. Will the Acting Solicitor General immediately request an RCMP criminal investigation into the alleged 5 per cent kick-back scheme to fill Tory Party coffers as alleged in Le Devoir?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Hon. Member to reconsider the wild, spurious, general, vague and vicious charges which he is constantly spewing in this House without care, caution, or circumspect.

Mr. Broadbent: Sounds like you in opposition.

HEALTH

BAN ON TOBACCO ADVERTISING REQUESTED

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. It concerns the deaths of 35,000 Canadians every year due to tobacco-related diseases. Why is the Minister still shadow-boxing with the tobacco industry? Why is he pretending to talk tough about health warnings on cigarette packages? Why does he not deliver the real blow in favour of the health of Canadians, especially of children, and ban tobacco advertising altogether?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am not shadow-boxing with the tobacco industry.

Mr. Rodriguez: Then what are you doing?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): What I am doing is sitting down with the tobacco industry to see whether it will take some action. As I have indicated to the Hon. Member, I will wait until the end of June. Additionally, what I am saying to her and to the country is that the Government will then consider what action to take.

I am saying to her very directly that if she is an expert in this field at all, and if she has looked at the effect that the banning of advertising has on reducing the number of smokers, then she will know that it is painfully few. There are other steps which one has to take. It might be good visuals, and she often deals with visuals rather than actualities. I deal with realities.

HAZARDOUS PRODUCTS DESIGNATION INQUIRY

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the Minister will know that the group, Physicians for a Smoke-free Canada, has made a formal request of the Government to add tobacco products to Schedule II of the Hazardous Products Act—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question without a preamble.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, my question is simply this. Has the Minister taken a position on this matter? Will the Government place tobacco products in the Hazardous Products Act Schedule? If not, how many deaths does it require before the Government will treat tobacco as a hazardous product?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, first, I want to point out to the Hon. Member just how important it is for comprehensive action. The Minister of Transport is co-operating with regard to public transportation. The Minister of Agriculture is co-operating in terms of tobacco farmers. In the Department of National Health and Welfare we have taken various actions. The Hazardous Product Act falls under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. This is why we need a comprehensive Act. I wish the Hon. Member would begin supporting the comprehensive approach which the Government has taken.

CHALLENGE '86

FUNDING OF SOCIAL SERVICE PROJECTS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister for summer employment.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Expel him.

Mr. Allmand: This morning the Minister met with representatives of community service groups from across the country whose summer programs have been cut as a result of the Government's policy. What will the Minister and her Government do for the thousands of needy children, disabled and older people who will be without services this summer as a result of these cuts and quotas? What is her intention with respect to these people?

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, this morning the Minister of Employment and Immigration and I met with some representatives of the Coalition for Challenge '86. In listening to the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East what I do not understand is why he is totally against young students getting jobs which usually last longer, pay better, and in which they can really obtain practical experience.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mrs. Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot): This is being done through the private sector.

REQUEST THAT PRIORITY BE GIVEN TO SOCIALLY USEFUL EMPLOYMENT

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, I am not against that, and that is not true. Will the Minister not re-examine the Challenge '86 program in order to give priority to summer employment which is socially useful and which will provide essential community services, whether in the private or the public sector? Will she not consider that?

[Translation]

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): In the Province of Quebec private sector, Mr. Speaker, 11,000 jobs were created at a cost of $13 million, and 13,000 at a cost of $22 million. Surely there must have been non-profit organizations in this sector which receive funds. Twenty-two million dollars were earmarked for Quebec.

[English]

FUNDING OF NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Youth. We have heard her refrain before. Will the Minister not answer the question posed which was also asked of her this morning? What will the Government do about the some 100,000 young people served by these non-profit organizations? What will she do for them? We know that jobs are being produced; but we want the Minister to answer a simple question. What will happen to those 100,000 youth, disabled and others who will not be served because of the Government's policy?

Mr. Allmand: Right on! Answer the question.

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, this is a Ministry of Employment. We are creating jobs for our young people to enable them to pay tuition, to obtain some practical experience, and to enable them to make the transition between school and work more easily upon graduation. This is what the Challenge '86 program is all about. This is what it is succeeding in doing better than any program which has ever existed.

Mr. Allmand: Baloney!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Expel him!

Mr. Speaker: A very brief supplementary question.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, does the Minister not think it is just as important to serve those in society who are being served by these non-profit organizations—those who are least able to help themselves—as it is to provide funding for university students and college students?

• (1500)

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, as of May 21 almost $77 million had been given to the non-profit sector.

Mr. McCurdy: Answer the question.

Mrs. Champagne: Obviously some needy people in those groups to which the Hon. Member is referring have received some money and are creating the jobs which will be needed to help those young people and children during the summer.

Mr. Speaker: I have received notice of a point of order form the Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake.

POINTS OF ORDER

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS—ACCEPTABILITY OF CONTENT

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to issue an apology to the House. In referring to the activities of an Hon. Member, in language no worse than is used by members of the Opposition when referring to Government Members and cabinet Ministers, I was ruled out of order, presumably in conformance to Standing Order 59 which refers to language which is disrespectful or offensive. If indeed I used offensive or disrespectful language, again no different than that used by members of the Opposition, I would like to offer an apology to Hon. Members of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: That was creative. The Hon. Member will find that there is more to it than that and that is why I indicated to him that he might want to read the precedents. I might refer him specifically to the comments made by the Lefebvre Commission which indicated what the Chair should and should not accept during statements by Members, and that is a somewhat different matter.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS—RESPONSE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order arising from Question Period. In response to a set-up question put by one of the Government Members, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark)—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: It is exactly the same issue of casting reflections. Does the Hon. Member have a point of order?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, with respect to questions about the staff of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), the Secretary of State for External Affairs was misleading in his response—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member has not said that the Minister was deliberately misleading the House; therefore, what she has said is not unparliamentary. However, I take it she is going to bring up a point of order about what was said. She knows that that is not a point of order but is a question of debate. Therefore, does the Hon. Member have a point of order?

Ms. Copps: Yes, Mr. Speaker, given that I am accepting that it was an inadvertent mistake, the Minister stated in the House that we are helping a congressional committee—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the Hon. Member resume her seat? We go through this every time. Does the Hon. Member have a point of order? If it is simply a matter that she does not believe that what was said is correct, that is not a point of order. Does the Hon. Member have a point of order?

Ms. Copps: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I just want to complete my point of order in that the Minister should—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair has not accepted that the Hon. Member has a point of order on the basis of what she has said.

CANADA-NEWFOUNDLAND ATLANTIC ACCORD IMPLEMENTATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-94, an Act to implement an agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador on offshore petroleum resource management and revenue sharing and to make related and consequential amendments, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in debate on Bill C-94, particularly because I have the opportunity to rise following the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception (Mr. Johnson), unfortunately interrupted by lunch hour and Question Period.

The Hon. Member told the House a few hours ago that the Atlantic Accord represented a panacea for all of Newfoundland's problems. He said that with the historic Atlantic Accord, Newfoundland would finally mature and come into its own in Confederation and countless jobs and billions of dollars would flow to the Province of Newfoundland.

I say that I am pleased to speak following the Hon. Member for two reasons. The first is that it was interesting to listen to him and to understand the extent of the enthusiasm of Conservative Members and the extent to which they will go to try to rationalize this incredible package that was put together by the federal Government and the Government of Newfoundland.

All Members of Parliament will recall that a few short years ago the Premier of Newfoundland, Brian Peckford, was very vocal in putting forward Newfoundland's offshore position when a Party of another stripe was in power. He travelled the country, toured the land. He made himself available to the national press and he laid down Newfoundland's position.

Let us examine the position Mr. Peckford put to the previous Liberal administration, a position to which he required agreement or he would not sign a deal, as compared to what is contained in Bill C-94. That will be an interesting exercise. Let us see what the Premier got from this Government that he could not get from the previous Government, and let us see how consistent the Premier has been.

First we all recall that the Premier of Newfoundland said when it came to the offshore Newfoundland that his first requirement for signing an agreement with Ottawa would be that Newfoundland's ownership of the resource be recognized explicitly. Not only must Newfoundland's ownership of the resource be recognized explicitly, but it must be entrenched in the Constitution, never to be challenged again. That was the position taken by the Premier at that time. What did he receive in this document that he subsequently signed? The document recognizes that the offshore belongs to all the people of Canada, not to Newfoundland. That had been condition number one.

The Premier's condition number two, logical man that he is, was that if Newfoundlanders own the offshore, 100 per cent of the revenues that flow from it should go to Newfoundland. That was a logical step for the Premier to take having declared ownership of the resource. What did he get in this agreement that he signed with the current Government? Did he get 100 per cent of revenues? He was promised 50 per cent of the revenues from the back-in provision but the back-in provision on Canada lands has since been cancelled. He got 50 per cent of nothing. On the revenue-sharing agreement, we still do not know what the revenues will be, or if there are to be any at all given the current state of the offshore. That was condition number two.

The third thing the Premier said was that the offshore is very important to Newfoundland. He went on to say that Newfoundland was terrified of the fantastic and incredible impact of rapid development, that it could not handle the billions of dollars that would flood the province, and that it could not handle the number of jobs that would be created. He said that Newfoundland wanted to control the pace of development in that province, and that he did not want the economy to heat up too quickly. He felt that with 29 per cent unemployment, Newfoundland did not want too much development at too fast a pace. Therefore Newfoundland would insist that it control the pace of development.

What did Newfoundland receive from this agreement, from Premier Peckford and his buddy of the same blue stripe? It was a blue day when the agreement was signed. Newfoundland did not get control over the pace of development. It got Clause 35(2) which guarantees that Ottawa or the Minister of Energy shall control the pace of development. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) will determine whether Canada's security of supply has been met for a period of five years. That is contained in Bill C-94.

What else did the Premier of Newfoundland demand as part of the agreement with the previous Liberal Government? He demanded that Hibernia crude oil be used in processing facilities in Newfoundland, and that the raw resource should be used to create a petrochemical industry in that province. He said that it must be part of the agreement. However, what did he sign with the Government of today? He signed Clause 41 which includes a guarantee of supply for a plant called Come-By-Chance that has been closed for the last 10 years. How valuable an asset is the Come-By-Chance plant to which the Government of Canada was to supply Hibernia crude? It was so valuable that the President of Petro-Canada said that he would sell it for a dollar if he could find a buyer! We know that the plant will not use Hibernia crude.

What did the agreement indicate about the possibility of developing new or additional facilities to become involved in the petrochemical industry some time down the road, perhaps in five years or twenty-five years? It indicates that it could only happen when the existing capacity and needs of all other plants in Atlantic Canada have been met. There is no security of supply for Newfoundland in Bill C-94.

I agree and have always agreed with the principle that offshore resources belong to the entire country. That was the Liberal position. Because of where the resource is located, the benefits from offshore should first flow to Newfoundland and Newfoundlanders. That was also our position. The resource should be jointly managed and controlled for the benefit of the country and the benefit of the province. That was our position as well.

Mr. Gurbin: Why didn't you bring in a deal?

Mr. Tobin: Because Mr. Peckford was incapable of signing a reasonable deal. When he was in political trouble he got himself into a position where he had to tell Newfoundlanders, "Let us re-elect Brian Peckford because Brian Peckford can sign a deal with Brian Mulroney". The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) made sure that he put a deal to Mr. Peckford a month before the provincial election. Mr. Peckford, knowing that he dare not go into a provincial election without some kind of agreement, took anything he could get, and what he got was absolutely nothing.

How do we examine Bill C-94? Do we examine it in relation to the current oil patch? Do we examine it in terms of the reality that the projected investment in the oil patch for this year has dropped from $11.2 billion down to $6 billion, or nearly a 50 per cent reduction? Do we examine it in face of the fact that job projections now indicate that 4,000 jobs will be lost in that industry in 1986? Do we examine it in face of the fact that where we once had 14 rigs operating on the East Coast in the offshore, we now have only six? Do we examine it in the context of the industry five months or six months ago when the world price of oil was double what it is now? If we examine Bill C-94 in the face of current reality versus the euphoric mood in which it was written, we discover that it is no longer relevant. Bill C-94 is irrelevant.

A few days ago in the House we dealt with second reading stage of Bill C-92, an Act to set up a tax credit scheme for exploration off the East Coast of Canada in the offshore. It replaced PIP, under which Canadian companies operating in the offshore received more than $40 million worth of assistance for every $50 million worth of high risk frontier exploration. What has replaced that program? It has been replaced by a new tax credit scheme. In place of $40 million worth of tax credit for $50 million worth of expenditure, $4.5 million will be given. That is a loss of some $35 million on a $50 million per unit exploration program.

In its haste to respond to American demands that Canada's oil patch be passed back to the corporate boardrooms of the United States, the Government of Canada gutted the National Energy Program. It did not review, retool, or fine tune it to make it more relevant to changing conditions. Instead it gutted the program. It got rid of the Canadian ownership aspect of the program, the incentives to ensure exploration in the High Arctic, in the Beaufort Sea, off Sable Island, Nova Scotia, off Labrador, at Ben Nevis, and in Hibernia. That is what the Government did. It removed Canadian oil companies which were becoming a window on an industry vital to the country, an industry that provides the fuel which drives the engine of our economy. It removed those Canadian interests and put corporate planning and policy-making back into the hands of those people who sit in boardrooms in glass and steel towers outside Canada.

What do those people who sit in boardrooms in glass towers outside the country say about the Hibernia development, the tar sands in Alberta, the Beaufort Sea, or the area of non-conventional oil exploration? They are saying, "there is not a quick buck to be made and we are out of it". What are they saying about Canadian security of supply, having resources at our disposal to ensure that never again are we victims held hostage by OPEC? They are saying, "there is not a quick buck to be made and we are out of it".

What about Canadian citizens owning a piece of a Canadian resource and Canadian content in the oil and gas industry? Those same people are saying that the companies are now going into bankruptcy because of the policies of the Government of Canada, that they are in big trouble with their banks, and that they can buy them cheap. That is the kind of short-sighted, doctrinaire, market-place philosophy which the Government has followed.

No one is rejoicing the passage of the Atlantic Accord in Newfoundland today. I call it the "Atlantic squeeze". The Premier of Newfoundland will not even bring in the parallel legislation which is to be passed in the Newfoundland Legislature. He had two days or three days of debate on it, and he got such heat in the legislature and such negative press that he pulled it back out again. The great Atlantic Accord is being treated like a pea in a series of cups. No one knows when the correct cup will come up and the Atlantic Accord will reappear in all its finery.

The people of Newfoundland are feeling a sense of lost opportunity about the Newfoundland offshore. They are almost feeling the sense of a death in the family. However, no one has yet declared that the patient has died and that the funeral date has been set. Because of the narrow, parochial, political position of the Premier of Newfoundland, who wasted an opportunity to move forward with development, Hibernia is not going today. In 1986 we live in a dramatically different world from the world in which we lived twenty weeks ago, two years ago, or five years ago. We now have a world price for oil, in the current fiscal regime set up by the Conservative Government, where Hibernia is not going. We are faced with losing a tremendous number of skilled people, individuals who have been drawn from all across the country, many from my own province, highly skilled, highly trained in the oil and gas industry. We are faced with losing those people across the face of the earth. That pool of talent is being dissipated because the Government has decided that it is the corporate boardrooms south of the border rather than the needs of Canadians that will determine energy policy in Canada.

We in Newfoundland who had but a thread of a dream, who had but a thread of the possibility that revenues from oil and gas could do for our province, perhaps empathize more than anybody else with what is happening in Alberta. That is a province that was using oil and gas revenue to build on other sectors in Alberta, using non-renewable resource revenues to build on traditional revenues for traditional resources, but is now facing an economy in shambles, and is confronted with a Government that says, "I am sorry, the philosophy of the day says that the market shall dictate whether or not you work, my friend. The philosophy of the day says OPEC's manipulations shall decide whether you pay the mortgage, my friend. The philosophy of the day says your future and Canada's oil and gas industry shall have its agenda decided south of the border or in the Middle East". That is the context in which we in Newfoundland receive this flawed Bill. We are not applauding.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid) would be very interested to know that there is a gentleman in Newfoundland, a university professor, Dr. Doug House, who wrote a book entitled "The Challenge of Oil". This gentleman is held in such high regard in Newfoundland circles, in particular by Premier Peckford and his Cabinet that they named this gentleman Chairman of the Royal Commission on Employment and Unemployment in Newfoundland. He has been travelling the province for the last year talking to Newfoundland business, labour and citizens about the problems of chronically high unemployment. This gentleman has the Premier's confidence suffice it to say.

Dr. House, who obviously enjoys the confidence of the Government, and we presume he has some confidence in the people he is now serving, has identified a number of major flaws with Bill C-94 and the Atlantic Accord. He points out the absence of any participation by Governments in the sharing of revenues. Section 40 of the accord refers to the Crown share which would be shared equitably with Newfoundland. Of course, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and her Parliamentary Secretary have subsequently eliminated the Crown share. Newfoundland's share in Dr. House's terms ends up being "Fifty per cent of nothing."

Dr. House points out the absence of adequate provisions for a downstream processing industries, refining and petrochemicals. Under Clause 41 of the proposed legislation Newfoundland's ability to get access to crude from Hibernia is extremely questionable in the very best of circumstances.

Dr. House points out that the commitment by companies operating offshore Newfoundland, if and when that ever happens, to conduct research and development, education and training in Newfoundland is weak. In his view, the province and the federal Government, in particular the Newfoundland Government should have sought more control over this vital area because of its tremendous potential for jobs downstream.

Those are not my words, Mr. Speaker. Those are not the partisan words of one who wants to find fault for the sake of finding fault. Those are the words of the Chairman of the Royal Commission on Employment and Unemployment in Newfoundland, a gentleman who I believe has been given a formidable task, one that requires a rare amount of courage and who enjoys the confidence of the Premier who did not negotiate but was forced to sign this deal, a Premier who was told: "take it or leave it".

Mr. McDermid: You don't force Brian Peckford to do anything.

Mr. Tobin: I will make a prediction. The same Premier who was brow beaten into taking this deal because it was the only one available just before an election when he needed something positive to announce is the same man who is saying today in Newfoundland that the Newfoundland railway shall not close. Mark my words, Mr. Speaker, before the conclusion of this session of this House at the end of June the Government of Canada will be announcing with the agreement of the Premier of Newfoundland the closure of the Newfoundland railway. It is the same Premier who said that factory freezer trawlers are a blight on the fishery of Atlantic Canada, who lamented the subsequent decision to allow factory freezer trawlers which destroyed the inshore fishery in Atlantic Canada.

I ask one thing in conclusion, Mr. Speaker. I recognize that despite the flawed nature of this Bill the Government will use its majority here and the Government will use its majority in Newfoundland to pass it. I simply beg, "Do not entrench in the Constitution this flawed, flawed and short-sighted document".

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, does the Liberal Party believe that the Atlantic Accord should not haved passed? Is it the policy of the Liberal Party that we should go back to the situation where the Government of Canada, in the court decisions, had complete control of the offshore resource and whatever Newfoundland got was by grace of the Government of Canada and had no rights in that offshore? Is it the Member's view that the Liberal Party would like us to go back to the position prior to the Atlantic Accord?

Mr. Tobin: I am delighted the Hon. Member has asked the question, Mr. Speaker. It is obvious that he has not read the Bill. I would like to help him be more conversant. First, a brief history lesson for the Hon. Member. It was not the Government of Canada that initiated court action on ownership of the Newfoundland offshore. It was the Government of Newfoundland which began by referring the matter to the Supreme Court in Newfoundland asking, in the Premier's words, "Our court"—as if a court were political—to rule on "our ownership" of the offshore. "Our court" much to the chagrin of the Premier said no. "Our court" said Ottawa owns, the people of Canada own the offshore.

The second history lesson for the Hon. Member is that since we did not initiate the court action, the Liberal Government never took as a policy the notion that total control and ownership belonged to Ottawa and Ottawa only. We were attempting to negotiate a joint agreement. What we have ended up with is a Bill that gives ownership to Ottawa which the Hon. Member somehow suggests is terrible, and to the people of Canada, a Bill which gives Newfoundland as yet an unknown share of the revenues.

I would simply tell the Hon. Member that I find his sentiments, providing they were properly placed and supported by historical fact, interesting. I find them somewhat supportive but history will not bear out the scenario the Member has supplied. I hope I have been of some value to the Member in making him a better Member of Parliament, in giving him more understanding of that great Province of Newfoundland and in giving him more understanding of the contribution of the last Liberal Government.

Mr. Blenkarn: We had the contribution of the last Liberal Government, Mr. Speaker, and we continue to get the contributions of this Member who continues to twist and turn and twist and turn. He is the greatest twister and turner in this House.

An Hon. Member: No, but he is close.

Mr. Blenkarn: It is clear that the Member does not understand his own history or at least he changes his own history to suit his own facts as he needs his facts changed. The fact is the Government that he supported fought hammer and tongs to make sure that Newfoundland lost that court case in the Supreme Court of Canada. The Government could have walked away from the court case and given the rights to Newfoundland but the Government didn't. We had to have an Atlantic Accord. We had to make a deal to give Newfoundland the rights it should have. After the court case, we could not, without a constitutional amendment, change the terms, so we had to give Newfoundland all the rights and privileges which the resources in that 200 mile limit have. Does the Member and his Party want to take that away from Newfoundland? Is the Member going to vote against the Bill? Is he going to say: Newfoundland, you cannot have it; that belongs to the people of Canada and you shall not own it, you shall not enjoy it? Is that the way he wants to represent his province? Strange, Sir. Strange.

• (1530)

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, when I was a young boy my mother always told me that if you are going to get in these little spats out in the school yard be sure it is an even match. I feel somewhat guilty doing battle with an unarmed man.

Mr. Gormley: So speaks the intellectual giant of the House of Commons.

Mr. Tobin: Not an intellectual giant but one who is concerned about the issues affecting his province, and one who makes sure he does his homework before he rises to spew forth, like an unguided missle, all kinds of irrelevant comments.

The Hon. Member says we could have walked away from the court case. Why did we not give it to Newfoundland? He says that in the face of a Bill from his Government which entrenches ownership of the offshore not for Newfoundland but for the Government of Canada. Can you imagine?

Mr. Robichaud: Incredible.

Mr. Tobin: Incredible. You should have walked away, you nasty Liberals. Meanwhile we are debating a Bill which gives ownership not to Newfoundland but to the Government of Canada. I think that is right. I think most Newfoundlanders think that is right because they are Canadians and damned proud of it.

Let me deal with another of the foolish statements the Hon. Member made. He asked if I was going to vote against this Bill and, in doing so, take away Newfoundland's ownership of the offshore and the revenues that flow from it. The fact of the matter is that in voting for this Bill I would be voting for taking away the ownership of the offshore from Newfoundland, because in this Bill ownership is federal. In voting for this Bill I would be voting not to give Newfoundland all the revenue, because in this Bill all the revenues do not belong to Newfoundland. The majority of them are probably going to Ottawa.

Mr. McDermid: How do you figure that?

Mr. Tobin: I say to the Hon. Member quite honestly that I suspect that somewhere between that confused tangle web of facts that he weaves there are some good intentions. Good luck next time out.

Mr. O'Neil: Mr. Speaker, the issue of which the Hon. Member speaks is of course the same issue which has dominated Nova Scotia's resource development since the early 1960s. It was Robert Stanfield who raised this issue as a Premier at a constitutional conference in 1963. Successive Liberal Governments rejected the policy of the Conservative Party which was to give control of offshore resources to the coastal provinces. That was not a simple symbolic gesture by this Party. It was recognition that control of offshore resources represented an opportunity for the coastal provinces to take their economic place in this country. Successive Liberal Members of Parliament from Nova Scotia and Newfoundland stood idly by or sat silently in their seats in the House of Commons while successive Liberal Prime Ministers said, no, you shall remain on the welfare rolls. At the same time that gas was and is being taken from Lake Erie and other international waterways, we in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland are told, no, you are not good enough to get the same rates.

Will the Hon. Member dispute the fact that the question of offshore jurisdiction was put at issue by the federal Government in a labour arbitration case and it was subsequently decided by the Supreme Court of Canada as a constitutional decision and not subject to change by the House of Commons?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I find it absolutely amazing that a Member from Nova Scotia would enter this fray. Again we have a gentleman who, without understanding the risk at which he puts himself, stands and talks about how successive Liberal Governments were so nasty to the provinces. He conveniently forgets that the Premier of Nova Scotia, Mr. Buchanan, signed an offshore oil and gas development agreement with the Prime Minister of Canada, Pierre Elliott Trudeau. The last time I looked he was a Liberal. How can the Hon. Member stand up and talk about successive Liberal Governments being impossible, and then in the same breath acknowledge that the former, current, but perhaps not future, Premier of his province signed a deal with a Liberal Government? That is beyond comprehension.

Let me ask the Hon. Member a question. I heard the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception (Mr. Johnson) saying that we in Newfoundland held out, fought hard and got Bill C-94 as a reward. We did not sell out like Nova Scotia. Does the Hon. Member agree with his Conservative colleague that the Premier of Nova Scotia sold out Nova Scotians when he signed the deal with the big bad, nasty and mean Liberal Government?

Mr. McDermid: Yes. If you look at the deal, you would think so.

Mr. O'Neil: I was hoping the Hon. Member would ask that question. It is obvious his research is incomplete. The offshore agreement with Nova Scotia provides that if a so-called better agreement is reached with another province, then the Premier of Nova Scotia and his Conservative Government, which will continue in office for some time, shall have the option to assume that better agreement. We have the best of both worlds. We have had development and now we are going to get any better deal on the table.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to say a few words about the Atlantic Accord. There is no doubt that we recall very vividly the relationship which developed between the provinces and the federal Government, specifically between the leadership of Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the provinces. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that the relationships were extremely exacerbated. There was no feeling of co-operative federalism. There was no sense of working together. There was no recognition by that Liberal Government of the rights of the provinces with respect to their resources. We all remember the acrimonious debate between the Atlantic provinces and the federal Government over the offshore petroleum resources. The analogy was drawn that western Canada had complete control over the resources under the ground. Yet Atlantic Canada was not treated in the same way concerning those provinces' offshore resources.

There was a great deal of hope in Atlantic Canada, particularly in Newfoundland, and we in the NDP all jumped for joy when oil and gas was discovered off the coast of Newfoundland. We all hailed that as the avenue for Newfoundland to become self-supporting. As a matter of fact, we were reminded that in the not so distant past Alberta lived on the dispensation of the federal Government. It depended almost entirely on transfer payments. That is the same situation Newfoundland finds itself in today. As I said, we were all very optimistic about those resources because they seemed to be the key to Newfoundland becoming self-sustaining and independent of the federal hand-out which we call the transfer payment. Unfortunately, the Government of Canada at that time, the Trudeau Government, got into a jurisdictional dispute with the Premier and the Government of Newfoundland.

Mr. Tobin: All by himself?

Mr. Rodriguez: Pardon?

Mr. Tobin: Peckford was not part of the dispute?

Mr. Rodriguez: The federal Government said it owned the resources and the provinces said no, they are provincial resources. That was the dispute. We in the NDP said those resources belong to the province. We recognized that in our 1979 convention when we passed a federal resolution which became the policy of the NDP. We recognized that the provinces should have offshore jurisdiction. There was no hesitation to support the Clark Government and the Mulroney Government in recognizing that those resources belong to Newfoundland.

• (1540)

We agree with the general principle of this Bill. It recognizes the need for genuine provincial involvement in the exploitation of the Newfoundland offshore. Having said that, we are now into a new ball game. We have a situation where world oil prices have plummeted. Newfoundland is incapable of proceeding with respect to developing those offshore resources. Well, the Member shakes his head. In fact, the price of petroleum has dropped. What is the incentive for any development to take place if the world price for oil is between $11 and $12 U.S. a barrel and it is going to cost you $15 to $22 to produce it?

We recognize that. We socialists have no problem recognizing that since the province is entitled to develop, the province has a right to those resources, and it is the responsibility of the central Government to help the province.

Therefore, the question has to be raised, what specifically is the federal Government doing to assist Newfoundland? Nothing. We know it is withdrawing the Petroleum Incentive Program. Nothing. The PIP program has been withdrawn in the previous Bill. Nothing is being done now.

The Atlantic Accord becomes an empty shell. It is as hollow as bamboo. It has all of these sub-titles which have no meaning at all: "Joint Management", sub-heading, "Decisions In Relation To Offshore Management". It covers "Suspense Of Vetos", "Ministerial Directives", "Public Review Pricing", "Revenue Sharing". Revenue sharing—if you have not got any revenue what are you going to share? All of those impressive sub-titles in this Accord mean absolutely nothing.

The offshore activity has died over the last year. This Conservative Government has done nothing to restore that activity, nothing whatsoever. The need for some decisive action on the part of the federal Government is quite clear. What has it brought before Parliament? It has brought before Parliament an Accord that offers nothing specifically to Newfoundland, not a thing. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. McDermid) shakes his head. I wish that he could point out specifically in this Accord what it is that the federal Government intends to do to assist Newfoundland to develop the offshore.

The hopes were high, and there is a considerable investment already in the infrastructure surrounding the offshore resource, but unfortunately with the downturn in price nothing is happening.

Even the newspapers in Canada recognize the problem. The local paper from Newfoundland, the Halifax Chronicle-Herald, points out that last week in Newfoundland—and this was dated April 30, 1986—organizations representing 700 companies told reporters that spending on offshore exploration would plummet to $100 million in 1987. Both companies, Mobil and Chevron have already announced major cut-backs in exploration expenditures in 1986 and both carry heavy debt loads.

In light of that, what is the federal Government doing? No one could say now that there is acrimony between the leadership of the federal Government and the leadership in the provincial Government. They both belong to the same political Party.

Mr. McDermid: That has never stopped Peckford before.

Mr. Rodriguez: The Conservative Member for Brampton—Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) casts aspersions on his colleague, the Premier of Newfoundland. He said, "That has never stopped Peckford before". Well, it takes a Tory to know a Tory.

Mr. McDermid: Be honest, John.

Mr. Rodriguez: That is what you said.

Mr. McDermid: I didn't cast aspersions on him at all, I was praising him.

Mr. Rodriguez: That is fake praise.

Mr. McDermid: He stands up for what he believes.

Mr. Rodriguez: One would think that the Hon. Member and the Government opposite, sharing as they do the same philosophical bent as Mr. Peckford, the Premier of Newfoundland, would be more sensitive to the problems which Newfoundland faces.

Mr. McDermid: Do you agree with everything Ian Deans says?

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Peckford is not facing a Pierre Elliot Trudeau; he is facing a lot of his own stripe. He is facing a Conservative Prime Minister. What is it that this Government is doing for the people of Newfoundland with respect to their offshore resources? What are you doing for them? Why are you sitting back and allowing this potential to go down the tubes?

Mr. McDermid: We are not.

Mr. Rodriguez: Well, you are. I welcome you to get up and state categorically what it is that the federal Government is prepared to do with respect to assisting in the development of the Newfoundland offshore. All the indicators are that the Newfoundland offshore is going downhill rapidly. When we socialists said that there was no free market and that in fact one had to establish a procedure whereby the producers and those who work in the industry would have assurance of the price of oil and gas, the Government said, "Oh, no, you have to go to the market-place". The Government scrapped the National Energy Program and went with the Western Accord, which puts oil prices on world prices.

What has happened since then? The world price is gone, but not because of any kind of market activities or market factors. It all has to do with the machinations of the market. It is the big producers, Saudi Arabia, and whoever else, manipulating the market. It has nothing to do with the true market forces as the Tories would like to think. It is a political question. It is one or two world oil producing nations trying to gain dominance in the market. That is the way they want to go. Saudi Arabia is attempting, once again, to establish its control over energy pricing in the world. That is the reality. Why should Canadians suffer as a result of actions taken by countries that are trying to establish a monopoly? We in the New Democratic Party answered that question long ago when we recognized that there is no free market or regulated market. Let us stop playing those games and ensure that Canadians are not exposed to that kind of whim and fancy in the yo-yo effect of the so-called free market.

Mr. Keeper: It is a cartel.

Mr. Rodriguez: There is no doubt about it. We chose not to belong to that cartel, so we have a responsibility to ensure that those workers in the industry and those producers in the industry have guarantees for continuing to exploit that resource and maintain economic activity.

This is extremely important in the case of Newfoundland. The oil industry offshore Newfoundland was to be its hope and dream. How can we forget Premier Peckford's impassioned pleas at those First Ministers Conferences dealing with the Constitution when he stated that this was the great opportunity for Newfoundland finally to exercise ownership and control over the offshore. It was an opportunity for Newfoundlanders to get out from under the welfare blanket of the federal Government.

Mr. Keeper: It's a pig in a poke.

Mr. Rodriguez: As the Hon. Member says, it turned out to be a pig in a poke. The Atlantic Accord does not speak to the specific problem which the petroleum industry is experiencing now.

The federal Government has a responsibility to the people of Newfoundland to ensure the continuation of incentive programs for the exploration and development of resources offshore Newfoundland and Labrador. This exploration and development must take place regardless of the sheikhs and others who are attempting to muscle each other out of the oil industry. Canadians must have priority, and the Government has a responsibility to support the exploitation of those resources off Newfoundland, regardless of the artificially low world oil price.

Of course, there are Conservative Members who represent Newfoundland ridings. For example, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) certainly has a loud voice, but I do not hear it being raised on behalf of Newfoundland. He seemed to be able to have Air Canada move its central operations from Gander to St. John's, but we do not hear him when it comes to a tough question like this. The Government will say that it does not have enough money to support programs for the exploitation of these resources on the East Coast and off Newfoundland. However, where does it find the billion dollars to bail out the banks? Where did "squander woman" find the $1 billion? The Government found that billion dollars but it cannot find the money for these projects.

Mr. Thacker: What bank was bailed out?

Mr. Rodriguez: You bailed out the depositors with $1 billion.

Mr. Thacker: That is different.

Mr. McDermid: Do not forget that the unions got their share.

Mr. Rodriguez: Why can you not find the money to bail out the petroleum industry in Newfoundland?

Mr. McDermid: Listen to the NDP talk about bailing out the energy industry.

Mr. Rodriguez: It would be bailing out the people in Newfoundland, I remind the Parliamentary Secretary. It is obvious that the Government does not care what happens to the quality of life in Newfoundland.

Mr. McDermid: Newfoundlanders do not believe that.

Mr. Rodriguez: You want to continue to hand out the welfare cheques because that is what the Tories believe in.

Mr. McDermid: That is what the NDP wants. That is socialism.

Mr. Rodriguez: In spite of all their yelping and yowling, the Tories really believe in continuing the master-slave relationship between the central Government and Newfoundland.

Mr. McDermid: That is the whole NDP philosophy.

Mr. Rodriguez: In spite of all its rhetoric, the Government is not realy interested—

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense.

Mr. Rodriguez: I suggest that the Parliamentary Secretary go to Newfoundland and tell Newfoundlanders what the Government is offering them. All it is offering is this hollow document. Once the supply lines have been closed and the drilling rigs have been removed, what will the cost be to start it up again in a year?

It seems to me that the Government does not even apply some good old common sense to what is happening. I say that the Conservative Party does not give a hoot about the people of Newfoundland and their future.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I always enjoy listening to my hon. friend, the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez). Apart from the fact that he is full of bull and bad manners, his speeches are always colourful.

The New Democratic Party holds itself out as very forward-looking and one that can supposely anticipate what will happen.

The Hon. Member talked about the price of oil today when we know full well that Hibernia, which is very important to the people of Newfoundland and the rest of Canada for security of supply, will not come on stream until the late 1980s and early 1990s. Anyone will say that oil prices will be higher at that time. This field will carry on well into the 21st century when, of course, conventional oil supplies will become more scarce and the prices will inevitably rise.

Why is the Hon. Member being so negative about Hiberia and its development by saying that nothing is happening when he knows full well that much is taking place, not only between the two Governments but between the parties who will be developing that particular field?

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, on the contrary, we on this side of the House are being positive. We are saying that the Government is negative. It is not providing the money to support its provisions in the Accord. It has consistently eliminated incentive grants and cut back on financial support for the exploitation and development of those resources offshore.

The Government is negative. It is telling the people of Newfoundland that they can postpone their hope for improving their quality of life and standard of living and can continue to live off the federal Government's dole until the 21st century. We are saying that the Government must continue to support the activity at Hibernia and the offshore in general because it is essential, not only to the dreams of the people of Newfoundland but to their pocket-books as well. We in this country have always made that kind of investment in the future. When the railroad was built there was a considerable amount of investment. Millions of acres of land were given to the CPR. It was Sir John A. Macdonald's dream. Do we have to tell the Tories about their own history? That was an investment made with a considerable amount of Government and public support in terms of money and land.

We are talking about the same kind of dream. This is part of that national dream. I think the national dream today is that every provincial Govenment carries itself and holds its head high in terms of its relations with the rest of the country. That is the dream and it is a positive dream.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I have a brief comment to make and a question to ask of the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez). First, I listened to the Parliamentary Secretary say that those people in Newfoundland should not be too pessimistic, that one of these days, in 10, 15, 25, or 35 years, the price will be right and those good people in Newfoundland who are standing on the beach looking at the seagulls flying around where the oil rigs used to be will be able to work once again, and if it is not they and their children, perhaps it will be their grandchildren.

Mr. McDermid: The people in Newfoundland must love to hear you talk about them in that way.

Mr. Tobin: I find that sort of nonchalant view, that sort of laissez faire attitude, let the people stay where they are for the moment view, is about as ridiculous as my suggesting that the Newfoundland taxpayers should give up supporting the operation at Mirabel airport until it becomes profitable. I do not hear Hon. Members opposite proposing that it be shut down. I find their view as narrow and as un-Canadian as suggesting that the people growing wheat out west for which there is currently not a good price and market, should hang up their hoes until the price comes back. I would never suggest that, neither would anyone in Newfoundland. I find it as ridiculous and narrow as anyone telling the dairy farmers in Ontario, who receive $2 million or $3 million in subsidies a year, to quit milking their cows, to store the milk in the udder until such time as milk prices increase. I would never suggest that because we understand that all three of those activities are essential ingredients in what makes this country what it is. That is the mosaic of Canada.

Mr. McDermid: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I did not say we should not develop Hibernia. I said we should continue. I said it would not come on stream until 1990 or 1991. That is the difference. The Hon. Member is misleading the House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member may complete his question or comment.

Mr. Tobin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said, being from Newfoundland with our high rate of unemployment and our desire to be part of this great country called Canada, we appreciate the mosaic which makes Canada what it is. We appreciate the wheat farmer in the Prairies and we want to support him now when he needs help. We support the dairy farmer in Ontario now when he needs help. We support the industrial products industry in Quebec, some of which has not yet reached its full potential, and we stand behind them now when they need help. We want to make our contribution to Canada and we expect the Government of Canada to stand behind us now when we need help.

Does the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt think that there is any industry, particularly those interest groups I have named, which would stand for that kind of logic or rationale coming from the Government? Does he honestly believe there would be anything on the front lawns of Parliament but a pile of rubble if that kind of philosophy were imposed on the wheat farmers or the people who work at Mirabel airport?

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member has hit it right on the head in relation to the Mirabel example. The Parliamentary Secretary said he did not say we should not develop Hibernia but we will not let it come on stream until the 2lst century.

Mr. McDermid: I did not say that.

Mr. Rodriguez: There are myriads of examples. That is what Canada is all about. The examples used by the Hon. Member are very appropriate. We in various parts of the country support the endeavours of Canadians whether they live out west, in British Columbia, or in Ontario. We may very well have to support the shakes and shingles industry. I said in the debate on Alberta oil that we were supporting a floor price for oil. We would want to do that. I do not think we should say: "Oh, well, the price is not right", because when will the price be right? It might be in 15 years' time, but by then the industry will be exposed to another round of monopoly pricing by the world producers of oil. Brazil is coming on, and so is the offshore in Peru. So what do we do when the price starts to fall again? Do we say: "Remember the 15 years we told you about in 1986? Well, you have to wait another 15 years"? We do not have the time in Atlantic Canada. Time is fast running out. If the concept of Canada works, it works because the people of Canada work.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

DUTIES RELIEF ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill C-98, an Act to consolidate various enactments that provide for drawbacks, reductions, refunds and remissions of duties, other than export drawbacks for which provision is made in Sections 82 to 87 of the Customs Act, to amend the customs tariff and to repeal or revoke the enactments so consolidated, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

She said: Mr. Speaker, first, I should apologize to the House for the length of the title of this Bill and its cumbersome and undescriptive nature. However, it is a very important Bill and I am very pleased to introduce it in the House today. This legislation, to be known as the Duties Relief Act, provides for reductions or removal of duties and excise taxes under certain conditions. The Bill is based on a Ways and Means motion tabled as part of the Budget of May 23, 1985.

Before proceeding to outline the provisions of the Bill, it might be helpful if I indicated the context in which these measures have been developed over some considerable time.

The imposing of customs duties on goods imported into Canada is an important tool of our trade policy. One of the objectives of the customs tariff has always been to promote investment, production and thus employment in Canada. The Tariff gives Canadian manufacturers the benefit of a cost advantage, which helps them compete with goods that are similar to or substitutes for the products they manufacture.

There are cases, however, when it may be inappropriate for Canadian manufacturers to pay duty on their imports. In recent years, after consultations with Canadian industry, a number of programs were set up when it was found desirable to grant a remission of duty to certain manufacturers, subject to certain conditions.

• (1610)

The proposed legislation will bring together, in one statute, sections from other Acts as well as various regulations, all of which provide for duty relief programs of considerable benefit to Canadians in manufacturing and other industries. Although the individual measures have been in force for some years, this is the first time they have been incorporated into a single piece of legislation.

To be able to make effective use of these measures, which until now appeared in a variety of legislative instruments, required considerable time and effort by companies to ferret out just what the provisions were and to determine whether they were applicable to their particular circumstances. While the experts knew where to look, business people without this expertise were at a distinct disadvantage. Similarly, those seeking to package the federal Government's programs found the current system difficult to utilize.

[Translation]

This initiative is in line with the Government's commitment to make its services easier to understand and use. The proposed legislation will be easier to administer and will help Canadian companies use the provisions respecting custom duty and excise tax to better advantage. In this respect, it should be well received by local and provincial Governments, especially British Columbia which has asked for these customs procedures to be adopted so that it can attract new investment.

[English]

I would now like to turn for a few moments to the clauses of the Bill itself which take account of differing circumstances. Clause 4 provides authority for the Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to reduce or remove duties on materials, at the time of their importation, to be used in Canadian manufactures. This authority has been used on many occasions to allow manufacturers to import materials not available from Canadian sources at reduced rates of duty in order to better meet import competition.

Under Clauses 5 to 8, duty is refunded only after the imported goods have been used for the purposes specified.

Clauses 9 to 15 provide for the inclusion of the machinery program in the Bill without any change in the scope of the program. However, there will be a streamlining of procedures which will implement a recommendation of the ministerial Task Force on Program Review tabled with the May, 1985 Budget to reduce the paper-burden and delays.

The machinery program, which has been in effect since January, 1968, serves the needs of users and manufacturers of machinery. It provides for the remission of duty on machinery which falls under the program and which is not available from Canadian production. It also ensures that Canadian manufacturers receive the protection provided by the statutory rates in the customs tariff as soon as they can demonstrate a capability to produce the relevant machinery. The criteria for determining availability are set out in the Bill.

Under the current procedure, duties are remitted by Order in Council on a weekly basis. Under the procedure proposed in the Bill, the Minister of National Revenue would publish a list of "not available" and "available" machinery. Such a list will significantly reduce the present requirement for the processing of thousands of applications under the program. Relief will be granted immediately on goods at the time of their importation simply by reference to the "not available" list. Consequently, it will not be necessary, other than in exceptional circumstances, to submit and process specific applications. As a result there will be fewer cases of companies paying duty and then claiming a refund.

Clauses 16 to 19 of the Bill allow processors to obtain relief from duties on goods which are brought into Canada for processing and then exported, if certain conditions are complied with. This means that Canadian firms do not have to tie up large sums of money in duty for long periods of time, which, of course, adds to their costs and makes their products less competitive abroad.

Clauses 24 to 28 permit Canadian firms to send goods outside Canada for repair, to have equipment added or to be further processed and to pay duty only on the value of the work done abroad. One of the conditions to be met is that this work could not have been done in Canada.

The other specific provision I would like to mention at this time is one which corresponds to a section of the Financial Administration Act. Under Section 17 of that Act, the Governor in Council may remit any tax, fee or penalty. In addition to some of the programs I have mentioned earlier, this authority has been used to help such industries as manufacturers of construction equipment and of semi-conductors. It is proposed that there be a separate authority—Clause 37—to deal specifically with the remission of duties and excise taxes.

In summary, I think Hon. Members will appreciate that the new legislation will be beneficial to Canadians and Canadian companies. It will be less difficult to administer and it should encourage Canadian companies to take full advantage of the duty and excise tax provisions which are there for their benefit. It will also be of considerable use to all levels of Government and, I think, to the private sector, as we approach people who want to invest in Canada in order to make this a favourable country in which to invest.

Finally, what I am proposing today is very much in keeping with our philosophy and the commitment of the Government to make our services to business and to the public easier to use, easier to understand and more beneficial in terms of the operation of the country.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

DUTIES RELIEF ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall: That Bill C-98, an Act to consolidate various enactments that provide for drawbacks, reductions, refunds and remissions of duties, other than export drawbacks for which provision is made in Sections 82 to 87 of the Customs Act, to amend the customs tariff and to repeal or revoke the enactments so consolidated, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my Party, the Liberal Party, I should like to comment briefly on Bill C-98 to consolidate the various customs duties regulations. Mr. Speaker, may I say at the outset that we are in favour of the principle of this Bill. The Government has been at it since last year, but all it is doing is continuing the work which was initiated when the Liberal Party was in office, namely consolidating and simplifying this old procedure. We agree with the principle of the Bill, and since it is highly technical we hope that the committee study will enable us to make various recommendations pertaining to a number of statutes so that the law will be more easily enforceable by the Government, and more readily understandable to professionals and businessmen.

Mr. Speaker, we agree and will debate the matter in committee, but before resuming my seat I should like to emphasize that the principle of other similar Bills had been adopted. For instance, if my memory serves me right, I think it was Bill C-59 to amend the Customs Tariff, especially with respect to mail going through customs. Mr. Speaker, we had adopted a measure under which any letter weighing less than 30 grams could be delivered without inspection. As I recall, hardly a few weeks ago the TVA network referred to a service . . . Since May 20 Revenue Canada has been following a new policy in major Canadian cities so that some parcels can be delivered directly to householders and the invoice for delivery and duties is mailed later. This is a source of inconvenience concerning the speedy delivery and inspection of these parcels. The TVA channel showed us on television that there was a large backlog of parcels. Because of cuts in delivery personnel, they were passed without inspection, without considering the 30 grams the Minister and his officials, when they were here before the committee, had assured us would be respected. That it is not the case, however, because of the backlog of parcels for delivery. This is how pornography and in some cases even drugs are being distributed freely across Canada. Mr. Speaker, we all know what a situation like this can lead to.

Mr. Speaker, not long ago, we were told that at the airport in Toronto, customs officers had received instructions from their immediate supervisor not to inspect certain goods and to stamp them as having been inspected, in order to speed up the process, since the Government was still cutting staff.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it clear to the House today that although we agree with the principle of this Bill, we must get the message across to Canadians that we can't afford to let everything go and lose control, and that while it is a good thing to try and simplify the administration of our customs legislation, it is also very important to exercise a certain degree of control.

Before I finish, Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that there is a provision in this legislation that the Department of National Revenue may establish a list of the machinery and equipment produced in Canada and a list of the machinery and equipment that is not. I think we should remember there are many small companies that manufacture machinery and equipment and often cannot afford to advertise. I therefore hope the Department will find a way to ensure that our small manufacturing companies will not be penalized and that every importer of machinery and equipment will have a complete list so that he can check whether certain types of equipment or machinery are already being manufactured in this country.

As I said before, Mr. Speaker, we agree with the principle of this Bill, and we intend to examine the details during debate in committee.

[English]

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, much of this Bill is certainly not very controversial and I doubt the House will spend much time debating the measures of Bill C-98. In essence, the Government wishes to clean up some of the various regulations that exist.

There are some things, not in terms of specifics but in terms of philosophy and motivation behind Bill C-98, with which I do have some concerns. I suspect that the Bill paves the way for free trade zones. There is much in this Bill that would address the various problems that would have to be overcome if we were to establish free trade zones in Canada.

In the past, the Province of British Columbia passed Bill 49 entitled the Special Enterprise Zones and Tax Relief Act, offering special tax status to corporations investing in such zones and surrounding communities. The foundation of much of the thinking of the Bennett Government on free enterprise zones originates with the influential Fraser Institute, the institute that has been advocating free trade zones.

In free trade zones, the normal labour and environmental legislation often does not exist. According to the people who have conceived of free trade zones, and particularly those from the Fraser Institute, a free trade zone is a little geographic space that is thrown back into the 18th or 19th century. Normal tax laws, social policies, labour legislation, environmental protection legislation and all the more modern laws no longer have effect. This allows raw capitalism to operate without any hindrance in these particular areas.

We can see by reading the various clauses in this legislation that the Bill comes very close to paving the way for free trade zones. For example, in 1983, an External Affairs paper entitled A Review of Canadian Trade Policy contained the following statement:

> Canada does not have free-trade zones but it does have a number of tariff policy instruments which achieve essentially the same objectives.

The two programs referred to were the inward processing remission order, and the various temporary tariff items which provide duty-free entry for specific components required in Canadian manufacturing. Indeed, the legislation before us today puts together the various bits and pieces of rules and regulations so that they form a more orderly pattern, thus allowing for the introduction of free trade zones somewhere down the line.

We are also concerned with the general direction being taken by Customs and Excise. I know that this is not directly related to Bill C-98, but I will take this opportunity to raise this matter in the House of Commons today. We are afraid that the various measures the Government has taken in the name of saving taxpayers' money has degraded the level of service provided by Customs in Canada. For instance, no longer are Customs officers looking at individual pieces of mail and parcels that come into Canada. Rather, these parcels of imported goods are sent directly to the recipients without being inspected by Customs officers. The recipients are then required to go voluntarily to Customs to make their declarations and to pay whatever duties are necessary. This method is being undertaken on a trial basis in Montreal and the figures show that the estimated loss of revenue caused by this new practice is far greater than the cost to the Government of employing the various Customs officers.

At the Toronto airport, management decided to allow all sorts of imported goods to be released from bonded warehouses without proper inspection and paperwork. About a month ago, I had the opportunity to tour the Customs facility at the Toronto airport. That facility is one of the largest such facilities in Canada and certainly the Toronto airport is the busiest when it comes to receiving goods into Canada. Customs officers at that airport face very bleak working conditions. There is very little natural light. There are rows and rows of computers, a very inhuman working environment. The employees are required to process mountains of paper every day. Sometimes a computer spits out a particular invoice or entry form because it has not been filled out properly. The goods involved are in the country and are released from the bonded warehouse, but the paperwork still has to be corrected. Perhaps a wrong tariff item was used or some paperwork did not quite fit in. A few months ago a pile of paperwork had accumulated, with entry forms which were improperly filled out or whatever, and management decided to release all the goods. It decided not to figure out the individual items or the incorrect entries. It more or less decided to forgive the whole batch, and we really do not know how much it has cost Canadian taxpayers.

If one's import forms are incorrectly filled out and they end up on top of the big pile with which Customs can no longer deal, it certainly appears that Customs will look the other way. In other words, it appears that there will be one law for one individual and another law for another; it depends upon the draw, so to speak.

Certainly the cut-backs which have affected the Customs Department have resulted in there being demoralized Customs officers across the country. Canada can be proud of the job which the Customs and Excise has done. From speaking with Customs officers at various points across the country, I can tell Hon. Members that the morale is very low. They feel they do not have the ability nor the resources to enforce Canadian law.

I should like to draw the attention of Hon. Members to the fact that other serious problems exist in our Customs Inspection Branch. They have to deal with so much paper every day that very often they do not have the opportunity of properly inspecting and being on top of what is coming into the country. Certainly my office and I are looking into instances in which illegal automatic guns and weapons have been coming through Customs without proper inspection. There is no one in Customs, certainly not in the Toronto airport, who is an expert on guns and knows which guns can or cannot be allowed into the country. Most Customs officers have to deal with a mountain of paper every day. Therefore, very few of the cases of automatic and semi-automatic weapons being imported into Canada are receiving proper inspection. I draw this matter to the attention of the House because it is another indication of the serious problems in Customs and Excise today.

I urge the Government to take heed of my remarks this afternoon and to understand that there are some serious problems. Hopefully it will back away from its gung-ho approach to cutting back on the resources of Customs and Excise. I hope the Government gives it proper study and indeed determines the cost effectiveness of sending out parcels to individual importers without them being expected by Customs people. It should also study the loss of public revenue which this entails and compare it with what it would cost to pay the salaries of some extra Customs officers.

I ask it to take heed of the situation at Toronto airport where the staff has not been increased over the last number of years. However, the traffic coming through that airport has dramatically increased, so we find individual Customs officers are totally overworked and do not have the expertise they require to deal with items such as automatic weapons and other weapons which could prove to be illegal. As I said, I hope the Government heeds my warning this afternoon and takes a closer look at what it is doing to our Customs officers, those men and women who are required to uphold Canadian laws.

I have no immediate objection to Bill C-98, other than my concern that its motivation is to help set up free trade zones in the country. Certainly we in the New Democratic Party will oppose that move. We do not believe that Canada can solve its economic problems by returning to a 19th century model. Canada's economic strength and well-being lie in people being able to work and to receive decent wages from that work, so that they have the power to purchase the goods and services which they need to live good and decent lives. Certainly cheap labour in free trade zones will not help Canada in achieving its goal of economic prosperity for all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. de Jong: On division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It would appear that the surprising dispatch with which the House had dealt with the two Bills before it has found us in a situation where the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse), who was to introduce a Private Member's Bill, is not yet in the House.

Mr. Blais: He is on his way.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I think everyone in the House would recognize and underline the tremendous importance to this place of Private Members' Bills and of Members being given full opportunity to introduce those matters about which they are concerned. I understand that the Hon. Member in question is now taking the final preparatory steps to ensure that he will be able to make a very effective presentation to the House of Commons.

Mr. Boudria: Just what does that mean?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I am sure he anticipates being in a position to have this Bill receive the same kind of speedy attention as was accorded the Government measures recently approved by Hon. Members here.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), on the same point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order. I would like to take advantage of this opportunity to inform the House we are all quite aware of the importance of Private Members' Bills and that it is going to be pretty difficult in a few moments to proceed with that part of today's business.

Just the same, I would like to ask the Chair whether it has any new developments to divulge to the House on that important issue, namely, when a Member's name is drawn and appears on the list and the date is set. I wonder whether the chair has had time to consider a system for rescheduling the Member's turn, maintaining his right to be heard in this House and debating the motion or question tabled in the House by that Member.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair has indeed reflected quite a bit on the question raised by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier. it has for some days been hoping, and still hopes, that Members will reach a consensus on this question.

I was informed there would be a meeting today of the House Leaders of all three parties, and in that case, I hope they will reach a consensus.

However, should they fail to reach a consensus, I should be willing to hand down a ruling on which, I hope, the Members of this House will be able to reach agreement.

• (1640)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to call it five o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock p.m., the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

HIGH INTEREST RATES CHARGED ON CREDIT CARDS

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West) moved:

That the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs be empowered to study the question of excessively high interest rates charged by the issuers of credit cards and charge cards.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to debate this motion. It is true that under the new rules governing the House a committee now has the power to initiate such investigations, which was not the case when the motion was written. It is still relevant for the House to give direction to its committees, which are extensions of the House. It is true that the committee can carry out this mandate with much more enthusiasm and commitment knowing that it has the authority of the House behind it.

I have submitted this motion to the House and I hope it will receive support from all quarters. It concerns a major consumer problem. Two-thirds of the adults of Canada now use credit cards. The average adult has three of these cards. About 40 per cent of credit card users pay interest charges. Are they receiving justice? I put the question to you, Mr. Speaker, that while interest rates affecting consumers and investors have gone up and down in the main, interest rates on charge cards and credit cards have not. The bank rate goes up and down but the interest rate on credit and charge cards remains the same year after year. For example, MasterCard issuers, such as the Bank of Montreal, the National Bank, the Victoria and Grey Trust, raised their interest charges a few years ago to 21 per cent when the bank rate was very high. Since then the bank rate has come down but the charges to consumers have not. Canada Trust charges 18.45 per cent. The Royal Trust began issuing its MasterCard last fall with a discount rate of 14 per cent. This rate has now been raised to 14.75 per cent yet in the same period of time the bank rate has fallen.

Are those rates too high? That question has already been answered by a competitor of MasterCard, namely VISA. It has issued ads which said, "Are you fed up with paying high interest rates on your MasterCard accounts?" The industry has put the question which I have raised before the House today. Obviously charges are too high.

We must also ask the question to issuers of VISA cards. In addition to an annual or a transaction fee, VISA charges now range from a low of 15.9 per cent to 18.6 per cent by four banks, the Bank of Nova Scotia, the Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank, and the Toronto Dominion, in spite of the fact that the bank rate has come down. It is not only the issuers of MasterCard and VISA that are imposing charges far above what is justified by the rate issuers have to pay for the money they use, but gasoline credit card charges are much higher still. Companies such as Sunoco, Imperial, Texaco, Shell and Gulf as well as PetroCan—which used to say "It's ours"—now charge 24 per cent. But the real biggies are the department stores, such as the Bay, Eaton's, Sears and Canadian Tire which charge 28.8 per cent. They impose high charges constantly, consistently and invariably in spite of the fact that what they pay for the money they borrow, as the foundation of their credit, goes up and down. Are they aware that inflation has come down and the cost of borrowing money has dropped from a high of 21 per cent, which might well have justified the high rate they charged a few years ago, to a bank rate of 8.43 per cent today?

Mr. Orlikow: Why doesn't the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) do something about it?

Mr. Stackhouse: We invite the NDP to join us in putting the question: are those companies justified in charging rates without some explanation that will give Canadians confidence that the rates are justified? That is the purpose behind my motion, Mr. Speaker. It is a motion that will direct the subject to the Finance Committee and give it the opportunity and the mandate to do a thorough investigation.

I am aware that companies claim that the cost of administration and various other related costs require them to charge them to customers. Maybe they do, but let them show cause. Let them put forth evidence that will support the apparent high, I believe excessively high, interest they charge credit card users. Let them not treat consumers as though they were mushrooms fit only to be in the dark. Bring the question into the light. Let us have some respect for Canadians. Companies should give reasons, solid, hard, factually based reasons, to show that their policies are justified. It is not enough for management to say: "We need this money because the cost of credit and administration is so high", without supporting those claims with evidence.

Representatives of management have called me since I first went public with the issue. It was from the government side of the House that the issue first came before the public and Parliament.

Some Hon. Members: Oh?

Mr. Keeper: Why don't you bring it forward as a government motion?

Mr. Stackhouse: The NDP may not like that, but it is a fact. The point is that these companies—

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Not only is the Member wrong when he says that the interest rate issue was first raised on that side of the House as a government matter—

Mr. Gustafson: That is debate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The first part was certainly not a point of order.

Mr. Keeper: Neither was the Member's comment. Let me come to the point, Mr. Speaker. The Member makes reference to himself being a Government Member and raising the matter of interest rates. This is Private Members' Hour. If the Member wants to act as a Government Member, let him bring forward a public Bill.

Mr. McDermid: Get up and debate the subject then.

Mr. Stackhouse: A Member on this side of the House—which was the phrase I used—was the first to introduce the subject of credit cards, not interest rates in general. I invite the support of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper). I welcome it. When and if a Bill is introduced, I will be glad to have his support there, and I am sure consumers will be happy to have his backing.

I put this subject before the House and I hope the issue will be sent from here to committee, not only because consumers have a right to know but because Parliament has a duty to ask why these interest rates are being charged.

Mr. Keeper: What about the Government?

Mr. Stackhouse: Parliament is not only a place for passing legislation, it is also a forum in which the concerns of the public can be debated, studied and where the light of scrutiny can be shone upon them. People will know that those who represent them are expressing their concerns. This has been then traditional role of Parliament.

In centuries past it was always a practice, when the Crown asked for financial support, for the Commons to reply that the people's grievances must be heard. Here we have a serious long-felt grievance. On behalf of people who have written to me from coast to coast I bring it to the floor of the House and ask Members of the House to support my motion in this regard so we can study the matter thoroughly. Here is a grievance, if ever there was one. Issuers of credit cards are paying less for the money they borrow. The receivers of credit are paying more for the money they borrow. Where is the justice? Let Parliament find the answer to that question. The banks, oil companies and department stores have their lobbyists who rightly and openly come before us. We are the lobbyists for the consumers, and I hope all sides of the House will join together in supporting consumers today.

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Member for bringing this motion forward. On May 22 the Minister said that the interest charges also include service charges. I believe the banks are charging interest, not service charges. Their service charges are covered by the merchants. People should know that every merchant, whether he be a restaurant owner, barber shop owner or tailor, has to pay a percentage fee. It could be 3 per cent, 4 per cent, 5 per cent or 1 per cent. The fee is negotiated in accordance with the volume of business paid for by credit card. Whatever the banks are charging to the consumer is therefore purely interest. I agree with the Hon. Member when he says that MasterCard charges 21 per cent. VISA charges

18.6 per cent. The oil companies charge 24 per cent, and the department stores charge 28.2 per cent. Definitely there is something wrong. We know interest rates have gone down, so how much handling charges can they have? Talking about handling charges, if it costs so much, how come the banks are advertising so much? How come the banks encourage people to use their cards?

If memory serves me right, when credit cards were instituted you used to pay a fee. Some respected credit card companies still charge a serious fee. Every month you get a statement you have to pay the full amount. There is no question of deferring your payment. VISA and MasterCard tell you on your statement that the minimum payment is $10 or whatever. You can pay that and they charge you interest on the balance. We are not dealing here with just a credit card, it is a personal loan. Everyone with a credit card has a line of credit. You can buy whatever you want and at the end of the month you can pay in full. They do not charge you interest if you pay in full because they are getting handling charges from the merchant. That is why I say it is an interest charge and not a service charge. If you pay at the end of the month there is no interest. They are collecting a service charge from the merchant. However, if you only make a partial payment, they charge you interest.

I think the banks are taking advantage of this credit line they created for consumers. It gives them a lot of business. Just consider the number of credit cards issued. Practically everyone today, including myself, use credit cards. However, when people borrow money, business people or whoever, they do not have to pay interest rates like that. Why should the consumer have to pay those interest rates?

I agree that the Government should look into this. The Minister said he is looking into it, but he is off on the wrong foot because he believes that the interest rate includes service charges. That is not the case. I repeat, service charges are paid by the merchant.

[Translation]

—I want to say these interest rates are unacceptable. We agree. We support the Hon. Member's motion, and I hope the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs will be able to conduct and inquiry and summon before the committee representatives of the banks and credit card companies and ask them to explain why they still have to charge rates of as much as 18.6 per cent, 21 per cent, 24 per cent or even 28 per cent. This is unacceptable, when we realize that today, the interest on a personal loan varies from 10 to 12 per cent.

[English]

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) has brought this matter to the House. We certainly will agree to let this matter go to committee. However, I have to say to the Member that he was lecturing the wrong people. I do not think there is a single Member of this House who will defend the banks or the oil companies or the department stores, all of whom are ripping off the customers who do not pay their monthly accounts immediately. The people who refused to take any action when this was raised by Members of Parliament are the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté), the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall). When they were asked about this, their response was that, first, they are quite prepared to leave it to the market to decide what interest rates should be. As well, without any investigation or question, they adopt the defence of these companies that they are not overcharging. There is no investigation by the Ministers concerned or their Departments. That is why I say that the Hon. Member has brought this question to the wrong place.

Last November 20, when interest rates came down again, we asked the Conservative Government, when it was boasting about low interest rates, low interest rates for whom? We pointed out what was happening to people who do not pay their outstanding bills immediately. They had no answer. There was no action. I point out to Members of the House that there are 16 million credit card holders in Canada, half of whom pay off their balances each month and do not pay any interest. Who are they? They are people in the middle and upper-income brackets. I am sure there is not a Member of Parliament who does not pay his or her account every month without being charged interest. That leaves 8 million people who pay 18 per cent to 21 per cent interest if they do not pay up at the end of the month. They pay 24 per cent for an oil company credit card and 28 per cent for a department store credit card. The Hon. Member gives some credit to VISA. I understand that VISA charges a service charge, a dollar a month whether you use it or not.

Mr. Boudria: No, 25 cents a transaction.

Mr. Orlikow: If the Hon. Member is going to give credit to VISA, we better see what that adds up to.

Let us look at the reality. These rates have not essentially changed for consumers since September, 1984, when the Conservative Government, of which the Hon. Member for Scarborough West is a Member, took office. From September, 1984 until today interest rates have dropped from 12.28 per cent to 8.43 per cent. These robbers are still charging the same rates they established in 1981 when prime money rates were well over 20 per cent. What has the Government said about this? Members, including the Member for Scarborough West, have asked the Government, and both the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) say they will not interfere with the market. The market magic will fix everything. What has it fixed?

• (1700)

The market has provided us with gold cards at $75 a year, great for high-income earners who pay off their bills every month. The market has allowed organized retailers to cut their costs in retailing with credit cards by reducing the charge to the retailers for using cards to less than 2 per cent. They have not passed that on to the consumers. Consumers have not received anything in the way of reduction, even though the New York Federal Reserve Bank in the United States calls this type of financial dealing "the single most profitable of all loans made by major banks". Of course, they are individuals, they are people in the lower income brackets and they have no political clout. So the American and Canadian Governments have let them get away with it.

The question which we should ask is, what would the Government have done differently if it really wanted to ensure that consumers receive a fair share of the lower interest rate on their charge card purchases? This is the kind of question the Member for Scarborough West should ask his Minister. It could have investigated thoroughly whether the costs of operating the charge cards are as high as the banks say they are. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs just took their statement that they were not overcharging as gospel truth and refused to do anything about it.

Our information is that about half of the charge card costs are administrative and half are for the cost of money. If the cost of money has declined, as we know, and as every Conservative Member wants us to know, because of the great policies of that Government, if they declined by 3.85 per cent from September until now, then the card holders could have had the interest rate reduced by 2 per cent, because that is half of the reduction in the interest rate. That would have saved the bank credit card holders over $100 million a year. If you add to that the overcharging by the trust companies, the oil companies and the department stores, we are talking of probably close to $200 million. We are talking about huge amounts of money, and the Government has been quite content to take the credit card companies' word that they are not making much money, or that the market will somehow work in the consumer's favour. Second, the Government, if it felt that consumers' interests were being sacrificed to those of almost everybody else, could have acted on the consumers' behalf and begun a rigorous examination of consumer credit and sought some legislative relief. We do not need another study. That is again just putting off dealing with this very serious problem.

One solution which we favour, and which the Government should be looking at, is a ceiling rate for credit card interest, which would show that the market is sensitive as interest rates come down or go up. An interest rate ceiling on cards pegged to the amount that banks actually pay for their money would be very helpful.

We ought to have heard from the Government some sound consumer advice about the cost of credit. We should not be saying that the market will decide, when the market is rigged against the poor consumer. There has been a real rip-off of hundreds of millions of dollars which the Government has permitted. We should be urging consumers to find alternative sources of credit. We should encourage them to form credit unions of their own where they do not exist. We have begun to educate the people so they do not get ripped off too much by the income tax discounters. Why do we not begin to educate the people who get into trouble because of buying too much and get caught in this credit card squeeze?

We will support this motion going to committee, but to us it is just another way of postponing any serious, real action on what is a disgraceful situation, the rip-off of hundreds of millions of dollars every year by the banks, by the oil companies and by the department stores. That rip-off should be dealt with now, not a year or two from now when the Finance Committee has debated this issue again.

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to say just a few brief words on this particular motion put forward by my hon. friend from Scarborough West. I would like to begin by applauding and heartily congratulating the Member on this motion in his personal attempts, both in Question Period in this House and in debate, in addressing this question of credit card interest rates.

This particular Member has, in many respects, assumed this as one of his personal issues. I know it probably comes as a great satisfaction to him today to hear Members from all Parties address this matter in a non-partisan fashion. I think there is certainly a feeling among all three Parties that the matter of credit card interest rates must be dealt with.

To deal specifically with interest rates, this matter has obviously come to the attention of the public after at least three to four years of great fluctuations in rates where they hit a peak bank rate approaching 20 per cent and then, of course, fluctuated from there. It has really been only in recent months, since the election of this Government, that we have seen interest rates begin to stabilize and, in fact, drop. I was very pleased to hear the Member from the New Democratic Party refer to a bank rate now under 9 per cent. This gives considerable urgency to the matter when we have a bank rate at 8.3 per cent, and the disparity between that bank rate and credit card interest rates is probably the greatest in many years.

Dealing with the argument of a relative rate for credit cards, it is obvious that credit card rates will be higher than established loan rates, somewhat higher than the prime rate, as I think all Members agree there is an administrative cost built in.

Clearly the motion of the Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) to have this matter referred to the Finance Committee is a timely measure. The committee structure of this Parliament under the new reform now gives the standing committees the ability and the opportunity to examine issues within the general ambit of a particular portfolio responsibility. What better way to examine this issue that affects millions of Canadians than to have the Finance Committee examine it?

I do disagree with my friend from the NDP who said that to have the issue studied by the Finance Committee is an unrealistic way of addressing it. When one looks at the Finance Committee and the reputation it is beginning to develop in this Parliament, I think one cannot criticize it for failing to address issues front and centre.

To have the Finance Committee study this matter is a timely and a relevant approach. I think it is the right approach. Again I congratulate the Member for Scarborough West for addressing this very important issue of credit card interest rates, and on behalf of my constituents I support wholeheartedly a study of it by the Finance Committee. I urge support for the Hon. Member's motion and I agree with it fully.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Prior to giving the floor to the Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria), may I point out that the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has designated tomorrow as an allotted day, therefore, the item that was scheduled for Private Members' Business will be put at the bottom of the order precedent, this without prejudice to any ruling that we may make at a later date.

[Translation]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I also welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate on the motion moved in the House by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse).

[English]

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Member for bringing forward this motion to our attention this afternoon. I want to draw your attention to the very important component of this motion which refers to the excessively high interest rates charged by the issuer of credit cards and charge cards. Indeed, the really important ingredient of the motion before us today is to recognize, as the Hon. Member has, that these rates are excessive and totally unacceptable. The wording of the motion sends a very clear message to the Finance Committee about the work that is required of it.

While I am not proposing an amendment, I hope the Finance Committee will take other costs into account when it studies this motion. I hope the Hon. Member will agree that the entire costs of credit cards should be studied. I am not only referring to interest rates on credit cards but also to the consumer fees that are charged in many cases. For example, one credit card company charges 25 per cent for every transaction up to a certain amount. Other credit card companies charge a fee at the beginning of the year, with no subsequent fees. A variety of fees are included in one form or another, which really add to the cost for the consumer who is purchasing a variety of goods.

The Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) will probably be a member of that Finance Committee and I hope he takes that suggestion into account when the committee studies this matter.

I think Parliament should look into the impact that credit cards have on pricing. This refers to fees that are charged to businesses. If a retail store knows that it will have to pay 4 per cent in order to have the service of a credit card company and knows that half of its business will be conducted by credit card, obviously it will increase the price of its merchandise by 2 per cent in order to recover its cost. This represents another cost to the consumer that is not often mentioned.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I recall going south of the border several times and in some American cities people who do not use credit cards are given discounts. For example, a gas station will offer a 2 or 3 per cent discount to customers paying cash rather than using a credit card. This is the kind of initiative they take in some American states, but so far I do not remember ever seeing the same kind of offer here in Canada. In my opinion this would be one of the main issues which should be reviewed by the parliamentary committee which will study the credit card system and the excessively high rates charged by the issuers of these cards, as our colleague from Scarborough West so clearly indicated.

To conclude very briefly, Mr. Speaker—because hopefully the motion will be adopted this afternnon and be considered by the parliamentary committee which deals with financial matters—I would like to echo my other colleagues in commending the Hon. Member for Scarborough West for bringing this motion before the House today and suggesting that the question of excessively high interest rates charged by the issuers of credit cards be considered. Indeed we hope that the fact that we are debating this issue in the House today might encourage the issuers of credit cards to lower their interest charges. In my judgment it does not make any sense at all that banks can lend money at 12 or 13 per cent, and yet issuers of credit cards charge 18, 21 or 24 per cent. Worse still, some department stores charge 28 per cent to finance the cost of the products they sell.

As we know, a less enlightened consumer will often be tempted to use a credit card instead of borrowing from a bank or trust company. I would suggest this may be too convenient a way for him to buy what he wants, but later on he realizes that his purchase is financed at these excessively high rates. I believe it should be hoped that all consumers would use their credit cards constructively, such as using it for a month and then paying the total balance at the end of that month. But, unfortunately, the economic condition of some of our constituents are such that often when they need something, they use their credit cards to purchase it and unhappily cannot afford to pay in due time. For those people especially, we should do what we can to reduce interest rates, as suggested by our colleague, the Hon. Member for Scarborough West.

It is therefore my hope that when we do consider the matter, we will be looking not only at interest rates as suggested by the Hon. Member, but also at the impact on prices that the whole credit card system has, and finally indirect costs. I am referring to the monthly charges or the once-a-year fee required from credit card holders, and also to the costs to businessmen who use such a service. Because often the businessman is almost snared in. He has no choice whether he will honour the card or not. He knows that many customers will use their cards, so he has no choice—he must use the service, even though sometimes credit card issuers charge costs that are sometimes much higher than what they should be.

It is therefore my hope that the parliamentary inquiry will have all the scope needed.

Mr. Pierre Blais (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise on the motion introduced by my colleague for Scarborough West. I would simply emphasize the fact that in its present form, the motion would empower the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs to deal with a matter it can now deal with on its own initiative.

Indeed, since the new Standing Orders were introduced recently, committees of this House can consider matters coming under their jurisdiction without a specific reference from the House of Commons.

Although it adds nothing to the powers of the Committee, I suggest the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West reflects the importance of the matter to him.

The vote that will certainly be held, Mr. Speaker, will allow Members of this House to express their personal interest for the matter raised by my colleague.

I think this is the approach the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs should take when considering the result of the vote and before deciding whether or not it would be appropriate to take the matter under consideration, as it can do.

Another thing which needs to be pointed out, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that basically the matter of credit card interest rates falls under provincial jurisdiction, so it would be up to the provinces to take action should they feel that current rates are excessively high. An affirmative vote by Members of the House would certainly give them a significant and additional incentive to do so.

Still, Mr. Speaker, the House would be well advised not to anticipate the findings of the study which the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs might choose to undertake. That is why I think the word "excessively" used in the motion implies that the House is already convinced that the interest rates are too high, even before the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs has had an opportunity to study the question.

Mr. Speaker, I would therefore propose an amendment to the motion of the Hon. Member, substituting the words "the current level of" for the words "the question of excessively high". This amendment would not change the basic idea of our colleague from Scarborough West, nor would it express a value judgment. Therefore the motion would read as follows, Mr. Speaker:

That the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs be empowered to study the current level of interest rates charged by the issuers of credit cards and charge cards.

I hope my colleague will accept this proposition, for I would be pleased to support the amended version of the motion of my colleague from Scarborough West.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion proposed by Mr. Blais, seconded by Mrs. Duplessis, is as follows:

That the motion be amended by deleting the words "the question of excessively high"and substituting therefor—

Mrs. Duplessis: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Louis-Hébert (Mrs. Duplessis) on a point of order.

Mrs. Duplessis: Mr. Speaker, I am not the seconder of this motion. The seconder is the Hon. Member for Cariboo—Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: So be it. The motion proposed by Mr. Blais, seconded by Mr. Greenaway, reads as follows:

That the motion be amended by deleting the words "the question of excessively high"and substituting therefor the words "the current level of".

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: I don't want to hold up debate on this subject because I agree that the motion as drafted was in order and in fact, I think this is a study that is long overdue. I simply want to remind the House that there are certain ways of doing things in the House of Commons, and I feel this particular amendment might be ruled out of order by the Chair if it would refer to specific citations in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. However, Mr. Speaker, before arguing the relevance of the motion or the amendment, I would like to say to the previous speaker that, of course, committees are empowered to examine matters referred to them by the House of Commons, but I wish the House would also recall that the powers of committees are limited with respect to other matters—and we can see this in Standing Order 96(1) and (2)—which concern the department and the department's responsibilities. As the Hon. Member said himself, this is a matter that primarily concerns the provinces, that is the power to set interest rates. So I will not read how the committee could examine this matter of credit cards for which interest rates are charged that are judged to be excessive.

Mr. Speaker, I simply want to ask the Chair, and I will be brief, to refer to Citation 437(1) and (2), Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, and—

● (1720)

[English]

If I may be allowed to use the English text, which is the one I have before me, I will quote Citation 437(1):

An amendment setting forth a proposition dealing with a matter which is foreign to the proposition involved in the main motion is not relevant and cannot be moved.

Citation 437(2) reads:

An amendment may not raise a new question which can only be considered as a distinct motion after proper notice.

The reason I raise it is that I believe that by taking out the word "excessive"—

[Translation]

Removing the word "excessive" practically destroys the core of the motion. I feel this broadens the debate and takes away the weight, the power and—

Mr. Boudria: Raison d'être.

Mr. Gauthier: raison d'être of the motion, which, according to everything I heard today, is the point Hon. Members have been trying to make. They feel there are rates that are excessive and which are imposed by the issuers of credit cards.

And in that connection, Mr. Speaker, I cannot agree to having the question put on this motion without asking the Chair for a ruling, after perhaps considering Citation 437(1) and (2), and indicating to me whether or not you agree.

Mr. Blais: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On the point of order, I need not hear the hon. Member for Bellechasse, if that is what he was raising for. First of all, I want to thank the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) for giving me advanced notice of his opposition to the procedural form of the motion moved by the Hon. Member for Bellechasse. I have read Beauchesne's Citation No. 437, but with all due respect to the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier, I think that the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Bellechasse is indeed in order, and I base my decision partly on Citation No. 425, and partly on a close examination of Citation No. 437.

The debate therefore is on the amendment, and the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) has the floor.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, we have just indicated in this House how important it is for us to consider this matter, in view of the fact that interest rates are excessively high. The agreement of all members of this House in the previous debate was to the effect that interest rates are excessively high. What would be the purpose of this examination if the key words added by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) were removed?

[English]

Paraphrased, the new motion would read: "—be empowered to study the question of interest rates charged by credit card and charge card issuers". This issue has come to our attention because the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) has referred on many occasions in this House to the fact that these interest rates are unacceptably high, not because we have decided all of a sudden that the House should have a debate purely on this issue but for other reasons. This issue has come to the floor of the House of Commons because one Hon. Member has, on repeated occasions, asked questions about this topic of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté) and has today again in his remarks talked to us about these excessively high interest rates. He has not talked about the excessively low interest rates, nor about current interest rates. We are concerned about the high interest rates charged on credit cards. That is the reason for our debate for the last 45 minutes.

I must say that I disagree with the Hon. Member for Bellechasse (Mr. Blais) and his proposed amendment this afternoon. If this amendment passes, he has ruined the good work of his colleague seated immediately behind him, the Hon. Member for Scarborough West. The Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley) earlier in the House spoke of the work of the Hon. Member for Scarborough West and the mission he had to bring to the House the cases of these excessively high interest rates. If it was so important, then why is it now the view of certain Hon. Members that it is no longer relevant? I fail to understand it. Perhaps other Hon. Members can explain to me why they have to be afraid of telling the issuers of credit cards that they are charging excessively high interest rates? I ask you, Mr. Speaker, has any one of your constituents ever complained to you about the excessively low interest rates charged by issuers of credit cards?

[Translation]

But if such people exist, Mr. Speaker, there are none in my riding; perhaps there are some in the Bellechasse riding, I don't know, but not a single constituent in my Glengarry—Prescott—Russell riding has ever come to me to complain that the cost they had to pay to credit card issuers were too low. All my constituents agree that they are too high and they all support the motion moved by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West to the effect that they were excessively high. This being said, Mr. Speaker, I must object to the amendment moved by the Hon. Member for Bellechasse, and I dare hope that when the Hon. Member for Scarborough West meets him behind the curtains, he will give a piece of his mind to the Hon. Member for Bellechasse for moving such an amendment.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Blais, seconded by Mr. Greenaway:

That the motion be amended by deleting the words "question of excessively high" and inserting the word "present".

• (1730)

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the amendment carried. On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse).

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, may I have unanimous consent that the vote on the main motion be taken now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I would like to second that suggestion.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit that in the future, when we vote on a Private Members' Bill, we should vote by row and not according to Party. We are not voting on a Government measure but on a Private Member's measure. I hope the Chair will consider that in the future.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order. I thought it was a shame that this historical occasion was marred by the fact that we took the vote according to Party instead of according to rows. I would have attempted to get up on a point of order in the middle of the vote but I did not. I think next time around that should not happen at all.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The points made by the two Members are well taken by the Chair. The problem this time is that the sheets on which we record the votes——showed the names according to parties.

[English]

The points are well taken and the matter will be taken care of.

The question is on the main motion as amended. All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Mr. Blenkarn: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

I declare the motion carried.

The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES—SUPREME COURT DECISIONS—REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT. (B) FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE AGENDA

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, on May 1 the Supreme Court of Canada rendered three judgments on minority language rights which, regretfully, cut back on what were perceived to be, and in some jurisdictions this was the practice over the years, constitutionally entrenched rights. These judgments dealt with cases originating in Quebec, Manitoba and New Brunswick.

• (1810)

In the Quebec case, Duncan MacDonald, a Quebec Anglophone, argued that by virtue of Article 133 of the Constitution of 1867, he had the right to a court summons in the English language, whereas he had been summoned to court by the City of Montreal in the French language only.

Unfortunately, the Supreme Court ruled that Article 133 gave the state, that is the city, a province or the federal Government, and in this case the City of Montreal, the right to choose the language of summons before a federal or Quebec court, and not the citizen called to answer before the court.

This is a regrettable and illogical judgment. Surely the rights entrenched in Section 133 of the Constitution, which allow for the use of French or English before the courts, are to benefit individuals and not the state. When I asked the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) about this matter on May 5, and in particular whether he would propose a constitutional amendment to fill the gap left by the Supreme Court judgments, he answered, first of all, that no rights were lost by these judgments, which is absolutely ridiculous. Everyone that I have met and read on those judgments agreed that rights were lost, including the Commissioner of Official Languages.

Second, he answered that he would propose ordinary legislation to deal with the situation, but not constitutional amendments. Ordinary laws are not enough because they can easily be changed and do not prevail over other legislation. They do not provide for entrenched rights. I am not surprised by the attitude taken by the Minister.

When the MacDonald case was being argued before the Supreme Court of Canada in December of 1984, his Department argued, in a factum that he signed, the very position that the court adopted on May 1, 1986, a few weeks ago, namely that Duncan MacDonald did not have the right to a summons in English.

This not only represents narrow bureaucratic thinking on the part of the Minister and the Government, but it is a very offhanded way of dealing with entrenched language rights, which are supposed to help ordinary citizens. It is also another broken promise by the Conservative Party, in this case made to the official language groups and minorities in Canada, that their language rights would be protected.

Once again tonight I ask the Minister of Justice or his Parliamentary Secretary, who is here representing him, to use good, common, political sense and to propose a constitutional amendment which will truly guarantee these important rights to our language minorities.

Mr. Chris Speyer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, let me state immediately that the federal Government is deeply committed to greater protection for official languages in the area of the administration of justice that goes beyond the minimum constitutional requirement regarding the use of English or French before the courts. The progressive official languages policy of this Government is based on ongoing improvements in this indispensable area of our national life.

As the Hon. Member knows, the Government expects to bring forward, before the end of the year, new legislation to revise the Official Languages Act. We are working on proposed amendments that will not only ensure that this Act is in full compliance with the Constitution, but will strengthen and enhance language rights so that this vital piece of legislation truly reflects our progressive policy.

The Hon. Member can rest assured that we intend to fully address the questions that were in issue in the Supreme Court case to which he has alluded. Special care is given to measures to enhance language rights in the administration of justice and, in particular, in proceedings before federal courts and tribunals.

ENERGY—EXCO ENERGY CORPORATION—PLIGHT OF CREDITORS

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, when we were debating in this chamber in 1980-81 the national energy policy and the PIP grant system, I recall bringing to the attention of the House the potential for abuse. If the Government is going to cover 80 per cent of the costs of the taxpayers of Canada, it is not hard to adjust the costs one way or another so that, in fact, the taxpayers end up paying just about everything.

• (1815)

I do not know whether this has been done in the case of Exco Energy Corporation. That matter might eventually be decided by the courts. However, last December, mainly on behalf of the creditors, I asked what was happening with respect to the Exco fiasco and if there was going to be anything left for the creditors when the dust settled. The reply at that time was, in fact, a non-reply because the matter was under investigation by the RCMP.

It is my information that the RCMP investigation was completed some time in February. Since that time a wall of silence has descended over the whole affair and we know no more about it than we did last December.

I recall in March, 1985, talking with the PIP administration people and asking them to conduct full and complete audits of Exco Energy, formally known as Forward Resources. I believe I was in touch with them before that time because there was a common suspicion in the area in which they were operating that something was untoward. There were reports of exploration programs that cost five or six times what would be the cost for a normal, prudent operator.

Eventually—some time last year—they were not able to meet their commitments. I understand that they owe approximately $7 million in the Northwest Territories alone and considerably more than that in the Province of Alberta, and perhaps in British Columbia and Yukon. The bankruptcy of Exco has been responsible, at least in part, for a series of bankruptcies in the Northwest Territories, including Beaufort Foods, BeauTuk Marine and Buffalo Air. It is a domino effect which commonly occurs in these situations. Hardships are widespread among many people who are creditors of Exco or creditors of the creditors of Exco.

There are many unanswered questions that I hope the Parliamentary Secretary will address in his reply. First, we would like to know whether Al Langard, one of the principals involved in Exco, is back in Canada. It was said that he had left the country, but let us hope that he is back. Did the RCMP investigations reveal any wrongdoing? The investigations are over and we have not heard anything.

Will any charges be laid in connection with Exco? Was any of the cash or other assets of Exco transferred to other corporations such as AJL Investments Ltd. immediately before the bankruptcy occurred? Did Exco make application for and collect more in the way of PIP grants than it lawfully had coming to it?

Are there any PIP grants still collectable by Exco or the trustees of Exco? That is an important question because if there is anything left for the creditors, it will probably be paid out of PIP grants that are payable to Exco. I understand that a $10 million payment was made some time last year. That was seized by the bank. The bank considered itself first on the list and took the $10 million. There was nothing left for anyone else. If there are further Government payments to Exco, will they go to the creditors or will something of a like nature happen again?

What the creditors really want to know is, as I asked in December, when the dust settles, will there be anything left for them at all? Those are the questions I sincerely hope the Parliamentary Secretary will be able to answer.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I always enjoy the questions coming from my friend, the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson). They are very thorough. I can tell him right now that I can answer some of the questions he posed and others I cannot. It is difficult to discuss this entire matter with any degree of candidness. It is currently under RCMP investigation and the subject of a case before the Federal Court of Canada. However, I would like to make the point that the federal Government does appreciate that a number of small businesses in the Northwest Territories and Alberta are facing financial difficulties as a result of the Exco Energy case.

Many Members of the House may be aware that last year the creditors of Exco Energy Limited, or Forward Resources Limited, as it was formerly known, voted to place Exco into bankruptcy. As a consequence of this action, the affairs of the company are now in the hands of a trustee who will distribute the realizable assets of the company.

As Members of the House will also be aware, Exco trustees have just filed a suit in the Federal Court of Canada against the federal Government claiming failure to pay $26 million in PIP grants, resulting in damages of $110 million. It should be noted that concurrent with the bankruptcy proceedings, the RCMP investigation is proceeding to determine whether or not charges will be laid against the company. Naturally, we cannot comment on either the court case or the investigation.

With respect to the Petroleum Incentives Payment moneys owing to Exco, I wish to state that officials within the Petroleum Incentives Administration have been conducting an intensive audit since the spring of 1985. Well over 90 per cent of the audit has now been completed. Audit results to date indicate that no additional moneys are owed to Exco by the PIA. In fact, results would indicate that the federal Government is also a creditor of Exco.

The audits were presented to the trustee on a well-by-well and program-by-program basis as they were completed. The trustee has been invited to respond to the audit findings prior to final decisions being taken on them. The trustee has never responded to the audit findings, although some were presented to him over six months ago, and has chosen to serve the Crown with a statement of claim in the Federal Court for $26 million in PIP incentives and $110 million in damages. The Crown filed its statement of defence on May 15, 1986.

In light of the legal action in the Federal Court, the Crown has no choice but to proceed with its claim in the bankruptcy proceedings. As the criminal investigation of the RCMP is still under way and the civil action is before the courts, I must decline comment as to the case. I am sure the Hon. Member will understand the predicament in which we find ourselves.

Adjournment Debate

SHIPBUILDING - MORATORIUM REQUESTED ON IMPORTATION OF VESSELS CONSTRUCTED ABROAD. (B) REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCE POLICY

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have the opportunity this evening to raise once again the failures of the Government in the area of shipbuilding policy. On April 25 I put questions, first, to the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), and then to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), pressing the Government to develop a policy for shipbuilding. I pointed out at the time that the Minister was undoubtedly aware that most of the work being done in Canadian shipyards is Government work for the Coast Guard and the Navy and that commercial work is almost ended, leaving yards like the ones in Collingwood and Thunder Bay to likely soon be without work.

I would like to expand a little on that because the situation in the Great Lakes yards is among the most serious which faces us.

Port Arthur Shipbuilding, of course, in my riding, is not simply a building yard. It expects work to appear at various points in time as repairs have to be carried out. It is a yard which has building capacity, however. Since it belongs to the same company which owns the yard in Collingwood, there is a possibility that if the Government had the right policies, we might see work being carried out at Portship and at Collship as well. I have skilled workers in my riding, as there are in Collingwood, who would be more than happy to undertake this work.

As a result of the lack of policy of the Government, what we find instead in one yard after another is workers who see the completion of contracts drawing near. They are concerned about the future. At Collingwood that is the situation which stares workers and the community in the face for this summer. In the St. Lawrence Valley, the yards at Lauzon and Sorel face these types of short-term anxieties. In fact, at Lauzon we have had the satisfaction of seeing a CN Marine contract for a second Cariboo-type ferry boat placed.

Just last week a large delegation of shipyard employees and members of Sorel and other communities came to Ottawa to plead on behalf of Marine Industries Limited for more work for their yard. This is the situation that faces one yard after another. There is a good deal of work in progress in some yards. As the Canadian Patrol Frigate Program comes into work in Saint John, and to some extent the St. Lawrence Valley, we will see work toward the end of this decade. However, the Government has done nothing in the area of policy to ensure that there is more than this government work being done.

We have seen very little government work added to that which the last Government put in progress. We have not seen any activity with respect to the statement of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in August of 1984, when he was the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, to say that a top priority of a PC Government would be to create a more viable and prosperous shipbuilding industry. We have seen no action on the specific promises given at that time that a Progressive Conservative Government would apply the normal 25 per cent duty on foreign-built fishing vessels over 100 feet in length imported into Canada. We have seen no action on the promise that a Progressive Conservative Government would extend concessionary financial terms to domestic customers of Canadian shipyards. Nor have we seen any action from the Government on a doubling of the rate of duty for the temporary importation of foreign vessels.

Instead, what we have seen is something that is of enormous concern to people in the industry, something that surfaced in the context of the anxiety at Sorel. What came to light was a letter from the President of the Versatile Corporation, which owns Versatile Davie and Versatile Vickers in the St. Lawrence Valley, as well as Burrard Yarrows Corporation in Vancouver and Victoria, to the Minister of Industry and Commerce in Quebec. In the letter was a suggestion that this Government, instead of developing a shipbuilding policy to create work, had instead authorized him to begin discussion toward a rationalization of the industry.

He states in the letter that at a meeting in Ottawa with the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté), it was decided that a rationalization should be authorized. He was asked to lead in that rationalization. This is from the President of a corporation which owns two of the yards. He was asked to undertake what could well be a closure of the yard at Sorel. The same letter, which, ironically was dated a week before my question here in the House of Commons, states in part:

> It was pointed out to me at that time that owners of shipyards in other provinces were also being asked to consider similar procedures.

He points out in the letter that shipbuilding in Canada not long ago employed 14,000 workers. The number has now fallen to 6,500 workers, and it is anticipated that we will soon have only 4,000 workers employed.

• (1830)

It is absolutely essential to have some of those policies put into effect so that we do not have to look at a rationalization which the Government is pushing. A rationalization may occur in the industry independently, but let the Government take the lead by establishing a moratorium on the imports of ships for domestic use. Let it lead by introducing concessionary financing for Canadian domestic ships. Let the Government act on the promises it made during the election campaign to apply a 25 per cent tariff on fishing vessels over 100 feet. Let it accelerate both the naval program and the Polar VIII ice-breaker program begun last September.

The Government's stand in this area is pathetic. It has had a record of no action and of promises not kept. I say this time after time. I hope to God that we hear something today as my constituents and residents of other communities across the country are waiting for action. When are we going to get it?

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, at least the Minister does not tend to be hypocritical. My colleague has raised a very important issue, one to which we are devoting very close attention. The Acting Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Mazankowski) is seized of this question and has been aware of it for many years, as the Hon. Member, if he appreciates the history of this Chamber, will understand. The matter has been raised in depth on a number of occasions with the unions, management and the entire marine industry in Canada. The future of our shipyards is one on which I need no lecture from the Hon. Member.

I suggest that there is no easy solution. The Government has already made an enormous contribution to the survival of this industry by providing through its own orders the great bulk of business now on the order books. It has already shown flexibility in its contractual dealings with the shipyards. For example, it agreed to renegotiate its contracts with Halifax Industries Limited so that the company could complete orders it already has with the Department of Transport for some Coast Guard vessels with ice-breaking capabilities.

The Government will continue to support the shipyards through public procurements. The Polar VIII ice-breaker program, the program to which my colleague referred, is under study and the patrol frigate program is under way. These two programs alone will provide some 10,000 person-years of employment to this very hard pressed industry.

To assure the future of the shipyards for the long term, they must also obtain commercial work. In the face of the collapse of world demand, coupled with the addition of new capacities in countries such as Korea, competition is fierce in all the markets of the world. We must, therefore, make sure that Canadian shipyards work at very high levels of efficiency without imposing an economic burden on the users of Canadian built ships. I am sure my colleague understands that.

For these reasons, the Government will be undertaking discussions and will be continuing discussions that are already ongoing over the course of the summer with the industry, labour and the provinces to solicit proposals for dealing with the future of the shipbuilding sector. The Acting Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion will be prompt to advise his colleagues in the House and the industry as soon as a solution can be found. To that end, we invite the views of the distinguished Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

WAYS AND MEANS

TABLING OF NOTICE OF MOTION

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Pursuant to Standing Order 84(1) I would like to lay on the table in both official languages notice of ways and means motions to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act. Pursuant to Standing Order 84(2), I ask that a day be designated for consideration.

COMPETITION TRIBUNAL

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec East): Mr. Speaker, as chairman of a Legislative Committee, I have the honour of tabling, in both official languages, the Legislative Committee's report on Bill C-91, an Act to establish the Competition Tribunal and to amend the Combines Investigation Act and the Bank Act and other Acts in consequence thereof, with amendment.

[English]

This Legislative Committee has sat extensively during the months of April and May, and on many occasions, for whole days at a time.

[Translation]

Thirty interest groups and individuals appeared before our Legislative Committee, and about 100 amendments were proposed. Half of these were accepted. We therefore believe this is a fair and equitable report that takes into consideration the proposals submitted by the witnesses who appeared before the Committee and by Committee members who were most diligent in their work and in attending the Committee's proceedings. The result is that a stronger and more comprehensive Bill can now be reported back to the House.

[English]

In closing I would like to say that acting as chairman for the committee has been an enriching experience for me personally, and I would like to take this moment to thank all the staff of the Members, the House of Commons and the Library, who made the work of the committee flow so smoothly.

PETITIONS

REQUEST FOR REPEAL OF TARIFF ITEM

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present two petitions today, one respectfully calls upon the Parliament of Canada to repeal tariff item 99201-1 of the Customs and Excise Acts, which violates the freedom of expression provisions in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

REQUEST FOR REMOVAL OF POSTAL STATION

Mr. Don Blenkarn (Mississauga South): A second petition, which calls upon the Parliament of Canada to remove the Clarkson Postal Station in Mississauga because it cannot accommodate the staff or the traffic congestion which ensues on the site where the post office is located.

REQUEST FOR REVOCATION OF CHANGES TO UI REGULATIONS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of presenting today a petition from people in my riding who are residents of Cap-Pelé, Robichaud and Barachois and are asking to have the changes in the unemployement insurance regulations repealed.

Motions

[English]

DECOMMISSIONING OF LIGHTHOUSES—REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have again the pleasure of presenting a petition to the House from many thousands of people who live on the coast of British Columbia who are seriously concerned about the closure and automation of lighthouses along the coast. They view this as a dangerous action by the Government and urge that a public inquiry be called to assess the dangers and damages done by this program. They note that search and rescue will be diminished, lack of communication, lack of accurate weather reporting, and they urge the Government and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to call a public inquiry into this matter.

REQUEST TO REVOKE CHANGES TO UI REGULATIONS—BENEFITS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): I would like to present one of several hundreds of petitions from the residents of Victoria, British Columbia, who are calling upon the Government to revoke the recent changes to the unemployment insurance regulations which negatively affect former members of the Canadian Armed Forces, former members of the RCMP and other police forces, firefighters and other men and women who are forced in midlife to seek new employment.

POSTAL DELIVERY SERVICE TO NEW RESIDENTIAL AREAS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present, pursuant to Standing Order 106, a petition organized by Mr. Ed Tchorzewski (MLA for Regina North East) and signed by the residents of Park Ridge in the City of Regina. These residents pay taxes and pay the same price for postage as anyone else, but do not receive the service of door-to-door mail delivery. Canada Post's policy of not extending mail delivery to new residential districts means that the people who reside in Park Ridge, Regina, will receive less consideration than residents in more established communities.

Therefore, this petition of 196 citizens of Park Ridge are praying and calling upon the House of Commons to initiate a change in Canada Post's policy so that mail delivery services will be provided to those neighbourhoods that meet delivery criteria.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS—PRESENTATION OF FINAL REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions between the Parties, and I think you will find a disposition to accept by unanimous consent and pass without debate the following draft order:

That, notwithstanding the Order of the House made on Wednesday, June 12, 1985, the Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations be empowered to present its final report not later than Wednesday, June 25, 1986; and

That a message be sent to the Senate to request that the Senate unite with this House for the above purpose.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has the unanimous consent necessary for the introduction of that motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Shall the motion be carried?

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—CANADA-U.S. TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

On the Order: Government Orders

Consideration of an Opposition Motion—

That this House urges that the Government press upon the Government of the United States the unanimous views of the House of Commons as expressed in its resolution of May 23, 1986, and insist that the United States rescind the 35 per cent duties on British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles and guarantee that similar measures or other possible trade action will not be applied to Canadian products in the future if the present comprehensive trade negotiations are to proceed.—Mr. Tobin.

Mr. Speaker: By consent, the motion is moved by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner).

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I so move.

I want to thank the House for the unanimous consent in allowing me to appear on behalf of the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) who will be following me in the course of the debate. I want to congratulate that Member from Newfoundland, who represents a very heavy forest industry in his riding, for having brought this to the attention of the House with such despatch.

The issue that absorbs us this morning and throughout the day concerns double-dealing by the President of the United States and the American Government because the imposition of a 35 per cent tariff against British Columbia red cedar shingles and shakes offends the very spirit and runs contrary to the very thrust of the current free trade negotiations between our country and the United States. The imposition of the tariff ran directly counter to the efforts of two Governments to enhance our respective access into each other's markets. In fact, as it affects B.C. red cedar and, indeed, the entire lumber industry, we already have a free trade arrangement that is now being offended rudely by a 35 per cent tariff. I might say that this tariff is so severe that at 35 per cent it is in effect a barrier that prohibits the entry of B.C. shingles and shakes to the American market.

This double-dealing also reflects the incompetence of the Government in the handling of our negotiations with the United States. We now have a situation where the Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) have no compass, no sense of direction and no sense of purpose. On the two occasions of the so-called Shamrock Summits with the President—where the only winner was St. Patrick and certainly not the people of Canada—the Prime Minister boasted of his special relationship with the President. He boasted of a closer relationship that he was fashioning between our two countries. Yet the President, the Prime Minister's partner, friend and confident, the man that he said was only on the other end of the telephone, was the one who used his presidential discretion and imposed this 35 per cent tariff on B.C. red cedar.

That special relationship was replaced by bombastic rhetoric, by promises of retaliation and by threats from the Prime Minister as he escalated his vocabulary to feign outrage and turn on his erstwhile partner. We have something to say about that because we will prove in the House that the Prime Minister was not surprised and had received full warning from the Premier of British Columbia well in advance of the presidential action.

The negotiations have been handled very badly. Prior to sitting down with the United States, the Prime Minister had already thrown away the Foreign Investment Review Agency, thrown away the National Energy Program and thrown away the book publishing industry. He had already received a weak commitment on acid rain and the President had made a unilateral deal with the U.S. Senators on our Canadian lumber industry in order to get free trade on the fast track.

Not only have the cards been thrown away, the timing for beginning the negotiatons was lousy. We have a $20 billion surplus with the United States. The average American Congressman thought that his or her real problem was Japan with its $50 billion surplus. Now they are looking directly at us and analysing our trade. This will not be a philosophical discussion with the United States, but a hard-nosed, eyeball-to-eyeball negotiation. The Americans will look at every item and every number and their objective in these trade negotiations will be to reduce our surplus of $20 billion down to zero. That is what they are trying to do with the shakes and shingles. That is what they are trying to do with lumber and fish. That is why they would like to reopen the Auto Pact. That is the message we are getting now from the President of the United States.

Of course, the negotiations were undertaken on the false premise, as we have heard from many of our independent institutes across the country, that the very fact of negotiating a trade arrangement with the United States would dissipate protectionist pressure in the U.S. Congress. That is a naive assumption. These negotiations seem to have done just the opposite. Focusing the attention of the American Congress on Canadian trade has perhaps even exacerbated those protectionist instincts or, at least, rather than being vaguely focused around the world against Japan or Europe, they have been focused on Canada as well.

We do not know how to respond to this issue from day to day. I am going to make a statement in another forum on the whole free trade subject. We set forth fully our position on September 26, when I spoke before Your Honour for an hour in the House of Commons. Our caucus met on January 19 when we again set out our position which carries the unanimous support of our caucus. We will further define that position when we assess the situation. However, we have not seen any facts.

[Translation]

There has been no clarification, no education of the public, no parliamentary debate to give Members of all parties a chance to contribute their insights, reflexions and opinions and those of their constituents. Not a single opportunity was given. Even the documentation provided by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) was censored. Every single page, and there were even a few pages missing entirely, every single page had been doctored prior to producing the documentation, so that Canadians are unable to judge the pros and cons, the advantages and liabilities, the cost and benefits of a future agreement. And provincial participation is practically non-existent. There is some confusion here. What do the words "full provincial participation" mean? The Premier of Ontario doesn't know, the Premier of Quebec doesn't know, the Premier of British Columbia doesn't know. These talks are being pursued in an amateurish, clandestine and absolutely incompetent fashion.

[English]

Our negotiators' lack of understanding of the American position has been absolutely negligent. Apparently we were taken by surprise by the close vote and the opinions of the 20 U.S. Senators on the Finance Committee of the United States Senate. What was our embassy doing? What was the 100 person trade office, set up under Mr. Reisman, doing here in Ottawa? Why were we taken by surprise?

I suggest that the Government should not have been surprised about this issue as well. I am holding a copy of a letter to the Prime Minister of Canada from the Premier of British Columbia, the Hon. W. R. Bennett. It is dated May 7, 1986. I will read it into the record:

My dear Prime Minister:

As you know an investigation has been conducted under Section 201 of the U.S. Trade Laws regarding imports of wood shingles and shakes from Canada. The International Trade Commission has determined injury to U.S. industry and has forwarded recommendations to President Reagan.

The Commission is divided in its recommendations with one-half recommending no restrictions and the remaining three Commissioners recommending a 35 per cent tariff be applied.

The matter now rests with the President who has full discretion in deciding what action, if any, is to be followed. He is required to announce his decision on or before May 24, 1986.

I am deeply concerned that the President may in fact decide to impose a tariff, perhaps for extraneous reasons.

He may decide to show that he is not reluctant to act on Section 201 cases. Furthermore, in view of the difficulties surrounding the Senate Finance Committee decision to provide the President with fast track authority, he may decide to demonstrate a tough posture vis-à-vis Canada.

This matter is of great importance to Canada and, in particular, to British Columbia. The jobs of an estimated 4,000 workers across Canada are threatened. I urge you to contact the President directly so as to convince him not to act in any way against Canadian shingle and shake imports into the U.S.

The final two paragraphs merely reinforce that particular argument and the letter is signed by the Premier of British Columbia.

In other words, the Prime Minister was warned directly by the Premier of the province most intimately affected. He was urged to contact the President of the United States. We do not know what was done. We suspect nothing was done. Yet despite this knowledge, the Prime Minister feigned surprise and outrage. It was a phoney reaction. It was a manufactured reaction and cosmetic bombast. The Prime Minister knew about the issue. He should not have been surprised. He had been warned by the Premier of British Columbia.

We have a very serious situation in British Columbia involving the B.C. cedar industry. I met yesterday in my constituency office with a committee representing the entire lumber industry of British Columbia. It told me that this tariff has the following direct job and dollar effect on the Canadian economy; first, the loss of 4,000 direct jobs with an annual payroll in excess of $100 million; second, raw materials suppliers face the loss of revenues in excess of $100 million; third, transportation loss of revenues resulting in approximately $55 million; four, suppliers to the industry face losses in excess of $25 million; five, financial institutions face losses of revenues of $36 million on short-term financing, not to mention the long-term financing and the problem now facing the whole industry in terms of the availability and continuance of credit. These direct effects total more than $344 million per year. That is concentrated in B.C. cedar and the shingles and shakes industry, because white cedar was excluded, and related industries, which are directly involved. With respect to the indirect dollar effect, the industry representatives made the point very well.

The irony of the situation is that the action taken by the President is not going to help the American shake and shingle industry because it faces, as do our Canadian suppliers, a declining North American market. Cedar used to represent a considerable percentage of roofing in North America. It is now down to 3 per cent because of the competition of asphalt and tile. This will leave the American industry crippled because it is now going to be without raw material to manufacture its part of the industry. Moreover, it is going to be absolutely captive to the big lumber and logging companies of the United States, the Weyerhaeusers, the Georgia Pacifics, the Boise Cascades. It will now not have any competitive counterweight against the tremendous economic power it faces. The President's action will not help the American industry but it will absolutely cripple, even destroy, our lumber industry in British Columbia because at 35 per cent we do not have a tariff, we have a wall which cannot be climbed.

Is this a shot across the bow of the Canadian lumber industry? Is this a harbinger of things to come? The Canadian lumber industry has become a pawn in the trade discussions with the United States. I have already recited the letter from the President of the United States to the senior Republican Senator of the State of Oregon, Senator Packwood, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the U.S. Senate which piloted that fast track resolution. He is also the senior senator from the largest forest-producing state in the Union. He received a separate deal. That deal was consecrated in a letter we put before the House from the President to the senator saying to him, and to other senators, we suspect: "Don't worry, boys, about these free trade negotiations with Canada because the lumber negotiations will be kept separate and I, as President, will enforce the full weight of the American law to protect our lumber industry". And that is what has happened.

Now a countervail action has been filed by the American industry against our Canadian industry, not only in British Columbia but in New Brunswick, Ontario, Newfoundland, Quebec and right across the board. The law has not changed. Our industry won a countervail action in 1983. The facts have not changed. But perhaps there is connivance on the part of the administration that this time a countervailing action will succeed. The President still has until June 6 to use his discretion as to whether or not he will receive that petition from the American industry. If the President refuses the petition, the action does not go any further. If he receives the petition, the whole quasi judicial process in the United States proceeds inexorably towards some kind of conclusion. Of course, the Canadian industry suspects the worse. It suspects that the attitude of the United States' administration has changed adversely against Canadian interests.

Our position on this issue can be summarized in this way. First, we want the Prime Minister to call the President of the United States directly on the telephone, use the advantages of that vaunted special relationship with the President and accept the President's invitation to call him any time he has a problem. We want him to ask the President two things. We want him to ask the President to reverse the 35 per cent duty on B.C. shingles and shakes and to exercise his discretion to refuse the countervail petition of the American lumber industry against the Canadian lumber industry. We want our Prime Minister to suggest to the President that while trade negotiations are continuing between our two countries, we negotiate with the United States—and it can be done simply by an exchange of letters between the President and our Prime Minister—a standstill agreement or what I have called a "cease and desist" agreement, so while any general discussion on trade are being taken between our two countries the unilateral harassment actions like the imposition of tariffs or countervailing actions on both sides of the border cease and desist.

If we do not get a satisfactory response from the President on these issues then, as my colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) suggested in the House at the end of last week, we as a country should seriously consider reassessing these negotiations with the United States on trade, or suspend them until we get some understanding of what is going to happen by way of the unilateral harassment actions.

We do not believe that this is the time for retaliation. We believe this is a time for cool assessment by our Canadian Governments. This is a time for negotiation and a time for ascertaining the real mind of the President and of his administration. I am supported in that view by the President of the IWA, Jack Munro. I am supported in that view by the Premier of the Province of British Columbia with whom I spoke on Sunday. I am supported in that view by the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia with whom I met yesterday, and I am supported in that view, I understand, by the Member of Parliament for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain), the chairman of the Conservative caucus. That is the attitude we ought to take, not this sort of catch up ball which the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) are trying to play in order to make them look tough after they have looked like patsies for the last year and a half. It is not going to work.

Finally, we want a statement from the Government that if the tariff persists there is adjustment for our industry and for our workers in British Columbia who have been been put absolutely out of business.

I know exactly what I am doing here, and if the Government had known what it was doing we would not have had to put this motion forward. That is our position. We look forward with great interest to what the Government will propose. We look forward with great interest to see how the Prime Minister responds. This issue could have been foreseen. It was highlighted to the Prime Minister. It was signalled to him by the Premier of British Columbia. Any feigned surprise will not wash. Any phoney, bombastic, cosmetic rhetoric just will not fly. We present this motion to the House with the utmost conviction and the utmost sense of outrage at the futile conduct of the Government throughout this whole matter.

• (1130)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain).

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, in a spirit of resolving a situation which is very traumatic and dramatic for western Canada, I appreciate the concern that all individuals and all Hon. Members have taken with respect to this issue that deals with an acute situation that has arisen, especially in my riding.

I have a couple of questions to ask the Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition. He alluded to the fact that this is an inappropriate time to commence free trade talks because of the $20 billion imbalance. What is the position of the Liberal Party? Does it have a position as a Party? Why has it not enunciated it before now? We have been listening.

Ms. Copps: Are you deaf?

Mr. St. Germain: I say to Hon. Members that we will not stand in our places and say that we will not listen to other people. We have maintained from the very beginning that we will consult and conciliate with every Canadian in seeking a resolve to some of the major problems which face the country, especially in terms of improving the plight of Canadians who seek jobs. My first question is, will the Hon. Member cleary enunciate the position of the Liberal Party? The Hon. Member says that this is an inappropriate time. I would like him to respond to the 300 protectionist Bills which are sitting in the Congress and in the Senate of the United States. Does he feel that they will just disappear or that some fairy godmother will come down and strike these things off the face of the earth? I would like him to respond to those questions if he could, please. I would like the tone of this debate to be positive so that we can all work toward a resolve.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I can understand the embarrassment which the Hon. Member feels. I sympathize with his constituents since they are very deeply affected by this issue. We are trying to find a solution.

First, the position of the Liberal Party was set forth in a one-hour speech I made on September 26 in the House of Commons. The Prime Minister introduced the resolution in a short, vague and ambiguous speech which took 15 minutes, and we have not heard from him since in the House of Commons.

Second, he can find our position in a caucus statement dated January 19 which carries the full force of our caucus. It was distributed to the House and to the media. It sets forth our position. I believe I will have an opportunity to render that even more precisely before the House rises.

I am saying that the position of the Opposition has been very clearly set forth. Our problem is, as it is the country's, that we do not know where the Government stands. There has been no statement of principles. There have been no facts which set it forth. We have not been told what is negotiable and what is not. We have not been told what is on the table and what is not. The provinces are in the dark. The Canadian public has no facts at all.

We believe the timing was bad because a $20 billion surplus is not the best opening gambit. Nor is it good timing to begin negotiations in an election year when key U.S. Senators and key U.S. Congressmen will not be able to look at this issue with the type of objectivity which one would expect and hope in a free trade arrangement.

In terms of the protectionist sentiment in the United States, the naivité of the Government was and remains, I suppose, that beginning negotiations would dissipate that protectionist sentiment in the U.S. Congress and those 200 Bills would just disappear. That has not turned out to be the case. My response to the Hon. Member is, what price does he want the country to pay to dissipate that protectionism? We are looking constructively at the discussions. We have laid out what we believe are the benchmarks. However, the negotiations have been handled so ineptly that the country is shaken to its roots by the incompetence of the Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fulton: Mr Speaker, I have two short questions to which I hope the Hon. Member will respond. Yesterday, when he met with the same group with which I met, he indicated that it was his position, and I assume the group thought that it was the position of his Party, that he wanted to have the comprehensive trade talks suspended until the 35 per cent duty in relation to shakes and shingles was removed. That is not what the motion suggests. I wonder whether you could clarify if that is your position that is, if the 35 per cent duty placed against shakes and shingles is not removed then you want those talks to terminate.

The second question is in relation to log and bolt exports to the United States. Mr. Clark is on the record as opposing the movement of any cedar logs or bolts—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is starting to use "you" again. I remind him that questions are directed through the Chair. I think he knows he should also refer to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Fulton: I wonder if the Hon. Member could expand with respect to what is the position of the Liberal Party in relation to the log and bolt exports.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, when I met with the representatives of the shake and shingle industry I expressed our view exactly as I have expressed it this morning. First, we want the Prime Minister to test the President and the President's willingness to withdraw the tariff against B.C. red cedar shakes and shingles. Second, we want the Prime Minister to test the President as to whether or not he will exercise his discretion and refuse the petition on countervail against the Canadian lumber industry. Third, we want to know whether he would agree to some sort of cease and desist or standstill agreement with Canada while the negotiations are proceeding. Failing that, we would have to consider reassessing or suspending our free trade negotiations with the Americans. That was my position then and that is my position now. Let us stay with shakes and shinges and we will deal with the other matter on another occasion.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition has said that he opposes retaliations which would trigger a trade war.

Ms. Copps: So did you!

Mr. St. Germain: I oppose any action that would trigger a trade war. If the Hon. Member's position is one in which he seeks a solution to this problem, does he have a definitive position? I go back to this question because the Liberal Party should have a clearly enunciated position and it does not seem to have one.

Mr. Frith: Where have you been?

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Wake up, you've been sleeping too long.

Mr. Frith: Bye-bye, Gerry.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that I have to allow time for a reply. Will he complete his question or comment briefly, please.

Mr. St. Germain: They said bye-bye in 1983 and 1984 and I proved them wrong then, and I will prove them wrong again.

Ms. Copps: You didn't have shakes and shingles hanging around your neck then.

Mr. St. Germain: The Hon. Member wants the Government's position which, without question, has been clearly enunciated. I ask him for the position of the Official Opposition. He says that he gave the position in a speech and that he clarified it further as he went along. I say this in sincerity. We want as much constructive criticism or as many constructive points as can be brought forward in this debate. It is an issue critical to British Columbia and to all of Canada.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I say to the Hon. Member that he ought to review what I said in the House on September 26. He ought to review our caucus statement as well. He ought to bring both documents into his own caucus and ask the Prime Minister where he stands on all the issues we have outlined before the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Second, we will be as constructive as we can. On behalf of our caucus I believe I have put forward a very constructive proposal to the House this morning. I hope the Hon. Member will reinforce it through the very eminent position he holds in the caucus of the Conservative Party.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in this debate. I would like to begin by taking a close look at the motion before us. In my view, it does not address what has taken place; it wanders, and I think it is worth reading. It is as follows:

That this House urges that the Government press upon the Government of the United States the unanimous views of the House of Commons as expressed in its resolution of May 23, 1986—

The motion reads very well up to that point. It refers to the motion introduced by the Leader of my Party and unanimously supported by the House on Friday. The motion then goes on to read as follows:

—and insist that the United States rescind the 35 per cent duties on British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles—

It reads well to that point. However, it then goes on to say the following:

—and guarantee that similar measures or other possible trade action will not be applied to Candian products in the future if the present comprehensive trade negotiations are to proceed.

That is about as vague as one could possible word the tail-end of a motion. It basically means that the Liberal Party is not calling for a suspension of the trade talks at this time because Liberal Members do not view this as being a matter substantive enough to have those talks suspended.

I think we have to look at what the House did. We have to be very careful and methodical about how we will get the 35 per cent duty removed. I learned yesterday that the President has not yet signed that duty into law. The announcement was made by the White House, but there is still a vague opening. There is still an opportunity for us to remove the 35 per cent duty.

How do we go about removing the duty? The Cabinet is meeting today to look at placing retaliatory duties against oranges, for example, or products from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, northern California and other areas. We must ask ourselves how the U.S. administration will respond if those kinds of tariffs and duties are placed against their products. That will pound the final nails into the coffin of this issue. There is no way either Reagan or the U.S. administration will back off once those kinds of retaliatory measures begin.

I would encourage Members of the House to take some time to read about what happened in the late 1920s and on into 1930 when the Smoot-Hawley Bill was introduced in the United States and kicked off a trade war that had effects all the way around the world. Part of what precipitated the Smoot-Hawley process and the trade war was Canadian wood products. It is an extremely sensitive area and we have to look carefully at what has been said so far because we are beginning to see the personality of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) revealed.

We heard the statements made by the Prime Minister here in the House on Friday. As the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) has pointed out, the Prime Minister knew for three weeks that this was being precipitated. We knew that Paula Stearn, the Chairperson of the International Trade Commission Secretariat that looked at the shake and shingle issue, voted with the other two members of the commission that there be no countervailing duty brought against B.C. shakes and shingles, but the other three members of the commission voted for it. Then the President stepped in and here we have to deal with the whole question of good-faith negotiations between the President and Canada.

It is clear that there was not a clear launch to the negotiations. I will deal with that more extensively in few moments. Time and again, the Prime Minister has said that we have to give the benefit of the doubt in most of these situations to the President of the United States. Anyone who has ever played cards knows that the first time someone is caught cheating at cards, very tough action has to be taken because that person will continue to cheat while playing cards if he finds out he can get away with it.

The American administration managed to pillory a $250-billion B.C. industry without a peep from the Premier of British Columbia. He has not asked that the talks be suspended. He is waving in the wind on retaliatory action. The Prime Minister used the harshest words used in this century against the President of the United States but, so far as I have been able to learn today from people here in Ottawa, he has not had a response to that telex. There has not been a response to Mr. Clark's initiative with Mr. Shultz, nor has there been a response to any External Affairs or embassy initiatives.

We have here a very clear example of bad faith on the part of the President of the United States. I think we have to look back with care to earlier this month and recall the note scribbled on the bottom of the letter written to Senator Packwood saying: "Don't worry about lumber, Bob, we'll fix it".

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Don't worry about timber.

Mr. Fulton: That's right, don't worry about timber. We should recall the letter of May 8 from the President to Mr. Packwood of the Senate Finance Committee indicating that they would try the bilateral talks process, giving us a full week to try the entire envoy process. How marvellous to have a full week in order to negotiate for the largest singly-traded bilateral commodity between Canada and the United States, a $25-billion industry thrown to the rocks. The President went on to say, "or unilateral trade action will be taken". It has now been taken and the Prime Minister had better wake up to what is going on.

I hear the Leader of the Opposition, the Prime Minister, the Premier of B.C. and others talking about putting some kind of fund together to assist the shake and shingle workers who have in some cases already lost their jobs and in others are about to lose their jobs. Where will the shake and shingle market be diversified to? Will it be diversified to the Arctic? It will not be diversified into Japan, Great Britain or other areas of the United States. The fact is that there are some other stick-handlers in this game at whom we as Canadians had better take a close look.

The tile producers and asphalt shingle producers in the United States are a part of this action. As well, the Washington, Oregon, Idaho and northern California shake and shingle producers want our bolts and our cedar logs because they do not have enough raw product to maintain their own position in the market.

I would like to deal for a moment with market penetration because that is one of the hot issues being used by the Americans. They say that we have gone from a 50-50 relationship to a 75-25 relationship. The reason we have greater participation in their market is that we have spent new money on shake and shingle production in British Columbia. We have more raw product available to us. We have a more competitive production process so we may sell that product at $38 to $40 per square to the United States.

Let us deal with that argument head on. While the United States has taken almost 150 petitioning processes of one kind or another against Canadian products since the so-called free trade negotiations began, Canada has not taken a single one against the United States. We have not protected our potatoes, our fish and many other commodities adequately. The U.S. is winning part of the argument right now. The Americans know that because of the level of bank loans to some of the shake and shingle producers in B.C. those producers are going to need to at least move bolts or logs to the United States market, and that is of course exactly what those guys want.

I was pleased to hear what the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) had to say on May 27. At that time he said that the Government will not permit the Canadian shake and shingle industry to be exported across the border. That view is supported by the shake and shingle industry coalition with which I met yesterday. That coalition has already written to the Province of B.C., and I assume that letter will soon be in the hands of the Prime Minister, taking the exact same position. The shake and shingle workers do not want those 4,000 shake and shingle jobs in B.C. simply exported across the border so the American shake and shingle mills can pick up our jobs.

We now know where Liberal Members stand. They do not think that this is enough of a bad-faith issue, a British Columbia issue or a Canadian issue, to call for the suspension of the trade talks on this issue alone. They are opposed to any kind of countervailing action or any kind of retaliatory action, but they have given themselves all kinds of escape routes rather than hitting the nail on the head. If at the very beginning of bilateral negotiations, such as those into which we have entered, we find that we are being dealt with in bad faith, as we have now discovered, we have to change the rules of the game and get back to square one.

I think it is worth while for Canadians to know just exactly who in the United States and who in Canada is interested in pushing for free trade talks. Since last September when the Prime Minister announced this initiative, I have never been stopped on the streets by anyone saying: "Jim, I want you to get in there and fight for these trade talks, they are going to get me a job". Do you know who in Canada is fighting for free trade? Do you know who is leaning on Simon Reisman and the Prime Minister? One simply need totter down to Bay Street and see who is going back and forth to Mr. Reisman's office, the $78,000-per-day operation, in their limousines. It is the big-seven families; the Bronfmans, the Reichmanns, Power Corporation, Conrad Black and Brascan. It is the big integrated operations that can move capital and branch plants easily back and forth across the border.

Who is for free trade in the United States? I should like to refer to the second page of Mr. Yeutter's evidence before the United States Senate Finance Committee. He referred to those U.S. industries which were most interested in seeing high Canadian tariffs eliminated—furniture, telecommunications equipment, home appliances, cosmetics, electronics, paper products, recreational boats, aluminum products, wall coverings, and leather. Then he pointed out that U.S. beer and wine interests wanted a good crack at the Canadian market, as well as poultry, eggs, dairy products, meat, and so on. There is the pressure.

How can we get a President and an administration that acted in bad faith during a process such as this to back off? How can we do it? I do not think it is by taking retaliatory measures against Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and California. I do not think that will assist at all. As I said earlier, it will pound in the last of the nails. It will also ensure that Secretary of Commerce Baldrige, on June 2, proceeds with the countervail action against Canadian softwood lumber.

The Leader of the Opposition said that it was just a shot across the bow of the Canadian lumber industry. My colleague reminded me that it was a direct hit, midships at the water line, for the shake and shingle industry. As it sinks, so too do our efforts in relation to the lumber issue. Contrary to what the previous speaker said, we know that case law has changed in the United States. Anyone in Canada interested in the forest industry who has not read the countervailing position, or the case law in the carbon black case from Mexico, had better read it pretty damn quick. If Secretary of Commerce Baldrige and the President decide to proceed against the Canadian forest industry per se, we are in real trouble.

Backing that up, of course, is the fact that there is no longer 300 "Goosey-Lucy" Bills in the U.S. Congress. They have been amalgamated into one Bill, the Gibbons omnibus trade Bill, which is 485 pages long.

Let us think of the timing of this so-called great friend of Canada, President Reagan. Last Wednesday night that Bill went through with the support of the Democrats and the Republicans on a vote of 295 to 115, and it is before the United States Senate today. If it goes through this week, which is what is expected, as we learned in the forestry committee last Thursday, a countervailing duty could be brought against Canadian softwood products generically from coast to coast by July 4.

Let us think of the timing. In the same week the so-called free trade talks opened, a 35 per cent duty was imposed on B.C. shakes and shingles. Also in that same week there was the 295 to 115 vote on a 485-page Bill almost entirely directed against Canada. Let us think about exactly what they are after. It will affect the aluminum industry because its resource subsidy section goes after our entire resource base. It goes after 80 per cent of our trade with the United States. However, we talk about free trade, good faith, and trusting the President and the U.S. administration!

What has happened is that our new Government has not understood the politics of the issue and the depth of protectionism in the United States. I must say to my friends in the Liberal Party that I have been attending meetings continuously during the past year and I cannot recall a single occasion when any member of the Liberal Party came to those meetings. The motion before us is really a "Johnny-come-lately" motion. It is saying that suddenly the forest industry in Canada, the shake and shingle industry, is one of their most important concerns.

Mr. Frith: Cheap shots.

Mr. Gauthier: Yes, cheap shots.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, they want to deny it, but anyone can look at the record of who has attended the meetings of the forestry committee or who has attended the meetings in Vancouver with members of the U.S. subcommittee on trade and other such meetings. Anyone can find out that they are very much a "Johnny-come-lately" on this issue.

Let us deal for a moment with what is happening to the shake and shingle industry, and then I will return to protectionism. There will be a 35 per cent duty for 2.5 years. The coalition members made clear that almost none of them could survive in that 95 per cent of their product went into the U.S. market. Thereafter it will be 20 per cent for two years and 8 per cent for the six months following, if the U.S. industry still needs it.

The big difference is that this is a 201 ruling and 332 is the big one at which we are now looking. Between now and next Tuesday, when Secretary of Commerce Baldrige will make his determination on whether or not to proceed, we should take the strongest possible action we can. We started well last Friday with the unanimous motion of the House, and I think the U.S. Congress and President Reagan will have heard about it. We should suspend those comprehensive talks right now and say: "No more of this bad faith; you promised a clean launch and you did not deliver".

Perhaps the Prime Minister thinks that we can sacrifice those 4,000 jobs. Almost all of them, or a good healthy chunk of them, are in Mission—Port Moody. Some are in my constituency on the Queen Charlottes and in the northwest, but most of them are between Hope and Vancouver and on Vancouver Island.

Perhaps that industry will be sacrificed. Perhaps the Prime Minister and the Premier of British Columbia will say that they will put together a package to save those workers' jobs or whatever. Those workers know that that is not possible. There is not a market into which to diversify; there is not another readily accessible product. That kind of approach would be used simply to calm the concerns of Canadians generally, so that the Government can say it took action, that it assisted shake and shingle operators, and that they do not need to worry.

I should like to refer to the figures which were quoted by the previous speaker. They were given to us by the coalition yesterday. They are staggering. They indicate 4,000 jobs and a total of $344 million in relation to payroll, raw material, transportation, and supplies, as well as another 20,000 jobs indirectly and hundreds of millions of dollars. It went on to point out that the entire industry had been reduced from approximately seven million squares in 1977 down to four million squares in 1985, and that the majority of the loss was in the traditional marketing states of California and Texas. That is where the big move is on in terms of tile and asphalt shingles.

Also the coalition pointed out something which is key to evaluating the issue. It pointed out that it was important to note that the existing United States industry was not dead and that the portion which did not survive was not killed by Canadian production. It was killed as a result of loss of market, lack of economical raw material, and failure to automate. Also it pointed out that every Canadian firm which did not automate and adjust to markets has been removed from production as well during the same period of time.

In terms of existing inventories, the coalition pointed out that the 35 per cent tariff would add $40 million to the cost of existing inventories of raw materials and manufactured goods which cannot be processed and shipped prior to June 6. Not only is a $250 million industry at risk, also at risk are their inventories and the 20,000 associated indirect jobs, most of which are in the Fraser Valley. The Government has a responsibility not to ballyhoo and talk tough.

I should like to refer to a question I put to the Prime Minister on May 21. In part my question was:

I think he is aware that on May 8, President Reagan wrote a letter to Senator Packwood regarding Canadian softwood lumber in which he stated: "—I intend to press for an expedited resolution to this problem independent of comprehensive negotiations."

I am sure the Prime Minister is aware that President Reagan controls the acceptance or rejection of the countervailing action through Secretary of Commerce Baldrige. Has the Prime Minister himself, through his office, by phone, or by letter, contacted President Reagan and asked that this countervailing action be stopped?

The Prime Minister did not do what I suggested. He went on to say:

Mr. Speaker, no. I think I responded to that question yesterday. We are satisfied that the mechanisms in place are designed not only to eliminate problems but to create a climate of confidence within which these problems can be resolved. That is exactly what we are trying to do—not by yelling at the problems, not by denigrating anyone, but by sitting down in a reasonable, positive, and strong way to resolve these problems on behalf of Canadians.

That was six days ago. On Friday the Prime Minister decided it was time to yell at the President. That is his initiative. We will discover over the course of this debate and over the next couple of days what will be the personality of the Prime Minister and his Government and whether they will retaliate. If so, that will finish the shake and shingle industry. If they offer some kind of $500,000 adjustment program through FLIP, LEAP, JET, FLOP or whatever, it will be a total failure. They should take the constructive action which is absolutely necessary in this kind of relation and dialogue with the United States, our largest trading partner, with $130 billion last year—the largest bilateral trade in the world. Our largest single industry is now at risk. One Canadian in ten or one million people are at risk. We have just lost 4,000 jobs. That was a dead hit by the President at midships, and that ship is going down.

I want to hear from the Government side whether or not the Government is prepared to take the kind of bold Canadian initiatives upon which this country was founded, which is to say to the United States: "You cheated at cards and you are not going to get away with it. We are suspending the free trade talks today."

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I do not agree with everything the Hon. Member put forward this morning, but he did put forward some things that are of great concern to all of us. As he pointed out, the newly concerned individual from the Liberal Party, the right hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner) has just arrived on the scene now that it is a national issue. It is important to note the answer he gave with regard to the exportation of logs and bolts. He said: "We will leave that for another day". What he is leaving for another day is possibly the exportation of jobs in Mission-Port Moody and jobs for Canadians right across the country. I would like the Hon. Member to give me his reaction to that. I am quite certain from the Member's speech that his concern is also the same concern as ours, even though the Official Opposition has decided to put it off for another day.

When the Hon. Member spoke of the penetration of the market I think he left a few questions unanswered. He quite rightly depicted the American industry and what is happening in the United States, but he failed to point out that the amount of shakes and shingles used has decreased. We basically maintain our level of production and shipments to the United States but the U.S. has lost its portion, and that is quite important. This has been a declining market, but inasmuch as it is a declining market I just wanted to set the record straight on it.

The Member said we should suspend the free trade talks, but the solution to this problem lies in free trade because that is what is in jeopardy. Will the Hon. Member comment further on this? It appears he wants to cut off his nose to spite his face. In spite of this Draconian action taken by the President of the U.S.—it may be unethical but I do not believe it is illegal because laws exist under which the Americans can take this action—I still feel that the free trade negotiations have to be addressed in a more responsible manner. I would like the Hon. Member to reply to the logs and bolts issue which is so important to jobs in British Columbia.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I am glad to respond to the Hon. Member's point. It is clear that the Liberals really do not know where they are at on a lot of these issues. The Hon. Member, I believe, was the one who put the question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs to make sure that the Government's position stayed solid and that there would not be the export of logs and bolts. I am sure the Hon. Member is also aware of the study just released from the University of British Columbia produced by Michael Margolick and Russell Uhler. This study was funded by the Canadian Forest Service. It points out that by lifting the restrictions on log exports, which would include cedar logs, not directly bolts, there would be a short-term increase of $40 million a year to the log exporters but a direct loss of 3,200 jobs in the wood processing industry. Part of this is the desire by some in the United States who are extremely short of raw product—and here I am talking about the states of Washington, Oregon and Idaho—who need bolts and raw logs because they simply cannot get them in their own areas. They would very much like to see exported logs go down in price and domestic logs go up in price, because they would be getting firesale prices on cedar throughout that whole area. Not only would the industry be benefiting from the 35 per cent duty placed against our producers but it would be getting firesale product. Anyone who applies any logic to that would realize that that would immediately provide for the movement of those 4,000 jobs, or perhaps more, directly across the border.

As far as the second point made by the Hon. Member regarding market penetration is concerned, I pointed out that the coalition reminded me that our participation has been reduced from seven million squares in 1977 to four million squares in 1985. The market has constricted massively because of the penetration of competing products, such as tile and asphalt.

To take this kind of Draconian action, to use the Hon. Member's words "unethical action", requires the strongest kind of response, and here I come directly to the point made by the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain). Should this country continue this so-called free trade process at this time? Again I come back to the analogy of playing cards for the first time. Whether you are a dealer or a player and you catch someone cheating, what do you do? Are you going to punish someone else because someone cheats?

We were given a country to country guarantee that there would be a clean launch. The Senate Finance Committee got tied up and we ended up with a 10-10 vote. Some special offers were made and are now being delivered to Senator Packwood and other Republican lumber state Senators. It is simply a question of whether you are prepared to continue dealing with someone who has cheated in the opening days of a process. That is what this is. You can call it unethical, you can call it bizarre, as the Prime Minister does. You can throw out all kinds of other language, but you have to withdraw from a process and evaluate internally within your own bureaucracy and political system and not allow the Americans to do something? The pressure will come very quickly, as it did on generic drugs and other things. There will be enormous pressure on the President. That 35 per cent duty would be withdrawn by next Tuesday, I can guarantee you, if we suspended those talks today, Mr. Speaker. I can absolutely guarantee that. The pressure on the White House from those who want to negotiate is far bigger than this. There is $130 billion in trade on the table to be negotiated on an annual basis. To worry because there is legislation in the U.S. Congress is one thing, but to say what is being done unilaterally and politically on a whim to apply this kind of duty means you have to call the cheater at the game.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I honestly believe that the Hon. Member tried to leave the impression that the Prime Minister was not aware of this issue. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, as one who meets with the Prime Minister on a weekly basis and who chairs the national caucus, that this issue has been monitored from the day, that it arose on the scene in the U.S. and it has been an ongoing issue under discussion in our caucus. It is an issue with which the P.M. is totally current. He knows every aspect of it. We have kept the Prime Minister involved. The shock and the dismay the Prime Minister showed here last week was absolutely sincere.

Mr. Frith: Lies.

Mr. St. Germain: The Hon. Member aptly tried to present the fact that we were asleep at the switch. We were not. He knows that because I have been speaking with him on an ongoing basis. I know the Hon. Member has knowledge in this area. We have tried to work together. I want to let the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) know that the Prime Minister knew everything about the issue. The Prime Minister knows more about shakes and shingles than many Canadians.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, the Member puts some interesting information on the record. But I think he knows that this information has been put forward a number of times by myself, by members of the forest industry and by our own embassy people in Washington. I am convinced some of them are about to go down the tube, partly in relation to this issue, in a desire to shoot the messenger.

The Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody was in Washington at the same time I was last year, and he heard what the Americans had to say. He knows they wanted far more resources, that they wanted to be able to get information out, not just to the national home builders, or to other groups in the U.S., but to get information out to the two million Americans who go to work everyday and get their pay packets from producing commodities for the Canadian market. We missed. I am saying this as a country. I am not going to lay all the blame on the Prime Minister , but his responsible Cabinet members, the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) and the Secretary of State for External Affairs were not listening to our embassy in Washington. They were not listening to the Canadian forest industry.

After skating close to the edge the shake and shingle industry has now fallen over the edge. Next Tuesday will be the telling day in Canadian history. If Secretary of Commerce Baldridge says that he is going ahead with Bill 332 we will lose a million jobs in Canada. We lost 4,000 jobs last week and a million will be on the table next week. We have been asleep at the switch. We have not done our job in dealing with the grass roots political issue in the United States. Fifty per cent of the wood in Georgia, the largest softwood producing state in the United States, is from British Columbia.

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond on behalf of the Government to the opening remarks of the two Opposition Parties. It is perhaps timely that I intervene because I am afraid that the huffing and puffing which has been going on may blow the House down and we would not want that to happen.

I welcome this debate because it has forced the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) to give an indication of the position of the Liberal Party with regard to the efforts which the Government has initiated to develop a more predictable and enhanced trade relationship with our neighbour to the south. The Hon. Member said that he spoke for an hour a month ago. At a future date to be determined they will try to refine their position further.

Their position in the first speech was that the timing is bad because we presently have a trade surplus with the United States and because they are holding mid-term elections. In the United States there is a presidential election every four years and a mid-term election every two years. It is perhaps because of that Liberal logic that we have the problems which we are presently facing.

The timing is never good to make tough decisions, particularly when dealing with the most important trade relationship between any two countries in the world. The timing to take courageous decisions is never good. We know that the Liberal position is to stay away from the trade talks because the timing is bad. I would like the Liberals to tell us when the timing will be good. Perhaps that is why we have seen no action from them other than to antagonize the most important friends that we have had in the last 20 years, which have now put us in this position.

I would like the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) to tell me whose jack-in-the-box he is today. Is he the jack-in-the-box of Bob White who says that we should get away from any trade talks? He says that he is okay because he has the Auto Pact and has told the Americans where to get off. However, the last word has not been spoken on that. Or, is he the jack-in-the-box of Jack Munro in B.C. who will be affected by this situation? Has the Member asked Jack Munro how he feels about getting more secure access for our lumber in the United States? Who is he defending in the House today?

We know their position. Under no circumstances do they want enhanced and more secure trade with the United States. They say: "To hell with our $112 billion of exports to the United States". I would like the Member to tell me where we will find markets to replace the market in the United States. You cannot always dump on your friends, call them cheaters and crooks, and then say that you did not really mean it and ask them to buy your products. That is NDP logic. They have nothing and want to share it with everyone.

The Government needs no urging from Members opposite to take all the appropriate actions to defend our trade interests in the United States or in any other market in the world. While members of the Opposition are only now waking up to the fact that the B.C. shake and shingle producers are vulnerable to protectionist trade actions in the United States, the Government has been taking action. Has the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, my friend who represents a riding in British Columbia, asked a single question in the House over the last eight months on this issue?

Mr. Frith: Yes.

Mr. Oberle: I say "no". We have taken action to defend our shake and shingle exports to the United States and to negotiate better rules to ensure that tariff and non-tariff barriers do not impede our exports to the United States. We have negotiated rules to protect Canadian exports, not only of shingles and shakes, but of lumber, hogs, steel, fish, potatoes, uranium and a whole range of other Canadian exports that are the subject of protectionist measures in the United States.

More than eight months have passed since the United States shake and shingle producers petitioned their Government for import relief under U.S. trade remedy legislation. We were aware of this situation eight months ago and we acted. We did not act only in response to a letter of May 7 from the Premier of the Province of British Columbia. We have been working on this issue for the last eight months. It is more than two months since the United States International Trade Commission recommended that the President impose a punitive tariff on imports of red cedar shakes and shingles. For over eight months the Government has been in the trenches working with the Canadian industry to defend our access to the United States market for shakes and shingles.

One might well ask where the Opposition was. Why have we not heard before of their new-found concern for protection of jobs which were at risk in the shake and shingles industry? The Government assisted the industry in developing the argument we presented to the U.S. International Trade Commission. I can assure the House that the Canadian Government's opposition to the International Trade Commission's recommendation was put to the U.S. Government forcefully and on many occasions.

The punitive tariff announced by President Reagan on May 22, which is to take effect on June 6, is not in our view an appropriate remedy to address the problems of the U.S. shake and shingle industry. They are not just destroying the Canadian industry, but their own industry as well. If they think that the British Columbia Government, or indeed the Canadian Government, would be inclined to send them the raw materials to revive their own industry, they will have to think again. The problems with the United States industry, are long-term and relate primarily to a shortage of domestic raw materials and competition from alternative products. Perhaps the exchange rate has become a problem for that industry as it has for other industries.

Western red cedar is for all practical purposes a non-renewable resource. The U.S. supply of old growth western red cedar, the raw material used to make red cedar shingles and shakes, is dwindling very rapidly. The United States International Trade Commission's report on the investigation estimated that the supply of old growth cedar in the United States would be totally depleted within 20 years. Some experts say that that will happen in an even shorter time frame.

Intense competition from other substitutable products such as asphalt tiles is reducing the shingle and shake market and will prevent significant price increases even if the very high tariff that has been imposed stays in effect. Changes in building and fire codes in many jurisdictions effectively prohibit the use of untreated wood shingles and shakes. In fact, as the Hon. Member for Skeena pointed out, our own shipments to the United States have been drastically reduced. Builders, architects and homeowners are switching to substitute products because of growing concerns about fire safety issues. The substitute products have a number of advantages over traditional wood materials, such as superior warranties, and are highly price-competitive with wood shingles and shakes.

For all of these reasons we argued forcefully in all of our consultations and representaions that tariffs or quotas would not address the fundamental problems of U.S. producers. At the same time U.S. border measures would create great hardship for those Canadians whose livelihood depends on our bilateral trade in these products. No Member of this House knows better than I the hardship which these protectionist measures will generate for the workers in this industry and their communities, primarily in British Columbia. Some 4,000 Canadians, as has been pointed out, are employed in the production of shingles and shakes. Over 90 per cent of the industry's production is exported to the United States. It is difficult to argue the precise impact of these protectionist measures on current production and trade levels. Estimates range from 10 to 40 per cent reduction. Only time will tell, but it is most certainly a cause for serious concern.

As Members of this House are aware, the Canadian Government's response to this protectionist trade action by the United States President has been swift and vigorous. The Government's objections have been conveyed directly to the president and to Secretary of State Schultz by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), as well as in a diplomatic note protesting the U.S. action in the strongest terms. The note is public and I am sure I do not have to read it out for Hon. Members.

I can assure the Member's opposite that the United States authorities are well aware of the resolution unanimously adopted by this House last Friday. Let there be no doubt also that the Government now has under active consideration a range of options which might constitute an appropriate response in the event the U.S. Government is not prepared to rescind these tariffs or offer acceptable compensation. Included in the range of options available to the Government would be some direct assistance for the British Columbia producers, who stand to be most seriously affected. My colleagues, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) will have this issue high on their agenda in meetings later on this week with their U.S. counterparts, Secretary of State Schultz and Ambassador Yeutter, the United States trade representative.

I would contend that the resolution we are debating today is shortsighted and unrealistic. When we speak of protectionism and trade and free trade we speak of markets. It was Adam Smith who said 200 years ago that a nation's ability to grow and expand economically in an industrial sense depends as much on its ability to consume as it does on its ability to produce. Canada is more dependent on trade with other countries than is any other nation in the world. Protectionism works in favour of those countries which have something to protect in terms of markets. We have a very limited market and, therefore, enhanced trade has to be our battle cry.

If the Opposition thinks that the Americans came to us begging to get into these enhanced trade talks they are wrong. It is in our interests to develop more secure and better access to foreign markets wherever they are, whether they are in the United States, in the new emerging Asian markets or in the European countries.

We are the only nation among the important industrial nations that does not have unimpeded and secure access to a market in excess of a hundred million people. We are the only outsiders in the industrial world. Unless we correct this problem and find more secure, predictable access to a market which meets a certain economy of scale we shall fade away as an industrial nation into obscurity and insignificance.

The Opposition is asking us to hold the trade negotiations hostage to specific trade irritants, when the trade negotiations are so clearly in our best interests. These negotiations, if successful, could reduce our vulnerability to actions like the tariff increase on shakes and shingles. It is unrealistic because it would be neither appropriate nor possible for either Government to implement some sort of standstill with respect to actions which are not discretionary under the existing trade laws.

Surely the Opposition would not suggest that Canadian producers could be unilaterally denied their right to seek relief from injury in case of dumping or subsidized imports while the trade negotiations are underway. Is the Opposition aware that the Ontario corn producers have requested a countervail investigation against subsidized corn imported from the United States? Canadian agricultural producers are acutely aware of the massive subsidies made available to the United States farmer in the new Farm Bill.

There are, of course, discretionary decisions. The action on shakes and shingles was a discretionary decision by President Reagan. We do not like it and we are dismayed by the decision. We find it impossible to understand. It makes no economic sense. It destroys their own industry as well. It is bad trade policy, and it is a breach of a political commitment not to introduce new barriers to cross-border trade. We would hope that this is an isolated case, an aberration that will not be repeated while trade negotiations are underway.

No case could illustrate better that the current international trade rules do not provide the certainty and security of access to the U.S. market which Canadians producers need to plan their future and to improve their investment position. We are all well aware that countervailing duty actions are a serious threat to our access to the United States. Over our heads still hangs this dark cloud on softwood lumber. The GATT permits the application of countervailing duties in situations where subsidized imports are found to be injurious to domestic producers. The GATT rules on subsidies and countervailing duties do not provide affected exporters with rights to compensation or retaliation except as a last resort flowing from recourse to GATT dispute settlement procedures.

In the case of the new countervailing duty petition on lumber, Members of this House are well aware of the Government's strongly held view that initiation of a new investigation cannot be justified. Neither the material facts nor U.S. law have changed since Canadian lumber producers were found by the Commerce Department in 1983 not to be benefiting from countervailing subsidies. The Americans do not understand our system, they are comparing it with theirs.

We in British Columbia, as the Hon. Member from Skeena knows, have to put in place a management regime which is consistent and conducive to the problems that we have in British Columbia. We still have massive virgin stands of timber which are becoming over mature and rotting away. The Hon. Member from Skeena and his friends think that the trees actually grow to heaven if you leave them standing long enough. A tree is a living thing, it has a life span, and when that life span is complete it is of no use to a shingle and shake producer or to a lumber producer, it dies. We in Canada and British Columbia must have a different management regime than what they have in the southern United States where they are dealing with fourth and fifth generation timber.

We have made plain to the Americans our intention to invoke GATT dispute settlement procedures in the event a new investigation is initiated. Our ambassador in Geneva was instructed to make a statement on May 22 to the GATT council. I have the statement here; I will not delay the House by reading it into the record, but I certainly would be prepared to table it. We have made a very strong case pointing out all the facts I have mentioned.

There is no doubt that protectionist pressures in the United States are strong and they are growing. Each of these investigations or tariffs, or trade restrictive actions, no matter what the outcome, takes its toll, both in legal expenses to fight U.S. protectionism and immeasureable damage to the Canadian investment climate.

Let me reiterate for the benefit of the Members opposite that the resolution we are debating is shortsighted. Trade negotiations are in Canada's interests. Last week's events are but one example of the shortcomings in the current contractual rules. The status quo is not good enough. We need a better set of rules for the conduct of our trade and economic relations with the United States.

The existing rules can be improved only through negotiations. There are two avenues along which negotiations can take place. One is bilateral, with our principal trading partner. The other is multilateral, under the GATT. The Government is pursuing both avenues.

Finally, let me reiterate for the benefit of those opposite that the Government recognizes the hardship and personal economic dislocation that could result from the 35 per cent tariff on cedar shakes and shingles in British Columbia and similar threats to our Canadian access to U.S. markets with other products. The Government has launched negotiations aimed at a better contractual basis for the conduct of our trade relations with the United States. If members of the Opposition are genuine in their concern for Canadian cedar shake and shingle producers, they will lend their support to our important initiatives and endeavours.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I have a number of questions for the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle). I hope he will attempt to respond to my question about the shake and shingle and lumber issue.

The Minister is very much aware that we have had absolute unrestricted, unfettered, tariff-free trade with the United States in softwood lumber and shakes and shingles for half a century. I hope the Minister has not been permeated by what I consider to be incredible lunacy and naivety on the part of the Government. Will the Minister explain why he kept avoiding the history of the shake and shingle issue when we are involved in these trade negotiations? Can he explain this unilateral action which has been taken after a tie vote at the Internantional Trade Commission, including the chair having voted against applying any kind of restrictive duty on Canadian shakes and shingles? Why does the Minister believe that these negotiations will help after half a century of unrestricted free trade? What can be freer than free?

The U.S. is going after this particular industry. Will the Minister tell me how this issue will be resolved in the negotiations between Peter Murphy and Simon Reisman? The Minister knows full well that this issue will not be on the table. If we do not ensure that these duties are removed totally right now, they will be levied against the industry for five years.

Will the Minister explain what is freer than free trade and tell us whether the Senate is likely to give up such countervail powers? It has made it clear that it will not.

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Member has never heard it said that nothing endures more than change. The fact that we have had unimpeded and unfettered access to the U.S. for our lumber does not mean that this will always be the case. In fact, we now know that it is not the case.

This countervailing duty action began long before we started our negotiations on the enhanced trade issue.

Mr. Fulton: No. Four months after.

Mr. Oberle: Perhaps the countervail duties started as a result of a prolonged problem facing the United States in terms of balancing its trade, not only with Canada but with other parts of the world due to currency problems. In the last 10 or 15 years Canadians have had a very distinct advantage over American producers as a result of the spread in the currency exchange, which also allowed us to become most efficient and make great efficiency gains in our mills. The Americans are saying that enough is enough and that is why these actions have come about.

Previous governments should have had our foresight to see this and recognize the value of our resource industries. If they had secured that access with some formal relationship, perhaps similar to the Auto Pact, and built on the strengths of our regions as we intend to do, we would have an arrangement to protect that pillar of our economy in Canada. Now we must operate after the fact and simply because there has always been that free trade does not mean it will continue forever. Changes are imminent and we have to react in the best way possible.

Mr. Schellenberg: Mr. Speaker, the Minister referred to the importance of securing that American market for Canadians. I believe that certain forms of retaliatory action have begun, as mentioned by other Members. For instance, I am receiving letters from my constituency describing how some constituents will not buy American orange juice. The fact that I am receiving these letters from British Columbia in three days may be a miracle in itself, but the fact is that people are reacting to this issue already. In Nanaimo Harbour, there was consideration given to buying a large fleet of American fork-lift trucks but now they are contemplating buying them elsewhere.

Will the Minister agree that trying to save one job through a tariff measure has the effect of losing three or four jobs? Will he comment on some of the remarks of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) when he said that the Americans were actually aiming at the Japanese with their $50 billion trade surplus but somehow Canada has become involved with our $20 billion surplus? Is the Leader of the Opposition accurate in saying that if we had not begun free trade talks this tariff would not have come about?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, I will answer the last question first. Everyone knows that this problem has existed throughout the 1970s but is compounding and becoming very serious. The United States must find a way to come to grips with their problems. They believe they should not be held to ransom by the rest of the world simply because they have decided to play a major role in correcting some of the serious imbalances with Third World debt and those greater issues which are involved. This means that protectionist measures through their more direct system of democracy are the order of the day in the United States. The Hon. Member referred to the many Bills presently before Congress.

We believe that we should have developed a special relationship between our two countries ten years ago because of the great dependence on each other for this trade. Neither we nor the Americans can afford to enter into a trade war because this involves winners and losers. Since we have the most to lose, it does not make sense for us to even mention the word. That does not mean that we should play dead every time a measure is directed against us. We should be strong in our resolve to tell the Americans that if they had made the same decision as we made some years ago, to modernize our industries, to become more competitive, and to react better against other markets, they would not be in this fix. However, it does not make sense to huff and puff about a trade war and perhaps send the navy into San Diego Harbour.

I believe I have responded to the other comments of the Leader of the Opposition. It is the first time that he has spoken out on this issue. He is a Member from British Columbia and faces some political problems. Apparently he met with all the producers yesterday and understands the issue much better than he did.

The Hon. Member knows that we have worked on this issue for many months, in fact years. We have full confidence that the initiatives we have now undertaken are not only designed to heal some of the wounds and correct some of the mistakes of the past, but to secure for us a much better relationship with the United States, one which is not threatened by these temporary issues.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I find it very interesting that the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) has asked that we maintain a very positive note in the House during this debate today. So I would like to begin on a very positive note by indicating to him that the Liberal Party of Canada and Hon. Members of the Opposition will never take lessons from the Conservative Party on how to enhance trade between Canada and the United States. The Liberal Party of Canada will never take lessons from the Conservative Party on how best to handle problems of a protectionist U.S. Congress, or on how best to maintain Canada's trading position within a multilateral framework. I say that on a positive note.

Hon. Members opposite expressed some concern in this debate about the vagueness of the stand taken by the Liberal Party with respect to free trade and about the position taken by my leader during the last election campaign. In order to help out in the debate this afternoon, I would like to refer to some of the vagueness I see eminating from Hon. Members opposite. Perhaps we will start with a little bit of a quiz show. What Prime Minister of this country said: "When next the winds of protectionism blow in the United States, Canada will be exempt"? That was said 15 months ago by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Who was the Prime Minister on St. Patrick's Day of 1985 who sang and tap danced and who said: "If there is ever a problem between Canada and the United States, don't worry, folks, I am only a phone call away"? If I am not mistaken that was Prime Minister Mulroney, Leader of the Conservative Party. Who was it who said three years ago: "It would be absolute folly for any political Party to enter into a free trade relationship with the United States"? Just to refresh the memory of Hon. Members opposite, it was their leader, the present Prime Minister, during the leadership race for the Conservative Party in 1983. It was the man who also devastated the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) on that same issue. So Hon. Members opposite should not lecture us on vagueness in policy or hypocrisy and duplicity because the Conservative Party is the Party which is guilty of all those things.

The Prime Minister in the House of Commons last Friday expressed outrage at the surprise announcement by the President of the United States who, unbeknownst to the Prime Minister, his front bench or any member of the Priorities and Planning Committee of his Cabinet, had the audacity to impose a 35 per cent countervail on shakes and shingles. The Prime Minister went on in his speech to express concern about the way in which the opening salvos of free trade had begun. I take it it was not lost on the Prime Minister that the President of the United States, on the same day his chief negotiator was sitting in on a press conference with our chief negotiator, chose that moment to impose the 35 per cent countervail motion. I think that speaks volumes for the relationship between the President of the United States and the Prime Minister. Two days later in a taped version of Question Period on CTV, the Secretary of State for External Affairs used such words as: "I was absolutely stunned" at this action taken by the President of the United States. He said he was "absolutely surprised" by this action. I still find this slightly odd, but in fact he referred to the President of the United States as an "eccentric".

Mr. Garneau: Pardon?

Mr. Frith: "Eccentric". If that is the kind of relationship the Prime Minister values with our major trading partner south of the border, it is because one of two things has occurred. Either the Prime Minister feigned his anger on Friday afternoon and, therefore, misled the Canadian public, or he is a very incompetent Prime Minister. Good heavens, if there is one thing the Canadian public has been told over the last 20 months since the Government took office it is that the Prime Minister had a special relationship with the President of the United States. If that special relationship exists it is hard to understand why this administration is so stunned and surprised by the action taken by the President. Is the Prime Minister that incompetent? Is he surrounded by incompetent advisors who, we are told, are paid in the neighbourhood of $1,000 a day to advise the Prime Minister on trade negotiations and on what to expect from our partners during those trade negotiations? What was the embassy doing in Washington over the last three and a half weeks? Where was our so-called "special relationship" between the Congress and U.S. Senate over the last three and a half weeks? Where were the lines of communication between the embassy personnel in Washington and our 100-man plus negotiating team here in Canada? I submit that the action of the President was telegraphed a long time ago with respect to how he was going to deal with the matter of imposing countervail duty on one of our major exports to the United States.

I put the question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs yesterday. It is very important that we understand the timing of the two letters which have been read into the record, one by my leader here this morning and the letter I am going to read into the record which President Reagan, not Premier Bill Bennett, wrote to one senator by the name of Robert Packwood on May 7, the same day that Premier Bennett wrote to the Prime Minister.

The President wrote to the Chairman of the U.S. Finance Committee who was responsible for the approval for fast track free trade negotiations which would take place with Canada. Mr. Packwood represents the State of Oregon, a major competitor in lumber products with British Columbia. President Reagan wrote: "Dear Bob, I am committed to finding a rapid and effective solution to the Canadian softwood lumber problem." That is an understatement. The President of the United States imposed a 35 per cent countervail duty on shakes and shingles. I suggest and say with all sincerity that the personal note in that letter from President Reagan to Senator Bob Packwood indicates to me that the price paid for U.S. Senate approval for fast track free trade negotiations was paid by 4,000 British Columbian families. That was the price which was paid for the signature of Senator Robert Packwood so that President Reagan could show he was dealing in good faith with his great friend to the north of the 49th Parallel, the Prime Minister, Brian M. Mulroney.

On the same day the letter was written by the President of the United States to Senator Robert Packwood, the Premier of British Columbia took the opportunity to outline his concerns in a letter written to the Prime Minister, in which he pointed out the real possibilities of that kind of action taken by the President. He conveyed in that letter a hope that the Prime Minister would take the opportunity to use that so-called good relationship which supposedly exists between himself and the President and telephone the President and plead with him not to impose those kinds of countervail options on major Canadian products when the free trade negotiations were just about to begin. What was done? I submit absolutely nothing was done, and there is one of two reasons for that. Once again the Prime Minister was not aware of a letter written to him. That is something which has happened repeatedly over the last 12 months.

Last fall we had the same problem. The Prime Minister kept saying he did not know about any problems with regard to the western banks. He said that he was not made aware by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) of those concerns. He was not made aware of the problems which the former Minister of Fisheries and Oceans was having with respect to tuna-gate. He had a communications problem last fall. Evidently, he has the same communications problem this spring. That is one possibility.

The other possibility is that the Prime Minister badly misread the mood of the U.S. Congress and Senate. There is also one other possibility about this feigned reaction, this feigned anger shown in the House of Commons last Friday by the Prime Minister. I suspect that the pollster for the Conservative Party, one Allan Gregg, who has done extensive polling in this country, has come to the conclusion that the Canadian public is very wary of the way in which the Prime Minister is slowly evolving us into too close an orbit with the United States. There is a great deal of concern on behalf of Canadians in terms of the faith and confidence they have in the ability of the Government to properly present their viewpoints to the U.S. administration.

Having listened to the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) one would think that the mood of protectionism which presently exists in the U.S. Congress has never existed before. One would think that the problems we face today are unique and that we have never had problems with the U.S. Congress before.? I submit that the problems Canada has with the United States today are no better or worse than those we have had in years gone by when Liberal administrations ruled the country. We had difficulties negotiating fishing treaty arrangements with the United States. We had difficulties in the softwood industry. We negotiated these arrangements with the United States, and we did so successfully.

This is why I said at the very beginning that the Liberal Party of Canada will never take lessons from the Conservative Party in terms of how to effectively deal on a country-to-country bilateral arrangement basis in the best interests of the citizens of both countries. To suggest otherwise belies all of the historical facts which exist in terms of the evolution of our trading relationship with the United States since Confederation.

I need not remind Members opposite that, to a large extent, it was during the terms of office held by the Liberal Party that we saw significant improvements in the size of two-way trade between Canada and the United States. That is not a reflection of the last 20 months. That was as a result of deliberate and smooth—and I emphasize the word "smooth"—negotiations between the Canadian Government and the American Government. It has been Canadian Governments headed by Liberals that made the commitment to the multilateral trade route which has led to the establishment of Canada as one of the major trading partners in the international economic order. That did not come about by fluke; it came about by design, hard work, intelligence and by competency in the front benches of the Liberal Party. We were successful in negotiating and in enhancing trade between not only Canada and the U.S. but between Canada and the Pacific Rim and between Canada and Europe. The Canadian public has been well served by a multilateral approach to trade.

Last Friday we saw the Prime Minister wrap himself in a cloak made from the national flag and defend Canadian interests. He was wounded and hurt that his friend, the President of the United States, would do such a dastardly deed as to impose a 35 per cent countervail duty on cedar shakes and shingles. The Prime Minister should not be focusing his anger on the United States; he should be focusing it internally on himself for not having had the sense to fortify not only the ability of his Secretary of State for External Affairs but the ability of his Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher). That is where the mistake was made. He has surrounded himself by incompetence.

It is no wonder that the Canadian public no longer has any faith or confidence in the Government in terms of negotiating, not only with the Government of the United States but with other major trading partners. I think this lack of confidence is justified. I say that because we have had lessons in the last 12 months which have clearly indicated to the Canadian public that the Conservative Government does not place much faith in it to understand its position.

Since September 26, 1985, some eight months ago, the opposition Parties have constantly demanded the Government's position with respect to free trade. Time after time we have asked those who sit on the front benches of the Government side to table in the House of Commons the trade papers which were such an integral part of the trade negotiations between Canada and the United States. Until just a week ago we were repeatedly foiled in our attempts to obtain the documents upon which the Canadian Government plans to form its negotiating position with the United States.

Mr. Gauthier: It's supposed to be an open Government.

Mr. Frith: It is such an open Government that it does not even have the faith to give to the Premier of the largest province in Canada the documents pertaining to the trade negotiations. Ontario is our largest point of concern during these negotiations since it is the manufacturing heart of our country. What was the Premier of the Province of Ontario given? Was he given full access to these documents? Balderdash! The Premier of the Province of Ontario was handed a document from which had been deleted 17 pages; 28 per cent of the original document had been deleted because the Government did not feel that the Premier of Ontario deserved to know what was in those deleted pages. If he did have any concerns he was not to worry because it would not be he who would be negotiating this free trade deal. The Government was saying to the Premier: "Just trust us. It will be the trading team led by Simon Reisman that will deal with this matter". That is the same team which was not even aware of the close vote that would occur in the U.S. Senate Finance Committee. Four weeks ago the results of that vote came as a surprise to them. The vote had to be delayed for three or four days in order to allow time for sufficient arm-twisting by the President before the Senators could come to a 10-10 tie. It was almost by default that the United States administration finally entered into the free trade fast track proposal. Those are the facts.

Now, just three weeks after that time, we see the results, the folly of the advice being given by the trade team. If it was wrong with respect to the mood in the U.S. Congress and Senate, and if it was wrong with respect to how far the American President would go to ensure the viability of the U.S. lumber industry, then why should I have any faith in its ability to negotiate a free trade arrangement with the United States?

I understand that the Prime Minister will be meeting with the First Ministers of each of the provinces in the early weeks of June. Given the track record of the negotiating team to date, I suggest that he had better take into consideration the concerns of the Premiers of the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario. He had better take into account the concerns of the provinces. They have legitimate concerns which must be addressed in those negotiations with the United States.

In conclusion, I wish to indicate the position of the Liberal Party with respect to the 35 per cent countervail duty being imposed on shakes and shingles. We have called upon the Prime Minister to telephone the President this afternoon and ask him to reverse this 35 per cent duty which is being imposed. We are asking the Prime Minister to refuse the U.S. proposal with respect to the omnibus Bill. We are asking that a cease and desist order be imposed and that a standstill agreement be made. The Government had better wake up. So far it has fumbled the ball with respect to this issue.

EMPLOYMENT FUNDING OF NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I met with representatives of community organizations in Vancouver Quadra. Each of these groups provides a valuable service to the community. In the past they have received assistance through federal Government job-creation programs such as the Canada Works Program and the Summer Canada Program.

This year many of the non-profit groups working in my riding, and indeed in ridings across the country, have contacted me saying that they will not be able to provide the same level of service this summer. This point has been made repeatedly on a national basis by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand). This is because the non-profit sector is not a high priority for the Government.

There has been a clear shift in emphasis away from the voluntary sector in funding job-creation projects. As a result, many of the organizations which provide essential services to the community, and particularly to those most in need, are not being funded this summer under the Challenge '86 Program. I call upon the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) to reconsider this ill thought out change in direction, to recognize the importance of non-profit groups and their work, and to reintroduce community value as an element in job-creation programs.

VIA RAIL

NEED FOR NEW PASSENGER CARS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, the week of May 25 to 31 is National Transportation Week across Canada. What better way for the Government of Canada to celebrate this week than by announcing a rejuvenated, revamped, and modernized passenger rail transportation system for Canada?

Ever since the Conservative Government came to power it has been promising this transportation system and it has been promising my constituents that the new rolling stock that will replace outdated, inefficient, and costly VIA trains would in part be ordered from Thunder Bay. What better way to show a commitment to improved passenger rail transportation than by announcing that the contract for up to 125 railway passenger cars has been signed with the UTDC-Can Car Rail-Bombardier consortium? I call on the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to announce the contract this week, thus not only beginning a process of modernization for VIA but also ensuring stability of employment at a number of rail manufacturing sites in Canada.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

AFRICAN RELIEF—TRIBUTE TO WORK OF CANADIAN CO-ORDINATOR

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the Hon. David MacDonald, Canadian Emergency Co-ordinator for the African famine, on his fine work in co-ordinating and developing aid programs to relieve the suffering in Africa and to rebuild communities shattered by drought, famine, and death. Canada was one of the first countries to respond and Canadians gave generously. Two out of three Canadian families contributed financially. The Northern Lights for Africa Society raised millions with the song Tears Are Not Enough.

This massive relief has saved millions of lives over the past two years and relieved much suffering. However, as Mr.

MacDonald has pointed out, our responsibility to the world community extends to the longer-term recovery in Africa and to ensuring that a famine and crisis of this magnitude will never happen again. I commend Mr. MacDonald for his work and for focusing our attention on the need for long-term commitment to this most serious issue.

IMPORTANCE OF BILATERAL COMMERCIAL LINKS

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, "international trade is of capital importance for Quebec", as Pierre MacDonald, Quebec Minister of External Trade, said recently. He went on to say: "Quebec's economic growth depends largely on foreign sales, especially to the United States, where Quebec directs more than 75 per cent of its international exports."

"The future of Provigo will depend mainly on the United States." I am quoting Pierre Lortie, chairman of the board and chief executive of Provigo. The company's goal is to do as much business in the United States as it does in Canada, in five years' time.

You heard the official position taken by the Quebec Government on negotiations with our neighbour to the South on bilateral trade. You also heard a position taken by the private sector, which realizes that under the leadership of the Conservative Government of this country, our national economy is expanding at a rate unknown under the previous Liberal Government.

Quebec's reaction is miles away from the negative response of the federal Liberals opposite.

AIRPORTS

FUTURE USE OF DORVAL AND MIRABEL AIRPORTS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Montreal Airports Advisory Board reported to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) on five possible options for the use of Dorval and Mirabel Airports. These options ranged all the way from keeping the status quo to the consolidation of traffic at one of the airports.

Since the advisory board is to make a final recommendation to the Minister within two weeks, I would ask the Minister to make the commitment that no final decision will be made by him until a committee of MPs from the Montreal region has had a chance to examine the advisory board report and all other evidence, and to make their recommendations to the Minister. Elected Members from the region of Montreal should be given an important role in this decision.

POLITICAL PARTIES

ACID RAIN—POSITION OF LIBERAL PARTY

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, how concerned is the Liberal Party about protecting Canada's interests?

It has been reported that an aide in the office of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) approached a United States congressional committee to obtain information on Canada's role in the case of a U.S. lobbyist.

As some of the Congressmen involved are also attempting to block tighter controls over acid rain, The New York Times quoted the Canadian Liberal aide as saying the following:

> It's a funny co-operative effort. We are helping a congressional committee trying to block acid rain legislation while we are all for acid rain legislation.

Most Canadians do not find that to be particularly funny. Either the Liberal Party is for acid rain protection, or it is not.

In the pursuit of cheap political points, this Liberal aide and his Party are violating the national trust. By working in collusion with those who would damage the Canadian environment, this aide and his political masters are acting in the worst interests of Canada. This is improper, unacceptable, and many would say unpatriotic.

BANKS AND BANKING

DISATISFACTION OF SMALL BUSINESSES WITH CHARTERED BANKS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Bankers' Association is conducting a national advertising campaign on behalf of Canada's 65 chartered banks, stating how much they like working with small business. Yet, five months ago, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business released a survey showing that small business disatisfaction with banks had increased over the past three years, to about one-third of those surveyed.

As the small business spokesperson for the New Democrats, I should like to request the Minister of State for Small Businesses (Mr. Bissonnette) to outline to the Canadian Bankers' Association ways in which Canada's chartered banks can make the advertisement a better reflection of reality.

Small businesses are saying that they are unable to secure loans from chartered banks due to the high level of collateral or security demanded by the banks. Furthermore, the banks appear to be cutting back on issuing loans under the Small Businesses Loans Act while some branches choose to ignore or are unaware of the program.

The Minister must make it his job to bring these small business concerns to the attention of the Canadian Bankers' Association and of Canada's 65 chartered banks.

AGRICULTURE

FULFILLMENT OF GOVERNMENT ELECTION PROMISES

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, at Prince Albert in July, 1984, the PC Party pledged to bring western Canada back into Confederation.

The revitalization program for agriculture promised to eliminate the federal tax on farm fuels, to remove the capital gains tax on the sale of farm property, to double the level of cash advances, to amend the Western Grain Stabilization Act to permit earlier interim payments, to create a voluntary national red meat stabilization program, to re-establish a long-term national dairy policy, and to permit voluntary dual labelling on all farm products. In just 20 months these commitments have been met and more.

FCC interest rates are now at 10.75 per cent for five years and 11 per cent for longer terms. This represents the lowest interest rate in seven years and, coupled with a commitment to examine domestic wheat pricing, provides further hard evidence of the Government's continuing commitment to Canadian agriculture.

ENERGY

PRETROLEUM POLICY—GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Ms. Carole Jacques (Montreal—Mercier): Mr. Speaker, while international oil prices have gone up significantly, I would like to point out to the House that the price at the pump has dropped another 3 cents a litre, especially in Quebec.

As my hon. friend from Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) has said many times, here is another example that proves our policy to deregulate the oil industry has been instrumental in bringing about these new developments.

It is too bad that the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) has chosen to remain silent on the matter, with all his protest groups. Why are the Liberals not saying anything?

Is it by any chance because the Conservatives have been introducing new policies daily to help Canadians, the same Canadians who were forgotten by the Liberals for over 20 years?

WAR CRIMINALS

UKRAINIAN CANADIAN STUDENTS' UNION REPRESENTATIONS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, representatives of the Unkrainian Canadian Students' Union, a federation of 15 university clubs across Canada, are in Ottawa this week to meet their parliamentarians.

I had the pleasure of meeting with a group of the students last evening, and I should like to indicate how impressed I was with their dedication and commitment to their cause. These students are meeting with Members of Parliament to present their position on the issue of alleged war criminals in Canada, and to relate their concerns in respect of the Deschênes Commission of Inquiry on War Criminals.

I should like to express my support for these young Canadians and urge my colleagues to take time to meet with them to discuss this important issue. They have a lot to offer, and they ought to be listened to by Members.

STOCK EXCHANGES

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE—COMPUTER ASSISTED TRADING SYSTEM

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it used to be that stock and bond transactions were carried out in the club-like atmosphere of an exchange which met for a few hours a day in a specific location to deal in local issues. In today's world of instantaneous communications, innovative and competitive exchanges spanning all times zones and computed technology, the securities business will continue to present new challenges and opportunities which can be seized upon by Canadian dealers.

• (1410)

The Computer Assisted Trading System of the Toronto Stock Exchange and its coming link-up with the Paris Bourse is illustrative of this exciting evolution toward a fully international round the clock trading system.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

CALL FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, the time has come for Canadians to have the comfort of knowing that at the very least the people who are charged with the responsibility of monitoring and criticizing the nuclear industry in Canada are separate and independent in every way from those who feel a missionary calling to promote the use of nuclear reactors both here and abroad.

At present there is far too much incest between the Atomic Energy Control Board and Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, and both are too keen on the promotion of nuclear energy to be reliable and objective regulators of this industry. The time has come for this longstanding conflict of interest to be ended. How it could be ended is one more useful thing that a full public inquiry into the nuclear fuel cycle in Canada could do, when and if the Tories live up to their campaign promise. Without such an inquiry, the Canadian people will be deprived of an important opportunity to say whether they approve of the dangerous collective bet with death that all nuclear countries are making when they rely on the nuclear option for security or for energy.

FISHERIES

TWO HUNDRED MILE ZONE—PROSECUTION OF FOREIGN VIOLATORS

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the Department of Fisheries and Oceans operating under the present Government for the tremendous job that it is doing in pursuing and prosecuting foreign violators in our 200-mile fisheries zone.

In the eight years preceding our election in September, 1984, foreign vessel convictions resulted in total fines of a mere $173,000. Most of these fines were less than $5,000 each, and many convictions resulted in no fines whatsoever.

In 1985, the first calendar year that the present Government was in power, there were fines totalling $745,000. There are now 10 cases before the courts with total possible fines of $1.1 million plus forfeiture to the courts of both vessels and catch. This is what protection of our fisheries is all about.

Through our actions, Mr. Speaker, it becomes increasingly obvious that this Government cares much more for our fisheries than the previous administration did.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

OPENING OF FOOD BANK IN PEMBROKE

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, because of the failure of the Government to keep its election promises about jobs, jobs, jobs, and because of severe Government cuts in the Upper Ottawa Valley, it became necessary for a number of responsible citizens from Pembroke and area to organize a food bank to help needy people, and we applaud them. The food bank was officially opened today at noon by the wife of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) of Canada. The sad part of it all, Mr. Speaker, is that the whole operation would not be necessary if the Conservative Government in Ottawa had not broken all its election promises. Instead of jobs we have had increased unemployment each month for the past several months because of the Government's disastrous economic policies.

It is a sad day for Canada, Mr. Speaker, when the Prime Minister and his Government fail to keep faith with the people by not delivering on their election promises. If these promises had been kept there would be no need for a food bank in the first place. This Tory Government has failed the people of the Ottawa Valley and of Canada.

TERRORISM

INTERNATIONAL SIKH YOUTH FEDERATION—STATEMENT BY SPOKESPERSON

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in this House I voiced my dismay over the senseless act of violence in Vancouver against a member of the Punjab Cabinet whose only crime in this country was his feeling that he would be safe in our land of freedom and democracy.

I listened with horror today to the national spokesman for the International Sikh Youth Federation, Mr. Singh, who stated on national television that Minister Sidhu should have realized that the security he must have in his homeland would be needed while he was visiting Canada. Mr. Singh went on to state that other political persons from India would also be risking their lives by coming to our country.

I have a great many members of the Sikh religion in my riding of Sarnia—Lambton, and I can assure this House that they are repulsed by the actions of some fanatic fringe. If visitors to our country must expect that their lives are at stake and must travel about this country with security people, then I plead with the Government of Canada to put a stop to this ridiculous situation.

TRADE

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES—B.C. PREMIER'S LETTER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. On May 7 Premier Bennett of British Columbia wrote to the Prime Minister. He said:

I urge you to contact the President directly to convince him not to act in any way against Canadian shingle and shake imports into the United States . . . Your direct intervention—is most important.

That was three weeks ago. The Prime Minister did not act. The President's action was, therefore, of no surprise to him. Now 4,000 British Columbians face unemployment. Will the Prime Minister now belatedly telephone the President of the United States and ask him to rescind that 35 per cent tariff on B.C. red cedar shingles and shakes?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is quite wrong when he says that we did not act. We have acted consistently in the area of trade liberalization. I notice that the Leader of the Opposition is now a convert to the idea of liberalized trade negotiations between Canada and the United States.

Mr. Crosbie: It's about time.

Mr. Mulroney: It is long overdue. The Secretary of State for External Affairs, the embassy, and I, as Prime Minister, brought to the attention of the President a number of items consistent with his undertaking at the Quebec summit which said: "As a first step we commit ourselves to halt protectionism in cross-border trade in goods and services".

Mr. Tobin: Did you call the President? Yes or no.

Mr. Mulroney: Actions at all levels of the Government of Canada were consistent with our desire to rid—

Ms. Copps: He got a busy signal.

Mr. Mulroney: I realize that the Liberals talk one way and act in quite another. I know that they do not take the problems of British Columbia seriously, and they will pay heavily for that in the next election.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gauthier: What a joker you are, Mulroney.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister of Canada ignored a letter from the Premier of British Columbia dated May 7 on the specific subject against which the President of the United States acted. He need not tell me who is ignoring the interests of British Columbia.

PETITION AGAINST SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, will the Prime Minister telephone the President of the United States, not only to deal with the revocation of that tariff but also to ask the President to recognize his personal presidential discretion, which he can exercise before June 6, to refuse the petition by the American lumber industry to move toward imposing countervail duties on all exports of Canadian lumber across the American border?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated to the House on Friday, I have already conveyed my views directly to the President of the United States. I have had conversations with him in the past, and I shall again in the future. I know that the Member for Hamilton East is sputtering away and delighting in the fact that there are problems in British Columbia. We are trying to solve problems in British Columbia, which is what we have been doing from the very beginning.

Ms. Copps: Why don't you call the President? You got a busy signal.

Mr. Mulroney: That is why we opened these liberalized trade talks. The Leader of the Opposition quite properly contradicted his spokesman for External Affairs who said on Friday that he wanted the trade talks cancelled. The Leader of the Opposition—

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): That's no answer to the question.

Mr. Mulroney: —contradicted his front bencher and quite properly stated that this forum is required to rid Canada and the United States of these irritants. We will continue to deal with this irritant and this problem, as we shall with any other problems which arise to disturb the relationship between Canada and the United States and threaten jobs in Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

INQUIRY IF PRIME MINISTER WILL TELEPHONE UNITED STATES PRESIDENT ON COMPENSATION AND 35 PER CENT TARIFF

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, there is no contradiction between myself and the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount, but I am asking, for the third time: Will the Prime Minister call the President and make arrangements to have our countries suspend all unilateral harassment such as countervailing duties and the 35 per cent duty, during the free trade negotiations? Could the Prime Minister give the House the assurance that if he does not get an answer from the President, he will either reassess free trade negotiations with the United States or suspend negotiations altogether?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, if I am not mistaken, the Leader of the Opposition is expressing an opinion that contradicts another opinion he proferred only 48 hours ago. We will check, but I think you are totally contradicting a position you took only 48 hours ago. We will check, and in any case, it will not be the first time—

Some Hon. Members: Answer the question!

Mr. Mulroney: Sure, but they don't want an answer.

• (1420)

Mr. Rossi: He doesn't answer the question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that Members are entitled to be heard.

MEASURES TAKEN BY PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, if there is any confusion and contradiction it has got to be over there, it is not over here.

Mr. Speaker, on Friday I asked the Prime Minister a very direct question. It is in Hansard at page 13558. Did he have advance notice of the President's decision and, if so, what did he do to head it off? We now know he had advance notice as of May 7. What specific steps did he take to head it off?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, he gets sillier and sillier. We had no advance notice from the administration of the decision that was arrived at that day. We knew full well, as I have indicated to the House many times, that President Reagan is under constant attack from the protectionist forces in the United States Congress. We know that, and I have explained it to the House many times.

One of the principal reasons we are seeking this kind of comprehensive trading arrangement is precisely to vitiate possibilities of these kinds of attacks against Canadian industry. We had no notice that day that it would transpire. As I indicated to my hon. friend, such an action that day is at variance with a very important provision of the Quebec agreement. We have made all representations, both at the Prime Minister's level, the ministerial level, and the level of the embassy. The Canadian interests were well protected and well represented.

GOVERNMENT'S ATTITUDE

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, they say forewarned is forearmed. Warnings don't seem to do our Prime Minister any good, so my supplementary is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. How could he say on national television that he was surprised, when the Government was warned in writing by the Premier of British Columbia nearly three weeks ago?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): The Hon. Member is wrong. The Government was not advised by the United States of their action, and it came as a surprise.

[English]

UNITED STATES PRESIDENT'S POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I quote from The New York Times of March 16:

> The Prime Minister described his relations with the President as excellent. 'I doubt we will ever encounter a better or a fairer friend than Ronald Reagan', he said, 'He's a great friend of Canada'.

On Friday the Prime Minister sent a strongly worded note to President Reagan opposing the 35 per cent duty imposed on B. C. shakes and shingles. Has the Prime Minister heard, either by phone or in writing, from his great friend?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I make no apologies whatsoever of the fact, as Prime Minister of Canada, I have sought to place Canadian-American relations on a friendly footing. I make no apologies for the fact that we have tried to eliminate the vindictiveness, the nastiness, and the spuriousness that went back and forth caused by the previous Government. We have tried to purify the atmosphere—and that is just on acid rain.

I make no apologies for the fact that I said that Ronald Reagan is a great friend of Canada. He is a great friend of Canada. It happens that even friends sometimes go a little astray. We are trying to make sure the President of the United States remembers the commitment he made to Canada in regard to freer and fairer trade at the Quebec City summit. We are going to try to make sure that is always the case in his view of Canada.

• (1425)

POSSIBLE RESPONSE BY PRESIDENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is very easy and very simple. Has the Prime Minister heard from President Reagan? Have you heard from him by phone, by telex, or in writing? Have you heard anything from President Reagan regarding the 35 per cent duty?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the ball is quite properly in our court.

Mr. Tobin: Then do something with it.

Mr. Mulroney: There is Lloyd Jr. speaking up over there. There he is, the third trade wing of the Liberal Party.

We were given a decision on Thursday night. We responded in the House on Friday, and Cabinet is now considering appropriate remedies. There will no doubt be conversations back and forth after that, designed to make sure, to the extent humanly possible, that this kind of measure never takes place. That is something I think all Members of the House would support. We think protectionist measures are bad for Canada and bad for the United States and that is why we are trying to negotiate a comprehensive bilateral arrangement that will make sure they are eliminated in the future.

INQUIRY CONCERNING RESPONSE

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, we have had free trade in shakes and shingles from British Columbia for half a century. My question is very simple and very easy to answer, because the President apparently has not yet signed into law the 35 per cent duty. Has the Prime Minister heard from President Reagan regarding his note or his comments of last Friday? Have you heard by phone? Have you heard anything? Yes or no.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, and it is very much received by the United States, which is one hell of a lot more than can ever be said by the Liberals or NDP.

REQUEST MADE BY BRITISH COLUMBIA PREMIER

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it is inexcusable for the Prime Minister to admit today that he ignored the request of the Premier of British Columbia specifically to make a phone call to the President of the United States. He had a choice. He could have said yes to Bill Bennett, but he said no.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Tobin: Even three weeks after the fact, will the Prime Minister pick up the phone and speak to the President of the United States to express the consensus of the House and the people of Canada that this kind of action does not represent a friendly trading relationship?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have already done that. I have already conveyed that view to the President of the United States. I have indicated to him our regret, and the regret of all Members of the House, that the action taken was clearly at variance not only with his undertakings internationally but specifically with regard to undertakings given to the people of Canada. As the Secretary of State for External Affairs has indicated, we believe that that was an isolated act. We are acting in that regard because we do not propose to jettison, as suggested by the Liberal Party, a very valued trading relationship simply because there was one unfortunate act that occurred. It has been isolated and we are going to act to correct it. That is the obligation of a responsible, mature Government, as opposed to the smart alec comments coming from irresponsible people.

REQUEST FOR FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONSULTATION

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): We all know that the Prime Minister has been communicating with the President through a bull-horn. We do not know whether he has been talking to him over the telephone. The comments last Friday were not necessarily solving our problems. Yesterday the Secretary of State for External Affairs said that retaliatory action would be decided today in Cabinet—

Mr. Speaker: Order. No preamble, please, just a question.

Mr. Tobin: Before the Government implements any such measure, will the Government consult with the Premier of British Columbia, the rest of Canada's Premiers, and specifically consult with both labour and industry in British Columbia before it puts Canada's softwood lumber industry, worth about $3 billion, at risk with more ill-conceived action by the Government?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, first they want us to act, now they want us not to act. The Liberals do not know what they want on any issue, even the most serious ones that confront the country. I thought that the response of the Government and other Members of the House who were here on Friday was a thoughtful and reasonable response to a difficult situation. We are in the process of considering appropriate responses by the Government of Canada. We do it with neither malice nor vindictiveness.

I am not in any way impressed with the idea of the word "retaliation". This is something that, to the extent humanly possible, ought never to be used as we seek to build an improved bilateral relationship which will bring more jobs to Canada. There are certain facts that occur. One of them transpired on Thursday. We are dealing with it as quickly, as effectively and responsibly as a Government can.

UNITED STATES PRESIDENT'S RESPONSE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has now conceded that he has heard from the President. My question is very straightforward. What has he heard? Has he received an apology? Has he received a commitment to change the action which this House unanimously condemned? Has he received at least an explanation of what took place? What has he heard?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says I have conceded something. I have done no such thing. I have conveyed to the House the information at my disposal.

RESPONSE FROM AMERICANS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister's response to my colleague was very much that he had indeed heard from the Americans. I ask him again, if he has heard from the Americans, what has he heard? Has he heard apologies from them? Has he heard that they have made a mistake? What has he heard?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): I have answered that question, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. Jewett: No, you have not.

An Hon. Member: Repeat it.

Mr. Mulroney: I have indicated that we are advised that our message, and that to which other colleagues have subscribed, has been received. We are responding. We are taking our responsibilities on our side. I can tell the House that, pursuant to appropriate custom, we have instructed the ambassador to seek the view of the American Government as to whether it is its intention, as we believe it should in these circumstances, to pay compensation to those British Columbia workers affected by that action.

There are other things going on and we will advise the House of them in an opportune and appropriate way.

REQUEST MADE BY PREMIER OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister keeps saying he has answered the questions about what he did before the 35 per cent tariff was imposed by President Reagan, and afterwards. But there is at least one point he has not fully explained to the House and to the Canadian people. Why did he not accept the request directly made to him by the Premier of British Columbia, Mr. Bennett, and telephone the President of the United States directly to head off this 35 per cent tariff? Why did he not do what Premier Bennett asked? Why did he not have any confidence in Premier Bennett's view and information on this important matter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we have a great regard for Premier Bennett's view and I am delighted to hear that my hon. friend, as a Liberal, has been so supportive of Bill Bennett over the years. Next I will hear from the New Democratic Party in that area.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: In point of fact—

An Hon. Member: Answer the question.

Mr. Mulroney: I am trying to answer the question, Mr. Speaker. We had secured from the American administration its determination not only to fight protectionism but, moreover, the undertaking of the President of the United States, publicly given, to veto any such measures which would have an adverse effect upon Canada. That was the undertaking. This was the climate within which trade negotiations began, as agreed upon between the President and the Prime Minister of Canada.

So our view, having put forward our strong positions in regard to that industry in British Columbia, at my level, at the level of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and at the embassy level, was that it was quite inconceivable that action would be taken at variance with a fundamental principle given by both sides. We believe that the action taken was adequate and proper, and we will continue to work on it for the benefit of British Columbians.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER TELEPHONE UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, now that the Prime Minister knows that the President of the United States is not following up on what the Prime Minister says was the commitment given in that communiqué, why will he not telephone President Reagan immediately and remind him of his commitment, ask him to reverse that duty and not to do anything further along those lines in the future? Why is he afraid to call his pal on this simple matter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not afraid to call President Reagan or anyone else at all. In point of fact the vigorous response taken by the Government of Canada is in sharp contrast to the action by the Leader of the Opposition when he was Minister of Finance and G-5 was created and snuck right past his nose, and he never said a word to defend the interests of Canada. The actions taken by this Government are entirely different. We will continue to defend the interests of Canada.

Mr. Gauthier: Are you going to phone, yes or no?

Mr. Mulroney: After we are finished with the work we have to do at Cabinet, we will convey to President Reagan, and to others, our views which we hope will eliminate trade barriers, eliminate protectionism, and not add to it.

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister. Given that the United States has taken actions in the last few months which have been seriously detrimental to Canada's economy, will the Prime Minister, before the trade talks recommence next month, direct that our negotiators sit down with the U.S. negotiator and try to find an interim way of dealing with the situation which just arose, in order that we do not have to face this over the next two years as those talks progress?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): The Hon. Member refers to actions taken by the American Government which are detrimental to our economy. Perhaps he could tell us what he has in mind.

Mr. Deans: All right.

Mr. Mulroney: Because by and large the actions taken, of which we are aware, have been positive, with some exceptions, including the one to which we referred on Friday.

REQUEST FOR MEASURE TO ALLOW ONGOING DISCUSSION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, is the Prime Minister unaware of the actions by the U.S. Government to subsidize the exportation of grain, among other things, which has caused tremendous harm to the Canadian grain producers? Is he unaware of the pending action on softwood lumber? Is he denying the shakes and shingles problem which has arisen? It is those actions. What I'm asking is if there is no interim measure which can be put in place which will allow an ongoing bilateral discussion to solve those problems before we are faced with others over the course of the next two years.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, not only are there ongoing bilateral discussions, another chapter of which will occur on Friday when I meet with Secretary Shultz in Halifax, but the Prime Minister of Canada, the first Prime Minister in the history of this country to do so, has raised the question of farm subsidies, to come to that particular matter, at the Tokyo Summit, so we can begin to break the cycle of subsidies.

This Government, on the two separate timber questions now at issue, has indicated, in the case of countervail, that we are going to be supporting the Canadian industry as extensively as we can, and we will be.

Mr. Deans: But that isn't helpful.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): We have issued on Friday, and are following now, actions in response to the surprise decision by the President of the United States on Thursday. That is action. It is not rhetoric. Rhetoric is what we get from the NDP. Action is what Canadians get from this Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

TERRORISM

SIKH EXTREMISM—CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Solicitor General. Sikh extremism is one of the greatest threats to national security, yet the Security Intelligence Service did not know that a Punjabi cabinet Minister was in Canada. Journalists knew. The Indian Consul General knew. The would-be assassins knew. Yet the Security Intelligence Service did not know. I would like to ask the Government why did the Security Intelligence Service not know? And would the Minister not agree that, if the Security Intelligence Service was doing its job, it ought to have known of the cabinet Minister's presence in Canada?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the hon. gentleman and Hon. Members of the House that CSIS knows what it is doing. But when there is a foreign visitor who has not reported his presence to either the Government or to his own diplomatic representatives, I hardly think the CSIS can be blamed if he does not have security protection every moment of his stay in Canada. Let us try to be reasonable and not try to take partisan advantage of every misfortune and tragedy which occur in this country.

SECURITY SERVICE'S BUDGET

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Security Intelligence Service should not have to rely on official information in order to determine the presence or absence of a cabinet Minister in Canada—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: The Minister knows—

Mr. Speaker: This is a preamble; just a question, please.

Mr. Nunziata: In view of the fact that the Government has cut $2.1 million from the budget of the Canadian Security Intelligence Service—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I specifically asked the Hon. Member for a question and he went on with his preamble.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please resume his seat?

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a question, immediately.

Mr. Nunziata: Would the Minister not agree that one of the reasons the Security Intelligence Service did not know of the Minister's presence in Canada is because its budget has been cut by $2.1 million—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: —and it does not have the resources to mount an effective intelligence operation?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the answer is no, I completely disagree with that silly and jejune suggestion.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Guelph.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Author, author!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Even the interpreter had trouble with that one. The Hon. Member for Guelph.

DISARMAMENT

SALT II TREATY—UNITED STATES ACTIONS

Mr. William C. Winegard (Guelph): Mr. Speaker, a Reuters news report today stated that the United States might breach the SALT II treaty later this year. That is very troubling news. Can the Secretary of State for External Affairs confirm that report? What is the Government's position with respect to adherence to the SALT II Treaty and its limits?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. Obviously it is a matter of great concern to all in this House. The reports as to what precisely has been announced by President Reagan are not completely clear at the moment. Certainly we support and are pleased by the announcement as it relates to Poseidon submarines, which would respect the SALT II limits. We are concerned by reports that the President might be prepared to go beyond SALT II limits.

The Government of Canada was consulted on this question by the Americans. It was made very clear by way of letter from the Prime Minister to the President one week ago, and by way of my conversations with General Rowney, that we believe it very important that the United States continue its adherence to SALT II limits.

Obviously, arms limitation requires compliance by both sides. This Government has also raised with the Soviet Union its non-compliance with the limits in that treaty. We hope that the Soviets will begin to comply so as not to put at risk the SALT II accord. We hope that both countries, the Soviet Union and the United States, might succeed in achieving some arrangement that will reduce rather than enlarge the risk of conflict in the world.

AIR CANADA

REPORTED SUSPENSION OF FLIGHT ATTENDANT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Transport a question concerning a flight attendant who was suspended apparently as a result of a request by his executive correspondence group for responding to a letter by a Conservative delegate to their convention in Montreal earlier this year, while on a flight from Vancouver, when asked her opinion of the present Government and the Minister. The flight attendant responded in the negative and has since been suspended—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There is a question, I think, please.

Mr. Benjamin: —after a letter was sent to the Minister by a Mrs. Donna Ford. Can the Minister tell us who is Mrs. Donna Ford? Was she a delegate to the Conservative convention? Why was the letterhead clipped off her letter to the Minister, a copy of which I have in my hand?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, first, the Hon. Member might want to provide me with a copy of the letter. I am not aware of all the allegations to which the Hon. Member refers. I would be glad to check into it. As a matter of fact I think the Member should know that, from time to time, we do receive letters from customers of Air Canada who, in some cases, express their disapproval with the service and, in other cases, express their approval of the service. In every case these letters are forwarded to Air Canada executive officials. I would be glad to look into the matter.

POLICY VIOLATION INQUIRY

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Minister what violated any policy in what has occurred to warrant the suspension of an employee, for expressing an opinion when asked for it by the complainant, after the Minister's executive correspondence group got in touch with Air Canada?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, first, I am not sure that anyone has been suspended.

Mr. Benjamin: They have been.

Mr. Mazankowski: If they have been then I will certainly look into it. I think the Hon. Member knows that I do not set the rules and regulations for the management and operation of Air Canada. That is a management decision, and I will certainly be glad to take it up with the management. The Hon. Member could take it up with the management as well. He, as a Member of Parliament, has done it on other occasions. Why does he not do it now?

REFUGEES

REFUGEE DETERMINATION PROCESS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Immigration. Last weekend in Toronto a conference of over 100 organizations serving refugees passed a resolution of non-confidence in the Government's recent announcement concerning the new refugee determination process. They said: "We condemn the Government's failure to respect the fundamental principles unanimously recommended by the non-governmental groups across Canada".

Given the overwhelming criticism which has developed on the principle to deny access, and for a weak appeal system based on law—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Marchi: Will the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Marchi: Will the Minister rescind his two measures—pardon?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member might ask his question, please.

Mr. Marchi: Your Honour jumped up in the middle of my question so I am repeating it.

Some Hon. Members: Order, order.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: I rose because the Hon. Member's preamble was too long. When I rose he started his question. Will he now please finish his question?

Mr. Marchi: Will the Minister rescind his two measures which deal with denying access universally and with a weak appeal system to the Federal Court of Appeal, so that this process can have the strength and fairness it deserves, something that it presently does not have?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I would have thought that the Hon. Member would have wanted to comment on the general approval that is being expressed across the country for the proposal policy which has now been presented.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McLean: I would have thought that the Hon. Member would want to remind the House that we are following—

Mr. Deans: No. He wanted to comment on what he commented on.

Mr. McLean: —Rabbi Plaut's recommendation and the recommendation of the standing committee.

Mr. Heap: That is false! Not true!

Mr. McLean: I would have thought, Mr. Speaker, that certainly the Hon. Member would be aware that under the new rules of the House, which I outlined to the Standing Conference, there will be an opportunity when we bring in legislation for—

Mr. Heap: Point of order—

Mr. McLean: —the legislative committee to review those principles.

Mr. Heap: The committee did not recommend that and you know it, Mr. Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary question, the Hon. Member for Laurier. Just a question.

[Translation]

MINISTER'S ATTITUDE

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, would the Minister care to explain how he can blithely ignore the unanimous recommendations of experts and of the Standing Committee of the House? Would he care to explain this attitude, which has aroused the indignation of all concerned, since after two years of consultation, a consensus had been reached on two fundamental principles: universal access and appeal based on merit?

[English]

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I would like to underline for the Hon. Member that the principles of open access presented by Plaut are being honoured by this Government, and with regard to the question-

Mr. Heap: Not true.

Mr. McLean: —of appeal mechanism we are following the recommendations of the standing committee.

Mr. Marchi: That is not true.

Mr. McLean: The Hon. Member, and groups who wish to have some further—

Mr. Deans: Will you sit him down?

Mr. McLean: —discussion on this matter will have an opportunity after first reading to discuss it with the legislative committee.

FINANCE

TRANSFER OF FAMILY FARMS—TAX INQUIRY

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The inter-generational roll-over of farm land is available only in situations where the land is being farmed by either parent or child at the time of the transfer. Will the Minister consider amending the provisions of the Income Tax Act to make available a tax-free rollover to those Canadians who have farmed almost all their lives but who, through illness or advancing age, are not now actively farming?

• (1450)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, that is a matter at which we in the Department have looked recently. In view of the Hon. Member's well-known interest in this matter, I will take another look at the proposal he has raised. However, I would remind him that since the election of September, 1984, the Government has taken 237 separate initiatives in support of the agricultural community in Canada. While in Tokyo, the Prime Minister raised the matter of agricultural problems on a number of occasions. In addition, we have just increased the farm fuel rebate to provide for almost a total rebate of fuel taxes for farmers.

WAR CRIMINALS

DESCHÊNES COMMISSION—REQUEST FOR TIME EXTENSION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister and concerns the Deschênes Commission. The Prime Minister will know that the Deschênes Commission has indicated that it does not have sufficient time under its present mandate to complete the assignment given to it by the Government. Is the Government prepared to give it the time it needs to do the job it was given?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman will recall that when the Deschênes Commission was first appointed, it was asked and expected to report by the end of December, 1985. That period was extended to the end of June, 1986. We certainly want to see that the Deschênes Commission has reasonable time to complete its report. I think it has made a great deal of progress and we will be replying shortly to letters recently received from the commission.

ACCESS TO UNITED NATIONS FILES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, considerable volumes of new material on war criminals has recently been discovered at the United Nations. The Deschênes Commission cannot request this material, only a Government can. Has the Government asked for this material? If not, is the Government prepared to do so?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Government is prepared to do whatever is necessary to see that action is taken to follow up on any report we are given by the Deschênes Royal Commission. Its main task is to advise us on whether or not the present law is now adequate, and if it is inadequate, in what way it should be changed so that this matter can be properly pursued even after 20 or 30 years of inaction by the Government that occupied the seat of power in Ottawa through all those years.

CANADIAN RADIO-TELEVISION AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

1983 CANCOM APPLICATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice and concerns allegations of which I have given him notice along with copies of documents I received in the mail. Will the Minister undertake to have an investigation conducted of allegations of fraud and conspiracy to commit fraud apropos the application of Cancom to the CRTC in Saskatchewan in 1983 at which time the President of Cancom was André Bureau, now President of the CRTC?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I did receive from the Hon. Member today a document dealing with questions raised about the gentleman just named by the Hon. Member. I consider it to be completely improper and irresponsible to pursue a matter of this nature by making these kinds of allegations publicly. They will have to be looked into now that the Hon. Member has made them.

I do not think that these are new allegations or charges. I think they have been looked into before by the CRTC. Nevertheless, as Acting Solicitor General, now that the Hon. Member has chosen to take this unusual procedure which I think is damaging to peoples' reputations, I will certainly have it referred for investigation to the RCMP.

REQUEST THAT CHAIRMAN BE SUSPENDED DURING INVESTIGATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, in view of the seriousness of the charges and the fact that there has been a three-year gap during which the CRTC could have investigated, will the Minister ensure that Mr. Bureau is not in office while any investigation is conducted, and would he undertake to ensure that the conflict of interest situation at the CRTC is also investigated, as well as the possibility of a coverup of allegations of a kickback scheme?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I really think the Hon. Member is carrying this beyond the bounds of propriety altogether. I am certainly not going to suggest that anyone stand aside on unsubstantiated charges that are being brought here now. I do not think this is the proper way for the matter to be handled. I would further recommend to the Hon. Member that she make these charges outside the House so that those who are named will have a chance to take whatever action they would then think appropriate.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

TRADE

IMPORTATION OF SUBSIDIZED STEEL PRODUCTS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Canadian Steel Trade Conference held in Sault Ste Marie this week has been told that fully 55 per cent of the steel imported into Canada last year was subsidized or dumped, costing Canadians 4,200 jobs. The Government referred this matter to the Import Tribunal for further study. Can the Minister say exactly when a fast-track anti-dumping mechanism will be put in place in light of the 2,000 or more jobs that may be lost in Sault Ste Marie in the next year?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it goes without saying that the Government very deeply shares the concern expressed by the Hon. Member. He asked me a very detailed question about a specific date. I am not in a position to provide the answer to that detailed question at this moment but I will take his question as notice and get back to him.

PREFERENTIAL TARIFF ON STEEL FROM BRAZIL AND SOUTH KOREA

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the steel conference also heard calls this week for the withdrawal of the preferential tariff treatment given to steel from Brazil and South Korea where there are very highly advanced steel-making technologies.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a question.

Mr. Foster: Is the Government prepared to withdraw the preferential tariff treatment in light of the loss of jobs in the Canadian steel industry caused by these two countries with very advanced steel-making methods?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will have to take that question as notice as well and I will get back to the Hon. Member when I have information to convey to him.

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

PENSION ENTITLEMENT OF SERVICEMAN'S WIDOW

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. As the Minister knows, Mr. Clifford Fillip retired from the Armed Forces after 28 years of service as a Master Warrant Officer and re-enlisted as a training officer at the Forces' request, with a promise that his pension entitlements would not be affected as a result. Mr. Fillip died last week. Is the Minister aware that this promise was not kept? Will the Minister assure the House that he will investigate this matter to ensure that Mr. Fillip's widow receives her proper pension entitlement?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the last part of the Hon. Member's question is yes, we will.

BANKS AND BANKING

TREATMENT OF WESTERN OIL INDUSTRY LOAN APPLICATIONS

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. It has been brought to my attention that senior executives of the major banks have directed branch managers in western Canada not to forward or even prepare loan applications for western Canadian oil companies, or for indeed any company heavily dependent on the oil industry. Will the Minister intercede with the major Canadian banks on behalf of western Canadian businesses? If the banks continue this ill-advised and short-sighted approach to the economic problems facing western Canada, we will lose a very vital oil industry and in time that will threaten our—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of the details of the question the Hon. Member has asked today. I would be happy to discuss it further with him. I should point out that just a few short weeks ago the Government did provide some relief, particularly to small oil and gas producers, so some of the pressures they face as a result of the falling international oil prices will be relieved to some extent.

GENERAL AGREEMENT ON TARIFFS AND TRADE

CONCERNS EXPRESSED BY AMERICANS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. U.S. trade lawyers and the Governor of Michigan are asserting that Canadian efforts, including tariff remissions, to force Japanese investment in Canada are violations of GATT and pose a threat to American jobs. Is the Secretary of State for External Affairs aware of these concerns, and what has been our response?

• (1500)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, concerns of this kind are raised from time to time. What also happens, as the Hon. Member will know, is that from time to time individual American States try to resort to actions themselves, as did the States bordering Manitoba recently, on hogs. This indicates the absolute necessity for us to change a trading system with the United States which does not now work well enough for Canada. That is precisely why we are looking to try our best to achieve some arrangement in trade negotiations with the United States.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I must call it three o'clock. I should explain that earlier we got out of sync in terms of who followed whom, in terms of rounds, and that is the reason I did what I did in that situation.

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—CANADA-U.S. TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra):

That this House urges that the Government press upon the Government of the United States the unanimous views of the House of Commons as expressed in its resolution of May 23, 1986, and insist that the United States rescind the 35 per cent duties on British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles and guarantee that similar measures or other possible trade action will not be applied to Canadian products in the future if the present comprehensive trade negotiations are to proceed.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in my place to participate in the debate today on the motion which I had the pleasure and privilege of putting before the House earlier. It urges the Government to take decisive action to ensure the interests of the cedar shakes and shingles industry in British Columbia.

My motion does not ask for bombast. It does not ask for a bull-horn, megaphone, diplomatic effort by the Government. It does not ask for posturing. It does not ask for rhetoric. It asks for the Government to wake up and realize that the interests of the Province of British Columbia have been sold out by all people interested in having a free trade debate at whatever cost.

Members of the House from the Province of British Columbia, particularly those in the Consevative Party—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. I am very sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but it is not possible to hear what he is saying.

Mr. Boudria: He is making an important speech, and we all want to hear it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I am informed that this is an important speech—and I have no doubt whatsoever on that issue—like all speeches of all Hon. Members. I ask Hon. Members to conduct their meetings outside the House.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I hope you will not dock the first few minutes from my time. In any event, I want to tell the House that I am not surprised. Hon. Members on the Government side of the House are paying as much attention to the motion which seeks to address the concerns of British Columbia as they paid to the letter from the Premier of British Columbia to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). They have as much concern about 20,000 people who may be unemployed in British Columbia as they have for the Premier of British Columbia who wrote a letter to the Government, ringing a bell, sounding an alarm, and demanding action three weeks ago. Yes, I am in good company.

On May 7, 20 days ago, the Premier of British Columbia wrote a letter to the Prime Minister which contained a warning. He said that 20,000 jobs were at stake and that hundreds of millions of dollars of GNP in that province were at risk. He said: " Mr. Prime Minister, I want you to wake up. I want you to quit posturing, to quit the rhetoric, and to quit looking for photo opportunities. Go to the privacy of your office, get on the telephone, and make a telephone call". The Prime Minister ignored him. The Prime Minister admitted today that he totally ignored the Premier of British Columbia. He said that he had assurances from somebody down south. He thought everything was okay in that context and that he could ignore a premier of this country.

This is the same Prime Minister, pumped up with his peacock feathers spread in colourful array for all to see, who said that he was promising a brand new day for Canada. This is the same Prime Minister who said "no more shall the premiers be ignored; we are going to operate on the basis of consultation and co-operation".

However, what did the Prime Minister do when 20,000 jobs and the accompanying paycheques which put bread and butter on the table were at stake? What did he do when one of the longest serving premiers in Canada wrote him a letter and took the unusual step of specifically asking him to telephone the President of the United States? What did he do? He shoved it in a file because there was no photo opportunity in a telephone call made in the privacy of his office. There was no opportunity to stand centre stage in Quebec City and sing "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" in making a telephone call to the President of the United States. There was no opportunity to grab the bull-horn or the megaphone, to beat one's chest, and to blow up and bombast in false, contrived, and phoney outrage in a private telephone call to the President of the United States. He ignored it.

That naive view was engendered in the Prime Minister when he was a young boy. He used to sit, in the eastern townships of Quebec, on the knee of an American industrial giant and sing for a quarter. I believe that naive view of the world has cost 20,000 people in British Columbia dearly. Hon. Members should also be aware that that faux pas, that naive reaction, or that inability to act in terms of its danger and potential impact upon the country is a bit like an iceberg. In Newfoundland we have colossal masses which float on the water—icebergs. Fishermen see mountains of blue ice sticking up and they say to themselves: "That is a hazard. I have to watch it because it can sink my boat". However, fishermen know that only 10 per cent of the iceberg is above water and that 90 per cent of that dangerous mass is below water. It is beautiful to look at but dangerous to get close to. The Prime Minister has not understood that the 35 per cent tariff which has now been imposed upon cedar shakes and shingles in British Columbia is but the tip of the iceberg.

We have an industry in this country worth $3 billion. It is located primarily in British Columbia and it is called softwood lumber. The cedar shakes and shingles industry is worth $250 million, but the softwood lumber industry is worth $3 billion in exports. Now there is a petition before the President of the United States to launch a countervail at the rate of 27 per cent against that $3 billion industry.

We have been talking primarily about British Columbia. One might ask why a Member from Newfoundland is becoming so exercised about jobs in British Columbia. It is for two reasons. We in Newfoundland believe that the Rockies are as much ours as are the Grand Banks. We in Newfoundland believe that the Athabasca region of Alberta is as much ours as is the Codroy Valley in western Newfoundland. We believe that we belong to every part of the country and that every part of the country belongs to us.

There is another reason. We in Newfoundland, Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia know that if a successful countervail can be launched on softwood lumber in B.C., based upon what the Americans call our subsidized stumpage system, which is nonsense, that same countervail measure can be applied to pulp and paper in Ontario, Quebec, and Atlantic Canada, based upon the same stumpage system. Obviously the Government of Canada has not understood that.

When the Premier of British Columbia wrote to the Prime Minister, I do not think he was worried about the next election. I do not think he was worried about posturing, as was the Prime Minister on Friday past. We all know that the Premier obviously had in his mind to leave political life. He wrote a letter which he thought represented the reality—the real threat to the people of his province. He specifically asked the Prime Minister to act. There was no action.

What are we talking about in British Columbia? We are talking about the loss of 4,000 direct jobs with an annual payroll in excess of $100 million. We are talking about raw material suppliers facing the loss of revenues in excess of $100 million. We are talking about losses in the trucking and transportation sector. We are talking about financial institutions that have decided this industry is beginning to look—and this is tragic—a little plague infested. They are neither willing to make the investments nor willing to stand behind the people in that industry. The seas have gotten rough and the financial institutions are bailing out of the action, Mr. Speaker. We are talking about 20,000 jobs. We are talking about increased unemployment in a province that now trails my province in terms of the highest unemployment numbers in the country. We are talking about the loss of millions in tax revenues to both the Province of British Columbia and the Government of Canada.

It is clear to everybody in this House that the Government of Canada frantically called the United States administration and said a month ago: "Wait a minute. We hear that this free trade negotiation is not going to pass the Senate Finance Committee. We hear the numbers are not there. We here in Canada are politically committed to this negotiation. You have to get this through, President Reagan." The President said: "Don't worry, Prime Minister. We are going to delay the vote." Remember the Americans did that, Mr. Speaker. They put it off for a week. Somehow in that seven day time frame the President went from not having enough votes to get free trade talks going in the Senate Finance Committee to having just enough votes, a 10-10 tie.

It is inconceivable to me and to anybody who thinks about it in this House that the United States President did not say to somebody in the Canadian Government: "Fellas, there is going to be a price to pay. It will cost something to get those extra votes. The guy I am dealing with is Senator Packwood who represents one of the most intense industrial areas in the United States and he wants something in return." Of course the President must have said that. Did he say to somebody in the Canadian Government that cedar shakes and shingles are what it will cost? I don't know. Did somebody in the Canadian Government say: "I don't want to hear about it. Don't tell me. Get the votes however you have to. Make sure the Senate goes along with this." So Ronald Reagan went out with B.C. cedar shakes and shingles and he purchased, he bought and he paid for with B.C. jobs a few more votes in the Senate Finance Committee.

Whether the Government of Canada was overtly involved a partner active in that deal or a partner passive by turning a blind eye, the Government has failed the best interests of this country. We now have a Government that has invested so much of its reputation, so much of its credibility, so much of its political capital in the notion that it has a special relationship with the United States Government, in the notion that free trade is good for us in Canada, that the Government now believes it has to have a free trade deal at any cost.

Politically the Government has put itself in a very weak position. Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Government has put itself in a position where the American administration understands that the Prime Minister of Canada has gone so far out on a limb in terms of his reputation in achieving a free trade deal that the Americans can put a tariff on the cedar industry in British Columbia, can penalize the softwood lumber industry that he will be reluctant to respond in an intelligent manner. That is what is happening and it could only happen when the Prime Minister of Canada behaves as if free trade negotiations will occur in the kind of comraderie that exists in a private back room tennis club somewhere, when the Prime Minister of Canada naively thinks that the tinkling of champagne glasses, being on stage singing "When Irish eyes are smiling" before the cameras is the same kind of comraderie that the Americans will bring to the free trade table. That is the only way that could happen.

Professor Alan Rugman of Dalhousie University, an advisor to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) on the International Trade Committee, said yesterday as reported in The Chronicle-Herald in Halifax that shingles tariff, big headline, "no surprise". The Professor went on say "I am not suggesting the Prime Minister is ignorant of what is happening. However, he must have been badly informed because nobody who knows anything about what is happening in the United States could have possibly been surprised."

We know the Premier of British Columbia was not surprised. He wrote the Prime Minister 20 days ago. We know the Prime Minister's own advisor on the International Trade Committee who gives advice to the Minister of Trade was not surprised. We know that the industry in British Columbia was not surprised. We know by looking at newspaper clippings going back over a month that the journalists were not surprised.

Why is it that the Prime Minister was shocked? Why was he surprised? We know the Prime Minister has a very bad memory, we all know that. He was in New York a few weeks ago telling the editorial board of The New York Times that when he heard about the tuna scandal, bang, the Minister of Fisheries was fired. Then he had to come back to Canada and be reminded that the Minister of Fisheries hung around for a few weeks. In fact, the Prime Minister himself defended him in this House.

Canada needs a Prime Minister and an administration that will speak to us from their hearts, their minds and from their sense of commitment, not from a Hollywood script. The photo opportunity Prime Ministerial stance that we have seen is too damned costly for this country. We cannot afford it.

The Liberal Party has put forward a position. We believe the Prime Minister ought to examine it, but all we got today from the Prime Minister was flippant answers. We are not calling upon the Prime Minister to get out his megaphone. We are not looking for megaphone diplomacy. We are not asking for the Prime Minister to beat his chest and call the President names. Quite frankly, it may make the Prime Minister feel better but it really doesn't do a lot for those 20,000 people who are wondering whether they will have a job next week. We have asked the Prime Minister to pick up the telephone to call the U.S. President. So far, either since he got this letter May 7 or since the tariff was imposed last Thursday, the Prime Minister has admitted today that he has not done that. He sent a telex to his good personal friend, Ronald Reagan. He is waiting for a reply to the telex. We have asked him to make a phone call to ask the President to reverse the tariff. That is the first thing we have asked for. Second, we have asked him during the course of that telephone call to get a commitment from the President that he will refuse the petition for a 27 per cent tariff on the softwood lumber industry, that that secondary action on a $3 billion industry over and above the action on a $250 million industry will not be allowed to go ahead. We have asked him to get an agreement from the President that if free trade negotiations are to proceed, that there be agreement on both sides that both countries will cease and desist from these kinds of tariff measures during the course of those negotiations.

We have said to the Prime Minister that failure to get those kinds of assurances from the President should then result at that point in a decision by the Government of Canada to reassess our involvement in free trade talks. At that point we must ask ourselves whether we are talking to tariff walls instead of talking to men of like mind and like ambition who want to have a fair trading system between our countries.

We have also told the Prime Minister that, despite the threats of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) yesterday, until that phone call is made we must not get involved in knee-jerk retaliation measures. To do that on cedar shakes and shingles at this stage, without ever having talked to the President, is to put at even greater risk a $3 billion softwood lumber industry.

That has been the position of the Liberal Party. It has not been our position to measure the Prime Minister by how hard he beats his chest. It has not been our position to measure the Prime Minister's performance by how loud he shouts. It has not been our position to measure the Prime Minister's response and competence by the names he dreams up to call the President. The Secretary of State for External Affairs has called him erratic and eccentric, and the Prime Minister has called him bizarre. It has been our position that those things may make the Prime Minister feel better, but that they do nothing for the people in British Columbia who may lose their jobs, and that they do not put bread and butter on the table.

The Prime Minister made sure that he did the right PR things to get himself on the front page of The Globe and Mail and in front of television cameras to beat his chest. However, he admitted today that since last Thursday he has not made a phone call to the President of the United States. He admitted today that he ignored the letter of the Premier of British Columbia, who saw this coming 20 days ago, and has not made one phone call.

The people in the forestry industry in British Columbia are not really interested in the rhetoric which crosses the aisle of the House of Commons. They are not really interested in whether cheap political points are scored. They are not interested in chest-beating or in hollow threats which emanate uselessly like the sounds of a hollow drum. They are interested in a Prime Minister who will go to the heart of the U.S. administration and express, on behalf of all Canadians, our sense of outrage and betrayal and our commitment not to allow our fellow Canadians in British Columbia stand alone during this time of need.

Mr. O'Neil: Mr. Speaker, I have observed the continuing flip-flop of the Official Opposition on the important issue of a trade agreement with the United States. If anything, this whole lumber issue highlights how correct we were during the last number of months to pursue friendly relations with the United States and how important it has been and will be for us to maintain communications. The Government has been strongly criticized by the Official Opposition for its overtures to the United States in its efforts to conclude a trade agreement. The Government has been accused of selling out to the United States. Now the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) has contradicted the Liberal critic who spoke on Friday. They now say that we must continue to negotiate. If there is any rhetoric and grandstanding taking place, it is being undertaken by the Official Opposition which finds itself closing the barn door after the horse is out.

Is it now the position of the Liberal Party that a trade agreement with the United States, which would prevent similar actions in the future, is part of the changing and flexible platform of the Liberal Party?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I know that the Member is a fairly well-meaning and decent individual. I have known him for some time. I am sure that within the befuddled and confused words he just expressed is the intention to contribute positively to the debate.

He will recall that the opposition Parties and some Conservatives in the country, including Conservative Premiers, expressed concern about the way in which the Government was proceeding with free trade negotiations. Our concern was primarily that the so-called friendly relations were not truly friendly. Any true friend is a friend on the basis of mutual respect between the parties. There is a sense of wanting to respect the opinions and attitudes of the other person. However, we also understand deep down that that individual demands our respect.

We have seen the Government give in to the Americans in the energy sector. Corporate boardrooms in the United States once again make decisions about Canadian energy policy. The Government has given the Americans a commitment to bring in a generic drug bill which will increase the drug costs of Canadians by $200 million or $300 million. Like a bull in a china shop the Polar Sea ploughed its way through Canadian waters without a whimper from across the way. The Foreign Investment Review Agency was swept under the carpet. The United States was told that it is just an appendage of the American economic model and that they are welcome within our borders.

Our administration has been busy sending bouquets and gifts of huge chunks of the Canadian economy across the border to the United States. Have they ever stopped to think that one day when the going gets tough they will have no damn cards left? In Newfoundland we understand that in a game of cards you do not put all your cards down on the table face up and expect to be able to play poker. The Member may not appreciate that. I repeat that real friendship is based on mutual respect rather than grovelling.

Mr. O'Neil: Do you want a trade agreement?

Mr. Tobin: My friend, I want a deal which serves Canada's best interests rather than a commitment to a slavish view that the way you get ahead in this world is by sitting on the knees of the American administration and singing songs with them. We have just found out that the Americans can be tough negotiators. It is about time that the Government and the administration took a cold shower and found out that we are living in the real world of trade.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the previous speaker who is the forestry spokesperson for the Liberal Party in Canada. We could not get a clear enough answer from the first Liberal speaker on two things which are not too difficult to respond to. One, what is the official position of the Liberal Party on the export of logs and bolts? Second, what is the precise position of the Liberal Party on the suspension of the present talks to encourage remedial action to be taken on this 35 per cent duty?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I will be pleased to answer those questions and will begin with the second one. The Member asked what the position of the Liberal Party is with respect to the suspension of these talks in order to encourage the return of some kind of sanity to the U.S. administration with respect to cedar shakes and shingles. The Member heard a very clear position this morning. If he was listening a short while ago he heard a repeat of that extremely clear and far-sighted position with respect to that matter. The answer is that we have asked the Prime Minister, just as the Member did during Question Period, whether he has contacted the U.S. President. The Member was asking whether he had a response. We are asking the Prime Miniser to get on the phone to the U.S. President—rather than dealing through a telex or the Ambassador—to ask for a reversal of the 35 per cent tariff. We also asked him to seek assurance that the tariff action now being petitioned against softwood lumber in Canada will be stopped by the President. We ask that an agreement be reached between our countries that these kinds of harrassment measures will not continue during the course of the free trade talks which have started and are ongoing. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) discovered that he cannot get that kind of assurance from the President of the United States. At that point it is our position that we ought to consider a cessation of those talks until such time as we believe again that they are in the interests, not only of the United States, but in the interests of Canada as well. I think that is fairly clear.

Some members of the New Democratic Party want to break off talks tomorrow. We have listened and consulted with both labour and industry in British Columbia, who have said that the position I have just articulated is the one they would find useful, thoughtful and constructive.

With respect to the export of logs and boats, let me say to the Member that I want to do some more consultation on that matter with people in the industry in British Columbia. I can tell him that I start from the position that if, on the one hand, there is a 35 per cent tariff on the export of that product from our country that has the effect of shutting down that industry in our country, then I have grave trouble with the notion that we should then take the raw material and send it south of the border to allow the American industry to capture Canadian jobs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated. Debate.

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, having heard the comments of the Hon. Members of the House who have preceded me in this discussion I will now proceed to identify and examine several important aspects of this issue as they relate to the motion at hand.

I would like to start by restating the motion, which has been put forward by the Hon. Member who has just spoken in this House. It says:

That this House urges that the Government press upon the Government of the United States the unanimous views of the House of Commons as expressed in its resolution of May 23, 1986, and insist that the United States rescind the 35 per cent duties on British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles and guarantee that similar measures or other possible trade action will not be applied to Canadian products in the future if the present comprehensive trade negotiations are to proceed.

This motion seems to address the current situation to a degree in a critical, yet constructive manner. It must be pointed out, however, that the perspective represented in this motion varies greatly from all of the views on this issue previously stated by the members of the Opposition.

Members opposite initially broached this issue with blind fervour and hollow claims of petulance. I am now pleased to say that perhaps they have come to their senses, applied some logic and, yes, perhaps even used a little bit of common sense.

It is slowly becoming obvious, evidenced through the motion we are debating today, that the members of the Official Opposition may finally have allowed reason to prevail over rhetoric. It is hard to make that statement when we have just heard the Hon. Member from Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin). However, I believe they have allowed a little bit of reason to creep into their thinking. It appears that the Members opposite have finally recognized the implication of President Reagan's action, and the important role that the free trade negotiations must play in avoiding similar actions in the future.

I really do not think it is possible for me to overemphasize the gravity of the situation which has been created as a result of the United States placing a 35 per cent tariff on all British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles as exports. The response that has been expressed by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) accurately and fully displays the shock and sense of dismay felt by all Members of the House, those in the industry and the Canadian public as a result of the actions taken last week by President Ronald Reagan on this issue.

Yes, our Government was aware that the imposition of a tariff on British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles was being considered. Yes, we were aware that the President was under considerable pressure from both political counterparts and industry lobby groups. I want this House to understand, however, and I want the people of this country to understand, that in no way did we expect the action against B.C. cedar shakes and shingles to be levied in this form, as it is so contradictory to all that Mr. Reagan has been promoting for so long. It is even more appalling that such a rash and unjustifiable action should have been taken without the President having first advised the Government of his intentions.

The Prime Minister has denounced the President's actions as being at variance with all his previous contentions, and as being totally unacceptable to the Canadian Government and to the Canadian people. It is reassuring to know that the Leader of our Government is prepared to take the appropriate actions to defend the people of our country from adverse measures such as this one.

It is the Canadian people who truly deserve mention when this issue is under debate. After all, it is the population of this country who must live in the wake of this irresponsible protectionist act on the part of the President of the United States. Undoubtedly all of the people of this nation will be affected to some degree.

I would like to comment in some detail on the direct and indirect effects this action will have on the people of British Columbia, but more specifically on the people from my riding, that is, the people from Mission—Port Moody. It is a region that survives almost solely on this resource-based industry and on directly related businesses. Its economy rests on a delicate balance, even when times are good, because, as we know, mother nature is both unpredictable and unrelenting.

Men and women who work in the forest related industries are familiar with trying times, and have certainly had to contend with their share of strife. The forest industry has endured a long and difficult struggle over the past five years, during which only the toughest have survived. Now, in the face of a 35 per cent tariff on all cedar shakes and shingle export products, it appears that there will be few survivors, if any.

Since the International Trade Commission first initiated action in this area I have continuously kept up to date on the status of the serious deliberations surrounding the cedar shake and shingle industry. I have been interested in what steps were being taken by our Government to influence any action that might result from the deliberations. I have been concerned for the people in my riding, I have been concerned for all British Columbians.

I have raised this issue three times in this House over the past month. During these statements I have stressed the vital importance of the B.C. cedar shake and shingle industry, and the necessity for a sound trade agreement to ensure the continued healthy existence of this industry, the lifeblood of British Columbia. On April 28, I said the following, as reported on page 12693 of Hansard:

The recommendation of the U.S. International Trade Commission for a 35 per cent tariff on Canadian red cedar shakes and shingles is a threat to jobs in British Columbia, in particular to Mission—Port Moody, the heart of Canada's shake and shingle industry. While trade negotiations will not in the meantime preclude traditional action against Canadian exports, they will lessen the threat.

On May 8, as reported at page 13080 of Hansard, I said:

One out of ten Canadian jobs is related to the forest industry. In British Columbia, forestry is our lifeblood. We cannot allow our lifeblood industry to fall prey to protectionist measures in the United States. The current threat of a 35 per cent U.S. tariff on red cedar shakes and shingles would be devastating to the B.C. economy and particularly to the Mission—Port Moody area.

On May 12, as reported at page 13167 of Hansard, I stated:

Last year we sold more than $100 billion worth of goods and services to Americans. We are the closest and most important trading partner of the largest and richest market in the world.

We must secure our access to that market if Canadian export industries, such as our lumber industry and the B.C. cedar shake and shingle industry, are to survive.

● (1540)

I have lived up to my responsibility and I shall not quit.

I want to deal now with what was said by the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) in the House yesterday during Question Period. The Hon. Member may be a neighbour but she certainly has a lot of nerve pretending to speak for the people of Mission or for any of my constituents. I want the House and the people of Mission—Port Moody to know that the Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam has actually opposed economic development in my riding. She has gone so far as to attempt to block a strategic economic development project in my riding. She has supported the doomsayers and apostles of the status quo. Now she tries to portray herself as a saviour of the people in my riding. What nerve!

Ms. Jewett: Somebody has to save them, Gerry.

Mr. St. Germain: The Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam wrote to my colleague, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), some months ago asking him not to proceed with an important runway extension project at Pitt Meadows Airport.

Mr. Fulton: Stick to the subject.

Mr. St. Germain: It relates to the project. It is tied in to forestry.

Mr. Fulton: You are the Member.

Mr. St. Germain: This project was intended solely to enhance economic development in the area.

Mr. Fulton: You are trying to divert attention from an incompetent Government. Your Government is incompetent.

Ms. Jewett: It's pretty sad.

Mr. Fulton: Mulroney has not even phoned.

Mr. St. Germain: The Minister of Transport proceeded with the—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. There will be time for questions and comments. Let the Hon. Member finish his debate. I am sure I will be able to recognize both Hon. Members.

Ms. Jewett: Okay, but it is a real red herring.

Mr. St. Germain: Not surprisingly, the Minister proceeded with this important project and I had the honour of attending a ceremony last Saturday, marking its completion. On hand with the Minister of Transport were many of those whose livelihoods depend on forestry and its related industries. That is what made this project so important. These are the people whom the Member opposite claims to defend. They are the ones whom in fact she knowingly proceeded to hinder when she tried to block this great project.

Ms. Jewett: What was the project?

Mr. St. Germain: The Pitt Meadows Airport.

Ms. Jewett: Why not tell the House all about it?

Mr. St. Germain: Where does the Member really stand? Where does she get her nerve? The people of Mission—Port Moody do not need to hear any more of her lectures. They know where I stand. I stand to protect their jobs and I have fought and will continue to fight for their interests.

Mr. Fulton: And your friend, Ron Reagan.

Mr. St. Germain: Economic development in British Columbia is our goal. The Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam has pure petty politics as her prime objective. The people must understand that that is the NDP way, the socialist way and the wrong way.

It has only been through continual receipt of up to date information that I have been able to stay on top of this critical issue.

Mr. Fulton: You free enterprisers are doing a great job.

Mr. St. Germain: I certainly appreciate the assistance I have received from my colleagues, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) and the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) in this regard.

Further to my efforts to remain fully informed, I have kept in close contact with local and regional representatives of the industry, as well as representatives of local Governments whose municipalities will be severely affected by this action. These meetings have proved to be very informative. It is necessary for the Government to have complete briefings from all parties that are affected because their contribution provides us with an understanding of how this action will impact the people in the communities, whose entire survival rests with this industry.

Yesterday, I had the opportunity to speak with Mayor John Agnew of Mission. His outrage was only surpassed by his real concern for the future of his community. Mayor Agnew told me that the people of this area are petrified and that the entire area is devastated. He said that bankers were already starting to withdraw the lines of credit upon which shake and shingle producers depend for their cash flow. One mill has already shut down, laying off 75 workers.

This morning I also spoke to another mill operator who told me that his bank had already contacted him to say that his credit line was in jeopardy in view of the current situation.

At this time I want to make a plea to all those in the banking community to take a responsible role in their community and not over-react at this particular time. As was pointed out, the entire scenario has not evolved and so a true evaluation cannot be made. Panic on the part of the banking community would just add to the dilemma we are already facing.

This might be viewed as a knee-jerk reaction, but a considerable number of questions remain unanswered over this entire issue. Confusion has lead to nervousness, and this has lead to the shut-down. Confusion still exists over the effective date of the tariff. The American administration has yet to clarify on what date the tariff will be imposed. There are rumours about retroactive action and there is a question about the price on which the tariff will be calculated: the price at the mill or the price on delivery.

This confusion is understandable and it must be cleared up so that the long-term adjustments can be made. Hopefully, these adjustments will not be necessary at all. However, the short-term problem is still the one that looms large today. With 3,000 to 4,000 jobs about to be lost, communities like Mission could end up as virtual ghost towns. I want to reiterate how this will impact on Mission, a community already plagued with an unusually high unemployment rate.

As tragic as it may sound, the truth is that unemployment in the Mission area is currently about 27 per cent. Studies conducted a year and a half or two years ago by the Fraser Valley College indicated actual unemployment in Mission and the surrounding area at close to 50 per cent. Who would want to contemplate the social and economic consequences of this latest blow on a community suffering as this one already has?

What did the previous Government do to head off this tariff action when it was first rumoured three years ago? Did it heed these warnings? Yesterday, I spoke to Mayor Agnew of Mission, as did the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney), the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, who has taken a lead role in making certain that everything possible is being done for British Columbia. Let me relate what Mayor Agnew told me yesterday. He said: "We met with every key member of the previous Liberal Government three years ago and warned them that this problem was there and that action like this was coming." He said: "Needless to say, nothing happened. They didn't respond".

I spoke to Mayor Griffen of Maple Ridge. He said: "It is devastating and I have nothing else to say, Gerry." Ladies and—

Mr. Fulton: Where are you going to give this speech, Gerry?

Mr. St. Germain: I am so concerned about the people in Mission—Port Moody that I am thinking of the ladies and gentlemen there rather than Members here because I think we are insignificant in the over-all picture of this situation.

The response of the previous Liberal Government was ignorance, arrogance and complete indifference—so typical of the Liberal response to British Columbia concerns for so long.

Today, our Government has responded and we plan to act. We have the information at hand that has been provided by the industry itself. They are concerned, and rightly so, for their industry and their future. They assembled a data sheet which clearly amplifies the impact of this industry on the British Columbia and Canadian economy.

The tariff as imposed by President Reagan will have the effect of a direct loss of 4,000 Canadian jobs, equalling a payroll of $100 million and benefits of $28 million. There will also be a considerable dollar effect on the Canadian economy due to lost spending: $100 million in raw materials such as logs and blocks; $55 million in transportation; $25 million in supplies; and $36 million in short-term financing. This results in a total of $344 million in a direct job and dollar negative effect on the Canadian economy. Indirectly, there will also be an effect on 20,000 additional jobs, as was pointed out earlier.

The cost to the provincial and federal Governments in unemployment insurance claims will be overwhelming, to say the least. The loss to provincial and federal coffers from tax revenue will be millions of dollars. There will also be related effects on transportation and wholesale and retail contracting industries in the United States.

It must be made clear to everyone involved that the protectionist Act by the President serves to destroy a significant portion of the United States economy as well as ours in Canada. The destiny of the American producer is not directly related to the state of the Canadian industry. There are other significant reasons why they are not competitive. The United States producers have a shortage of raw material and lack of control over what existing materials there are. Prices for raw materials are higher than they can afford to pay. In addition, the American industry has failed to automate and expand capital to reduce unit costs. These factors, in conjunction with the loss of traditional markets, is what has caused the decline in the American industry. The punitive action taken against the Canadian red cedar shake and shingle industry will do a lot of damage to this industry within a matter of months.

I wish to conclude on a very positive note. This tariff action comes as a complete shock to us all. The potential for disastrous effects is frightening. On the other hand, an ironic situation flows from the events of the last few days. This tariff action points clearly to Canada's reason for pursuing a comprehensive trade agreement with the United States. It is telling why Ambassador Reisman's efforts are so vital to Canada. If he achieves nothing else at the negotiation table, Ambassador Reisman must convince the U.S. that protectionism and actions such as the one launched by the President on Thursday, are a threat to the economic future of both our countries.

Certainly, this tariff cannot and will not be forgotten. We must continue to act in a manner which will assure the people of British Columbia that their interests come first, that their livelihoods will be protected and that any trade agreement will be in the best interests of all working Canadians. Our best customer, our largest market, is at stake. Canadian jobs and security are at stake. I plead with all Hon. Members of the House today to band together to find a resolve to this terrible situation which faces the people of Mission—Port Moody, British Columbia and all of Canada.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I was interested to hear the remarks of the Hon. Member. I know he does follow this industry with care. However, I just want to ask him about the politics of this matter. His own Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) made it clear in the House just an hour ago that he has neither telephoned President Reagan, nor has he been telephoned, and he has not had any kind of written or telex response to his letter, and so on, from last Friday. I have been around here long enough to know how this place works. I think the people of Mission—Port Moody should be advised as to how this place works. The only way a situation such as this can be quickly resolved is through the Prime Minister's Office. The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) can do things, as well as can the Minister of International Trade (Mr. Kelleher), and so on. However, the fact is that President Reagan has not yet signed this 35 per cent duty into law, so we have a very small window opening in which to move. If the Government moves with speed and with some intelligence, we can get that 35 per cent duty taken off and we can get rid of it.

The Hon. Member is the chairman of the federal Conservative caucus. Why does he think the Prime Minister has not telephoned President Reagan? Is it not high enough on the agenda or are there other things he would rather be doing? Is it in fact true that the Prime Minister has known all along that the deal which was going to be cut to get these free trade talks going and get past the 10-10 stalemate vote in the Senate Finance Committee, was that the forest industry, particularly the shake and shingle industry, would be hung out to dry, as it is of this moment?

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, why the Prime Minister has not taken the initiative I believe has been clearly enunciated. On Friday he sent a telex. Monday was a national holiday in the United States. I would like to read the telex into the record. It states:

Dear Mr. President,

I want to convey to you the profound disappointment of my government at the action you announced yesterday regarding softwood shingles and shakes. The imposition of a 35 per cent tariff is a punitive measure against Canadian products. This unjustifiable action is all the more appalling in the context of freer trade negotiations between our two countries having been officially initiated this week.

This American initiative is pure protectionism, the precise thing you and I pledged, in Quebec and Washington, we would seek to avoid. Canada is now placed in the position of being forced to consider an appropriate response.

I deeply regret this action by the Administration.

I do not know how much stronger one can get. I believe the Prime Minister has lived up to his responsibility as we knew he would. The people of this country gave him a mandate to govern, and we will govern the way we see fit. I know the Hon. Member is sincere in his thoughts in wanting to reach a solution. I know there is a political aspect in his question, but I also know he would sooner lose this one politically and win it for the industry and the province, as I would.

I can assure the Hon. Member that I will be speaking to the Prime Minister on this issue, as I have spoken to him before. If it is felt necessary within the wisdom of the operation of our Government, I am certain the Prime Minister will make the call, but at a time he deems correct. I think we must look at the submission he made to the President of the United States last Friday. I am sure the proper action will be taken in due course.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I know the Hon. Member is on the record as opposing the log and bolt exports, as is his Government now. The Liberal Party seems to be the only Party left in the world which does not understand that particular part of the issue. I would like to hear further from the Hon. Member because it seems clear to me from wide consultations that if this 35 per cent duty is left against the shake and shingle industry of British Columbia, if we do not move to have it removed while it is still as yet unsigned by the President, the U.S. will take that as a signal from the Mulroney administration that it is prepared to accept the imposition and maintenance of it for the next five years. The duty will come into play on June 6. The signal the U.S. administration will take from this—and I understand this from discussions I have had with members of the U.S. Congress in both the Senate and the House—will be that Secretary of Commerce Baldridge next Tuesday will be given the green light to initiate the International Trade Commission investigation into injury of Canadian softwood going to the United States.

I know the Hon. Member has read the case law in the carbon black case and knows that the rules of the game have been changed in relation to the 1983 countervail we won. I would like to hear the Hon. Member's comments because I have been led to believe, that if the Prime Minister does not phone and ask that this be taken away before the President pulls his pen out of his holster and signs it into law, it will be the green light for the Department of Commerce to begin the investigation next Tuesday against our softwood industry, and there go a million jobs, not 4,000 jobs.

Mr. St. Germain: Again I reiterate, that I do not think the Prime Minister could enunciate his position more clearly than in the letter he sent to the President of the United States. There is no one in this House who thinks we should stand back on this particular issue. As the Hon. Member knows, Cabinet at this particular time is deciding how the situation should be approached. I agree with the Hon. Member that the only way is for the 35 per cent tariff on cedar shakes and shingles to be rescinded. I am literally terrified, like every other British Columbian or any Canadian, that if we are subject to this type of protectionism from the United States, which is our largest trading partner, we are in serious jeopardy. Our total economy is in jeopardy. I want to point out to the Hon. Member that it was the foresight of our Government and its initiative that have triggered these free trade talks. That is the only way out of this dilemma. That is why we cannot suspend the talks. But we must not start a trade war.

• (1600)

The Hon. Member questions the actions taken. If I were sitting in opposition I would be doing exactly what he is doing. However, I wish to point out to the Hon. Member that we have taken the strongest action that has ever been taken in an instance such as this one.

Mr. Fulton: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—CANADA-U.S. TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra):

That this House urges that the Government press upon the Government of the United States the unanimous views of the House of Commons as expressed in its resolution of May 23, 1986, and insist that the United States rescind the 35 per cent duties on British Columbia cedar shakes and shingles and guarantee that similar measures or other possible trade action will not be applied to Canadian products in the future if the present comprehensive trade negotiations are to proceed.

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I wish to begin by commending the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) for his very moving remarks about the real and present danger to the community of Mission and possibly other communities in the Fraser Valley becoming ghost towns if they lose one of their fundamental and vital industries such as the shake and shingle industry which we are discussing today. As representative of the neighbouring constituency I can tell the Hon. Member that many of the people living in my riding are employed in the industry, or at least were employed in the industry until now. I feel as deeply about the matter as he does himself. I do not intend in any way to be negative or purely oppositionist. On the contrary, I wish to be as positive and as constructive as I can.

In that connection I say to the Hon. Member that I was very concerned at the time of the airport expansion about which he spoke to have received a great many communications from residents of his constituency who felt that an insufficient number of environmental impact studies had been done before the contracts were let. These people requested a formal public hearing on what environmental impact studies had been done. They were concerned with the shortcomings of them. I see that the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) is in the House. I am sure he would join with those of us who nowadays are concerned about environmental impacts. It was in that connection that I took up the cause which many of his constituents presented to me at that time.

Toward the end of his remarks the Hon. Member said that he would be speaking to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) about the horrendous impact the U.S. tariff on cedar shakes and shingles will have. As my colleague from Skeena has pointed out, the Hon. Member is chairman of the Progressive Conservative caucus and is therefore an influential person with the Prime Minister. Had there been time I would have asked him why he has not already spoken to the Prime Minister. Given the consequences of this tariff, if we cannot have it revoked, why would the Hon. Member, as chairman of the caucus as well as a concerned British Columbian, not have said immediately to his Leader, the Prime Minister: "Given your good, friendly and warm relations with the President of the United States, will you phone him right away as a follow-up to the letter which was telexed to him?" I suppose that the President receives a million telexes a day. On Friday there should have been a follow-up in terms of a phone call to the President before the holiday weekend commenced. I say that because it is possible that the President might have been gone after Friday. Why did the Hon. Member not ask the Prime Minister in the most forceful terms possible to phone the President immediately?

Some of us think that the President does not think about Canada every time he wakes up in the morning. Hon. Members will remember that the Prime Minister once said that it would be a good thing if he were to do that. He does not think of Canada very frequently at all. He certainly was not thinking of Canada when he decided in favour of this horrendous tariff on cedar shakes and shingles. I do not think Canada even crossed his mind, if he has a mind on this matter. Therefore, it becomes all the more important for the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody to say immediately to the Prime Minister: "It is absolutely essential for you to get through by phone directly to the President".

It may be that the Prime Minister tried to do that, although he did not indicate that he did, and could not get through. I do not think that that was the case. The Prime Minister has not indicated that. The fact of the matter is that he did not try to reach the President on Friday. Because he did not try to do so, I must say to the Hon. Member that that makes it very difficult for the rest of us from British Columbia to think that the Prime Minister really knows how serious the situation is in the Hon. Member's constituency and in my constituency. I do not think he realizes that if this action is followed through with some other type of action in terms of the softwood lumber industry generally, how absolutely horrendous it will be for British Columbia. This is our country's major export, something which most Canadians do not even know. It is not widely known how important the industry is to the whole of Canada.

I wish to say to the Hon. Member that by failing to have talked to the Prime Minister in terms of urging him to follow up his telex with a direct phone call to the President, I am sorry to say that we have substantially reduced our chances of getting the 35 per cent tariff decision reversed.

It is important to remember that this is not a countervail measure. It was imposed under Section 201 of the United States Tariff Act, which is the section which allows a group of producers to apply to the administration for relief from imports which they say are causing injury. The reason I emphasize this is that at no time did they say that there was a subsidy involved in the Canadian industry, nor has there ever been.

I think it is very important to remember that we have had free trade in shakes and shingles for half a century or more, although everyone keeps talking about the importance of the free trade negotiations. There was free trade in the shake and shingle industry but the U.S. shake and shingle producers applied to the ITC last September saying that they were being injured by imports which had taken place prior to last September.

As well, it is important to recall that the decision of the ITC was split. Only three members of the ITC recommended a duty and the other three took our position, which was that there was no injury to the producers. I mention this because I would like to hear from the Government the reasoning it is following when it says that this kind of thing will be avoided under the free trade arrangements that are extolled by Government Members. Quite frankly, the chances of having our market in the United States diminish will probably be even greater because of the negotiations that are taking place.

I think the Government is misleading us when it suggests that, through these negotiations, we are somehow going to protect let alone enhance our share of the U.S. market. As far as the shake and shingle industry is concerned, the result of the bargaining will probably be to reduce drastically our share of the U.S. market. I am quite confident that unless this is pointed out now, even if we do get the 35 per cent tariff decision reversed, we will still give up a substantial share of the U.S. market in this particular industry through these negotiations. Far from enhancing our access to U.S. markets, supposedly the purpose of these negotiations, we will end up seriously limiting it.

The same applies to countervail. Countervail is the issue with respect to the softwood lumber industry about which we have heard a lot today. Most of us on this side of the House feel that the President's decision to go ahead with a tariff on shakes and shingles despite the even split in the ITC is a political signal of enormous dimensions indicating the nature of the countervail on softwood lumber which is to come next. It is a message to all of us in British Columbia that softwood lumber is next.

I cannot take as much reassurance as I would like from the statement the Prime Minister made today indicating that the tariff on shakes and shingles was bizarre, erratic and a one-shot deal. Most of the people in the industry in British Columbia to whom I have spoken, both management and union, have felt that on the contrary, it is a clear political signal to get us softened up for the next blow which will be a countervail of 27 per cent on softwood lumber.

I guess it is fair to say that most British Columbians have known for a long time that this was in the works. I could not quite understand the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody who said that they knew it was coming but they did not know what form the action would take. I would have thought that the action would be either a tariff or a countervail. In any event, in view of the fact that British Columbians have said that they knew for nine months that some kind of action was coming first on shakes and shingles and then on softwood lumber, I cannot for the life of me understand why the chairman of the Progressive Conservative caucus, a British Columbia Member of Parliament, did not say immediately on Friday to the Prime Minister: "Get on the phone". The most disappointing remark made by the Hon. Member is that he will be speaking to the Prime Minister.

The ironic thing about the entire shake and shingle issue is that it will probably ruin the shake and shingle industry in the United States as well. As all British Columbia Members know, U.S. producers will gain very little from this tariff. Certainly, as the Minister has assured us, they will not have access to further raw product. Their own shortage of cedar logs will surely mean that they will be able to expand very little. This means that another industry will fill in the gap and the shake and shingle share will diminish even further. Again, that is why it is such an erratic decision. It does not even benefit the shake and shingle industry in the United States.

Mr. Fulton: Tile and asphalt.

Ms. Jewett: Tile and asphalt will probably be the chief beneficiaries of it. This is another reason why the B.C. forest industry is so shocked by this decision. It really does seem to be totally irrational.

Although I hope it is not too late to have the Prime Minister get on the phone to the President of the United States, that is about the only thing that is left for the Government of Canada to do in order to try to get this tariff decision reversed. As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), has pointed out, this decision has not yet been signed into law. Therefore, there is still time.

The House agreed unanimously last Friday that the U.S. should rescind this duty. We found today during Question Period that the Prime Minister was not really seized of the absolute necessity for the sake of British Columbia workers and all Canadians of impressing directly but in a friendly fashion upon the President of the United States the consequences for British Columbia of this decision and any other decisions that may be taken. As well, he is not seized of the absolute necessity and importance, while negotiations are under way, of not undercutting the negotiations by taking unilateral action in raising tariffs or imposing countervails.

In conclusion, I hope that members of the Conservative caucus from British Columbia will treat this matter in a more urgent fashion, take it directly to the Prime Minister, who in turn will take it directly to the President. If they do not do that, I would really have to wonder how urgent they think the matter is.

Mr. Fraleigh: Mr. Speaker, I share the Hon. Member's concern about the plight of the shake and shingle industry in British Columbia, but I have some problem with it. I come from an industry which has enjoyed free trade with the United States for the past 25 years, if not for the past 50 years. In all cases it has been a winner under that free trade arrangement.

It amazes me that the Hon. Member and her Party can be opposed to a formalized trading arrangement with our major trading partner; it never ceases to amaze me. It is like Bob White. He does not want us to enter into these negotiations. He has a free trade arrangement for a bilateral negotiated agreement with the United States, so he does not want anyone else to participate in advantages similar to those of the automobile industry.

Why would an Hon. Member, who comes from a constituency which has enjoyed the benefits of a liberalized trading arrangement between the two countries, be so opposed to it?

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the Hon. Member, we are not opposed to existing free trade arrangements, certainly in the lumber industry.

Mr. Fraleigh: What about the other people who want it?

Ms. Jewett: We are not opposed to those either. If we could get auto pacts with guarantees similar to the ones built into the Auto Pact, we would be all for it.

Mr. St. Germain: That is administered trade.

Ms. Jewett: The Hon. Member is absolutely right. We have said all along that the Auto Pact is administered trade. Indeed we would be very happy if our tough bargainers could get other pacts of that nature. We have always said that. We have always said that where we have existing free trade, we would want to see it continue. However, when we discover things like what the U.S. is doing today to the shake and shingle industry, a highly competitive and efficient industry—

Mr. Fulton: Free for 50 years.

Ms. Jewett: Yes, it has been free for 50 years. We are simply warning, and warning countless times, against what, under a so-called comprehensive agreement, we will have to give up. I am afraid that we will have to give up everything from the access to the shake and shingle market which we have enjoyed for the past six years, to possibly the Auto Pact or any similar agreement that has been developed. The chances of securing or guaranteeing free trade in shakes and shingles become far less. The chances of other areas having genuine free trade, which we should like to see, may become far less than they would if we did what we have argued all along, that is, conduct our dealings, arguments, arrangements, and bilateral talks with the United States on a sectoral basis.

Mr. Fraleigh: Mr. Speaker, again it never ceases to amaze me. Every time the Hon. Member talks, she increases the reason for going to a free trade or a freer trade arrangement with the United States.

I would like the Hon. Member to do something for me when she returns to her office tonight. She should have her researcher pull out the speeches of the major NDP speakers and labour leaders of the day prior to the signing of the Auto Pact, for they are a verbatim record of what we are hearing from her Party and from Bob White today.

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I do not have to pull out those speeches. I was in the House at the time and remember a great deal about the Auto Pact debate and what everyone said in it. It is like talking to someone whose mind is totally closed—

Mr. Fraleigh: You are right, you are right.

Ms. Jewett: —when I am talking to the Hon. Member. I wish I could ask him a question. If he participates in the debate, I will. Let us take the shake and shingle industry, for example. At present 75 per cent of it is under free trade, under genuine competition. As the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody pointed out, the Americans are not as competitive as we are in this area.

Mr. Fraleigh: Agreed.

Ms. Jewett: We have earned 75 per cent of that market. Is the Hon. Member telling me that under free trade negotiations we will enhance that percentage? Is that what we will get from free trade negotiations?

Mr. Fulton: Not likely.

Ms. Jewett: That is what he is telling me, and I am telling him that we will not. He should not mislead people into thinking that we will. Under these negotiations, chances are that the United States will insist upon reducing our share of the market back to 35 per cent or 40 per cent. We are talking at cross purposes.

Mr. Fraleigh: You bet we are.

Ms. Jewett: It is because Hon. Members on that side of the House and in the Tory Party do not seem to understand. That is very likely to happen in the shake and shingle industry, and the people in the industry know it. This is why they are now beginning to get very serious about these infamous comprehensive free trade negotiations which the Government is pushing.

[Translation]

Mrs. Landry: Mr. Speaker, earlier, my hon. friend said, in referring to the Conservatives, that "Your mind is closed".

However, I have the impression it is the New Democratic Party's mind that is very much closed. We all agree that the Auto Pact has been of great benefit to the automobile industry. How can the Hon. Member not be in favour of other sectors in our industry being regulated by the same kind of pact, which would be just as beneficial for other industries?

And I fail to see why they are opposed to negotiations on free trade, when we hope to negotiate an agreement that will in fact reduce the likelihood of the kind of intervention we are seeing today, an agreement that will benefit all industries in this country.

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her question. I can only assure her that we would like to see dozens of auto pacts. What makes the Auto Pact so important is the guarantees built into it in terms of Canadian employment. That is what is not being negotiated.

Mrs. Landry: It is the beginning of discussions.

Ms. Jewett: It has been made fairly clear so far that that is not what the Canadian Government is negotiating. It has rejected the sector by sector approach and the application of the kind of regulations which we see in the Auto Pact, as did the previous Government. Those have been rejected. We do not think that they should have been rejected. It is the kind of negotiation which should be taking place sector by sector.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, in her speech the Hon. Member—and I am sure it was inadvertent, not intentional—stated that we knew it was coming. That statement was made by Mayor John Agnew when he spoke three years ago. He made that statement to the Liberal administration at that time. In order to clarify that point, let me point out that it was not my statement; it was the statement of Mayor John Agnew.

I find it strange that the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) is somewhat like the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner)—a johnny-come-lately. I have not heard her make one statement in the House on shakes and shingles, nor on the lumber industry.

Mr. Fulton: Nor have 210 of your Tory Members.

Mr. St. Germain: I have not seen her rising to defend this particular issue. I have heard the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) on the issue. Now she is to be the the saviour of all. I agree that it is important—

• (1630)

Mr. Fulton: There is only one B.C. Tory in the House.

Mr. St. Germain: Let us not get into that, Mr. Speaker. The NDP did not have a speaker ready at three o'clock. Let us not get nasty about things like that.

An Hon. Member: There were two Tory Members from B.C.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Member knows that that is wrong. There were three speakers here from our Party.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Ms. Jewett: I was waiting for the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) to speak. Sorry.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. Notwithstanding the number of Members in the House, we certainly can hear them. They are all being heard.

Mr. St. Germain: The Member over there started it, I didn't.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Perhaps the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) would be kind enough to wrap up.

Mr. St. Germain: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam alluded to the fact that I had not spoken to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). I can assure the Hon. Member that the Prime Minister was in direct contact with me on the weekend.

Ms. Jewett: I said Friday.

Mr. St. Germain: Anyone in Canada who does not feel that the Prime Minister is not on top of this issue, is not current with it and is not concerned about it, is unequivocally wrong. The Prime Minister has spoken to me on three occasions since.

Mr. Robinson: What about beforehand?

Mr. St. Germain: I can assure Hon. Members that we know what is going on in this country. We will provide the leadership that we promised Canadians we would give them. I can assure the Hon. Members that the country is in good hands.

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, it gives me pleasure to spend a few moments this afternoon speaking in support of the motion of my hon. friend and colleague from Newfoundland. I had the opportunity of being here on Friday when we first learned of the quite extraordinary action taken by the President of the United States to impose a 35 per cent safeguard tariff against red cedar shakes and shingles which come from the Province of British Columbia. We have heard much about that this afternoon and we will hear much about it in the days ahead. What I would like to share with you and my colleagues present here, Mr. Speaker, is the mystery that surrounds what has taken place, the mystery of this 35 per cent tariff.

Canadians not familiar with the background of this action by the President will also be interested in joining with us in trying to solve this extraordinary puzzle. I hope, Mr. Speaker, as I put the facts to you, you will join with me in this exercise, although clearly I do not expect you to pass judgment or to furnish an answer and, as a matter of fact as my comments will demonstrate, I do not have all the answers either. I have some suspicions, but I do not have all the answers.

First, we are not dealing here with a "whodunit"; we know who did it. The President did it. He exercised his rights under Section 201 of the relevant provisions of the U.S. trade laws. He imposed the tariff with his own hand. We all saw him pull the trigger. This is not a smoking gun mystery. The question is not who did it, the question here is why he did it, which is one of the questions in the puzzle that we are called upon to resolve. What motivated this quite extraordinary action by the very apostle of free trade?

[Translation]

Perhaps I may repeat this for our francophone colleagues, Mr. Speaker. Last Thursday, on May 22, President Reagan decided to apply a severe tariff clause, covering a five-year period, to imports of Canadian cedar shakes and shingles, two softwood products.

Mr. Speaker, considering the President's ideas and philosophy on the importance of free trade today, how are we supposed to interpret this action? Against the background of the bilateral negotiations being pursued, this action was unacceptable, and we are trying to get to the bottom of this mystery this afternoon.

[English]

The first part of the mystery, which I intend to go into at more length, Mr. Speaker, is, why did the President impose the tariff? Why did he stab his buddy, his friend, his fellow Irishman, who shares the northern half of this continent as leader of a state, in the back? Why did the President go back on the so-called representations which the Prime Minister says he has received over a period of time at the Shamrock conferences and elsewhere?

The second part of this mystery is even more intriguing. The facts have come to light over the last few days with respect to knowledge which the Government had on this potential action. Why was the Government surprised? Why was the Prime Minister surprised? Why was the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) surprised when we now know that the Government had in its hand for nearly three weeks—in fact, the letter was dated May 7 from the Premier of British Columbia—a letter which warned that the President might indeed take this action?

I am sure that everyone in this House is puzzled. Everybody in this House would like to know the answer to the mystery, and I will come back to it, Mr. Speaker. The Secretary of State for External Affairs was quite explicit in the statements that he made on television over the weekend that he was surprised and that he was shocked.

Let me return to the first question. Why did the President of the United States impose this tariff on the day following the announcement of negotiations between Simon Reisman on behalf of Canada and Peter Murphy on behalf of the United States? Can we believe that the timing was accidental? I suppose one could always argue that in a Government as large as the U.S. administration it is possible that the left hand may not always know what the right hand is doing. I would say though that that is an unlikely answer to the mystery. I think we have to assume that the imposition of this tariff by the President in these circumstances, coming as it did at the very beginning of negotiations, was a negotiating tactic. What was it designed to accomplish?

I suspect that every Member of the House is familiar with many sports. Let us take football, for example. A tactic in football early in the game is to rough up the quarterback, intimidate him and make him nervous. In tennis, there are some tennis players who deliberately take the first opportunity to drive a ball right at their opponent when he or she is vulnerable at the net to shake him or her up, to intimidate them. We all know about the close pitch in baseball—intimidate the batter. I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that what might have been intended by this gesture was to soften up the Canadian Government, to let it see the claws of the eagle at the very outset of these negotiations. Of course, the Secretary of State for External Affairs suggested as much during his interview on the CTV program Question Period. I think that he probably believes, as does the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), that this was not just an accident of timing but that it was timed very carefully to coincide with the launching of these bilateral discussions between Canada and the United States.

Think about what an extraordinary gesture this was, Mr. Speaker. Let us reflect upon the reaction of the Prime Minister to the imposition of this tariff. On Friday I questioned the Prime Minister. I asked him whether, in view of his relationship with the President, he had advance notice that this might take place. I asked him, if he did have advance notice, what steps were taken to head it off. Of course, we received no answer to that question, although we do know, as the record now shows, that Premier Bennett had given very adequate advance notice to the Government of Canada with respect to what might unfold with respect to the imposition of this particular tariff.

Let us think about that special relationship. The Prime Minister of Canada has made a very major personal investment in the special relationship between himself and President Reagan. He has tried to draw the Government of Canada closer to the American administration and has tried to bring Canada closer to the United States. From the outset he has made a major investment in goodwill. He has said so. I sat at the Economic Club in New York in the autumn of 1984, I believe it was, and listened to the Prime Minister say how he was going to refurbish that relationship, that Canada was open for business. The implication of his remarks and the inference to be drawn was that under previous Liberal Governments that relationship had deteriorated.

There is no doubt that the Americans liked what they heard. I think they like our Prime Minister because of the rhetoric which he offers so frequently, in fact at every opportunity. He seizes every opportunity to support the United States. He backed up that rhetoric in New York by closing down the Foreign Investment Review Agency, dismantling the National Energy Program, and lending support to the Star Wars concept and the Libyan invasion. In fact, you name it, Mr. Speaker, and he has been there to support the United States and has been proud of it. I do not think that he would deny any of the statements which I have made with respect to the importance which he attaches to the relationship with the President of the United States.

At the personal level, we saw the Shamrock conferences which began in Quebec where the Prime Minister went as far as singing on stage with the President and establishing a strong personal bond between Ronald Reagan and himself. He is proud of it. He has said that the President is only at the end of the telephone line. I do not think that the President or the Prime Minister would deny that this personal relationship has developed. They have walked arm in arm together.

In a sense, the Prime Minister's reaction on Friday was sad. In some ways I felt for him, as I think other Members of the House did, because he felt he had been betrayed. His comments reminded me of that famous saying that hell hath no fury like a lover scorned. I thought that perhaps the Prime Minister even went a little further on Friday than he had intended to go. One can imagine how he felt to have been stabbed in the back, and perhaps dealt a mortal wound in so far as these negotiations are concerned, after having assumed that his relationship with the President was a close one.

As reported on page 13558 of Hansard of last Friday, in response to a question from me, the Prime Minister said:

> —and I will tell my hon. friend that actions like this make it extremely difficult for anyone, including Canadians, to be friends with the Americans from time to time.

My colleagues and I do not share that view. I do not know that the Prime Minister intended to paint Americans with that brush. We are talking about an individual act of the President of the United States. Bonds between Canadians and Americans will not be placed in jeopardy by the act of the President of an administration in the United States with which probably millions of Americans disagree, especially those consumers who will pay the price of having higher tariffs placed on these Canadian exports, if indeed these Canadian exports will be able to penetrate the U.S. market at all. As our Leader pointed out today, a 35 per cent tariff is, in effect, a barrier to the penetration of that market by Canadian goods.

I think that the first part of the mystery as to why the President stabbed his friend in the back can be answered by the intimidation argument. It is certainly one argument, and we may hear more about it as the days and weeks unfold. However, it was certainly a surprise to us because we on this side of the House had never anticipated that the President of the United States would treat his friend, the Prime Minister, in that fashion after taking and taking and accepting the goodwill of the Prime Minister and being pleased about the dismantling of these programs in Canada, which they regarded as positive. The fact is that we were surprised.

The second part of the mystery is the Prime Minister's surprise. Should he have been surprised? You can imagine our astonishment after witnessing that performance last Friday in this House and reading the transcript of Mr. Clark's comments on Question Period in which he said "that the decision was a shock to us. It came as a surprise to us. It came as a surprise to our Embassy". Mr. Clark demonstrated all the surprise and shock of somebody who suddenly has a truck driven into his living room.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please. The Hon. Member should know that he should not refer to other Members of the House by their names but rather by their ridings.

Mr. Johnston: Excuse me, Mr. Speaker. You are quite right. I stand corrected. As I was saying, the Secretary of State for External Affairs expresses the surprise of someone who sees a truck drive through the wall into the living room with no prior notice. You can imagine our surprise and shock when we discovered today that on May 7 Premier Bennett wrote a letter to the Prime Minister telling him exactly what might happen. In fact he said:

> The matter now rests with the President who has full discretion in deciding what action, if any, is to be followed. He is required to announce his decision on or before May 24, 1986.

He announced it on May 22. Mr. Bennett continues:

> I am deeply concerned that the President may in fact decide to impose a tariff, perhaps for extraneous reasons. He may decide to show that he is not reluctant to act on Section 201 cases.

Furthermore, in view of the difficulties surrounding the Senate Finance Committee decision to provide the President with fast track authority, he may decide to demonstrate a tough posture vis-à-vis Canada.

● (1650)

Well, I can tell you one person who was not surprised on May 22, it was Premier Bennett. I am sure he was shocked, but obviously he was not surprised.

Now why, with this letter in hand, was the Prime Minister telling us that he was surprised, and why was the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) pretending that he was surprised? Well, of course, the answer today in the House was that he did not receive any advance notice from the American administration. The Government received advance notice from Premier Bennett.

It is like saying, in the case of that truck driving into your living room, after someone has come in and told you there was a truck coming, that you were surprised because you did not hear from the truck driver. They knew precisely what might happen on May 22.

What are the answers to this? That, indeed, is perhaps a greater mystery than why the President applied the tariff. I have at least furnished a possible answer to that, but in this respect, I must confess, I am lost.

Here is Premier Bennett with this information at his fingertips, and here is our Government with a trade office with close to a hundred people in it, with an embassy in Washington, with highly paid lobbyists who are supposed to have direct access to information which goes on within the administration, and yet it is not aware that this might take place—complete surprise. It was not a complete surprise for Mr. Bennett.

Did they not believe Mr. Bennett? Did the letter get lost in the mail? Is that a possible answer? Perhaps the letter got lost in the Prime Minister's Office. There are so many people in that office, the staff is so large that there, indeed, may be an example of the left hand not knowing what the right hand may be doing. I know that sounds outrageous, but I must say it is the only response I can think of, because what other Prime Minister, what other Secretary of State for External Affairs would not act when the Premier of a province affected to the tune of $250 million of exports tells him that this is likely to happen some time before May 24? Could there possibly be another answer?

I also say that because I always thought the Secretary of State for External Affairs, for all the criticism we may throw at him, is a man of integrity. I think that when he was on Question Period on Sunday and said he was surprised, he was surprised. It would not surprise me, in turn, if he did not even know about Mr. Bennett's letter and, perhaps, has never seen Mr. Bennett's letter.

Well, the final answer, which my Leader dealt with this morning, is that, having found ourselves with this extraordinary mystery on our hands—and I certainly hope that as the days unfold the mystery will become clarified and we may get some answers—the question is, what should the Government do?

Mr. Reagan has played a very strong card. He has played a card which, in my judgment, requires a response, not retaliation. I asked on Friday in my question to the Prime Minister, given this stumbling start out of the starting gate on these negotiations, what is the Canadian Government to do?

This issue is so serious for the people of British Columbia, for the value of our exports, the jobs, and for the future of these negotiations, that careful consideration should be given to suspending those negotiations until such time as this tariff is withdrawn, and, as our Leader said, until such time as both parties agree that there will be no further harassment during these negotiations. Negotiations of this kind should not be conducted with either a gun to the head or a knife in the back.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Member who just spoke would care to clarify for the House and for the people of British Columbia just exactly what the Liberals' policy is, first, on the export of logs and of shake bolts, which is clearly something that the Washington, Oregon, Idaho, northern California shake and shingle producers are interested in; and second, whether or not this motion that is before the House means that if the 35 per cent duty harming British Columbia's shake and shingle industry is not taken away, the Liberals will then be calling for an end to the free trade talks. Or perhaps he could expand a little bit on exactly what this motion means.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I have to recall the exact text of the motion, but on the first part of the question—later I will come to the second part—the position has been clear, there has always been free trade in these products. The President, in this case, has not basically dealt with an issue of countervail, he has dealt with a safeguard tariff, which, theoretically, can be applied in any circumstance where injury is shown under Article 19 of the GATT treaty.

Our position on it is clearly that as these negotiations begin, this would be the last gesture one would expect to find. Of course that market for shakes and shingles is the most significant market and, as we know from the numbers that have been put forward, it will effectively create serious unemployment in the province represented by the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton). It will affect exports and, as the Member knows, will affect a lot of ancillary industries as well, including transportation and support industries. That is the position on the first point raised.

With respect to the second point, our Leader this morning laid out, I thought quite clearly, that we would expect the Prime Minister to use the good offices, to which I have made reference, with the President of the United States, that he should call the President of the United States and ask that that tariff be removed. He should also ensure that the countervail action will not proceed. He should get an undertaking for what our Leader called a cease and desist order, that as long as these negotiations are going to go forward, they should go forward without harassment, either in the United States or in Canada. That is essentially the position he laid out this morning.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, a lot of British Columbians are interested in knowing where the Liberals stand on the export of logs and shake bolts during this crucial period of time. Are you in favour of it or opposed to it?

Mr. Johnston: Is the Member asking me whether we are in favour of the exportation of logs and shakes and shingles? Well, of course we are in favour of the exportation of logs and shakes and shingles, how can we not be? I am surprised that the Hon. Member would even ask the question.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I hate to say this, but obviously the Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) does not understand the industry, because the question placed to him by the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) was simply this; is he in favour of the exportation of logs and bolts to the United States? This has nothing to do with shakes or shingles, this is the raw material. What we are trying to find out is the position of the Official Opposition on this very, very important issue. That is the question that I would like answered right at this point in time.

Mr. Johnston: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, if the Member for Skeena has been mischievous in terms of the motion in front of the House. The issue in front of the House is the issue of the imposition of a tariff on cedar shakes and shingles. That is what the motion deals with, and that is the issue which our Leader dealt with this morning. That is the issue which I dealt with in the course of my comments this afternoon.

Mr. St. Germain: This is fine, but this relates to the industry. We asked the Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) this morning, and he said this was for another day. This is an integral part of the entire program that is facing us right now. They are refusing to answer it. Now I want to know why they are refusing to answer it. Every speaker from the Official Opposition who has risen has refused to answer it. Are they advocating the exportation of jobs to the United States? I suggest that that is what they are prepared to do if they do not have an answer to the question. I would like to hear an answer to that.

• (1700)

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, again, the Member is being mischievous.

Mr. St. Germain: We are being straightforward.

Mr. Johnston: He is suffering from an onset of embarrassment at what has transpired, justifiably so. I can imagine how difficult it is to be a Member from British Columbia.

Mr. St. Germain: You cannot answer the question.

Mr. Johnston: Certainly we can answer the question. Essentially, the issue in the whole sector is to increase the exportation of finished products and semi-finished products from Canada. That is the essence of the question and, of course, shakes and shingles fall into that category.

We are dealing with the question of shakes and shingles before the House. I cannot ask the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) a question, but I do not know whether he went back to his riding this weekend. I know that even in the East, which is not immediately or directly affected by this particular gesture by the President of the United States, there is concern for the people of British Columbia and the jobs in British Columbia.

Mr. St. Germain: Answer the question. I was back in my riding.

Mr. Johnston: I cannot hear the Hon. Member. He will have an opportunity to speak up. We know that unemployment in British Columbia is running at 14 per cent. Imagine the impact that this action will have on that situation, which is, of course, of immediate concern to us as members of the Official Opposition.

Second, is this a harbinger of things to come in terms of softwood exports generally? That is a national issue as well, because while British Columbia will again be primarily affected, so will Ontario, which is the second largest exporter, Alberta, and the Maritime provinces. What we see here is perhaps the thin edge of the wedge.

I do not know what the Hon. Member is trying to achieve by not being forthright and admitting his concern. I know that he was somewhat embarrassed by the comments of our Leader this morning, as he should have been.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I have a very specific and straightforward question for the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston). It is not a mischievous question. Will he clarify the position of the Liberal Party in British Columbia for the people of B.C. with respect to the issue of the export of cedar logs and shake bolts?

The Liberal spokesperson in the House today indicated that it was the policy of the Liberal Party—I assume the Liberal Party of Canada—to support the export of cedar logs and shake bolts. Is the Hon. Member speaking on behalf of the Liberal Party in British Columbia in advocating the export of cedar logs and shake bolts?

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I have no authority to speak on behalf of the Liberal Party in British Columbia. I have not pretended to do so.

Mr. St. Germain: We are asking for your opinion.

Mr. Johnston: There is a specific motion here. However, I understand that the purpose of the House is to discuss issues and attempt to drag in stray cats into a very important subject. I can understand these gentlemen taking that position because they are the ones who are directly affected, on the front line with their constituents.

This motion is designed to help them show that there is unanimity in the concern in this House for the people of British Columbia who are directly affected by the action taken by the President. What could be more clear?

If they wish to drag in all of these stray cats, and raise extraneous questions about what the Liberal Party in British Columbia may think about the export of cedar logs, I suppose that is fair game. That is up to you to decide, Mr. Speaker. However, that is not what we are talking about here this afternoon.

Mr. Robinson: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Debate. The Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to participate in this important debate this afternoon. Before getting to the substance of my remarks, I want to spend a moment reflecting on a very serious matter that was just raised by the spokesperson for the Liberal Party concerning the position of the Liberal Party on the question of the export of cedar logs and shake bolts. The Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston), apparently speaking on behalf of the Liberal Party, stood up on the floor of the House and made a statement which would have a devastating impact on the people of British Columbia and on the workers in the shake and shingle industry in that province.

I am astonished that a former cabinet Minister, a former spokesperson on regional industrial expansion, would actually be prepared to stand up in the House and advocate action that could destroy the jobs of thousands of British Columbians. That is exactly the impact of the policy of the Liberal Party as enunciated by the Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount.

Let us take a moment to examine the implications of what he has said. If the industry is allowed to export raw cedar logs and shake bolts to the United States, the industry would effectively be exporting jobs from British Columbia to the United States. Of course, the source of this raw material for this industry is in British Columbia, yet the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount, as spokesperson for the Liberal Party, is saying to go ahead and take our raw materials, our raw logs, our shake bolts, our market and our jobs from the people of British Columbia. That is the exact position advocated by the Liberal Party of Canada.

Let me assure the House that the people of British Columbia will be made aware that the Liberal Party of Canada, through its spokesperson on external affairs, is advocating the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts which would destroy the industry in the Province of British Columbia. There is an unholy alliance in the House today between the Conservative Party and the Liberal Party. On the one hand, the Conservative Party has been dragging its heels and not been prepared to stand up for the workers in British Columbia. On the other hand, it was revealed today for the first time that they are buddies with the Liberal Party. We see the dynamic duo of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount who, together, are cozying up to one another for the first time. The workers in the Province of British Columbia are getting the shaft.

In this debate on a motion moved by the Liberal Party, I am pleased that for the first time the Liberal Party of British Columbia and the Liberal Party representatives in Canada are revealing their true stand on this important issue. I am pleased that those of us in the New Democratic Party who have at least been consistent on this question will have an opportunity to quote throughout British Columbia the words of the Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount who is advocating relinquishing jobs to the workers in the United States. That is a shameful abdication of responsibility by the Official Opposition on this important question.

I am pleased that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), was able to finally smoke out the Liberals and see where they really stand on this question.

The reality is that the shake and shingle tariff we are speaking about today is a punitive tariff that will effectively kill the industry in the Province of British Columbia and, indeed, across Canada within a matter of months. The irony of this position is that not only will the British Columbia industry be destroyed by this punitive tariff, the American industry will be severely hit. That is, unless the policy of the Liberal Party is adopted. In that case, all our raw cedar logs and shake bolts will be sent south of the border, as the Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount has indicated.

This tariff decision is sending a very clear message from the American adminstration to the people of Canada, particularly the people in British Columbia. The message from the President of the United States is that he is prepared to stab the Prime Minister in the back. While the President says the Prime Minister is his good friend from the time of the Shamrock Summit, where they stood together to sing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling", when it comes down to the crunch, the President sells us out and stabs the Prime Minister in the back.

No one should have been particularly surprised by this decision. On May 8 the President wrote to Senator Robert Packwood and said: "I am committed to finding a rapid and effective solution to the Canadian softwood lumber problem. I will take such action as may be necessary to resolve this problem consistent with U.S. law".

Some 4,000 families in the Province of British Columbia are paying the price for this promise made by the President of the United States. I might say that many of those families live in my constituency of Burnaby and many of them work in the riding of the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) where a significant part of the shake and shingle industry is located. I was home last weekend and had an opportunity to meet with those people. They asked me some questions I want to ask in this House. First, where were the Tory Members of Parliament from the Province of British Columbia before this decision was taken? There are 19 Conservative Members of Parliament from British Columbia, and my constituents who work in the shake and shingle industry asked why it was that this decision came as such a terrible shock to the Tory MPs from British Columbia. Where were they? Why were they not standing up for the jobs of the people whom they represent?

We have heard from the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody. I accept his words that he thought, and presumably his colleagues thought, that the decision would not go the way it did. But if that is the case, then we must ask some very serious questions about the source of his information. Presumably the knowledge of the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody, and of other Hon. Members, was based on information received from people who are supposedly working for us in our embassy in Washington. If these individuals were misrepresenting the position, if they were not sounding the alarm bells and saying: "There is a real possibility that this punitive tariff may be imposed", then they were not doing their jobs on behalf of the people of Canada. Certainly, I think we have to look very carefully at the role played by our embassy and by our ambassador in Washington in not giving us the warning that this decision was in fact a distinct possibility.

This industry in British Columbia is a very important one. It accounts for some $250 million in exports. There are 4,000 direct jobs and many other indirect jobs involved in some 140 operations. Much of the industry is in the Fraser Valley and is a cottage type operation. Like the U.S. shake and shingle sector, there has been a very substantial rationalization and job loss in recent years. This is a devastating if not a terminal blow to this important industry.

Another question asked when I met with my constituents in Burnaby on the weekend was how we can trust the Prime Minister to negotiate a firm and fair deal for Canadians in these free trade negotiations when he gets sold out on the very eve of these negotiations. The Prime Minister rose in the House on Friday and said he was shocked, bewildered, incredulous and angry and that it was bizarre, confusing and goodness' knows what else. That is a portent of things to come in these negotiations. I want to note that we paid a very heavy price as Canadians for this special relationship between the Prime Minister and the President of the United States. We supposedly paid that price to avoid the kind of sell-out we saw on Friday. The Prime Minister said: "Yes, Sir" to the Americans time after time whether it was on the participation of Canadian industry in star wars, on the testing of the Cruise missile in Canada, on the blind and unequivocal support for the bombing in Tripoli and the death of innocent civilians, or the acquiescence to the invasion of our sovereignty in the Arctic Sea. Time and time again the Canadian people have asked what the Prime Minister was up to. Why he is selling out Canadian interests? Why is he selling out Canadian sovereignty for no apparent price?

We were told that there is a special relationship between the Prime Minister and the President. They are good buddies. The prices we are paying in these other areas are the prices we are prepared to pay because President Reagan will never let down his good buddy, the Prime Minister. But what happened on Friday? The President made a decision which attacked the jobs of 4,000 British Columbians in the shake and shingle industry. The Prime Minister got stabbed in the back by his good buddy. My constituents in Burnaby are asking themselves if they really want this man and this Government to negotiate a free trade deal for Canadians when they have that kind of relationship of trust with the people with whom they are negotiating. The answer from the people I had the opportunity to discuss this with was a very clear no. They said there was no way they wanted to embark on those kinds of discussions. That is why we in this Party have said we do not believe these free trade negotiations should go ahead in the face of this deliberate attack directed personally by the President on the Canadian shake and shingle industry. We say that these negotiations should not go ahead when they can only get under way on such a shaky foundation.

I had thought that at least we had the agreement of the Liberal Party, the Official Opposition. I see the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount, the Liberal spokesperson, is back in the House. There will be an opportunity in the time after my remarks for that Hon. Member to rise and say to the people of British Columbia: "Wait a minute. Perhaps I was a little hasty. Perhaps I was wrong. I take it back. We are not going to sell out your jobs". I admit that the Liberal Party, having considered the matter with care, does not now support the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts. The Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount has had a chance to consult with his colleagues in British Columbia. I know they will have told him: "For God's sake, Don, set the record straight because if you do not, what is left of the Liberal Party in B.C. will be wiped out". Some of us would not shed great tears of sadness if that were to happen. But let us at least think of poor Art Lee who is struggling valiantly to build up the tiny and fragile Liberal Party in British Columbia. I plead with the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount to consider the position of Art Lee and what he must be thinking now when he has been stabbed in the back—not in the back—he was stabbed in the front by his own colleague in the House of Commons. That colleague is the spokesperson on external relations who says to the workers in the shake and shingle industry in the Province of British Columbia the following. "We will allow raw cedar logs to be shipped to your competitors in the United States. Yes, we will allow shake bolts to be sent south of the border to compete with what is left of the B.C. industry".

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), looks in shock and bewilderment as if to say: "Did he really say that?" Mr. Speaker, of course he did. The record is quite clear in that regard. As I have said, I will yield the rest of my time to the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount to allow him to stand up and salvage what is left of the credibility of the Liberal Party in British Columbia and say: "No. We, in fact, have had an opportunity to consult and to discuss the implications of this, and I take it all back. We will not allow cedar logs and shake bolts to be sent out of British Columbia".

I will now sit down. I will give the Hon. Member the opportunity to rise in his place and recant. I will give him the opportunity to stand up and say: "No. The Liberal Party of Canada does not support driving the final nail into the coffin of the shake and shingle industry in the Province of British Columbia".

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston).

Mr. Johnston: I was very much amused by the comments of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson)—

[English]

—who protests so much. I must say that I have watched the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) for some years. I have found their interventions to be fascinating. In view of the interventions which my Leader and I have made with respect to the concern that this Party has expressed and the demands that it has made with respect to the implications of the tariff imposed on shakes and shingles, I really do not understand the Hon. Member for Burnaby, except, as we say in Quebec—

[Translation]

He is playing petty politics.

[English]

He is trying to distort and say that we do not want a shake and shingle industry. He is trying to say that we do not want to export raw materials, when the whole purpose of the motion is to remove that tariff. That is fine. The Hon. Member can play petty politics.

I gather from the Hon. Member's remarks that he thinks that there should be an embargo in Canada and in Quebec, for example, with respect to the exportation of Canadian logs and with respect to the importation of logs. Incidentally, that has absolutely nothing to do with the issue before the House today.

Will the Hon. Member give the House a straight answer? Is he saying that there should be an embargo with regard to the importation and exportation of logs? That is a fair position, if it is one he wishes to take. I would like to hear his view.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I certainly thought that perhaps the Hon. Member, having had an opportunity to consult with his colleagues from British Columbia, might have wanted to rise in his place and, in a very sober and sensible manner, say: "Yes. I have considered this question, Mr. Speaker, and I do not believe that raw cedar logs and shake bolts should be allowed to be exported from British Columbia". He has had the opportunity to consider the matter. Frankly, I am amazed that, having been given the time to stand in his place to recant and to reconsider that, he has still not taken the opportunity to do that.

Rather than getting into the details of a very important and serious question, I will give up my time to allow the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount, on a supplementary question, to stand up and indicate very clearly whether his answer to the question posed by the Hon. Member for Skeena is that he would in fact allow the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts from British Columbia. Is he speaking on behalf of the Liberal Party of Canada? Has he consulted with his colleagues from British Columbia?

Mr. Rossi: Why don't you answer the question?

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I hardly need to consult with anyone when it comes to the issue at hand. The Hon. Member is on the run. Apparently, he is not prepared to stand in the House and say whether or not he is in favour of an embargo with respect to the exportation and importation of logs, period, be they oak, maple or cedar. Is he prepared to stand up and say that? That is the position which one would infer from his comments. He does not have to answer the question. It strikes me that he has put himself in a typical position.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, just to deal quickly with the specific question concerning the export of raw logs, we in the New Democratic Party, and my colleagues from British Columbia in particular, have very clearly stated that we believe that the export of raw logs is the export of jobs from British Columbia. We are fundamentally opposed to the export of raw logs.

I now wish to return to the comments of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount. I wish to ask this question very clearly: Does the Hon. Member stand by his position that the Liberal Party of Canada would in fact support the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts?

Mr. Rossi: You should ask that of the Hon. Member for Skeena.

Mr. Robinson: Another Liberal Member says that that is right. So we now have two Liberal Members saying that they support the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts, and perhaps there are others who want to support that position.

Mr. Speaker, I want to—

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order! The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), on a point of order.

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, as usual, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) is putting his own interpretation on what is said. When I said: "That is right", I meant that—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please.

Mr. Rossi: The answer comes from the Hon. Member for Skeena. That is not your answer. You have not got enough guts to give your own answer.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I do not think this is called for. We are debating an important issue here. The question which was asked of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) was a legitimate one. It relates to something about which I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). As far as I see it, as the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody, the issue here is jobs. That is the question. When the question was put to the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount, it reflected directly on jobs. Does the Hon. Member for Burnbay concur with that?

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody is quite right. Effectively, what we are talking about in terms of the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts is a question of the direct export of jobs from the Province of British Columbia, particularly from the riding of the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody. These are jobs which in many cases are the jobs of my own constituents and constituents from other parts of the Lower Mainland. That is the issue. That is why I am so disappointed that the representative of the Liberal Party would stand in his place and seriously suggest on behalf of his Party that it supports the export of raw cedar logs and shake bolts from British Columbia. As the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody has indicated, the Liberal Party is saying that it supports the export of jobs from Canada to the United States.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I have rarely seen in this House a Member of Parliament dig himself such a deep and immediate hole as that dug by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston). I am sorry that he has chosen to absent himself from the House now. Rather than become lengthy on this matter I would like to quote from page 13620 of yesterday's Hansard. At that time, the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) said the following:

> Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In view of the U.S. protectionist tariff action against Canada's cedar shake and shingle industry, will the Minister take action to prevent raw materials such as cedar blocks and logs from British Columbia being imported into the United States, effectively transferring the Canadian shake and shingle production and Canadian jobs across the border and, if so, what action will he take?

• (1730)

The Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) responded by saying in part the following:

> I can give the Hon. Member the assurance that the Government will not permit the Canadian shake and shingle industry to be exported across the border.

I congratulate the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) for entrapping so well the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount. The Hon. Member should never have risen to his feet to speak in the first place because he does not have a grasp of the subject. That is the bottom line. He does not know what a bolt means, except perhaps to bolt from the Chamber when the Hon. Member for Kootenay West rises to speak and to explain the problem to him. He was shaking in his shoes, and I do not know if he was also scratching because he has shingles. That is the sum total of his knowledge of the subject.

To what has the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount agreed? He has agreed willingly and forthrightly to export the shake and shingle industry in total, jobs, equipment, machinery and the works, to the United States. That is what he has proposed, and he has agreed today that that is the policy of his Party. I can see CTV having a lot of fun with this one tonight.

This is a very important motion in that it deals with perhaps the most important economic initiative ever undertaken by this or any other Government in many years. I speak of the motion itself and its intent. It is unfortunate that members of the Opposition should seek to take political advantage of the hardship of thousands of Canadians, the bulk of them located in British Columbia. They have presented a motion which capitalizes upon the anger of every Member of the House to present a suggestion which can only be called irresponsible.

This motion holds the bilateral negotiation hostage to a reversal of the shingles decision. In doing so, the Opposition ignores the fact that this action is a symptom of a disease that is rampant in the United States today, and that is protectionism, and that the cure for protectionism lies in a new trading agreement. The opposition motion suggests that the symptom hurts so we should refuse to try the cure.

This trade action is exactly the sort of problem that has plagued Canadian industries for many years. Whether it was Canadian lumber, steel, potatoes, berry products or fish industries, there has been a steady parade of industry spokesmen going to Washington to plead their case, the Canadian case. It has been one of the greatest job-creation programs in recent history.

Many Washington lobbyists and lawyers have kept the wolf from the door on the basis of income they have secured from Canadian clients, and one of their best clients has been the Government of Canada. I wonder how many Washington lawyers are putting their children through school so that they too can become lawyers and live off the fat of the Canadian land.

Today we stand ready to negotiate our new system, a system in which this sort of trade harassment would not be a normal part of business. However, the Opposition says that the recent action on shingles is a signal that Americans can never be trusted so we should not try to do business with them. As angry as we are over this decision, that is clearly an unacceptable suggestion.

There should be no mistake about our concern for this industry. The manufacturing of shingles and shakes is an industry that we are proud to dominate. It is a value added offshoot of our massive forest products sector. Thanks to our efficiency and marketing skills, we have gradually increased our market share, winning a free market battle on the basis of superior natural resources and efficient production, coupled with a 100-year supply of old growth cedar, that is, cedar that is 300 to 600 years of age. That can be compared with a 20-year supply of old growth cedar in the United States.

Where is that old growth cedar in the United States? It can be found on lands owned by Weyerhauser, Louisiana Pacific, Pope and Talbot and a host of other American forest giants. They are not cutting cedar since cedar makes up only 6 per cent of their total reserves. Unless they have a stand of cedar that comprises 75 per cent or 80 per cent of their total reserves, they are not going to cut it.

The bottom line is that there is an acute shortage of cedar in the United States. Not only is it difficult to come by and isolate from shake and shingle mills, it is also very costly because in 1979 and 1980, the American forestry sector began paying a premium for its timber. Companies outbid one another and they had a field day. As a result, they pay too much for the product and they are not going to sell it cheap.

Today some 4,000 Canadians make their living in this industry, producing $250 million worth of product and serving as the only major industry in towns like Nakusp, which is in my constituency, and Mission, which is in the constituency of the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody.

Nakusp is a small town which had a population of around 1,400 in 1981, according to Stats Canada. I am not really certain what the population is now because of the actions taken by Westar to withdraw manpower requirements. It has pulled out of Nakusp and left that community in very difficult economic circumstances.

What is the sole or principal support of those who live in the community of Nakusp? It is the Columbia River Shake and Shingle Company, which employs about 120 people in its mill and 75 people securing wood to supply the mill. The action that is now being taken is deadly for that small community.

I know Dick Jones, owner and manager of Columbia River Shake and Shingle Company, and I know him well. I know the kind of man he is. I know that if one were to put him in a lineup with his crew, one would not be able to pick him out because he wears his working boots all the time. He is a hands-on operator. He knows what is going on in his mill. That is the kind of fellow he is, and he works long hours. He deserves the benefits that may accrue to him from the results of his endeavours.

Dick Jones is not a quitter. When I spoke to him a few days ago, he said: "My father told me during the Depression that there were always a few mills in operation, and if we are now into a depression, this mill is going to continue to operate". I believe that Dick Jones will do everything he possibly can to make that happen because he believes not only in what he is doing but in his community and the people who work for him.

The shake and shingle industry produces building material which is durable and beautiful. Many home builders in the United States and Canada have benefited from the availability of this pleasing and economic product. We were shocked that this action was selected from the many options available to the President of the United States. We are furious because the main result will not be recovery for the United States sector, which suffers from a shortage of raw material and a lack of investment, but a shift from wood materials to aluminum siding. Roofing material will be asphalt, tile, clay tile, or derivatives of plastic made to appear like shake and shingle products. That 10 per cent of the market which is now occupied by the shake and shingle industry in the United States will diminish to zero.

This latest action is only the most recent in a long series of measures which the shingle industry has fought, measures such as building codes and fire codes designed to discourage home builders from using wood products. Non-tariff barriers are always present in international trade and probably will always be, but the action announced on Thursday was different. It was an action taken at the President's discretion, selected from a series of options which included measures to support the U.S. industry without harming Canadians. If we examine the measures taken to support the U.S. industry without harming Canadians, we see the options they requested from the industry. They canvassed about 35 shake and shingle operators, the majority of whom did not bother to reply, on what options, upgrading, modernization, and benefits would accrue if the British Columbia shake and shingle industry were stopped in its tracks. Out of the twelve or so who had some kind of response, five did not really know what they could do and the other seven thought that perhaps they could do something. The industry in the United States was on its back, and there is nothing in the form of resuscitation which Canada or the United States could do to revive it, short of shipping the logs and bolts that have been the subject of discussion in the last 30 minutes. Clearly that is not an option we are about to exercise.

The fact that the President is under incredible pressure from protectionists in Washington may provide an explanation, but it is cold comfort for Canadian workers whose jobs may be lost. The hardships of the U.S. shingle industry reflect badly on the U.S. stumpage system. That system does not control speculation in timber prices. Some companies are now holding supplies of red cedar which are desperately needed by U.S. producers, refusing to sell at a price that would keep U.S. shingles competitive. I have already explained to the House the reason for it. It is that they paid too much for the timber which they secured some years ago in the first instance. As everyone in the House will know, U.S. lumber producers have spent millions of dollars arguing that our stumpage is too low. It is ironic that their own system has failed to provide timber cheaply enough for shingles to compete with aluminum siding.

Is the opposition motion that we call off the trade talks the right answer? Is the NDP suggestion that we get out of any trade talks the right answer? I do not accept either suggestion; I do not accept either recommendation. Neither Canada nor the United States has ever promised to suspend all trade actions for the duration of these talks, and that is a promise I would not like to secure. The NDP talks about calling the United States and asking the President to suspend duties. However, are they also willing to tell Canadians that we will not move on dumping, which we have seen in the Fraser Valley and in the Okanagan, or on unfair subsidies, which we have also seen, particularly in the British Columbia agricultural community in terms of the Okanagan apples? Or, will they recognize that trade is a two-way street?

In the negotiations currently under way, an agreement to solve trade disputes is less damaging than any other option. The House should remember what these bilateral trade talks are about.

What are they about? First, they are about security. In the last two decades we have seen the world trading system fractured into trading blocs—the European Common Market, the South American, the Soviet, the Iron Curtain, the Australian, and the New Zealand. Canada is the only industrial country, except for the United States, which stands alone and competes alone. It is time to develop the strength, the vitality, the imagination, the technology, and the ability to work together.

When we say "compete", what do we really mean? We mean sell.

Mr. Keeper: Sell out.

Mr. Brisco: A member of the NDP whom I cannot identify said: "Sell out". That is very characteristic of the NDP philosophy, one that has failed to sell in Canada to this day.

Canada is a producer, and the world is our customer. Unfortunately, world over-production of commodities has produced a buyer's market. Prices are down and production is up. We cannot ask Canada to be the only industrial nation without security in these dangerous times.

When I talk about production being up, one sector which immediately comes to mind is the forest sector itself. From looking at the figures and at the statistics, we know that a traditional section of the U.S. market which we occupied at about 23 per cent or 24 per cent—and I am now referring to the softwood industry—now stands at around 34 per cent or 35 per cent. It is alarming but it is not surprising. It reflects the ability of British Columbia and the ability of Canadians generally to respond to a specific circumstance—the decadence of their own equipment and the economic and industrial response to gear up, to do better, and to compete. We have competed very successfully.

The second thing which the negotiations are all about is change. Every Canadian knows that technology and changing demand are causing and have caused radical changes over the last 15 years. They will continue to reflect and cause change. Hundreds of thousands of Canadians will find their current jobs changing; they may even disappear like the gandy dancer. No one can stop those changes, but we can manage the note and degree of change by protecting Canadians from the worst impacts; by establishing transition periods for industries, so that instead of workers being surprised one morning by lay-off notices, they will have adequate warning of major changes in the industry; and by providing programs to help them shift into a more secure line of endeavour.

Finally, trade negotiations are about opportunity. We believe Canadians can compete with anyone in the world. We have the educated workforce, the technology capacity, the social and commercial infrastructure to make our way. Canadians are remarkable people. Only the NDP would call us ordinary. Our success in so many industries proves just how competitive and combative we are and reflects the force and drive in the soul and body of Canadians.

The Americans are our neighbours and business partners, but we have our differences. The shingle case reminds us that it is not a game between friends; it is a matter of tough negotiations. Over the next two years we will face many disruptions and disputes in our trade with the United States. Any trade relationship which involves $150 billion per year is bound to have disruptions and not be an easy ride.

I note that my time is up. I regret that, because there is much I would like to say about what has been contributed to the debate today. In conclusion, I should like to comment upon what was contributed by the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), because I looked for a gem of wisdom, a suggestion of validity, or a worth-while proposal which we could consider. Neither he nor the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) offered a single suggestion of positive assistance. I think that reflects the very tone and nature of their contribution today. I consider it very unfortunate.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member. I know the Member to be an honest Member. He has been a friend of mine for some years now. I fail, however, to grasp the meaning of his last sentence. He said that not one positive suggestion had been made in this debate today. I would argue with that. Suggestions were made. One of the most important was during Question Period and this morning when the Leader of the Liberal Party suggested that the first thing was for the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to call his friend, the President of the United States, to ask him to cease and desist from imposing of a 35 per cent tariff on shingles and shakes. Does the Hon. Member not think that that would be the first thing for a leader of this country to do? The P.M. claims to be very friendly with the President of the United States. Does the Member not think that the P.M. would do what he said in a speech, that when negotiations get tough, you call, you negotiate, you deal—you at least communicate with the person? I know a letter was written last week. I know the House passed a motion unanimously condemning the 35 per cent countervailing duty. Does the Hon. Member not think that the Prime Minister should be working in the interests of all Canadians, especially British Columbians and those working in the industry, by picking up the phone, calling the President and saying: "Ron, desist or quit harassing Canadians with unwarranted taxes?"

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I take my colleague's point. He is a colleague because we are both in the House professionally. I have known him almost as long as he has known me!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Brisco: To respond to the Hon. Member's point, if he reflects on the actions of his Prime Minister and the actions of any Prime Minister historically, he will find that there is a great deal not said in the House of Commons that has been done. I do not have any hesitation in my own mind, on the basis of what I do know and on the basis of what I think I know, that the dialogue between the Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) has been on ongoing process. There was an element of confidence that the problem would be resolved without this kind of negative impact so that we would not today be debating the issue we are.

When the Prime Minister said he was shocked and amazed, so were we all. I think that amazement, shock and disappointment was based on the knowledge of the Prime Minister and other Ministers of the Government. They had already put forth a major effort on this issue as they are doing on the softwood issue. They will continue to do so even during this debate.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member about the common thread in a lot of his speeches which can only be described as slash and hack, trying to blame everything in British Columbia on the NDP, even after his friends, the Social Credit Government has been in office continuously for the last 10 years. The Member's Party has the largest parliamentary majority in this part of the century. He claims to be somehow crippled by an inability to deal with what has just happened to the shake and shingle industry.

Since September, 1984 unemployment has gone up continuously in British Columbia as a result of the Member and his Government's policies. They did nothing about potato dumping. Of the 150 petitions filed by the U.S. against various Canadian commodities, he and his Government have never ever responded. The count is zero for the number of times he and his Government have taken responsive actions to these actions from the United States. We will see the shake and shingle industry basically wiped out unless the Prime Minister calls the President. We see the crazy, insane policies of his cabinet colleague from British Columbia in relation to fisheries in B.C. and the crazy policies of his cabinet colleague, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) on night flight MEDIVACS.

It now appears clear that the Prime Minister will not phone the President because this issue is not high enough on his agenda to require a phone call, but these shake and shingle workers will be left hanging out to dry. Only the President can veto the tariff matter, even though today it has not been signed into law. Does the Member think it is satisfactory that the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) sometime in the next couple of weeks will announce a couple of Canada Works projects for those shake and shingle workers who have been laid off so they can pick up paper in the streets in Mission—Port Moody? Is that good enough, Mr. Speaker? Or does the Hon. Member support retaliation, the retaliatory measures that will be announced in the next few days by the Secretary of State for External Affairs? Is that the route to go?

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) has been smoking—

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think that is unparliamentary. I suggest the Hon. Member might want to withdraw his comment. He is imputing motives.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): I do not know whether I want to rule on this, knowing how these things evolve, but perhaps the Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) might want to reconsider his comment.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, certainly if it will make the Hon. Member more comfortable, I am quite prepared to exchange the word "smoking" for "chewing". Tobacco does have a strange effect on the stomach and perhaps subsequently it affects the brain. But for the Hon. Member for Skeena to suggest that some retaliatory action will be taken is to suggest that he sits in the inner sanctum of the Cabinet. For that he will have a very long wait. Is he prepared to cross the floor now? I respect the Member and I would be delighted to have him as a colleague on this side of the House, but beyond that the Member knows his Party is tied to the coattails of the Liberals. He knows what kind of a thrashing was taken. If I make reference to the policies of the national New Democratic Party, surely he understands why. I can stand up for my riding and I can represent the concerns of my constituency, and I think that I do that reasonably well.

Mr. Keeper: Tell Ronald Reagan to get off their backs and withdraw.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): Order, please.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, could you do something about the noise coming from some weird source on the other side?

Mr. Keeper: Just standing up next to you.

Mr. Brisco: I think if the Hon. Member reflects, he will see that there is certainly no way that the Government is about to introduce some policy to put the shake and shingle workers on the streets to pick up paper. The Hon. Member should know better than that. We will fight this right down to the wire, and the Member should know that too. We do not give in.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Charest): It being six o'clock, it is my duty to advise the House that, pursuant to Standing Order 82(12), the proceedings on the motion have expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

TOURISM—CANADIAN PAVILION AT EPCOT CENTRE

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, on April 23 I asked the Minister responsible for tourism a question about the Epcot Centre in Disney World. I received a number of complaints from friends who had visited the Epcot Centre who felt the Canadian pavilion there did not accurately reflect the opportunties available in Canada for potential visitors.

There was some hilarity about the question and a few media comments. I wanted the opportunity today to discuss this in much greater depth because to me it is an important issue.

Let me explain why. First, let us look at tourism as an important part of the Canadian economy. Tourism generates $20 billion a year in the Canadian economy. Much of that goes to the small business sector. U.S. tourism generates about $3 billion a year. In fact, it is expected that Expo 86 in Vancouver will attract $1 billion of U.S. money into the B.C. economy. We are talking about big business and big dollars when we talk about tourism from the U.S. to Canada.

For example, in 1984 there were 8.1 million visits to Canada from the United States. Each visitor spent about $225, which boosted the economy by over $3 billion. That created jobs for approximately 600,000 Canadians. Increasing the number of visitors and dollars spent by 10 or 20 per cent would have a remarkable impact on job creation. That is what the Government is all about and that is what we want to generate for Canadians.

There are over 20 million visits to the Epcot Centre each year. About 350,000 of the visitors are Canadians and the rest are from the United States and other parts of the world. People who have visited there have already indicated an interest in travel. If they could be enticed to consider Canada as a destination, we could very significantly increase the number of visitors and dollars coming into the country. Bearing in mind that we have a $1.1 billion deficit in our tourist account in Canada, we need to do something to redress that imbalance.

What can we do to increase that potential? We could upgrade the facilities of the Epcot Centre to make it more attractive and contemporary in illustrating what is offered to visitors to Canada. What do we know about what visitors want when they come to Canada? What is their present perception of Canada? We know that those who travel the most are adults aged 25 to 44. They are married and the majority are at the professional management level and are well educated. They are from two-income households with an average income of $40,000. They are people who have some money to spend on travelling. In past years a lot of people travelled to Europe, but given some of the problems with international terrorism, people are considering other destinations. We are aware that there are many travel opportunities within America, and I think we could tap that maket and attract those people to Canada.

Through studies made by the Ministry of Tourism, we have learned that Canada is not very well known. Americans just do not know that much about Canada as a potential tourist destination. They think that we are not very exciting. A study done a year ago concluded that Americans found us boring. I find that rather annoying, but that is a reality of perception. They do not think we are a nation of swingers. Perhaps we are not, but I think we have a lot of exciting things to do. They think we have a poor climate. There is not much we can do about that, but they are not aware of the beautiful climate which is available in many parts of the country. They are looking for something safe, which they think Canada has. They are aware of our beauty and that Canada is relatively inexpensive and uncrowded. As well, we are different. Those are all positive attributes which we can emphasize.

Through the Epcot Centre and television advertisements in the United States, we should emphasize those positive things. We should increase awareness of Canada as a travel destination, a place with some foreign mystique, but with all the amenities of home. It is a beautiful country with walkable cities. "Canada, the world next door" has been the theme of our advertising program this year in the U.S. I think that is a very appropriate theme.

I know my time is limited, but I want to say that if we put the energy and imagination into developing the Canadian pavilion at the Epcot Centre to in any way rival what we have at Expo 86 in Vancouver, which is magnificent, we will certainly be a long way ahead. Americans will then see us not as a country of mountains and Mounties, but as a country which is friendly and fun, courteous and classy. Our theme can be "Canada, a great place to go; Canadians, great to be with".

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Landry (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for her interest in tourism in Canada. With her, I realize, and this Government realizes, the extent of the industry's contribution to this country. I think that considering her very perceptive speech, the Hon. Member would make an excellent spokesperson at the Epcot Center, if the Canadian Government ever decided to send her there as our representative.

We realize and we have been made aware of this by the many letters sent to a number of government Members that the Epcot Center does not give a true picture of Canada. As my hon. friend explained, and the point was well taken, the 14 million or so Americans who visit the Center every year would certainly have a better idea of our country and a greater interest in going there if we showed them the tremendous opportunities this country holds in store.

In this connection, the Government had prepared a study of the American market for holiday travel, and one of the points the study raised was that Americans really do not know our country. We therefore have every reason to make the splendours of our country known through this Center.

I was able to give the Hon. Member the assurance that the Canadian Government, and more specifically the Department of Tourism, has met with the authorities of the Epcot Center, and they are trying to make the Center realize it must change the way our country is advertised.

I think the Hon. Member will be pleased with the action we are taking at this time, and I am sure, as she is, that in the near future Americans will visit our country in greater numbers, including of course Expo 86, as she mentioned in her speech.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—FORGET COMMISSION—REQUEST FOR INTERIM REPORT ON PENSION INCOME

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, on April 7, 1986, I again raised with the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) in the House of Commons the question of the changes made to the unemployment insurance program affecting pensioners across Canada. The Minister indicated that in June of 1986, she would be receiving from the Commission of Inquiry into Unemployment, the Forget Commission, an interim report, which she believed would deal with the matter of pension income in relation to unemployment insurance.

It is very timely at this moment in the House of Commons that we again address this controversial subject, which has brought grief to many unemployed pensioners across the country, particularly pensioners of the Canadian Armed Forces who have been forced to seek other employment after retiring from the Forces in order to maintain themselves and their families.

Let me begin at the beginning by mentioning that on November 21, 1984, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) indicated in his financial statement, delivered in the House of Commons, that he intended to make some changes to the unemployment insurance program.

There was very little detail included in his speech to the House of Commons, but one of the papers that was introduced at the time of his speech indicated that some administrative changes to the UI program would be made immediately in order to improve the quality of the program, and reduce program costs. The changes involve the inclusion of pension income, separation allowances and vacation pay and establishing benefit levels. That was a simple enough statement on the part of the Minister of Finance, but Members of Parliament generally on all sides of the House really did not know the impact of this particular measure on pensioners, particularly those in the Canadian Forces. Let me explain why.

The concern of persons who were retiring in 1985 was related to the fact that they anticipated an eligibility for unemployment insurance. That was part of their motivation in retiring in 1985 and part of their financial plan in relation to their retirement. There was an immediate result of an unfairness to those persons who were contemplating retirement, not knowing that this change in the eligibility was to be made. The Government made quite a wise decision at the time to delay for one year implementation of any changes in eligibility in relation to employment income. That stalled the whole matter.

Unfortunately, it meant that there was very little publicity about the exact ramifications of this change. As January 1, 1986 approached, many of us did not know the exact details in terms of the effect of this change on individuals who were receiving retirement income. I say that because if one scours the official report of the House of Commons, Hansard, and if one searches the media reports, one will find very few utterances by members of the New Democratic and Liberal Parties objecting in specific terms to this change in the unemployment insurance eligibility.

It came as a shock to some people to realize that when the change was actually implemented in January, 1986, after a year's warning, that the results as they applied to particular individuals were very harmful and quite unfair.

It was in the context of that difficult situation that the Minister of Employment and Immigration indicated her intention to refer the whole matter to the Forget Commission for total examination and a report back to her. I suggest that was a wise and understandable decision under the circumstances.

Let us examine the unemployment insurance program very briefly. Many people are fooled by the name and believe that, like an insurance, it is an absolute right to receive a certain benefit. Let me draw the attention of the House of Commons to the fact that the unemployment insurance program is far from being self-sufficient. In 1985, the total cost approached $11.6 billion, $5 billion of which was contributed by employers, $3.6 billion by employees and $3 billion by the Government of Canada. Quite apart from that, over the years the unemployment insurance account accumulated a deficit of $4.4 billion. It cannot be said by anyone who has participated in this program that it is self-sufficient and they have a right to it on the basis of the so-called premiums they have contributed.

One of the great lies of governments in the past was to pretend that programs like unemployment insurance had some kind of self-sufficiency. Unemployment insurance is really another form of tax to supply a specific benefit. It is not unlike a gasoline tax which is used to pay for highways, or a hospital tax to pay for medicare, as we have in the Province of Nova Scotia. Nevertheless, people are lead to believe that when they pay their premiums they are entitled to a specific result and that those rights are embedded in stone. That is not the case at all. The Government must look after the finances of the unemployment insurance program just as it must look after the finances of the country in the interest of all Canadians.

There is a special interest in unemployment insurance in Atlantic Canada. The Atlantic Provinces Economic Council has pointed out that it impacts greater in the labour force in Atlantic Canada than it does in the national labour force. Not everyone is in favour of a broad-based unemployment insurance program. For instance, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business has pointed out that its priority is tightening the eligibility for unemployment insurance. It believes it has a bad effect on some commercial and industrial activities.

I want to direct the last moment of my presentation to the Canadian Forces and those Canadians in all walks of life who are forced to retire from the activities related to their careers. The Canadians Forces require some members to retire at the age of 45, and earlier in some instances. As a result of economic recession, many commercial employers have asked employees to retire early and, in many cases, forced them to retire early. These Canadian Forces personnel and other employees are forced to seek other employment to maintain themselves and their families.

I want to direct the attention of the House to this particular group. When people in that group seek employment, and are terminated from that employment after a certain period of time, in many cases they are quite dependent on the benefits that flow from the unemployment insurance program. These are the people who have been adversely and, I believe, unfairly affected by this change. For example, if a person with a Canadian Forces pension of $600 and $1,000 a month employment income loses his or her job, the end result is that the benefit from unemployment insurance, which would normally be $600, would be reduced to something like $150 per month and the person would be left with $750 per month in order to sustain himself.

There is a solution, and I hope the Forget Commission will reach it very quickly. It is already in the law. At present a person who receives over $36,000 a year by 1986 standards and also receives unemployment insurance is required to repay the unemployment insurance, not the whole part but a percentage. I do not know why that same rule would not apply in relation to pension income.

If the combination of pension income and employment income exceeds a certain amount, such as the figure this year for employment income and unemployment insurance, which is approximately $36,000, then I believe the excess amount should be returned to the Government. Otherwise, I believe pension beneficiaries should receive their unemployment insurance benefits free from encumbrances unless and until they have exceeded that amount.

Mr. Gerry Weiner (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my hon. friend for his constant concern with respect to this matter. Certainly we have been aware of the concerns and needs of his constituents. I have had the pleasure of working with him since the beginning of the year. We have also had the privilege of numerous consultations with the Minister with respect to this situation. She has always listened, but has continued to maintain that rather than try for a piecemeal solution when we are so close to receiving the results of the Forget Commission, that is what we should wait for and that is what we are expecting and hoping for.

The Commission of Inquiry on Unemployment Insurance has just about concluded the most demanding schedule of public hearings and consultations which could ever be imagined. It visited 46 different communities across Canada. The commissioners have heard over 475 briefs and have participated in a total of 62 days of hearings, field trips and consultations. In addition, the commissioners have received more than 200 written submissions and individuals continue to send their views on specific issues. As indicated by the Minister in the House, the Forget Commission will be reporting to her in a preliminary way at the end of June and the full report will be presented before the end of September.

The change to pension regulations was announced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) on November 8, 1984, as part of the expenditure reduction program. We all know what was happening with respect to the deficit before a new group of Canadians were elected on September 4, 1984. This group was committed to once and for all put our house in order. Those astounding deficits which continued to rise are now not only under control, but the $33.8 billion which was originally forecast by the Minister of Finance might even be a few billion dollars less when we come to the end of the last fiscal year.

That is the kind of pride we have in the Government for which we have been working.

The Cabinet, I might say, delayed the implementation of the change to pension regulations until January of 1986. The subject, of course, has been referred to the Forget Commission. The Government will carefully examine all recommendations of the final report when it becomes available, including any recommendation dealing with the issue of changes to pension regulations.

HATE LITERATURE—POSTED IN MOSCOW FOR DELIVERY IN CANADA

Mr. Terry Clifford (London—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, I have received many complaints from Ukrainian Canadians who are the recipients of unwanted literature they deem hateful since I brought this matter to the attention of the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) over six months ago. It is ironic that this subject is being discussed today when representatives of the Ukrainian-Canadian Students Union are visiting Parliament.

• (1820)

The key to the problem is misinformation, particularly misinformation from the Soviets. Chernobyl is one great example of this misinformation. After the incident at Chernobyl, days went by before anyone would acknowledge that there was a problem. That went on until other countries informed the rest of us that there was a problem, something to which the Soviets finally admitted.

I think this subject takes any mystery out of the 1932-33 famine which was certainly a reality in Ukraine. This type of misinformation leads people to become hateful of the literature and materials which are sent unwanted to them. It seems to me that we must have rules and regulations to protect the human rights of Canadians. They are rights which must be cherished and looked after.

When one examines the system which is in place, one has to look at the customs officers, the frontline troops so to speak, who see the materials which come into our country. It is apparent that these people are key decision-makers in determining whether or not these materials should be reviewed by our justice system to see if in fact they do offend the rights of Canadians. It is up to these officials to decide whether or not to detain the materials or pass them through to Canada Post, which will distribute them to Canadians.

I have discussed this situation with officials at Canada Post. They tell me that they are very concerned about it. They have pointed out that they have no alternative but to deliver the mail. It is their mandate to deliver mail if it is appropriately addressed and if it carries sufficient postage. That is their job. They are certainly very sympathetic to anything which would violate the human rights of Canadians.

Thus the onus in on the Minister of National Revenue, through the Department of Customs and Excise, to get these rules and regulations in order. I suggest that some new guidelines are in order. The frontline troops are in need of some operating procedures which they can use to examine the materials which flood into our country. They need guidelines to allow them to make decisions so that Canadians will not be bombarded with this unwanted material.

These guidelines will have to be based on jurisprudence which is available in Canada. However, I must say that in doing a review of it, I find that we are somewhat lacking in jurisprudence in the field of hate literature. I hope more cases will be examined by our judicial system in order that more decisions can be made. Therefore, more jurisprudence will be made available so that new guidelines can be put together. In this way our customs officials can have them at the ready at the border crossings to intercept this foreign literature. This is literature which in some cases is very much hate literature to the recipients here in Canada.

I am sure Ukrainian Canadians would like me to say that the matter about which we are speaking today goes beyond just Ukrainian Canadians. I hope the Minister will take this into account because hate literature has become a major problem in Canada. I hope he will implement some new guidelines and regulations so that Canadians will have maintained the human rights which we fought so hard to obtain.

Mr. Bernard Valcourt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to respond to the Hon. Member's concern regarding hate propaganda directed to Ukrainian and other people in Canada. The subject he raises tonight flows from certain literature that was posted in Moscow for delivery in Canada. I can advise the Hon. Member that the Department of National Revenue shares his concern with the importance of prohibiting material which incites hatred toward any group which can be identified by race, creed or colour.

The Department of National Revenue is responsible for administering Tariff Item 99201-1 of Schedule "C" of the Customs Tariff which prohibits the importation into Canada of certain materials. Material suspected of being treasonable, seditious, obscene or hate propaganda is inspected thoroughly by customs officers and, if judged to come within the terms of Tariff Item 99201-1, is prohibited from entering Canada.

The material in question has been thoroughly reviewed by customs officials. Consideration was given to the dominant feature or over-all tone of the material. The material does not constitute hate propaganda within the meaning of Section 281.3(8) of the Criminal Code in that the material does not reveal hatred against Ukrainians or any specific ethnic group in Canada or any other country.

The issue in question is a publication of a Soviet society known as the Rodina (Homeland) Society, responsible for cultural relations with compatriots residing abroad.

[Translation]

I think it is essential to make a distinction between hate literature and bona fide historical research and social or political analysis and commentary. The Department of National Revenue is committed to guaranteeing the right and freedom of Canadian men and women to express their points of view, opinions and beliefs and to read this kind of material. However, the Department is also committed to enforcing the legislation passed by Parliament to deal with hate literature.

Mr. Speaker, our conclusion must be that the Department of National Revenue, Customs and Excise, will pursue its primary role which consists in actively combatting the importation of hate literature, a kind of literature that has no place in Canadian society.

[English]

In conclusion, I would like to assure the Hon. Member that the Minister will take his comments as representations in the continuing concern of the Department to rule out such literature in this country.

WAR CRIMINALS

EXTENSION OF COMMISSION'S MANDATE URGED

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, the Commission on War Crimes has asked the Government for more time to complete its investigative work. Five months ago the Commission referred to its investigative task as a colossal one. It said its success depends on the time and resources allocated to it.

However, the Commission has yet to arrange to travel abroad to gather evidence, be it to the Soviet Union or to any other country where relevant evidence exists.

The guiding consideration may be found in the Commission's decision concerning foreign evidence, where it said that the quality of the Commission's work and the soundness of its conclusions should not be threatened by severe, if not unrealistic time constraints.

What is at stake now is no less than the integrity of the whole effort to bring suspected Nazi war criminals to justice with all deliberate speed. I trust that the Government will extend the Commission's mandate so that justice may be done and the Commission may be able to complete its colossal enterprise.

CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION CORPORATION

RESIDENTIAL REHABILITATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM—PROCESSING OF SASKATCHEWAN WOMAN'S APPLICATION

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, Saskatchewan people were encouraged in high expectations by years of New Democrat Government. Now, Mona Dawson of Rollo, Saskatchewan, has waited since last year to have her indoor plumbing installed in her house for the first time but she is prevented by the delays of the Minister responsible for CMHC.

She applied for a RRAP grant from CMHC in 1985 but there was no more money after the Minister had cut the budget. She applied in 1986 and is still waiting.

It will take two months to get a contractor, two more months for him to do the job, and if she does not get her grant this week the plumbing cannot be installed before freeze-up.

This morning she phoned CMHC, Saskatchewan Housing Corporation, and her Member of Parliament, but none had any word of the funding which the Minister claimed yesterday was now available for RRAP.

Will the Minister permit Mona Dawson to get her grant this week and have indoor plumbing before winter, or must she wait until 1987?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ANNIVERSARY OF ARMENIAN INDEPENDENCE

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, today is the sixty-eighth anniversary of the independence of Armenia. Just three years after the genocide in 1915, the surviving Armenians defeated the Turkish army and set up an independent state on May 28, 1918. In 1920 the Treaty of Sevres, signed by Turkey and the Allies, enlarged the independent Armenia to include most of its historical territory. However, the Treaty was never ratified. Armenia was independent until December 2, 1920, when Turkey and the Soviet Union invaded and crushed the infant Republic and shattered the dream of the Armenians to be a freedom loving democracy.

• (1405)

On February 18, 1921, the Armenians revolted against their Communist oppressors. They were successful for 90 days and then their hopes were again crushed.

Today members of the executive of the Armenian National Committee of Canada, including the president, Mr. Khatchig Hagopian, are in Ottawa to mark this important day. I join with my friends in the Armenian community in recognizing Independence Day—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

HOUSING

AGREEMENT WITH QUEBEC ON SOCIAL HOUSING

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): For many weeks, Mr. Speaker, the municipalities of Abitibi had been waiting for a signature and, last May 13, the Quebec-Canada social housing general agreement was finally signed.

This agreement is the outcome of a wide-ranging policy review process and of discussions between the two Governments. Some $254 million a year are to be spent under this three-year agreement.

The new agreement is the mechanism which will make it possible to gear social housing assistance programs to poorer people, particularly those who spend more than 30 per cent of their income on housing.

In addition the two Governments are committed to fund exchanges aimed at launching a house renovation assistance program for which all Quebecers will be eligible as of July 1, 1986. Both Governments will share equally the $70 million estimated cost of this program.

Besides being an effective means to ease the allocation of housing units to the most destitute individuals or families in Quebec, the agreement attests to the determination of the two Governments to sign a lasting housing assistance program.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds. The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi).

POLITICAL PARTIES

PERFORMANCE OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): When the Conservatives successfully ran for office, Mr. Speaker, they sold one or two trendy ideas to the people by claiming they had solutions to all problems experienced in this country.

Canadians were under the impression that the Conservatives had been in Opposition long enough to have time to prepare themselves, that they had devised novel solutions, that they had sought and found new avenues.

No, Sir, when the Conservatives took over in Ottawa they had no ideas, no visions, not even dreams to fulfil.

The Liberal Party has always been a strong advocate of social justice, equal opportunities, and progress. This is why Canadians will turf out the Conservatives at the next election and most certainly re-elect the Liberal Party.

PORNOGRAPHY

STRICTER REGULATION ADVOCATED

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, once a nation's moral fibre begins to decline so does that nation's character. The upcoming legislation on pornography is a test of our resolve. The control of pornography, as recommended by the Fraser report, cannot be allowed to be implemented. The proposed three-tier system of classification for pornographic material will only serve to entrench false images and feelings about men and women and sexuality.

There is strong evidence that pornography teaches sexual deviation, abnormal behaviour, and promotes violence towards women and children. Pornography is nothing more than vicious anti-women propaganda, whose sole purpose is to degrade by making women nothing more than objects. I believe that as legislators we must ensure that the forthcoming regulations regarding pornography are given the power to protect all Canadians from this type of exploitation.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

PENSIONS OF FORMER EMPLOYEES

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I come from a riding in which many thousands of CN pensioners live. On their behalf, and on behalf of CN pensioners right across the country, I would like to ask the Government to get on with the business of responding to the recommendations of the Subcommittee on Transport regarding CN pensions. I ask the Government to act very soon to correct the injustices which have plagued CN pensioners for years. This has been on the table for a long time.

The Government has recommendations before it. I hope very soon it will get about the business, in co-operation with the CNR, of taking all necessary steps to ensure that CN pensioners finally receive a decent pension, particularly those who retired some time ago.

THE CENSUS

IMPORTANCE OF INFORMATION GATHERING

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, June 3 will be Census Day for all Canadians. The census is the most comprehensive source of specific information on Canadians. It provides a detailed picture of our society and a wealth of information for all communities in this country. This information is used by businesses and community groups is making decisions that affect us all.

Once completed, the census questionnaire is strictly confidential. The information it provides will be used to create various statistics on the entire country. Once collected, these data are indispensable for all Canadians. So count yourself in on June 3, 1986!

THE ECONOMY

IMPROVEMENT OF ECONOMY IN KAMOURASKA

Mr. André Plourde (Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup): Mr. Speaker, "the economic recovery observed in Canada and Quebec was particularly evident in Kamouraska in 1985, when there was a 29.5 per cent increase in the value of goods shipped by our 68 manufacturing companies".

Mr. Speaker, I was quoting the beginning of a speech by the president of Kodécam at that company's annual general meeting.

I am proud of the fact that assistance provided by our Government has helped the Kamouraska region take advantage of the economic recovery announced in November 1984. In his speech, Mr. Michel Paquet mentioned the fact that six new businesses had been created. The number of industrial jobs had increased by 7.3 per cent, for a total of 2,331 jobs spread over eight industrial sectors.

Mr. Speaker, our Government was right to support the dynamic and innovative business leaders in my riding. I want to thank the retiring president, Mr. Paquet, and his team for the tremendous work they have accomplished, and I wish to extend my best wishes to the new president, Bertrand Soucy, for a successful term.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

ALLEGED RACIAL SLUR

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I feel an obligation to rise for a second time to request that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) ask the Conservative Member of Parliament for Nunatsiaq (Mr. Suluk) to apologize for his March 3 statement of "mafia mafioso" directed at the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi). The latter is a distinguished Canadian of Italian ancestry, and neither he nor any other Canadian deserves to be addressed in such a derogatory manner.

S.O. 21

On March 4 I asked, without success, for an apology. Moreover, the Prime Minister has since been petitioned by organizations within the Canadian-Italian community, again without success, to seek an apology.

The community does not tolerate such a degrading incident, and neither should this House. Therefore I call upon the Prime Minister to obtain an immediate and appropriate apology from his caucus member. Nothing less would be acceptable. Failure to respond is paramount to condoning this offensive characterization.

DISASTERS

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—FACTUAL INFORMATION REQUESTED

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, Canadians are frustrated and angered by the lack of information being released by the Soviet Union following the disaster at Chernobyl. What information exists indicates that 19 people are dead, 300 are being treated for radiation sickness, and up to 1,000 may die of cancer. This report comes weeks after the event.

On the day of the disaster the Soviets denied that the accident had occurred. For three days following the initial explosion there was no information. A callous policy of misrepresentation and cover-up has been put in place.

We have seen this pattern of state-controlled misinformation in the past. Is this not a repeat of the 1933 Ukrainian famine cover-up? The apparent openness of the Soviet Government in the past several days is nothing more than a public relations exercise. Given the past record of this secretive regime, we are left to fear the worst.

I urge the Canadian Government to use every resource at its disposal to pressure the Soviet Government to release factual information regarding this disastrous event.

EXTERNAL AID

AFRICA—CANADIAN ASSISTANCE MEASURES

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the Government is to be commended for its consideration of a moratorium on loan repayments by African countries. These countries are desperately anxious to rebuild after years of famine. They need relief from the repayment of loans to western aid agencies in order to devote scarce resources to agricultural development.

A loan moratorium is a wise Canadian response. It is also a just one. As the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr.

Clark) reminded me just last week, some 80 per cent of the goods and services provided within CIDA's bilateral projects must be purchased in Canada.

Aid dollars which Canada has given to African countries have already created jobs in Canada and generated income for Canadians. The Government has already received tax revenues resulting from this aid-based economic activity.

I support the Government's moratorium proposal. I also encourage the Government to redouble Canadian efforts to achieve the aid target of 1 per cent of GNP.

TRADE

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Last Friday he strongly condemned the action taken by the U.S. to impose a tariff on the shingle and shake industry and said that the Government would seek a reversal of that particular initiative. Why has the Government now changed its position? Why is the Government now seeking only compensation, which at best would simply provide for reductions in tariff barriers in another industry? Why are we conceding the loss of those 4,000 jobs rather than continuing the fight to have that position reversed?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are doing no such thing. The Hon. Member knows full well that the statement he has just made is at variance not only with the facts but with all of the matters that have been raised in the House. We are following a course designed to be helpful to the industry and to retain those jobs. In fact, we have just concluded a successful meeting with the unions and representatives of the industry from British Columbia and I think they are in general agreement with the policy adopted by the Government of Canada.

CANADIAN REQUEST FOR COMPENSATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, there has now been another change of position and I think it is important—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: No, it is important that we clarify this. Is it not true that yesterday Ambassador Gotlieb made a formal request to the U.S. Government for compensation and that compensation would only have the effect of providing some change or reduction in tariff barriers on other products and would have nothing to do with actually providing for the protection of jobs in the shingle and shake industry? Would the Prime Minister please clarify what it is that they are doing?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is widely known that the only people who either have no position on an issue, or two positions on an issue, are members of the Liberal Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: The position of the Liberal Party as expressed by the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount on Friday was altered by the Leader of the Liberal Party on Monday, and that has now been changed again by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry.

We are following a course of action which I think meets with approval of all the people affected by this decision and is designed to protect those jobs and strengthen that industry in British Columbia. It involves action on a number of fronts and flanks, and we are taking all of those actions consistent with our responsibilities to the people of British Columbia in those industries.

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, compensation is not the answer that will help the workers in that industry. If there are other courses of action, would the Prime Minister please elaborate on what they are? In particular, could he tell us what will be on the negotiating agenda this week when Ambassador Murphy will talk with Canadian officials about the shake and shingle industry? Will we simply be asking for compensation or will we be asking Ambassador Murphy for a reversal of the decision to impose tariffs?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, speaking of reversal, my hon. friend has just highlighted a very profound one. On Friday the official representative of the Liberal Party asked that the bilateral talks be scuttled, and now the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry is wondering what is on the table at the talks.

We are using the talks as a comprehensive vehicle to rid both countries of these irritants and the problems that are being caused or could be caused. This is why we declined to accept the recommendation of the Liberal Party last Friday as not being in the national interest at all, and least of all in the interest of the people of British Columbia. The Premier of British Columbia pointed that out with a great deal of emphasis. We are following a course and taking a number of actions designed to be helpful to the industry, the workers in the industry, and the process of a comprehensive trade agreement which we believe will be helpful to Canadians in providing jobs and greater riches for Canada.

TOKYO SUMMIT INQUIRY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. On April 29, a full eight days before the Premier of British Columbia wrote the Prime Minister about his concerns about cedar shakes and shingles, Mr. Mike Apsey, the Executive Director of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia, wrote the Minister for International Trade asking that the, at that time, potential 35 per cent tariff issue be raised by the Prime Minister with the President of the United States during the course of the Tokyo Summit. I would ask the Prime Minister whether or not the Minister for International Trade brought to your attention the contents of Mr. Apsey's letter and whether or not you raised this issue with the President during the course of your meetings with him at the Tokyo Summit.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the potential for action in this regard by any country always exists. Everyone in the House, I think, recognizes the enormous pressures from protectionist sources that are on the President of the United States. This is why we included the Quebec arrangement. This is why we had the undertakings in Washington. This is why, on behalf of the Parliament of Canada, I raised the issue of more liberalized and less inhibited trade at the Tokyo Summit. That involved undertakings by the administration, a reference to which my hon. friend will find in the Quebec declaration. Anything at variance with that, we believe, was unacceptable and unexpected. This is why we have consistently defended the notion of more liberalized trade, ridding Canada of these problems and of the relationship of the threat of protectionist measures, which we believe will debilitate relations between the two countries.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary question through the Chair, please.

LETTER FROM COUNCIL OF FOREST INDUSTRIES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Prime Minister whether or not the Minister for International Trade brought to his attention the letter from Mr. Apsey, written eight days before the Premier's letter on the very same issue. If so, did he specifically raise the matter of a potential 35 per cent tariff on cedar shakes and shingles with President Reagan in Tokyo, as requested by the Executive Director of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am in constant touch with the Minister for International Trade. He raises concerns not only about British Columbia products but about Newfoundland fish products, which were brought to my attention and to the attention of the Secretary of State for External Affairs. We raise them constantly with the President of the United States, with the Secretary of State, and with the Secretary of the Treasury. These are raised on an ongoing basis.

POSITION OF COMPANIES AND UNIONS ON COMPENSATION ISSUE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I am concerned about a possible misleading of the House, and I hope the Prime Minister will be clear on it. Just 15 minutes ago I met with the representatives of the four companies and of the trade unions with whom he met. They told me that they flatly rejected the Government's approach on compensation. All four representatives on the business side and all four trade union representatives said that they rejected the Government's attempt to get compensation. The Prime Minister has just told the House the opposite, saying that both sides supported the Government. Is he saying that they misled me, or is he misleading the House?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: I directed my question to the Prime Minister.

Miss Carney: —I should like to respond to that question because I attended the meeting to which he referred, in the company of the Prime Minister for part of the time and in the company of the Secretary of State for External Affairs before he left for Halifax.

Mr. Gauthier: It has nothing to do with energy. Come on!

Miss Carney: I should like to point out that the statement he has made is completely at variance with the views expressed at our meeting.

PROCEEDINGS AT MEETING WITH BUSINESS AND UNION REPRESENTATIVES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister, and I hope he deals with it. The Minister has now said that what the representatives of the business community and of the trade unions told me was completely at variance with what she said they told the Government. Is the Prime Minister aware that the representatives of the business community, four leading competitive companies, and the four representatives of the IWA, flatly reject the Government's attempt to get compensation and that instead they want their jobs back? Does the Prime Minister know that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, he does not have to yell; he does not have to yell.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: Of course Canadians quite properly want their jobs back and Canadians want jobs. This is why they so strongly support this Government which has created 630,000 new jobs.

Mr. Rossi: You must be joking.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): The usual baloney.

Mr. Mulroney: I was in the meeting, and my hon. friend asked me a question. I attended part of the meeting. All I can do is tell my hon. friend what took place. Statements of appreciation and support for the action of the Government of Canada were made and I believe were recorded by the media. This is not to suggest that the unions or the business people endorse everything the Government does in every circumstance.

• (1425)

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: Oh, oh, oh, the Member says. I said no, no, no to any suggestions to the contrary. Why is there such surprise? I have nothing at variance with the facts that took place while I was there—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Mulroney: I think the surprise—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister gets away with this too often in the House. Unless the Prime Minister is prepared to withdraw the comments he made earlier, I am suggesting that he is misleading the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I take it the Hon. Member for Oshawa intends an implication to be taken from that statement. I must ask him, therefore, to withdraw it.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Prime Minister will he—

An Hon. Member: Withdraw.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member, I think, has heard me. I think he intends, at least the Chair, to take an implication from what he has just said. I must, therefore, ask him to withdraw it. If he would please do that then I will hear his question.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I have absolutely no intention of withdrawing anything I have just said.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Oshawa knows that when questions of fact are involved—perhaps the Hon. Member for Oshawa could listen to this—there is not an issue. I took it that the Hon. Member was implying that the Prime Minister was deliberately misleading the House. That is the intention he intended to leave. If he says to me that is not what he intended, I will accept that. But if that is what he intended, he must withdraw it.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I sought clarification from the Prime Minister. I gave him the opportunity to clarify remarks that were totally at variance with the truth. Therefore, I have no intention of withdrawing anything I have said this afternoon.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please. I have indicated the Chair's dilemma with the language that was used. I have asked the Hon. Member to help the Chair and indicate what he meant. He is leaving with the Chair the impression that he meant the Chair to understand what the Chair understood. I, therefore, have no choice but to name Mr. Broadbent for failure to respond to a request of order from the Chair and ask him to withdraw. I have no choice in the circumstances.

The Hon. Member for Windsor West.

[Editor's Note: And Mr. Broadbent having withdrawn.]

UNION'S POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. I understand that Jack Munro, president of the union representing the workers in the shake and shingle industry, insists that he and his union representatives did not tell the Prime Minister and the Ministers he met with that they supported the Government's position that there should be compensation rather than protecting and saving the jobs of the 4,000 workers. Why does the Prime Minister insist on his perfectly untenable position that the unions agree with the Government's position on this matter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I explained to the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party that while I was at the meeting, I attended at the beginning of it, and it went on, that there was support expressed for what the Government had done. I indicated that I had not put forward the view that the unions or the business agreed with every action that the Government had taken or contemplated—

Mr. Blaikie: He used the word essential.

Mr. Mulroney: —but that we were moving forward on all fronts to be helpful to British Columbia.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister this question? Isn't it correct that what the Prime Minister is saying to the country and, in particular, to the 4,000 workers is that as far as he is concerned their jobs are gone and that compensation is good enough for this Government, instead of protecting the jobs in the shake and shingle industry? That is what he is saying to the country.

• (1430)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am saying the opposite. I am saying that the Liberal Party hopes those jobs are gone—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: Oh, come on.

Mr. Mulroney: That is what you are hoping for.

Some Hon. Members: Come off it.

Mr. Mulroney: That is all the Liberal Party is hoping for. The Liberal Party is hoping to trade on the hardship of other people.

Mr. Tobin: You wouldn't know the truth if it jumped up and bit you on the nose.

Mr. Mulroney: We are taking a mature, responsible position designed to save those jobs in British Columbia—

Mr. Tobin: The truth is a foreign concept to you.

Mr. Mulroney: —and to strengthen access to those markets.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nunziata: You're an absolute fraud.

Mr. Gauthier: He sure is.

Mr. Nystrom: Pinocchio.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Skeena.

UNION POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. I want him to address it very directly and very carefully. I just met with representatives of the IWA and the shake and shingle industry as well. They made it very clear to us at the beginning of the meeting that they reject, wholly and totally, the Government's proposal in relation to compensation. Our Leader has been ejected over this.

Would the Prime Minister make this clear. Is he telling the people of Canada in the shake and shingle industry that when they met with him they said that they wholly and totally supported the Government's proposal on compensation?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): He never said that.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will tell my hon. friend the exact same thing I told his Leader. I made no such comment. I indicated that the meeting began in a very co-operative and supportive manner. The unions and the industry indicated support for what the Government of Canada had done. At no time did I suggest that this implied support for every action that the Government of Canada had taken or would contemplate. That is what I told the Hon. Leader of the NDP and that is what I repeat to this Member.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the only proposal that the Government has forward right now is on compensation. Would the Prime Minister get up and tell the shake and shingle industry and the IWA what part of the Government's position they support? He has not had the guts to phone President Reagan and tell him to get that off the table.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I know that this will offend the NDP, but it was a constructive meeting at which people got along.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: Representatives of labour, management, and Government sat down in a mature and thoughtful manner and tried to work out a solution to the problems of British Columbia. No one harangued anyone else, no one cast aspersions, and no one cast blame on people. We were looking for a solution. It was a very co-operative effort undertaken by all involved.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, let me try my luck at getting the truth this afternoon. My question is directed to the Prime Minister and is on the same issue. What has changed since last Friday that the Government is now prepared to accept the loss of this industry and 4,000 jobs when, only a few days ago, the Government was demanding a complete reversal? Why the flip-flop?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, nothing has changed our mind, nothing that precludes action by any reasonable Government on a number of fronts in a matter this complicated. This is a very serious matter in which people's jobs and futures are involved. Comprehensive negotiations are under way. Retaliatory pressure and protectionist measures exist in the United States. It is not an easy matter to resolve. However, we are working with the unions, management, and the Governments involved to bring about a solution. There has been no change in position. We are opening up new possibilities on different fronts trying to be helpful to those involved.

[Translation]

CONSEQUENCES OF REQUEST FOR COMPENSATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. Does the Prime Minister not realize today that by asking for compensation he is just accepting the fact that this industry has been utterly destroyed? Does he not realize this?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Not at all, Mr. Speaker. This step is entirely appropriate in the circumstances, and we are trying a number of alternatives on behalf of the people affected by the decision. It seems to me it is entirely normal to do so, and one option does not necessarily preclude others being tried as well. We are working in any number of ways to help the industry and get them interested in the industry.

EFFECT ON INDUSTRY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a letter which was sent by Ambassador Niles to various newspapers in the country. With respect to the shake and shingle decision he says:

> This should not constitute a mortal blow to the Canadian industry, and should not endanger many of the roughly 4,000 jobs in the Canadian industry.

Does the Prime Minister agree with that assessment by the Ambassador from the United States which was directly contradicted by representatives of the industry only half an hour ago?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member is aware, there was a very fruitful meeting this morning between the industry and representatives of the Government, including the Prime Minister. At that meeting a number of options were discussed. Certainly the predicament of those people working in the industry was very much a concern of Government representatives at the meeting. These matters will be discussed further to develop—

Mr. Berger: That wasn't the question.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —a fuller assessment of the direct impact on the people who work in that industry. At such time in the future as may be appropriate further action may be taken.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, the Government has gone a long way to avoid answering questions, but that is the most excessive yet.

UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR'S LETTER

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I will direct my supplementary question to the Prime Minister. Does he also agree with the statement of Mr. Niles in this letter that U.S. and Canadian government officials have discussed this case in Ottawa and Washington since the filing of the U.S. industry's petition?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it has been indicated previously that there are differences of opinion as to what the impact of this decision will be on the workers in that industry.

Mr. Orlikow: Why don't you answer the question?

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We are reviewing the matter.

Mr. Langdon: Answer the question.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): If the Hon. Member is not going to listen to the answer he is not going to learn anything from it.

Mr. Heap: You're not answering the question.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We are assessing the impact and working with representatives of management and the workers in the industry, after which we will be able to make an appropriate assessment.

TELEX SENT BY BRITISH COLUMBIA PREMIER

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Prime Minister on the same issue. On May 7 the Premier of British Columbia wrote to the Prime Minister asking him to phone the President of the United States. Yesterday in the House the Prime Minister admitted that he did not follow that advice. I have in my hand a copy of a telex sent by the same Premier on May 20.

If you did not want to pay attention to the letter of May 7, why did you not at least pay attention to the telex sent by the Premier on May 20 in an attempt to avoid the impasse which we are presently facing?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that question has been answered three or four times in the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker: The Member will put his supplementary question through the Chair.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER TELEPHONE UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the answer has not been given. Why did the Prime Minister not contact the President as requested in the letter of May 7, the telex of May 20, and other representations which he received? Did he or did he not have the integrity and the courage to pick up the hot line?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that kind of question ought not to be dignified with any answer. However, I will tell my hon. friend that I have already responded to that question put in proper perspective by other Members of the House on earlier occasions.

ENERGY

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and is about gasoline prices. Could the Minister tell the House why, when the price of crude oil goes dramatically down, it takes 60 to 90 days for the consumer to feel it at the pump, but when it goes up slightly the consumer gets hosed at the pump? Could the Minister tell us why that happens?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I find it difficult to understand the source of the Member's question. As he well knows, gasoline prices have fallen across the country by an average of 10 cents a litre. They dropped another 2 or 3 cents a litre in Montreal. I understand that they have gone up in other areas, which shows that the market is dictating the cost of gasoline.

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my source is Bob Runciman, the Tory critic in the Ontario Legislature. Does the Minister agree with Mr. Runciman who yesterday criticized the Ontario Liberal Energy Minister for being conned by the oil companies and called for a full public inquiry into the price of gasoline at the pump in Canada?

• (1440)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative MPP involved was, I am informed, simply reading back to the Liberal Government the position they had taken in a campaign.

NATIONAL PARKS

INSURANCE DIFFICULTIES OF COMPANIES PROVIDING SERVICES

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment who is also responsible for Parks Canada. One local business, a boat rental agency, cannot yet open in Riding Mountain due to its inability to get liability insurance. In light of that, can the Minister explain what avenues his Department will pursue to ensure that the much desired private sector companies will be able to offer service to anyone who visits a national park this summer?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has put his finger on a very serious problem, both for the private sector interests which are providing the relevant services, and for the public for whom the services are extended. I am working hand-in-glove with my colleague, the Hon. Minister of Justice, on four or five options that we are looking at on an urgent basis. I must say our sense of urgency is heightened by the pressure the Hon. Member is putting on all concerned.

RAILWAYS

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF CN SHOPS IN MONCTON

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport.

[English]

The Minister of Transportation for the Province of New Brunswick recently said in the New Brunswick Legislature that the federal Minister of Transport had given him assurances last winter that the CN shops in Moncton were not in danger of being closed in the foreseeable future. Is that statement fact or fiction? Did the Minister give those assurances to the provincial Minister?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is clearly aware that this is an issue that CN has been wrestling with for quite some time as part of a survey of its maintenance shops right across the country. There will have to be some adjustment and rationalization and consolidation. When a decision is finally agreed to and taken to the board and management of CN, I will be in a position to respond in a more appropriate fashion.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, would the Minister please answer my question. Did he give assurances to the provincial Minister of Transportation that the jobs in Moncton would be protected?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have said on a number of occasions that there would not be, I would hope, any massive lay-offs. What we are trying to do is work towards the maintenance of the largest number of employees possible under any adjustment or rationalization.

Oral Questions

VISIBLE MINORITIES

INTERNMENT OF JAPANESE CANADIANS DURING WORLD WAR II—REQUEST FOR RESUMPTION OF NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister in the absence of the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. The President of the National Association of Japanese-Canadians indicated yesterday that the Association has not achieved agreement with the Government on any item in a redress package, not on matters of principle any more than on matters of financial compensation. I thank the Minister for returning. Will he resume negotiations with the NAJC in order to arrive at agreement on the whole package on which the Association has made recommendations to the Government calling for action, and ensure that the redress package is acceptable to the community?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, discussions with the NAJC, as well as other Japanese-Canadian organizations, have been going on for quite some time. It is only less than a week ago that the NAJC made a proposal to us. This was the first of its kind. That proposal has now been put forward for consideration by Cabinet along with other proposals, and is being considered.

REQUEST THAT NEGOTIATOR BE APPOINTED

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I will direct this question to the Prime Minister. The Minister has failed so completely to bring this matter to a satisfactory resolution before bringing it to Cabinet that I call upon the Prime Minister, whose personal honour is on the line here because of statements he made in June, 1984, to appoint a representative who will negotiate this kind of package. Will the Prime Minister appoint a representative to ensure that a redress package is negotiated?

Mr. Forrestall: You have the best one in the world.

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, I want to clarify again for the Hon. Member that discussions have been ongoing throughout the course of the last year and a half with all interested groups, including the National Association of Japanese Canadians. We have attempted in every way, shape and form to open the doors to discussion, suggestions, and recommendations. Those suggestions have now come forward. We have put them on the cabinet table for consideration. I can assure all Hon. Members that this Government is going to keep its commitment and come forward with a fair, equitable, and honourable resolution to the problem.

GRAIN

TRANSPORTATION AND HANDLING SERVICES IN PEACE RIVER RIDING

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. As he is aware, I have been working for several years now to try to get some improvement of grain handling services in Valleyview and areas like that in my riding. When will we have some sort of program in place to help these people, and can we give them assurances that there will be something in place to handle this fall's crops?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has been an ardent supporter of innovations to improve the transportation system in his particular part of the country. We have undertaken a number of pilot projects in all three Prairie provinces to try to address this problem, particularly in the frontier areas. Yes, I can tell the Hon. Member that we are still working on a pilot project in co-operation with the Government of Alberta, and we hope to be in a position to do something in the very near future.

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION MODERNIZATION AGREEMENT

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. At the end of December the then Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion announced an agreement with the Province of Nova Scotia for the second phase of the modernization of Sydney Steel Corporation. This agreement was signed at the end of February, yet the federal Government refuses to make any money available under this agreement. Has the agreement for the second phase of the modernization of Sydney Steel Corporation received the full approval of Treasury Board?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to take the question as notice and communicate with my hon. colleague as soon as possible. I cannot give him a yes or no answer on that question. I will have to check.

TREASURY BOARD APPROVAL

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, this is a signed agreement and the President of the Treasury Board cannot tell us if it has approval from his Department. When is this agreement going to be approved by Treasury Board? It was signed in February, and people are counting on the money and the assistance it can bring.

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): I will be very happy to give the Hon. Member all the information he wants on the case. I would just like to take notice and check exactly whether it is before the Treasury Board, if it has been presented to the Board, when it is going to be presented to the Board, and when action will be taken.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

INQUIRY WHY MINISTER CANCELLED MEETING WITH DELEGATION FROM MONTREAL

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for Canada Post.

Why did the Minister cancel a meeting previously arranged with a delegation from Montreal? Is he afraid of meeting people who are upset about being treated like second-class citizens as far as home mail delivery is concerned?

I would like an answer please.

[English]

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister responsible I would be very pleased to take the question under consideration and bring it to the attention of the Minister on his return.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Under the circumstances I think the Hon. Member for Papineau.

Mr. Keeper: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker!

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows the practice is that, when we simply have a "take note" answer from a Parliamentary Secretary, we go to the next questioner.

Mr. Keeper: It was an inadequate response.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Keeper: I would like to put a supplementary question to the Parliamentary Secretary. If he was answering a question for the Minister I would like to put a supplementary question to him.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Papineau.

COMPETITION

INQUIRY IF MERGER PROVISIONS IN BILL C-91 WILL BE PROCLAIMED WHEN LEGISLATION RECEIVES ROYAL ASSENT

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

Is the Minister now in a position to accept a suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition, and to confirm that the part of Bill C-91 that deals with mergers will come into effect immediately after royal assent is given? And could the Minister issue a press release to inform Canadian companies and businessmen accordingly?

• (1450)

[English]

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to advise the Hon. Member for Papineau and the House that the Government intends that the merger provisions included in Sections 63 to 70 of Bill C-91 will take effect on the day of proclamation, right after the Bill is passed.

[Translation]

INQUIRY IF BILL C-91 WILL HAVE SUPREMACY OVER OTHER LEGISLATION

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear this. Similarly, could the Parliamentary Secretary confirm to the House that Bill C-91 will take precedence over the Investment Canada Act in case of mergers that would involve foreign take-overs?

[English]

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to advise the Hon. Member and the House that the provisions included within the Act, the Competition Act and the Canada Business Corporations Act, will take precedence over Investment Canada. That is clearly spelled out in the intent of the legislation as it pertains to both the Competition Act and the Canada Business Corporations Act.

THE CENSUS

PUBLIC AWARENESS OF IMPORTANCE

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Supply and Services. Next Tuesday, June 3, is census day in Canada. As the Minister knows, the co-operation of every Canadian is important in gathering these valuable statistics. Given the Minister's limited advertising budget, what has he done to create an adequate public awareness which is so crucial to the success of the national census taking?

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I must clarify that we do not have a limited budget; we have no advertising budget. This was a restraint that we accepted in undertaking the census this year. However, I am absolutely confident that the importance of the census has been brought to the attention of all Canadians by business, by the media, and by Members of Parliament. May I take this opportunity to express—

Some Hon. Members: No. Sit down.

Mr. Rossi: Statements by Ministers.

Mr. McInnes: —my appreciation to all groups—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

EMPLOYMENT OF WASHINGTON LOBBYIST

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns the Michael Deaver dealings in Washington. I realize that this started before the Prime Minister began directing a new moral standard day by day here in Ottawa. However, will he assure the House that the Government will co-operate fully with the special prosecutor who is to be appointed to get at the facts in this case?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that has already been said. I assume the appointment of a special prosecutor will ensure that the matter will be treated in a non-partisan manner.

REQUEST THAT EMBASSY OFFICIALS PROVIDE EVIDENCE

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I take it from the Prime Minister's answer that he will co-operate with the special prosecutor. Will he give the assurance that that co-operation will include the appearance before that special prosecutor of any official in Canada's Embassy in Washington who may have evidence to give?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is a hypothetical question, in much the same way it is hypothetical to ask whether the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry will want to appear, given his interest in the case down there.

INSURANCE

COMPANY PRACTICES IN MONTREAL—REQUEST THAT LEGISLATION BE INTRODUCED

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance. The CTV program As It Is in Montreal showed very clearly how the insurance business allows deals among unregulated management insurance companies, affiliated insurance companies, and general insurance companies. Such practice was described as a major cause of bankruptcy in the insurance industry. When will the Minister put a stop to these sweetheart deals among insurance companies and introduce the legislation which she promised in January, 1986?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I am sympahetic to the Hon. Member's question. He knows that I also regard this as an important issue. Our legislation is in the final stages of preparation and I should have it in the House before the end of June.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT INTRODUCE FIRE INSURANCE LEGISLATION BEFORE END OF JUNE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, how many more people like Mr. Bernard Lévesque from the town of Gaspé will have to lose their homes due to fire and then find out that their insurance company has gone bankrupt, before you intervene? That is what the situation has been like since January. Could you give the House the assurance that the legislation will be in the House by the end of June?

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate it very much if the Hon. Member would bring the specifics of this case to me. I would be very happy to look into what happened. I think it might have been something to do with his broker and I would be happy to see if there is anything we can do about it.

TREATMENT OF FLIGHT ATTENDANT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister sotto voce. It involves the situation of an Air Canada flight attendant being suspended and facing dismissal after 13 years of service, after a Tory delegate to the Conservative Convention wrote a "Dear Don" letter to the Minister of Transport. Will the Prime Minister tell us why Mr. Ian Hamilton of his office, when notified of this injustice last week, chose to tell the flight attendant that no action would be taken to defend this citizen's job or right to freedom of speech?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I can respond to that question. First, I checked into the allegations that were made by my hon. friend yesterday. I am advised that the employee in question is not suspended but is held out of service pending the investigation.

Mr. Benjamin: What is the difference?

Mr. Mazankowski: Held out of service with pay, pending the investigation. Second, Air Canada has no policy that prohibits public contact employees from discussing politics—

Mr. Boudria: Why have the investigation?

Mr. Mazankowski: —politics, religion or any other subject with customers. My understanding is that the investigation is to be completed on Thursday, May 29 and, pending the results of that investigation, any action with respect to suspension or disciplinary action will be taken into account.

I should also say that the Hon. Member charged yesterday that my correspondence group requested the suspension of this particular person.

Mr. Benjamin: I didn't say that.

Mr. Mazankowski: I want to advise the House that I merely received the letter and sent it to Air Canada for a response.

Mr. Benjamin: If there is no policy against the activities of that flight attendant, what is the investigation about? I find it strange that the Minister of Transport answers questions about the behaviour of members of the Prime Minister's staff.

FORWARDING OF LETTERS TO CROWN CORPORATIONS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. Does he appreciate that Ministers of the Crown cannot be allowed simply to simply forward the whims in personal letters from Tory delegates to Crown corporations?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): You do that every day.

Mr. Benjamin: In the name of fairness and his open Government, will he reverse the damage caused by this action of this Minister—

Mr. Speaker: The Member will appreciate that this is a little long.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I told the Hon. Member yesterday and he knows that our office receives many letters, both complimentary and of a complaint nature, which we send on to Air Canada for a response to the person who inquires. There is nothing abnormal or irregular about that. If it is a New Democrat, a Liberal, or a Conservative, they are all treated the same.

RATIONALIZATION OF SHIPYARDS IN QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT'S METHOD OF PROCEEDING

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the the Minister of Transport.

During a telephone conversation with a Globe and Mail reporter, Versatile Corporation President Saunders said that the only way he might be awarded a contract this spring was to accept the responsibility of rationalizing the Quebec shipyard industry.

Can the Minister explain why the Government would resort to such methods, and tell us whether putting such pressure on company presidents is common practice?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, my understanding is that my predecessor indicated to Mr. Saunders that he should engage in discussions with other representatives of the shipbuilding industry in the Province of Quebec with a view to rationalizing the shipbuilding industry in that province, as is occurring in the Province of Ontario under the aegis of Mr. Martin and Mr. Leitch, all of whom recognize the difficulties in the shipbuilding industry and the tremendous over-capacity not only in Canada but throughout the world. This is an attempt at an orderly rationalization of an industry in order that its future may be secured.

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Minister for being so frank. Can the Minister explain how he can reconcile Mr. Saunders' statement with his own and that of the Minister of State (Small Businesses) who told Sorel workers last week that the Government had not given a mandate to Mr. Saunders? How can these two answers be reconciled?

• (1500)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think what my colleague, the Minister of State for Small Businesses, said was that there was no mandate to shut down any shipbuilding entities in the Province of Quebec. I wish the Hon. Member would stop misleading—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: That's not what he said.

Mr. Mazankowski: Maybe it is not deliberate but I wish the Hon. Member would stop that exercise because there is no point in spreading fear and apprehension amongst the workers in the Province of Quebec, or in the Province of Ontario for that matter.

POINT OF ORDER

ALLEGED USE OF UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, the type of language which is sometimes used in this House, I believe, brings from time to time disrespect to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), other Members of Cabinet and all of us as colleagues. It is disrespect certainly for Parliament which is the highest body in this land.

I distinctly heard the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) use the word "fraud" after the Prime Minister had replied to a question. I looked up the word "fraud" in the Oxford dictionary on the Clerk's table. It describes "fraud" as "deceitfulfulness, dishonest trick or stratagem, dishonest contrivance". I would ask you, Mr. Speaker, to bring the full weight of your office to bear so that we elevate the conduct of this House to the proper—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Am I to understand the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) to say he heard the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) accuse the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or another Member of being a fraud?

Mr. Attewell: I heard the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) call the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) a fraud.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I take it no one else is intervening on this point of order, in which case I will of course—the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans)?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, my quick reading of Beauchesne's would lead me to believe that the use of that word has been ruled both parliamentary and unparliamentary, but most frequently to be parliamentary.

Mr. Speaker: I did not hear the words put in exactly the way the Hon. Member is suggesting.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I think the weight of precedents with respect to the rulings of previous Speakers regarding the word in question would be such that the Chair could easily find that the word is parliamentary. In any event, I suggest there has to be more than the allegation of the Hon. Member opposite to connect that word with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Although the Hon. Member opposite may have his conclusions, I hope his colleagues do not agree with him in that regard.

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: On the same point of order?

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, when you are considering the point of order just raised, I would like you to consider this; on the one hand an Hon. Member can be put out of the House for questioning the truth of another Hon. Member in the House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Forrestall: Withdraw.

Mr. Allmand: On the other hand—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is dealing with this point of order, please.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I would like you to also consider that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) can stand up and say that the Liberal Party takes great joy in the loss of jobs in British Columbia and the rules will not allow us to do anything about it. Yet the Speaker can put people out of the House for much less than that. That is the kind of place this is becoming.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The fact that we are now carrying on like this indicates that the complaint about language generally is clearly true.

I did not hear the matter complained of. Of course, under the circumstances, I will reserve.

Let me say to the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) that the Chair does not ever happily do what was done today. That is why the Chair goes to some length to try to explain the dilemma the Chair is in when the Chair has heard such a matter. The Chair tries to give the Hon. Member involved in such a thing time to withdraw, as the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grace—Lachine East knows personally, with respect.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I have indicated I will reserve.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, I am sorry, in the by-play I did not catch that. I would just ask, since it has been pointed out that rulings have gone both ways, that the Chair take it in the context of the way it was in the House today and decide whether we are going to deal with this as a precedent or as a principle, and what kind of a House we want this to be.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I hope the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) is rising on the business question and not on this point of order because he knows I cannot allow this to become a debate, with respect.

Mr. Ouellet: It's a reflection of the quality of the answers we are getting.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, when you consider this particular point, I would appreciate you also considering whether it is parliamentary for the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to have said that an Hon. Member on this side misled the House and then went on to say "maybe it was not deliberate". It would seem to me that in order to use the word "misled" in the way which is acceptable, the person using it must make clear he does not suggest it was used deliberately, without equivocation.

Mr. Siddon: That's what he did.

Mr. Ouellet: He said "maybe".

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is in fact raising a different point of order about another Hon. Member's language. I listened very carefully to what the Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps all those involved, including Ministers and backbenchers, would please stop this. I listened very carefully, as I did earlier to the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent). I had some difficulty in knowing what was being said in that situation which is why I intervened. I listened very carefully because I think the Chair tries to hear people as being in order. I think that is the Chair's intention. So I listened to what the Hon. Minister said and it seemed to me he very carefully tried to indicate that if an impression was left that he was accusing someone of something unparliamentary he wished it to be withdrawn. That is what the Chair took from the Minister's language at the time. However, that is the dilemma the Chair is always in when interpreting language, which is why the Chair rose earlier where it was not clear to ask that it be made clear.

Mr. Moe Mantha (Nipissing): Mr. Speaker, in the Speaker's penalty box is one of our fine Canadians, the best referee—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member's point of order is completely out of order no matter what one thinks personally of the gentleman involved.

Point of Order—Mr. Forrestall

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader and, in that capacity, the Acting House Leader, what business the Government intends to call for the remainder of the week.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I advise the House that tomorrow it is our intention to call Bill C-88, an Act to Authorize the Acquisition of Marine Atlantic Inc. Once the House has completed second reading debate on that Bill we will move to second reading of Bill C-111, an Act to Amend the Customs Tariff Act.

In the event that the debate is completed on those Bills during the day, we will discuss this from time to time with the other House Leaders and advise them as to what Bills we intend to call.

[Translation]

I would also like to announce that Friday will be the ninth allotted day of the current supply period.

[English]

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary when he is going to be calling Bill C-67 for report stage and third reading? Can we expect that this week?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, we will be discussing this matter with the House Leaders and it will come up in due course.

POINT OF ORDER

DECORUM IN THE HOUSE

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I would like to return to another point of order because of the history and the nature of what went on in the Chamber this afternoon. May I join with those Hon. Members who share some concern—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows I am in some difficulty, since I thought he was on a different point of order, and I have indicated I am going to reserve on the earlier point of order raised.

I can hear the Hon. Member on a separate point of order but not on the same one we have discussed.

Mr. Forrestall: Then permit me on a question of privilege, as someone who has sat here for some 21 years, to say I regret deeply what has happened in the Chamber this afternoon.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Come on. We will all stand up on this.

Point of Order

Mr. Forrestall: I can only sympathize—

• (1510)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that that is what I think the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) calls a "point of view". It is not a point of order or a question of privilege.

Mr. Forrestall: Why would you then allow somebody to denigrate this Chamber?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ouellet: Kick him out.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Ouellet: In 21 years he has not learned.

Mr. Speaker: Please, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) as well.

REQUEST FOR CONTINUATION AND EXPANSION OF CO-OPERATIVE HOUSING PROGRAMS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and pleasure to present a petition signed by a number of residents of Saint John, New Brunswick, and Halifax, who request that this House consider co-operatives as democratically-controlled and self-administered affordable housing. They humbly pray and call upon the House to reject any recommendation that would reduce government funding to continue with housing co-operatives. In the interest of stable community development, they request that the Government continue and expand the co-operative housing program.

CANCELLATION OF KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate that today, the day on which we will discuss a motion relevant to Government youth policies, I again have an opportunity to present two petitions. The first is from the Province of Quebec and the second is from Windsor. A total of 150 names are on these petitions. The petitions protest the cancellation of Katimavik, which cancellation is symbolic of the Government's youth policy.

QUESTION ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, question No. 551 will be answered today.

HEAVY OIL UPGRADER PROJECT

Question No. 551—Mr. Caccia:

1. Did the Government contribute $63 million to the Husky heavy oil upgrader project in Lloydminster and, if so (a) what proportion was/is to be spent on environmental studies (b) what are the specific areas or topics that will be studied in relation to the (i) construction (ii) operation (iii) closing phases of the project?

2. Was the project referred to the Environment Assessment Review Process for full public review and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): 1. The Government of Canada, Alberta and Saskatchewan have agreed to contribute $63 million in total to the Husky upgrader project; $36 million from Canada and $13.5 million from each of the two provinces.

(a) Of the $50 million expended to date, $1.5 million has gone directly towards the preparation of an Environmental Impact Statement. Considerably more money has gone towards the engineering designs required to develop industrial process technologies which are relatively environmentally benign. In addition, approximately $0.5 million has been spent on optimizing waste water design specifications to bring them to the "state of the art" and approximately $1 million has been expended on deep well disposal test systems for waste products.

(b) (i)—(iii) The Governments' contribution will assist Husky Oil in completing the pre-construction engineering phase and will produce definitive estimates of construction costs, ongoing operating expenses and conditions, and the probable useful life of the project. Based on these results, the governments and Husky Oil will be able to assess the desirability and need for future support to the project. As part of its final report, Husky Oil will provide a summary of the costs incurred before April, 1986, and to the end of this phase of work early next year.

2. The three Governments agreed to use the Saskatchewan Environmental Impact Assessment Process and to have equal representation on any review by all governments.

In November, 1984, Saskatchewan Environment issued guidelines for the development of the Upgrader Environmental Impact Statement which Husky Oil subsequently prepared. Following a thorough review and acceptance of the statement by all the key parties, Saskatchewan extended environmental approval in principle to the project. This approval followed a public review period in Saskatchewan and is subject to Husky completing, in the near future, a detailed investigation of liquid waste disposal options (including both deep well injection, and treatment and discharge of wastes into the North Saskatchewan River).

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—JOB CREATION PROGRAMS—DIVERSION OF CHALLENGE '86 FUNDS TO PRIVATE SECTOR

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville) moved:

That this House condemns the Government for its management of job-creation programs and in particular for diverting Challenge '86 funds for youth employment from non-profit service organizations to the private sector, thus not only eliminating valuable social services but at the same time limiting new job creation and career experience for youth.

He said: Mr. Speaker, just moments ago I tabled two petitions which protest the Government's cancellation of Katimavik, which cancellation led to considerable focus being placed upon the Government's youth policy, or lack thereof.

The motion we are debating today dramatizes in a way the narrowness of the perspective which the Government has brought to the issue of youth policy. As Hon. Members well know, when questions have arisen in the House with respect to youth policy the Government has repeatedly responded by reference to its employment and training programs. I certainly would not deny that employment programs and training programs are a significant and important part of the development of youth policy.

I would like to draw attention to the fact that youth policy does not simply entail Challenge '86 or the Canadian Jobs Strategy but, as has been dramatized by the New Democratic Party task force, the Senate committee task force and many, many others, the issues involving youth are manifold. We should at least address the fact that these must include the enhancement of participation and a vehicle by which young people can be heard and by which they can build their own mechanisms for addressing the policies affecting them and the entire country.

As well, it is perfectly clear that primary, secondary and post-secondary education is of dramatic importance not only to young people but to the entire country. When we address the issues of economic development and opportunities and the Government's own economic policies, we must be concerned about the fact that the Government has not brought to bear the kind of focus on education that it deserves in terms of the future of Canada, let alone the needs of youth.

I would be remiss if I did not point out that there was a great deal of confusion resulting from the debate on youth policy, not only about what it should entail but about where it is to be established. After the unfortunate discovery of the real motive behind the activities of the Government with respect to youth, the recruitment of youth to the Progressive Conservative Party, resulting in a great deal of criticism from youth over the rather compassionless, complacent and incompetent youth ministry, the Ministry was mysteriously transferred to the Department of Employment and Immigration. Again, this dramaticizes the rather narrow and restricted concept the Government has of youth policy.

Quite frankly, I think we must call attention to the fact that when in committee we elicited from the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) clarification of the Government's youth policy that was to be released by the end of the fiscal year, the end of the spring, the fall and maybe the winter, he said that he did not know. I think it is about time that youth received an answer, not only as to what youth policy will be but where it will be formulated, by whom it will be formulated and the directions it will take.

We rise today to talk specifically about the Canadian Jobs Strategy. It is really not quite a jobs strategy as such, but is a program designed to allow for training. I think that is the fittest description that can be applied to it. At the outset, I have to say that there are many components of the Canadian Jobs Strategy which we think are quite good. We think its concept is good. On a theoretical basis there is much to recommend it. The Job Entry Program and the Job Development Program are excellent concepts. We do have some doubt about the Innovations Program because we do not know what that means, and the Community Futures Program is another obscure concept. However, let us focus on the strategy's practical application.

We have a considerable number of questions about the strategy's practical application. To say that we have a considerable number of questions is to pose the key question. It is very difficult to find out what is happening with the Canadian Jobs Strategy. The other day, we had occasion before the Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration, to attempt to determine from the Assistant Deputy Minister the status of this program. We received a cloud of obfuscation, but among the things we did find out was that there was a freeze imposed during the 1985-86 fiscal year which, we are told, substantially paralysed the Department with respect to the processing and funding of grants, not only for those applications received last year but indeed those received this year. We were told that the funding freeze that has been imposed and at times even contested by various members of Government but confirmed all across the country has resulted in no funds being made available in the form of allocations to be used for successful programs to proceed. We were told that because there was no money to travel, there was no possible way to process any of these programs at least until the end of May. Even more seriously, there is a horrendous number of examples of urgently needed job training programs for which no money was made available.

At the committee meeting we were cited the example of British Columbia. We were informed that some $15.8 million had been returned to the Treasury Board while $260 million worth of grant applications were lying fallow. Of course, those grant applications represent a great many people including a significant number of young people who do not have jobs.

In order to further dramatize the effect of that kind of processing, one could refer to the situation in Windsor. The funding of a considerable number of applications received in the Windsor area in 1985 was delayed until this year. I am having difficulty finding the papers, Mr. Speaker. I hope you will bear with me.

SUSPENSION OF PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS THURSDAY, MAY 29

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will take this opportunity to inform the House that I have received written notice from the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) that due to a prior commitment, he is unable to be present in the House on Thursday, May 29, 1986, to move his motion during the hour of private Members' business. Accordingly, I am directing the Table to drop that item of business to the bottom of the order of precedence. Since notice will thereby be removed, the hour for privte Members' business will be suspended and, pursuant to Standing Order 39(2), the House will continue with the business before it prior to that hour until the ordinary hour of adjournment.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—JOB CREATION PROGRAMS—DIVERSION OF CHALLENGE '86 FUNDS TO PRIVATE SECTOR

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. McCurdy:

That this House condemns the Government for its management of job-creation programs and in particular for diverting Challenge '86 funds for youth employment from non-profit service organizations to the private sector, thus not only eliminating valuable social services but at the same time limiting new job creation and career experience for youth.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That was very kind of you.

There are two offices in the Windsor area, and out of the eastern office we found that $318,000 worth of eventually approved allocations for 1985 were delayed until this year as a result of the freeze imposed last year. For this year only $205,000 was made available. Similarly, out of the central office, $446,000 in allocations for last year were delayed until this year while this year's applications will be funded only to the extent of $260,000.

With respect to the broader issue, we find that in spite of the statements made by the Government about its commitment to the Canadian Jobs Strategy, it has in fact cut $190,000 this year and, furthermore, will likely cut $400 million to $500 million next year. The matter looks even worse after reviewing what was done in 1985.

One must recall what the Minister said and what in fact was done up until March 13 of this year, almost the end of the fiscal year. The Minister promised that $350 million would be allocated to the Job Entry Program but $81 million was spent. The Job Development Program was supposed to receive $700 million but approximately $400 million was spent. On and on it goes. The Minister made promises that were only partially fulfilled at the cost of thousands of jobs and perhaps the futures of thousands of young people. There is a lack of commitment to the program the Government itself has adopted.

I would hasten to point out that I do admire some of the components of the Canadian Jobs Strategy, to the extent that they try to address the significant problems of employment, training and job-entry experienced by young people. The fact is that it is too limited and has not addressed itself to the manifold problems of ensuring complete access to all opportunity for all young people as would be provided by the Youth Prospects Program which we proposed in our task force report.

In particular, Challenge '86 has come under the magnifying glass. Of course it is a program which is supposed to fund summer jobs for students. At the very beginning there was a reneging on the implied promise to young people when it was announced that $30 million of the moneys which would have gone into that program had been shifted to the census activity to provide jobs that last, on the average, about five weeks or six weeks. Those jobs will occur in May and June, a time of year when the scholastic obligations of many young people prevent them from having access to the program. They may hope to make as much as $600 or $700 if they manage to get one of the jobs allocated to young people in the census activity. In terms of the needs of young people in the Province of Ontario, for example, the province assumes that university and college students will earn something in the order of $1,300. That puts that kind of opportunity into perspective.

For all intents and purposes we can say that Challenge '86 has been cut when compared with the allocations to Challenge '85. However, what has been revealed and dramatized in recent days is the absolute ideological commitment on the part of the Government to fulfil the mandate it has from business, big business in particular, and the way in which it shifted funds from 1984 to 1986 in the direction of private enterprise and away from non-profit charitable organizations and local municipalities.

In 1984, about 90 per cent of Summer Canada funds went to non-profit organizations. In 1986, according to the Minister, approximately 38 per cent of Challenge '86 funds will be allocated to private enterprise. If jobs were provided to young people in the same numbers as before, and if we used that as our only criterion, I suppose our conclusion would be the same as that of the Government, that everything was fine. However, we have been hearing from across the country about the denial of funding to non-profit charitable organizations which have served a great many important needs—the needs of the urban poor, the disabled, the mentally retarded, certain classes of women, and so on. There is no substitute for those services. Day care programs and summer camps for poor children have been denied funds.

I should like to cite a couple of examples of where and how this has happened. In 1985, Chetwynd received $52,000. It had 25 group workers and served something in the order of 240 poor children in the City of Toronto. In 1986 it will not receive a penny.

Many of us on both sides of the House had an opportunity the other day to talk with members of the Save our Summer group, a coalition of charitable organizations which up until now has depended upon Challenge '86 funding for summer programs. They dramatized the tragedy of the misguided, compassionless attitude on the part of the Government.

One might say that it was just an inadvertency or kind of an accident, that they received so many applications from so many places they did not notice in this rush to create jobs for young people that in fact they were subsidizing those who were likely to find jobs anyway in private enterprise, probably at the cost of full-time workers, while at the same time depriving useful organizations of the opportunity to carry out their useful functions.

What dramatizes the silliness and lack of compassion of the Government is that it had a report prepared by its own people. It was an evaluation of Challenge '85. It demonstrated how utterly misguided is the Government. The report indicated that if the Government wanted to create new jobs, it should put money into non-profit organizations; if it wanted to create useful jobs which serve a need, it should put money into non-profit organizations; if it wanted to create career-oriented jobs which provide opportunity for young people to enhance their qualifications for the future, it should put money into non-profit organizations; and if it wanted to create an experience at the end of which young people would feel proud of their accomplishments and would have made a contribution to the country which would not otherwise have been made, it should put money into non-profit organizations. However, the Government ignored its own report. Where did it put the money? It put the money into the hands of its friends.

Let me make perfectly clear that in my riding and in ridings across the country my colleagues and I have made every attempt to ensure that the very small business will take advantage of this kind of program, because that is from where young people will get career-oriented experience in business. In big business they are liable to be doing what the advertisements of the Government indicate—they will be carrying paintbrushes, perhaps whitewash brushes, and will be less able to claim experience of any significance in our modern technological society at the end of their summer experience than they would have had they done the useful kinds of jobs in which the non-profit organizations are involved.

I think it is clear from the arguments I have made, arguments which I am sure will be supported by my colleagues in the Official Opposition, that if one pays attention to all that has been said by those dependent upon Challenge '86 for fulfilling the needs of the various groups I described earlier, and if we are to respond to the cry from across the country that the Government should not ignore in its programs the plight of the non-profit voluntary sector, then the House will agree to the following motion:

> That this House condemns the Government for its management of job-creation programs and in particular for diverting Challenge 86 funds for youth employment from non-profit service organizations to the private sector, thus not only eliminating valuable social services but at the same time limiting new job creation and career experience for youth.

I hope the Minister of State for Youth (Mrs. Champagne) has heard the criticisms, which I deem constructive criticisms, of the Government's failures. I hope she will rush back to her Department and, with the great strength and force of her prestige, bring about a change which will respond to those cries.

Mr. Weiner: Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend has condemned the Government for its management of the job-creation program. We have created 630,000 new jobs since September, 1984. In British Columbia alone we have created 59,000 jobs. We have the lowest unemployment rate in four years. The Hon. Member criticized us for poor management, yet we have created 59,000 jobs in B.C. in 20 months, compared with the previous Government's record of 29,000 in 4.5 years.

[Translation]

In Montreal, we created 39,000 jobs in the last twelve months. The unemployment rate went down by 1.2 points.

• (1540)

[English]

We have restored confidence in the community. We are giving Canadians hope. We are putting a new feeling into the society. I can tell you—

[Translation]

The value of construction permits increased 11 per cent in 1985. During the first two months of 1986, 32 per cent more construction permits were issued than for the same period in 1985. Retail sales have increased 12 per cent since the last election.

[English]

We have done all of these things since September, 1984. The Hon. Member criticizes us for poor management yet we have created 31,889 jobs a month. Talking about youth unemployment, the rate was 18.4 per cent when we arrived. That rate was higher during the previous administration. It is dropping now. We say it is not good enough. We are going to work harder until we see it wiped out.

Mr. Orlikow: What is it now?

Mr. Weiner: A lot of this is due to our desire to co-operate with business to promote employment opportunities, something which the NDP with anti-business attitudes will never understand. Ask the people of my province, the Province of Quebec, what happened to jobs when an anti-business Government was elected. Ask what happened to business and jobs under that provincial Government. Yes, we are stressing career enhancement employment, not make-work projects. There are funds being spent on preparing youth for future occupations and to encourage those still in school to enhance their education. Under Challenge '86 every project was evaluated on its merits and its job creation potential, not only by the Department but by each Member of Parliament. Every project was examined in detail, riding by riding on its merit. It was on merit that the decisions were made. In addition, there was an increase in the number of applicants this year. Some received less than in previous years, or in some cases were not accepted, not because they were not good but because there were other new applicants, many of whom applied for the first time. No organization, private sector or non-profit should plan budgets, programs et cetera—

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I can guess what the point of order is going to be. I had given the floor to the Hon. Member for Dollard (Mr. Weiner) on a question or comment. Is that what he understood?

Mr. Weiner: I am raising comments on the Members' speech.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could I please ask the Member to conclude his comments to give appropriate time to the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) to reply and to allow other Members to ask questions.

Mr. Orlikow: If he wants to make a speech, let him make it on his own time.

Mr. Weiner: Mr. Speaker, those were all points raised by the Hon. Member. I am just saying how good we have managed the country since September, 1984 so that everybody will have a chance to reflect on our record.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, it is always a pleasure to see the enthusiasm with which my colleague across the way defends the Government, even when he is defending the Government against allegations or criticisms that in large part have not been made. Let me respond to a couple of things the Member said. He said that the Government is responsible for the changes in the unemployment picture. Let me first inform the Member, if he is not aware of it, that there has probably been about a 150,000 decrease in the total number of youth during the time the Government has been in office.

Second, it is ridiculous to lay claim for the improvement of the economic picture. Everyone who has looked at this with any understanding knows that the automobile industry, a significant example, responsible for something like 25 per cent of our exports and 25 per cent of the economy of Ontario, is largely responsible for industrial economic growth. The Government is on the verge of killing that golden goose by its policies on the automobile industry.

What the Hon. Member has not answered with respect to Challenge '86, has not refuted, is the allegation, the observation, that there has been a significant shifting of funds from the non-profit service and municipal sector to private enterprise. I have no problem with funding training opportunities in private enterprise.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McCurdy: In my own riding I have taken an aggressive stance to ensure that small business will have access to the Canadian Job Strategy Program and the Challenge '86 Program, but not at the expense of needs that will not be met as a result of deprivation of significant agencies of funds as this Government has done and has admittedly done. There is no denying it. There is no denying that it has its own internal report. The Member has not addressed that. The report said if you want to create net new jobs, you do not put money into large private concerns that will create those jobs anyway to make it cheaper for them to displace their full-time workers. That is insane, Mr. Speaker. The Member has not answered my question with respect to the funding freeze in 1985 or the issue of the funding freeze that exists right now. Until he answers that question, all the pretty words in response to what I say will not make an impression, not just on me, but on anybody.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I meant to raise this point of order when the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary was speaking, but I did not have an opportunity. I would like to refer you to S.O. 82(14) which says:

Following the speech of each Member, a period not exceeding ten minutes shall be made available, if required, to allow Members—

Members in the plural, Mr. Speaker.

—to ask questions and comment briefly on matters relevant to the speech and to allow responses thereto.

I felt the type of intervention being made by the Parliamentary Secretary completely violated the spirit of that Standing Order. I would ask that in the future when people rise to ask questions and make comments we have them comply with the rule in Standing Order 82(14).

Mr. de Jong: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I wish as well to draw the same matter to your attention. It seems to me in the past while that Parliamentary Secretaries particularly have been using the occasion of the 10 minute period after a Member has given an address to use most of the 10 minutes as a rebuttal. Very often government Members will not give speeches but will bootleg their ideas in the 10 minute question and answer period. Very often the speakers themselves do not have the opportunity to rebut the points made by Government Members, and in particular Parliamentary Secretaries. I think it goes against the very spirit of this important parliamentary reform. I think it is important that the Chair study this matter with some care and advise Members of the intent of our Standing Orders, particularly Government Members, when it appears as though they are using most of the 10 minute period to make short speeches.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Let me deal briefly with both Hon. Members' points of order. The Hon. Member for Dollard (Mr. Weiner) has the right like anyone else to make his comments. I found them a bit long. That is why I intervened. We must also remember that in that particular case the Chair saw only one other Member in the House who was ready to ask a question or make a comment.

Mr. Valcourt: Exactly.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It depends on each question. I realize 10 minutes is allowed for questions or comments. If the Chair sees many Members stand who wish to speak, the Chair tends to cut off Members more abruptly. In this case, I wanted to give the time to the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) who I saw rising at the same time as the Parliamentary Secretary. I will make sure that the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) gets at least equal time for reply. On a question or a comment, the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East.

• (1550)

Mr. Allmand: I was rising for debate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We are still on questions or comments. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong).

Mr. de Jong: I would lke to address a question to my colleague. It was important that he pointed out that he is not opposed to job creation efforts of the private sector. In Saskatchewan we have had a Conservative Government since 1982 and we have seen a steady erosion of support to social agencies, organizations that help the handicapped and the mentally retarded and help kids go to summer camp. Traditionally university and high school students have been able to find work during the summer doing important social services in the community. These students have been able to earn income to enable them to go back to university by providing important services. We are now in a period of cut-backs to social services and job creation programs which help people involved in social services. Does my colleague not find it shameful that there are cut-backs, not only to human services for the disadvantaged in our communities but also to summer employment programs which have also traditionally helped the underprivileged?

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to emphasize what my colleague said about our Party's attitude on job-creation programs of small business. We must focus upon the fact that, as the internal report of the Department of Employment and Immigration demonstrated, in so many instances Challenge '86 is funding jobs which would have existed anyway. It is incumbent upon the Government to demonstrate that, with respect to private enterprise jobs, career-oriented opportunities will be created and that these will not be at the expense of full-time workers.

Anyone who has contemplated the future knows that there will have to be a re-examination of our concept of useful work. Young people across the country were aware that their contributions in terms of human health services are just as valuable as those of computer programmers, carpenters, politicians, and any of the other previously recognized jobs. There must be a recognition that the future must involve the enhancement of opportunities for useful work in providing needed human services. The Government has failed to anticipate that. If the Government had listened to youth, it might have learned that.

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Party fully supports the motion before the House which condemns the Government's policy with respect to summer employment. With respect to summer employment, the Conservative Party is misdirected, inadequate, short-sighted, cruel and contradictory. I will deal with each of those points in turn during my remarks.

The disaster in summer employment policy is only part of the Government's disregard for youth. Right after the election the Government cancelled the First Choice Program which would have put 100,000 young people into positions in which they could train on the job, building a bridge between the school and the workplace. In recent months the Government cancelled Katimavik. It cancelled the youth conference which then went ahead under the initiative of youth groups throughout the country. The Government cancelled the Minister's budget in her former Department and then, to save her face, it reintroduced her under the Department of Employment and Immigration.

The motion this afternoon is principally directed to the Challenge '86 program which deals with student summer employment. The subject is student summer employment. Each time we put questions to the Ministers and the Parliamentary Secretaries they do not answer them. I do not know if they are badly informed or are doing it on purpose, but they continually confuse youth unemployment statistics with student unemployment statistics. As we all know, to qualify for the Challenge '86 program you must be a person who will return to university or college in the fall. The general program for youth unemployment deals with that great mass of young people between the ages of 15 and 25 who are not going back to school. That is another group of people.

The high rate of unemployment to which the Parliamentary Secretary referred, which came down from 18 per cent to 16 per cent, refers to youth unemployment. It does not deal with the problem of student unemployment, which is dealt with separately by Statistics Canada. These are people who are going back to university or college in the fall. That is what we are talking about this afternoon and I do not want to hear statistics about the general unemployment rate. I know that helps to divert attention from what we are discussing. I do not want to hear statistics about the youth unemployment rate because that is not what we are discussing.

With respect, that is what has caused a lot of the disruptions in this House. If we received more statesmenlike and direct answers to the questions put in this House we would not have instances of what happened today in the House. Some of the Ministers on that side answer questions properly, but I am afraid that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and many other Ministers do not and they actually mislead the House.

In this House I have brought to the attention of this Minister and the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) grievances which were brought to my attention in my constituency office and here in Ottawa by community groups which have either had their funding cut entirely this year or cut to a great extent in relation to what they received in previous years. The other day I asked the Minister to restore the budget and make the system more flexible. Instead of answering my question she said:

> I find it rather deplorable that the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East should be against jobs for ergotherapy students, for Concordia University physiotherapy students, among others, for Henri Bradet Centre gerontology students in his own riding. He is against that? I fail to understand.

I do not know what I can call that to avoid violating the rules of the House, Mr. Speaker, but it is completely false and the Minister knows it is completely false. If she made a statement like that outside the House I could sue her for libel before the civil courts. For her to say that I am opposed to students at Concordia University, the Henri Bradet Centre and others getting jobs like that is false. She knows that I never said that. However, that is the kind of diversionary tactic that is used by her and other Ministers which causes the disruptions which have been happening in the House. The Minister knows very well that I support those projects. If she was in touch with her Department throughout the country she would know that I initialled support for those programs.

I am opposed to the cut of $19 million in the SEED program, the primary program for student employment. I am also opposed to the Government's policy of giving more of that smaller amount of money to the business sector rather than the community voluntary sector. A lot of good community organizations are getting no money at all, or are being cut back considerably.

That was my question to the Minister. She brought up this red herring about me being opposed to some very good projects, which I was not opposed to at all. That was false. I cannot say she was lying to the House because they will throw me out again. I cannot say she was telling an untruth because they will throw me out again. However, she was not telling the truth when she said I opposed those programs. If she can find any quote of mine where I said I opposed those programs, in writing or verbally or whatever, I will make the greatest apology to her that one has ever heard in the House of Commons. I will even write letters to all the Montreal newspapers apologizing. I know she cannot do that.

This year the Government has cut the Challenge '86 program from $205 million in 1985 to $108 million in 1986. The SEED component was cut from $146 million 1985 to $127 million in 1986. To put that in better perspective, let us look at how it touches various groups in Toronto. For example, in 1985 the average grant to community groups in Toronto was $15,600. In 1986 it is $8,800, or a cut of 44 per cent. These figures are based on a survey of community groups in Toronto who were cut back this year. That is what I want the Minister to deal with. Explain that. Justify that. In 1985 the average number of student work weeks was 66.5 for community voluntary groups. In 1986 it was 36.2 work weeks, a decrease of 46 per cent. That is the sort of thing we want answers to.

The Minister says there are no quotas limiting the number of voluntary community projects which can be accepted. Let me put this on the record. In the 1984 Summer Canada Program, a carry-over of the program put in place by the Liberal Government, 100 per cent of the SEED money went to non-profit and community groups. In 1985 some 80 per cent of the money in the SEED component went to voluntary community groups. This year so far it is about 65 per cent. So we had a decline from 100 per cent to 80 per cent to 65 per cent. In the House the other day the Minister asked: "What is wrong with that?" Of course, half the groups being funded are good groups. We have no objection to those groups being funded. However, this policy of diverting, which is what it is, money from the community voluntary sector to the private business sector is leaving a lot of very worth-while community service groups high and dry. These groups have operated during the summer for over 13 years. They were more or less built upon and improved upon year by year by various Governments, Conservative and Liberal. In 1979 the Conservative Government helped improve the programs. In the first year of this Conservative Government it did not tinker with that program. If anything, it tried to improve upon it. However, starting with the Challenge '85 program we saw a movement of funds towards the private sector.

I say that contradicts Conservative policy. One day of the week the Conservatives are saying let us not throw money at problems. I heard the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) saying that many times. The private sector can do it all. We should deregulate and let the private sector do its job. That is why I find it kind of strange when the Parliamentary Secretary gets up and says "We created 600,000 jobs". I thought the private sector created most of those jobs. The Conservatives are now claiming they created 600,000 jobs. I wish they would make up their minds. One minute they believe in the private market economy, which means business operates free of Government intervention; the next minute they are claiming responsibility for the creation of jobs put in place by the private sector. They are now taking money away from the voluntary sector which relies on public funds and things like the United Appeal, and giving it to the private sector. They are distorting the operation of the private market economy. In my riding there are examples of one private sector business being funded under this program and a competitor down the street is not getting a subsidy. So the one business has an unfair advantage over the other. That is distorting the market economy in a small market area.

There is a policy of diverting funds from the community sector to the private sector. The Minister has admitted that. The Deputy Minister admitted that. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) admitted it. Whether they call it a target or a goal, I call it a quota. It boils down to approximately 40 per cent of the money going to the private sector. The very evening of the day I was put out of this House for questioning the veracity of the Minister's statements, I went to the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration. The Minister was not there, neither was her Parliamentary Secretary. The Deputy Minister was there and I put it to him. I checked all over the country and it is coming out to about 40 per cent. Is that a quota? He said they do not call it a quota. It is not a quota. It is a goal. Approximately 40 per cent goes to the private sector but it is not a quota. I said in this constituency, that constituency and this other constituency, when people are going to their project officers and saying they would like to take the money from three of these business organizations and give it to two or three or even one voluntary community group, the project officer says no, they cannot do that because a certain percentage of the money has to go to the private sector. What does the Deputy Minister say? He says they have a very decentralized Department and the managers in the field, in putting into operation these goals, might in fact be operationalizing what the Department wants to do by using what I might call quotas. If I ever heard playing with words, that is it. That is why I asked the Minister the next day what she calls it. Of course, she did not answer my question. There is a policy that approximately 40 per cent of the money, and it varies from region to region, goes to the business sector.

A lot of very good projects in the community sector are being eliminated. The Department did an evaluation of the Challenge '85 program. What did it say? It said that the non-profit sector was more successful than the private sector firms in generating jobs. It also said that almost two-thirds of the positions created in a non-private sector were of the administrative, professional variety, as compared to about one-quarter of the positions funded by the private sector. The community sector is better than the business sector with respect to career oriented jobs.

It also states that participants placed with employers in the non-private sector were considerably more likely to make positive statements about their summer employment experience than their private sector counterparts. There is more satisfaction from the students who work with the community projects than with the business projects.

It also points out that the lower degree of incremental impact in the private sector is of particular concern in light of the finding that 33 per cent of the career related jobs funded in the private sector were not, in the students' opinion, related to their course of studies. These are not my words, but the words in the evaluation report that was mandated by the Department of Employment and Immigration.

The Department did not even follow that report. The evaluators made those recommendations but the Department gave more money to the business sector instead of less than the previous year. While that is the Department's right, I wish it would be straightforward and say so, rather than trying to talk around the issue, gild the lily, and not answer the question. The Department's policy amounts to giving more assistance to the business sector and to ignoring the community volunteer sector.

Let me point out some of the projects that are being left out as a result of this policy. I will commence with one that I have already mentioned several times, and my colleague, the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), will mention it again when he speaks later. In centre Montreal, the Montreal Association for Retarded Children runs a summer camp for retarded children every year. Last year under the Challenge '85 program they hired 30 university students to monitor these retarded children during the summer. This year they can only hire five or six students, which means that many retarded children who would have gone to camp will have to stay in the centre of the city during the summer. The Department is taking that money and funding employment at La Ronde, an amusement park in Montreal. The same thing is happening in Vancouver. There is not much career relation to those jobs.

The Minister mentioned some good projects in my riding that are being funded, but let me mention some good projects that are not being funded as a result of her policy. These are projects that were funded year after year. SPARA Foundation helps young people who have problems with drug addiction. It is a very substantial program that has been supported by business and public sector people in Montreal for a long time. It will receive no money this year.

The DES Action Program has attempted to advise young women across the country that they might be subject to cancer as a result of the DES drug that their mothers took 25 years ago when they were pregnant with these young women. It is a group of people who have had cancer problems in their own families. They are trying to do something about it but their funds have been cut off. The Salvation Army residence for senior citizens will receive no money. Alliance Quebec, the action group for minority language rights in the west end of Montreal, will receive no money.

I believe the point of this debate is to ask the Government to consider restoring the budget we had last year, to make sure that those voluntary community groups that are providing essential services to the community continue to receive the same funding. Of course, if they have done a bad job they should be cut off, but there is no evidence of that.

I ask the Minister to consider a return to the use of constituency advisory groups. When we had the constituency advisory groups the choice of projects was in the hands of people from the community. These groups consisted of people from small business, from churches and from community organizations which would advise the Minister and the Member of Parliament. In my constituency we used to have 12 to 15 representatives who got together every year, considered all of the applications and voted on them secretly. They decided on the priorities and recommended what programs should be funded. This process worked very well most of the time. Furthermore, it is better for the Government and the Member of Parliament because it is a community based, grass roots process.

I ask the Minister to consider those three proposals. She should restore the funding, eliminate that criteria of 40 per cent or 35 per cent funding to the private sector, and consider bringing back the constituency advisory groups for next year.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member described what was happening to many worth-while non-profit community projects in his constituency which were turned down for funding this year. It is very similar to what we are experiencing in virtually every city in Canada. While he was making his inquiries with the Department officials in Montreal, was he able to see some of the private sector employment programs which have been funded and assess their value?

Let me give him an example of one such program in Winnipeg. It involves a grant of almost $200,000 to train people in the retail field, 20 of whom will be working at the Hudson's Bay Company. First, there are no assurances from the Hudson's Bay Company that those people will find employment there once they are finished. Second, I have not been able to determine what these persons wil do for that nearly $200,000 that has been given. The money is not used to subsidize the wages, and Lord knows that the Hudson's Bay Company does not need any subsidy. As far as I can determine, the funds are not used for academic training. Has the Member experienced this situation and been able to determine any more about these private sector projects which look like real rip-offs to many of us?

Mr. Allmand: I have been able to get some information, but it has been very difficult. I have been able to get the information from Members of Parliament who have had to examine the list for their own ridings. I have been able to get the information from certain officials in the Department who are themselves upset with the program and have surreptitiously sent me information. However, when I have tried to get information directly from the Department it will not release it. It is a rather strange approach for a Party that said it stood for freedom of information and criticized the Liberals because they thought our Bill on freedom of information was too restrictive. Now we cannot get simple items like this from the Government.

Let me give the Member an example. I illustrated some of the projects in my constituency that were turned down. Let me tell the Hon. Member about some of the projects that were funded. The Minister will probably talk about some very good projects that have been funded; the fact is that if the Government is going to spend $127 million some good projects will be funded. However, some should never have been funded. For instance, Zellers is probably a very good business organization—

Mr. Orlikow: Profitable too.

Mr. Allmand: Very profitable. It does not need subsidies from the Government in order to hire students for the summer. There is a very large pharmacy chain that is receiving money to hire students. I learned that these students are putting boxes on shelves, which confirms the comments in the evaluation report that was done by her own Department last year.

There are corner candy stores, ice-cream stores, corner supermarkets, bicycle stores and small landscaping firms that are being funded. No doubt, all of these are probably good businesses, but I do not know why they are being funded under this program. The Minister will probably say that I am against private business, but that is not true.

However, in answer to the Hon. Member's question, why should scarce public funds be diverted from the community sector that takes care of the aged, disadvantaged children, the handicapped, the retarded and others, to be given to these free enterprise businesses which did not need this money in the past to hire students? In any case, the jobs are not very career related. Some private sector jobs, such as ones for engineering and accounting, are very career related, but I do not see how laying sod, selling drugs over the counter and so on is very career related.

The Government would at least be honest if it said it merely wanted to create summer employment, no matter what it was. However, it is hypocritical when it claims to support career related projects and then funds jobs like that in the private sector.

[Translation]

Mr. Lopez: Mr. Speaker, I fail to understand why the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) is wasting so much energy criticizing the Government. When the Hon. Member was in power, he worked very hard at doing nothing.

Everybody in this country knows that youth unemployment has gone down since the Progressive Conservative Party came to power. And it could go down even more, if we could spend the time of the House on being more constructive. If the time he spent criticizing had been used to propose valid arguments and new ideas to create more jobs, that would have been far more constructive.

We are not satisfied, because we still have unemployment among our young people. Our goal is to get rid of youth unemployment altogether. However, we are realistic and we realize there is a lot less unemployment than there was in the Hon. Member's time. I think we are on the right track. What we need now is for everybody to be realistic. We must all work together and work toward the same goals instead of indulging in negative criticism. And if he can't think of anything else, after so many years' experience in Parliament, if that is all they have learned, I am really disappointed in his performance. I have been a Member of the House for only a year and a half, but I think my attitude is a lot more constructive.

And I would urge you to do likewise.

• (1620)

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's question indicates how much out of touch he is with what is going on in this country. I challenge him to come with me and meet the people I have met in different cities of Canada. They are the ones who are complaining, and I am simply here to put on the floor of the House their complaints. The other day I met with a coalition of groups from Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver representing hundreds of organizations which were being cut back. They were complaining. When the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) and I bring this up in the House, we are doing so on behalf of those people.

Some of those people saw the Minister of State for Youth (Mrs. Champagne) and the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) in their offices on Monday morning, but received no positive response whatsoever. The Hon. Member fails to even understand the nature of this Parliament. It is our job in the Oppositoin to criticize programs when they are inadequate, when they are a step backwards rather than a step forward. The Challenge '86 Program this year is a step backward from what the Government did last year. We on this side of the House will continue to criticize on behalf of those young people and those service groups from all over the country who come to see us in our offices and write us letters, because we represent them, not big business.

Mr. Warner: Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that in Challenge '85 we created a record number of jobs in my riding of Stormont—Dundas, and indications this year are that we will create an even larger number of jobs in our area.

I would like to point out that where these jobs are, and where these jobs are going to be over the next few years, is in the expanding sector of our economy. Surely both the NDP and the Liberal Party realize that the private sector is where most of the new jobs will be created. If we are going to have career-related training, surely it is going to tend more towards the private sector than the public sector.

I would also suggest that as prosperity increases the voluntary sector may be a little stronger and have more resources than they had in previous years. We might see the voluntary sector responding to some of the areas where the Hon. Member is suggesting we are not funding as we funded before.

In my riding we had a tremendous amount of over-subscription and a lot of very good projects had to be turned down. But I also know that this year we will create a record number of jobs for students, not just funded by Government. We are going to have less Government and we will have a stronger private sector.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member's question, of course there were probably more jobs created under the program in his area last year than previously. That is easy to do when we take a great percentage of the money and give it to the private sector where we only have to pay for 50 per cent of the jobs, whereas in the voluntary sector we had to pay 100 per cent. It does not take a lot of imagination or intelligence to know that if one takes $100 and gives it to the voluntary sector it will only produce 100 jobs, but if one gives it to the business sector it will produce 200 jobs. That is simple. That is what is being done.

An Hon. Member: What is wrong with that?

Mr. Allmand: What is wrong with that? What is wrong is that many of those jobs were going ahead anyway and were not counted under the Government's program. If we count the jobs under the Government's program it is true, because in the past under Summer Canada we could only fund voluntary groups. So under the program, of course we are going to fund more jobs, but a lot of those jobs in the private sector went ahead anyway and I have definite proof of that from my own area.

Second, if it is in the private sector where the Hon. Member says the growth should be, I agree, but I always thought from listening to the rhetoric of Hon. Members opposite that the private sector should be private. The Prime Minister has said: "Let's not throw money at the problem". The private sector should operate privately. I thought they were big boys, operated in the free market economy and did not need the help of the Government. The scarce resources should go to the people who are not in the private economy. So I support the private economy, but I do not believe in doing it in this way, which is a distortion of the private economy and misuses public funds for the wrong reasons.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Debate resumed. The Minister of State (Youth) (Mrs. Champagne).

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak positively this afternoon on the subject of what the Government has accomplished in the way of job creation and youth projects, and especially Challenge 86.

[English]

I must say that the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) has really outdone himself today in drawing up the motion in front of us. It really seems as if he has emptied his mind completely in a jumble of buzz words which could easily lead one to believe that he is against jobs for youth rather than the opposite, so much so that he felt he had to correct his words himself. His colleague, the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong), also had to ask us not to believe that the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville is against jobs.

The Hon. Member's motion jumps from pillar to post. He would do well to heed the words of David Lloyd George who said: "The most dangerous thing in the world is to leap a chasm in two jumps". The Hon. Member has taken two or three jumps in his motion today.

Nevertheless I will do my best to interpret what he appears to be saying, even though one's first impression is that he is condemning those youths who find jobs in the private sector. Is that what he is saying to our youths? Is private sector employment a dirty word now?

Mr. Orlikow: If it's not useful, yes.

Mrs. Champagne: Is summer employment for a larger number of students such a damnable goal?

Mr. Allmand: Call it subsidized private employment not private employment.

[Translation]

Mrs. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, in the first part of his motion, the Hon. Member condemns the Government for its management of job-creation programs, a criticism that is clearly unjustified if we look at the facts. Jobs have been created as never before since this Government was sworn in. Jobs have been created in every province, and as the Minister of State for Youth, I am especially pleased about the fact that since September 1984, nearly 100,000 jobs have been created for young people. I think this compares very favourably with the 285,000 jobs lost in this category under the Liberal Government, but that seems to fall on deaf ears.

[English]

In the month of April alone, 52,000 new jobs were created for youth while the unemployment rate declined almost a full percentage point. That is job creation. It is true that many of our youths, too many, are without jobs, but they have not given up hope. On the contrary, as the results of a research survey published in the January 7, 1986 issue of Maclean's Magazine revealed, today's youth are not disillusioned. They are not despairing or lacking direction. They have adopted a pragmatic attitude toward the challenges ahead of them.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, according to the survey, more than 80 per cent of respondents felt that reliance on personal initiative and skills was preferable to depending on the Government for everything, especially in the matter of jobs. Clearly, Opposition Members are not getting the message from our people. They are not taking the trouble to listen to them, and, as we saw again on the weekend, they are not around when youth speaks.

Last summer the Government proved that it had been listening to young people. The Innovations employment program we set up for them turned out to be an unqualified success. Challege 85 made it possible to create over 100,000 jobs for Canadian students, close to 20 per cent more than the previous year. Not only were there more jobs, but they were also better jobs in the sense that from the employer's viewpoint they met the needs of local industries while giving students opportunities to work in fields related to their chosen career.

This summer the Government is continuing along this successful path with Challenge '86. We have also built on the lessons learned last year. Improvements to component programs have been made in response to the assessment and comments of business associations, student organizations, community groups and elected representatives at all levels. As in 1985, the six Challenge programs are structured to serve the widest possible range of student and sponsor needs and to fit local and regional priorities.

Funding for Challenge '86 is $180 million, as the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) and I announced on December 19. Some $127 million, or 70 per cent of the funding, will be channelled through the Summer Employment-Experience Development component of Challenge '86, SEED for short.

A success beyond expectations last summer, once again SEED offers employers wage subsidies to stimulate the creation of incremental career-development opportunities for students.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, there can be no question of subsidizing jobs which would have been available to begin with. Employers must prove that these jobs would not have been created otherwise, and if they have already agreed to hire a given number of students, salaries for students hired as additional help will be subsidized. Priority is given to employers in all sectors—private industry, municipal administration, educational institutions, non-profit organizations—particularly to employers hiring students for jobs which will ease their transition from school to labour market.

[English]

Last night on The Journal we saw a very good segment concerning youth employment. We heard young people say: "It is so very difficult to get a job". When asked why, they responded: "Because I do not have experience". Of course, these young people are now between 19 and 22 years of age and have gone through summers in which they did not learn anything practical. They now have to go back, as we saw last night, and utilize programs such as Job Entry to learn skills which will allow them to enter the labour force.

What we are trying to do now with programs such as Challenge '86 is to help students while they are in school, during the summer, to get some practical experience that will facilitate the transition between school and the workforce upon graduation. This is what the program is doing. Over the years we will see great progress as these young people finally graduate and enter the labour force.

[Translation]

The Summer Employment/Experience Development program has the full support of profit-oriented organizations, unions and others such as the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Labour Congress, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, and the Federation of Canadian Students.

[English]

A while ago we were talking about Vancouver. Yes, wage subsidies from SEED will help create jobs for students as hosts and hostesses at the Canada pavillion in Vancouver. The undertaking will be cost-shared with the British Columbia Ministry of Labour contributing to both students and youth.

Even the fine achievement of Expo 86 has not escaped the reckless criticism of the Opposition. In fact, CEIC will be contributing $158,000 out of the $250,000 set aside for 49 student host and hostess jobs at the Canada pavilion. The balance of funds will help support other student jobs through the Challenge '86 B.C.-Canada Summer Employment Program and not Expo 86.

Under the on-side training incentive program, which is not a part of Challenge, CEIC has to date contributed nearly $570,000 toward the training of 4,037 students hired or to be hired on the Expo 86 site. Total funding of these initiatives represents less than 5 per cent of the funds allocated to the British Columbia region.

The Expo 86 initiative is one of many ways the federal Government is working with the provinces and territories in jointly funded and administered Challenge '86 projects. There may also be instances of separate provincial and federal programming, with every effort being made to operate in a complementary way.

I come now to the supposedly contentious issue of fund allocations under Challenge '86. Members of the Opposition, with their fixation on comparing private sector versus non-profit allocations, have lost sight of one essential point. They have forgotten the students themselves. The issue needs to be understood in the light of this Government's entire approach to training and job creation.

[Translation]

When the First Ministers announced the Canadian Jobs Strategy in Regina nearly 18 months ago, the various levels of Government in this country agreed on a number of principles. First of all, they agreed that training and job creation should be economy-oriented and that the emphasis should be on small business and on stimulating Canada's entrepreneurial spirit.

The First Ministers also indicated that the new formula should be adjusted to current labour market needs. The provincial and territorial Governments gave their approval, and I am happy to say that the federal Government has adhered to these principles when developing the Canadian Job Strategy programs.

[English]

What the motion is saying is: "Never mind about training and job creation that is geared to the labour market. Never mind about helping young people gain real job experience in the regular work environment. Forget about all that and put all your dollars into the non-profit sector".

[Translation]

However, the motion fails to indicate what Opposition Members intend to do with all these young people once they have acquired experience in this not very profitable sector.

[English]

The Government is not discriminating against the non-profit sector through its Challenge '86 funding. This year the private sector is more active in the program with 26 per cent more applications than last year. Non-profit applications are at about the same level as last year. In these circumstances it is only natural to expect more funds to be directed toward the private sector than was the case last year. As I have indicated, in line with the Canadian Jobs Strategy, we welcome private sector participation. I find it hard to understand why some Members can be so totally against young students getting jobs which usually last longer, pay better and in which they can really obtain practical experience, as in the private sector. This is where the great majority of them will find permanent, rewarding employment upon graduation. There are no quotas. We are trying to encourage good balance at the national level between private sector and non-private sector jobs. We are thinking primarily of the students and of their future careers.

• (1640)

To date, $77 million has been allocated to the non-profit sector. Surely there is a large number of jobs being created and a large number of needy people being helped. Our goal is to help young people move in a direction that will prove advantageous to them over the long run. They must fasten their hopes and aspirations on jobs that will open up a world of opportunity.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this year the Government spent about 700 million dollars on the youth employment and training program. This represents about 40 per cent of total funding allocated to the Canadian Jobs Strategy. Furthermore, the Government will spend 30 million dollars on hiring thousands of young people to work for the Census this summer. And through our network of 450 Canada Employment Centres for Students, we are once again working together with business, local agencies and Governments to provide jobs for as many as 435,000 students, and maybe more.

Needless to say, these students need our support and the co-operation of all sectors in our country.

I would like to emphasize the word job. Our task consists in working very closely with other sectors to help young people, especially those who manage to find a job or would be able to do so: Helping young people is our aim.

[English]

One component of Challenge '86 deals particularly with potential school drop-outs and young people with learning disabilities. It was started as a pilot project in 1985 and was called Work Orientation Workshops or WOW. These workshops are conducted in partnership with community organizations, businesses, social service agencies and local school boards. Together they help ensure that these young people overcome barriers to future participation in our labour market. A combination of workshops and on-the-job skills training encourages them to continue their schooling or seek more specific training related to their ambitions. These are significant initiatives. Students not only get a chance to earn wages but also to build a bridge between their education and the real world of work.

We are not just concerned with students. The Canadian Jobs Strategy focuses on the needs of young people who have left school and are currently at odds with the labour market. Already thousands of these young people are participating in the Job Entry Program. Let me give the House an example of this.

A young woman visited one of our Canada Employment Centres in southern Ontario recently. She is a high school drop-out, depressed and on welfare, with a history of brief work spells interrupted by long periods of unemployment. She talked to an employment counsellor, who referred her to the Job Entry Program. Through this program, she has been receiving computer-based instruction from a private training firm. She is now applying these skills in the business office of a major hotel. She is not only learning in the classroom but she is also gaining practical work experience and training in the workplace. She is now much more confident about her chances.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this is just one young women, but this small investment is very important to her future career. And so society has another winner. This combination of on-the-job training and institutional training, plus practical experience, makes it much easier for our young people to enter the labour market.

[English]

I repeat that our concern is with people, particularly young people. If Canada is to sustain the momentum for economic renewal, we must use our resources in an effective way. Challenge '86 was designed as a job-creation and a skills-training program. The Government's determination is that the funds allocated to the program will be invested in those projects and in creating opportunities which will produce the largest possible number of jobs for young Canadians.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, earlier I referred to the complacent incompetence with which the Ministry of State for Youth is operated. Surely to have come to the House with words that were completely written out on 20 sheets of paper with a complete absence of any knowledge of the content of debate is a demonstration of the validity of that allegation and the refusal of the Government to address the real issues.

We heard from the Minister a failed leap of rhetoric in her criticism of the language of Shakespeare, but I do congratulate her for the attempt. She said that one should not leap over a chasm in two leaps. We know that the Minister has already taken one leap from her own Ministry to the Department of Employment and Immigration and we know what the end of that will be.

Mr. Orlikow: Next election she'll be gone.

Mr. McCurdy: I would not accuse the Minister of State for Youth (Mrs. Champagne) of lying because it may be untrue and it certainly would be unparliamentary. I would not accuse the Minister of State for Youth of misleading the House because while it may be true, it certainly is unparliamentary. However, when the Minister of State alleges—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I should tell the Hon. Member that he is walking on slippery ground right now. It may not be unparliamentary, but I would ask him to proceed.

Mr. McCurdy: Having reached the shores of that little excursion into rhetoric, let me point out the subject of it. The Minister of State said that there was a meeting of young people over the weekend in the City of Ottawa. Let me point out that that meeting was held because the Government failed to hold the forum it had promised those young people it would hold. Of course, the Minister of State could not have known that I was there because they refused to invite her. She could not see that I was in fact there.

If the Minister had been listening to debate rather than reading what her assistants had written for her, she would also know that we have not been so silly as to criticize young people for taking private-enterprise jobs.

Mrs. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Very inadvertently, the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) has misled the House by saying that I could not have known whether he was there or not because I was not invited nor were members of my staff. I did meet with the young people so he is misleading the House, Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think that is a matter of debate. I do not think that the Minister meant that the Hon. Member was deliberately misleading the House. I think it is a matter of debate.

Mr. McCurdy: No, Mr. Speaker, it's true. They met with the Minister of State for Youth after the meeting that she did not attend.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will allow the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville to complete his comments.

Mr. McCurdy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask just a couple of questions.

Mrs. Champagne: Well, ask them.

Mr. McCurdy: In evaluating the private-enterprise career-oriented summer jobs as opposed to those in the non-profit area, would it be appropriate to ask if those jobs would have existed whether or not they were funded by Challenge '86? So much of what the Minister says flies in the face of her own report. She says that career-oriented jobs in the private sector are better than those in the non-profit sector, but she has her own report that was prepared for her, just like her speech was. She ought to know that there are more new jobs created in the non-profit sector than in the private-enterprise sector and that those jobs are satisfying and more useful.

• (1650)

My God, when government Members enter into debate, let them participate on their own and not be limited to what others tell them to say and thus fail to address the question.

[Translation]

Mrs. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, the evaluation referred to by the Hon. Member had to do of course with the 1985 program. As in any self-respecting department, once the program has been in place for a few months we try to assess its strong points and its weaker aspects. That is a matter of course. It is something we did in order indeed to improve the Challenge 86 program, and we are quite proud of the changes made. Besides, I think that change we made precisely to make sure the jobs allotted to the private sector would not have been otherwise created and this is something we have done. We have also asked employers to sign a form in that case.

Something else has helped a lot. Last year, when applications came in, jobs were provided only on a first come, first served basis. But such has not been the case in 1986, because a deadline was set. We could then match possible employers with possible employees. And each Hon. Member, including the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy), could decide, make recommendations and discuss with the people at the Employment and Immigration office the projects that would be accepted or not. And the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) said so himself earlier. He also has done that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) for a question or comment.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I have a very brief comment, because I will be speaking later and the Minister will be there. I have three questions to test the Minister's intellectual honesty.

First, is it a fact that in each and every constituency in the Montreal area, 40 per cent of the moneys were reserved for the private sector? I would like the Minister to produce the written instructions sent to those people.

Second, can the Minister tell us why, in my constituency, a company such as Aqua Parc got, without my permission, an extra $22,000, this money being given to a private sector operator who would have created the jobs anyway, and in turn an FTQ project was turned down?

Mrs. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member's first question, I have never seen any written instructions or other form of percentage rule being given to anyone.

We received 27 per cent more applications from the private sector to create the greatest possible number of jobs. Yes, we made sure that a certain number of jobs went to the private sector, but without there being a quota. I never heard of that figure in any form. Indeed, the current figures are in the vicinity of 35-65, and you could ask for instance in other constituencies, according to areas, if I am not mistaken it is in the constituency of our colleague for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) where industry is perhaps in greater difficulty, in his constituency I think 20 per cent goes to the private sector and 80 per cent to the other side.

Mr. Malépart: Some 40 per cent in all the ridings of the Montreal area!

Mrs. Champagne: I have never seen any written direction to that effect.

As to the other question, the Hon. Member must be very happy indeed that additional amounts were made available to his riding. I am happy for instance that a student in the hotel business will work and be in charge of food management. Another student specializing in mechanical engineering will work and be in charge of a pumping station, while another student specializing in law enforcement techniques will work for the security service. These are only three of several jobs which have been created.

And when you say without your permission, my dear friend . . . I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I address the Chair. The Hon. Member has stated that all of this was done without his permission. I think that everybody is well aware that Hon. Members have been able to see a list and come to an understanding with Employment and Immigration Canada officials. Whenever there was a consensus, there were no problems and all projects were accepted. When there was no agreement, the Minister's office had the responsibility to make decisions, a procedure everybody is aware of.

[English]

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, I share the concerns which have been raised here about the whole program. I want to raise a question about my own riding. Certainly non-profit community activities such as day care, sports, and others were cut back. Extremely good projects were cut back from previous years.

However, I should like to raise a particular question with the Minister concerning consultation with the MP's office. A number of projects came in. My office was consulted. I gave advice, some of which was not taken and some of which was taken. On the majority of projects there was no consultation. We received a batch of projects by special delivery. My assistant replied the very same day by telephone, but was told that the decisions had been taken without any input from the MP's office. Further, there was a project for which we never saw any application whatsoever. Thus, out of $190,000 worth of projects, $137,300 were allocated without input, improperly allocated. Is the Minister prepared to have this money made up so that there can be input according to the normal understanding?

Mrs. Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot): Mr. Speaker, on the second point raised by the Hon. Member, I do not know how it could have happened. I will certainly inquire. I know that my colleagues and I spent one day from seven o'clock in the morning until eleven o'clock at night looking at each and every one of the projects in Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot, trying to make what would be an acceptable choice to the people in the riding. I will look into the dates and so on and get back to the Hon. Member.

The Hon. Member said that there were some cut-backs and that even some of the non-profit organizations did not receive any funding. I think we must realize that this is a job-creation and training program for students during the summer. It is not a way to give core funding to social organizations, and this is what has been happening for the last 15 years. These organizations were counting on summer employment money as their core funding. This is wrong, and this will not happen again.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I want to say how much the people of Winnipeg and I appreciate the fact that we are having this debate. This year thousands of community organizations, which were able to provide very necessary and needed services to people who were handicapped, old, and sick, will not receive the funds they received in other years. They have come here to Ottawa and have held meetings in cities across the country to express their amazement, consternation, and complete dissatisfaction with the decisions of the Government.

The reason they are unhappy is very simple. I wish the Minister could remain here to listen to some of the complaints. We have learned that the budget for the Summer Employment Experience Development Program for this year has been cut by $36 million. There was a further diversion of the shrunken amount into private sector wage subsidies. In the case of the SEED program, non-profit groups are receiving about 50 per cent of the $127 million in current funding instead of up to 80 per cent of last year's $163 million, which is an over-all reduction of almost $67 million this year. It is not surprising that there have been very vigorous complaints from non-profit groups in urban centres. They feel the rug has been pulled out from under social service programs which are so necessary in their communities.

The Government made a very clear ideological choice. The Government started with a very simple principle, that jobs in the private sector are useful, necessary and good; jobs in the non-profit sector are wasteful and not very important. Starting with that principle, the Government paid wage subsidies to private business in preference to providing social services. The Government ignored the problems of the inner city in order to pad a business balance sheet. What it is saying in stark terms is: "We are not going to help the helpless. We are going to help those who do not really need it".

This ideological choice, and it was a heartless choice, was brought to the attention of the Government just this week by a coalition of groups from five cities. They came to Ottawa, met with the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) and with the Minister of State for Youth (Mrs. Champagne). They wanted to try to bring the Government to its senses and so they presented some valid information, such as the fact that 14,000 jobs for youth in the non-profit sector were at risk and that thousands of Canadians will lose day care, counselling and other services.

Let me digress for a moment, Mr. Speaker. I am sorry that the Minister of State for Youth has left the House.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Orlikow: I wish she were here—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Orlikow: Let me read a couple of paragraphs from an article which appeared in the Montreal Gazette on Tuesday of this week. It reads:

> One hundred mentally retarded youths in Montreal won't go to camp this summer because the federal Government has decided to give more job-creation grants to businesses and less money to non-profit community organizations.
> The Montreal Association for the Mentally Retarded, Spera drug rehabilitation program, the Côte des Neiges Black Community Association, the Salvation Army and about 100 other Montreal charities and community services are among the victims of Employment and Immigration Canada's decision to cut $36 million from its job-creation program for students.
> The non-profit agencies hired students to run day camps, counsel drug addicts or care for the elderly, and received full wage subsidies from Ottawa, under the Summer Employment Experience Development Program.

Those programs are not being funded this year. I would challenge the Minister of State for Youth or the Hon. Member for Dollard (Mr. Weiner) who participated in this debate to go to Montreal to meet people from the 100 groups who are not getting funded and give them examples of the programs that were funded in the private sector which were more socially useful or more practical—I see the Hon. Member for Dollard coming into the Chamber.

Mr. Weiner: I didn't miss a word you were saying.

Mr. Orlikow: That is wonderful. I challenge the Member to meet with these 100 community groups in his city and explain to them how the projects in the private sector which the Government funded are more worth-while than the programs that were cut off. I am sure the Member for Dollard will not do it. He does not have the courage to meet those people and explain the Government's program.

What happened when this committee, representing the Save Our Summer Coalition, saw the Ministers? They got very little thanks for their efforts. They were told by the Minister that she held out "no hope whatsoever that there was any chance of doing anything for the summer". This was despite her own departmental evaluation of Challenge '85 which found that the non-private sector was more successful than private sector firms in generating jobs and in generating career related jobs for students.

Having given an example from Montreal, let me talk for a few moments about my own City of Winnipeg. We have in the core area of Winnipeg a very large number of native people and a very large number of single parent families. Estimates done in the last year or two in that area tell us that there is close to 50 per cent unemployment. Yet in Manitoba the summer job-creation funds were cut from $5.5 million to $4 million, or a cut of 27 per cent, this year. Not only that, but a greater share of the funds will go to the private sector. In addition, money that was to be spent on job development funding was not spent in that way and was earmarked for projects of the Fisheries Department.

Many proposals were made by the public non-profit community organization which had done, is doing and wants to continue to do very essential useful work. Let me put on the record some of the proposals that were turned down: the North End Women's Centre. This Centre wanted to implement a program to retrain women prostitutes and former prison inmates into community workers; the BLAST child care centre wanted a program to train community persons for child care work; Pritchard Place, a program to train staff for the young people's drop-in centre; the Manitoba Child Care Association, a program to train workers for child care centres in 20 communities; Rossbrook House, an example of which any city could be proud and which any city could emulate with great benefit—if the Member on the other side wants to speak, let him speak on his own time. Rossbrook House was a program to train three youth Outreach workers; The Victoria-Albert Parents Council, a program to train local people to be language instructors, in an area with a large number of immigrants from many countries; the native KLAN, an organization which has been successful in helping native people who have been in prison to get back in the work stream, and which wanted a program to hire former prison inmates to work on redeveloping the river bank areas; the Lions Club, which had a management program service to train workers to work with the elderly in geriatric programs. The Lions Club has done a fantastic job in building housing for seniors. All of these programs were turned down.

I think no fair-minded person could say that those projects—and they are just a few of the kind of projects which were turned down—were not worth-while and could not have brought benefit to a part of the City of Winnipeg which needs all the help it can get. Yet a few weeks ago, when a meeting was called at Rossbrook House to discuss the problems which these organizations were having with funding, the Government was conspicuous by its absence. I was there. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) sent someone to represent him. The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) was invited. He said he could not be there but he would send somebody. Nobody came with authority to speak for the Government.

If the Government wants to stand on its record, the public has a right to know what the record is. I called the people in charge of the programs for the employment department in Winnipeg. I gave them a list of detailed questions that I would like answered so we could really see what was going on. I was promised answers, Mr. Speaker, but of course I did not get them. I asked for a list of all the job entry projects, for the names of all the training co-ordinators for each project, both individuals and companies. I asked for the number of trainees and occupational areas covered by each project and for the extent to which each project relies on an existing source of training to accomplish the delivery. I asked for the process of approval used for each project, including who approved them and what Government Departments, federal, provincial, or municipal, were represented when the proposals were approved. I asked what the process was for evaluation to see whether there would be jobs after the project finished. I also asked for itemized costs for each project. I could not get that information.

Let us look at a couple of the private sector projects which were approved. Jorge Management got $158,000 to train 25 people for the retail sector over 36 weeks. Twenty of those people now work at The Bay. Surely the Government and the people of Canada do not have to susidize Roy Thomson. Surely The Bay can manage on its own. The Bay made no commitment that there would be permanent jobs for these people. There is a revolution going on in the retail sector with more and more part-time people being hired and fewer and fewer full-time people working. That $158,000 did not cover the training allowances. As far as I can tell, it went to the promoter for setting up the job.

The Principal Group is receiving $128,000 to train 20 people over 20 weeks for the hospitality sector. These would be housekeepers, bartenders, maintenance, and front office workers. Do we know whether there will be jobs for these people when they finish? Will the jobs be at adequate wages or the minimum wage? Does the industry not provide its own training in these jobs, particularly in association with schools and community colleges? Of course it does. In short, why should we fund those types of projects and cut back on community projects? These are valid questions which have been raised by me and people in the dozens of organizations in the core area in Winnipeg.

The Fair Action for Community Employment group in Winnipeg has asked a number of related questions regarding Challenge '86 and the Jobs Strategy Programs. They have made seven demands of the Government in terms of the two programs, and they deserve answers. I want to put their requests on the record. They demand a complete list of those who applied and those who received approval for funding in the year ending March 31, 1986. They want to know what amount these approved programs received. They ask that all future applications for funding be reviewed and assessed on individual merit, rather than being grouped together. They ask for the re-establishment of the Ministerial Advisory Committee comprised of community and government representatives to be formulated to review, assess and approve all future applications. They ask that 75 per cent of the total allocations under the Canada Jobs Strategy be designated for non-profit organizations to employ the disadvantaged, native, youth and women. They ask that the $1.5 million that was cut from the Challenge '86 budget for Manitoba youth be reinstated. They want to know how Challenge '86 is going to address the increased student unemployment when Manitoba youth will receive $1.5 million less than last year.

Members of the House can readily see that these community agencies are very angry with the way in which these programs are working. There is profound doubt that these programs are functioning to help those who need help the most. That is why our Party has proposed the motion under consideration today and why we condemn the Government for the way it has been handling the problem of youth unemployment. As was pointed out on The Journal last night, to which the Minister referred, we still have 16.8 per cent unemployment among young people. That figure is unacceptable to me and should be unacceptable to any Government in the country at this time.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments, debate. The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart).

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, before I start my speech, could you ask the Hon. Member for Madawaska—Victoria (Mr. Valcourt) whether he wouldn't mind barking outside? This is supposed to be a place for civilized people. And the same goes for our Small Business Minister over there. Now that is cleared up . . . . This is for grown ups. Let the kids play outside so we can get on with our business.

Mr. Speaker, I think the motion moved by the Member of the New Democratic Party is correct in saying that the House condemns this Conservative Government for its management of the Challenge 86 project for young people. First of all, I must say quite frankly that when I asked the Minister, who unfortunately has cleared out, and that was a wise decision, Mr. Speaker, because she would be ashamed—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member is an experienced parliamentarian and knows perfectly well that one does not refer to a Member's absence. The Hon. Member may proceed.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, the Minister's answer just now was not true! In my own riding, I am ready to back the word of the project officer in whom I have a lot more confidence than the Minister, against what the Minister said, namely that 40 per cent of the funding allocated in the riding of Montreal—Sainte-Marie and all other Montreal ridings was reserved for the private sector, and that if the Member did not want a given company or business to participate, the funds were to be allocated to other private sector businesses, which is the first false statement!

Second, Aqua Parc at La Ronde is a company that would have created jobs anyway, without Government assistance. It is not because of any disagreement between the officer and myself. We provided assistance to this company. But what I would like to know is about the "godfathers" in this party. We had a "godfather" who took care of another region. Which "godfather" recommended allocating $22,000 in extra funding? And I wish the Conservative Members would explain why being in charge of a pump or a pool at Aqua Parc is more interesting than working at Notre-Dame Hospital helping patients. Why did the Minister prefer that? Why did the Minister prefer, without consultations—and I have the impression that Conservative Members were personally involved in other ridings as in other sectors—why did she give preference to someone who will be responsible for security or sell hot dogs at La Ronde instead of giving this to a home for the handicapped, Lucie-Bruno, or rather to the FTQ which applied for research grants? Why? And I am talking about my own riding only, for I am sure that if we dig a little deeper we will find the truth, just as we found the truth today, and the Minister of State (Small Businesses) will realize that in the case of Mr. Saunders. I am convinced that the truth about this will come out sooner or later. I think the Minister would be well advised to set the record straight at the earliest opportunity before looking even worse than she does now.

This is not the first time, Mr. Speaker, and when I see the Minister giving the example of a mother who retrained through this project, I have to say that this program has been in existence for 10 or 12 years and has helped people gain practical experience. The Minister did not invent anything, Mr. Speaker.

An Hon. Member: Neither did you.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, it is due to the whole community, not to the lesser Minister of State (Small Businesses) who has not invented anything either, he is not even allowed to respond and all he ever does is carry suitcases. But that is something else, I am not talking about the handicapped.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Conservative Members should wake up, for some of the decisions made by the Government are unacceptable although I have nothing against the private sector. Perhaps in the riding of Dollard it would have been better to award 60 per cent of the projects to the private sector if they were to create good jobs. It is unthinkable that people should have been forced to accept 40 per cent of projects in funeral parlors in my riding. These jobs will be created in barbecue restaurants, and this is what you call promising jobs! Yet, there are specialized jobs in the community sector for the Quebec Cancer Society, in the important area of research, which the Government has refused to finance.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that Hon. Members should think this thing over. There is in my own riding the Quebec association of retirees and pre-retirees which is fighting for the people who have been arbitrarily denied unemployment insurance eligibility; this association too was in need of young university students to do some researching in the area of garanteed minimum income computation. It saw its funding cut and its money go to the private sector at the Aqua Park level. Someone will try to convince me that an employee who digs holes for Gaz Metropolitain is more important than an employee who will carry out scientific research for a non-profit organization.

The program is there to train and help train young people, all young people without distinction. We have young people by the hundreds who are learning the techniques of organized recreational activities. They are excluded because of the conservative caucus which has decided to fund only profiteers. We have also young people studying the social sciences who are excluded because of the Conservative party which is looking after its friends. There are in my own riding thousands upon thousands of young men and women getting trained in hairdressing, upholstering, cabinetmaking, bookbinding, etc. Every year, the Montreal Catholic School Board, the people in charge of the polyvalent school, the parents' committee made it possible for young graduates to gain practical experience in their own trades. This year, fewer young people will benefit from such training because the Conservative Government has decided to help instead its friends in the private sector to hire people who will serve hot dogs, sell tickets and act as security guards.

Mr. Speaker, in the past, every Member of Parliament had a say in the selection of projects for his constituency.

Some Hon. Members: Ah, ah!

Mr. Malépart: The Minister has just said so. Every Member had a say. When I see... Mr. Speaker, the Conservative dummies are waking up! Ah, ah! The Minister has just said that every Member had some input. I understand why the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDnald) cannot trust the 58 Conservative Members from Quebec in view of everything that has happened. I understand why the Minister of Employment and Immigration cannot trust her colleagues. We have seen in the past that she cannot even trust them to select community projects because she does not know what will happen next.

Who pays for all the mistakes and blunders made by the Conservative Government? Our young people do! Our young people attending university to study various subjects, such as recreational activities, social animation and health services. These people are left out because this Government has decided to help its friends in the private sector.

Many young people are being penalized because of the incompetence and lack of direction of this Government. It is all very well for the Minister to make speeches. She was well known as a soap star when she played the role of Donalda in Séraphin, but her role here is worthless. Her only duty to young Canadians is to cut ribbons, and even this she does badly.

The Minister speaks about the constituency of Saint-Hyacinthe, but I was there to look at the case of the people who took early retirement, and I can tell you that things are not going too well in her constituency and that the people want to see her!

Mr. Speaker, I would like the Conservative Members to explain why there is more glory in working for an architectural firm than in working for the head office of a union doing research on collective agreements or collective bargaining. Why is there more glory in giving a law student a job with a law firm than in finding him work at the head office of a union or a non-profit organization fighting to defend the rights of citizens? Why should these people be put in certain categories when the work is the same? Why is it better to employ a student architect in a private office than at a technical ressources group which helps cooperatives at a discount and which does not exploit people as much? What difference is there?

I see the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier). I know that it is to his own financial advantage. That is another Conservative who will soon be involved in a scandal.

Some Hon. Members: Oh! oh!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, can you tell me what difference there can be between two law students when the Government decides to favour the one who finds a job in the private sector and reject the one who will work for a non-profit organization or a union? It is the same for the architects. It is the same for young people who study health care in the hospitals. There are many occupations and trades which deserve fair treatment and all students should be treated the same, whatever their subject.

However, once more, as in every other case, whether when deindexing old age security pensions, imposing a tax on medication, deindexing family allowances, or allowing corruption, the Members opposite are concerned only for the rich. They care nothing about the middle classes and the poor.

However, the fact is that the population has had enough of the Conservatives. This is true for the people who took early retirement and who feel badly treated, it is true in Quebec in the case of the shipyards, in Eastern Montreal and in Matane. The people have had enough of the Conservatives. Throughout the country, the people have had enough of this Government and the way it is managing its programs.

Mr. Valcourt: Come to Madawaska—Victoria and you will see how the people greet you!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, the smart guy opposite does not have enough courage to rise. He is hiding. If he can get up and invite me, I shall go to his constituency, Mr. Speaker. I shall be very happy to meet him for a public debate. However, I know that he will not do it unless he can be sure that only patronage profiteers are in the audience. I will not be there, because I do not mix with these people.

Mr. Speaker, our young people's future is much too serious to allow ourselves to be distracted by clowns like the Hon. Member for Victoria—

Mr. Valcourt: Madawaska—Victoria.

Mr. Malépart: There are a number of young people who came to Ottawa to see the Minister to be sure to get a job, not only to gain experience, but to continue their education. When I see members of the Conservative party like the one who is shouting now trying to ridicule these young people, Mr. Speaker, I feel it is an insult our young people will certainly not forget.

Mr. Speaker, let me continue with my comparison. We see in the projects for Sainte-Marie alone—I am sure that if we take projects from all the ridings—

Mr. Valcourt: Compare that with the Liberals in 1984!

Mr. Malépart: —we will see the difference, Mr. Speaker. Why is it preferable to grant projects and create jobs working for the Gaz Metropolitain company rather than for the Quebec Cancer Society? Why is it preferable to support companies in La Ronde, Aqua Park, rather than to support the Lucie-Bruneau shelter which looks after handicapped people or the Notre-Dame Hospital which takes care of the aged? Why grant a project to the private sector and on the basis of what criteria of social justice have these same Conservatives decided to grant money to the Victoria Precision company rather than to a social organization looking after the senior citizens of the whole Sainte Marie riding? Why are these people, and I can see them—the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne), the hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent)—so delighted to see that these people have no jobs and that the jobs all go to the private sector, Mr. Speaker? Its scandalous to see the attitude and behaviour of these Hon. Members.

I should like these people to tell me why it is preferable to create a job for someone in the private sector rather than for a young man who will work in recreational activities organization—

Mr. Lanthier: What is the use of a young person involved in recreational activities?

Mr. Malépart: The Hon. member for LaSalle (M. Lanthier) would like to know what is the use of a young person involved in recreation . . . Mr. Speaker, it's a scandal!

Mr. Lanthier: You have never earned a living, so you do not know what it means to work.

Mr. Malépart: He is sincere. Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for LaSalle—it is important to record this—wants to exclude all young students involved in physical education, community leadership and recreational organization. I will make sure that his LaSalle constituents know of the stand taken by their insignificant Member: he will not be there long.

What are those young people doing as recreational leaders? In youth centres, besides being involved in sports, in recreational and cultural activities, in order to prevent delinquency? It is my feeling the Hon. Member for LaSalle would rather send everybody into the army, have everyone work for a dollar while he fills his pockets. That is Tory philosophy.

Mr. Speaker, there are co-operative housing organizations in the constituency of Sainte-Marie, and even in neighbouring constituencies. I heard a Conservative Member brag about the Government's policy in the area of co-operative housing. But why brag about it, if he condemns the people who are involved in that. What a shame!

Again, Mr. Speaker, daycare centres are not important for those Conservative Members. Cuts were made there also. Training for that kind of work is provided in the class-room. Why prevent those boys and girls who are studying in those areas from getting employment to acquire job experience? I appreciate this may be politically less rewarding, but why deprive them?

There are youth centres, humanitarian centres, centres for the aged, the Cancer Institute, the Writers' Union, the labour unions, Mr. Speaker. Labour unions are important in my view. The CNTU, the FTQ. I see I have still one minute to go.

Mr. Speaker, this is important. I appreciate the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivière who says it is too much. I understand he does not want us to tell the truth, because in his constituency he does not tell the truth. I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker. I was in his constituency for a debate, and people booed his secretary because he was not telling the truth.

Mr. Vincent: You are telling lies.

Mr. Malépart: I can understand that the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières does not want me to tell the truth here in this House. I can understand that! As my colleague for Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano) just suggested, I just woke up that flock of sheep, those little snorers.

Mr. Lanthier: Louder! Louder!

Mr. Malépart: To conclude, Mr. Speaker, the only time they wake up is when I refer to their scandals and to their patronage. Are they afraid of being caught? See here! Your turn will come. Just you wait and see, you too will hit the headlines.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I hope the Minister for Youth (Mrs. Champagne) will find a way to provide the extra moneys needed to respond to the just and fair applications of people in Sainte-Marie.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Before we proceed to the period for questions and comments, I wish to advise the House that since the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has designated this coming Friday as an allotted day, the item which had been scheduled for Private Members' Business will therefore be dropped to the bottom of the order of precedence.

Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne).

Mr. Champagne: I think the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) better not say we don't take care of our constituents. First of all, I may remind the Hon. Member that Challenge 86 is a program for students, but I don't think it is up to the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie or any Member of his party to rise in the House and decide what these young people, those who are going to school and those who want a career, what they should do. I think they would be better off staying home and waiting until our young people have made their own decisions. We don't need the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie, and above all we don't need the Liberals, Mr. Speaker, because when they were in power, there was this little Minister for Youth—people don't even remember his name—and he wasn't able to do a thing for our young people.

And as for the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie complaining that we don't give them enough money, Mr. Speaker, perhaps I should give some figures. In 1984, the previous Government, his own party, allocated $456,956 to the riding of Montreal—Sainte-Marie, for 231 jobs.

An Hon. Member: How much?

Mr. Champagne: Four hundred and fifty-six thousand dollars for 231 jobs. In 1985, Mr. Speaker, we gave him $1,098,352 for 631 jobs. Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie is lying when he tells Canadians we are not helping him. He is getting 140.4 per cent more money—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Champlain to withdraw the terms he knows perfectly well are unparliamentary.

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, first I want to rephrase this. The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie did not tell the truth—

Mr. Berger: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

An Hon. Member: Sit down, my friend!

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Hopefully we can proceed with order. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow).

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, surely the Member cannot say another word until he withdraws that remark he made, which even he should know is unparliamentary. You ought not to permit him to say anything until he does.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair is satisfied that the Hon. Member has withdrawn. I am sure the Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is also satisfied.

[Translation]

Mr. Champagne: Mr. Speaker, may I continue . . . As the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie was saying, it bothers him, and my other colleague who rose should listen, he should listen to what we are saying, he should see what we are doing because—look at the youth unemployment rate. When the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) tells the Minister to be careful about what she says he tells her: Madam Minister, you should be careful about what you say, you might be the subject of legal action. Considering everything the Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie has been saying, he would be charged with libel if he were to repeat that outside the House. So you should listen more carefully, then you could come and argue with us any time; we will be pleased to accommodate you because we did create more jobs with Challenge 86 than you ever did with Employment 84.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Champlain is jumpy, which proves I touched on a sensitive issue. I know what he would not want me to talk about, so I will not. I know very well, I went to his riding for a debate but unfortunately he and the Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent) chose to be represented by their secretaries, like brave men, Mr. Speaker.

Still I would like to respond. I thank the Hon. Member for reminding people that I had to be one of the better Members because last year I did manage to get projects worth $1 million. Mr. Speaker, I even warned the Minister that I would get more than anybody else. Unlike the dummy Conservatives, I have experience in the social field and I can tell you that I got more than $2 million for other projects, which makes all my neighbouring Conservative colleagues look like a bunch of dummies. The difference is, I'm honest. The difference is, as I told the Minister: I will not tolerate that in the riding of Hochelaga—Maisonneuve, just because it has an incompetent Conservative Member, that in the riding of Gamelin and the riding of Mercier, young people have fewer jobs because their Members are less competent. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for bringing this up. I announced this in my riding, but it just means they have a Member who works hard. And the difference between me and all the Conservative Members is that people voted for me because I was a hard worker, but you were elected on a wave of Conservatism. They don't even know you, and you are going to be swept away by another wave, this time a wave of Members who know what they are doing.

[English]

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, earlier in today's debate I put on the record the report which appeared in the Montreal Gazette which told the story that 100 community organizations doing essential work in the City of Montreal were not receiving funds this year. I wonder if the Hon. Member for Montreal-Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) would be willing to arrange a meeting between representatives of those organizations, the Minister of State for Youth, and the Hon. Member for Dollard so they could meet those people and illustrate the private sector projects which have been funded and which are more beneficial than the projects turned down, such as work with the handicapped, the aged, the sick, and so on. Would the Hon. Member be willing to arrange such a meeting since those Hon. Members do not seem to be able to do so?

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for his offer, and I must say that every year in my riding, after every project session on community development or study employment, I organize a meeting of all the sponsors and all the people who have projects in order to discuss—and I should be delighted to meet the Conservative Members in my riding on Monday, June 16.

Furthermore, I am prepared to do what I did when I was working on the Montreal East case, which is to work together with the Conservative Members and get together with all private sector and community project leaders in the Montreal area to arrange for consultation, and I can inform the Hon. Member that various youth groups have come to see us and talk to us, and it happens to be the young people themselves who disagree with the Conservative Government's decision, not their elders. And when we talk about young people, it was not their decision to award contracts to the private sector. I am positive that Aqua Parc would never have had any projects because it would have hired young people in any case, and it would have meant that 22 more young people could have been hired elsewhere.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Lac-Saint-Jean (Mr. Côté), for questions or comments.

Mr. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I was in my office where I was listening to the speech made by the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). I thought it was a very sad and very disappointing performance. This week, we have some young Canadians here in Ottawa, from all over Canada. These young people were selected, on the basis of their ability and school marks, for a trip to Ottawa to get first hand experience of how a Government operates. The performance given by the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie was atrocious.

An Hon. Member: Gross!

Mr. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): On television it was even worse. You know, he practically fills the screen with his generous propositions, but when he called—

Mr. Malépart: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. If the Hon. Member wants to launch an attack on those members of our population who are obese like me, I wish he would have the guts to do so publicly and suffer the consequences. If he wants to attack all the fat people in this country—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): —I didn't mean it that way. I just wanted to describe what we saw on television, because you know how the camera zeroes in on the Member who has the floor here in the House. I was never my intention to make disparaging remarks. However, Mr. Speaker, calling people all kinds of names, and this goes for Members on this side as well if they should feel like doing so—calling people dummies, miss compoops, profiteers, soap stars, and so on, well, Mr. Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie has demonstrated that he could, if you will, make his presence felt, that he could debate and make speeches, but for the sake of all Canadian men and women I would urge him to show more respect for this House. Mr. Speaker, this has degenerated into a shameful spectacle. He said earlier that the Minister of State (Youth) (Mrs. Champagne)—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but I would like to recognize someone else on a comment. So I will give the floor to the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) and ask him to be brief, then I will recognize the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger) on a short question or comment.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, to each his own style, his own way of defending cases, his own corpulence. I am like I am, but my reputation is as good as that of the Hon. Member who just spoke. Sad to say, had I not acted as I did to defend the interests of the elderly in the case of old age pensions, these people would no longer be getting fully indexed old age pension cheques. Had I not acted in my own way with respect to people who suffer form diabetes, these people would now be paying a tax on syringes and drugs.

Mr. Speaker, the only people who will pass judgment on my behaviour are my constituents and, at the last election they treated me fair and square and re-elected me.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger) for the last question or comment.

Mr. Blaikie: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger), I think that if you check the Standing Orders you will see that in the question and comment period, the opportunities for questions or comments are to go to Members of Parties other than the person who is speaking unless, of course, no such Hon. Member is rising, then an Hon. Member from the Party of the person who is speaking might be recognized. In this case, there are other Hon. Members from other Parties rising and I see no reason why you should recognize the Hon. Member for Laurier.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The point made by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) is well taken. The way the Chair interprets the provisions to which the Hon. Member refers is that preference should be given to Hon. Members other than the one who has spoken. I do not understand that as meaning uniquely. I recognized the first Hon. Member, I believe, from the Progressive Conservative Party, then an Hon. Member from the New Democratic Party, then an Hon. Member from the Progressive Conservative Party. I think it is only fair that the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger) should be allowed a brief question.

Mr. Blaikie: I rise on the same point of order, Mr. Speaker, and I am not trying to be difficult, but this has happened before. When two Hon. Members rise—and in this case at least two or three Hon. Members rose to participate in the question and comment period—the Standing Orders say the Chair should prefer Hon. Members of a Party other than that of the Hon. Member who spoke. In this case the Chair preferred to recognize the Hon. Member for Laurier, who is a Member of the Party of the person who was speaking.

I was a party to the drafting of those Standing Orders and to the recommendation, and I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the intention was that as long as there were members of Parties other than the Hon. Member who last spoke rising, an Hon. Member from the Party who just spoke ought not to be recognized.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand very well the representations made by the Hon. Member. I would be willing to discuss this matter with him. But it is not the way I understood the Standing Orders. I know the Hon. Member is well versed on procedure and was on the committee. However, for this time I will recognize the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger). I would be willing to discuss this matter with the Hon. Member at some time in the future.

[Translation]

Mr. Berger: Briefly, Mr. Speaker, I should like to support the comments made by my colleagues this afternoon by giving a few examples from my riding.

Last week I met with the young students of a theatre company, students who attend the École nationale de théatre in my riding. They had applied for a $23,000 Government grant representing 35 per cent of the total cost of a project they had prepared to create summer jobs. They were able to get about $12,000 from the private sector. They took the initiative of conavassing hundreds of companies, and very seldom do we see students who can manage to get the private sector to contribute that kind of money. So they were asking the Government not to finance the whole operation but only to give some support to their own efforts and add a little more to the funds they had been able to obtain from private interests. But what happened? The project was not given priority because it did not come from the private sector.

I can give you another example briefly, Mr. Speaker. I was personally involved with this case. I called the Minister and I hope that this project can go forward because these young people—

An Hon. Member: You would have to say so publicly.

Mr. Berger: If this project goes forward, I can assure the Minister of State for Small Businesses that I will say so publicly.

[English]

Mr. Berger: Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to give just one other quick example. I received a letter from a doctor at the Royal Victoria Hospital which is associated with McGill University. There are five full-time professors who were willing to give their time to train students in clinical research this summer. Last year, five jobs were created under the summer project. This year only two students have been accepted. The doctor wrote the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) saying that this year the need is greater. He asked why this program should be cut back. The doctor urged the Minister to restore the program to last year's level and to give meaning—and I am quoting his words—to the slogan "jobs, jobs, jobs". That is what we are asking the Government to do.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. To conclude, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte Marie.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I think that the comments of my colleague for Laurier (Mr. Berger) clearly show the difference between a Member of Parliament with feelings and sensitivity who defends the interests of his constituency and the heartless Members of Parliament on the side of the Conservatives who are only interested in money.

[English]

Mr. Terry Clifford (London—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, in the few moments that are left for debate I think I should enlighten some Members opposite with respect to the actions of the Government in terms of Canadian youth.

When Challenge '85 was announced, members of the Opposition said it was just a reformatting of the old Liberal summer employment programs. Today, the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) told us that the programs were a step backward. What he fails to see, and he was partly responsible for it, is that these programs are different. They are designed with the primary emphasis on student training and employment needs. That is the significant difference. Throughout the debates we have had on this subject over the last year I have found that Members opposite have had a great deal of difficulty understanding where our Government is coming from and how much benefit Canadian youth are deriving from its action. I think it is incumbent upon me to inform Members opposite how significant these changes are and just what they mean.

There were a great many comments made today with respect to jobs in the private sector being Mickey Mouse jobs. It has been said that we have been depriving the non-profit sector of opportunities which are far better for young people.

Mr. Berger: Let the Hon. Member tell us what is wrong with hospitals.

Mr. Clifford: There is absolutely nothing wrong with hospitals. Nor is there anything wrong with veterinarians, dentists or engineers. There is nothing wrong with a great many jobs in the private sector.

I would like to say that there are two other programs with which Members opposite do not seem to be familiar. They must understand that these things work in concert. I refer to the Innovations Program. Today, the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy) said that there are some good things in the Canadian Jobs Strategy. We must remember that he was the fellow who moved the motion. He then said that he did not know what the Innovations Program is. I would like to tell the Hon. Member that it is a very vital program to young Canadians—all Canadians. I would also like to point out to him that tomorrow the Self-help Centre for Canadian Youth will be opened in London, Ontario. The Minister of State for Youth (Mrs. Champagne) and the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) have encouraged and developed this innovation which will help Canadian youth. It is something which will be shared by all Canadians since it will be available to all constituencies.

Something else that Members opposiite really seem not to understand is that the Government is helping the non-profit sector. It is doing so through something called co-operative education. I think there is a tremendous lack of knowledge on the opposite side of the House with respect to this programming. It is something behind which our Government has stood. It has financed it and made a commitment to it for the next four years. Many schools, hospitals, universities and community colleges have taken advantage of this type of programming. The financing helps students obtain job experience while they are still in school. Most of these experiences are in the non-profit sector. They are opportunities nine months of the year by which young people learn about the real world of work in a particular sector. Members opposite fail to recognize how this program is part of the whole picture. Thus Challenge '86 is just one major focus we have in place to assist young people. It is not the only one, but it is a major one. Hon. Members must remember that it is working in concert with other programs.

I would now like to deal with another major issue which has been kicked around a bit today. The Government is definitely saying that since most students will work in the private sector after completing their educations, private sector employers are being asked to participate in the program. How can one obtain real life experiences if one is not given the opportunity when one is young?

It has been said today that there are unfair subsidies in the private sector. It has been asked why jobs should be offered through Challenge '86 to the private sector anyway. I ask Hon. Members to take a good look at this. Once again, I think we have under-estimated the energy and commitment it takes from the private sector in order to become involved. Many private sector corporations and businesses do not want to particpate at a certain point in time because they cannot. They realize it takes a real commitment to take on young people through programs such as Challenge '86. It takes time, and time means money. Because it costs money to become involved, in certain cycles of their growth they are not able to do so, while others are.

Rather than being negative about the private sector, Members opposite should be encouraging it to make such a commitment. Members of the Opposition should realize it takes time and money for these small businesses, and even big businesses, to become involved in this commitment to the young people of Canada. They should be applauding these measures as opposed to being so negative. I think this is a point which should be driven home again and again.

I ask Hon. Members to do what I have done. I have talked to small businessmen in my riding. Members of the NDP have told us that they are very interested in the world of work in terms of small business. I ask those Members to talk to people involved in small businesses in their ridings to find out just how much commitment it takes for a small-businessman to get involved in a program such as Challenge '86. When they find out just how much time and energy it takes, they will find out what I have found out. That is to say that even though there is a heavy commitment to time, over 80 per cent of the small businesses in London—Middlesex want to come forward and serve the youth of Canada.

When one considers the results, one sees that they are not so overpowering. It will be seen that in 1986 some 34.6 per cent of the funds are approved for the private sector, while 65.4 per cent are approved for the non-profit sector. There seemed to be a great deal of criticism going on today that is completely unfounded. Members opposite are saying that we are placing all the money in the private sector. We are not. We realize that future jobs will come from this sector. I point out to Hon. Members that the majority of the rebuilding and economic renewal which is going on, to which we made a commitment in 1984, has been in the small business sector. The future for the rest of the 1980s and the early 1990s will certainly be in that sector again. So to give these young people an opportunity to work while they are learning in school and while they are training and then to progress into full-time jobs in the small business sector seems only appropriate. It seems that it is the right thing for the Government to do. Rather than being so negative about it we should be applauding the Government.

This is a great opportunity for me to be able to speak out on behalf of the Government today and the young people of Canada. I know that they have been all over Canada. They are asking the Government to move ahead. They cannot help but applaud our record to date with over 600,000 jobs having been created. They see that there has been a decrease in the percentage of youth unemployment from 18 per cent, which is what the figure was before we took office in 1984. They can see the figure decreasing, and they are very encouraged by our movements. I know that my study, which shows that the private sector wants to be involved, is matched by the enthusiasm of the applications of students from all over London and the surrounding area to be a part of it. We know that we are on the right track. So it is a pleasure to be able to say no to this motion today.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

MARINE ATLANTIC INC. ACQUISITION AUTHORIZATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (for the Minister of Transport) moved that Bill C-88, an Act to authorize the acquisition of Marine Atlantic Inc. and to provide for other matters in relation thereto, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

• (1110)

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of Bill C-88, the short title of which is the Marine Atlantic Inc. Acquisition Authorization Act, is to establish CN Marine as a separate Crown corporation under a new name, Marine Atlantic Inc. This move is the fulfilment of an original plan which goes back some eight or nine years. It is the culmination of a process which was envisaged when CN Marine was set up as a separate corporate entity in 1977.

At that time it was clearly understood that when CN Marine was in a position to stand on its own corporate feet action would be taken to make that possible. Action to this end started in December, 1984, when, under the provisions of Section 97(2) of the Financial Administration Act, the Governor in Council ordered the company to act as though it were a parent Crown corporation. This move presented a de facto separation of CN Marine from CN. Bill C-88 merely formalizes a situation which, as I have already indicated, already exists.

I would now like to deal with the two key elements of the Bill. The first one effects a name change and the other effects a change of ownership. The name is to be changed to Marine Atlantic Inc. so that the company will be more closely identified with the region which it serves. A transfer of shares will take place between Canadian National and the Crown, the final result being that the Crown will own all the shares of CN Marine, that is, Marine Atlantic Inc., thus making the company a Crown corporation. The changes in name and in status will not produce any material changes. The same group of people in the same corporate structure will continue to perform the same functions and deliver the same services under contract to the Government.

Improvement in the company's performance can be reasonably anticipated since it will no longer be conditioned by the corporate profitability desires of CN, but it will be free to develop as a marine entity unto itself with a potential for greater efficiency and cost effectiveness in the rendering of the services for which it contracts. The Bill will neither increase nor decrease the Government's control over the corporation's activities. The Government will continue to provide subsidies in support of Marine Atlantic ferry services under the terms of annual operating agreements already in place. Service level and tariff decisions will continue to be made by Government in consultation with all interested parties, and these will not be affected by the change of status.

In practical terms, the change has no impact on the provincial Governments directly concerned with Marine Atlantic activities. However, it should be noted that the company has already manifested its dedication to marine service goals by strengthening its presence in the two island provinces with vice-presidential offices in St. John's, Newfoundland and in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

This outlines the general principles of the Bill. I know that a number of Hon. members will want to make comments with respect to it. We will be pleased to go into the details of the Bill in response to any questions which are deemed necessary as a result of the debate.

I commend the Bill to the House. In a sense it is a housekeeping matter. As I have said, it simply formalizes a situation which has been in existence for an extended period of time. With the consent of Hon. Members I hope that later today we can deal with the Bill in all stages, if that meets with the approval of my colleagues.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in my place today to participate in the debate on Bill C-88, an Act to authorize the acquisition of Marine Atlantic Inc. and to provide for other matters in relation thereto.

Anyone listening to the remarks of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall) will have the impression that nothing more is occurring today than simply a request for the authorization of Parliament to allow for the acquisition of Marine Atlantic Inc. I think the public should realize that Marine Atlantic Inc. is currently called CN Marine and that what we are talking about is more than a change in name. What we are talking about is taking the division of Canadian National called CN Marine, that division which operates ferry services on the east coast of Canada, and hive it off by wielding a long sword. With one clean and vicious stroke the Government proposes to sever CN Marine from Canadian National and give it a new name.

Members should ask themselves why the Government of Canada would want to sever CN Marine from Canadian National. It is a great and historic transporation company which personifies the concept of national unity being built with a national transportation policy. That is how the country was built, which is why Sir John A. Macdonald built a railway from one end of the country to the other. He did not build it because he wanted to see a train service running from the east coast of Canada to the west coast of Canada. He did not build it because it made a lot of economic sense in those days—it did not. He did not build it because he thought it would bring revenues to the Government of Canada. He built it because he wanted to have a sense of national identity running from sea to shining sea. He understood that if Canada were to develop as a nation and as a people who could share a common identity, a common sense of opportunity, there had to be a vehicle by which to tie the country together. Thus he created a national railway which ran from sea to sea.

Canadian National grew and became involved in many other divisions. It served the needs of the Prairies, as it served the needs of the hinterland and the North. It was a main engine which drove industrial development in Ontario and Quebec. It provided a ferry service to Atlantic Canada, those four provinces located on the great Atlantic coast, two of which are islands. The people in those four provinces realized that to fully participate in Confederation, to fully participate in the country and its economy, and because of our geographic location and our isolation, certainly in the early days, we needed to have a first-class transportation network. That was provided by CN Rail to all of Atlantic Canada as a result of CN's acquisition of the Newfoundland Railway at the time that Newfoundland joined Confederation in 1949.

Under the Terms of Union between Newfoundland and Canada, CN took over the operation of the Newfoundland Railway. A linkage was established through the development of CN Marine which guaranteed that the people of Atlantic Canada would not be penalized because of their location. It guaranteed that the people of Atlantic Canada would have access—because the country thought it was important to have access—to a first-class transportation service. The service was never perfect. There were always complaints; but there was a service and it was guaranteed. It was guaranteed to be a reasonable service in terms of cost and in terms of the quality of the service being provided. What has happened now? The Government of Canada has taken an action which, as I said earlier, with one fell swoop hived this off. It has severed CN Marine. Given the brief historical analysis of how CN Marine came into existence one would tend to ask oneself why the Government has hived it off. If it has played that kind of a nation-building role and has been that essential to the people who live in Atlantic Canada, why the name change and severance of CN Marine from the parent company?

You will note, Mr. Speaker, that Bill C-88 received first reading on December 5, 1985. Mark that date down, Mr. Speaker. You will also note that the Ministerial Task Force on Program Review headed by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), a very famous fellow around here, made its report to Cabinet in September 1985, two months before this Bill received first reading.

The Parliamentary Secretary would have us believe the reason for the Bill is to give the old company a new name. Let us see what the Deputy Prime Minister's task force on program review which came out two months before this Bill mysteriously appeared in the House had to say about the East Coast ferry service. Would that not make interesting reading?

Let us take a look at what the Deputy Prime Minister and his committee of slashers and hatchet men had to say about this great and historic East Coast ferry service. They said that there is a problem on the East Coast and that this commitment to national unity, surprise of all surprises, costs money. They said as well that compounding these cost pressures has been the typically very low rate of cost recovery for the subsidized service. They said that the way to reduce the level of subsidy is to reduce the level of service and to raise the rates that individuals and corporations pay to move themselves or freight on the East Coast ferry services.

In other words, the level of activity on the East Coast ferry services is relatively high and, given the level of subsidy, the total bill is substantial. The committee believes that fewer Canadians should use those services and the way to accomplish that is to reduce the frequency and quality of service and to raise the rates. The committee wants to discourage people from the East Coast of Canada from being involved in commerce or travel or from using an ingredient that is essential to the health of any economy, a good transportation system. If that happens, the subsidy can be lowered.

Sir John A. Macdonald would roll over in his grave to learn that a Government would treat Atlantic Canada like a chip on a Monopoly board. He would roll over in his grave to learn that a Government would tell the people of Atlantic Canada that they are simply a number on the bottom of a cost sheet and that a sense of national citizenship having one meaning in Canada is unimportant. The bottom number has to be changed.

The report was made to the Government of Canada in September and this Bill materialized in December, two months later. A plan of action was then undertaken. The Government of Canada knows that the ferry services that exist between PEI and the mainland and Newfoundland and the mainland are constitutionally guaranteed. Those ferry services were guaranteed in provisions of the Terms of Union signed between Newfoundland and Canada at the time of confederation in 1949 and in provisions of the Terms of Union signed between PEI and Canada when it entered into confederation.

What does the Deputy Prime Minister's task force say about the constitutional obligation of the Government of Canada to those two provinces? It calls them quasi-constitutional questions. Since when on one occasion is a constitutional matter a constitutional obligation cast in stone and on another occasion in another part of Canada a quasi-constitutional obligation? Are Atlantic Canadians quasi-Canadians? Are they entitled to or should they expect a different level of services from the Government? No, there is not one person between British Columbia and the great Province of Newfoundland who would say anything but that all of us are Canadians, that we all share the risk and share the reward, that we all carry the burden of cost and we all share the opportunities of being Canadians.

Can anyone imagine saying to wheat farmers in the West who have had a disastrous year with the lowest prices in decades and are on the verge of bankruptcy that the Government of Canada should not subsidize them? Can you imagine anyone saying that since they are producing wheat for less than cost they should be shut down? You are from western Canada, Mr. Speaker. Can you conceive of that being said? I would bet Hon. Members that the Speaker's heart rate has just gone up. He, being from the great Province of Alberta, would simply find it unbelievable that we would say to the people who till the soil and preserve the bread basket of Canada that they are not worth a buck today so we are not interested. No, I cannot imagine that.

What about the people who are involved in the dairy industry in Ontario and Quebec, an industry receiving an annual subsidy of $300 million. As Joey Smallwood used to say, that industry is receiving not $100 million, not $200 million, but three—count them—$300 million a year. Could anyone imagine saying to those dairy farmers: "Fellows, you are not making a buck right now. You are part of the Canadian mosaic, you are part of the Canadian family but at the moment you are costing a buck, so go slaughter your herds"? There is not a Canadian who would suggest any such thing to the dairy farmers of Quebec and Ontario.

Yet the Deputy Prime Minister's task force report tells us that the ferry services along the coast of Labrador and Newfoundland are costing the horrendous amount of $25 million. Having discovered that $25 million was being spent to provide services for half a million Canadians who live 90 miles away from their fellow citizens across a body of water, the Government had a collective cardiac arrest and promptly found the axe-men who wrote this piece of legislation that appeared in December following the recommendation which appeared in September. It makes one wonder.

The cost of the subsidy in Prince Edward Island is substantially less than the cost of the subsidy in Newfoundland, but again, the gun has been brought to the shoulder and the collective eye of the administration has looked down the barrel, the bead has been placed, the target has been identified and the trigger is now being pulled. This Bill is the bullet.

The Government is severing CN Marine from Canadian National because Canadian National appears on television telling Canadians that CN is in business for Canada. Every time I turn on the tube, I hear: "CN, in business for Canada". It is, Mr. Speaker, except in Newfoundland and PEI. That tie is being severed, and a new company is being set up. It will be easier that way to identify how much subsidy the parent company pays out to run those ferry operations. It will be easier that way to raise freight and passenger rates. It will be easier that way to reduce the level of service and the frequency of travel of those ferries. That is why this is being done.

What I am about to say may come as a shock to some of my colleagues in the House. However, Newfoundlanders do not regard the ferry service between that province and the rest of the country as a scenic route by the sea used for a pleasant excursion across to Nova Scotia on the way to Toronto, Edmonton, Montreal, or Vancouver. It is a pleasant route if the sun is shining and the seas are not rough, but it is not just a scenic route or one of 25 different modes of transportation available to Newfoundlanders. Unless one has a lot of dollars in one's pocket it is the only game in town. Not everyone can afford to fly. There is not a bus which floats across the water. We in Newfoundland do not have special shoes which allow us to walk across the water. We are a province with great swimmers, but 90 miles of salt water is a bit far.

The gulf ferry service is as intrinsic to the economic health of Newfoundland as the blood which beats through your heart, Mr. Speaker. I am sure your heart pressure has increased, as you reel with compassion, anger, and frustration. I know you are a man of principle, a man of integrity, and a man of compassion. If it were not for the position you occupy in the chair, requiring you to maintain a neutral position in the House, you would be on your feet with your fists balled up and saying: "Enough. What kind of nonsense is this being perpetrated upon the people of that province?"

Atlantic Canadians are aware of the situation. As early as November, 1984 the Conservatives were barely in power long enough to leave their rear-end imprints on the front benches and they brought down an economic statement. The November 1984 economic statement was quite a statement. It resulted in a 15 per cent increase in fares on the East Coast ferry service. That was the thin edge of the wedge, and now the knife is being shoved in all the way.

The Parliamentary Secretary said that this Bill was merely a formality. He understood that there may be one or two Members who wanted to speak on it, but he indicated that they had already changed the name of the company to Marine Atlantic Inc., that they had already severed CN Marine from the CN parent company, and that everything was already in place. Is that not typical? Here we are today, on May 29, 1986 and the Government is seeking parliamentary approval and authorization for a certain series of measures contained in a Bill, and the Parliamentary Secretary rises and says that it is mere formality in that they have already proceeded. Not only does the Bill make a mockery of Parliament, because what is contained within it has already occurred without Parliament's authorization, but it is an example of the approach of the Government to the people of Atlantic Canada. No one has gone to Atlantic Canada and kept the commitment of consultation, which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised in the summer of 1984. No one has gone to Atlantic Canada and kept the commitment of co-operation promised by the Prime Minister in the summer of 1984.

Most citizens of Atlantic Canada will not fully appreciate the impact of the Bill until they discover that it will cost a lot more to ride a ferry and that many of the currently existing services, routes, and frequency of travel are gone. That is the kind of co-operation which Genghis Khan gave to the people he invaded. He left his calling card as he rode, hooves wild, across their lands, villages, and heads. We in Atlantic Canada do not need that kind of Genghis Khan consultation.

I remind the Government that Atlantic Canadians believe firmly in the old saying: "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth". If one runs roughshod over their concerns, those things which are essential to a health Atlantic economy, and if one leaves a calling card in the carnage, then I warn that one shall reap what one sows. Atlantic Canadians will not forget this jackboot approach to the people of that region.

I should like to speak for a moment about another matter which is indirectly tied to Bill C-88 as part of the master plan of the task force report on ministerial review of the Deputy Prime Minister. There is a section of that report which is indirectly tied to this plan, gut the ferry service, raise the rates, and reduce the level of service. Logically one may say that if the Government does them in, in one area, perhaps it will give them better service in another area. However, what does this task force report say about another mode of transportation in Newfoundland? It actually says two things. First, it says that under the terms of union, about which I spoke a few moments ago, Newfoundland was "guaranteed" a rail service between Port aux Basques and North Sydney and, second, that the Government of Canada assumed ownership of the Newfoundland railway. That service was not promised to Newfoundland, it was not held out as a carrot, it was guaranteed a railway service.

On the one hand Bill C-88 does a number on the gulf ferry service. However, what did the report say about the railway? Let me find the specific recommendation because I would not want to mislead the House. The first recommendation indicated that an agreement in principle would be reached with the Government of Newfoundland to phase out the Newfoundland railway in an orderly manner. In other words, close down, shut up, pull up the rails, burn up the ties, and consign the engines to the nearest museum. Gone was the Newfoundland railway; vanished in a moment.

Can one imagine 600 miles of track which the morning after looked like they took a direct hit from a nuclear weapon, vaporized? They not only plan a Chernobyl-type eradication of the gulf ferry service, they will slowly poison that service or choke the life out of it slowly. They are showing no mercy at all, but with the railway they are being merciful, kind, and considerate. They will not drop a neutron bomb because that destroys people and not property. They will drop another kind of bomb which will destroy property and people.

There were 800 jobs in a province with 30 per cent unemployment associated with that railway and the Nielsen Task Force report is saying: "Shut it down". How effective have these gentlemen of the Genghis Khan school been in convincing some people in Newfoundland that they ought to stand while the warhead zooms in from outer space on a direct loop from the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa? How successful have they been?

We had the spectacle a few weeks ago in the Newfoundland legislature of the Premier of Newfoundland, who can normally be counted upon to be as rational as an unguided missile, and he was again true to form, saying, "I do not think our constitutional case for the railway is all that good. I think we might get laughed out of court. I am for retaining the railway. I want to keep it. In fact, I want to see it upgraded and modernized, but with respect to our consitutional case, I think we might get laughed out of court". Here we had the Premier of Newfoundland telling Newfoundlanders that they do not have a constitutional right to their railway at the same time the Government of Canada, in the same document that recommends closing it down, acknowledges a Newfoundland constitutional right to the railway. It is not a matter of opinion, it is acknowledged, Mr. Speaker.

The Government of Ottawa has been saying to the Government of Newfoundland that it will either have some money for a reduced level of ferry service, or it will have some money for a railway service; it can have that, and money for nothing else. Or, if it wants some money for highway or money for other modes of transportation that every other province in Canada takes as their right of Canadians, it can but it is either/or. It is a situation that if it wants money for highways it has to give up the railway; it has to reduce the ferry service.

Mr. Forrestall: That is ridiculous.

Mr. Tobin: It is ridiculous. There is no other province in Canada that I know of that is being told: "Gentleman, it is either a highway or a railway. You cannot have both. It is either a Gulf ferry service or a railway. You cannot have both." Newfoundlanders are wondering what distinguishes us from other Canadians that we should receive this special select treatment by the Government of Canada. We pondered that question for months. I have not found an answer.

As a Canadian first, who comes from Newfoundland, I was never made aware at any time during my upbringing that somehow being a Canadian in one part of Canada distinguished you from being a Canadian in another part of Canada. Nobody ever said to me when I was learning about this country that we were anything but a nation where unity was found in diversity and where diversity was reconciled by national trends in services and rights that we all have in common, be we black or white, Protestant or Catholic, tall or short, from the centre, from the west or from the east. All of us as Canadians expect a number of services and rights that we hold common in this country.

We understand as well that when you have certain services and rights accorded to you as a Canadian, you have as well certain responsibilities. We in Newfoundland appreciate that. That is why the vast majority of Newfoundlanders have always believed in the whole debate about offshore oil and gas, now reflected in legislation, that if it is there in the multibillion barrel reservoirs to be developed, whenever the time is appropriate, it is a resource that belongs to all the country, not just to those who live in Newfoundland.

As we embrace the concept that a resource off the shores of Newfoundland belong to the whole country, so too, Mr. Speaker, do we embrace the concept that we as Canadians who live in Newfoundland, Nova Scotia or PEI, have a right to the same kind of consideration of our needs as people who live anywhere else in the country. We should have the same right as the dairy farmers in Quebec and Ontario, the same right as the wheat farmers in western Canada who find themselves confronted with recession, the same right as the cedar shingle and shake workers in the great province of British Columbia who have just been dealt a devastating blow and who properly expect the Government to assist them in their dilemma and in their time of need.

Bill C-88 is not a Bill that seeks to bind this country together. It is not a Bill that provides the glue that keeps this country together. It is a Bill that was designed with an axe. It is a Bill that severs CN Marine. To some that is a ferry ride, a boat in which you go bobbing around the ocean. This service is the way people move themselves, their goods, their produce around Atlantic Canada. It is not just one way for those who use it, it is the only way. This Bill not only severs the company from CN but it is a Bill that severs and tears at the fabric of Canada.

I recall the words of a gentleman named Gordon Bradley. He occupied the same position you occupy, Mr. Speaker, in 1948 in the Province of Newfoundland when we were debating whether we would send a delegation in 1947-48 to the United States to seek union with the U.S. or a delegation to Canada to seek union with Canada. Mr. Bradley was the Chairman of the Commission that had been established to determine what Newfoundland's future ought to be and where it lay. For many Newfoundlanders there was no question. Newfoundland's future was with Canada, it was completing the 10 provinces from sea to sea. But there were others for their own reasons and their own convictions who felt that our future should be with the United States.

I have never doubted, neither from Canada's point of view nor from Newfoundland's point of view a scant few decades ago—1949 was not all that long ago, 37 years, when Newfoundland made its choice—that we made the right choice. I do not doubt it now in the face of Bill C-88 and other insults that have been hurled at my province and, indeed, PEI as well, that we made the right decision.

During one particularly acrimonious evening of debate as Members fought back and forth across the way, Gordon Bradley suddenly stood up and bellowed "Order". He said to the Members assembled: "Gentleman, I remind you that the eyes of the people of Newfoundland are upon you now. They are watching you. They are weighing your every word and sometimes I fear you have tried their patience much too far".

Those words spoken in 1948 bear repeating today. The eyes of the people of Newfoundland are upon this place. They are watching us. They are weighing our words. More important, they are measuring our actions. Legislation, which may seem to the Government merely an act of expediency, merely a piece of legislation to try to cut costs, to reduce levels of government subsidies, legislation that would be perceived by a Cabinet purely in an economic number-counting way, in Newfoundland is seen as an insensitive piece of work. It is work that has been badly done. It ignores the geographic, economic and the social reality of my province. I say that in the hope that Members opposite will understand those words and will receive them and will think about them in the spirit in which they have been said.

One must understand the message that Newfoundlanders believe is coming from Ottawa when their ferry service is reduced and the cost increased, when a railway is closed and when a fisherman is told that the small craft harbours program has been wiped out. It costs potato farmers more to grow their crops than they get when they sell them and they have suddenly been slapped with a new series of inspection fees. The message that these people are receiving is that they are expendable, are on the outer fringe, are not central to the country, and that the political power and influence in the country emanates from the centre and dies before it gets to the East Coast.

If that message continues to go out undiminished, it will create in my province, not for romantic or emotional reasons, but for economic and social reasons, a generation of people who will do as I do not, that is, question seriously the decision which was made in 1949.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few comments to the debate on Bill C-88, an Act to authorize the acquisition of Marine Atlantic Inc. and to provide for other matters in relation thereto. I will start with the process.

Like the previous administration, this administration likes to do things by Cabinet decree and then come to Parliament to tidy up the paperwork. When the Government of the day decided, for whatever reason, that it was appropriate to make what we now know as CN Marine into the new Crown corporation, Marine Atlantic Inc., it should have come to Parliament first. It should have presented us with the legislation which will come into effect in a year from now and given us the opportunity to have a broad discussion on the appropriateness of separating out one of CN's components. We should have had an opportunity to determine whether it made sense, with regard to the economics and the social value of transportation, to break up the various modes of CNR.

More recently there has been a decision to dispose of the CN trucking operation. We are seeing a fragmentation. We are in a very difficult position because the act has been done. All we are doing through the process of the legislation is to confirm what is already in place. It would be ludicrous for us in the House to cancel the decision. You cannot turn time back, even though some Hon. Members on the other side of the House would like to do that. We must go forward to give legal approval to the actions that CN and the Government of Canada have taken. This is so typical. We have seen other instances where the Government has presented a Bill which gives it certain powers and then negotiated instead of doing the negotiating first. It is clear that the Government's view of operating things has no regard for the people of Canada.

This is a very important Crown corporation. We who come from mid-Canada do not appreciate the value of CN Marine or Marine Atlantic Inc. to the people of Atlantic Canada. We do not appreciate it because we do not have anything similar which we must use to communicate with the rest of Canada. We hop in our cars and drive down the TransCanada Highway. If we want a little variety on the way to Toronto we will go through Tobermory and take a ferry across part of the Great Lakes. However, that is only an alternative for us.

On the two island provinces in Atlantic Canda they do not have a choice. If they want to travel by surface transport they have to use one of the vessels of Marine Atlantic Inc. They are captive to the rules of that Crown corporation. They are captive to the cost-recovery mentality of the present Government, as they were to that of the previous administration. I do not deny that the previous Government was moving in that direction, but the present Government seems to be moving much faster.

Even with the subsidy that is in place to offset the costs, and even though the report published under the name of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) suggests very strongly that the amount of subsidy should be reduced and the cost for the user should be increased, the reality is that residents of the two island provinces in Atlantic Canada are treated very differently than the rest of us in Canada. We do not have to pay a user fee to use the TransCanada Highway. We pay through income tax and gasoline taxes for the maintenance and operation, but there is no toll booth in northern Ontario. There is no longer a toll booth in northern Quebec. We have had toll booths in Atlantic Canada for too long.

I know that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall), who comes from Atlantic Canada, has a very strong position on this particular issue. People from his area are being taxed at a third level for transportation. They must pay a fee to travel by ferry or to transport goods from one area to another.

When we reach clause-by-clause deliberation I will move an amendment to the appropriate clause which, if adopted, would call on Maine Atlantic Inc., and therefore the Government of Canada, to treat the ferry service in Atlantic Canada as an extension of the TransCanada Highway with the corresponding fee structure. Thereby all Canadian taxpayers who contribute to the cost of running the country through work and investment will say that we should give our Atlantic Canadian neighbours the same rights as they have, the right to free surface transport in the nation's transportation system. I think it would be very appropriate for Members on the other side of the House to give consideration to the acceptance of that motion, should it be deemed appropriate under our rules. If it is not, I would encourage the Parliamentary Secretary to take that suggestion to the Minister.

Each year 2.3 million passengers and nearly 1 million vehicles use the services of Marine Atlantic Inc. If one did a traffic count in my community of Thunder Bay one might find similar figures—and perhaps higher. However, the important thing is that they must have the same kind of unrestricted access. I think the Government should remove the fee entirely and pay for the services out of general revenues.

I want now to deal with a couple of other areas regarding this Bill. One is not directly related to the Bill but is tied to the fee structure. We had extensive hearings this winter on a Bill which would give the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) the power to impose fees for certain Coast Guard services. We had representations from Atlantic Canada. One of the concerns they raised was that the Bill C-75 would give the Canadian Coast Guard the power to charge for ice-breaking services. We were told by people in Atlantic Canada that for a great part of the year the ferries owned by Marine Atlantic Inc. must use the ice-breaking services of the Canadian Coast Guard. Under that Bill the cost of those services, which could amount to as much as $30,000 a trip, could be passed on in whole or in part to Marine Atlantic Inc.

Their alternative, unless the Government was prepared to accept the concept that there should be no tolls or fees to get on the ferry, was that the users were going to have to pay. We were then going to have yet another increase in the cost of using the ferries. Fewer and fewer people will be able to afford to take those trips. For Prince Edward Island the cost of moving its produce, potatoes in particular, will be even more expensive than it is today. How many more potato producers are we going to put out of work? How many more potatoes will we end up bringing in from offshore?

Instead of putting all these road-blocks in the path of Canadians, we in this Parliament should be working to remove them. We should, if you like, be deregulating the financial aspect of cost recovery. We need efficiencies of scale. We need to ensure that we provide the service without penalizing the people concerned.

One of my concerns is that we set up Marine Atlantic Inc. by statute, and if at some point in time the Government felt it was appropriate to dispose of the assets of that company, in other words to privatize it, the Government would have to come back to this House to get permission to do so. There would be a full public debate on the disposition of Marine Atlantic, which is not the case with CN Trucking and some other Crown corporations, which this Conservative Government in its blind belief in the private sector has chosen to privatize.

Therefore I encourage the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport to give us a clear statement in this House on this before we get into clause-by-clause study. He should indicate that under the terms of this legislation the Government of Canada must return to this House for permission to dispose of those assets.

I now want to talk about the employees of what was CN Marine and is now Marine Atlantic Inc. Over 2,500 people work for this Crown corporation. Obviously if you are going to carve a new Crown corporation out of an old Crown corporation, issues like pensions and pension credits and fringe benefit packages, some of which have been system-wide across CN, have to be dealt with. We must ensure that the employees are fully protected. The benefit of the doubt should be given to them, not automatically to the company. When we fragment organizations like CN there is a belief by some people that it becomes an excuse to do some labour bashing. Carve them into a smaller unit and we can get at them.

In another part of the marine sector over this past week we have seen a thousand workers forced to leave their jobs because of the way in which Treasury Board has been handling negotiations. Those negotiations went to conciliation. There was a majority report which the Government flatly rejected but which the union was reluctantly prepared to accept. That report would have begun to bridge the gap between east and west in the Department of Transport, the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and the Department of Public Works. Those workers were so frustrated with the way the federal Government handled the negotiations that they left their jobs. I do not want to see that happen with this new Crown corporation. I do not want to see Marine Atlantic use this as an excuse to reduce wages and benefits if they find it necessary to do some rationalization.

We all recognize that this modern environment of technological change, particularly in the marine sector, leads to change in labour allocation. However, we have to be sure we look after those people who become redundant. What an awful term. How would you like to be referred to as redundant? I do not think any of us would. We have to look for a new term which clearly indicates the status of those positions, not the employees but those positions, the need for which is no longer there. We have to provide early-out options at a decent level, and which are not then penalized by the Minister of Employment and Immigration. We have to make sure that our people are protected. I do not say "our people" in the sense that they are members of a union or because they are from Atlantic Canada, but because they are Canadians and deserve respect and fair treatment.

The final thing I want to deal with is, again, the question of rates and services. The Liberal Party spokesman raised the issue of the Nielsen task force report. He talked about the cutting of services. There are many ways to cut services. The post office is talking about alternate day delivery. That is one way. Another way was announced by Marine Atlantic last fall when it said it was going to start shutting down the ferry a little earlier. It is going to cut six and a half hours off the time when you cannot travel from point to point. Can you imagine if the Government of Alberta closed the highways at ten thirty at night and you were not allowed to travel, or if you were the owner of a trucking company? In northern Ontario we see it all the time, trucking companies that travel at night because they can make better time when there is less congestion. Quite frankly, this makes it safer for you and I in our little cars to have fewer of them on the road in the day time.

They do not have that opportunity in Atlantic Canada. They do not have 24-hour service. Marine Atlantic is proposing even less service. We have to be careful that, because we are allowing Marine Atlantic to be carved off from CN, they remain not only technically responsible and legally responsible, but morally responsible to this House and through this House to the people of Canada to ensure that they provide the same level of service that everybody else in the country enjoys, and to ensure that they do so at a cost to the individual that is not any more or less than the cost to any other Canadians, whether they be in Thunder Bay, Edmonton, Winnipeg or Toronto.

Those are the things that Marine Atlantic must adhere to, but they cannot do it by themselves. The Government of Canada sets the rules. If the Government of Canada says there has to be user-pay for the Coast Guard services, if they say there has to be user-pay for the users of the ferries in Atlantic Canada, then they have to accept the reality at election time that there is another form of user-pay, and that is the users of the service will pay that Government back by voting for somebody else. The Government should keep that in mind as they move to this kind of legislation.

I look forward with interest to the rest of the debate. I suspect it will continue until sometime this afternoon at least, and it should be very interesting.

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the Bill before the House today will in effect really not change anything. Most people in mainland Canada—as we say in Newfoundland, the mainlanders—would know of the service that is talked about in this Bill if they have ever travelled to the islands of the East coast of Canada. If you have ever gone to Newfoundland by car you would know that you put your car on the ferry boat at North Sydney, and then you travel 100 miles across the Atlantic Ocean to Port-aux-Basques. It is a hundred-mile journey, and it is an incredible trip. If you are ever looking for a place to go to watch whales this is the place. If you have your family with you then you can actually see the whales during the summer months. This is nothing new to me. I cannot really comprehend why a lot of people like watching whales. I suppose it is because they have never seen wild whales before in the ocean, but being a Newfoundlander I have seen them all my life. I do not take any great pleasure in watching whales. A lot of people do, so it is a great trip to take. You go 100 miles across the Atlantic Ocean. If you take the alternate ferry route it will actually be more than 100 miles, in fact a couple of hundred miles across the Atlantic. Then you go down to the Argentia ferry station in Newfoundland. It is a great trip to take. I can think of no other place in Canada to go in the summer months with your family that would be more enjoyable than Newfoundland using this service we are talking about here today in this House.

There are some problems that I should perhaps tell the House just in case Members think about taking that trip this summer, and then relate to taking the ferry boat to Newfoundland. It takes about seven or eight hours. The new boat, which is being launched today in St. John's by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), is supposed to be a faster, reducing the time, I understand, to five or six hours. That is neither here nor there. The Minister of Transport will stand up in St. John's today and say it is going to reduce the time to five hours. It is five hours if you are talking about May, June, July, August, September, October. If you go at any time other that, then it is going to take anywhere from five to 20 hours, depending on the time of year. Sometimes you have ice that has to be bypassed, and in some cases it will take you anywhere from 15 to 20 hours.

I would not advise anybody to go on the night crossing because that presents a problem. If you like driving in the day time, and you are leaving Ottawa, Toronto or Montreal in the day time, it will take you about 22 hours. You would normally arrive at the ferry boat at night. There is a problem in that CN Marine, this new Crown Corporation and the federal Government, have always had the policy that the boat that crosses to Newfoundland is not designed as a hotel. In other words, there are never enough cabins available. It is a great pleasure when you get on the boat and you start out to sea, but in the middle of the night you obviously want to sleep. There are not enough cabins, so the people sleep—you guessed it—on the floor. When you walk down through the ferry boat you have to be careful that you do not step on somebody's feet or head, or something like that. I have always wondered why CN Marine and this new Crown Corporation, Marine Atlantic Inc. have this policy that the boat is not a hotel. How many times has somebody from CN Marine, or any Government, any Minister of Transport, including this one appeared before the committee and said that we are really not operating a hotel. This leads to all kinds of problems. You can imagine children and elderly people sleeping on the floor, but that is the way it has been throughout the years, that somehow by some rationale we have allowed these boats to operate without enough cabin space.

At one point in time they even used to supply pillows, but that was stopped, or they would give you a free blanket, but that was stopped. They sell you a chair for an extra $10 called a "Day-Nighter" which can actually be tilted back. The other chairs on the boats are designed in such a way that it is absolutely impossible to lie down. In other words, they were made so that they will not tilt back. They have fixed arm rests which do not move, so one's only choice is, of course, to sleep on the floor. There is lots of sitting space on the chairs on all of the boats, but one cannot sit on the chairs because one's feet would be on someone's head. That has been the policy of CN Marine or, as we call it today, Marine Atlantic Inc. Is it any wonder that tourists are discouraged from returning to Newfoundland, having gone there once on the night crossing? After coming across on that boat at night one has to take a motel room during the day to get over it. That is one problem I wanted to outline.

The problem, of course, is one of management and of the Government. Those are the fellows, the accountants who sit in head office who cause the problem. That is the problem with the way CN Marine has operated over the years, and that is going to be the problem with this new Crown corporation, Marine Atlantic Inc.

There is something else wrong with this new Crown corporation which was created in order to save the Government $20 million. Things seem to have been arranged so as not to accommodate most of the people. In other words, in Newfoundland one gets on a bus instead of a train and travels across Newfoundland. Then one gets on a boat—there is no helicopter service. One has to go by boat to cross the ocean, and then one gets on a train to cross Canada. There is a separate Crown corporation which controls the bus. We have another Crown corporation which controls the boat and another Crown corporation which controls the train, and never these three shall meet on scheduling. The bus will meet the boat if it is not inconvenient, but the train leaves at exactly ten minutes after nine o'clock in the morning from Sydney. When one looks at the schedule of CN Marine or, as we call it now, Marine Atlantic Inc., we find one would have to spend overnight in Sydney in order to meet the train.

An Hon. Member: There is nothing wrong with that.

Mr. Baker: Yes, it is good for the motel business in Sydney, Nova Scotia. I like Sydney. I think it is a wonderful place. Cape Breton is the closest thing you can find to Newfoundland for excellence. I have little confidence in an organization which cannot match three schedules to allow people to have a convenient trip across this country. A lot of people travel that way because they do not have the financial resources to take a plane. A man looking for a job in Alberta, perhaps in your riding, Mr. Speaker, in Edmonton, would take the bus, the ferry boat and the train. He cannot afford sleepers. He takes that service and goes across the country. Sometimes women with children take that route. Sometimes whole families. But here we have, under the umbrella of the federal Government, three separate transportation systems with no links. That is absolutely atrocious. That is enough to make one vote against every single Bill which comes to this Chamber having anything to do with Canadian National.

If you spoke to the people who travel on that system, as I have, Mr. Speaker, you would come to the conclusion that the whole set-up needs to be examined by a judge of the Supreme Court. I have seen people taking a bus and having to spend 24 hours waiting for the boat because the weather was bad and the bus was late. The boat went on without them and they had to wait for the next boat. They get on the other side and have to spend another 24 hours waiting for the train to leave. There are women and children, whole families, going through that procedure because they do not have the money to take a plane. That is not good enough. If that were happening anywhere else in Canada it would not be allowed. The Government would step in.

I have now covered two points. First, one does not cross in the night time if one does not have a prearranged, guaranteed, prepaid cabin. If one does not have in writing that one definitely has a cabin, I would not advise it, unless one wants to spend the next morning in a motel somewhere sleeping it off. Second, those poor people who cannot afford to take a plane are being discriminated against to an incredible degree because there is no matching of schedules.

Let me move on to what is going to happen to those employees who will be displaced because the federal Government wants to save $20 million by creating a Crown corporation. I will just deal with one aspect, pension transferability when these people are laid off. If one is from the Province of New Brunswick and is working with CN Marine one can transfer one's pension credits. In other words, if one were working with a provincial Government agency and one had worked with CN, then the pension could be matched up—that is if one is from New Brunswick. If one is from Nova Scotia, it does not work that way. There is no pension portability agreement. If one is from Newfoundland it does not work that way because there is no pension portability agreement. If one is from Manitoba it does work that way, because it has a pension portability agreement. What I am saying is that Transport Canada, with the creation of this new Crown corporation, should go after those provincial Governments and agencies and say: "For goodness sakes, sign a pension transferability agreement with CN Marine in order to take care of some of these people".

The Canadian Transport Commission and the Government of Canada have recently ruled that the guarantees under the terms of union on freight rates across the gulf do not apply. What that means is that what is in the terms of union in the Constitution of Canada in black and white really does not apply. We are told it is there in black and white in the Constitution and the Terms of union, but it is really not there. That has led to the CTC recently, within the last couple of months, and the Government of Canada, approving vast rate increases for freight across the gulf. If they get away with it, then we will have more increases, because under the Terms of Union one could not charge any more for a passage on that ferry for freight than you would charge for an equal distance by rail. So there was a subsidy built in to freight movement to and from Newfoundland as a result of the Terms of Union.

For the first time since Newfoundland joined Canada the Canadian Transport Commission is saying: "Although it is in the Terms of Union we do not think it really applies". That is quite a decision by the CTC. The Minister of Transport must approve or disapprove that interpretation of the Terms of Union.

When the CTC brought down its decision I checked with the Government of Newfoundland. I was told that it would appeal the decision. At the last moment there was an extension of the appeal period for one week. The matter is presently under appeal. Certainly what is in the Terms of Union is in the Terms of Union. If it were not, it would be something completely different. It is in the Terms of Union and the Government of Canada must realize that.

Those are my remarks as far as this Bill is concerned. I notice in the Bill that the figure $2,344,473,774 is used with respect to the value of the shares, as far as service is concerned. Someone might misread that and think that it is the actual value of the company. Someone might think it is the ultimate purchase price of the service. Of couse, that is not the case.

CN provides a necessary service between the provinces. I have never been able to understand why, back in 1949 when the Terms of Unions were being negotiated, we did not put it in black and white that this service is nothing but an extension of the Trans-Canada Highway, that people should not have to pay and that the cost of transportation should not be added to the cost of goods and services. In fact, the entire argument with respect to whether the Newfoundland Railway will continue is based on the fact that in the accounts of the railway in Newfoundland the actual cost of transporting goods from North Sydney to Port aux Basques is added to the cost of the operation of the Newfoundland Railway. Therefore the books of CN, which are held at its head office in Montreal, show that the Newfoundland Railway will lose $40 million this year. I caution anyone who looks at those figures to phone CN and say: "Is it true that you have the absolute audacity to add the cost of transportation to the Newfoundland Railway for moving goods from the moment they are taken off a truck in North Sydney and put on the ground? Are all the costs for loading them, carrying them across the gulf and unloading them added to the cost of the Newfoundland Railway?"

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired. Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I have one comment and one question. With respect to making the ferry service an extension of the Trans-Canada Highway, in British Columbia we have been saying that for years. We have been saying that in fact it is part of the Trans-Canada Highway and it should be picked up as part of the costs. My question is this. I am not familiar with the ferry about which the Hon. Member speaks since I live on the opposite coast. We have a pretty efficient working ferry system in British Columbia. He said: "Don't take the night ferry unless you want to spend the next day in a motel sleeping it off". I wish to ask him, sleeping what off?

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say that the way it will read in Hansard is the way the hon. gentleman put it. What he said was that the people of British Columbia have always maintained that the Newfoundland ferry system should be considered part of the Trans-Canada Highway.

Mr. Waddell: No, no.

Mr. Baker: That is exactly what the hon. gentleman said. That is what is in the official record. That is what has been taped and that is what these gentlemen have taken down in their notes. Perhaps the hon. gentleman will want to correct it. Why not leave it on the record? Why not say that that is what the Hon. Member supports, as do the people in his riding and the people in British Columbia?

The hon. gentleman also says that in British Columbia they do not have problems with their ferry service similar to the ones I outlined in my address. No, they do not. The Province of British Columbia is not 100 miles away from the rest of Canada at its closest point. We are talking here about 100 miles of Atlantic Ocean. I suppose it is a very difficult system to operate. If someone were to place me in charge of the position today, in a part-time capacity—and I wish they would—with no pay, I would look at what would have to be done in order to actually supply the service. The needs of the people would have to be satisfied.

Do you know, Mr. Speaker, that for the last two months on this service the boats with cabins have been on the day run? The boats with no cabins have been on the night run. That is what has been going on for the last two months at CN Marine. A constituent of mine phoned me up and said: "George, you have to do something about this. I am taking my family across the gulf, but we can't get a cabin because there are no cabins on the night crossing ferry. They told us that if we wanted a cabin we would have to wait until the next morning". I phoned up CN Marine and I said: "Look, I just had a crank call from someone. They are telling bad stories about you. I have just been told that your policy with respect to getting a cabin in which to get some sleep is that you have to take the day ferry". The lady at the other end of the line said: "Mr. Baker, oh yes, that is right". I said: "Really?" She said: "Yes". I said: "When was this policy initiated?" She said: "Oh, a couple of months ago". I said: "There is obviously no problem getting a cabin to go to sleep in during the daytime". She replied: "No, sir, not at all. In fact, they are not being used up and I don't know why".

To answer the hon. gentleman's question with respect to what you have to sleep off—

Mr. Waddell: They're your words.

Mr. Baker: The hon. gentleman was probably talking about the bar. The bar closes at, I believe, 12:30 or one o'clock. It is good that the bar does close because the best sleeping space is on the floor in the bar. The benches in the bar are more comfortable. In fact, everyone rushes to the bar when it closes.

I hope that with the creation of this Crown corporation some changes can be made. If some changes are not made, then I will have camera crews down there. That is what we should have done a long time ago. We cannot pretend that this is some riverboat in some part of China or Africa or some place like that, that it is just a pleasure jaunt and people are kind of tired after travelling all day and they wish to sleep on the floor. I hope that will be corrected. If it is not we will have to get some camera crews down there in order to have film clips to show on the national news just so the rest of the country will know what is going on.

Mr. Mantha: We enjoyed the Hon. Member's lively speech, Mr. Speaker. I wish to ask the Hon. Member about the Pope coming here and the crazy schedule in terms of people getting to see the Pope. Was that the schedule of the previous Government, in all fairness, or was it this Government's? I do not want to put the Hon. Member on the spot.

Mr. Baker: The what?

Mr. Mantha: The Pope. You said a little while ago that the people came to see the Pope.

• (1240)

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, sometimes I do have a Newfoundland accent. When I get a bit fired up or start talking about something that has to do with Newfoundland that is not right, my words kind of twist. Perhaps when I said "boat", it came out like "pope".

In any event, the Hon. Member asked if this was the case under the previous Government. That is a good question. In fact, I have been waiting for someone to ask that question. Yes, Mr. Speaker, it was.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, I have been here for years. It was frustrating, to no end, to try to convince the political powers to actually get their fingers into the operations of Crown corporations. It was never that Government's policy to do that.

What has changed is that before there were some cabins available and the rest of the people had to sleep on the floor, if they wanted to sleep. But since this Government took over, and in the last two months, all of the beds are on the day-boat and there are no beds on the night crossing. That is obviously a step backward, would you not agree, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, never in my 53 years of life have I ever met a Newfoundlander who could not entertain on such little evidence.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put another question to the Hon. Member. Pardon my ignorance, but I will put the question anyway. Why could the provinces not run these ferries? The province runs the ferry in British Columbia, and it is much closer to the people. Perhaps we should consider decentralizing ferry services. What about a co-operative running the ferry system? We could privatize it and let the people run it as opposed to the Ottawa bureaucrats.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, that is a very good question. The only problem is that in British Columbia we are talking about intraprovincial ferry services, whereas on the East coast we are talking about interprovincial ferry services. One, of course, is controlled by the provincial Government and the other by the federal Government. However, there are still a couple of ferry services within provinces operated by the federal Government. The Government has been trying to get away from those services over the years, and certainly this Government will make sure it does so, and perhaps even in the case of the ferries in British Columbia, though the federal Government pays a certain portion of the costs of operating the ferry system.

Certainly the provinces are closer to the operation. The only problem for Newfoundland is that ferry boats are operated at a tremendous deficit. It is the constitutional responsibility of the federal Government to operate the ferry boats, but it is certainly not the constitutional responsibility of the federal Government to operate those services at a profit or a break-even margin. That was never the intent of the Terms of Union, but, as I understand it, that is the present policy of this new, ultra conservative Tory Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Mr. Bouchard, for the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), moved that Bill C-88, an Act to authorize the acquisition of Marine Atlantic Inc. and to provide for other matters in relation thereto, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

It it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As a result of the co-operation of all three Parties in dealing with this Bill, and in an effort to move on to legislation on which critics from all three Parties are prepared to move, I suggest you would probably receive the unanimous consent of the House to call it one o'clock. At three o'clock, it is the Government's intention to call Bill C-86 for report stage and third reading.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I think we are disposed to that suggestion. However, when you referred the Bill to a legislative committee, Sir, I assume that if discussions ensue, we can in fact refer the matter to a Committee of the Whole rather than a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would imagine that if House Leaders got together and discussed the way they wanted to proceed, the House would agree to that. I do not think I should tell Hon. Members how to proceed. I think the matter should be discussed with the House Leaders.

Is it agreed that we call it one o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 12.47 p.m. the House took recess.

SHIPYARDS

FUTURE PERSPECTIVES FOR QUEBEC SHIPYARDS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, last Monday the Montreal East Survival Committee met to establish how many jobs we were able to save. Unfortunately, the same day we heard that Versatile Vickers was laying off and had fired 175 workers. In December last year, the Minister of Supply and Services promised representatives of employees at Versatile Vickers that work on the first ship in the Trump program, the Algonquin, would be done at the shipyard in Montreal.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, if the Government does not intervene, there will be 650 lay-offs at the Montreal yards. I earnestly hope that Progressive Conservative Members will urge the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to take action so that Quebec's three shipyards will have work and jobs, not shutdowns.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SALT II AGREEMENT—CRUISE MISSILE TESTING

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, Canada has a chance to make up for its abysmal silence on the NATO decision to support the production of new chemical weapons. NATO Foreign Ministers are meeting in Halifax, giving Canada the opportunity to underline our support for arms control. Let us applaud the American decision to scrap two missile carrying submarines to stay within the limits of SALT II.

Let us be just as vocal about our opposition to American threats to abandon SALT II later this year. It would be ironic if deployment of the air-launched Cruise missile, which Canada helped develop, broke SALT II. Canada should make clear that we would no longer allow Cruise missile testing in Canada if the U.S. broke SALT II.

Similarly, Canada should press the U.S. for strict adherence to the ABM Treaty. We should make it clear that we will not take part in SDA 2000 Phase II or allow Canadian territory to be used as a base for any ABM systems. Such strong statements within western councils would demonstrate that Canada expects her allies to match our commitment to arms control.

SPORTS

CANADIAN TEAM'S PARTICIPATION IN SOCCER'S WORLD CUP CHAMPIONSHIP

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, Sunday marks a special day in the history of sports in Canada. For the first time Team Canada will begin its quest for soccer's World Cup in Mexico. Over the next month, 24 nations will compete for the right to be crowned world champion in Canada's fastest growing sport.

Just as this event is truly a world competition, the members of Team Canada truly reflect the multicultural flavour of Canada. On our starting squad we have Canadians of Italian, Scottish, Yugoslavian, German, and Czechoslovakian descent; players who hail from Victoria, Moncton, Nanaimo, Ottawa, and Edmonton. It is truly a Canadian team.

I am sure all Members of the House and all Canadians will join with me in expressing our best wishes to Team Canada.

FORESTRY

MAPLE TREE BLIGHT—ANNOUNCEMENT OF SCIENTIFIC STUDY

Mr. Maurice Tremblay (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State (Forestry) (Mr. Merrithew) announced recently that the Canadian Forestry Service has asked the Centre de foresterie des Laurentides to do a scientific study on the maple tree blight.

This study, another in a long series of efforts by the Service in this area, will be directed by Gilles Robitaille and Marcien Roberge, who have both been involved for many years in activities either directly or indirectly related to the phenomenon of maple tree blight in Quebec.

Research directly related to the problem of declining maple stands will be done mainly at the experimental maple farm at Nobertville, in the riding of Lotbinière.

Mr. Speaker, I must congratulate the Minister on the kind of action he has taken, which again demonstrates his desire to deal with the problem once and for all and thus help a typically Canadian product and one of our major industries to continue to exist, especially considering the time and effort that goes into managing a maple stand, and preserve part of our heritage.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, when the Conservatives were in the Opposition, they went on about reducing the paper burden on small businesses. As soon as they formed the Government, they amended the Small Business Loans Act to make it less accessible. It seems that banks are advising business people against taking advantage of this legislation because of the very strict directives of the Minister of State (Small Business) (Mr. Bissonnette) with respect to the administration of loans.

Mr. Speaker, since the new legislation came into effect, there has been a 25 per cent reduction in loans. When they were in the opposition, the Conservatives were against sin, but now they are in power they are all for it.

THE PROFESSIONS

TRIBUTE TO WORK OF CANADIAN ENGINEERS

Mr. Paul Gagnon (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, the engineers in the House of Commons take great pleasure in joining our fellow engineers in drawing the attention of Canadians to the outstanding contribution our profession has made to the development of Canada.

The art and science of the engineer forged the technological foundations of our Confederation. Our early engineers built the network of railways, canals, and bridges. This expertise has continued to expand in aviation, telecommunications, and space systems. The 125,000 men and women who constitute Canada's professional engineering fraternity continue to contribute to the exploration and commercial exploitation of leading edge technologies, bringing technological progress and economic prosperity to Canada and other countries.

We trust that National Engineers Week will encourage Canadians to reflect on the sometimes heroic but often insufficiently recognized contribution of engineers to Canada's past, present, and future.

LABOUR RELATIONS

AIR ONTARIO—FLIGHT ATTENDANTS' STRIKE

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Airline Flight Attendant's Association is on strike against Air Ontario. Strikes are at best unpleasant events. They are the last resort very often of a collectivity of the powerless, only made more powerful by their union, against the recalcitrance of insensitive management. Strikes are often at the cost of hardship and frustration to the strikers. Often too, they bring inconvenience to members of the public, challenge their commitment to social justice, or test their priorities.

In London and Sarnia, Members of this House have honoured Air Ontario picket lines, that is, except for one. That the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise), the Member from Elgin, should fail to do so, many would say is his own business. But that he felt compelled on May 23 to insult two female pickets deliberately and give them the Trudeau finger of contempt can but bring contempt upon himself that his Party and Government will inevitably share.

YOUTH

EMPLOYMENT PROSPECTS

Mr. André Plourde (Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup): Mr. Speaker, Challenge 86, a program for which the Minister of State (Youth) (Mrs. Champagne) is responsible, has been of great benefit to students in the riding of Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup. In fact, 374 young people will have jobs this summer thanks to wage subsidies totalling $472,578 which the federal Government is providing through Challenge 86. Two hundred and seventeen applications out of 297 have been approved in my riding. The private sector has created 154 jobs, non-profit organizations provided 169, while educational institutions and municipalities made 51 jobs available. Furthermore, on May 16, 1986, I attended the re-opening of two employment centres for students, one at Rivière-du-Loup and one at La Pocatière. Last year, the centres exceeded their placement objectives, and I hope we will get a repeat performance this year.

This is good news, Mr. Speaker. This is how young people in the riding of Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup are taking up the challenge.

AIRPORTS

WORKING CONDITIONS OF SECURITY SEARCH EMPLOYEES

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil—Papineau): Mr. Speaker, it seems if we want to hear any good news, we Government Members will have to announce it ourselves. In the last two weeks, the press, television and the Opposition have been hammering away about the working conditions of search officers at the airports in Montreal and Quebec, and the alleged lack of concern of my Government for the safety of travellers. However, the day before yesterday, as a result of intervention by our Government, security officers of the former Burns Agency reached an agreement with the new company responsible for baggage search. From now on, these employees will receive $6.20 an hour, which means they will be working for the same salary and under the same working conditions as their colleagues in other Canadian airports. The people in my riding and even the metal workers' union are very pleased with this victory.

The Liberals and New Democrats specialize in controversy but do not mention the results when they are good. Mr. Speaker, this is one more achievement that will be hard to beat in the next election campaign!

ABORIGINAL PEOPLES

NO SUGAR—AUSTRALIAN PLAYWRIGHT'S WORK

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Jack Davis, an Australian aboriginal playwright, has written a play entitled No Sugar. The theme of this play deals with attempts by Australian Governments to rid their country of natives by policies of extermination, assimilation, and isolation.

The bold and disturbing theme is handled with compassion and even humour, but the stark message is never blunted. The play ran with rave reviews at Expo 86 and is now being staged here in Ottawa under the auspices of the National Arts Centre. It has considerable relevance for Canadian audiences since the history of our relationship with the native people of Canada is equally brutal.

Those who care about native issues and aboriginal rights in Canada, including all Hon. Members, should not miss seeing this presentation.

YOUTH

EMPLOYMENT PERSPECTIVES

Mr. Clément M. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, contrary to what the Liberal Opposition, particularly Quebec Members, would have us believe, the youth unemployment rate decreased fom 18.4 per cent at election time to 15 per cent now, the lowest rate ever since December 1981. To put it another way, 98,000 new jobs have been created since September 1984, against a net loss of 285,000 jobs under the Liberals.

Thanks to the private sector's $120 million financial contribution, Challege 86 has provided 74,833 jobs so far, whereas Summer Canada Employment 84, with $125 million, accounted for only 64,813 new jobs. In other words, in a single summer we have created 10,000 more jobs than our predecessors did. Mr. Speaker, it should be noted that private sector companies offer young people wages which are 50 per cent and sometimes 100 per cent better than those paid by other organizations. In addition, the private sector will give them jobs after they graduate. Thanks to their summer jobs they can get in touch with—

CANADA HEALTH ACT

PROVISION BANNING EXTRA BILLING—ONTARIO DOCTORS' STRIKE

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, in April, 1984, the Parliament of Canada unanimously passed the Canada Health Act which was designed to put an end to extra billing by doctors. Unfortunately the doctors of Ontario believe that they should be exempt from this national Act, that they should not have to accept the national consensus. They want the right to extra bill their patients, and today and tomorrow they are on strike over this issue.

They are not on strike because they could not reach an agreement with OHIP. No, Sir. They are on strike for the right of the individual doctor to charge more than his or her contract provides. No other labour organization in Canada has such a right. If the doctors are not happy with the negotiated rates of pay, they should get a new negotiating team rather than charging patients more.

In 1984 this House said that doctors should no longer be allowed to extra bill. What doctors are doing in Ontario this week is an affront to Parliament and the people of Ontario. The doctors of Ontario should be ashamed of themselves.

OPPORTUNITY FOR GOVERNMENT TO END MULTIFIBRE AGREEMENT

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Government should end the GATT Multifibre Agreement when it expires at the end of July so as to draft a general policy and sign bilateral agreements with other nations. It should also fully exercise its international rights with a view to restoring order and fairness on the Canadian textile and clothing market.

This is all the more imperative because, at the 20th international textile seminar held in Sherbrooke this week, the president of the Canadian federation deplored the fact that the 1970 policy is not in force.

One third of the textile industry production is clothing, industrial textiles make up the second third, and carpeting and geotextiles account for the other third.

As we all know clothing imports have increased by 43 per cent since 1982, yet clothing retail sales have gone up by only about 1 per cent a year. These industrial sectors are an integral part of our national economy because they provide direct and indirect jobs for over 400,000 Canadians and produce 6.6—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The 60 seconds have expired.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

REDUCED UNEMPLOYMENT IN METRO TORONTO

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, unemployment in Metro Toronto has dropped from 8.5 per cent two years ago to 5.3 per cent in April, 1986. Since the election 110,000 jobs have been created in Metro Toronto alone. That region is approaching full employment. Youth is sharing in this too. Youth unemployment remains critical across Canada, but it has fallen over 3 percentage points since the Government took office. Unemployment among women has also dropped 2 percentage points.

I am sure that everyone in this House is greatly encouraged by the economic policies which have contributed to this drop in unemployment. Yet we also recognize that older workers still face great discouragement. The number of workers between 45 and 65 years of age has grown in the past year. Lay-offs of persons in this age group too often still mean anxiety, frustration, and hardship. Opportunities for the re-employment of this age group should have priority in shaping future policies.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

HEALTH HAZARD POSED BY UNLEADED GASOLINE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to your attention once again the damage to forests, agriculture, and human health caused by oxidants produced by the combustion of leaded gasoline. The situation is made worse by motorists who, because of a lower price, put leaded gasoline in cars designed for unleaded gasoline.

The 3-cent per litre gap at the pump, the largest ever, between the price of leaded and unleaded gasoline, is a serious environmental problem to which the Government must address its attention. Leaded gas aggravates the acid rain problem and is also a health hazard. Canadians want the Government to adopt the examples set by Holland, Denmark, and Austria. We must equalize the price of leaded and unleaded gasoline at the pump, thus stopping misfueling and protecting the environment and human health.

TARIFF

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. There was a report today that the Minister of Justice, senior Minister in our Cabinet, told an American audience, using a memorable political phrase, that the Government had no choice but to call for retaliation. At the same time Canadian officials are meeting with U.S. trade negotiator Peter Murphy in Washington to discuss compensation. Those two initiatives are totally incompatible with and opposite to one another. Therefore, have we abandoned the request for compensation? If so, what are we meeting with Mr. Murphy about? On the other hand, if we are now going to retaliate, what kind of retaliatory measures will we be introducing and when, or is the Minister of Justice once again engaging in a hothouse harangue?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, there are a large number of questions there so let me try to address them. The first was that officials of the Government of Canada met with representatives of the U.S. administration to discuss both the question of compensation as well as restoration of access to the U.S. market. These discussions are continuing. I have to say that the early indications are that the question of compensation is going to be difficult. It does not appear possible to provide that compensation under U.S. legislation. However, we are exploring further the possibility of restoration of access to that market.

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—U.S. COUNTERVAIL ACTION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in those discussions have we raised the question of the Government of Canada intending to retaliate, as the Minister of Justice said? Was that put on the table? As well, did we ask Mr. Murphy if the American Government will agree to a standstill on countervail action, as requested by the Premier of B.C. and other people, during the course of these negotiations, in order to proceed on a clean launch basis as announced several weeks ago?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, we have indicated all along that in one form or another there must be a response by the Government to the action taken by the U.S. last week. That is clear. The question of a standstill is related to the problem of the shakes and shingles decision. It is something of lasting importance and it will be discussed by Mr. Reisman with Mr. Murphy as the trade negotiations proceed.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORTS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Minister for his answer. If Mr. Murphy and Mr. Reisman are now putting on the table as part of the negotiations the question of the shakes and shingles industry, will they also be putting on the table the question of the softwood lumber petition presently before the U.S. Government? In other words, has the Government once again changed its position and is it including a discussion of these irritants as part of the comprehensive negotiations even though it previously said it would not?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, again the Hon. Member has made a leap, if I can put it in the nicest possible terms, by taking something I said and putting it into his own words. What I said was not what he just said, and he knows it. During the course of these negotiations we are going to have to deal with this question of disputes which come up during the course of negotiations. That matter will be discussed by Mr. Reisman and Mr. Murphy.

Mr. Axworthy: Which is what I said.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Let me just make it clear, Mr. Speaker. The question is of how to deal with these issues in a process sense, not the specific matters as the Hon. Member tried to imply.

REQUEST THAT UNITED STATES PRESIDENT BE CONTACTED

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I think I should go to the Deputy Prime Minister, if I may. As he knows, the U.S. Ambassador is quoted as advising Mr. Shultz in a cable that the Canadian Government, "as expected, is showing signs of panic". This is following the President's decision to impose a tariff on cedar shakes and shingles. We do not want panic. We do not want hand-wringing. We want action.

• (1420)

Having failed to act on Premier Bennett's warning of May 7, and the plea that he made, will the Deputy Prime Minister assure us that he or the Prime Minister will act on Mr. Bennett's further warning and plea of May 20? Will the Deputy Prime Minister or the Prime Minister contact

President Reagan immediately and ask him to stop the countervail proceedings on Canadian softwood exports?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me make it quite clear to the Hon. Member that the countervail action on the question of softwood lumber is part of a legal process which has been initiated by the industry in the United States for which there are many steps, steps that can take a variety of directions as time goes by.

I should throw a question back to the Hon. Member. Since he said in a perjorative sense we were acting as expected, did the Hon. Member expect that we would sit down and take this action without making any response to the United States? Surely he understands that it is important to the economy of Canada and to British Columbia that this Government make a strong and steady response, a response that is understood clearly by the United States Government.

[Translation]

EXPORT OF WOOD PRODUCTS TO UNITED STATES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I am not the one who said that, I was simply quoting the remarks of the ambassador in question.

It is obvious that panic will soon give way to apoplexy unless somebody stops the President.

So my question is this: What does he intend to do to put a stop to that process in the United States so as to protect Canadian softwood exports?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has twice used the word panic. Let me refer him to an editorial in the Washington Post today which talks about trade panic in the White House. There can be many points of view expressed on this matter. What I think is quite clear is that the response of the Government of Canada has been a strong one, a firm one, and a response that is quite clearly understood by the Government of the United States that we are concerned about the directions of their policies on trade which they have taken in the last little while, and they are matters we want to discuss thoroughly during the weeks and months ahead.

COMPENSATION ISSUE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Finance who is dealing with this matter today. He has said to the House the Government wants to send a strong and clear Canadian response to Washington. The representatives of both industry and the trade union workers affected by the shakes and shingles tariff yesterday made it very clear to the Government that what they did not want was some compensatory action that was not going to have any direct effect on them. Why is the Government of Canada pursuing, in negotiations today in Washington, exactly what the people in Canada affected do not want it to pursue?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member did not listen to my first response. What I said in the first response was that officials of the Government of Canada are meeting with officials of the U.S. administration today to discuss two things, one, the question of compensation, and I said that probably was not on because they do not have the legal power to do that, and also to look at the question of how we can regain access to that market for the industry. That matter is still on the table.

POSSIBLE OUTCOME OF TALKS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister more about the compensation package. For two or three days the Government has been talking about that as the desirable route to go, even though the workers and business people affected do not like it. Would the Minister of Finance not agree that if the Americans agree to compensatory action by reducing tariffs in other sectors what we will end up with is a package that may have benefits elsewhere, but will do absolutely nothing in terms of benefits for the workers who are going to lose their jobs in British Columbia? We will still have 4,000 men and women without work in British Columbia.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the New Democratic Party is floating off into never-never land again. I said this matter was no longer under discussion.

Mr. Broadbent: No, you didn't say that.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): There was no legal power for the U.S. adminsitration to deal with it. I said that the matter of regaining access to the United States market for the shakes and shingles industry was still under consideration. These were two very clear and distinctive points that I made. The Hon. Member missed one I would ask him to listen carefully to the answers.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I listen with care. If the Minister reads the "blues" afterwards he will see what he said in reply to the first question.

• (1425)

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Since they are now reverting back to a process which many on this side of the House said should have been pursued a long time ago, and that is talk about serious bilateral issues instead of pursuing a never-never land of hopeful benefits with free trade down the road, is the Minister saying that the Government of Canada is recommending setting up a special committee with American and Canadian representatives who would deal, for example, with the very important softwood decision which is to be made and which could effect thousands of more jobs being lost in Canada?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I responded in reply to the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount that the question of the softwood lumber countervail action is part of a legal process which has already been started. That matter is under way. What I went on to say is that we recognize the importance of these bilateral issues and the effect they can have on the ongoing trade negotiations. So it is important that we try to find ways of managing these bilateral disputes.

ROLE OF PROVINCES

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. It concerns free trade. In early February, Premier Getty, representing the provincial Premiers, sent to the Prime Minister an eight point proposal concerning the provinces' role in the free trade talks. As of last night, just three business days before the federal-provincial conference on free trade is to begin, the provinces have received no official reply.

Why has the Government not responded to the provinces? Even if the Government responds today, only 48 business hours before the conference, the provinces will not have time to respond appropriately. Is this an example of the Government's commitment to full participation of the provinces in the free trade talks.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is a little long.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, let me set out the degree of discussion which has taken place between the Government and the provinces during this period of time. Since the Halifax meeting there have been five very, very productive meetings of the ongoing committee of officials chaired by Ambassador Reisman. In addition to that, in response to the letter Premier Getty sent to the Prime Minister on how the provinces might participate in the trade discussions, the Secretary of State for External Affairs has met or talked to most of the Premiers in order to continue the dialogue on a political basis.

Since then the Prime Minister has called the Premiers together, and the purpose of the meeting on Monday night is to discuss this matter further. That is considerable consultation with the provinces.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, the fact remains that the provincial premiers still do not know the federal Government's position.

INQUIRY WHETHER PRIME MINISTER COMMUNICATED WITH UNITED STATES PRESIDENT TO STOP TAX ON LUMBER PRODUCTS

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): My supplementary also concerns the meeting of First Ministers. We know that the U.S. Government is receiving a petition.

Did the Canadian Government, did the Prime Minister get in touch with the President of the United States to try and stop this levy of $57 per 1,000 board feet, which amounts to a 27 per cent tariff on our lumber exports to the United States? Did the Prime Minister discuss this with the President of the United States?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will allow the answer in this case, but I would ask Hon. Members when asking supplementary questions at least to help the Chair figure out how they are clearly supplementary. I will allow the answer in this case.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, in response to the preamble to the Hon. Member's question, the whole purpose of the meeting on Monday is to discuss the participation of the provinces in the trade discussions. Surely the Hon. Member understands that it is necessary for the Prime Minister and the Premiers to get together to discuss that matter.

The second point of the Hon. Member's question was the same question which his seatmate asked a few minutes ago. Surely they can get together and get an answer.

Mr. Rossi: You never gave an answer.

JOB LOSSES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of State for Forestry who may at least give us some facts with respect to this industry. Yesterday shake and shingle producers told us that almost 4,000 jobs will disappear in British Columbia, while the American Ambassador claimed that most of these jobs will survive. Whom does the Minister believe, Mr. Niles or our producers?

Hon. Gerald S. Merrithew (Minister of State (Forestry)): Mr. Speaker, Ambassador Niles certainly has a right to his own opinion. He is expressing a view on behalf of his Government. He is trying to rationalize the decision taken by his own administration. Personally, I have some difficulty with it. The Government of Canada, and certainly the British Columbia Government as well as the people in British Columbia who are adversely affected by it, do not treat it very lightly.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT COMMUNICATE URGENTLY WITH UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): I have a supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Considering the previous question, does the Government intend to call Mr. Reagan immediately and tell him that Mr. Niles is wrong about the facts he pointed out to the President?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could respond to the Hon. Member's question. Ambassador Niles is very clear in his understanding as to what the understanding of the people of Canada is in terms of the effects of the decision taken by the U.S. administration on the shake and shingle industry. Obviously, there are differences in points of view between the understanding of the Americans and the understanding of Canadians. As I said yesterday, we will assess on an ongoing basis the impact of this decision on the people who work in the industry, and make our decisions accordingly.

EXCLUSION OF TERRITORIAL LEADERS FROM TALKS

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Prime Minister. Is the Minister aware of official protests which have been received from the Leaders of the two territorial Governments, that is, Yukon and Northwest Territories, concerning their exclusion from Monday's talks on the free trade negotiations? Is he aware of this? If so, what has been the Government's response to these protests regarding their exclusion?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any such protests. However, they certainly will be given every consideration, as one would naturally expect from me, should they be received.

MINISTER'S ENCOURAGEMENT OF NORTHERN PARTICIPATION

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. They have been received by the Prime Minister's Office. I would like to know how the Deputy Prime Minister can reconcile excluding the territorial leaders from these talks when the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development goes out of his way to encourage active participation in all matters which concern the people in the northern part of Canada.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, as far as I am aware they will be part of the consultation process. I certainly have not been shy in my representation in this place in years past in ensuring that that kind of process exists. I will certainly do that again in this instance.

UNITED STATES AMBASSADOR'S LETTER

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. I am sure he is aware that over 1,000 shake and shingle workers are down at the Blaine border crossing right now making their views known on the action which has been taken against their industry. My question is in relation to Mr. Niles' letter which appeared in all the major Canadian newspapers today in which he states in part:

> To put the President's decision in perspective, it is worth noting that the decision was taken almost at the same time that U.S. statistics on bilateral trade for the first quarter of 1986 were released. They show that Canadian exports of goods to the U.S. during the first three months alone of this year were worth—$17.3 billion.

Since Ambassador Niles has put that on the record, what is the view of the Minister of Finance regarding it being used as the reason for placing the 35 per cent duty on shakes and shingles? Does the Minister not think that will lead Secretary of Commerce Baldrige on Monday to move against softwood—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is long.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have said on a number of occasions in the United States that it is wrong to isolate just the trade figures in the statistics of trade in goods and services between Canada and the United States. Offsetting that we have a major services deficit. The combination of the two puts the picture in a much better perspective, one slightly in favour of Canada but not sufficiently in favour of Canada that would justify any decision along the lines the Hon. Member has just enumerated.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST THAT UNITED STATES PRESIDENT BE CONTACTED

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question to the Minister of Finance is this. Since the shake and shingle workers and the industry have made it clear that they do not want compensation from either the Cabinet or through some squirrelly method through U.S. trade law, will the Minister now agree that the only thing for the Government of Canada to do is to get a hold of President Reagan and make sure that either negotiations are forthcoming or that the 35 per cent duty is removed?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if there is one thing which has been made clear to the United States Government it is that the Government of Canada is not at all happy with the decisions that were taken last week—

Mr. Fulton: You're not doing anything!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says that we are not prepared to do anything. Today, in Halifax, the Secretary of State for External Affairs is meeting with Secretary Shultz. Today, in Washington, officials of the Government of Canada are meeting with representatives of the U.S. administration. We are prepared—

Mr. Fulton: You're not doing anything!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member does not want to listen to the answer. However, I think that his constituents would like to hear it. We have these ongoing discussions with the United States to try to find a solution to this problem which will help the people about whom he is talking.

THE ADMINISTRATION

METHOD OF AWARDING CONTRACTS—REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): My question is directed to the Solicitor General and concerns the matter of alleged kickbacks demanded by the Conservative Party in exchange for contracts from the Department of Public Works. The day before yesterday, the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood drew the attention of the House to allegations concerning Mr. André Bureau, and at the time the Minister of Justice said there would be an investigation. Why did they agree to an investigation in the case of Mr. Bureau, when the day before, they refused to order an investigation of the Public Works contracts? Is there one justice for Canadians and another justice for the Conservatives?

[English]

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member has any evidence of any criminal activity on the part of anyone, he has the obligation to bring it directly to the attention of the police. I hope he will do so.

Mr. Boudria: I hope, then, that the Minister has evidence in the other case which he has not shared with us.

REQUEST THAT INQUIRY BE INSTITUTED

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, in light of public comments in the media concerning these alleged kick-back schemes in Public Works is there, or is there not, going to be a criminal inquiry? There is in the other case. If not, are Canadians being led to believe that this is Tory justice and that is what they will get from now on?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I guess what the public will be interested to know is whether this is simply Liberal histrionics or whether the Hon. Member has any evidence whatsoever to turn over to the police. If he has any evidence to turn over to the police—

Mr. Rossi: Look at the Gallup Polls, they will tell you!

Mr. Beatty: —they will be pleased to receive it and they will investigate.

Mr. Boudria: If it's a Tory it requires more evidence than for someone else.

AIR CANADA

REPORTED SUSPENSION OF FLIGHT ATTENDANT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. It concerns a matter about which I know he and his colleagues are well aware. I have just received word that the Air Canada flight attendant who expressed her opinion when asked by a delegate to a Conservative convention has been assessed a 30-day suspension without pay.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Benjamin: I would like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister if the Government will make representations to Air Canada to have this unjustified decision reconsidered and rescinded?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport responded yesterday, and I believe the day before, that when received by him the matter was referred at once to the board of Air Canada. The decision, about which I am not aware, and which has been drawn to the attention of the House by the hon. gentleman, is a corporate decision.

Mr. Deans: It wouldn't have happened if it had not been for Maz.

Mr. Nielsen: His representations with respect to what should occur from now on will be brought to the attention of the Minister of Transport immediately upon his return. Should he see fit in his judgment to pass those on to the board, I am sure he will do so.

EXPRESSION OF OPINIONS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, since this all started out of the Minister of Transport's office and has now culminated in this, are all employees of the Government of Canada, Crown corporations and agencies, to consider that they suffer the consequences of having an opinion and expressing it when asked for it, whether they are on or off duty? Will this now be the criteria of the Conservative Government?

• (1440)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Not at all, Mr. Speaker. The hon. gentleman does a disservice to the House when he leaves that sort of murky accusation or implication lying around. To set the facts straight, let us remind ourselves that the Minister of Transport received a letter and referred it at once to the board of Air Canada. To say that it all started in the Minister's office is a distortion of the truth. It is a corporate decision that has been made. The Hon. Member's representations will be brought to the Minister's attention.

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, in July, 1983, a Saskatchewan cable television company, Battlefords Community Cablevision, was concerned and wrote two letters to the CRTC about an apparent inconsistency in rates offered by Cancom. My question is directed to the Minister of Communications. At that time did the CRTC undertake an investigation of this matter? If so, precisely what was done?

VISIBLE MINORITIES

INTERNMENT OF JAPANESE CANADIANS DURING WORLD WAR II

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Multiculturalism. Before taking office the Prime Minister committed himself to a process of Japanese-Canadian redress, including compensation. However, the Minister has again thrown cold water on the Government's written promise of December 15, 1984, to negotiate a settlement with the national association. Given that any agreement is only as good as the process, a process which has not been in existence, why is the Minister going against the spirit of his own leader and the commitment made by his predecessor in 1984? Is he telling the House that they were both wrong?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, as is usually the case, the Hon. Member is a day late, since I answered a similar question put by an Hon. Member from the New Democratic Party yesterday. I would repeat for the Hon. Member's sake that, whatever commitment this Party and the Prime Minister made, is going to be kept, and that is a heck of a lot more than can be said for the Liberals.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I am going to ignore his petty articulation on such an important issue. I would only say that his position has been shameful and irresponsible given his own Government's commitment—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member just have a question?

REQUEST THAT MINISTER DIVEST HIMSELF OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR REDRESS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister is incapable of respecting his predecessor's commitment—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is not asking a question. He can see what his preamble is causing. Would he just put a question now?

Mr. Marchi: Will the Minister remove himself from the dossier of Japanese-Canadian redress since he does not have sensitivity to it or the confidence of the community, and cannot respect the commitment of the Prime Minister and his own predecessor?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, I do not need any lessons on sensitivity from an Hon. Member who uses this issue to grandstand, because that is exactly what he is doing here today and has been doing all along.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jelinek: The Hon. Member knows full well that I initiated a wide-ranging series of discussions with all interested parties—

Mr. Marchi: Take your running shoes out of your mouth.

Mr. Jelinek: Are you going to listen, or are you going to motor-mouth like you usually do?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order.

LABOUR RELATIONS

SHIPWORKERS' STRIKE

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the President of the Treasury Board. The Minister will know that this week more than a thousand Government employees who operate ships for four federal Departments right across the country were forced off the job because the Government refused to negotiate in good faith or to accept the principle that workers in different parts of the country doing the same jobs should be paid at the same rate. Will the Minister instruct his officials to accept the majority conciliation report which partially redresses this very important issue?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I take strong objection to the preamble to the Hon. Member's question. In this case the Government has never refused to negotiate in good faith. The members of the union walked off their jobs illegally and we are now seeking an injunction to deal with the issue.

REQUEST FOR RESUMPTION OF BARGAINING

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister wants to avoid labour disputes in the four Departments, and if he is not prepared to accept the conciliator's report which was reluctantly accepted by the unions, would he at the very least go back to the bargaining table to present a new offer, something which he has not done in six months, to see if some settlement can be reached?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member speaks of good labour relations. I would just like to tell him that in the last several months we have successfully signed 64 collective bargaining agreements with 159,307 employees in the Public Service, with no labour disruptions whatsoever, at an average rate of 3.53 per cent for three years.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. de Cotret: That represents 82.29 per cent of unionized Public Service workers. We are doing everything in our power to reach good negotiated settlements that are fair for the public, for the Government and for the employees concerned, and we are succeeding.

ALLEGED MANNER IN WHICH ROMANIA HANDLES QUOTAS

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Finance).

Some Quebec industries have told me that Romania is circumventing import quotas on specific items and saturating the Canadian market with winter and fall overcoats instead of pyjamas and raincoats, and so forth.

Does the Minister intend to make enquiries at Canada Customs in order to correct, if necessary, the way the tariffs on textile imports are enforced?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I believe this matter should be brought to the attention of my colleague, the Minister for International Trade. In fact, I believe he is examining the matter at this time.

I may add that imports from Romania represent only 1 per cent of our clothing imports.

INDUSTRY

INQUIRY WHEN GOVERNMENT WILL ANNOUNCE MEASURES TO AVOID CLOSURE OF PLANTS IN MONTREAL EAST AND CREATE MORE JOBS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I want to direct my question to the President of the Treasury Board and Minister responsible for the Montreal area Cabinet committee.

The survival committee got together last week and their unanimous view was that the federal Government did not do anything to avoid, or rather to save jobs in Montreal East, and Canadian Vickers Limited did lay off 175 employees.

Can the Minister tell us when he will announce concrete measures to avoid plant closures in Montreal East and create more jobs? Second, did he get a report from the advisory committee?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to reply to my colleague. The answer to his second question is yes, the advisory committee did submit a preliminary report in record time, in fact hardly a month after it was established. The advisory committee is planning to present a second report to the Cabinet committee on Friday of next week.

With respect to measures, I would point out to the Hon. Member that we have already unveiled a fair number of measures designed to boost Montreal's economic development. Indeed some of these measures had been recommended by the advisory committee.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT PUBLISH REPORTS PRESENTED BY ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, the Minister did not give an answer concerning specific measures to improve deteriorating conditions in Montreal East.

Can the Minister tell us whether he will be releasing the advisory committee reports, and whether the advisory committee report contains recommendations to help Montreal East?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, since the purpose of this exercise is give back to Montreal the economic stamina it lost under the previous Government, unfortunately, it stands to reason that the appropriate recommendations made by the advisory committee will be released to the public. They will be announced at the earliest opportunity, and Montreal will benefit from measures taken by a Government which is concerned about the economic development and the economic future of Montreal and its residents.

SHIPYARDS

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF MINISTER'S ALLEGED STATEMENT CONCERNING RATIONALIZATION OF QUEBEC SHIPYARDS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Small Businesses).

Why did he mislead the people of Sorel last week by telling 2,000 demonstrators on Parliament Hill that the Government had never given the president of Versatile Vickers a mandate for rationalizing shipyards in Quebec? Why did he say that?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I repeat, we never gave Mr. Saunders a mandate for rationalizing or shutting down any business whatsoever, either in Sorel or anywhere else in Quebec.

ENQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT CAN CONFIRM DISCUSSIONS WILL BE HELD TO ESTABLISH SHIPBUILDING POLICY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): In that case, Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

Will the Minister now confirm before the House that he intends to meet the commitment he made to those 2,000 people from Sorel, namely that there would be discussions with the shipyards and the unions in order to establish a Canadian shipbuilding policy?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, I could do without comments from the Liberal Member for shutting down businesses.

Mr. Speaker, I can say that last week I was delighted to meet the people from Sorel and to reassure them about what was happening in Quebec and to put a stop to those negative rumours the Liberal Members have been spreading with their talk about shutdowns, shutdowns and more shutdowns. The only one who is talking about shutdowns here, Mr. Speaker, is the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie.

ENERGY

DIESEL, HOME HEATING, AND AVIATION FUEL PRICES

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward—Hastings): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources has done very well in getting the price of gasoline down.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ellis: When will the Minister or her Parliamentary Secretary be able to advise us of some success in terms of bringing down the price of diesel fuel, which fuels the trucks on our highways, the price of home heating oil for senior citizens, and more particularly the price of general aviation gas which is still particularly high?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): In the fullness of time, Mr. Speaker.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

TOXIC SUBSTANCES IN CROPS AND FOOD

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. As the Minister knows, repeated scientific studies have reported the presence of toxic substances in crops and food. In view of mounting public preoccupation with health, will the Minister undertake to launch immediately a study on the presence of toxic chemicals in food, based upon a broad national sample?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I think that is a reasonable representation. It is an idea with which my Department and I are wrestling. Some of the concern is based upon a major study done by Kate Davies through the auspices of the International Joint Commission, which the federal Government helped to fund. However, I think the study was fairly limited in the sense that it focused upon only seven toxic chemicals. It was certainly not on the broad range of toxic chemicals the Hon. Member has called to have studied. In light of those circumstances, the representation he has made has been well taken by me and by my Department.

WITHDRAWAL OF STORM WARNINGS PUBLICATION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in the meantime, while the Minister is wrestling with this proposal—and I hope it will not be for too long—will he release the Storm Warnings report which he stopped, or at least undertake to reinstate the Guelph Toxicology Centre which the Minister of Finance wiped out in his November, 1984, Budget.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): It was not a Budget.

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I suppose this is yet another example of the left hand of the Liberal Party not knowing what the right hand is doing, or indeed an example of one hand chopping off the other at the wrist. The Storm Warnings publication was withdrawn because there were some very marked differences of opinion in the scientific community about the facts in the study. As a result of strong representations made to me by my Department's scientists—

Mr. Gauthier: Canadian scientists, not yours.

Mr. McMillan: —by those in the Federal Department of National Health and Welfare, and by the Liberal Government of Ontario, the publication was withdrawn. We have no intention of re-releasing it until the scientific community can agree on the facts as reported.

HUMAN RIGHTS

EL SALVADOR—TREATMENT OF HUMAN RIGHTS WORKERS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. Since Canada has resumed aid to El Salvador, will the Deputy Prime Minister tell us what Canada is doing to protect the five Salvadoran human rights workers who were recently kidnapped, tortured, or arrested by the Treasury Police, in particular Michele Salinas who, during the visit last year of the Minister of External Affairs, risked her life to present to that Minister, in front of President Duarte, a file on the human rights violations in El Salvador? Will the Minister explain why Canada has resumed aid to the Government of El Salvador, which is attacking its own independent Human Rights Commission?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I will make inquiries in respect of the details contained in the hon. gentleman's question and will ensure that the Minister responsible gives him a full reply either in the House or by correspondence.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT MAKE INQUIRIES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, will inquiries be made today and directly to the Government of El Salvador in San Salvador? Human lives are at risk, in the hands of police with a very brutal reputation for torture and murder.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I will ensure that the hon. gentleman's representations are brought to the attention of departmental officials today. Should there be a need to follow his suggested course, I am sure they will take the responsible course of action.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR HOME MAIL DELIVERY IN NEW HOUSING PROJECTS

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Acting Minister responsible for Canada Post. Canadians from sea to sea are protesting the cutbacks in home delivery services. Yesterday, people from Montreal, who felt frustrated at not being able to speak to the Minister responsible for Canada Post, invaded the foyer of the House of Commons. How many protesters must come to Parliament before the Government provides home delivery service in new housing projects?

[English]

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I assure the Hon. Member that it is the intention of the Minister responsible for Canada Post to meet with those citizens at a satisfactory time to be arranged. I am sure he has found at times that he could not meet with his constituents, as we all have found from time to time. The second part of his question dealt with the improved service of Canada Post. I refer the Hon. Member to the Marchment Commission which had full consultation with all sectors in society today. It is on that report that we will base serious recommendations to improve Canada Post. On repeated occasions the Minister has assured the House that that will be brought before Parliament before the end of June.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, will the Government stop studying how to reduce the postal service and take its responsibilities by introducing daily home mail delivery to new residential districts?

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I assure the Hon. Member that Canada Post operates on both the use of the private sector and of the public sector. We have continued to improve service. We have increased volumes of mail. We are continuing daily delivery to homes in urban areas, and we are extending services in rural areas in a different fashion to be more economically sound in administering Canada Post.

CORPORATE AFFAIRS

DOME PETROLEUM

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The debts of Dome Petroleum are due tomorrow, and people are wondering whether it will go out of business. Will the Minister confirm whether he, the Minister of Energy, or departmental officials have had discussions with Dome Petroleum? Is it his opinion that Dome will go out of business?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is trying to excite some imagination, which is not very responsible of him. Yes, we have been in continuing discussions with the company and other parties interested in the matter. We will continue to be in touch with them. I am pleased with the progress of the discussions, and I do not think the expectations of the Hon. Member will come to pass.

INVOLVEMENT OF CHARTERED BANKS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I know the Minister of Finance is aware that if Dome Petroleum goes under, interest rates could go up. Would he ensure that the banks do not pass on their losses in terms of higher interest rates to ordinary Canadians?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, that is a totally hypothetical question. Surely the Hon. Member understood my response to his first question.

Mr. Speaker: One question, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East.

TRADE

REPRESENTATION OF WOMEN AND FRANCOPHONES ON FREE TRADE NEGOTIATING TEAM

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, since ambassador Reisman, Canada's negotiator, believes that it is enough to have drivers and secretaries representing Francophones and women in the free trade negotiations, can the Acting Prime Minister tell us what he has done to keep the promise of the Secretary of State for External Affairs to add Francophones and women to the negotiating team so that they will really be in a position to have a say in the free trade negotiations?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, this question has been put before, and the lead Minister, the Secretary of State for External Affiars, answered it on March 21. He is recorded at page 13473 of Hansard saying:

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Member on the government side who is carrying out the duties of Government House Leader whether he has anything further to report to the statement given yesterday by the House Leader. This is Thursday, the day we usually ask the House business question. Does the Acting House Leader have anything further to add to the statement of yesterday?

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): No, Mr. Speaker. We intend to discuss this matter with the House Leaders. At this time I am not in a position to make any public declaration as to what we might be doing on Monday. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that we will be doing so as soon as possible.

POINT OF ORDER

CLARIFICATION OF STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I rise at the earliest opportunity to correct an impression that I may have left in my responses to the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I believe I said the correspondence which was referred to by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) was referred to the board of Air Canada. I meant to say that it was referred to the management of Air Canada and not the board.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. The letter to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) was referred to the executive correspondence unit of the Department of Transport. I will be happy to give the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) the file number.

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It concerns House business and my question will be addressed to the Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Speaker: Given that the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary said he had nothing to announce today, it is a little difficult to allow further questions. The Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) briefly.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, Bill C-67 was reported back to this House at the end of January. It has not come back on the Order Paper for third reading. Can the Parliamentary Secretary assure us that Bill C-67 will come back next week?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that we are actively considering proceeding with that Bill. It has been a question of making sure that all the amendments from all Parties are on the Order Paper in order to be able to proceed and to be sure that we have the critics from the two Opposition Parties in position. I can assure the Hon. Member that Bill C-67 is under very active consideration.

CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-86, an Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, as reported (with amendments) from the legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: I believe what I am about to say has been distributed to Hon. Members. I asked that it be distributed earlier so that Members would have the information in advance.

There are six report stage motions on today's Notice Paper in amendment to Bill C-86, an Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act.

As Motions Nos. 3 and 4 attempt to amend line 30 in Clause 1 of the Bill and are significantly similar, it would be my intention to select Motion No. 3 standing in the name of the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) as she is the sponsor of the Bill. Accordingly, Motion No. 4 will be dropped from the Notice Paper.

Motions Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 5 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows: Motion No. 1 will be voted on separately; an affirmative vote on Motion No. 2 obviates the question being put on Motion No. 3. A negative vote on Motion No. 2 requires the question to be put on Motion No. 3; and Motion No. 5 will be voted on separately. Motion No. 6 will be debated and voted on separately.

Therefore, I propose to call Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong). Under the circumstances I think the House will give its consent that the motion be moved by Mr. Deans for Mr. de Jong. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Ian Deans (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-86 be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 16 to 18 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"intendent of Insurance, the Inspector General of Banks and the Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs; and

(c) not more than three other members"

Mr. Speaker: The same situation arises with Motion No. 2 standing in the name of Mr. Riis. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) to move it for the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Ian Deans (for Mr. Riis) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-86 be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 25 to 30 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"Board of Directors

(a) if the person is employed in any capacity in the public service of Canada or holds any office or position of which any salary or other remuneration is payable out of public money; and

(b) unless the person complies with the following:

(i) that within sixty days of appointment and thereafter annually, the person reports in writing and in confidence to the chairman all direct and indirect interests the person holds in member institution;

(ii) that as a director, the person is required to divest himself of any direct or indirect interests in any shareholding that is in excess of ten per cent of the outstanding shares of any class of share of a member institution or where the chairman is of the view that the shareholding constitutes a significant interest in the member institution; and

(iii) subject to the chairman's request, that the person divests himself of shares that are pledged to a lending institution as collateral for loans made to the person, and such divestment shall be accomplished by selling the shares in an arm's length transaction or by placing the shares in a trust."

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)) moved:

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-86 be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 26 to 30 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"(a) employed in any capacity in the public service of Canada or holds any office or position for which any salary or other remuneration is payable out of public moneys;

(b) a member of the Senate or House of Commons of Canada or a member of a provincial legislature; or

(c) a director, officer or employee of a federal institution or provincial institution."

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) move Motion No. 5 for the Member for Regina West (Mr. de Jong)?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Ian Deans (for Mr. de Jong) moved:

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-86 be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 1 to 8 at page 2.

Mr. Speaker: Motions 1, 2, 3 and 5 are grouped for debate. Debate. Under the circumstances, the Hon. Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall).

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I would like to offer some comments on the amendments proposed to Bill C-86. It is important that as we commence this stage of the legislation Members are aware of the importance of the legislation.

As a result of the difficulties experienced by several financial institutions over the past several years, the deposit insurance system has experienced substantial losses. The extent of the losses were such that the CDIC's accumulated financial resources were depleted. In other words, CDIC is in need of the money. Moreover, these losses will continue to impede the rebuilding of the deposit insurance fund, which will require rebuilding to provide it with a sound financial base. Indeed, without an increase of premiums the deposite insurance fund's deficit will continue to increase even if CDIC does not incur additional losses in the future. Interest costs on funds borrowed to finance past deficits, and this is an important point, would exceed premium revenue at current rates. This is the reason for the urgency behind the legislation being discussed today.

Bill C-86 would raise the premiums paid by member institutions of the CDIC from the present level of one thirtieth of one per cent to one-tenth of one per cent of insured deposits effective February 1, 1986. This increase in premium levels is necessary to begin the lengthy process of reducing the size of CDIC's deficit.

The increase in premium rates expires at the end of March, 1987, and thus would be an interim measure, pending the completion of a full review of the deposit insurance system. The reports prepared by the House finance committee and the committee in the other place examined this issue and their reports are important elements in this process. I should indeed thank all Hon. Members for their participation in that discussion.

Some Members of Parliament have expressed concerns that the proposed premium increase is effective February 1, 1986. It has been suggested, for example, that the legislation enforces a retroactive increase in deposit insurance premiums. It is important to note that this legislation was first tabled and made public on November 29, 1985. CDIC members therefore had ample notice that the Government was planning to raise CDIC premium rates.

When it became apparent that the legislation would be delayed, it was decided that this increase in premiums be authorized in the Bill as of a specific date. In mid-January we announced that we would make the higher premiums effective February 1. A letter to this effect was sent to all CDIC member institutions. We were very concerned about providing them with warning.

Another provision is that Bill C-86 increases the size of the Board of Directors of CDIC to provide for the appointment of up to four board members from outside the federal public service. This amendment addresses the Wyman Committee's recommendation that there be broader private sector representation on the board of the CDIC. It was suggested that representatives from the private sector would complement the existing membership, who are public service directors, by bringing a private sector market perspective to the decision-making process of the board. These directors will provide the CDIC with valuable insights on developments in the financial system. The legislation precludes individuals still active in financial institutions from serving on the board of directors.

It has been suggested that active members of the financial institution sector should be appointed to the board to ensure that the CDIC has access to timely market information. That point is well taken and that is why we propose private sector directors in the Bill. However, the appointment of active board members within financial institutions would raise serious conflict of interest concerns since CDIC board members receive sensitive information from member institutions which could frequently be competing institutions. Member institutions must, therefore, at all times be assured that the information they provide to the Deposit Insurance Corporation will not be used in a manner which is detrimental to their interests. Consequently, I believe it would not be appropriate to appoint individuals active in the financial institutions sector to serve on the CDIC board of directors.

The legislation does not preclude the possibility of having someone from the consumer sector serving on the board. Our intent is to ensure that four of the best people are selected to fill the new positions. Defining who those people should be would limit our capability to make future appointments based on that and our flexibility to pull in people from coast to coast with different kinds of expertise.

It was also proposed that there be conflict of interest provisions placed in the legislation. I share, as much as anyone, the Hon. Member's concern about the need to prevent conflict of interest with CDIC board members. However, if specific conflict of interest provisions were placed in the legislation, it could limit our flexibility in dealing with possible future conflicts of interest because these values change. If this proposal were adopted, changes to these guidelines would require legislative changes.

For this reason I feel it is advisable to have conflict of interest guidelines in corporate by-laws. This would allow the CDIC to react quickly to a possible conflict of interest situation which might arise. It is the intention of the Government to ensure that the conflict of interest guidelines which are formulated are effective. We regard this as a matter of the highest importance. Given the importance of the deposit insurance system, Mr. Speaker, I hope that all Members will join with me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, we are going to support this legislation although we will move some amendments which we think are pretty important. We are going to support the legislation because there is no other way. We look upon it as essentially a stop-gap measure. We believe that the reason the CDIC has its present problems and has had to finance bank and trust bankruptcies in recent years is because of the inadequacy of the legislation and the monitoring system. Due to this, when things went bad, as they so frequently have in recent years, both under the Liberal and Conservative administrations, the monitoring system which was supposed to protect the people of Canada from the disasters which took place were not in place.

During the hearings by the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs into Canada's financial institutions a number of witnesses supported the increase in the premium levels paid into the deposit insurance corporation. Considering the numerous failures of trust companies, loan companies, and most recently banks, and the fact that in 1983 the level of deposits covered by insurance was increased from $20,000 to $60,000, there has been a recognition that premium increases are required. We are not opposed to this increase but there are points worth touching on in this debate. We want to get them on the record.

First, the increases in premium contributions may, and I am certain will, be passed on by some if not all the institutions to the consumers through increased service charges. We have seen service charges increase in number and by very substantial amounts in both banks and trust companies. The days when banks provided services for free are long since gone. This has helped the profits of banks escalate.

Second, under the current legislation which is not affected by the amendments to Bill C-86, member institutions are entitled to reduced premiums when, in the opinion of the corporation, the deposit insurance fund is adequate having regard to all the circumstances. These reduced premiums are usually extended to member institutions in the form of a rebate.

We are not opposed in principle to the increased numbers of members on a corporation board. There is little doubt that the CDIC as well as the other regulating bodies are in desperate need of a fundamental reorganization. I would include in that group of organizations which need fundamental reorganization the office of the Superintendent of Insurance. I hope that when we get the new system in operation the Superintendent of Insurance, the Inspector General and the head of the Bank of Canada will talk to each other. Apparently when the Superintendent of Insurance realized that there were certain things wrong with the trust companies there was no communciation with the Inspector General who could have taken early action which would probably have avoided some of the major disasters which took place.

However, the concern with this specific provision is that the majority position will in future be held by private sector rather than public sector members. We find that very strange because, as the Minister knows, there is a very distinct possibility of a conflict of interest. While the latter may well have more hands on experience, as long as CDIC has access to the Consolidated Revenue Fund it cannot be construed as a private sector organization. It should not be seen as a glorified Canadian bankers' association. Therefore, we would have serious reservations about handing over majority control of the CDIC to private sector oriented directors. The major proponent of this latter proposal was the Wyman committee which contended that: "in an environment of deregulation" it was essential that CDIC reflect that reality.

As I indicated earlier, we believe that Bill C-86 is a stopgap, short-term measure. Taken in the context of the recent bank and trust company failures, this legislation should only be interpreted as a minimal knee-jerk reaction rather than a substantial beginning to require reform of the regulatory and supervisory institutions. For example, from the direction of both Bill C-86 and the proposed legislation which will be presented more formally some time in the future, the Government appears somewhat reluctant to fully undertake to bring into existence the recommendation of the standing committee on finance for a national financial administrative agency which would consolidate all regulatory bodies into one organizational structure.

I have already indicated our concerns, that if we do not do this we will have a repeat of what happened previously when one of the important regulatory agencies did not communicate with the other. In the course of debate we want to emphasize the interim nature of the Government's response to the crisis in the financial sector. When I talk about a crisis, I do so advisedly. Just look at the billions of dollars the CDIC has had to pay out because of the failures of trust companies and banks.

We have some questions concerning Bill C-86 which need to be answered. First, what measures are there in the Bill to prevent members of the board of directors from the private sector being considered on the basis of political connections rather than on merit? Second, why would the Government consider it astute to permit the use of alternates on the board when the Government-appointed Wyman committee recommended against such a practice? Third, should CDIC, as a result of the increase in the number of private sector board of directors, be placed in a position of appearing to become a federal agency which in fact is little more than the equivalent of the Canadian Bankers' Association; a vehicle for the private sector to influence direction of Government policy and perhaps as a means by which to manipulate competition amongst member organizations?

The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation was established in 1967. In its first year of operation the corporation insured 28 federally-incorporated financial institutions, 10 of which were banks, and 41 provincially-incorporated trust and loan companies. The level of deposit protection was set at $20,000 and the total amount of deposits insured was $17.1 billion. By the end of 1984 there were 140 federally-incorporated institutions affiliated with the CDIC, 72 of which were banks, and 46 provincial institutions. The insured deposits had increased from $20,000 to $60,000. Total deposits insured were $162 billion. Apart from that change in 1983, the corporation's authority to borrow from the Consolidated Revenue Fund was also increased from $500 million to $1.5 billion. Both of these substantial increases were introduced in the wake of the Crown-Greymac-Seaway trust fiasco of that year.

Let me pause for a moment to say something about that. We understand that the CDIC, having paid out the money lost, wound up with 10,000 apartment units in Toronto valued at something in the neighbourhood of $1.5 billion. We are very concerned about that real estate. How is the CDIC going to dispose of it? If it does so quickly and at market value, and if the market is very active and they get a high price, and I suppose from the point of view of the CDIC it should get as high a price as it can in order to recoup as much as possible of the money it paid out, then the new owners will be required and entitled to ask for and maybe get very substantial rent increases on those apartments. They are entitled to make a reasonable profit. We are very concerned about how that kind of transaction will be dealt with by the CDIC.

Like the Office of the Inspector General of Banks, the CDIC, while having a vital role to play in the regulation of deposit-taking institutions, has never been considered until very recently as an essential service. Previous Governments, and to some degree the present Government, have not demonstrated an attitude which indicated those bodies were so regarded. In 1980, for example, when the recession was beginning to take hold, the CDIC had a total of five employees. In 1984, after eight trust companies had either collapsed or been taken over, the staff stood at 16. Even when allowing for the difference in size, we have to be struck by the fact that the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has a staff of 1,500 who deal only with the liquidation of failed institutions.

We believe very strongly that the CDIC and the Inspector General, or whatever agency is given the responsibility, should monitor and regulate these institutions so that the people who deposit their money will not lose it. Yet how can they do the necessary monitoring so that we will not have a repeat of the situation we had in the past?

Let me just say in closing that we believe we need people from the public sector on the board of the CDIC. We are, to say the least, unenthusiastic about a large number of private sector representatives on that board who may indeed have a conflict of interest, either obvious or not so obvious, but certainly there.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I want to follow up on some of the comments made by my colleague, the senior Member for Winnipeg North. I am particularly concerned about Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong). The motion calls for adding a number of people to the board.

Just to go back for a moment, as I understand it, this Bill deals with deposit insurance for banks and trust companies. The Bill does two things. It increases the premiums that the CDIC collects from the banks and trust companies. It had to do that because it has paid out so much in claims recently. The Bill also increases the board of directors from five to nine people. I have no objection to increasing premiums. However, we have some problems with the number of the board of directors and we would like to make some changes.

Our concern is with the management of the corporation. That is why we have introduced a series of amendments which we think will make the management better in the public interest. I have to go to committee soon. You will notice that around this House you are going here and there. You have committees going at the same time the House is sitting and sometimes it can be very difficult. I am glad I am able to speak now and I thank my Liberal friends who have allowed me to do so at this time.

I think the first amendment is important. What it does is add to the board of directors the Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Why is that important? Well, it is important because each of the other board members represents government Departments which are close to the corporation. There is almost a conflict of interest in the sense that all the other Departments, Finance and so on, sometimes have reasons for wanting the Deposit Corporation to act, for example, in the bankruptcy of the Canadian Commercial Bank. That was a good example of a case where they would want the moneys to be paid out quickly.

What we want is to have a consumer voice on that board, and that consumer voice would be someone from the Government representing the Consumer Affairs Department who would bring a different point of view to the discussions of the board of directors. We feel it is essential to have a member of the board of directors whose role it will be to monitor the workings of the corporation on behalf of consumers. That was the first amendment by the Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong).

We want to preserve the public sector majority on the board of directors, considering the access the corporation has to the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

In a third amendment we feel it is essential to ensure to as great a degree as possible that those who are to sit on the board of directors are not in a potential conflict of interest situation. Goodness knows, over the last few months in this House we have heard enough about conflicts of interest situations. It is an issue that is alive, and certainly the former Minister of Regional Economic Expansion is concerned about conflicts of interest.

What we are trying to do in this amendment is to make sure that those who sit on the board of directors are not in a potential conflict of interest situation. We want these provisions established in the Act. They will not preclude the corporation from having its own by-laws. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) proposed a very creative amendment which deals with the board of directors divulging its assets and divesting itself of them. We also deal with relatives and others to whom assets may be transmitted. We think it is a good amendment and a necessary one because this board could, in fact, find itself in a conflict of interest situation because you are talking about paying off insurers of a financial institution that the Government may be involved in bailing out. If that happens, we do not want to have a conflict of interest situation.

We have also proposed an amendment which will have the disqualifications which presently apply to the private sector chairman apply to the private sector members of the board of directors. If you are going to have private sector members of the board, then we would like this provision included as well.

The last amendment we dealt with is to remove alternates from being able to attend meetings of the board of directors of the corporation. I am told that at the Legislative Committee studying Bill C-86 the Canadian Bankers Association, the Trust Company Association of Canada, and the Chairman of the Finance Committee, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), all supported the principle that alternates should not sit or attend meetings of the board of directors.

If those two groups and that fine gentleman—all probably Tories to the core—are prepared to support that amendment, let it not be us who hold it up. Indeed, we have gone further, we have proposed the very amendment that they were in favour of. That is the final amendment we propose.

Let me sum up by saying that from the NDP's point of view on this Bill we have no objection to the increased premiums part of the Bill. We do have some objection to the board of directors and how the corporation is managed through the board of directors, because it is they who will be doing the management. What we want to do is to make that board better, and that is the thrust of these amendments.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate on report stage of Bill C-86, but I have to say at the outset that we in the Official Opposition are very puzzled by the kind of timetable that the Government is using. The Minister today said that she regarded this Bill as very important and urgent.

When the Minister appeared before the House of Commons Finance Committee on September 9, 1985, she gave notice of the provisions of this Bill, and of draft legislation, which she described as items of high priority. Yet the Bill was not tabled in the House until November 29, 1985. Then the Bill sat on the Order Paper until it was finally called towards the end of January.

We in the Opposition responded to the Government's perfectly sensible statement that it was important to get this Bill dealt with, so we let the Bill go to committee after only one day of debate. In the legislative committee it was again dealt with expeditiously. It was reported out of committee on February 5. There it has sat. We remain very puzzled. We keep hearing that the Bill is urgent, but we do not see the Government making any great moves to advance it in its legislative program.

We are concerned generally about the Government's leisurely approach to the question of the regulation and supervision of Canadian financial institutions. A review began during the last Government. The new Government decided not to accept the work of a very distinguished volunteer committee, which had worked on it for a year. That was all thrown out and a new set of consultations began, which eventually led us to a Green Paper. The Green Paper, having been out in the public sector, was then reviewed by the Standing Committee on Finance.

Bill C-103 has been tabled, but that does not go very far. This particular Bill C-86 is very much "a quick fix job" which proposes two temporary measures, and I say temporary because the Bill has a sunset clause that is valid for only one year. Bill C-86 proposes to do two things. First, it proposes an increase in the premium level paid by the member institutions of the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corporation. Currently they pay one-thirtieth of 1 per cent of their insured deposits. Bill C-86 proposes to change that to one-tenth of 1 per cent. As I said, the increase is to be in effect for one year only because this increase does not really address the problems of funding the CDIC adequately in view of the tremendous demands on the fund of recent years.

There is general agreement that the premiums should increase to reflect recent risk experienced, but the proposed increase certainly will not clear the deficit. There still remains the problem of finding a long-term solution. Different proposals have been put forward. The House of Commons Finance Committee recommended eliminating the deficit in ten to 25 years through surcharges on member institutions. The Senate Committee and the Wyman Committee both recommended eliminating the deficit in 10 years and separating deficit financing from operational financing. Those matters still remain to be addressed. In the meantime, as has been pointed out, the CDIC is able to function because it has access to a $1.5 billion line of credit from the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

• (1540)

One thing the Bill does is to increase the premiums in a limited way for one year, and then the whole problem has to be dealt with at that time. Second, the Bill proposes to increase the size of the CDIC's board of directors and include members from outside the Public Service. At the present time, the board of directors consists almost entirely of public servants, the Governor of the Bank of Canada, the regulator of banks, the Inspector General of Banks, the Superintendent of Insurance, and the Deputy Minister of Finance. The chairman is appointed from the private sector and is the only private sector representative.

The Bill before us proposes the addition of four outside directors. Contrary to the view of my NDP colleagues, I think that adding directors with experience in the financial field should be an effective and useful balance. However, I am in favour of some of the amendments proposed by my NDP colleagues and I would like to address these now. In Motion No. 1 the proposal is to add the Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to the board. That probably would be useful in that it emphasizes the concern for consumers. After all, the CDIC was originally intended to serve and protect the unsophisticated small depositor.

In Motion No. 2, the mover of the motion has taken some of the guidelines on conflict of interest which the CDIC has adopted voluntarily and he proposes including these in the statute. I think that is probably a good thing to do as well in that more things are in the statute rather than leaving conflict of interest guidelines up to the good will of people. This is not quite the position I took at second reading, but then a number of events have happened since that time which have lead me to have more awareness of the need to put things in the statute rather than leave it up to good faith and good judgment.

The Minister's Motion No. 3, which also sets some requirements for the public sector representatives on the board, I find quite acceptable.

I am sorry that Motion No. 4 has been struck, but since it has, I expect it is not in order for me to comment on it. However, I think the emphasis on Canadian citizenship is a useful thing that probably should have been retained.

I understand we will be debating Motion No. 6 separately and I will come back to discuss that motion later. I want to go back again to the background and the urgency of Bill C-86 and to stress that we will not be delaying it unduly either now at report stage or at third reading because it is a quick fix and there is not very much in it. However, I am deeply concerned that at this stage in the history of our country, with all that has happened in recent years, we are still only dealing with a "quick fix" Bill and have not yet addressed some of the serious problems which were illustrated when some Canadian financial institutions have got into difficulties. In 1982, deposit insurance coverage was increased from $20,000 to $60,000 after the Ontario Government seized three trust companies in the belief that public funds were at risk. In order to protect those funds, the federal Government moved to insure all depositors of the institutions at the new higher rate. In 1985, as part of the Canadian Commercial Bank bail-out, the CDIC committed $75 million and, according to its annual report, it did not make any provision for loss as it expected to be fully reimbursed. That expectation, unfortunately, was not met. Later the Government announced its intention to reimburse all depositors in both the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. As a result, CDIC paid out, as far as insured deposits were concerned, $250 million to CCB depositors and $170 million to Northland depositors, while uninsured deposits came to $430 million for Canadian Commercial Bank and $470 million for Northland. So at this point estimates have put the CDIC deficit at about $1.2 billion.

The Bill before us is a small step towards correcting the problems. Let us hope we see some substantial measures soon.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to speak to the grouping of amendments in Bill C-86, an Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Motion No. 1 put forward by one of my colleagues is a very crucial one. This amendment would place another individual, another position, on the board of CDIC. It would be a position which would be there for the purpose of keeping the consumer in mind when decisions about the policies and actions of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation are made. In theory, the CDIC is there to protect the consumer. The individual who places his or her trust in a financial institution, be it bank or credit union, whatever is applicable, should have his or her money protected. Should something happen to the financial stability of that particular institution, the individual consumer should not lose his or her life savings.

The current make-up of the board of directors includes a chairman from the private sector, the Governor of the Bank of Canada, the Deputy Minister of Finance, the Superintendent of Insurance and the Inspector General of Banks. With the exception of the chairman, the remaining four members are people who are directly involved on a day to day basis with the financial community. They tend, I would suspect, to get wrapped up in the dollars and cents aspect, in the regulations and in the paper flow and do not think about the average Canadian family, perhaps a couple reaching their retirement years, who have put money away not in a sock or under the pillow but in their bank account and then, all of a sudden, something happens to that institution and their money is no longer there. They will look to CDIC and say: "Well, I want my money back". If there is not a consumer advocate on the board of directors it is possible that the CDIC could make a decision which would prevent an average Canadian family headed into retirement from getting their money back. It is important to have someone there all the time to remind the senior bureaucrats that the reason the organization exists is for the protection of the little guy, the little girl—the average Canadian.

• (1550)

By amending this clause to add the Deputy Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to the list we do two things. We provide an advocate for the consumer, while not tampering with the structure. We are not bringing in a consumer advocate per se; we are bringing in the most senior official next to the Minister in the Ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. This is an official who is duty bound to look out for the consumers of the country. We wish to provide this linkage to ensure that there is some type of responsible review of any decisions that are made. Sometimes it is just a matter of a person saying: "But what about the consumer? How will this regulation affect a depositor in Vancouver or a person who has his or her life savings in Moncton?" I urge the Government to accept this modest but important change to the Bill.

The second motion with which I would like to deal is Motion No. 2 submitted by one of my colleagues in the New Democratic Party. This motion would establish some very specific rules for the members of the board, rules that relate to how they conduct themselves, and conflict of interest guidelines. This suggestion is not without support from the government side. When the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) appeared before the committee on September 9, 1985, she stated in part:

> Conditions concerning the eligibility of prospective board members would be incorporated in the legislation to ensure that conflicts of interest do not arise.

It is clear from what we have seen in the House over the past month or so that conflict of interest guidelines have to be laid out very carefully. We believe that they must be placed into legislation rather than its being left to a Minister or the Prime Minister to draft effective and functional guidelines. The following is what is being proposed in the motion:

> (a) if the person is employed in any capacity in the public service of Canada or holds any office or position of which any salary or other remuneration is payable out of public moneys; and
> (b) unless the person complies with the following:
> (i) that within sixty days of appointment and thereafter annually, the person reports in writing and in confidence to the chairman all direct and indirect interests the person holds in member institution;
> (ii) that as a director, the person is required to divest himself of any direct or indirect interests in any shareholding that is in excess of ten percent of the outstanding shares of any class of share of a member institution or where the chairman is of the view that the shareholding constitutes a significant interest in the member institution; and
> (iii) subject to the chairman's request, that the person divests himself of shares that are pledged to a lending institution as collateral for loans made to the person, and such divestment shall be accomplished by selling the shares in an arm's length transaction or by placing the shares in a trust.

We are not talking about a small savings account which the member may have. Let us say that one of the members of the board happens to have a substantial involvement, one that would directly or indirectly, purposely or by accident, lead to a conflict of interest. I think the Government should look at this particular amendment very carefully. It should keep in mind the fact that the Minister of State for Finance specifically indicated that there was a need for such protection.

The final motion to which I wish to speak is Motion No. 5 which would prevent public sector members of the board of directors from appointing an alternate to attend any meeting of the board. The suggestion that alternates not be allowed was strongly supported in committee by the Canadian Bankers' Association, the Trust Companies Association of Canada and the Chairman of the Finance and Economic Affairs Committee, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), all of whom supported the suggestion that alternates for board members not be allowed.

I think the amendments which my colleagues have put forward make a great deal of sense. I believe they would improve this piece of legislation. I am pleased to have had the opportunity to add my comments to the debate today.

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): As my contribution to this debate, Mr. Speaker, I should like to say first of all that I do not object to the grouping of motions we are dealing with today, which appear to me to be quite normal and which should be included in the Bill as amended.

However, Mr. Speaker, I am very disappointed when I think that last spring, we had to adopt a special legislation to save the Commercial Bank of Canada on the brink of bankruptcy in Western Canada, that last fall, we had to adopt a legislation, following a long debate, and we know at what cost for Canadian taxpayers because the Government wanted to compensate with taxpayers' money paid both by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Treasury of our country all investors with over $60,000 in deposits. Today, the Government has introduced a Bill which does not remedy the situation, which does not provide any way to avoid the repetition of the situation we experienced recently and which we could experience again.

In all areas, Mr. Speaker, the Government continues to come up with stop-gap measures which never solve the problems definitely; it continues to put forward half-measures and to adopt a kind of laissez faire attitude for which could prove very expensive in the long run. We should keep in mind the crisis which the liability insurance industry is experiencing today. As recently as yesterday, Mr. Speaker, I asked the honourable Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall) when she would introduce a bill to control, because there again—

Those who had deposited their money in this bank in Western Canada were quite lucky, because they were covered to the tune of $60,000 in insured deposits and moreover, the Government decided to step in and compensate beyond $60,000 in deposits. But those who had an insurance policy with an insurance company which went bankrupt have lost everything, Mr. Speaker, and I hope that, as the Minister promised yesterday, we will have by the end of this month not a bill such as this which will remedy nothing, but a real bill which can solve this problem once and for all.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-86, an Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I notice government Members rushing into the Chamber. I would like to set their minds at ease. They do have a moment or two. The vote is not yet about to take place.

Mr. Wise: We like to hear you speak.

Mr. Deans: The Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) says that he likes to hear me speak. Why, then, does he not attend more often?

Mr. Gauthier: Way to go, Ian!

Mr. Deans: I do not want to engage in this trivial banter when a matter as important as this is before the House of Commons.

I think it could be said that this particular Bill will provide for an improvement over the current situation. The amendments we have offered and, I suspect, even the amendment offered by the Minister, which is not at all unlike one we proposed, would make the Bill even better. However, this Bill does nothing to address the major problems with which we were faced as a result of the collapse of the Canadian Commercial and Northland Banks.

Mr. Orlikow: And the trust companies.

Mr. Deans: As my colleague has said, the trust company collapses that have also occurred.

If the banking industry had been going along as it had many years ago with little if any discernible problems, this Bill would have been seen as a way to try to broaden input and perhaps bring about a somewhat different perspective to the decision-making process. However, and I know you have been concerned about this as well, Mr. Speaker, the fact is that the banking structure of Canada lacks adequate supervision of operations. There is a lack of a guarantee that the operations of the many banks that now make up the banking community, some large and some small, some traditional and others quite new to the scene, are consistent with the highest level of public interest.

I do not think it is unfair to say that banks, like most other private corporations, are in the business of protecting their own interests. They do what they do not because of any commitment to the public but because of a commitment to their shareholders and to themselves. I suppose I could be critical of that, but I live in a society in which that is well understood. It might be said by me and others that it would be desirable for the banks to be more concerned with the public interest and for them to make an effort to operate in a way that would protect not only the investors but also the depositors and not only the depositors but also the customers who deal with the banks in good faith.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), has already made mention of those who think that the "buyer beware" concept should apply to banking as it applies to most other commercial enterprises in Canada. How does the buyer beware? How does the average individual citizen, the buyer, who is doing business with a bank become aware of the bank's solvency or insolvency? Where do the buyers go to find out if the bank's practices at the management level are appropriate and prudent? How do they determine if the asset-to-loan ratio is indeed in keeping with what the Inspector of Banks believes appropriate? How would they know whom to ask and, more important, how would they know what to ask even if they did know whom to ask?

To attempt to leave the impression that, somehow or other, the same kind of general buyer-beware practices that are promoted for commercial transactions in non-financial institutions should be equally applicable to financial institutions is ludicrous. It is for that reason that many years ago we established the office of the Inspector of Banks. The purpose of that inspector was to make sure that banking practices as necessarily established by the Government and the Parliament of Canada were indeed followed to the letter by all institutions that fell within their purview.

We have argued, with total validity, I would submit, that the practices of the banks, were they to be followed and inspected properly, should be applied to the near-banks, the trust companies. We have reached a point at which trust companies are banks in all but name. It is time for the same provisions to apply to trust companies as apply to banks. I want to make it very clear, though, that if we do that, it will make very little difference if we do not have an enforcement mechanism and an adequate inspection process. It will make very little difference if we do not have a sufficient number of people to be able to undertake the close and continuous scrutiny that is necessary to require financial institutions to live up to their obligations. That is really what we should have before us.

What we do have before us, important though it is, is almost trivial compared to what we need. The Bill before us, no doubt, provides for a marginal improvement. Unfortunately, it provides for improvement in an area in which, though improvement may well be necessary, it will serve no useful purpose in dealing with what we have seen occur in banks and near-bank trust company operations over the course of the last 10 or more years.

We offer these amendments in good faith and we do so because we believe that they will improve, in a perhaps marginal way, what the Minister has offered to the House as a change to the law governing the insurance corporation. However, when this Bill is passed and becomes law, we will still be faced with the same problems we have already faced. There is nothing now in place that was not in place at the time the Northland and Canadian Commercial Banks collapsed. There is nothing in place now that was not in place at the time of the collapse of the trust companies. I think it would be fair to say that there is not a Member in the House who was here at the time who would not have proposed that we needed some fairly drastic, dramatic changes to the system in place at that time.

When the commission has completed its work and reported, I hope it will be evident that the major problem which confronted the industry and consumers was that there was no adequate provision for guaranteeing that the law, even if it were correct, was being policed adequately. When we find in the banking system the kinds of unusual occurrences which were clearly taking place in the early and late parts of last year, when we find those unusual manipulations, if one can accept that term, of the assets of the banks over and against their liabilities, and still not have before Parliament provisions to guarantee that the banks, through whatever imaginative bookeeping mechanism, cannot undertake that again, then I say to my colleagues in the House that we are not dealing with the problem.

Two of the institutions about which I am talking are very close to your heart, Mr. Speaker, coming from western Canada as you do. Although I cannot recall actually hearing you say it, no doubt you were as perplexed and angered by what took place as were most of us. I would not be at all surprised if in discussing it with your constituents you raised the necessity for a stronger method of dealing with such situations before they arise again. I would be willing to bet, Mr. Speaker, that you even said at some point, as most of us did to our constituents, that we would take measures and bring forward changes which would result in a system that would be, if not foolproof, certainly less vulnerable than the system which then existed. I can see the disappointment in your face as you listen; I can see it.

Mr. McMillan: I don't see it.

Mr. Deans: I see the Acting Speaker sitting there, agonizing and wishing that he could rise in his place to put on record his own views, which I suggest, and I hope appropriately, would parallel my own views. They would not be identical, I concede, but they would be similar to the views I have expressed.

Having said that, over the course of the day we must deal systematically with these amendments. In that process we must extract from the Government the promise that it will bring forward the changes which must be brought forward in order to clear up a system that does not work properly and to ensure that no depositor will have to rely upon the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation because of inadequate banking and management practices being perpetrated upon them by people who do not follow the direction of Parliament.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in this debate on the report stage.

Earlier I heard the Minister say that according to the Government, this was an important Bill and it was urgent that we adopt the Bill and the measures it entails.

Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House are wondering about this, because we know that the Bill before the House today was introduced for first reading on December 29, 1985, while the debate on second reading did not take very long, only one day, on January 27, 1986. After that it went to committee. The Bill came back to the House this year on February 5, if I am not mistaken, which is four months ago.

And now the Minister informs the House it is all very urgent. I think we should try to agree on the meaning of that word and be consistent, or at least have a good excuse, because quite frankly, even if the Bill is retroactive, something to which we object, there is some urgency involved. We agree with the purpose of the Bill, but we believe that the Government should not come before the House and make us believe it is urgent, when the Bill has been before the House for four months and we were just waiting for it to be called by the Government. After all, the Government calls the Bills here, not us. We dispose of the legislation but the Government has to propose it first.

In future, I think they better not pretend the matter is urgent when it has been nearly four months since the Bill was reported back from committee, in this case the Legislative Committee on Bill C-86, where it was considered.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill and the proposed amendments—the amendments before the House that are numbered, 1, 2, 3 and 5, which have been grouped according to a decision by the Chair and which are now being considered—these amendments are of course concerned with the membership of the Board and are also aimed at changing certain aspects of the Bill dealing with conflict of interest.

And since I only have a few minutes, I would like to have the following considerations put on the record with respect to these two points.

In 1982 and 1983, certain Canadian trust companies, such as Crown Trust, Greymac Trust, Seaway Mortgage, Greymac

Mortgage, The Fidelity Trust, Amic Mortgage Investment and District Trust, had some problems with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation which, as we know, insured the deposits of Canadians with these trust companies.

Our experience with the banks has not been easy either, Mr. Speaker. The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation had to go through some acrobatics to meet the requirements of the Act so that all those who had deposits not exceeding $60,000 could be paid. Naturally, the Corporation spent nearly all its funds paying these depositors and Parliament had to take some action to make the Corporation more profitable and economically viable so that Canadians would have some assurance that their deposits would be well protected.

[English]

I say that the Bill is a quick fix because indeed it is just that. As we see from the legislation before us, the increases in the premiums will expire in February, 1987. I should like to refer to the notes for the Minister's speech before the committee wherein it is indicated that the proposed higher premiums would expire at the end of the 1986 premium year. We know, as a result of Clause 5 of the Bill, that that premium year starts on February 1, 1986 and therefore would end on February 1, 1987. She went on to indicate that this would ensure that other aspects of the deposit insurance system which are not addressed in Bill C-86 would be reviewed by Parliament.

I take it that this means the Minister and the Government will come forward with legislation in the near future which indeed looks after some of the loopholes, difficulties, and unfunded liabilities, if I may use that term, with which the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation may find itself faced in the next year.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, it is obviously necessary to increase premiums. It is impossible to raise the total coverage of $60,000 per depositor within the present structures. I think that it is reasonable to suggest that the premiums of insured banks and trust companies, which now amount one-thirtieth of 1 per cent of deposits, be increased to one-tenth of 1 per cent. However, it is not enough. This was pointed out in a few reports, such as the Wyman Report, as I recall, and the Senate Report on this same issue. We were told that, while it was not an easy problem to solve, three specific remedies could be recommended.

First, we were told that the combined effects of a share issue in the amount of $1 billion to member institutions and an increase of premiums would eliminate the deficit of the insurance fund by 1990. This recommendation was contained in the Wyman Report.

The Senate Committee on Banking, Trade and Commerce also published a report in December 1985, as Hon. Members will recall. Among other things, this report recommended that the deficit of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation be financed separately from the renewed Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. The report recommended that the deficit not include the portion of current amounts of the retroactive raise in the ceiling from $20,000 to $60,000. The House will recall that the previous Government had increased coverage from $20,000 to $60,000.

[English]

I know the time is restricted. I would like to address one important amendment which is before us, the one dealing with conflict of interest. The provisions that were put to the committee, which were part of the self-imposed draft, if I may use those words, by the board itself read somewhat interestingly in terms of conflict of interest and, God knows, we have tried to come to grips with that problem. I would like to read some extracts of the draft because I think it is important that everyone understand that the board proposed these measures on its own. It reads:

> Within sixty days of appointment—

That is as a member of the board, and we know that the board will be increased.

> —and thereafter annually, directors should report in writing and in confidence to the chairman, all direct or indirect interests they hold in member institutions.
> Directors are required to divest themselves of their direct and indirect interests in any shareholding that is in excess of ten per cent of the outstanding shares of any class of shares of a member institution.
> A director owning directly or indirectly , a beneficial interest in less than ten per cent of the outstanding shares of any class of shares of a member institution may be subject to a divestment requirement where the chairman is of the view that shareholding constitutes a significant interest in the member institution.

I will read the last paragraph. This is a public document, but it has some importance. It reads:

> Public confidence in the impartiality of the Corporation's decisions requires that directors' conduct be such as to avoid actual or perceived conflicts. To this end, directors are encouraged to seek the confidential advice of the Chairman or of the corporation's General Counsel.

The amendments before us deal with this issue of conflict of interest. The House would want to address this question with some seriousness. We should accept that if these guidelines are not sufficient, then we should improve them, but at least they are adequate for the purpose at hand, and, in my view, should be adopted. If I have a few minutes, I want to say this.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude by dealing with the important matter of motion No. 6. However, I shall come back later to this amendment, which concerns retroactive application of the Act and its coming into force at a date to be fixed by proclamation. I may want to speak about this amendment later.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division of the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) for Mr. Riis. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

According to Mr. Speaker's earlier ruling, an affirmative vote on Motion No. 2 obviates the question being put on Motion No. 3. A negative vote on Motion No. 2 requires the question to be put on Motion No. 3.

Therefore, the next question is on Motion No. 5 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) for Mr. de Jong. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity) moves:

Motion No. 6.

That Bill C-86, be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 24 and 25 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"5. Section 4 shall come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation."

Mr. Vincent: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. You said that a negative vote on Motion No. 2 requires the question to be put on Motion No. 3. You went directly to Motion No. 5, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I said that an affirmative vote on Motion No. 2 obviates the question being put on Motion No. 3. A negative vote on Motion No. 2 requires the question to be put on Motion No. 3. Therefore, we cannot put the question at this time on Motion No. 3. If the Hon. Member would like more information, he can come to the table and we will explain it to him while we carry on with debate. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

• (1630)

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, as a history to the amendment which I have placed before the House, Bill C-86, as originally tabled, would have come into force in the usual way on a date to be fixed by proclamation. At legislative committee it was amended to come into force retroactively as of February 1. I am having difficulty now, as I had then, with understanding the need for retroactivity.

The chronology is that in November, 1985, the Minister tabled draft legislation to which she said she attached a very high priority. Yet the Bill was not called for second reading until January 27. The Opposition responded to the request for fast passage, and it was dealt with in one day. The Bill went to committee where there were two hearings. It was reported out of committee on February 5. It was brought forward for report stage only today. I have great difficulty in understanding the need for retroactive legislation. If it was considered important, there has been ample time to bring it foward in the normal way.

My second reason for opposing retroactive legislation in this case is that this Bill is so very much a stop-gap piece of legislation. It does two or three things. It increases the number of members on the board to allow for some private sector representation, it allows the board to draft conflict of interest guidelines, and it increases for one year the premiums which the member institutions pay to the CDIC.

This legislation does not address any of the underlying problems. The board members of the CDIC who appeared before the legislative committee were quite frank about their belief that increasing the premium structure from one-thirtieth of one per cent to one-tenth of one per cent for one year would not resolve the over-all funding requirements of the CDIC. The Bill will increase the premiums from $62 million to $186 million during 1986. However, it does not touch the underlying problems. It does not touch the issue of the need to reform the structure. For example, the suggestion has often been made that instead of all institutions dipping into one pool of capital there should be separate pools for different kinds of institutions. Suggestions have been made that premiums should be related to risk assessment. None of these issues is touched upon.

I mentioned earlier that the CDIC's last financial statement anticipated a deficit of $1.2 billion. That statement was issued before the numbers were in from the failures of the Canadian Commercial Bank, the Northland Bank and two other smaller institutions. The final number may very well be considerably larger. This issue has not been addressed. In the interest of getting a quick fix Bill which does not touch any of the essential factors, we are asked to treat it retroactively but have not been given sufficient reasons to justify this.

I should also point out that when the Canadian Banking Association appeared before the legislative committee, it made the following point:

> The proposed tripling of the premium rate provided for in Bill C-86 is supposed to be temporary, extending from February 1, 1986, until April 30, 1987.
> The banking industry would find this temporary surcharge easier to accept if there were positive measures in place to reform the deposit insurance system altogether.

This particular brief also raised the question of a claims-based premium assessment system. It also suggested considering replacing the uniform premium rate for all CDIC member institutions with a system of rebates to reflect the claims experience of different classes of member institutions. These are all matters of extreme importance which should have been debated in previous months. The debate was foreclosed because when this Bill was introduced we were told that it must be rushed through. We co-operated and agreed to have a one-day debate. The Bill went to a legislative committee where we were again told that there was great urgency. However, it simply sat on the Order Paper until today.

The position of the Government is not logical. There are serious problems which need to be addressed that are not being addressed. The debate on those has been foreclosed by the existence of this quick fix Bill. We are also asked to give retroactive passage to this quick fix Bill which puts a bandaid on but does not address the underlying problems.

For those reasons, Mr. Speaker, we are opposed to the retroactivity and we sincerely hope that the Government will soon bring forward serious measures to address the serious problems and that it will allow adequate time for debate in this House and in committee.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I am puzzled by this amendment. I agree with the Member that the Government has acted in a dilatory manner. I agree with the Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) and other Members who have criticized this Bill as being a quick fix and a short-term solution which does not really come to grips with the fundamental problem. Having agreed with the Member that the Government should have brought this Bill forward much sooner than it did, I still do not understand why we should not make the Bill effective as of the day the Government brought it forward. All the faults which existed and still exist which require higher premiums are still present. If we passed this amendment, we would only relieve financial institutions of having to pay the higher premium, if I understand it correctly.

I am not disposed to vote for this amendment. However, despite the fact that I will vote against it, and despite the fact that we are allowing this Bill to go through, we do have some very serious and major reservations. The passage of this Bill will not mean that we have dealt with the failures of banks and trust companies which will cost the people of Canada hundreds of millions of dollars.

Robert Wyman headed up the committee set up by the Minister to look into the problems. He said that the CDIC has no clout. It cannot cancel the insurance of federally-incorporated institutions. It cannot do anything, yet it has the responsibility for paying out what is now billions of dollars. Astra Trust was liquidated in 1980. The CDIC paid out about $21.5 million and there is still $3.5 million to be recovered. The Northguard mortgage collapse in 1984 meant that the CDIC had to pay $27.8 million to insured depositors. There is still $27.8 million to be recovered. Pioneer Trust, Western Capital Trust and London Loan Company were liquidated in 1985, and the CDIC paid depositors $305 million. That entire amount is still outstanding.

In many respects the CDIC is not the master of its own fate. It depends on both the office of the Inspector General of Banks and the Superintendent of Insurance to monitor member institutions. It depends on the present board of directors, the Governor of the Bank of Canada, the Superintendent of Insurance, the Inspector General of Banks, the Deputy Minister of Finance, and the chairman from the private sector.

We know how inadequate they were in protecting the depositors when these institutions were forced into bankruptcy.

Mr. Deans: Pitiful.

Mr. Orlikow: Yes, it was. According to the current chairman of the corporation, Ronald McKinlay, the directors participated in the federal Government attempt to rescue the Canadian Commercial Bank. The CDIC was authorized by the directors to make available $75 million worth of effort. However, when the officials were asked whether a representative of the corporation was present for the decision-making, the reply was that there was no one there. What kind of regulatory agency is that? The Wyman committee was of the opinion that the CDIC should have a greater degree of independence than it currently enjoys. Decisions of the board of directors should be made with the interest of the corporation in the forefront, rather than the interest that the board members may have outside of the corporation. There should be no inference of any conflict of interest as one might find when examining the decision to involve the corporation in the March bail-out of the CCB. That decision was made by whom? By the Inspector General of Banks. It was approved by the head of the Bank of Canada, Mr. Bouey, although later he made it very clear that he really did not have the information he should have had before being involved. It was, to say the least, far from a realistic and careful decision.

Mr. Deans: It was slipshod.

Mr. Orlikow: It certainly was. Last September the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) assured members of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs that the private sector members would not be permitted to be associated with a single member institution. The background document released by the Department of Finance on September 1, 1985, provided the same assurance. Yet there does not appear in this Bill to be any such restriction. The only stipulation in the Wyman Report was that the board members should not be "active in the industry". That is not satisfactory to us.

In conclusion let me deal with several other matters. The Wyman committee was of the view that the primary objective of the CDIC required a fundamental realignment. Not only should it insure small, unsophisticated depositors against loss, it should more prudently administer the deposit insurance fund. Increased private sector participation in the CDIC is perceived as the most appropriate means by which to accomplish that. I have to say on behalf of, I suppose, 98 per cent of my constituents who put their money into a trust company or bank that, despite the suggestions by some people in financial institutions or what one reads in the financial pages of The Globe and Mail or The Financial Post, they, my constituents, do not have the ability, background, education or sophistication to be able to choose among financial institutions.

Mr. Deans: Most Members of Parliament, too.

Mr. Orlikow: Yes, they are in the same boat. Speaking for myself, I am certainly not competent to do it. If I put my savings into a bank, I assume the bank is operating so efficiently that I am not going to lose my money. We are very much opposed to the suggestion that somehow the depositors should have to pick and choose which institutions are soundly managed. That is pushing the idea of the free enterprise system far beyond where it ought to go.

Mr. Deans: Caveat emptor.

Mr. Orlikow: Yes, caveat emptor. That would not work for most people in this country.

While this Bill seeks to increase the control the private sector has over this regulatory body, there is no corresponding increase in the specific obligations of the corporation. For example, there is no emphasis placed on the corporation's responsibility to inform its member institutions as to what is and what is not insured. Remember that Saskatchewan trust company which was liquidated. It was telling its customers that their deposits were guaranteed by the CDIC when they were not. Not only was that institution making more than a major mistake, it was making a fraudulent claim, but the CDIC was remiss in not ensuring that its name was not used in that way.

Mr. Deans: It did nothing.

Mr. Orlikow: It did nothing about it. The CDIC's legal counsel said that, whether or not there was a legal obligation on the part of the Crown corporation, he knew of none under the Act. If that is true, and I am sure it is, then there is something very seriously wrong with this Act, indeed with all the legislation. While we are going to let this Bill go through at this stage, I want to warn the Minister that when she brings forward the promised legislation to deal with the whole question of the responsibilities of financial institutions, we will be examining the proposals with a very, very careful eye.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I merely have a few very brief comments to make in order to explain our position on that vote. We do not feel the Government acted promptly on this matter. It is unusual in my view for a Government to legislate retroactively, and I would urge my Progressive Conservative colleagues opposite to look back at the history of their own party. They consistantly fought retroactive measures in this House for a long time. One has to be reasonable and try to understand the situation. In my view, the Government should realize that retroactive legislation is something wrong, as I think most Members in this House will agree.

If this was urgent on February 5, when the Committee reported to this House, at that point they should have asked the House to pass the legislation post haste, instead of presenting us with a measure which, unlike most pieces of legislation, provides under Clause 5 that "Section 4 shall be deemed to have come into force on February 1, 1986".

Mr. Speaker, that is almost five months ago. The amendment introduced by my colleague for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) is merely aimed at amending the Act to read, like all other pieces of legislation, that this Bill will be deemed—that the effective date shall be: "5. Section 4 shall come into force on a day to be fixed by proclamation".

This by the way is being consistently done in this House, when the Government acts responsibly and normally.

For that reason, Mr. Speaker, we oppose such retroactivity and we feel the Government should provide explanations. This House has still to hear explanations; it has not been told why they waited for so long. We did not prevent the Bill from going through. We have had a very responsible approach to this debate. Second reading stage lasted one day; committee proceedings took hardly one day for preparation and another day for debate. But since that time, nothing was heard from the Government. However, the Minister comes in this House and suggests this is urgent. Well, this will be all, but the Government should understand that retroactivity should not become a habit.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I believe it might be possible, if you were to seek the consent of the House, to have the vote just taken applied to Motions Nos. 2, 3, and 5.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Gauthier: Not to Motion No. 3.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Motion No. 3 must be put separately to the House, but the vote just taken can apply to Motions Nos. 2 and 5, if that is agreed, with the addition of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I just did it. The next question is on Motion No. 2. Mr. Riis moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-86, be amended in Clause 1 by striking out line 25 to 30 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"Board of Directors

(a) if the person is employed in any capacity in the Public Service of Canada or holds any office or position of which any salary or other remuneration is payable out of public moneys; and

(b) unless the person complies with the following:

(i) that within sixty days of appointment and thereafter annually, the person reports in writing and in confidence to the chairman all direct and indirect interests the person holds in member institutions;

(ii) that as a director, the person is required to divest himself of any direct or indirect interests in any shareholding that is in excess of 10 per cent of the outstanding shares of any class of share of a member institution or where the chairman is of the view that the shareholding constitutes a significant interest in the member institution; and

(iii) subject to the chairman's request, that the person divests himself of shares that are pledged to a lending institution as collateral for loans made to the person, and such divestment shall be accomplished by selling the shares in an arms length transaction or by placing the shares in a trust."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I declare Motion No. 6 lost.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for Minister of State for Finance) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Canada Shipping Act

CANADA SHIPPING ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Mr. Hnatyshyn moved that Bill C-75, an Act to amend the Canada Shipping Act and to amend the Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act, the Maritime Code Act and the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act in consequence thereof, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Angus: I rise on a point of order. Looking at the clock, Mr. Speaker, would you allow us to call it six o'clock? It is a very important Bill and it would be inappropriate for the Opposition to have to split the time between two days. I would ask you to give consideration to this request, Sir.

Mr. Ouellet: I would like to address this point of order, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

I understand that the Minister, at the explicit request of the Quebec Premier, will be meeting next Monday with the Quebec Minister of Transport who has precise objections to make to Bill C-75. I find it rather surprising that without any notice the Government has suddenly introduced a bill and, certainly, Mr. Speaker, I would like you to look at the clock and say it is 6 o'clock.

[English]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I know that the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) who is a respected parliamentarian would not want to inject an unfortunate partisan note in this matter. As the Hon. Member will know and as Members will know, at the request of the Opposition I was quite prepared to put third reading debate over for two weeks in order to make sure that the committee was back and Members were available.

Mr. Ouellet: We would have liked two years.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There is a quid pro quo for my putting it over. I thought we would have an expeditious debate at third reading stage. On the other hand, it being almost six o'clock, on the basis that this in no way interferes with the adjournment proceedings, I think we can accommodate that request to call it 6 o'clock. I am quite prepared to put third reading debate over until next week when I know the matter will receive expeditious treatment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unaimous consent to call it six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS—TOXIC RAIN—PROVISIONS OF FORTHCOMING LEGISLATION

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I keep moving around at the behest of the House Leader, I believe. On April 28 I put a question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mr. Gurbin). In part it reads:

> Would the Parliamentary Secretary advise the House whether the new proposed Environmental Contaminants Act will deal with this problem and effectively eliminate the health threat posed to Canadians by this toxic rain?

That question on April 28 was prompted by a report that had been published shortly before that time, a report of a study that had been made by the Canadian Environmental Law Research Foundation and by the United States Environmental Law Institute. That study contained a number of very significant and interesting facts and figures.

First, it indicated that both Canada and the United States are threatened by toxic rain or, if you will, by toxic rain fallout. Toxic rain was identified as the worst type of pollution, worse than acid rain. Acid rain has been considered all across North America and Europe as an extremely potent form of pollution. It was identified as well that toxic rain contains some 1,000 different chemicals produced industrially, including chemicals such as dioxin and PCBs. In addition to that, the report identified that these industrial emissions mixed with water vapour form polluted clouds which then condense in the form of rain or snow. They fall to earth, into lakes, rivers and streams as well as into the fields and communities around us. In fact, some 46,000 tonnes a year of this toxic rain and the pollutants in toxic rain come down on Lake Ontario alone.

This toxic rain is what we were talking about when we dealt with the great industrial emission disaster in India a short time ago, the Bhopal disaster in which industrial emissions condensed and caused such devastation in India. There was loss of life and injuries not only to the present generation, but to future generations as well. It was indicated in the study that toxic rain threatened not only our drinking water, but also our food. It accumulates in human tissue and is one of the great causes of respiratory problems in human beings.

This is not the first time that we have heard about toxic rain, Mr. Speaker. We are not as familiar with toxic rain as we are with acid rain. We are very familiar with the problem of acid rain. It is caused by two types of industrial pollutants: sulphuric dioxide and various nitrogen oxides. Those particular forms of pollutants that we have been able to identify come from specific sources. They come from smelters such as those in northern Ontario at Inco and Falconbridge, northern Quebec, from coal-fired power plants and also from automobile emissions. Those have been identified over a period of time as the sources of acid rain, which is one form of toxic rain.

• (1750)

The Government has taken some action on acid rain. It took action a few months ago by indicating that there was money put aside to clean up the smelters in the country, particularly the Inco Falconbridge smelters and the Noranda smelters. The Government indicated that approximately $150 million had been put aside for that and that there would be action taken. Unfortunately, we have seen no action to date.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) met with President Reagan on two occasions and discussed the issue of acid rain in the United States. Again there were promises of action. We have not seen very much so far, but there is some indication of movement in the United States Congress. There have also been promises of car emission standards to go into effect on the 1987 car models. That has not occurred as yet and we are still waiting for 1987.

Acid rain has been a problem to deal with. If acid rain has been a problem to deal with, surely toxic rain will be much more difficult because it will be difficult to identify the sources of toxic rain and that much more difficult to find solutions for them.

In his answer on April 28, the Parliamentary Secretary indicated that legislation which was coming forward from the Government would deal with this problem. He identified two particular pieces of legislation, the Environmental Contaminants Act and the Environmental Protection Act. I know that the Parliamentary Secretary is a very sincere and dedicated man who is truly concerned about the health of Canadians and the problems of acid rain, toxic rain, and all weather pollutants which we face. I would like to hear from the Parliamentary Secretary tonight specifically how those two pieces of legislation will deal with this problem. I hope that he will set out for us very succinctly and in very specific terms how the Government proposes to solve the problem of toxic rain. It is no longer a matter to be taken lightly. It is an extremely serious matter which must be addressed as quickly as possible. I hope that, in addition to indicating specifically how that legislation will deal with the subject, he will tell us specifically when we can expect first reading of the Bills involving these changes.

Mr. Mel Gass (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to the Hon. Member's question as to whether the new proposed Environmental Contaminants Act will deal with the problem of toxic rain and effectively eliminate the health threat posed by it to Canadians.

The report of the Canadian Environmental Law Research Foundation echoes the concerns of the Government on the issue of toxic rain. I am sure the Hon. Member is aware of the high priority that the Government has attached to the problem of acid rain and that we have been actively addressing the issue for some time. I am also sure that the Hon. Member is aware of the very significant progress that we have made in the past two years toward coming to grips with this problem in concert with provincial governments and the Government of the United States. The Government will continue to pursue this issue vigorously until the problem is resolved.

Toxic rain is but one warning symptom of the broader problem of toxic chemicals that Canadians face as society learns to deal with both the benefits and risks of living with chemicals. In the past we have approached toxic chemical problems by crisis management. We have dealt with problems after they have become evident. This has led to difficult and very costly remedial measures and clean-ups.

The Government believes it is no longer adequate in this country to deal with toxic chemicals after the problems are detected. Environment Canada has been actively pursuing a new comprehensive management approach for toxic chemicals, an approach which manages chemicals throughout their life cycle in a manner that prevents chemical leakage into the environment in the first place. This approach will mean that at any point in the life of a chemical, from cradle to grave—that is from its introduction into trade and commerce, its manufacturing, its transportation, its use and ultimately its disposal—all those who deal with the chemical must act in a responsible manner to protect the environment and the health of Canadians.

The new legislation, whether it be in the form of a revised and enhanced Environmental Contaminants Act or a new Environmental Protection Act, will be a key element of this new approach. The proposed Act will, through a broadly defined prohibition and regulation-making section, allow interventions to regulate the crucial phases of a toxic chemical's life cycle. It will make significant improvements to our ability to manage chemicals to prevent problems such as toxic rain, as well as to clean up the problems which we face today.

However, while the new legislation will be a valuable tool to address made-in-Canada problems, it will not solve those that come to us from outside our borders. Solutions to those problems will only arise out of ongoing consultations and actions with other governments.

In conclusion, let me assure the Hon. Member that the Government is fully committed to protecting the environment and Canadians from the threat of toxic chemicals, whatever their source.

AGRICULTURE—SIGNING OF SUB-AGREEMENT WITH QUEBEC—EVOLUTION OF SITUATION

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, on April 29, 1984, I called on the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) to report on the status of the matter concerning the sub-agreement with Quebec on agriculture. I am quite pleased to see this evening that the Minister of Agriculture has taken this opportunity to provide me with details concerning his answer given on April 29. I conclude that the Minister of Agriculture is quite aware of our national problems and is trying to solve the problems that arise in our respective constituencies.

I know that the Minister of Agriculture did not wait for the signature of that agreement involving $36 million to implement measures to promote agriculture in Quebec and in my own constituency.

Quite a number of events have taken place in parallel with the negotiations that led to the agreement on agriculture. For instance, since September 1984, our farmers have been enjoying a 5 1/2 cents reduction on their farm fuel, and that amount will be added to the 1 1/2 cent that all commercial undertakings can claim from the Government for the fuel which they have used.

Moreover, the Government has announced substantial and significant reductions in the interest rates charged by the Farm Credit Corporation and those rates are the lowest since 1979.

We also recall that the Minister negotiated a very positive conclusion to a specific problem with the United States when it was time to convince them not to apply an import tax on Canadian pork carcasses. In so doing, the Minister convinced a large number of pork producers in my constituency about the viability and long-term profitability of their operations.

It should also be mentioned that this same Minister has announced to farmers, to the dairy producers of Canada a dairy policy for the next five years. As we know, the Province of Quebec accounts for 50 per cent of Canadian dairy production. I therefore want to tell the Minister that not only was that action very well perceived in my constituency, but it was commended by Mr. Jacques Boucher, Chairman of the Union des producteurs agricoles, in an editorial in La terre de chez-nous, and I quote: "We welcome a policy that ensures stability in our industry for another five years".

It should also be emphasized that we did not wait for the signing of the agreement to study the problem faced by our producers of maple syrup and maple products. Indeed, a major survey will be made, more specifically with the constituency of Lotbinière as a simpling base, over the coming months. This also speaks well for this Government and our Minister of Agriculture.

Finally we know that a good many farmers are experiencing serious financial problems, so our Government set up a mortgage loan program under which repayments and costs are based on commodity prices. Thus our farmers have the option of making larger payments in good crop years and when commodity prices are higher, and they can gear their interest rates to the quality and sale prices of their crops.

Finally we did not wait until the agreement was signed to allow farmers to sell their farm or business when they reach a given age, without being penalized through levies on capital gains. The result of this was that we immediately repealed the capital gains tax on the sale of a farm so that the business could be kept operating profitably and that people who spent their lives doing farm work might look forward to a decent retirement.

I thank the Minister of Agriculture and I hope to have more explanations concerning the signature of the Canada-Quebec sub-agreement.

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I want to express my appreciation for the kind remarks by the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine). Obviously the Hon. Member is a very intelligent, hard-working, industrious Member of Parliament and represents his constituents well. Indeed, he carries a very strong and continuing interest in the welfare of the agricultural community, not only in his province but in the country as a whole. He regularly attends rural caucus meetings and communicates problems on behalf of his constituents to me on a frequent and regular basis. It is a pleasure to be associated with him.

The Hon. Member has utilized what little time is available to him tonight to point to some of the major initiatives and programs we brought forward for the benefit not only of Quebec agriculture, but of Canadian agriculture. I am sure that he, if time permitted, would have made the observation that since we assumed office, we have taken somewhere in the vicinity of 235 initiatives, directing well over $5 billion to our agricultural industry. At the same time we should take note of the Prime Minister's observation as of April 30, when we delivered the last farm finance package, that indeed more had to be done.

Coming specifically to the question the Hon. Member raised, let me tell him that in March of this year I wrote to my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture of the Province of Quebec, requesting that he, on behalf of his Government, make a decision with respect to signing an agricultural sub-agreement. We had made representations on this subject to the previous Government. However, they could not make up their minds as to whether they wanted to sign an agreement both in agriculture and fisheries or on how to divide the federal allocation.

With the election of a new Government, the new Minister responded to my letter on April 23, I believe, indicating they had taken the decision and he was prepared to enter into an agricultural sub-agreement to the extent of some $36 million. Most of that money will be spent in research and development, and again we are happy to sign an agreement of that kind because of the priority we place on research and development. I have replied to the Minister, indicating that we should instruct the appropriate officials in both our Departments to get together and work out the details. It is my understanding, from information I received earlier today, that the meeting will indeed take place next week.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS—PCBS—MOBILE WASTE DISPOSAL UNIT

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, the question I wish to address this evening is one I raised with the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) during Question Period on May 2. It has to do with authorizing a revolutionary waste disposal unit for use in Canada. There are a number of industrial waste dump sites, particularly in southern Ontario, which allow the seepage of harmful chemicals into waterways like the Niagara River and, from there, into our drinking water. It is a source of concern to all who live in the densely populated regions of southern Ontario. As you and I both know, the federal Government is very concerned about this matter.

• (1805)

Recently the Environment Minister and the Minister responsible for emergency planning announced steps to respond to major chemical accidents in Canada. This is an important and timely development. My concern, however, is with the every-day dumping of chemical waste products from Canadian and American sources. We know that putting it into containers will not help. Over time containers deteriorate and we are right back where we started.

As I mentioned earlier in this House, the E. S. Fox Company, located in my riding of Welland, has developed a mobile waste disposal unit called the pyroplasma, which has been proven effective in the destruction of PCBs. This unit is unique. Its competition is essentially incinerators which have approximately a 99.99 per cent destruction efficiency rate. The pyroplasma unit has an unofficial destruction efficiency rate of 99.9999999 per cent. This is a consistent percentage when one is talking of a million pounds of waste material. Those extra nines make a lot of difference.

The provincial and federal Governments have actively participated in developing test procedures which will set permit application guidelines for waste disposal units. The commitment is there, but it is taking a long time.

The Province of Ontario has asked for proposals to clean up the Smithville site. These are to be submitted within the next few days. The local public know what the pyroplasma can do and want it to be used. They know what those extra nines mean. Other Canadians living close to industrial dumping sites are crying out for this kind of efficient answer to the problem.

The federal and provincial Governments have already invested half a million dollars into this project. The United States awarded the E. S. Fox Company a $2 million demonstration contract to finance the actual building of the unit, which could then be used to clean up the Love Canal area in New York State. Earlier this month the pyroplasma was set up at that site.

After four or five months of test procedures on dioxin and more than 100 other chemicals located there, it will be put into full use in clean-up operations.

Over the past 10 years 17,000 gallons of waste products have been pumped out of the ground and stored at the Love Canal site. When the pyroplasma is put into full operation, it will take only 30 days to destroy that material. The company will go back once a year to destroy the waste which has been pumped out over that year.

We can all be very proud of the fact that this technology has been developed entirely in Canada. Despite considerable investment of American funds, it is still wholly owned by a Canadian company, a company which is continually looking at new ways to combat environmental problems.

At present the pyroplasma is being used to destroy liquid industrial waste. The same technology can be used on solid waste products. It is merely a matter of developing different material handling technology. There have been offers to fund the research necessary to develop such technology, provided free access to the technology is given in return. The company does not want to relinquish control to only one interested party. Too much has been invested. The pyroplasma has been extensively tested in Kingston under the supervision and with the financial backing of both federal and provincial Governments. The unit is completely mobile and can be set up in just a few days. What this will mean in future emergency clean-up situations is incredible.

The American Environmental Protection Agency ranks the pyroplasma in the top five technologies for waste disposal in the world. The word in the hallways at the EPA meeting last month was that this was the "—hottest piece of chemistry to come down the road in years".

My question was specifically when we could start putting this amazing technology to work in Canada. The question is a difficult one given the divided jurisdiction in the matter, but I firmly believe the clean-up of the environment is a national concern and one which must be addressed here in the House of Commons.

• (1810)

Mr. Mel Gass (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, although the disposal and destruction of hazardous wastes in Canada are the responsibility of the provinces, the federal Government is actively involved in the search for solutions. Not one government can confront this issue on its own. It is for this reason that the federal-provincial Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers has initiated work on the development of a national action plan for the management of hazardous wastes in Canada. Along with this initiative, CCREM has already developed and implemented a national action plan aimed at eliminating PCBs from the Canadian environment. The plan has four basic objectives; first, the establishment of destruction facilities; second, the creation of national standards for the transportation and destruction of PCBs; third, the creation of national environmental quality objectives for PCBs; fourth, the dissemination of factual information on PCBs.

Ever since the Kenora spill, PCBs have been of particular concern to the Canadian public. Hardly a day seems to pass when there is not a new revelation of PCBs found at yet another location. This is a concern which I believe will be alleviated by the initiatives now under way by the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers. It is a concern which will be further alleviated by the fact that technologies do exist to destroy PCBs.

On May 2, the Hon. Member for Welland (Mr. Pietz) questioned the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) about a hazardous waste disposal unit which will be tested at the Love Canal site this summer. I am happy to report that the unit in question was designed and built in Canada and was successfully tested for PCB destruction. This plasma arc destruction unit is mounted on a 45-foot trailer and can be readily moved to PCB disposal sites. The unit is but one of a number of fixed and transportable mobile PCB destruction technologies which are coming on line for commercial application in Canada.

On April 5 of this year, the Ontario Government gazetted a new regulation under its Environmental Protection Act for transportable mobile PCB destruction facilities. This effort to regulate these facilities is a major step forward in eliminating PCBs from the Canadian environment. With this new regulation, companies can now begin applying to the province for approval to operate their PCB destruction facilities.

Initiatives are now under way in other provinces in Canada to rid ourselves of PCB wastes. British Columbia has taken an active role in determining suitable transportable mobile technologies for destroying PCBs in western Canada. Alberta has selected a site for its hazardous waste facility and expects it to be fully operational by 1988. Saskatchewan has established a permanent indoor facility in Regina for a mobile low concentration PCB treatment process which has been in use in the province since 1983. Quebec has initiated a search for a suitable location for destruction facilities. These are just some of the initiatives now taking place across Canada.

As our world becomes more complex, so do the environmental problems we must confront. Special efforts to reach a consensus on the best solutions for different problems are required if solutions are to be found and acted upon. PCBs provide a model of federal-provincial co-operation in confronting a problem and finding solutions to that problem. The lessons learned on this issue will no doubt be of immense use to us in solving other issues which threaten our environment.

SOCIAL SECURITY

NEED FOR REFORM OF PROGRAMS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, an article in La Presse indicates that the Conservative Government has decided to hire 250 inspectors to look into unemployment insurance abuses. We have also learned that the provincial Government is about to axe social welfare benefits.

Mr. Speaker, both approaches clearly show that Governments should get together and implement a guaranteed minimum income, or a minimum monthly income.

Mr. Speaker, instead of taking this piecemeal approach and trying to look for abusers, the federal Government should forthwith convene all provinces and interested parties—and I think Canadians are ready for this—to launch a major reform of all social programs to help the needy, not to reduce the deficit.

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—TORONTO ARTS AGAINST APARTHEID FESTIVAL

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker:

> We must recognize that apartheid is the primary violence in South Africa. It's the violence of the migratory labour system, the violence of detention without trial, the violence that forces children to starve, the violence that stunts intellectual and spiritual growth—apartheid is an evil and immoral system which must be destroyed.

Those are the words of Bishop Desmond Tutu, the 1984 Nobel Peace Prize winner who will be in Toronto this weekend to join citizens of Metropolian Toronto and Canada to add their voices in support against apartheid.

The Toronto Arts Against Apartheid Festival Foundation has sponsored eight stimulating days of theatre, music, art, poetry, and discussions, designed to offer insights into the issues surrounding apartheid and to celebrate international equality and social justice.

The Toronto Arts Against Apartheid Festival is a celebration of freedom. Organizers are to be congratulated for this outstanding effort. They are sending a message to South Africa. Let us join them—South Africa will hear us.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

NON DELIVERY OF MAIL TO MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, since we are Members of Parliament, any Canadian wishing to express an opinion or concern may simply pick up a telephone to call us, or put their views down on paper and simply mail them to us postage free. I have in my hand an envelope which was properly addressed to me from Pointe aux Trembles in the Province of Quebec, but the Post Office deemed fit to affix a label to it and return it to the sender due to insufficient postage.

It seems to me that the Post Office is revoking our parliamentary privileges by acting in such an arbitrary manner. I realize that this may happen occasionally due to the volume of letters received at a post office, but when this happens three times to the same sender, there is no excuse. There are just too many examples of what is wrong with the Post Office these days.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

PURPOSE OF SCHEME—CRACKDOWN ON ABUSERS

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, unemployment insurance in Canada is supposed to be just that, insurance. It is insurance in that it provides needed assistance to those Canadians who find themselves out of work through no fault of their own. Unemployment insurance is not welfare and it is not a handout. Therefore it only makes sense for the Government to introduce a program that helps people on unemployment insurance to find work. The interviews that are slated to begin this summer do just that.

S.O. 21

Let the abusers of unemployment insurance beware. The interviews will also crack down on those who choose to abuse unemployment insurance at the expense of all Canadians. The unemployment insurance interviews will not be a witch hunt but a job hunt.

SHIPYARDS

REQUEST THAT ALL EMPLOYEES BE TREATED WITH JUSTICE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Last week, Mr. Speaker, before 2,000 people who came here to seek the Government's views on a shipbuilding policy, the Minister of State (Small Businesses)(Mr. Bissonnette) promised to initiate a dialogue with the unions. Silence still prevails today. The federal Government took court action against shipyard workers whose only sin was to ask the Government to respect their rights.

[English]

The Government refused a conciliation board report and now has taken the unprecedented step of taking the shipyard workers to court for trying to exercise their rights to parity in pay scales and acceptance of a conciliation board report.

We urge the Government not to take the workers to court and in fact to agree to the conciliation board report which simply asks that East Coast maritime workers be paid the same as their West Coast counterparts. It is only fair and just. Let us stop the blustering heard in the House of Commons by the Minister of State for Small Businesses (Mr. Bissonnette) and start talking with the unions across the country so that they can rest assured that at least—

VIA RAIL

TRANSFER OF JOBS FROM WINNIPEG TO MONTREAL

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, VIA Rail announced yesterday that it will be consolidating its accounting department in Montreal within 90 days. This will mean the transfer of some 27 positions from Winnipeg to Montreal and the abolition of another 11 positions in Winnipeg. This is the kind of thing that for years Conservatives told Winnipegers would never happen if the Tories were in power to protect them.

Since the election of the Conservative Government in 1984, on railway matters alone there have been, among other things, a deferral of the VIA Rail maintenance shop, the attempted abolition by CN of the Prairie Region with Winnipeg as its headquarters and lately, instead of politically volatile moves, Winnipeg is being nickeled and dimed to death by moves like the one made yesterday by VIA, and by systematic downgrading of senior CN positions in Winnipeg and upgrading of those in Edmonton to which they increasingly report in a subordinate way. Manitoba Conservatives should all have bags over their heads.

SMALL BUSINESS

OTTAWA-CARLETON ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL—SUCCESS ACHIEVED IN 1985

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, 1985 was an important year for the Ottawa-Carleton Economic Development Council. It received strategic investments by two major U.S. companies. As well, 24 firms involving over 300 permanent jobs were assisted by the council in expansion or new investments.

The Government has always recognized the importance of small business as a key source of dynamism and innovation in the Canadian economy and the most important source of jobs in Canada today. The Government has brought in a wide-ranging series of co-ordinated actions to encourage private initiative and competitiveness in the Canadian economy. These initiatives of small business are aimed at inspiring growth and confidence in our economy.

• (1110)

The success of the Ottawa-Carleton Development Council in 1985 is one of the many successes our country is experiencing as a result of these initiatives.

A total of $7.6 billion in purchase orders went to the private sector in Ottawa-Carleton last year. This is what small business can do for a community and for our country. It represents diversification, new jobs, and new wealth.

FINANCE

ABUSES OF SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TAX CREDITS

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I draw to the attention of the House the implications of possibly the most costly mistake made in Canadian Government history. The Deputy Minister of Finance says that when the Liberal Finance Minister introduced SRTCs in 1983 there was a conscious choice to allow the "quick flips" that cost taxpayers a billion dollars and are now costing another half billion to investigate and prosecute.

The SRTC program was ill-conceived and politically irresponsible, compounded by the total lack of corrective action by Finance Department officials. They knew in advance about the costly flaws in this disastrous program, but it was the new Tory Government which stopped it a year and a half and hundreds of millions of dollars later.

We in the Government must make responsible decisions. However, the highly qualified professionals in the Public Service must be fully accountable in carrying them out, in monitoring them, and in advising immediately on corrective action if necessary. Taxpayers should expect no less, and I demand action on this vital issue.

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—PLIGHT OF DR. VLADMIR BRODSKY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I attended a press conference which was organized by Project Ploughshare, dealing with the serious plight of Dr. Vladmir Brodsky who is a Soviet citizen. The doctor's only crime was that he was a member of the Moscow Trust Group, a peace activist group in that country.

Unfortunately that conference was not attended by a large delegation of media members, and I am afraid that the message has not got out that it is very incumbent upon Canadians and the Canadian Government to make every effort to urge the Soviet Government to free Dr. Brodsky, who has provided a major, important, and significant effort in the Soviet Union to bring the message of peace to that Government.

Mr. Gorbachev has been very active in proposing a number of peace proposals. Those proposals cannot be taken seriously as long as that Government is repressing the right of Soviet citizens who are also interested in peace.

I hope all Members of the House will join with us in urging the Canadian Government to take up the case of Dr. Brodsky.

FISHERIES

SKEENA RIVER SYSTEM—SALMON HARVEST—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, residents of British Columbia have serious concerns about certain actions and subsequent lack of follow-up in recent months by the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon) and by the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie).

As provided under federal law, the Gitksan-Wet'suwet'en Tribal Council has enacted four fishing by-laws for the Skeena River system. The Council has specific studies related to the salmon stocks and mechanisms to promote conservation and enhancement, as well as selective harvesting. These principles are supported by all user groups on the Skeena.

The tempest arose as a result of the two Ministers producing a policy on co-management without any consultation whatsoever. The policy has been withdrawn, but the Ministers have hidden away from the real concerns of all residents—commercial, native, and sport. They have hidden from allocation and thus harmed the Gitksan-Wet'suwet'en aspirations and alarmed other users.

I have offered to chair a public meeting anywhere in the B.C. northwest prior to the laws becoming effective on June 15, 1986. Neither Minister has yet agreed to attend. This will lead to a dangerous and unnecessary confrontation—a result we must assume they intended.

FARM CREDIT CORPORATION

PENALTIES CHARGED ON MORTGAGE PAYMENTS

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, farmers are becoming increasingly nervous about the policies of the Farm Credit Corporation. Even though the Bank of Canada interest rate is 8.58 per cent today, many farmers are still caught in a mid-teen mortgage. The FCC still insists upon full penalties when farmers sell off land to pay mortgages. To cut down interest rates most banks forgive penalties, but the FCC refuses to do so.

Most farmers will not qualify for the 6 per cent commodity mortgage plan, and the way it is set up I am not sure they should apply. Farm credit needs to be overhauled, and there is a need for a pool of 6 per cent money which will be of some use to our farmers, if we are to carry on our cheap food policy.

ENERGY

LOW OIL PRICES—EFFECT ON CALGARY

Mr. Paul Gagnon (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, the people of Canada should know that more and more Calgarians are suffering the consequences of continuing low oil prices. For the four weeks ending May 16, 24 per cent more unemployment insurance claims were filed than in the same period last year. A large number of these claimants were engineers, geologists, managers, and clerical staff.

These are the people who helped build this dynamic industry. As it loses these professionals, the oil industry is losing the vital strength it will need to rebuild. Low world oil prices have come at a time when producers are burdened with over $22 billion of debt. The recent decline in interest rates of 2.75 per cent since February has thus been most welcome. I urge the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to continue his efforts to reduce interest rates further.

TRADE

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES—REQUEST FOR ROLLBACK

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister or the Minister of Finance. Now that the ill-conceived, confusing request by the Canadian Government for compensation has been refused by the United States Government, something that everyone except the Canadian Government knew would happen, what is the Government going to do? Instead of engaging in reckless retaliatory policies, why will the Prime Minister not deal directly with the President of the United States and ask for a rollback of the tariff and a standstill on harassment actions? Why is the Prime Minister afraid to talk to the President of the United States on this issue?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is not afraid to talk to anyone on any issue. I hear from the Hon. Member one thing, from the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount another thing, and Leader of the Official Opposition on something else. The confusion about this matter is over there.

We have had meetings with officials in Washington. We have had meetings with the industry here in Canada to understand its point of view on the issue. The Secretary of State for External Affairs is having an important meeting this afternoon with the Secretary of State, Mr. Shultz. This is a process which has a number of sides to it, as the Hon. Member I think should know. It is for that reason we are approaching this in a very responsible and measured way in order to understand clearly the implications before taking decisions.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, does the Minister of Finance not understand that this issue is of such significance that having a meeting in Washington with a group of officials is not the appropriate way to deal with it? It must be done on the level of heads of Government, one to another. Will the Government undertake serious action to get a rollback, and in the meetings today being held with Secretary of State Shultz will our Secretary of State for External Affairs be asking explicitly for a rollback of those tariffs and for a standstill on any future harrassment on the trade import issue as requested just yesterday by the Government's staunch Tory ally, Premier Getty of Alberta?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I caution the Hon. Member on the question of standstill. The question of standstill works both ways. Yes, there is a problem, as the Hon. Member and I both agree, a very important problem given rise to by the decision of the Americans last week on the shakes and shingles industry. But we may well, as a country, have some irritants, some concern going the other way, on which we might want to take action. Standstill would rob us of that possibility. That is a very important consideration we have to take in mind as we approach the whole question of standstill.

EMPLOYMENT SUPPORT ACT—PROVISION OF FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, so far the whole question of standstill has been a one-way street, not a two-way street, and we are on the receiving end of it. If the Government has failed in all its other initiatives, does the Minister intend to invoke the provisions of the Employment Support Act which was passed by this Parliament in 1971, which will provide direct financial assistance to the workers and to the industry that will enable them to stay in business until we can properly work our way out of this very difficult problem we have been put into by the Americans and by this Government?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should be very careful in saying that this Government put us into this problem. This decision, this action, was taken by the United States Government. It was not taken by the Government of Canada. That sort of distortion does not help anyone.

We met with the industry, as the Hon. Member knows, on Wednesday. We are having continuing discussions on the implications of the tariff as it relates to the domestic industry, and decisions will be taken in due course.

PRIME MINISTER'S CONTACTS WITH UNITED STATES PRESIDENT

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the Minister of Finance has been thrown into this situation as a penalty killer. I would like to give him the opportunity of being a bit more forthcoming.

The Minister of Justice has raised the issue of retaliation in the United States and the Minister of Finance alluded to that with respect to a standstill agreement. That would probably invoke a non-productive and costly trade war. We would like to hear from him on that.

Apparently the issue of compensation is no longer available. The one thing we do not know is why the Prime Minister has not simply spoken to the President directly. If he has, as we presume he has, will the Minister confirm it to the House?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, a week ago today the Hon. Member was raising the question of things we should do in retaliation and saying that we should call off these talks altogether. That was the flourish of rhetoric which came out of the Hon. Member's mouth. Three days later the Leader of the Opposition pulled his leash very toughly around his neck and said: "No, no, we are not going to have retaliation. We do not want to raise the stakes. We should go quietly and do what the Americans want us to do". Now he is again saying that we must have retaliation. The Hon. Member does not know where they are coming from. We have set out quite clearly the measured process that we are taking to come to a proper conclusion on this matter. The Hon. Member is well aware of those steps.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, they really know what amateur hour is in management of the public sector.

REQUEST FOR TARIFF ROLLBACK

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, with respect to that completely gratuitous comment, the suggestion was that these talks be suspended until this matter is dealt with. The Premiers have effectively put forward the same position. The Leader of our Party has backed that position from the outset. The only thing left that makes sense is to ask for a rollback of the tariff since all of the other elements are not there. Instead of recommending retaliation, as the Minister of Justice has done—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will the Member ask a question please?

Mr. Johnston: Why is the President not being asked to roll back the tariff?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): I think the President of the United States is very, very aware of the position taken by the Prime Minister in his letter to the President himself—

Ms. Copps: Brian got a busy signal.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —in the discussions which have been held with officials, and in the discussions that will be held this afternoon between Mr. Shultz and Mr. Clark. The position of the Government of Canada is very, very clear.

The management of this issue must be handled very carefully because of the complexity of the issue and the possible repercussions if things are not handled in the appropriate fashion. That is what we are working on in a measured way with the various contacts which we have had with the administration this week.

Oral Questions

AIR CANADA

SUSPENSION OF FLIGHT ATTENDANT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. Last Friday a matter of fundamental human rights was brought to the attention of the office of the Prime Minister, the Leader of the Opposition, and myself. I refer to the case of Toni Corrado, a 13-year employee of Air Canada who had been, to use the phrase of Air Canada, "taken out of service" for a week because she had the audacity to act under the provisions of freedom of expression in the Charter, in replying to questions.

Has the Deputy Prime Minister or the Government looked into the proceedings which took place yesterday which can only be described as a kangaroo court, a violation of both the process and substance of freedom? Will they take action immediately to restore the right to work to Toni Corrado, a 13-year good employee of Air Canada?

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I can simply reassure the hon. gentleman that it is not the intention of the Government to intervene in what we consider to be a purely internal matter.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, it is a sad day when, in government, a Party which voted for the Charter of Human Rights refers a case as important as this to a Crown corporation as being an internal matter. We see it as a fundamental question of justice in which the Prime Minister's office and the Minister of Justice should be involved.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CONDUCT OF HEARING

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I will direct my supplementary question to the Deputy Prime Minister. The hearing given by Air Canada to this employee yesterday allowed only 15 minutes of testimony by her. It did not include any supporting witnesses, such as other flight attendants who were on the flight, and referred to no specific rule being broken by this employee. Does the Deputy Prime Minister not see this, apart from the substance, as a violation of due process, and will he intervene directly to see justice is restored to this woman?

• (1125)

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman fails to take into account the fact that due process is now taking place. The appeal procedure has started, and I simply assure him that the lady in question returns to work this weekend and will remain at work until such time as the appeal process has been exhausted.

Oral Questions

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ACTION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my final question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Since it is clearly open to the Government, after consultation with Air Canada, to involve itself in this process, and since it is clear to anyone who has looked with care at the facts that an injustice has been done, instead of having this unfairness spin out for many days, possibly months, will the Government do the correct thing for a good employee and let her return to work with dignity?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman is, I suppose, better equipped than most of us when he stands in his place and asks us to believe that what he asserts is fact. I did not attend that hearing. I dare say he did not either. The Parliamentary Secretary informed the House that there is an appeal process and that is now being pursued. The hon. gentleman and his supporters would be the first to scream blue murder if the Government interfered with that due process. Surely he should have the decency to allow that appeal process, which is in place pursuant to a collective agreement, to come to a conclusion.

TRADE

U.S. TARIFF ON CANADIAN CEDAR SHAKES AND SHINGLES—COMPENSATION ISSUE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. He said that the Government has been carefully managing the very serious issue of the 35 per cent duty on cedar shakes and shingles. How can he say that when the Government has wasted almost a whole week seeking compensation from the Americans when he, the Prime Minister, and the Secretary of State for External Affairs should have known from the beginning that the U.S. had no legal authority to grant such compensation in the first place? Why did the Government waste precious time in this way? Is this not another example of the way the Government is handling this matter as being nothing more than amateur hour on the Rideau?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, that stopped on September 4, 1984.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We had discussions with U.S. officials and it was not at all clear what their position was going to be on the question of compensation. Following discussions in Washington it did become clear and they indicated their decision to us. However, it was not until then that we could give up that possibility. I am sure the Hon. Member would have been the first on his feet flapping away, telling us we had let go one option we could have taken had we done that at an early stage, as he now suggests we should have done.

TERMS OF U.S. TARIFF ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have in my hand the official announcement of the duty from Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Michael B. Smith which says: "Because this tariff is not bound under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade we will not have to compensate our trading partners for any damage to their exports resulting from the tariff increase."

Did the Minister and his Government not have this release? Did they not know this from the beginning? Whatever the Minister says, this is obviously another example of the incompetence of this Government when it comes to handling our trade relations with the U.S.

• (1130)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member makes a point that Mr. Smith said they did not have to provide compensation. Surely it is a responsibility of a Government to press the other side to make sure there are not other reasons which might allow them to give compensation. When we raised this matter with them earlier this week they said it was a matter to be considered. They spent some time considering that and came back with their answer to us at the meeting subsequent to that. It was not a closed door by any means when the matter was first raised by our Government.

REQUEST THAT INDUSTRY AND UNIONS BE INVOLVED IN NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Since compensation from the United States on shakes and shingles never was an option and was never supported by the Canadian industry, I would like to ask the Minister if his Government will guarantee that from this moment forward representatives of the shake and shingle industry and the workers will be directly involved in the negotiations regarding the removal of the 35 per cent duty and the definition of market share processes that are going on right now?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I was not at the meeting on Wednesday which took place at lunch time, but I believe it was indicated to the industry at that time that we intended to keep in close touch with them regarding any responses that might be taken in this particular matter.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORTS

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, since the Prime Minister has refused to call the President of the United States over this unfair duty against Canada's shake and shingle industry, would the Minister of Finance advise this House whether he has been or will be making direct representations to the United States before Monday, opposing the countervail action against Canadian softwood, because as of Monday it will become a legal process, whereas right now there is still a political opening to allow for those kinds of representations?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has not refused to speak to the President of the United States. I think the Hon. Member knows full well that the dialogue between this Prime Minister and this President has been as open as any dialogue between any two leaders in the history of the two countries.

In response to the Hon. Member's question, the Secretary of State for External Affairs will be meeting with Mr. Shultz later on today, and a number of matters in relation to trade problems with the United States will be raised at that time.

AIR CANADA

SUSPENSION OF FLIGHT ATTENDANT—REGIME ESTABLISHED IN TRANSPORT MINISTRY

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport.

Recently, a CBC reporter was taken to court because he made our airport security systems look ridiculous.

Yesterday, we heard that a stewardess was suspended because she said in public what thousands of Canadians are thinking, namely that the Government is incompetent and corrupt.

Could the Parliamentary Secretary inform the House what inspired the Department of Transport to indulge in this kind of intimidation?

[English]

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think that question hardly befits the spokesman. However, I will take notice of it and bring it to the Minister's attention. He might reply when he returns.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Does the Parliamentary Secretary realize that under our legislation, the Minister of Transport can give instructions to Air Canada? And will the Minister intervene within the next few days to exonerate the stewardess who was erroneously suspended, and will he do so as soon as possible, so as not to perpetuate this injustice?

[English]

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member draws some inferences which are quite unfair and unjust. I do not think that, as with his colleague in the New Democratic Party, that that distinguished Member, a former Cabinet Minister, would sit still for one minute if we were seen to be interfering with what is due process. There is a point in time when the representation of the Member can be considered, but not until such time as due process has been allowed to run its course.

SUSPENSION OF FLIGHT ATTENDANT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Government appears to wish to wash its hands of the disgraceful injustice which occurred in Air Canada yesterday when a flight attendant was suspended for 30 days without pay. Does the Deputy Prime Minister not agree that since the complaint was sent to the Government, not to Air Canada, that the Government has a duty and a responsibility to have this injustice reversed, just as his Party demanded when they were in opposition, of a previous administration, in the firing of Neil Fraser for discussing metrication?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): The two cases bear no resemblance whatsoever, in my view. I am very surprised that the Hon. Member for Regina West would be standing in his place advocating that the Government should interfere with a process that is enshrined in a collective bargaining agreement between labour and management, a process set in place to deal with matters of this nature. Surely the hon. gentleman should be answering the question of why he should be suggesting that this collective bargaining provision in their own agreement should be breached in these circumstances.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, it should never have happened in the first place if Air Canada and the cabinet Minister concerned agreed that this was not worthy of this kind of treatment.

The executive correspondence unit of the Ministry of Transport sent three documents to Air Canada numbered one of three, two of three, and three of three. At the hearing yesterday only two of three and three of three were provided to the flight attendant and her union representatives. I would like to know if this House, the flight attendant, and the union can have page one of three? What is on it, and can we have it?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I am unaware of the documents to which the hon. gentleman refers. They are recorded now on the "blues". I will look at the details and the Minister of Transport will undoubtedly, if the documents are under his jurisdiction, see to it that consideration is given to the request made by the hon. gentleman.

Oral Questions

CHALLENGE '86

YOUTH SUMMER EMPLOYMENT—ALLOCATION OF FUNDS TO PRIVATE AND NON-PRIVATE SECTORS

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, all Members of the House are interested in the summer youth employment programs. Now that most of the grants have been assigned under the SEED Program in Challenge '86, could the Minister tell the House how those funds have been allocated to the private sector in relation to the non-private sector, and what is the variation of those funds from province to province?

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to say that Challenge '86 has been a great success this year. We are going to have many young people employed this summer so they may earn their tuition and go back to school in the fall.

As for the allocation of money to the private and the public sector, it changes according to the different provinces. The average is 35 per cent in the private sector and 65 per cent for the non-private sector. The difference varies from, let's say, 85 per cent public in Newfoundland to 51 per cent public in Alberta.

AIR CANADA

FLIGHT ATTENDANT'S SUSPENSION—REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT INTERVENE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. I hope he does not hide behind the umbrella or the mask of a collective agreement. My question concerns the fundamental right of free speech for every Canadian. I would like to ask him why the Government does not exercise its power under the Financial Administration Act to issue a written directive to Air Canada demanding that it reinstate this hôtesse de l'air without any penalty?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): There is a process in place that is being followed. I am surprised that the Hon. Member would be suggesting that we interfere with a proper and appropriate process that is in place, and not allow the appeal process to be exhausted. Surely that is within the rights of those individuals who are involved.

• (1140)

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): It was his political Party, the Progressive Conservative Party, that set this issue in motion. Why does the Minister choose to ignore his Government's responsibility under the Financial Administration Act, which empowers his Government to issue a written directive demanding that Air Canada restore the right of free speech so that every person who works for Air Canada, every federal government employee, and indeed every Canadian, can feel free to speak out without the kind of harassment that has been evident in this particular case?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member, being an expert in harassment, knows of course of what she speaks.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ouellet: That is disgraceful for a Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Nielsen: It is not truthful to say that the Progressive Conservative Party was responsible for originating this matter. The correspondence that was forwarded to the Minister was immediately forwarded to the management of Air Canada which has dealt with it as a management problem, and there is now an appeal process in place which all Members should have the decency to allow to come to completion.

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SALT II AGREEMENT—ALLEGED VIOLATIONS BY U.S.S.R.

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence. In view of everyone's grave concern about the decision of the United States to breach the limits of the SALT II Agreement, will the Minister tell the House, and indeed the Canadian public, what are the alleged violations on the part of the Soviet Union? The Prime Minister said that they were too numerous to mention. Apart from the question of the SS-25, upon which there is a difference of opinion within NATO, what are the violations by the Soviet Union?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I believe that it is inaccurate for the Hon. Member to say that the United States has made a decision to breach SALT II. My understanding of the President's statement does not accord with that at all. The Prime Minister stated in Halifax that he did not believe that any breach of the SALT II provisions would find support in NATO and certainly would not find support in Canada. With respect to the alleged violations, I do not believe I have the time to go into detail on the floor of the House of Commons, unless the Hon. Member wishes to devote her supplementary question to that subject again and I will outline some of them.

NATURE OF VIOLATIONS

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister said: "I could mention quite a few but they are obvious to everyone." Everyone I have asked at the Arms Control Centre and elsewhere cannot give me examples apart from the question of the SS-25. It is incumbent upon the Department and the Government to tell us what these violations are. I ask the Minister to do so now.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, with respect to the arms limitation arrangements which now exist between the Soviet Union and the United States, it is not the United States, for instance, that has the world's only existing anti-ballistic missile defence system—

Ms. Jewett: That is the ABM treaty. I am talking about SALT II.

Mr. Nielsen: That system is in the Soviet Union.

Ms. Jewett: You don't even know that it is the ABM.

Mr. Nielsen: It is not the United States that has the only ASATS system in the world. That is the Soviet Union. It is not the United States, or indeed any of the NATO allies, that continually breaches the production and use of chemical weapons. That is the Soviet Union, and just to mention a few.

Ms. Jewett: I am talking about SALT II.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

VETERANS INDEPENDENCE PROGRAM—ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. The Veterans Independence Program provides elderly and aging veterans with the opportunity to remain healthy and independent in their own homes at a fraction of the cost of institutional care. Will the Minister give consideration to enlarging the eligibility criteria in order that more veterans may qualify for this program?

Hon. George Hees (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to advise the Hon. Member, who has always been very active on behalf of veterans generally, that we are now helping over 10,000 veterans remain in their own homes or communities where, as he and I know, they are far happier than in an institution. Since September, 1984, eligibility for the Veterans Independence Program has been expanded twice and a further expansion is planned for next January. I agree with the Hon. Member that a faster expansion is desirable. I assure him that I will take his question as a representation and give it very serious consideration. I thank him for this most constructive question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

TRADE

PROTECTION OF CANADIAN JOBS—MEASURES GOVERNMENT INTENDS TO TAKE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Last Friday, the Prime Minister, our expert on belabouring the obvious, took a strong stand against the U.S. President. He said he would retaliate. On Monday, he retreated and said: No, we are going to ask for compensation. Yesterday, we heard that the U.S. President gave his Canadian lackey the following answer: No compensation. Could the Minister of Finance tell the House today what the Conservative Government is going to do to save the jobs of Canadian men and women? What concrete measures are going to be taken? I mean real action, not bluff.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's rhetoric suggests that we should have jumped right out of our seats last Friday and taken immediate retaliatory action. Shortly after that he heard his Leader say that maybe we should not use retaliation. We have said quite consistently that there will be a response from the Government that will be made in a measured way, that will be made after having an opportunity to respond to the concerns of the union and of management. It will be made after discussions with the United States, because if there is one thing that I believe is quite clear and on which many people have agreed it is that this should not be the start of a trade war with the United States. The long term objective is to negotiate a comprehensive trade agreement with the United States and we must not lose sight of that.

[Translation]

RECOMMENDATION THAT GOVERNMENT ASSERT ITSELF IN TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. Last week, it was the Prime Minister who said here in the House that he would make use of reprisals against the U.S. Government. He is the one who is belabouring the obvious! Could the Minister ask the Prime Minister to act responsibly and call the U.S. President, and ask him to intervene and withdraw these measures to protect Canadian jobs? Could he ask the Prime Minister to take concrete measures and take a firm stand on free trade, instead of caving in before the negotiations have hardly started?

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member had been paying attention to Question Period this week he would have understood that we have met with the representatives of the industry, both management and labour, and have met with representatives of the U.S. administration. The Secretary of State for External Affairs will be meeting with Mr. Shultz this afternoon. These discussions are very important in developing the appropriate response. That response will be made in due course.

WOMEN

INQUIRY IF GROUPS SUBSIDIZED LAST YEAR WILL RECEIVE SAME AID THIS YEAR

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State and concerns women's groups who have yet to receive their subsidies this year. Can the Minister give the House the assurance that those groups that were subsidized last year and which still meet program requirements will at least receive the same measure of financial support they did last year?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, we can give the Hon. Member the assurance that the Department of the Secretary of State analyzes requests from women's groups, as it is supposed to do, and when these groups meet the criteria, as the Hon. Member pointed out, we will of course provide them with support, on the basis of the funds allocated to the Department of the Secretary of State.

[English]

SIZE OF FUNDING

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister put to rest fears that there will be drastic cut-backs throughout the program? All the women's groups will be affected by this. They have received only 40 per cent of their funds this year. We have not heard answers yet about how much money is in the program for the groups that are doing such an important job in the voluntary sector.

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member mentions radical cuts, this can of course be interpreted in many ways. We have nearly completed the Department's budget assessment process, and as I said before, I think that the funding these groups will receive will depend on our finances. However, if we look at women's groups in general in this country, I do not think there will be any what could be called radical cuts. There may be some adjustments, but I repeat, these will not be what you refer to as radical cuts.

HOUSING

RESIDENTIAL REHABILITATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM—REQUEST FOR ADVANCE FUNDING FOR NOVA SCOTIA COMPANIES

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister responsible for Canada Mortgage and Housing. A great number of RRAP delivery agencies in Nova Scotia are private sector firms. We should all be proud of the superb job they are doing. These groups are experiencing difficulties now because of delays in RRAP funding. Would the Minister consider advance payment, in order to assist these companies in providing the necessary services in which they are engaged?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for an important question. I recognize the service private sector delivery groups provide to people in Canada. I also recognize that private sector delivery agents are paid on a fee-for-service basis.

I would certainly take into consideration any application from those private sector delivery groups which are in financial difficulty to provide some advance assistance until such time as their fee-for-service provisions under RRAP catch up with their financial demands. I thank the Hon. Member for the question. If any private sector delivery agents can provide that information, we will assess it.

TRADE

REQUEST FOR GREATER REPRESENTATION OF WOMEN AND FRANCOPHONES ON FREE TRADE NEGOTIATING TEAM

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and concerns the glaring lack of Francophones and women on the free trade negotiating team.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to its initial and unacceptable mistake, the Government is dragging its feet shamefully in this matter. This was clear yesterday from the answer given by the Deputy Prime Minister to my colleague from Hamilton East. He merely recycled a nine-day old answer given previously by the Secretary of State for External Affairs, which was not explicit and merely recognized the deficiency.

I would therefore like to ask the Prime Minister whether he could remove any doubts as to the Government's intentions in this matter. Could he tell the House today how many Francophones and many women have been added to the negotiating team and what their responsibilities are?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, with respect to the repetition coming from the hon. gentleman who asked the question, the response of the Secretary of State for External Affairs on May 21 in this House is still quite valid. The Prime Minister has specifically directed that Mr. Reisman look at adding the dimensions of Francophones, women, and regional interests to the group. That is being done. I believe the Minister responsible for the Status of Women has already identified one woman to be added to the group. Further progress will be made.

[Translation]

APPLICATION OF OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, it's worse than I thought. If the Prime Minister spoke to Mr. Reisman, he has merely established that he has no more clout with Reisman than he has with the U.S. President, because nothing has changed. The woman who was added is in a very junior position.

I would like to ask the Secretary of State, as the Minister responsible for official languages programs, whether he at least has made representations to have more francophones on the free trade negotiating team. And if he has done so, I wish he would inform the House what terms and what arguments he used, since he is so proud of—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order! The Hon. Minister has the floor.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as usual, the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques is getting things mixed up, but that is par for the course, and his preambles are so long that the questions have no substance at all.

The question of enforcing our legislation on official languages generally has no connection with the selection of francophone candidates . . . Listen to the answer—

Mr. Speaker, this party has the delightful habit of asking questions and answering them at the same time. So answer the questions if you want to answer them.

ATOMIC ENERGY OF CANADA LIMITED

STORAGE OF NUCLEAR WASTES—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF INDUSTRY

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment. It concerns reports yesterday evening about AECL's plans to expand the marketing of mini-reactors, and also reports that it intends to store the wastes produced by these reactors at Pinawa and Chalk River. Is this not further evidence of the need for a full public inquiry into the nuclear industry in Canada?

In the absence of that type of inquiry on the part of the Government will the Minister take his responsibilities seriously as the Minister in charge of the environment and initiate a federal environment review process with respect to how these wastes will be transported from these mini-reactors to these sites, and with respect to the question of storage generally?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Members knows that AECL does not report to me, but to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. So probably the pith and substance of the question should more appropriately be directed to her.

To the extent the question relates to me and my responsibilities and those of my Department, I will take the Hon. Member's representation as one validly put and vigorously expressed.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ACTION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have long since given up on the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources as far as the environmental aspects of energy development are concerned. I am looking to the Minister of the Environment as the advocate for the environment of the country to do something about the palpable negligence on the part of his colleague. I realize he cannot say anything too terrible in public. However, as Minister of the Environment I would ask him to consider that it is about time the environment took precedence over the technological imperatives of AECL and its misplaced missionary zeal to fill up the whole country with mini-reactors.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I will answer the Hon. Member's question. First, there have been no sales of the Slowpoke to which the Hon. Member refers.

Mr. Blaikie: But you want to sell them!

Mr. McDermid: Prototypes of them are being worked on right now, and there are demonstrations. It is purely a hypothetical thing. No agreements have been made. The individual who gave the interview was absolutely misquoted. The facts which the Hon. Member brings forward this morning are not correct.

FINANCE

COMMODITY TAX SYSTEM—EFFECT OF CHANGES ON MUNICIPALITIES

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. There is serious concern in the form of a resolution to be submitted by the City of Saskatoon and numerous Canadian cities at the meeting of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities next week regarding the implications for property taxes by the business transfer tax and the potential value added type taxes. Will the Minister clarify the implications of the new taxes for municipalities? Are rebates to local governments an option being considered?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have indicated that there will be a process that we will be going through in consideration of any change in the commodity tax system. It will be initiated by a discussion paper following consultation with a wide range of people who could be impacted by it, including the municipalities. We have felt it important that there be consideration given to an appropriate transition system to assist the transition to the implementation of such a tax, if it were to be levied. That, in addition, is something upon which the municipalities could comment.

ENERGY

PRICE OF AVIATION FUEL

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I direct my question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Can the Parliamentary Secretary explain to the House and to the country why the price of aviation fuel in Canada has dropped so very slightly despite the decline in world oil prices? For example, the price of aviation fuel in northern Ontario has gone down by only 2 cents a litre between January and May.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, a large number of the airports and flying clubs signed bulk contracts for aviation fuel. These are being negotiated all the time. The prices fluctuate from flying club to flying club and from airport to airport. In some areas they are down further than others. That is the market system working. That is the explanation to the Hon. Member.

PRICE OF HOME HEATING OIL

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, that is no answer at all. The market system is not working. Can the Parliamentary Secretary explain to the House why the price of home heating oil has failed to decline appreciably? In Kapuskasing, Ontario, for example, between January and May the price of home heating oil has gone down by only 3 cents a litre. Why is that?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, because they are still using up the old supplies.

Mr. Penner: That is not true. That is wrong.

Mr. McDermid: In this country we demand that over the winter there be 100-day supplies of heating oil. As the Hon. Member knows, we had a mild winter and those supplies have not all been used up yet. I think the Hon. Member will find that the price for heating oil will be dropping rather significantly in the next month or two.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I asked for a statement on government business. At that time, the Government was not ready to give us a statement. I hope it is at the present time.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I apologize. For personal reasons, I was not in the House yesterday. I thought I had made it quite clear that I would respond on my return to Ottawa.

Today is an allotted day for a motion put by the Official Opposition. On Monday, we will take up the following items of legislation: Bill C-86, the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corporation legislation, on third reading; Bill C-109, the Income Tax Act, the scientific research tax credit legislation, report stage and, I hope, third reading; Bill C-91, an Act with respect to the competition tribunal which is at report stage, and I hope we will make progress on that; Bill C-75, an Act to amend the Shipping Act at third reading; Bill C-112, the Energy Administration Act at second reading; Bill C-19, Bell Canada reorganization at report stage; Bill C-95, the Archives Act; and Bill C-90, an Act respecting pension plans at report stage. On Monday, we will see what kind of progress we will make and what we can do on Tuesday.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition, which has been duly examined according to the Standing Orders, from two communities in the region of northern Ontario, Moonbeam and Terrace Bay. The petition concerns the continuing operation of the Morgentaler clinic in Toronto in clear violation of Section 251 of the Criminal Code of Canada.

CHANGES TO CANADIAN ARMED FORCES SUPERANNUATION ACT—CONSULTATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions to present. The first petition is addressed to the Honourable House of Commons of Canada. Whereas any amendment of the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act to remove the indexation of annuities will adversely affect former members of the Canadian Armed Forces, widows and dependents, the petitioners are calling upon the Government to make no changes to the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act without first consulting with recipients and those contributing to the fund. That petition is from a number of residents of Victoria, British Columbia.

I have another petition signed by several hundred superannuates again from Victoria, British Columbia. The petition calls upon the Government to revoke recent changes to the unemployment insurance regulations which have placed Canadians who take early retirement in a difficult financial situation; whereas these changes have also adversely affected Canadian Armed Forces ex-personnel, members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and other police forces, fire-fighters and other men and women who are forced in mid-life to seek new employment, the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to immediately revoke changes to the unemployment insurance regulations Sections 57 and 58 which pertain to the inclusion of pension income as earnings. That is also signed by several hundred residents of Victoria, British Columbia.

I have a third petition to present, also signed by several dozen residents of British Columbia, which calls upon the Government, considering the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act amendment removing indexation of annuities would adversely affect former members of the armed forces, widows, and dependents, and whereas the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act administers a fund in excess of $13 billion which is the deferred income of armed forces personnel, wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to make no changes to the superannuation Act without first consulting fully with annuity recipients.

I have another petition which is signed by—

Mr. Jourdenais: Nobody.

Ms. Copps: Nobody? No, believe me, it is signed by many prospective, former and future voters. Believe me, there are many signatures.

I have another petition, also from Victoria, British Columbia—

Mrs. Mailly: If it's former voters, they must have died.

Ms. Copps: I understand the government Members' private joke about it, even though publicly government Members sing another tune.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could I please ask the Hon. Member to summarize briefly the petitions which are on the same subject?

Mrs. Mailly: Get to the point.

Ms. Copps: Yes, the point is that any amendment of the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act to remove the indexation of annuities would adversely affect former members, widows and dependents, and the petitioners are calling upon the Government, as is their ancient right, to make no changes to the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act without first consulting fully with annuity recipients and those presently contributing to the fund.

I have another petition, signed by several hundred if not 1,000 consituents from New Brunswick, primarily Oromocto, Lincoln and Fredericton, which humbly sheweth, as is the custom, whereas recent changes to the unemployment insurance regulations—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could the Hon. Member summarize? I understand that she has many petitions and, from what I can see, they are all on exactly the same subject. Could she please summarize them very shortly?

Ms. Copps: The petitioners are from different parts of the country, Mr. Speaker, and I am sure you would not want their voices not to be heard given that this is a duly signed petition—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. If they are on the same subject, the Hon. Member—

Ms. Copps: No, it's a different subject.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry, then. If it is not on the same subject, it is my mistake.

USE OF PENSION INCOME IN CALCULATION OF UI BENEFITS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister should know that there is a slight difference between unemployment insurance and superannuation. This particular petition is from hundreds if not 1,000 residents of Oromocto, New Brunswick: whereas these people have long paid into the Unemployment Insurance Fund and now they see themselves unable to claim any insurance, wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to immediately revoke changes to the unemployment insurance regulations which pertain to the inclusion of pension as income.

CHANGES TO CANADIAN ARMED FORCES SUPERANNUATION ACT—CONSULTATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): I have another petition which hails from Kingston, Ontario, the home of the Minister involved. This petition is signed by a number of constituents who are extremely concerned about the prospective changes to the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act; whereas the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act administers a fund in excess of $13 billion which is the deferred income of armed forces personnel, and wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to make no changes to the Canadian Forces Superannuation Act without first consulting fully with annuity recipients and those presently contributing to the fund, and as is duty bound your petitioners will ever pray. This is from the Kingston branch of the Federal Superannuates Association.

REQUEST TO REVOKE CHANGES TO UI REGULATIONS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): This petition is from the City of Kingston and contains several dozen signatures. They ask the Government to revoke recent changes to the unemployment insurance regulations which have placed Canadians who have taken early retirement—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. That petition was on the same topic. Could the Hon. Member combine that petition with the other ones?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, this is a duly signed and certified petition. I believe the Standing Orders allow me present petitions from across the country without separating them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: They allow you to present the petitions, but the Hon. Member may be asked to combine them if they are on the same subject.

Ms. Copps: I believe the Standing Orders allow me to present a petition from Kingston separate from another petition.

Mr. Gormley: They are on the same subject.

Ms. Copps: The petitions are dated at different times. If the Hon. Member from Saskatchewan would like to cut off those who want to complain about the unemployment insurance changes, I would ask him to state his position.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows full well that if petitions are on the same subject matter, she may be asked to combine them. I would ask her to do that, if they are on the same subject.

Ms. Copps: This is a duly certified petition. Given that is so, I do not understand what is the problem. It is a separate petition, and the people of Kingston—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member knows the rules about the presentation of petitions, as I presume do all Hon. Members. First they are asked to summarize very briefly what the petition is about. So far the Hon. Member has summarized the petitions, at some length in certain cases. When the petitions are on an identical subject, I ask Hon. Members to group them together. I understand her point, that she must present them to the House. That is correct. However, she may group them together and present them to the Table. Then she may tell the constituents, or whomever it is, that they were presented to the House.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I will abide by your decision. However, I think the people from Calgary would like to have their voice heard in the same way as the people from Kingston or Oromocto. I suggest that lumping them together just so that I can send them a letter saying that I presented their petition is certainly not having their voices heard in the House.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: For the last time, I tell the Hon. Member that if she has petitions on the same subject from Calgary or different parts of the country, of course she is able to say from where the petitions come without reading the front page of each petition. That is to what I am referring.

An Hon. Member: She has her notes now.

Ms. Copps: Given the Chair's ruling, I should like to present a petition from the City of Calgary. It is signed by several dozen constituents who call upon the Government to revoke the unfair changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Believe me, Mr. Speaker, there are several hundred more petitions which I will save for another day.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. If you choose to ask, I think you might find disposition on the part of the House to give unanimous consent to revert to the presentation of committee reports.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. You reverted to the presentation of reports from committees and have now finished that. I assumed that you would be calling petitions again, since I had one to present.

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Gauthier: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order because we seem to be having a problem. We have two kinds of questions, those that appear in the Monthly Supplement to the Order Paper, which used to appear on the Order Paper before the new rules came into effect, and those asked under Standing Order 64(3), which require an answer by the Government within 45 days.

My point of order concerns the fact that I have a question dated May 31, 1985, one year ago, which deals with public service pensions. As you know, Mr. Speaker, I have raised this question several times in the House. Why does the Government not answer? I do not know. I was told that I would have a comprehensive answer within a few days or a few weeks to this question on pensions and that the facts would be laid before the House.

We ask questions to obtain figures, facts and answers so that we shall know where we are going. If the Government does not want to reply to the questions which do not come under Standing Order 64(3), it should say so. We could then refuse to maintain these questions and simply transfer them to the new category which requires an answer from the Government within 45 days. I would like the Government to examine this matter seriously to avoid a waste of time, and if the Government wants us to cancel the questions asked before the new rules came into force, we shall do so because the Government has refused in the past to let questions remain unanswered. It is as simple as that!

• (1220)

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to put on the record that in this Thirty-third Parliament we have answered 83.8 per cent of the questions compared to the previous administration, of which the Hon. Member was a Member, which only answered 73 per cent of the questions.

Having dealt with how many questions are being answered, the Hon. Member should know that if he wishes to receive an answer to his question within 45 days, he need only, as I understand it under the new rules, request an answer within 45 days. If the Hon. Member goes through that process I am sure he will see that, since all of the questions to which a request has been made have been answered within 45 days, he will receive his answer.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, subject to that suggestion, I will then move that No. 386 be moved to the new order of answering questions and that it be answered within 45 days.

Mr. Lewis: You can't do that.

Mr. Gauthier: The Parliamentary Secretary is saying that I cannot do that now. Make up your mind. I have been waiting for a year and the Government is not answering. The Parliamentary Secretary just told me I could, if I wanted, transfer it for answer within 45 days. I am requesting that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The Speaker will tell you how to do it.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, it was my impression it had to be requested in writing. I am sure if the Hon. Member requests it in writing, he will get his answer.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: According to the Standing Orders.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall all the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—NATIONAL HOUSING STRATEGY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East) moved:

That this House urge the Government to adopt a national housing strategy that incorporates a definition of "core need" that will include all Canadian families living below the poverty line as defined by the National Council of Welfare.

She said: Mr. Speaker, first I might say that I am pleased that we in the House have a chance today to focus on the issue of the desperate housing problem facing more than a million Canadians and, in particular, the very specific and difficult problem of what constitutes a "core need". Few other issues influence Canadians so much as the issue of housing. It is actually one of our basic needs.

If we are housed and fed, at least we have a chance to get out and look for a job, but if we have no housing, if we find ourselves among the tens of thousands of Canada's homeless, we do not even have a base of operation or starting point.

Today's debate will allow us to discuss a number of issues including the cuts in funding to federal housing and housing related programs, in particular, the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program, the elimination, for example, of the Canadian Insulation Program and the termination of the Registered Home Ownwership Program. There have been a number of cuts initiated by the Conservative Government.

If we look at the numbers, comparing the expenditures in the area of housing between 1984 and 1985, the picture is not bright for the more than one million Canadians defined by Canada Mortage and Housing Corporation as being Canadians who live in inadequate and insufficient housing. In 1984, public housing loans amounted to $2.4 million of the CMHC housing budget. In 1985 it was $5.7 million, a cut of almost $2 million. The federal contribution to federal-provincial housing was $128 million in 1984. In 1985 it was $77 million.

Those of us who work in our own constitutencies will know how important RRAP loans are for low income families who are struggling, those who we define as the "working poor". They may own their own homes but do not have the independent resources to upgrade them. The cut-back in that area has been devastating. Thanks in part to the initiatives of the Economic Statement of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in 1984, we see there has been a reduction from $189 million in RRAP funding in 1984 to $127 million in 1985. We are only now starting to feel the results of that cut-back in communities and neighbourhoods across this country which are faced with further deterioration because of the Government's move to allow either the provinces or the private sector to pick up what should be a national housing strategy.

In the area of housing research there has also been a cut of $4 million. Again, in the area of residential rehabilitation grants, as opposed to loans, there has been a reduction from $202 million in 1984 to $159 million in 1985.

Earlier this week, I believe, the Minister, as well as the Liberal housing critic, had the opportunity to participate in a forum in Toronto which convened the interests of all those who are involved in the non-profit housing sector. The Canadian Association of Home Renewal Officers met in Toronto. One of the major complaints leveled against the Government is the new definition of the "core threshold" or "core need".

I am sure when the Minister has a chance to speak, he will stand up in his place and say the Government is targeting its funds to those who need it most. But in fact, in so targeting, he is eliminating the possibility of housing assistance for thousands of families who are living below the poverty line, according to the definition of the National Council of Welfare.

I ask Parliament to consider this motion which simply calls upon Hon. Members to ensure that all Canadians living below the poverty line, as defined by the National Council of Welfare, be eligible for assistance. I think it is fair to assume that the National Council of Welfare, which is in fact a body funded through the Government, would have an objective view of what poverty is. What better way of Parliament making a contribution to the housing question than by agreeing at the very least that all those people living below the poverty line should have access to assistance which may be made available through rental or purchase programs through the federal Government.

We in the Liberal Party believe that the new definition of "core need", as launched by the Government, is inflexible and insensitive and leaves hundreds of thousands of Canadians living below the poverty line but above the income threshold and, therefore, ineligible to apply for federal housing assistance. I think it is inexcusable that the Conservative Government is saying by the redefinition of "core need" that in the City of Hamilton, for example, a family earning $17,000 a year, certainly not living in the lap of luxury, is ineligible for any assitance under federal housing programs because it is above the definition of "core need".

In fact, if we use the City of Hamilton as an example, the average market rent is $412 for a two-bedroom apartment. To pay 30 per cent, which is what the Government determines the core need is, a family living in a two-bedroom apartment, and it could be a family of four or five persons, must earn below $16,500 annually to qualify for federal Government assistance.

The Minister is shaking his head. The Minister is off base. He can look at the figures for Hamilton. They were provided for me by his own Department. A single parent with three children earning $16,600 annually is above the "core need" as defined by his Ministry and would not qualify for any assistance under the rent supplement or RRAP. If the family were to take a three-bedroom apartment it would be paying 37 per cent of its income for shelter. However, if the same family was earning $16,400 it would be eligible for assistance. It could be assisted to live in a two-bedroom apartment. However, by earning $200 more the family is paying $2,040 more per year than it would if it met the Government's definition of "core need".

• (1230)

I think it is significant that the annual report of the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation under the Conservative administration is appropriately a blank gray color which is fading away into nothingness. It reveals that the mortgage insurance fund had a deficit of just over $500 million at the beginning of 1984 and that by 1985 the deficit had reached close to $800 million. CMHC staff has been cut from 3,659 to 3,341 and more cuts are in the works as program delivery continues to be turned over to the provinces. Sixteen of the CMHC field offices have been closed and 10 others have been reduced in size. This means longer and longer waits and trips for Canadians from smaller communities who want to seek information about the latest in housing standards and the latest in availability with regard to government programming.

[Translation]

Talking about this year, we know that the federal Government has yet to complete negotiations with all provinces. The negotiations are not progressing rapidly and, in many provinces, nothing at all is happening in the field of assistance for social housing.

[English]

After a lot of talk about open Government, the federal Government has washed its hands of the responsibility for social housing. I am pleased to say that it took greater initiative in the area of co-operatives. When the Minister announced his new directions for housing in the 80s he did in fact listen to the pleas of co-operatives from across the country which begged the Government to keep the co-operative movement under the federal umbrella. The Minister listened to them, although he did not listen to some of the other groups, including CAHRO. He listend to the pleas of the co-operative movement that divesting responsibility from the federal to the provincial Governments will result in disaster in some communities in Canada.

I look in particular to the situation in British Columbia. The Social Credit Government of British Columbia continues to be tenth and last with regard to spending for social housing. That Government in British Columbia has shown that it has no intention of embracing a mandate of providing social housing due to its preoccupation with turning everything over to the private sector. Yet, without a full public discussion, the Minister has washed his hands of a national housing strategy which would guarantee every Canadian the right to a decent level of housing.

In fact, the core need threshold varies throughout Newfoundland. For example, in one area of Newfoundland the core need threshold for cut-off is $16,000. In another area it is $20,000. The cut-off point on the Avalon Peninsula is much lower than that in St. John's.

In Charlottetown the cut-off point for any federal application for RRAP funding is $17,000. It is $16,000 in the areas of Prince, Queens and Kings. The same figure applies in Halifax. The cut-off point in the City of Halifax for eligibility for housing funds is $21,000. In Sydney, Nova Scotia, the cut-off point is $16,000 and in Annapolis it is $17,000. Any family of three or four persons earning more than $17,000 is no longer eligible for assistance under the RRAP program because of the Government's new definition of "core need".

In Saint John, New Brunswick, the cut-off point is $16,000. In the City of Montreal the cut-off point for a family of three or four is $17,500 and for a family of five it is $19,000. If single parents raising four children earn more than $19,000 they are no longer eligible for help under the Government's RRAP program.

The Minister laughed earlier when I used the City of Hamilton as an example. Yet, his own CMHC statistics indicate that in the City of London the core cut-off point is $17,500. In Brantford it is $16,000 for a family of three or four.

Unfortunately, the Minister chose to ignore interventions at the CAHRO meeting of one of the representatives of the City of Winnipeg who was working on the inner core program for that city. The Minister would not even talk to the Minister. He ignored him. He cannot even get a meeting with the Ministry to discuss the deterioration of the situation in the City of Winnipeg as it relates to eligibility for residential housing programs. The cut-off point in the City of Winnipeg is $19,000.

In the City of Saskatoon a family of three or four which earns more than $18,000 is no longer eligible for any assistance through the RRAP program. In Calgary the figure is $20,500. In Edmonton the figure is $19,000. In Lethbridge, it is $18,500, and in Medicine Hat it is $16,000. In the City of Vancouver the cut-off point is $23,000. In Abbotsford and Chilliwack the cut-off point is $16,000. The cut-off point for families of three or four in White Horse, Yukon, is $18,500.

The Minister shakes his head, but he will know that this new definition of "core need" is in fact inflicting untold hardship on thousands of Canadian families who own their own homes and want a chance to fix them up but are living within the definition of what we call the "working poor" Canadians. These people are living below the poverty line by any Government definition. I did not want to use the Senate definition because I was fearful that the Government would accuse me of using a figure produced by the Liberal-dominated Senate. Therefore, I chose the National Council of Welfare figure with the intent of asking every Member of the House whether it is not only just and fair that all people living below the poverty line should be considered eligible for RRAP funding.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Minister laughed in the House when I mentioned the fact that a family of three or four, in Montreal for example, earning—

[English]

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I was not laughing at the content of the Hon. Member's speech. I was laughing at the inaccuracy and the silly rhetoric. The Member has mixed up programs and does not understand the program. I am sure that if the Hon. Member had had her notes early enough to commence this debate when it was scheduled, she may have spent enough time to become cognizant of what the new social programs are.

Ms. Copps: In other words, Mr. Speaker, the Minister was not laughing at my speech but was laughing at me. As far as I am concerned both are totally unacceptable. The Minister talks about consultation. The Minister was supposed to have a private meeting today with Members of the National Co-operative Foundation. He phoned them to say that he could not meet with them because we were having a housing debate. He neglected to say that the housing debate will take place until one o'clock this afternoon and then will resume from two o'clock until five o'clock this afternoon. This is the first time that we have had an all-day debate on a housing issue. The Ministry tries to blame the Opposition's calling of this debate for the fact that he had to cancel his meeting. I wish he had the guts to tell the National Co-operative Foundation that they could meet with him in the lobby. I am sure that the Member of Parliament representing the New Democratic Party on housing issues would be equally as generous as I in allowing the Minister to carry on his meeting. Due to the Minister's broken commitment to the co-operative group, I fully expect that he will be present here today until late this afternoon.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to inform the Hon. Member and the House that I will be leaving at one o'clock to meet representatives of the Co-operative Housing Foundation as their guest at lunch. In the meantime, I hope to be able to work in a meeting. The Hon. Member should be sure of facts before she puts them forward to the House.

• (1240)

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact I am sure of my facts. The fact is that the Minister is going to be speaking to the luncheon. He was supposed to be meeting with the group privately and he called them to cancel, claiming that I was responsible because I called for this housing debate. That is a fact and he can check with representatives of the National Co-operative Foundation in Vancouver or anywhere else. He will not mislead the House in the way he misled the Foundation.

This is the first time we have had a full day's debate on housing in Canada. I am extremely concerned about some of the initiatives, or should I say retrenchments, embarked upon by the Minister and his Department. There is a new and narrow definition of "core need" as it relates to eligibility for RRAP funding. With the Minister's move to divest responsibility to the provinces, the Government of Canada will be washing its hands of the serious housing crisis facing communities across this country. If all of the Governments in Canada were as progressive as the Liberal Government in Ontario—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: —I might not be as concerned. The Minister is going to be quoting some statistics. I can quote statistics from the housing program of the previous Conservative Government of Ontario. These are the most recent statistics available from CMHC and they show that the record in Ontario was dismal. I am hoping that with the initiatives of the new Liberal Government that situation will be turned around.

I know from calls and meetings and direct contact with people across the country that many Canadians are very frightened about the prospect of the federal Government turning over its responsibility for the delivery of social housing programs to provincial Governments. The people most concerned are those in British Columbia. We saw the evictions which preceded Expo. The provincial Government ignored the pleas of the Provincial Housing Coalition, ignored the statements made in this House and the questions raised by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner). It ignored pleas from across the country that the federal Government maintain a level of involvement in social housing which would guarantee a national housing framework. We have not seen that.

What we have seen is the federal Government cutting back on housing programs and suggesting that, by turning it over to provincial Governments, we are going to see an improvement. Unfortunately, the Government has not embarked upon a discussion of the dilemma now facing City planners. For example, the City of Winnipeg is facing very serious RRAP cut-backs because of the new definition of "core need". The city has pleaded with the Minister to change that definition and he has ignored them. Representatives of CAHRO have also pleaded with the Minister and he has ignored them.

We are seeing a return to the politics of ghettoization. That, unfortunately, was a development of the 1960s where we saw Governments building public housing en masse, and making sure those eligible for public housing were lumped in to what can only be described as a social and cultural ghetto. We gave up that policy in the 1970s when we developed a mix of housing. We looked at eligibility for RRAP funding and said that, for example, people who are earning above the threshold of $17,000 or $18,000, or $27,000 in the City of Toronto, were eligible to move into projects like the one at City Home in Toronto. That led to a good social atmosphere, a good mix of programs, and a better housing situation.

This Government, in the short space of 20 months, has developed a strategy which says that people who cannot afford to fully pay for their own housing should now be forced to move into ghettos. It has moved us back to the days when we ghettoized people who lived in social-assisted housing. I think that measure by that Government, without any debate or discussion; this redefining of the "core need" and depriving thousands of Canadians living below the poverty line of any hope of ever living in their own adequate housing, is a national disgrace. The Minister should stop laughing and start doing something about the crisis involving over one million Canadians living in inadequate housing. They have been ignored by this Government in its quest to turn its responsibilities over to provincial Governments and the private sector.

[Translation]

I think it is shameful, Mr. Speaker, and I know that many Liberal Members would like to take part in this debate to give their views on the national housing problem, something which is sorely needed in these Conservative times.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Reimer): Questions or comments.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a couple of comments to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) concerning the questions she raised during her diatribe on social housing. She did not seem to understand the difference between private and public non-profit programs where, in order to be eligible, Canadians in need must be paying more than 30 per cent of their income for accommodation. She continually referred to RRAP, and then talked about a two-bedroom apartment. She put forward the proposition that someone in her home community of Hamilton, earning around $16,000 or $16,500, would not be eligible for any—I think if the "blues" are checked the word will be "any"—assistance from the federal Government. If the rent the individual or family is paying for affordable, uncrowded, adequate accommodation is more than 30 per cent of their income, that is one eligibility criterion for assistance under the new policy.

The Hon. Member referred to several areas of Canada with different income thresholds. The reason the program was designed that way is apparent to a blind pig riding a horse. It was designed for regional concerns. It is not the policy of this Government, as it was the policy of the former Government and the Member opposite, to centralize so that everyone in Canada must measure up to a standard conceived by a Government believing in centralist control.

This Government consulted, broadly consulted, with national and municipal groups. As a matter of fact, the Hon. Member put forward the argument that I did not pay any attention to CAHRO or the Federation of Canadian Municipalities. Those very municipal groups, including CAHRO, put forward in their briefs presented to the Government and CMHC the proposal that all of the dollars expended under RRAP should be designed for social policy. That is exactly what we did when we designed the new directions for housing solutions in Canada. The figures the Hon. Member gives were from 1984 and 1985. She did not put forward the figures for 1986.

Ms. Copps: March of 1986, sorry.

Mr. McKnight: Or the number of units that will be built. If she will check the "blues" I am sure she will find that to be true.

I heard her mention something about the Government in Queen's Park and its enlightened policy. I recall that during the campaign there was a commitment for, I think it was 10,000 new units that would be put forward by the Government that is now in Queen's Park. There was an agreement between the federal and provincial Governments, between CMHC and the Ontario Housing Corporation, an agreement on cost sharing.

• (1250)

I would like to draw to the Hon. Member's attention to the fact that this year, with this enlightened policy of the Party that she supports, and I know that the people in Ontario are pleased that the fear of her becoming the Minister of Housing provincially has been removed, the Government of Canada—the taxpayers of Canada—will be providing 3,911 social housing units in Ontario. That enlightened Government in the Province of Ontario will be providing 2,159. The same applies when you consider co-op housing, rehabilitation, urban and rural, and when you look at rental, RRAP. The majority of the funding provided is provided by the taxpayers of Canada. There are increases, but I want the Hon. Member, when she replies, to be able to differentiate between RRAP, between public and private non-profit, between disabled RRAP, between rental RRAP, and also between the contributions that are made by the federal Governments and those of the provincial Governments in the new partnership we have entered into.

Ms. Copps: First of all the Minister should get his facts straight because the anticipated core need cut-offs for 1986 were provided by his own Department. If he disagrees with those figures I suggest he should stop cutting back on his staff and start getting some correct figures.

I would also suggest it is outrageous for the Minister to suggest that his new program is somehow going to assist people ineligibile for RRAP when one of the very first actions of his Government, under the tutelage of his Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) we did not hear a peep from the Minister responsible for housing who seems to be there as a buffer zone between reality and the Minister of Finance—was a 25 per cent cut-back in funding under the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program inflicted upon the Canadian people.

I have here a letter which was sent to an MLA in the Province of Saskatchewan who has been put on a waiting list in the Province of Saskatchewan because the federal government cut-backs have seriously hampered the effectiveness of the Rural Rehabilitation Assistance Program. I am happy that he raised the issue of the Ontario and federal Government initiatives, because the only province that had signed an operating and capital agreement when we entered into estimates on this issue in the last couple of weeks was the Government of Ontario. The Minister advised us at that time that he was going to be providing us with copies of all the agreements. We have seen nothing yet. In the same way, he has refused to provide us with information regarding how many Canadians across Canada have been refused RRAP funding specifically because of this Government's new definition of "core need".

I quoted the statistic that in the City of Winnipeg, for example, 60 per cent of the applications that had been approved under the previous criteria are now no longer eligible for RRAP funding. Likewise he will also know that CMHC guidelines allow a family of three to four people to live in a two-bedroom apartment. So the figure that I was quoting to him of 30 per cent or less of their income was, in fact, based on his own Department's definition.

It would seem to me that what the Minister should be doing is contacting his counterparts in the provincial Government, advising them that this Government still believes that we must have a national housing strategy for housing across Canada. In the Liberal Party we believe in a national strategy. We believe that somebody living in Gander-Twillingate should have the right to the same kind of adequate and affordable housing as someone living in the City of Toronto.

The Minister seems prepared without a whimper to pass off the responsibility to provincial Governments as a cost-cutting measure, because he does not really believe in a national social housing strategy. He would just as soon pass it off to provincial Governments, like the Social Credit Government in British Columbia which has shown quite clearly that it has no intention of continuing with the social housing strategy, but would rather pour all its money into the private sector so that they can assist in rent supplement programs without any kind of guarantees.

In fact, the only area where the Minister has taken any initiative—and I can see him chatting and laughing with the Minister of Finance because, in typical fashion, they are not interested. The Minister claims he cannot come to the private meeting because he is busy discussing important issues in the House, and yet when he is here he sits and laughs and chats with his colleague instead of listening to the first debate that we have had on a national housing strategy since this Government was brought into office.

Mrs. Mailly: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Reimer): The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) on a point of order.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) are quite irrelevant. She is commenting on Members' behaviour in the House instead of answering the question.

[English]

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that was a point of order and, frankly, the Member can defend the Minister's conduct and behaviour, but—

Mrs. Mailly: You are not the Speaker.

Ms. Copps: Since when are you the Speaker? I have the floor. Unfortunately, the Member from Gatineau will probably wait for years to get the floor.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Reimer): The time for questions and comments is over.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I am certainly very happy to stick to the ten minutes of questions or comments, but I would hope that other interveners who do not have the courage to enter into the debate would not use up the Member's time with silly and inconsequential points of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Reimer): I do not think that that is a point of order.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that it might be appropriate to call it one o'clock now, and I would hope to be able to resume at two o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Reimer): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 12.47 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap).

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak to the opposition motion put before the House today by the Liberal housing critic. The motion reads:

> That this House urge the Government to adopt a national housing strategy that incorporates a definition of "core need" that will include all Canadian families living below the poverty line as defined by the National Council of Welfare.

On behalf of the New Democratic Party, I support the general sense of that motion. I believe it would be an improvement to use the definition of the National Council of Welfare as a minimum floor. Any family that falls below that minimum should be considered in "core need", if we are to use a core need concept. But that is what I question. As well, I think there are inevitable problems, even with the National Council of Welfare figures as was pointed out by the Minister, although I think that they may be the lesser of the two evils.

I wish to point out first that there are some basic problems with the concept of "core need" as it is being introduced by the Government and I will describe what I believe is a much more workable concept.

The first problem with the core need concept is that there is confusion as to what is "core need". A week ago in the committee meeting on Estimates we asked the Minister for more than a three line definition of "core need" which he had given us; we asked for the formula for arriving at "core need". He promised to send that to us, and perhaps it is in the post office somewhere because it has not come. If it comes with the speed of his other promises we will be lucky to have it in 1987.

During the meeting, for example, at one point he explained that the core need cut-off for homeowners was to be decided by the rental vacancies in that neighbourhood. Later he asserted that the core need cut-off for tenants was to be decided by what homeowners are paying in the neighbourhood. In other words, there was no serious, firm basis for the core need. It seems to be a new fancy phrase for covering what is simply an arbitrary figure in round numbers, such as the $13,000 the Minister has chosen for reasons he did not give when asked in the committee.

In that case, if we are going to have this concept, I prefer that we have a publicly understandable figure such as that derived from Statistics Canada by the National Council of Welfare, even though it has its inadequacies in certain areas of high cost, such as the major cities.

There is another problem with the core need concept that is being used. It is that a family does not become considered as one of core need until the family is paying 30 per cent of its income for rent. While the Minister has not yet shown us his agreements, he has asserted that he will practise the principle that the family should not have to pay more than 25 per cent of its income. If it is just and right, as I agree, that the family should not have to pay more than 25 per cent of its income, then it should be considered in core need if it pays more than 25 per cent for accommodation. The fact that homeowners pay a portion for their present accommodation and a portion as a saving for the future, amounting to 30 per cent or more, is irrelevant. The fact is that if 25 per cent is the maximum a person should pay simply to get shelter at the present time, those people should be considered in core need if they are paying 26 per cent, 27 per cent, 28 per cent or 29 per cent. They should not have to wait until they are paying 30 per cent to be considered for the benefits of the programs that go to core need. The Minister is not looking at actual need but simply negotiating sums with the provinces.

This brings me to the most serious confusion. The Minister has been negotiating since the fall of 1984, certainly for well over a year since his discussion paper of early 1985. After a year to a year and a half of negotiations, he still does not have programs in place, except for the co-operatives that he seems to favour and that he would like to separate from the other social housing programs. He is holding back on all the cost-sharing programs with the provinces, apparently until the last province signs. It is interesting to note that the second to last province to sign is his own Progressive Conservative governed Province of Saskatchewan.

I have been making inquiries, as requested, on behalf of Mona Dawson of Rouleau, Saskatchewan. She has been asking for a RRAP grant because she wants to have indoor plumbing. Currently she has no plumbing in her house, so she is not asking to upgrade her plumbing but simply asking to have indoor plumbing. She believes that she meets the criteria and has not been told otherwise. However, she has been given many other excuses.

First, she received a letter on April 8, from Lyle Howat, program manager of the Saskatchewan Housing Corporation, which is the delivery agent. He stated:

> We wish to advise you that Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation will be unable to approve your application for repairs to your home as the Federal Budget for this program has been fully committed.

How did he know on April 8, 1986 that the federal budget for this program had already been fully committed? Of course he did not know. He did not know what he was talking about. Later on we find out from a different source, that is, the federal Minister, that indeed she had applied first in 1985, but by that time the budget had been fully expended. He did not mention the reason it was expended was because it had been chopped. He goes on to state:

> I understand Mrs. Dawson has submitted an application for consideration this year and that initial inspection of her property was completed on April 15.

• (1410)

That is what he wrote on May 6 at which time there was still no indication of whether she would receive her money or when.

There was another letter from the Saskatchewan Housing Corporation written on the stationery of the Chairman of the Board and signed by Mr. Gordon Dirks, the Minister in charge. He states at greater length what the federal Minister has already stated. In fact, Mrs. Dawson is not receiving any money, not because she is ineligible, not because there is no program and not because there is no money. She is not receiving anything just because the program has not yet been put into operation. Therefore it was fascinating to receive a note from the Minister through the new inter-office E-Mail dated May 7 which states in part:

> As the Minister responsible for CMHC, I would like to take this opportunity to let you know that I have authorized the release of the 1986 Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program budget—

He then goes on to mention some millions of dollars and the letter continues:

> Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation will be in touch with local municipalities and delivery agencts shortly—

That is one of the Minister's favourite words.

> —to inform them of their homeowner RRAP applications. I am indeed pleased that the delivery of this very popular federal program can proceed.

On May 7 he said that it "can proceed", which is an ambiguous phrase. A person might mistakenly understand that it can proceed now. But of course that is not what he meant. He then states that he expects certain programs will be finalized shortly.

Then came the big day, May 27, 1986. I received another piece of E-Mail from the Minister which states:

> As Minister Responsible for CMHC, this is to confirm that RRAP funds will be allocated to delivery agents and municipalities today. For further information, contact your local CMHC office.

That piece of correspondence is dated 17:01 Tuesday, May 27, 1986. On Wednesday morning I phoned Mrs. Dawson and urged her to phone her local CMHC office, which she did. Of course, as the Minister will know, she received nothing. She phoned CMHC, she phoned the Saskatchewan Housing Corporation, and she phoned Gordon Dirks' office, the Chairman of Saskatchewan Housing Corporation. None of them had heard of the Minister's statement or had been given any directive to release any funds.

The story continues to the point where today I was advised that the Minister's office had said, no, there are no funds yet. In other words "today" "on Tuesday" is as good as never. There are no funds yet because the Government of Saskatchewan and the Government of Canada, two Progressive Conservative Governments, have not yet agreed on the program.

To put it more practically, from the point of view of Mrs. Dawson, the Conservative Government of Saskatchewan and the Conservative Government of Canada have agreed that she will not get her money yet. She has been advised by contractors that it will take three or four months because of the backlog of work they have elsewhere to complete the plumbing. If they know it cannot be completed before freeze-up then they will not undertake it. The Minister knows what freeze-up is on the Prairies, as I do. They will not try to break the ground after freeze-up. What these two Conservative Governments have agreed is that Mona Dawson will probably have to wait until 1987 to have indoor plumbing installed. That is a very discouraging situation for Mona Dawson, and a very discouraging situation for thousands of other people who are in exactly the same type of situation, perhaps not so dramatic but just as real.

There is also the difficulty encountered by the people in northern Manitoba where housing to be built must have the materials brought in over winter-frozen roads. In previous years they were able to start in February or March by bringing in the construction materials. Now the roads have thawed and there is no way that anything can be built in those communities in 1986, or until the spring or late winter of 1987.

There is a similar problem on many Indian reserves in British Columbia because of delays occasioned by the Governments, even though the federal Government is going it alone in British Columbia because of that provincial Government's notoriously hostile attitude to social housing. I give the federal Government credit for being willing to go it alone; but the delay has been so long that many of these units on Indian reserves will not be built.

The Minister has made much of his consultation, as if it were an excuse for all the delay. Yet he bragged this morning about the agreement reached with the Federation of Canadian Municipalities. It is not in agreement with him at all. I have a letter from the President of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, Alderman Ron Cromwell of Halifax, in which he points out:

> The FCM and our member municipalities expected that income ceilings for RRAP participation would be established in consultation with interested groups. FCM is concerned that CMHC's proposed eligibility formula, based on a product of income related to household size, will exclude many households warranting RRAP assistance. We are further concerned about the lack of consultation on this new formula which will dramatically reduce the scope of the program.

Of course there has been consultation which took place nearly a year ago, at the outset, and just for show. But at the crunch, when things are being decided, people have had to wait in the dark. There are more problems with the Government's venture of instituting this core program, but I want to generalize a little further. It goes beyond the core need concept.

The Government has yet to produce a corporate plan for 1986. We have yet to receive program specifications, except with respect to the co-op movement which, as I say, the Minister has decided to treat separately from the rest of social housing. We do not have the number of units; we do not have the number of dollars available to each provincial expression of the program. We do not have the criteria. In Toronto they have been promised these things all year.

One of the leaders of CAHRO, about which the Minister bragged, is the Housing Commissioner for Toronto. He was trying to provide RRAP for a Toronto resident who needed it in order to get his wheelchair out of his house. Eventually, he needed it to get to the hospital for some regular treatments. He could not get it. After months and months of promises there was no criteria, no allocation, no funding. He had to spend his own money, his own pension money, on a taxi to get to the hospital.

It is the concept of core need which is wrong. It is wrong because it belittles the needy. It blames the victim. It degrades them as being people who allegedly cannot pay for their housing as other people allegedly can. It also belittles the numbers of the needy and brings us into hair-splitting disputes at times about just whether somebody fits a certain program or not.

What is necessary is to recognize housing in Canada as a right, not as a need of certain incompetent or unfortunate individuals, but as a right of all persons in this country. In Canada, we live in a cold climate and most people live in cities which have become highly industrialized. We are dependent upon each other. One person builds a house in which another will live, and often the people who build houses cannot afford to live in them. In a country in which we are interdependent like this, housing must be treated as a right belonging to each person.

We have already established that concept in the case of public education. That is a right provided to everyone. We have established the concept fairly well in the case of health care. Health care is a right for everyone, rich and poor. Even before that, we established that concept in the case of food. We decided that no one should go without food; we call that welfare.

What is needed is not a core need program but a national housing program. As I have said before, a national housing program should embody six principles. First, housing should be decent and affordable. Publicly owned and privately owned rental housing should be subject to rent control with rent registration. There should be a national home building program to create 500,000 units needed by families and singles presently without decent, affordable housing, and there should be co-operatively or publicly produced and owned housing since the private industry has demonstrated in the last two decades that it cannot produce the housing people need. There are empty condominiums sitting in Toronto while some of those who live in that city go homeless, with a vacancy rate of .3 per cent.

Existing substandard housing should, wherever practical, be rehabilitated with government assistance and not with a half-year rate as provided for by the Minister. This should be done so that the costs are not completely passed on to the tenants in increased rents. The Government should assist tenants to buy buildings for either co-operative or non-co-operative ownership to ensure responsible maintenance and to take the buildings out of the inflationary market. There should be public and private funds created for mortgages with interest rates at no more than 2 per cent above the rate of inflation for families or persons buying, building or repairing a principal residence.

Those are the points that must be embodied in a national housing plan. The federal Government should negotiate such a plan with the other jurisdictions, should outline the five-year plan with annual targets and reports and should bring it to Parliament so that it may be publicly debated. It should do that rather than secretly negotiate the plan as the Minister has been doing. This is what we need to meet the needs of not just a few of the people of Canada, as the Minister wishes to do, but the needs of all of the people of Canada so that we may live together as brothers and sisters.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, I would not like the Hon. Member to get away without having to answer a question, so I will ask him this.

Mr. Reimer: Ask him why he is wearing that shirt.

Mr. Nickerson: I will make no comments about his shirt, Mr. Speaker.

In the perfect society the Hon. Member envisages, would it be that housing would be provided by the state or would it be that housing would be provided by the people themselves?

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, I only outlined this issue in my speech but I have spoken on it at greater length on more than one occasion. I am asking that housing should be primarily provided by co-operative and non-profit organizations—the people—not by government bureaucrats and a few wealthy builders, even if they are surrounded by a few would-be wealthy builders.

In the City of Toronto, most of the housing plans are determined by a very tiny number of people who control the mortgage money and the building operations. I am asking that the people who live or hope to live in those houses have a chance to have some say in what will be built, where it will be built, of what quality it will be and how it will be managed. There are a variety of ways of doing that. Some ways are called co-operative, some are called non-profit. In all cases, these methods provide for a board of directors, either chosen by the people who live in the housing units or by some publicly responsible non-profit outfit, and that—

Mr. Oberle: Where does the money come from?

Mr. Heap: Where does the money come from? Where does it come from now? Every cent of the construction costs of the 11,000 homes built by Cadillac in Toronto was paid by the people who live in those homes. No one paid for those homes but the tenants. Cadillac did not pay for those homes. Cadillac received the money from the tenants, paid for the homes and had so much left over it could not spend it in Toronto and had to go to the United States to contribute to American inflation. Every cent that built those apartments in Toronto was paid by tenants, and it would be the same for co-operative or non-profit buildings, but there would be some public accountability that would reduce the exorbitant profits that have been made by the builders in cities like Toronto.

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take part in this debate and to recognize that the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) has made a commitment to directing social housing policies to those households that are in need. However, I noticed that the original motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East yesterday, the motion I received around 3 p.m., indicated that the "core need" will include all Canadian families living below the poverty line as defined by the Canadian Council on Social Development. Later on, I suppose because the Hon. Member could not make whatever point she was attempting to make, the motion was changed to read that "core need" will include Canadian families living below the poverty line as defined by the National Council on Welfare. I do not know what great leaps over logic or furniture the Hon. Member is taking, but I can say that I am very pleased that the Hon. Member recognizes that housing policy should be directed to those households most in need.

As Hon. Members know, last December I announced to the House significant changes in the federal Government's social housing program and Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program. The major objective of these changes was to be more responsive in targeting federal housing dollars and resources in order to provide fair, equitable and effective national housing solutions for Canadians in those households that needed assistance.

One of the key features of the new direction is the provision of a high degree of regional and local sensitivity in social housing targeting. This new direction for housing solutions results from an extensive process of policy development including the consultation mentioned by the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap).

My Parliamentary Secretary, the Hon. Member for Burin—St. George's (Mr. Price), my staff, officials and I met with such organizations as the National Anti-Poverty Organization and with both private and public associations involved in social housing. Groups representing organizations concerned with the elderly were also involved, as were groups dealing with the disabled. Native groups were consulted, and in fact those organizations representing those members of society most disadvantaged when it comes to housing were extensively consulted. Their views were represented later in the program.

This consultation was in addition to the consultation that took place between industry and financial institutions at the time. We also discussed with the Territories and Provinces of Canada what they would undertake in providing for solutions to the housing situation in Canada.

During this complex and far-ranging consultation process with the diverse groups I have mentioned, a consensus did emerge. This consensus indicated that the new direction for federal housing should have improved targeting to ensure that federal housing resources are directly focused on those in need of housing assistance.

• (1430)

There was also a consensus that to be effective the housing solutions should contain a mix of program options so that there would be flexibility to provide assistance appropriate to the housing problems experienced in each particular area of Canada. This was done in recognition of the fact that there are different housing and economic environments and housing market conditions across this great country of ours.

The federal Government's new package of social housing programs, with all assistance directed to households in need, reflects the concerns and recommendations raised during the consultation process. The package is a significant improvement over the previous Liberal program under which only 40 per cent of the assistance provided by Canadian taxpayers went to Canadians in need.

With provincial and territorial cost-sharing under these new programs, and with better use of our federal dollars, we will be able to almost double the number of households in need which will receive assistance on a national basis. Households in need are defined as those which experience affordability, adequacy, or housing problems, and cannot obtain adequate and suitable accommodation without paying 30 per cent or more of their income on rent. As well, there are those with a need for special purpose housing. Estimates indicate, as other Hon. Members have mentioned, that over a million households are in such a circumstance.

The application of the core need threshold will greatly assist in ensuring that the federal objective of directing social housing resources to those who need it most will be met. Core need income thresholds are a measure of the income required by households of different sizes to meet without paying more than 30 per cent of their income average market rents for adequate and suitable accommodation available within a specific geographic area in Canada. These thresholds vary by community and geographic area and are designed to reflect the differences in housing costs which exist throughout the country.

Core need income thresholds recognize the vast differences which exist in the various housing markets across Canada. Some concerns have been expressed—and this was recently expressed by the Hon. Member for Spadina —about the use of core housing thresholds. As the Hon. Member suggested, some would argue that they are too low and some would argue that they are too high. However, there must be an understanding of the suggestion in the motion of the Official Opposition that we use the poverty line as defined by the National Council of Welfare as an indicator of Canadian household needs.

The Hon. Member for Spadina indicated that he recognized the shortcomings of that program, but he thought it would be a preference over the one being used now. However, the poverty lines of the National Council of Welfare are calculated yearly on the basis of average Canadian family expenditure at a national level. Although poverty lines vary by size of community, no detailed attention is given to geographic variations in the national economy. Those guidelines are not sensitive to different local housing market conditions and, indeed, are not good indicators of housing need since affordability, adequacy, and crowding problems are not considered in the guidelines of the National Council of Welfare. In essence, its statistics are simply indicators of income levels, not housing needs.

The principle upon which federal housing policy is founded is that all Canadians in all parts of Canada should have decent and adequate shelter at a level of payment which is affordable. Obviously this level would vary in different market areas. Application of the poverty lines of the National Council of Welfare would not ensure that Canadians with the same housing problems in different parts of the country would be equally eligible for social housing programs.

This is particularly evident in high-cost housing markets where high rents are often a result of severe housing shortages. For example, the National Council of Welfare poverty line for a four-person household living in a community with a population in excess of 500,000 is estimated to be approximately $21,700. The 1986 core need income threshold for Toronto for a three to four-person household is $27,500. This reflects the high cost of rental housing in the city. The core need income thresholds are based upon average market rents derived from locally sensitive up-to-date surveys.

However, core need income thresholds are not the only criteria used to determine whether a household is in housing need. I should like to illustrate this by referring to a simple example. Under the approach of the National Council of Welfare, a four-person household living in Toronto, earning $21,700, and living in a crowded and substandard dwelling, would be treated the same as a four-person household earning the same amount but living in uncrowded, adequate, and affordable accommodation. It would be difficult to argue, regardless of what side of the table one is on, that both those households should receive the same level of assistance from Canadian taxpayers. The latter household would not be eligible because, although it has a low income, it is not experiencing a housing problem. In conjunction with the presence of affordability, adequacy, and crowding problems, the core need income thresholds are measures which are locally sensitive to housing needs, whereas the poverty lines of the National Council of Welfare are simply measure of relative expenditure applicable at the national level only.

However, I should like to note that over 70 per cent of those households identified as being in core housing need in fact have incomes below the National Council of Welfare poverty line. I should also like to note that the National Council of Welfare poverty lines are simply Statistics Canada low income cut-offs. The council uses low-income cut-off and poverty line synonymously; it does not differentiate. It is important to note that Statistics Canada has always stated that these cut-offs should not be used to determine program eligibility.

The new direction for housing solutions provide a mix of program options, so that there is flexibility to provide assistance which will be appropriate to the housing problems experienced by those in need, recognizing that there are differing geographic and economic environments across Canada. The new federal direction in social housing addresses the need for the supply of affordable and adequate housing.

The new non-profit housing program will be used to increase the supply of affordable units. Unlike the old Section 56(1) program, which was funded through a reduction in the mortgage interest rate to 2 per cent, assistance under the new program will be based upon the difference between project costs and revenues generated by the application of the rent to income scale. Assistance will be directed to those Canadians who are in need.

A rent supplement program will be provided to subsidize rents in regions where an adequate supply of accommodation is available but target households cannot afford it. The current program which was proven to be cost effective when used is being substantially expanded.

We are making a number of significant changes in the federal renovation assistance program, designed to bring substandard housing up to minimum health and safety standards. The present approach of designating areas under that urban program is being eliminated. Assistance will be available, again targeted to households in need, on a universal geographic basis. No longer will there be areas in urban centres of Canada where one neighbour would be eligible but the neighbour across the street, living in a house in the same state of disrepair, would not be eligible.

There are significant alterations in the rental RRAP. The Hon. Member for Spadina referred to a problem with the previous program. To prevent excessive rent increases and the displacement of people who need help, as often happened under the old program, assistance will be increased from an average of $3,500 to $12,000 per unit. Assistance levels will depend on the relationship between the rents on the property involved after renovation and local market rents. Assistance will be directed to older, lower cost housing stock occupied largely by low income Canadians. A new renovation plan to assist the disabled will raise maximum funding from $1,500 to $5,000. The maximum assistance provided to homeowners with adjusted incomes will be between $23,000 and $33,000.

RRAP in the rural areas will remain unchanged. In particular, this mix of programs can be used in various areas of our country. It can be used to assess the needs of Canadians and then address them, the availability of accommodation in the private market and the specific requirements of groups with special housing needs. This will ensure that the strategies followed will be cost effective.

I want to assure you, Mr. Speaker, that these present policies are not carved in stone. They are not inflexible. They will be monitored very carefully over the days and years to come. After a fair trial period, if any of these programs prove to be ineffective, redundant or do not meet the needs—but I say again, after a fair trial period—we will not hesitate to make those necesary changes because the consultation process is ongoing.

I really appreciate the opportunity today to reaffirm the Government's commitment to these programs and to serve households in need in Canada. We feel confident that the core income need thresholds, which are locally derived but nationally consistent, will greatly assist in achieving our objective of assisting those Canadians who cannot, through no fault of their own, obtain affordable, suitable housing in Canada. The Hon. Member for Spadina, mentioned the new Co-op Housing Program which was designed in conjunction with the Co-op Housing Foundation. The Co-op Housing Foundation put forward a proposal of index-linked mortgages to assist those Canadians who wished tenure because they could not afford home ownership in the market. CMHC and the Government of Canada sat down with the Co-op Housing Foundation. We explored that innovative index-linked mortgage. We had a lot of discussion. It again is not a program which I consider perfect, nor does the Co-op Housing Foundation, but it is a program which should be able to provide some 5,000 co-op housing units to Canadians across Canada at less cost to the Canadian taxpayers than the old program. At the same time, this modest housing will find accommodation for 30 per cent of the units to be rented by Canadians who are in core need.

The evolution in housing has been ongoing. It will not stop now. It will continue to go forward. I am very pleased to be able to say that we have, in conjunction with the groups across Canada, been able to put forward a program which will serve those Canadians who need it most.

In closing, let me say that the ability to establish a criteria based on the guidelines of the National Council on Welfare, or indeed the guidelines of the Canadian Council on Social Development, would not benefit Canadians who need it most. If we used the Canadian Council on Social Development's poverty line with the 1986 core income need threshold for Toronto for a three to four person household at $27,500, and the Canadian Council for Social Development's poverty line for a four person household at approximately $23,000, once again we would find that the issue of affordability of adequate and uncrowded accommodation is not found in those guidelines. They are found in the design of core need which was developed over a long period of time and which I am confident will provide assistance to those Canadians who need it most.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on the Minister's selective use of the core guidelines because I think he will be aware, if he managed to speak to anyone from CAHRO at the convention he attended earlier this week, that the situation in Toronto is the exception rather than the rule. In fact, for almost every major city across Canada the core guidelines mean that people living below the poverty line are no longer eligible for, in particular, RRAP funding. Given that the Minister wants to negate the facts and figures presented here in the House by the Opposition, does he then disagree with complaints which have been made, for example, in Winnipeg, Manitoba, where the Housing Minister has asked for an emergency meeting on the question of RRAP funding because the definition of "core need", as low as it is, has resulted in severe hardship for the people in Winnipeg? Does he disagree with the position taken by the Cape Breton County Council which stated: "RRAP Change Alarms Cape Breton County Council"?

I wonder if the Minister disagrees with the position taken by the Saskatoon City Council which has also expressed concern about the redefinition of "core need" with respect to RRAP funding? Does the Minister disagree with the position taken by the people of Halifax who have also suggested that the redefinition of "core need" has excluded thousands of families living below the poverty line from RRAP assistance? Does he disagree with the position taken by the New Glasgow Town Council in the Province of Nova Scotia which has also pointed out the folly of the Government's new definition of "core need"?

If in fact the Minister does not agree with the Opposition that the definition is too limited, would he in fact agree at the very least to meet with the Minister of Housing for the Province of Manitoba to discuss face to face some of the severe shortcomings which confront the housing program in Winnipeg as a result of these new definitions?

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I would like to address the last question first. The Hon. Minister responsible for housing in the Province of Manitoba requested a meeting. I said I would certainly be pleased to meet with the Minister. I had thought a meeting was scheduled in Toronto last Monday when I was there. The Minister responsible for housing in the Province of Manitoba was unable to attend. I am here in Ottawa. I am available to meet with the Minister at any time.

There is something the Hon. Member did not mention, and I do not think the Minister responsible for housing in Manitoba mentioned, and that is, we signed a global agreement with the Province of Manitoba when the Hon. John Bucklaschuk was the Minister responsible. We signed an agreement on RRAP. We made it very clear at that time that the core income needs would be what we would use to establish the criteria for RRAP. I am still willing to meet with the Minister responsible for housing in Manitoba at any time.

The Hon. Member spoke of eliminating households from eligibility under RRAP. Across Canada, from the data gathered by CMHC, 80 per cent of the individuals who would have been eligible under the old criteria are still eligible.

Ms. Copps: What about the other 20 per cent?

Mr. McKnight: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East asks a good question. With respect to the 20 per cent who are going to be left out, that 20 per cent will be used to serve more Canadians who live below the poverty line. In the utopia of the mind of the Hon. Member it may be fine if we had unlimited dollars to provide for RRAP renovations, but we do not. Therefore, those who need assistance most, surely, in the views of Canadians and the Hon. Member, are the ones who should receive the assistance provided by the taxpayers of Canada.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister made a rather standard reference to the fact that 40 per cent of assistance money in the past was the maximum which went to the people in need. In other words, he is suggesting that 60 per cent of housing assistance money went to people who were not in need. He gives the impression, perhaps, whether intentionally or not, that the 60 per cent was in the form of social housing programs such as co-ops or non-profit or other forms of social housing.

CMHC has consistently emphasized the smaller part of its program, that is, the money which went to the people in need. Over a great many years since World War II it has ignored the larger part of this program, the money that went to developers to increase their profits. In almost all cases those developers produced housing for people who were not in need. In other words, it is true that in the past governments have subsidized developers and, through them, people not in need.

• (1450)

When the Minister says that he is only going to help those in need because they only got 40 cents on the dollar in the past, he conveniently leaves out the fact that the past programs were rankly biased in favour of the profits of the private developers. He implies that there was something wrong with the co-op programs in the past which were attacked by CMHC.

I want the Minister to explain a little further his reference to the co-ops. He says that due to the program which co-ops have developed for a different kind of mortgage system buildings will cost less. He said that there will be a saving of money. The co-ops are asking why the Minister does not recognize that saving provided by the co-ops, rather than the taxpayers, by allowing the co-ops to build a larger number of units than was provided for last year.

The co-ops wish to serve what the Minister calls the "core needy". They wish to make a large number of their units available to people on very low incomes or with very great accommodation needs, according to the Minister's formula. Why has he restricted them to 30 per cent? There are co-ops which want to provide 50 per cent. Why will the Minister not let them?

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, in response to the last question first, the co-ops have provided in the past, and presently wish to provide, more than 30 per cent of their units for use by Canadians in need. There are other private and public non-profit groups which provide shelter to Canadians across the country. In order to design a program which would provide the mix that the co-ops want, and also give a new mortgage instrument a fair opportunity to succeed, the decision was made to limit the co-ops to 30 per cent. The 30 per cent of the units occupied within co-ops would be on a rent supplement basis. That means that Canadian taxpayers would be paying the difference between the rent geared to income and the market rent that would be available in those units.

I found it strange that the Hon. Member said that the saving was provided by the co-ops. What has been provided by the co-op housing foundation was the suggestion, the thought and the idea of a new mortgage instrument, an index-linked mortgage. It has been used in other parts of the world with varying degrees of success. The previous Liberal Government also had an idea along that line, called AHOP, under which the incomes of individuals would increase. That was not—

Mr. Heap: Nonsense.

Mr. McKnight: —as the Hon. Member and I agree, a very good program.

Mr. Heap: It was completely different.

Mr. McKnight: The Hon. Member does not want me to finish answering. I recognize that it is completely different, but I also recognize that it is a new program in Canada. We must have some parameters to ensure that Canadian taxpayers are not put to the same costs that they were under AHOP. I am confident that with the commitment of the co-op foundation and the corporation we will be able to make this program work. If we can make this program work it will be available to all in Canada who wish to own or build rental accommodation.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in entering into this debate I beg the indulgence of the House to provide a personal note. Before entering the federal House in 1979 I served for 10 years as the director of an organizaion called the Institute of Urban Studies which was a university- based urban development centre primarily concerned with issues of inter-city housing, neighbourhood development, and the general shape and environment of the urban scene which we could create.

One very important lesson I learned during that ten-year period was that housing is not purely a function of economics. Nothing is more important in the shaping of attitudes, feelings and a sense of community than the physical environment which one inhabits. The house, community and neighbourhood has an incredible impact on child rearing, stability and neighbourhood cohesion. All the values which we respect have a lot to do with the nature of the community which we build. We should not base our public policies purely on measurements of chartered accountants or the Nielsen-type standards which affect everything according to the harshest and most severe requirements of meeting some kind of cost accountability.

The debate we are having today has the same overtones with regard to housing as had the debate we had almost a year ago on the universality of senior citizens' pensions. It is not purely and simply a question of supplying a targeted need. That is a code word used by Conservatives to say "a means test". They are saying that there is a cut-off based only upon Government assistance to those at the lowest level of income.

Another bit of wisdom I acquired working in the urban area is that one of the most effective initiatives a Government could take would be to ensure that there was a proper social mix of housing, that people were not ghettoized, that there was not, through public policy, a tendency to have one class of people earning one income living in one area.

The best thing we could do for families and children would be to ensure that the housing project, neighbourhood, or community would have a wide variety of individuals within it to ensure that people had different experiences. There should not be a concentration of one group of people. The mistakes made in the public housing projects of the 1950s and early 1960s were a clear example of that. Beginning in the late 1960s the federal housing policy moved away from the idea of strict narrow targeting concentrating one group of people in one kind of project. It was recognized in every industrial country that that form of public housing attempt had serious social overtones.

We are now repeating the mistakes of the 1950s. We are once again talking about targeting, which is a polite way of saying that we are going to destroy that social mix, that we are going to eliminate that opportunity to provide modest income Canadians the opportunity to live with some degree of neighbourhood cohesion. That is the basic objection which one must have to new housing policies. They are not social housing policies in the true sense of the word. We so often hear expressed the narrow-minded attitude that Government support should go only to those who can meet some very low means test. This country has been fighting that concept for 30 or 40 years. Once again we have a Government with that kind of mentality.

I would like to point out to the Members of the House an article written in Policy Options by Professor David Holchanski of the School of Community and Regional Planning at the University of British Columbia who also acts as a consultant for CMHC. He said that the problem with the approach of the Government is that it is repeating the same mistakes that Margaret Thatcher and Ronald Reagan made with their housing policies, and that we are going to end up with the same consequences. We will now have to face the same kinds of problems as they created through their housing policies.

• (1500)

Having said that, I want to talk about a problem we face in the City of Winnipeg where it is perhaps most dramatically emphasized. I will talk just for a moment about the Residential Repair Assistance Program. That is one of the most important urban initiatives ever taken by the federal Government. Over the years it succeeded in helping thousands of Canadians to repair and upgrade their housing. It helped rescue those communities on the verge of destruction. The particular genius of the program is that it applied to inner city neighbourhoods and downtown areas but was not limited strictly to economic factors or income requirements. It was available to a variety of Canadians to upgrade a single family home or an apartment block. It brought incredible stability to many of those communities. In the core area project in Winnipeg, which has been one of the most successful urban development projects by far, the RRAP program was essential. The latest figures show that over 1,200 units were upgraded with the assistance of RRAP over the last four years. Yet the programs introduced by that Minister will achieve the total destruction of RRAP.

Let me give you one example from one neighbourhood in my constituency, the Lord Roberts community. It is a community of apartment blocks and working class houses. It is a good community but it has to fight against the encroachment of urban blight. People are making an honest effort to win that fight. A couple of months ago there were 133 applications under RRAP from that one small neighbourhood. Now that this great new Tory initiative has been brought in, only 21 applications are eligible. Fully 75 per cent of the people accepted for the program previously have now been taken off the eligibility list. That story has been repeated in neighbourhood after neighbourhood in my city. You will find that of the applications in existence before the new program was brought in, fully 70 per cent no longer apply. The reason is that the threshold of $13,000 is simply not high enough to meet the various family configurations in the downtown and urban neighbourhoods, so they have been removed from the program. Of course, at the same time the landlords in the program get a substantial hike. The Government is saying to the more modest income families in the neighbourhood that they no longer count. The end result in that particular urban neighbourhood will be the elimination of the ability of individual home owners to fight against urban erosion and upgrade their communities, all for the sake of "target threshold needs". Those are the code words for the Government's decision to no longer recognize its responsibility to provide incentives towards the improvement and redevelopment of our urban neighbourhoods. It is a betrayal of those neighbourhoods and communities.

We have the same kind of program dealing with off reserve Indian housing. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner), knows this full well as Indian affairs critic. The head of the Manitoba Métis Federation, Ed Swain, has said the same thing. Days after the announcement of the new program, and after analysing the figures, he said that this program no longer allows the Manitoba Métis Federation to continue its off-reserve housing program. Again, the income requirements are such that those families deepest in need cannot apply, and those who were using the program have incomes above the threshold.

What is the point in having a program that does not work? We know what the point is. The Government does not want the programs to work at all. It is more interested in saving money and cutting back the CMHC budget. It wants to reduce expenditures on social housing. This is a carefully crafted formula to ensure that social housing programs do not work. In that way, step by step, the Government can withdraw from its responsibility and commitments to the housing needs of Canadians. That is really the message behind this brave new world the Government has introduced.

We have certainly seen over the past two years the peculiar ideological hang-up the Government has about the constructive programs and initiatives it can provide to people to help themselves. But why has the Government concentrated solely on the social housing program expenditures? Have members of the Government talked about all the incentives given to developers? Have you seen them cutting back on major tax expenditure programs? Oh, no, they have concentrated exclusively on the social housing programs. They are not only cutting back on the dollars, but by introducing unworkable or restrictive formulas they have eliminated from eligibility the very people who have been making use of these programs. That is why we have presented this resolution. We are trying to draw to the attention not only of members of the Government but of the public at large the fact that this is a phoney program. It is not designed to help those in need because need is defined at such a restricted level that it can never be met.

Going back to the conditions of the RRAP program, a very valuable and important development taking place in one of our major cities has now been brought to a virtual standstill. I wish the Government would bring to a standstill the efforts it is making on countervailing actions taken by the U.S. If it was as effective in that area of public policy as it is in bringing to an absolute halt the useful housing initiatives on the books, we would be much happier. The fact of the matter is that, whether it be the mayor of the City of Winnipeg, the head of the rehabilitation program, or the provincial Minister of Housing, the conclusion is the same: The Government has killed the program. It has done an injustice to that part of Winnipeg. The end result will be that over the next several years the valiant efforts being made to fight urban blight and erosion will be lost. The social cost will therefore be much higher. Housing was contributing substantially not only to the physical renewal of the city, but to human and emotional renewal. People were beginning to take pride in their community because they could do something about it. They could get RRAP grants and fix their houses. They knew they were doing something valuable not only for themselves but for their neighbourhood. Yet this Government, which talks about private initiative, is taking the initiative away from those people.

When we sit down five years from now to calculate the end cost, it is going to be much higher than if this program had been maintained. Many of those neighbourhoods will now no longer be able to provide that resurrection which was taking place. The deterioration will set in and we will be paying much higher costs to keep the repairs going. That is the end result. Can anyone in their right mind conclude that that is an effective social program? Is that really effective policy-making when you are creating a worse problem than the one you now have? You end up not only providing an inequitable answer, but one that will be more costly. That simply does not make sense.

• (1510)

The point of this debate is to try to get this Government to change its approach on social housing and on the RRAP program. It will not be that much more costly. We are talking maybe of $2 million or $3 million more over the next three or four years. That is the difference that it makes. The end result would be the regeneration of thousands of housing units, as opposed to a standstill in those programs.

We are here to try to appeal to the common sense of this Government, to ask it why it would destroy something that was working well. Why erode something that was having an important impact on our communities and our citizens in this country? Why are you taking it away? Why are you eliminating it? That is not understandable to anybody, whatever their political background.

The Mayor of the City of Winnipeg is a well known supporter of the Conservative Party. He is the one that is complaining equally loud and saying, "Why are you doing it to us?" I do not understand what is behind it all. Unless, once again, we are seeing a Government caught in its own ideological mind trap. The Government is so preoccupied and obsessed with the kind of thinking you saw in the Nielsen exercise of shaving and cutting that it is not able to see the forest for the trees. The Government is not able to judge the consequences of its acts. If a program is working well, it is not able to leave it alone and allow it to continue. That is the appeal that we make. Surely we must provide for communities that are properly mixed to fight against the kind of ghettoization that took place in the past. If that is the objective, then you have only one choice, and that is to change these housing programs before they do irreparable damage.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the Member indicating that social policies should make things better rather than worse. I wonder if the Member would admit that the piece of public policy which hurt housing the most in this decade is 22 per cent mortgage rates. If he is willing to admit that, can he tell the House why he continued to support a Government with a set of policies that produced 22 per cent mortgage rates?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I guess I could only describe it as a supercilious question. It is interesting that the Hon. Member has obviously not read the budget statements of his own Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). After repeated questioning in debate, the Minister of Finance said that he is following a policy whereby the Bank of Canada sets its rates according to the dictates of the international market and the money markets. The rates go up and down, as we know. Every Thursday the Bank of Canada sets a new rate, depending upon the flows of capital, which is exactly what was done in the past.

There is no difference in setting interest rates on that basis other than what a Government might try to do to offset the impact of those rates, perhaps by providing alternative programs. We defended that simply by saying that because we live in a world where there are capital flows between countries at the flick of a computer button, who can control them? Does your Minister artificially set rates? Has the Minister of Finance in the Mulroney Government stood up here and said that he will artificially set a rate, whether higher or lower, whatever the case may be? Oh, no. The Minister of Finance in this Government follows the same principles as did the Minister of Finance in the previous Government.

As the Member well knows, as a distinguished former academic, interest rates were high everywhere. They were 25 per cent in Europe, they were 18 per cent and 19 per cent in the United States. The world was going through a dramatic recession. Interest rates were being fuelled by inflationary forces spawned by oil price changes that were taking place and by other international forces, and there was no country that was immune from those forces.

It would seem to me that the Hon. Member, who should know better and who has an understanding of economics, should analyse it according to what did take place. At that time we had social housing programs and we were trying to meet a larger and broader mix of people in this community because they could not afford the kind of housing that the private market supplied, as they cannot today. They cannot afford it today unless there are forms of support. One of the realities is that the cost of land, materials and labour has reached the point that large proportions of Canadians simply cannot afford housing on their own income. Now, we hide a lot of those sudsidies through tax expenditures. That is what we are asking, why are we concentrating in this case only on the social housing program and why are we eliminating it? Why are we not looking at the total basket of housing programs and getting a much better mix of those programs?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), given his involvement in the Province of Manitoba formerly as a provincial MLA, if he might be able to shed some light on the problem which faces residents in northern parts of Canada. I have here a couple of letters from the Province of Saskatchewan. One is from a Mr. Larry Dawson, who is in need of RRAP funding because he has to install improvements to his septic system. He is certainly not spending the money in a liberal fashion, he needs basic changes to his household structure.

As well, Mrs. Mona Dawson, who applied in 1985 and who, because of this Government's 25 per cent cut-back in RRAP funding, was advised she had no possibility for 1985 funding, was put on the waiting list for 1986. The points that Mr. Dawson raised in his letter to the provincial and federal Minister responsible for housing is that, given that he lives in a northern climate by the time his approval for construction comes through, it may be some time in the late summer, early fall and he may be faced with problems of climate, given the possibility of permafrost, et cetera.

I wonder if the Member could outline whether he believes there should be some specific exemptions or accommodations made for those people who are applying for RRAP assistance, who have been pushed off because of this Government's cut-backs, and who now find themselves facing the fall and winter of 1986 waiting for funds for which they applied in 1985 because of the particular climate problems of living in northern areas.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, we have the same conditions in northern Manitoba that you are facing in the downtown area. Because of the cost conditions, and other reasons, large numbers of people have been eliminated from applying for RRAP grants. As a result, the basic housing program in northern Manitoba, as in northern Saskatchewan, is coming to a standstill. People who were formerly able to take on some opportunity to help themselves are no longer being given that opportunity. Seventy per cent of the people who had previously been eligible for those programs have now been taken off the list. It is a clear example of just how topsy-turvy and self-destructive that kind of program really is. Those were the very people who saw in the RRAP program the opportunity to help themselves. It is going to set back housing needs in those northern areas to the point where it will take years to recover the momentum again.

The Government has sliced through what was beginning to develop into a major housing initiative in the northern parts of Canada, which is now being frozen to the point where it will take years to recover and reach the same state of achievement it once had.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I recognize the expertise in urban areas of the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). I would like to point out that in the case of the people who made those applications, the person from northern Saskatchewan and the person from southern Saskatchewan, from Rouleau, who were mentioned by the Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap), it did not happen in the last two years or 18 months that someone did not have a septic tank or someone in southern Saskatchewan did not have plumbing. What happened was that under the previous program, scarce Canadian tax dollars were going to individuals who had annual incomes of over $23,000. Loans were made to individuals with incomes of over $23,000 while Canadians with low incomes, who were most in need, were denied access to this program because there was not enough money to go around.

• (1520)

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry is, if anything, on the left side of centre of his Party, and surely he must recognize that if Canadian taxpayers have enough money to help Canadians who are most in need, that is where they would like to target their resources. I am familiar with the redevelopment in Winnipeg. I am also familiar with the lack of development in Cape Breton, rural areas of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and British Columbia.

The Canadian taxpayers are not an unlimited resource. The decision has to be made to meet the needs of the two individuals from northern Manitoba and southern Saskatchewan whom the Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) brought to our attention, so that they could also share. There are over 100,000 rental units in need of repair and over 100,000 ownership units in Canada in need of structural repair. There was not enough money under the Liberal program nor is there enough under this program to fix those units overnight. However, the decision has to be made to target for those Canadians who are most in need.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I just want to make a quick response. If the Minister says that there is not enough money in those programs, why did he cut the funds back by 25 per cent? If there was not enough money originally, why did he reduce it even further rather than leaving it as it was?

Let me give an example. We were talking about people who simply want plumbing and sewage. The Minister talked about all those extravagant people in downtown Winnipeg receiving unnecessary loans. The cut-off rate we are dealing with is $19,000. That sum of $19,000 for a family living in the downtown area of Winnipeg is a bare minimum to get by. Therefore, they simply cannot afford to spend any extra capital to fix their houses, to fix the foundations and bring them up to standard unless they are eligible for RRAP. The Minister has taken that away from them.

That community was regenerating itself because people in that income level were prepared to put their time, effort and some of their scarce capital into improvements because they could get RRAP funds. They no longer can do so, and those neighbourhoods are being condemned to further deterioration. That is the real problem and the reason the social cost is becoming prohibitive. It will cost twice as much to fix up those neighbourhoods five years from now because the Minister did not leave the RRAP program alone. That is the problem.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Calgary West): It is a pleasure to enter the debate on housing this afternoon and to follow the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). I had asked him a question and he responded by talking about interest rates in Europe and England. The absence of any comment on the role of the federal Government in the creation of high interest rates was noticeable in his answer. The fact is that there is a correlation between the demand for loans and the cost of money.

It should come as no surprise that interest rates increase as a result of 17 years in office of a Government that has gradually increased its expenditures and increased its borrowing requirements to the point where one-third of its expenditures pays for that borrowed money. One has a sense of déjà vu when one listens to the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member is most eloquent when he asks for $2 million or $3 million more for Winnipeg. He had almost as many employees in his office as a Minister of the Crown as there are for 10 cabinet Ministers in our Government.

Mr. Axworthy: No. Mazankowski has more.

Mr. Hawkes: The use of borrowed taxpayers' money drove up the cost of mortgages for homeowners in this country. That is the kind of Member we had from Winnipeg—Fort Garry. The Hon. Member has lowered his sights substantially by asking for $2 million or $3 million more. He was a Miniser pork-barrelling in hundreds of millions of dollars of borrowed money for his personal fiefdom while the rest of the country went to hell in a hand basket. That is the kind of Member we had from Winnipeg—Fort Garry. That is why the cost of money rose and that is why we have so many housing problems in this country.

Mr. Axworthy: Just keep saying it, because the people in Winnipeg love it.

Mr. Hawkes: He says to just keep saying it. I will say it to the day I die because I like to speak the truth. Of course, he did not do this alone. He was joined by the spendthrift gang.

One can recognize the difference between a Conservative and a Liberal by seeing what was absent from the Hon. Member's plea for $2 million or $3 million more. If the Conservative Government decided that spending $2 million or $3 million for Winnipeg should be a priority, it would determine what cuts could be made in order to provide that money. Rather than borrowing the money we would make a cut in an area of less importance. Do not make today's children pay tomorrow by borrowing more money; cut an expenditure if you want to provide an increase elsewhere. That is the difference between Liberals and Conservatives.

Mr. Axworthy: The difference is that we don't give capital gains allowance of $500,000 to rich friends like yours.

Mr. Hawkes: I remember the scientific research tax credit of $2.5 billion, Mr. Speaker. What a triumph of public policy, that $2,500 million was. That one simple tax program amounts to double our expenditure on housing in this country this year. What a bunch of geniuses.

The Hon. Member made one comment with which all of us should be able to agree. He said that housing for Canadians is important. I have had a peculiar set of jobs which brought to my attention the frequency of suicide and illness and the sense of alienation that occurs in Canadian society.

Soon after the Second World War, Central Mortgage and Housing decided that mortgages and insurance should relate to houses of a particular design, with the advent of the L-shaped living room and dining room in small 940 square foot houses.

That simple insurance principle destroyed the family kitchen in Canada. This is a room that was built on warmth, closeness and conversation. It is a room that provided for a closer relationship between parents and children. Children would do their homework there while the mother would knit or listen to the radio. Yet that policy on houses probably contributed more to alienation and mental illness in this country than any other policy. That realization contributed to my sense of the importance of public policy on the lives of individuals and motivated me to enter this Chamber.

It is important to note clearly the difference between the housing policy proposed by the Minister of Labour (Mr. McKnight) and that which would be proposed by either of the two opposition Parties. Canadians had a choice in September, 1984, and they must not lose sight of their options in 1988.

The motion before us today suggests that the eligibility for housing assistance should be defined on an income-based figure alone and should apply all across the country. That is not inconsistent with the opposition Members' points of view about all kinds of things. When they talk about universality, they talk about treating the rich and the poor equally. They talk about treating all members of our society and all communities as if they were the same. That is the basic thrust of their proposition. It is not the thrust of ours.

The thrust of our approach to public policy is to recognize that this is a large country. It is a country with many unique communities and with cultural differences that relate to language and background. It is a country which has been built by immigrants. It is a country that takes pride in its sense of multiculturalism and in its sense of diversity. Members of the Liberal and New Democratic Parties want us all to be of the same mould and to be treated in exactly the same way. That is a point of view, but it is not my point of view. I think the country is richer and better served by public policy that recognizes provincial, regional, community and cultural differences.

What the Minister of Labour has proposed in what he is carrying forward into the community is a sense of a core need concept. His sense of that core need is close to my own. He has identified core need as being applicable to any household in which 30 per cent of the family income, or more, goes to providing decent shelter. What does that formula take into account? It takes into account the reality that wages vary, and that they vary enormously from community to community. That is the income side of the issue, the family income side. It also takes into account the fact that the price of property and the rents we pay for that property vary widely from community to community.

If one lives in a low wage area with low housing costs, then one may or may not meet the definition of core need. If one lives in a low wage area with high housing costs, then one will certainly meet the requirements. If one lives in a high wage area with low rental costs, then one will not meet the requirements. However, if one lives in a high wage area with high housing costs, then one may meet the requirements. Incomes are matched to costs. That is surely common sense. Surely it is the only formula proposed which takes into account both sides of the equation, the cost side and the income side.

Members of the Liberal Party and members of the New Democratic Party would have us take into account only the income side. If it is strictly the income side which is to be considered, then some people who are relatively rich will receive part of the money, as will some who are relatively poor. If we follow the formula devised by the Minister of Labour, none of the money will go to the rich and all of it will go to the poor.

What do Canadians want? If we were able to provide a certain amount of money to all Canadians, would they prefer that everyone receive $100, or that the poorest 10 per cent receive $1,000, or that the poorest 20 per cent receive $500? I do not know how Canadians would vote as between the lowest 10 per cent and the lowest 20 per cent. I do know that Canadians would prefer to see the poorest in society receive more and the richest receive nothing, or less. That is the Conservative philosophy. I think it is something with which all members of our caucus feel comfortable. I think it is something with which most Canadians feel comfortable. It is not something with which the Liberal Party of Canada feels comfortable. It is not something with which the New Democratic Party feels comfortable. I think that is their basic objection to what the Minister is doing in terms of the Canadian housing policy.

What the Minister has done is to set up a formula which ensures that the money will go to those who need it the most and that it will be community-specific, based on community income for an individual, the standard in the community. It will be based on the costs in the community. When the Hon. Member stood up and told us that the previous pattern delivered 40 per cent of the money to people who needed it and 60 per cent to those who did not, then he was talking about the Liberal approach. Our philosophy is that 100 per cent of the money should go to those who need it. That is what the Minister is intending to devise. I believe the taxpayers will be better served by that type of mechanism.

In the time remaining I would like to review the process briefly. What the Minister has done is what many of our Ministers have done. It is different from the Liberal approach. A change in public policy has been proceeded with as a result of discussion and consultation in which both sides talk and both sides listen. Out of that process have come proposals that enable the federal Government to enter into a partnership with others in society, in this case with the provinces, to target assistance to those who need it the most. What that produces is more housing for more people. With respect to the program under discussion today, there will be twice as many households helped with the same expenditure of dollars as under the former program. Those who will receive the help clearly need it the most. None of the money will go to those who do not need it. It is a pleasure to stand up in the House and congratulate the Minister for his foresight and for the development of this program.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy).

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, first, let me say to the Hon. Member that we must appreciate one of the more unique, if not bizarre, dissertations in this House in which the social pathology of Canada has been ascribed to the L-shaped livingroom which was developed in the 1950s. That has the makings of a wonderful doctoral dissertation. However, I am not sure how relative it is to the debate.

Before I ask the Hon. Member a question, I wish to point out one thing. He made a great fuss about how Conservatives recognize that we must help those in need and not the rich. I guess it comes down to the question of how that need is defined. I simply point out to the Hon. Member that a family of four which lives in my riding and makes $19,000 is not exactly rich. That is a very ordinary income, and only meets the very barest of essentials. Those are the people about whom I am talking. Those are the ones who have been cut out of the program. There is nothing rich about them. There is nothing upper-income about them. They are very ordinary working people, who want to try to save their houses and their neighbourhoods. The Hon. Member and his Government are stopping them from doing that.

Furthermore, I ask the Hon. Member, who was so congratulatory to his Minister for all the wonderful things he has done, and taking into account the new formula, if he can explain to me one simple thing. Why is it that there has been absolutely no allocation of any money since April for the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program even though we are now close to the beginning of June? Can the Hon. Member tell me why all that time has been allowed to pass without any allocations for RRAP having been made? Not only does that cut out the rich and those with modest incomes, it cuts out everyone up to this point in time.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to respond to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry. I am not the Minister, nor am I an administrator. I suspect his information is incorrect, because it usually is. However, I have no definitive knowledge about whether or not any money has been paid out under RRAP. It is interesting that the Hon. Member did not ask that question of the Minister when he had the opportunity.

Mr. Heap: I can you tell that none has been paid out.

• (1540)

Mr. Hawkes: Returning to L-shaped living and dining rooms, there is a certain amount of predictability to the Hon. Member's behaviour. If one has a rather well thought out explanation of a phenomenon, something that happens to be new to one's mind is rejected without thought. There is the notion that what went on before is best, not through any process of logic, not through any process of evidence, but simply because it went on before and they devised it. I suggest that this is one reason why those Members are sitting on that side rather than this side.

Mr. Axworthy: Have you looked at the polls lately? It won't be long.

Mr. Hawkes: Canadians are common-sense people. They can differentiate between the reality of a situation and the public expression of something that does not accord with that reality. I suggest to the Hon. Member that he think a little longer about what the L-shaped living and dining room did to small Canadian houses and therefore to Canadian families and people. I think he might find some wisdom in the idea if he could just open his ears long enough to hear it and then work extra hard to think about it.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, we are talking about the housing needs of more than a million Canadians who are under-housed, either homeless or living in inadequate accommodations, and the Hon. Member seems to be stuck on some architectural notion about L-shaped living and dining rooms. Given his defence of the Government's RRAP program and his unfortunately incorrect perception that those people who have been cut from RRAP are people who are somehow living in the lap of luxury, does he believe that it should be the right of Canadians like Mr. Dawson from Saskatchewan to have running water and a heating system in their homes? If he does feel that it is their right to have running water and heating systems, could he tell me why Mr. Dawson contacted the office of the Minister more than a month ago about specific funding requests and was put on a waiting list at a time when he was facing the possibility of construction during the winter in northern Saskatchewan? Are these the people the Conservative Government intends to cut out from RRAP eligibility because they are living in the lap of luxury?

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, that was spoken like someone who grew up in Hamilton or Toronto. When I was growing up, I carried in the coal, I carried in the water, I carried out the slops and I used an outdoor privy. In my generation, most of the people in my region lived like that. There is nothing inherently wrong with accommodation of the kind the Hon. Member describes. There may be something very difficult about it.

The Hon. Member may be describing someone who lives in a city and has health problems or she may be describing a millionaire living in a cabin in the woods by choice. We do not know. However, one thing we do know is that any Canadian who meets the core definition of needing 30 per cent or more of income to provide decent and adequate housing in the community is eligible for this program. There must be something very strange about the isolated case which the Hon. Member has presented to us.

Quite consistently in the House and in committee, we hear partial stories designed for media interest rather than any kind of considered public policy debate. We heard not one single, decent public policy principle enunciated by the Hon. Member in her 20-minute speech. That is typical.

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, first I would like to commend the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) on his comments. I would like to offer a further comment on Saskatchewan housing. It is odd that the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) is speaking on behalf of Saskatchewan. As one whose constituency comprises fully one-quarter of the Province of Saskatchewan and who travels a great deal in northern Saskatchewan, I personally have a great interest in northern housing.

I would like the Hon. Member to know that last summer I took an extensive northern tour of 14 communities located above the 17th base line. There are obviously many problems, both social and economic, endemic to far northern communities, but one concern that was articulated repeatedly was the concern for housing, first for its availability in very remote northern communities, and second for the construction and financing requirements.

At that time, I was able to approach my friend and colleague, the Minister responsible for housing, to talk to him about this, and we discussed the idea of having a northern housing forum at which all of the mayors and councillors from northern Saskatchewan communities could get together under one roof to talk about construction requirements, such as the suitability of log housing in northern communities, and about financing. I think the Hon. Member for Hamilton East should be very pleased to join with me in applauding the fact that on June 7, the Minister responsible for housing in all of Canada will be in northern Saskatchewan to meet with northern representatives and to talk about northern housing. I would like to commend the Minister for that.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I am really pleased with that intervention. It identifies in a very clear-cut way that many people in Canada live in isolated areas, and when we talk about the North, we are usually talking about high costs. We may be talking about high wages and we may be talking about poverty, but we are always talking about high costs. Part of the genius of the Minister's program is that a person could be making a big wage but may indeed be needy if he lives in a high-cost area. We are trying to provide housing for the North, for the South, for Toronto and for Yukon. The Minister is to be congratulated for that attempt.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, apparently the Hon. Member was not here when I spoke today nor when I dealt with the matter earlier. In Saskatchewan, no money is available for rural RRAP. There is not one cent available to anyone, and that is the information I received from the Minister's office today. The money has been postponed and postponed. Even though the Minister said on Tuesday in an E-Mail note to all offices that the money is available today, his office had to admit that that is not true and the money is not now available. It is not a matter of some eccentric millionaire, it is a matter of anyone in Saskatchewan who might be eligible for RRAP but who cannot receive it today.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I apologize for not being here during the Hon. Member's speech, but I was working on an immigration matter. What I should do is to ask the Hon. Member if, when the money is available, he thinks it will go to the right people and if he thinks it might be available tomorrow. I do not think the problem has existed for very long. There is always an administrative lag.

It may very well be that people in Saskatchewan are not getting the money today, but will they be getting it tomorrow? When they get it, will it be going to the people who need it the most? The primary public policy principle before us is that when the money becomes available, it goes to the right people, those who need it.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member ignored the case of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, in such a cavalier fashion, a case that was raised with the office of the Minister responsible for national housing more than a month ago. Do not forget that Mr. and Mrs. Dawson are the people with no running water and no furnace. The Hon. Member thinks that that is okay. My family is from northern Ontario and I understand a little bit about the North. I think there are many northern families who would like to have running water and heating facilities and I think it is an outrage for the Hon. Member to state that he thinks it is fine and dandy for people to live without that.

Mr. Gormley: He didn't say that. Be fair.

Ms. Copps: You weren't here when the Hon. Member spoke. That's exactly what he said.

Why has the Hon. Member said nothing when the fact is that this family and hundreds of others across Saskatchewan were cut off because funding available from Canada Mortgage and Housing was fully committed? There was no money for any family in rural Saskatchewan as a result of the Government's policies which led to a 25 per cent cut-back in RRAP funding. Why was he not talking about critical issues like running water and heating rather than L-shaped living-dining rooms?

• (1550)

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, one suspects that physiologically there is a correlation between how wide open one's mouth is and how closed one's ears are from time to time.

People choose to live without central heating. People choose to live in certain kinds of ways. The Hon. Member is trying to lay upon the table a piece of information in partial form. Are we dealing with a millionaire? I asked that question before. Yes or no? Are we dealing with someone whose income and shelter meet the core definition? Yes or no?

The public policy issue we were supposed to debate today is: Would the definition of poverty of the National Council of Welfare produce a better situation? How much money was available in housing funds in September, 1984, on election day? Was an entire year's budget pork-barrelled out prior to election day? What responsibility does the Hon. Member have, as a member of the Liberal Party, for ignoring housing needs for six months or seven months in an attempt to win an election with borrowed money, which drove up interest rates for everyone? What obligation does she have to answer to the House for that kind of public policy?

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to participate in the debate on the extremely important matter of housing and on the proposal of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) for a national housing strategy. It is not quite the direction in which I think we ought to be going, but certainly the subject is an important one and I want to put a few observations on the record for my own riding. As well, I want to raise some of my own concerns and to indicate my particular interest in housing for women.

Over the past few winters in Canada we have seen a proliferation of food banks and food depots run by churches and voluntary organizations. We have seen Canadians lining up for food for the simple reason that they do not have enough money because they are spending so much of their very limited resources on housing. Many of these people have some form of income. A lot of them are women with family benefits, women raising children without adequate support, and toward the end of the month they do not have enough money because of extremely high charges for rent.

I think of a disabled woman in my constituency who visited my riding office. Her income was slightly over $400 per month. She shares an apartment with a monthly rent of $600 with another woman, so they both pay $300 per month in rent. This means that she has $100 per month left over for all other expenses—metro, food, clothing, and everything else. She is pressed into going to food banks because of inadequate housing. Her name is on waiting lists for subsidized housing along with some other 20,000 Metro people.

Rooms are costing an enormous amount of money. People on very limited incomes or people on welfare simply do not have enough money to go around. We have people going to hostels and hostels turning people away. We have a revolving door in the hostel system. The people who go to hostels, as well as those who run them, tell us that they do not want hostels. They want adequate housing. Hostels are not a response to the critical issue of inadequate affordable houses and apartments for Canadians.

My riding of Broadview—Greenwood is no worse than other ridings. It has some poor housing, some good housing, and some in between housing. However, it has many people who are on waiting lists because they simply cannot afford accommodation, and people are sharing accommodations because of inadequacy.

Many of the people with real housing needs that are not being met are women. Women are in this difficulty for two reasons. One is the old association between women and poverty. More women are poor. Women who have jobs do not earn as much money as men. Of course, women are still responsible for most of the child care when families break up. Most of the single parents are women. They have the responsibility for children. They have lower incomes, very little support money, yet higher expenses because they have children to look after. As a result they are really pushed in paying for housing.

Only 37 per cent of women own their own homes compared with 71 per cent of men. They do not have the money to buy houses, so 63 per cent of women rent compared with 29 per cent of men. Women rent poorer and cheaper accommodation than men because they do not have enough money. The figures indicate that 61 per cent of women and 27 per cent of men pay less than $450 per month on rent. Men, far more often than women, are able to afford much more luxurious accommodation, better and pricier apartments. A substantial majority of low-income women who are renters rate their housing as inadequate, either for the size they are able to afford or the amenities or for both.

Of course women, far more often than men, depend upon social housing; 87 per cent of single persons in public and non-profit housing and co-ops are women. Nearly all single parents, or 96 per cent of them, in social housing and in co-ops are women because they cannot afford rents or they cannot afford to buy a house of their own.

What is wrong? Obviously housing in Canada is a basic need as it is everywhere. In Canada, with its cold climate, more elaborate and better housing is needed than in many other places. Canada recognizes, as indicated in the United Nations Universal Declaration of Human Rights, that everyone has the right to adequate housing for health and well-being. While we recognize this right for everyone, we do not have any system to ensure that the right is met. Essentially we have reliance upon the private market which is geared to profit-making, not to the meeting of needs. The private market is a primary deliverer of housing but it is oriented toward profits, and there are more profits in luxury private houses and condominiums.

In fact, much public money goes into housing by way of the back door. Tax subsidies to builders and homeowners are enormous. Although I do not have up-to-date figures, the figures for 1980 total $9 billion. At the same time, only $700 million was provided for social housing through CMHC. When Conservative Members rise to say that they want the program to be directed to those people in need, to the poor, that they do not think the subsidy should be going to the rich, and that their core need proposal will meet that objective, they are entirely missing the point. More of the subsidies go to well off people through tax concessions, not through direct grants; they go disproportionately to the better off. We do have public policy. It may be inadvertent or implicit, but it is there. It means that overwhelmingly public funds are directed to those who need them the least.

The issue of the housing needs of women is one which will be addressed by the National Action Committee on the Status of Women at its annual convention this weekend. A housing subcommittee which has been preparing for the convention has come up with a number of proposals to be discussed. They are far more adequate than anything the Government has come up with in terms of meeting these needs.

Some of the proposals are directed toward the provincial and municipal levels of Government and do not concern us. One proposal recommends that the federal Government should ensure a fair distribution of tax benefits for housing. They urge that the data, which is not easy to come by because it is so obscured by going through tax concessions rather than direct grants, should be analysed regularly and made available to the public, so that people will know how tax money or tax exemption deduction money is being spent. Also they urge that the Government abolish tax incentives to private developers in favour of a system of direct grants, so that people will clearly know how the money is being spent. Then there will be proper accountability and we can ensure that those who need it receive most of it.

They indicate as well that the right to housing without discrimination on the basis of family status should be recognized. Of course we know the difficulty faced by parents, especially single parents with young children, in finding housing. Also they suggest funding for women's emergency shelters where it is lacking. Let us be very clear that while this is support for women's emergency shelters, it is not an endorsation of shelters as any kind of adequate substitute. Priority should be given instead to establish long-term affordable and appropriately managed housing for women in hostels because we do not want to see another tragic reoccurrence of a woman turned away from a hostel and dying outside without shelter. It is recommended that the federal Government ensure through federal-provincial agreements that people be supplied with housing such that low income people are not forced to spend more than 25 per cent of their income on housing. The Government is shifting to this 30 per cent level and, certainly, we have had a very long history regarding 25 per cent of income as the ceiling beyond which people should not have to spend their money on housing but should have it available for food, clothing and other essentials. It is recommended that the Government ensure that the special needs of the elderly to remain in their own homes are met. It is recommended that CMHC reassess design features of social housing, to develop standards reflecting the needs of women as well as of men. There should be access of the disabled to social housing which is something which has been very slow in coming. Then there were some very good recommendations to other levels of Government regarding the integration of social housing in neighbourhoods, and problems of shelter allowances not to be seen as any kind of long term solution when we have an underlying problem of supply and problems of conversion of rental apartments to condominiums. In other words, a very global approach to this whole question should be taken.

• (1600)

I want to make it very clear that by raising the questions of women's issues, housing and shelter and poverty, I am not in any way endorsing the Government's approach that only this poor, needy group of poor should be the subject of a national housing policy. I do not endorse that approach at all. In fact, we have a national housing policy. Unfortunately, it is a very implicit and unfair one in which most of the subsidies go by way of tax concessions and are, therefore, hidden, because they do not go by way of direct grants. These huge subsidies for homeowners are of advantage to middle and upper income earners and the contribution of public money to low and middle income earners is comparatively modest. Instead, we need a national strategy which would be fair in its distribution. Certainly, we want a national strategy which will put the meeting of needs first, will be global and will see that the needs of all Canadians are met.

I want also to say something about co-ops. Co-operative housing is good housing, by and large, certainly, if my riding of Broadview—Greenwood is any example. We have excellent co-ops, the Bain Co-op, the Riverdale Co-op, the Innstead Co-ops, which are among the best in Toronto if not in Canada and the world. Unfortunately, the co-op idea is not fully appreciated by the Government and is often attacked by members of the Government so that we have something of a catch-22 situation.

We are told that co-ops house a lot of people who do not need to be in co-ops because they have adequate incomes. However, co-ops have to take people with adequate incomes in order to pay the housing charges because they do not have adequate subsidies to rent to people who cannot pay market rates. There are co-ops in my riding which would happily take a larger proportion of people on subsidies and feel they could integrate them well into their co-op communities but are not allowed to do so because of inadequacies of subsidy. If only 15 per cent of the units are subsidized, it means that most of the people who would be moving in would be in the middle and better off income brackets. The Riverdale Co-op subsidizes close to 50 per cent of the units. It would happily subsidize more if it was given the money. But it had to close its waiting list a year and a half ago for subsidized housing. It had its limit. There was a long waiting list. Some people have been on the waiting list to be given a subsidized unit in a co-op for four years. When units come up, they cannot be given to the people who need them the most because they do not have any more subsidy money.

There is also a problem with co-ops in Toronto which want to renovate. Here we have, you might say, housing stock which is not totally deteriorated but needs fairly substantial renovations. Renovations cost money and the maximum unit prices which are allowed by CMHC are set too high. In order to purchase a house and do the necessary renovations, they go beyond the limits. So we have co-ops which are doing excellent work, which would like to expand, but because of the rules as they are at present, they are simply not able to do so. Certainly, those artificial limits which prevent the expansion of really well functioning co-ops should be looked at again.

The Liberal motion before us shows a certain amount of concern and goodwill. However, I do not think it is all that well thought out in terms of policy. I do not agree that the focus should be only on this core needy group. I think the Liberals themselves have a great deal to answer for in the inadequate housing stock we now have in Canada. The decline of activity in CMHC did not start as of September 4, 1984. It started under the Liberal Government. The enormous disparities in support by way of tax concessions to better off people and direct grants to lower and middle income groups through social housing began under the Liberals. It was not invented by the Conservatives, although they are happy to continue it and obscure the fact that public money is going to subsidize the wealthy. They are happy about that. They like the ability to be able to say that we have to gear money to the needy because they have hidden away their much larger grants through a subsidy system in tax exemptions. The Conservatives are happy with this situation but they did not invent it. The Liberals invented it.

The refusal to develop a real national housing strategy which treats housing as a right, puts need first and devises a system to meet needs, is a Liberal as well as a Conservative fault. The fact that more than a million Canadians are inadequately housed did not just happen since the last election. It is not just a problem of this Government. It has been a growing problem. There has been neglect over a long period of time and the Liberals themselves must bear some of the responsibility.

Rather than the motion we have before us today, I would much prefer the approach taken by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) who has argued very positively for an alternative strategy, one which would put the needs of Canadians first and which would outline how we reach the needs of the more than a million Canadians who are inadequately housed. There would be a direct building program and rehabilitation of substandard housing. We should have a plan so that, over the next five years, 500,000 units could be provided. We would, in short, take the very serious needs for housing as a problem which deserves concerted attention. We would devise a strategy and would treat it as we have other areas such as medicare and public education. These are now recognized as rights. One does not have to be poor and needy and pass a means test in order to qualify for consideration of those rights. We should really treat the housing situation as a high priority and devise strategies accordingly.

I would far prefer to support that kind of constructive, aggressive, creative and far more imaginative approach. I think that is the kind of approach the seriousness of this problem deserves. I think that is the kind of discussion we should be having in this House, not this much more narrow focus on a defined group of core needy people, totally ignoring the fact of enormous subsidies going through a completely different system which is handily shoved aside and not discussed at the same time. This kind of disproportion is unfortunate and means we do not see where the resouces might be to bring to bear on the really serious problem of people who do not have adequate housing while so much public money is going to those who can really afford to pay for it themselves.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), for introducing an opposition motion which gives us the opportunity to discuss housing policy in Canada. It is not frequent enough that we have this chance to talk about a national housing strategy. I believe it is the first opportunity we have had since the new Government took office in September of 1984.

I want to argue that in the devising of any such national housing strategy there would have to be a major section which would deal with the right of adequate housing in the Indian communities of Canada. I enter this debate because I think it would be a seriously incomplete debate without reference to housing in the Indian communities of the country. I am confused by the thesis of the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) that many of the sociological problems in Canada are related to the L-shaped livingroom. That may or may not be a valid thesis. However, I can tell him that the L-shaped living room is not the problem at all in the Indian communities of the country. In most cases the problem is a one-room shack occupied by more than one family. That is the problem I wish to address now.

It is well known that housing in the Indian communities across Canada is generally deplorable. In fact, it is probably a national disgrace. In the past, federal government housing programs for Indian people produced structures which did not meet national standards. In fact, if those houses had been built in non-Indian communities, many of them would have failed the local building codes and would have been rejected. It is true that at the present time new houses being built in Indian communities are supposed to meet national housing standards. I seriously doubt whether those standards are being adhered to in all cases.

Hon. Members may be aware that many Indian communities are located in isolated regions of the country where the climate tends to be extraordinarily severe. In many cases the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has permitted these communities to develop on what can only be described as marginal land. For example, I could take Members to communities which are located in swamps where to move from one residence to another one must go along a boardwalk. To fall off that boardwalk would be to put your personal safety in jeopardy.

There are other cases of communities which have been allowed to develop on flood plains. During spring break-up it is quite shocking to see massive pieces of ice weighing several tonnes forced into the very heart of the community, pushing structures aside and crumbling them in their progress. A recent example of this would be the community of Fort Albany on the west coast of James Bay which was flooded last spring. I helicoptered into that community and saw that it had been totally demolished. The same thing happened this spring on the shore of Hudson Bay in northern Ontario where the community of Winisk was totally wiped out. Houses were pushed far out into Hudson Bay, some five or six miles from where the community had originally been established. For years the chief, with the support of his people, has been urging the federal Government and the Government of Ontario to get together and assist them in a relocation plan. The Governments will now be forced to do that.

You will recognize immediately, Mr. Speaker, that when homes are built in these marginal lands which I have described home maintenance becomes very difficult. The environment leads to the rapid decay of these inadequately built structures. The elements of nature which I have described wreak havoc, destruction, and sometimes death. In the Nielsen task force report on Indian programs it was suggested that these people really have no business living in these kinds of places anyway. Why do they not live where the rest of Canadians live, crowded along the U.S. border in urban centres? Why do they choose to live in the outer regions of northern Ontario and beyond that?

Surely in a free society we recognize the right of choice. These people choose to live in that general region, although not always on the sites where the Department of Indian Affairs said they will live. This is where they feel at home. This is where they claim that the land is in fact theirs. I personally regard it as essential to our Confederation that these people do tend to occupy areas considered inhospitable and uninviting by other Canadian people. These areas, as well, are an important part of Canada.

That is why it is vital that as quickly as possible we incorporate these people into our Confederation. We must make them believe that they are active partners and participants in our Confederation instead of being extraneous subjects of the Crown or wards of the state. It is absolutely vital that we come to recognize the rights of the first citizens of the country, to recognize aboriginal rights and title to specified lands. We must recognize the right to self-governing institutions.

A few years ago the Standing Committee on Indian Affairs formed itself into a special committee and took one year of its time to look into all aspects of Indian policy in the country. During the course of that study the committee had to wrestle with an extraordinarily difficult concept called the trust relationship. If Members of Parliament and other Canadians do not understand that concept, it is certainly no judgment of them because it is difficult to grasp, appreciate and understand. Briefly, the special committee came to the following conclusion about the trust relationship. It said that while rejecting the view that Indian nations or peoples are wards, the committee agrees that the federal Government has an obligation to act in the best interests of First Nations and to act as those interests are perceived by the Indian people themselves.

If you live in an isolated community with a harsh climate you will recognize immediately that one of those interests must be that of housing. Rarely do I visit an Indian community in my own constituency or in any other part of Canada and meet with the chief and council when the subject of housing is not brought forward as a high priority item.

This year's Estimates of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development make the point that schools and houses are two of the most significant types of capital works projects funded through the Department. I will quote from the Estimates to give you an idea of how the Department itself sees the housing situation. I quote from the overview of the Department in the Estimates for this year as follows:

In June of 1985 an evaluation of the on-reserve housing program estimated that about three-quarters of all existing houses are inadequate in the sense that they fail to meet some basic standards of safe and decent housing.

While just over 2 per cent of the Canadian population lives in crowded conditions, 36 per cent of Indian households were found to be overcrowded.

By the way, that is a very conservative estimate of the Department. The Nielsen report places that estimate much higher, at 50 per cent. The document goes on to say that since 1977 there have been certain significant improvements in over-all levels of housing. For example, the Department's program has been able to effect a reduction in the level of over-crowding of on-reserve housing with the average number of people per house dropping from 6 to 5.1. I just want to remind Hon. Members that the Canadian average is 2.9. That is a startling difference.

• (1620)

The particular part of the Estimates I am referring to says:

Proposed changes to meet the continued and urgent need for on-reserve housing are currently under review.

That is good, but they need to become part of an over-all national housing strategy. More than that, with reference to the speech of the previous speaker about the right to adequate housing, when you talk about housing for aboriginal people the concept of "right" is certainly driven home and becomes central to the debate.

While the Nielsen report on native programs to which I have already referred draws certain conclusions which I personally cannot share or support, the statistical description of the situation in Canada is very helpful. Perhaps it is the only helpful part of the report. Let me advise Members, who probably have not read this particular document, that on-reserve housing continues to be among the poorest in Canada. Of 46,500 units, an estimated 11,000 are in need of major renovations. One in three houses is over-crowded with more than one person per room. An estimated 10,000 new housing units are required to meet the backlog created by more than one family living in a house. In addition, 2,400 new units are needed each year to keep pace with new family formation. That does not take into account new demands resulting from reinstatement. That refers to people who, under an Act passed by Parliament, namely, Bill C-31, have had restored to them their rights previously taken away and are returning to their communities. There is an editorial note in the Nielsen report with respect to these kinds of conditions. It says that over-crowding is blamed for contributing to such social problems as marriage breakdown, alcoholism, child abuse and delinquency.

The communities themselves are such that the level of services and adequacy of infrastructure is seriously behind what is generally accepted as the norm in the rest of the country. For example, fewer than 50 per cent of Indian houses are fully serviced with sewers and water. That compares to a national average of 90 per cent. The result of this kind of poorly serviced housing leads to some very major health problems. It is also a contributing factor to the high rate of infant mortality among Indian people. That rate, by the way, is 66 per cent higher than the national rate. It is attributed to respiratory ailments, infectious and persistent diseases, all related to poor housing and a lack of sewage disposal as well as potable water.

I indicated that the Nielsen report gives us a snapshot of conditions, but then it makes this rather amazing and gratuitous comment. It says:

The federal government is under no legal obligation either through the Constitution or through treaties to provide housing for Indians and Inuit—

That is exactly where the Special Committee on Indian Self-Government parts company with the so-called Nielsen report on Indian programs. I repeat again the view of the special committee. It said that the federal Government has an obligation. It has an obligation to act in the best interests of Indian First Nations as those interests are perceived by Indians themselves. That is a definition of the trust relationship that I described earlier as being very difficult to understand.

I would like to take a little time to advise the House of the basis for that obligation. This is the way it came to be perceived by members of the special committee after more than a year of careful study. We had to look at the historical reality in this country. When explorers and settlers arrived in this part of North America, they did not come to an unoccupied continent, not at all. For thousands of years prior to European exploration and colonization, North America was inhabited by many different indigenous peoples organized into political entities and groupings. When the Europeans encountered these different North American peoples, it was natural for them to apply a term common in Europe at that time. They described these different separate peoples as nations. I know that gives modern Canadians some difficulty, but it has a good and sound historical basis. The Royal Proclamation of 1763, which became the modus operandi for colonial policy in dealing with indigenous peoples, referred to "the several nations or tribes of Indians with whom we are connected".

I now come back to the obligation. The obligation flows from the relationship established at that time. It was a government-to-government relationship. It is true that the Governments were somewhat unequal in their strength and power, but it was government-to-government. Governments from abroad, particularly the Government representing the Crown of Great Britain, assumed these obligations in exchange for rights, such rights as the use of land and the right to build the society we now enjoy. It is history which has imposed this obligation upon us. It is not really a decision which can be made by this Parliament or Government. It is an obligation imposed upon us by history. I have argued, argue now, and will continue to argue that no nation can wash its hands of its own history.

When we come to talk about housing policy and the inadequacy of structures in Indian communities today, what is the answer? Obviously if we want to have our feet solidly based on the historical obligation imposed upon us, then we must renovate the treaties. We may want to incorporate in those treaties the right to adequate housing, housing that promotes family health and well-being. We will certainly want to settle the outstanding native claims in this country, be they special claims where treaties already exist, or be they comprehensive claims where there are no treaties. We would certainly want to recognize aboriginal title, especially where there has been no transfer of land. We would want to get on with the job of defining what aboriginal rights really are. We would want to say that the first citizens of this country certainly have a right to live in communities comparable to the quality of life enjoyed by Canadians elsewhere.

The Nielsen report said we had already gone too far in this direction and we were creating modern suburbs in the northern bush. I do not know whether you have ever seen those modern suburbs in the northern bush, but the ones I have seen can hardly bear that description.

In conclusion I want to say that where self-government institutions have been put in place, such as among the James Bay Cree in northern Quebec, among the Naskapis, the northern Quebec Inuit, where they have their own housing authority, there is a remarkable difference between that which has been done by the Department and that which these people are doing for themselves.

• (1630)

To me that demonstrates that self-government can bring about a transformation in life style, be it economic, health care, education or housing, which is markedly different from that which has gone on through the paternalistic, colonial approach which has been the pattern up to the present time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Cadieux): Questions and comments. Debate. The Hon. Member for LaPrairie (Mr. Jourdenais).

Mr. Fernand Jourdenais (La Prairie): Mr. Speaker, since I welcome this opportunity to speak in this debate, especially since you are in the Chair today. And I am glad to have a chance to clarify for the House the matter of income ceilings for "core need" and explain the whys and wherefors of these ceilings.

The House is aware that our new national housing strategy is the result of serious reflection and the numerous submissions received and meetings held in the past year and a half. This has meant that we were able to consider the positions of all Canadian groups connected with the housing sector, since before giving a new direction to its housing policy, the Conservative Government first wanted to be informed of the views of a wide variety of groups and subsequently reach a consensus. It felt it was necessary to have the participation of provincial and territorial authorities, as well as the groups directly or indirectly concerned, in order to make enlightened and effective decisions.

The Minister responsible for the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corpopration and his Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Price) met with a number of groups, including the National Anti-Poverty Organization, the Association québécoise de l'habitation, commonly referred to as Le Front d'action populaire en réaménagement urbain or FRAPRU, groups representing the aged, the National Advisory Council on Aging, the handicapped, the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped, native people, the Native Council of Canada, the Assembly of First Nations Métis organizations. Perhaps I may say, in passing, that for 20 months they have been telling us the Conservative Government does not consult.

There were also organizations representing the construction industry, the financial sector, cooperative housing and municipalities. To name a few: the Canadian Home Builders' Association, the Canadian Bankers' Association, the credit unions, the Canadian Cooperative Credit Society, the Cooperative Housing Foundation, and finally, the Federation of Canadian Municipalities and the Canadian Association of Housing and Renewal Officials. In all, about 35 groups were consulted, although to hear the Opposition, you would think we never consulted anyone.

The list is not exhaustive, but I think it gives an idea of the wide range of groups we consulted. The Government wanted the study to be open, balanced and thorough, and that is what it was.

To start the process, last year the Minister tabled in the House a Consultation Paper on Housing designed to stimulate debate and provide a focus for discussion. Eight thousand copies of this document were distributed, most of them on request I might add. The Minister received more than 300 replies from across the country, briefs and letters which proved to be of great help to proceed further with the review.

This intergovernmental process was launched here in Ottawa at the end of 1984 when the federal Minister played host to a conference of provincial housing Ministers. They came to the conclusion that the provinces and the central Government share some responsibilities in housing, and that co-operation between the two levels of Government is a must if we are to find practical solutions to the housing crisis.

This policy review and the previous consulations focused on some of the major objectives the Minister has in mind with respect to the federal policy. Among other things, we need to reach a national consensus on the appropriate objectives of federal housing policies and programs, and to design projects aimed at eliminating regional disparities and targeting federal assistance to those who need it most. In this respect I might point out that provincial participation is an integral part of the new strategy.

The provinces and the territories were directly involved in these consultations. Their views and concerns were taken in consideration when we drafted the policy and took steps to improve existing programs.

I would like to emphasize that the increased provincial participation represents a real change in our social housing policy. Cooperation in the field of social housing reflects a real improvement in federal-provincial relations compared with the situation in the past, especially under the Liberal Government.

To reduce administrative costs and the duplication of efforts, as well as to increase the total of provincial contributions to social housing, the Government has offered the provinces a larger role.

I would like to state categorically, Mr. Speaker, that our new initiatives do not mean that the federal Government wants to relinquish to the provinces its obligations in the field of social housing. The provinces will implement the programs, but certain clearly stated conditions will apply.

Under the new agreements, the provinces will have to increase their financial contributions. In addition, we are undertaking the joint triennial planning of social housing strategies. We shall thus guarantee that the objectives of the federal Government and the need for accountability are met.

Until now, we have signed umbrella agreements with eight provinces and I expect the other provinces and territories to follow suit in the near future.

We have not found any easy answers to the basic housing problems facing the Governments, but consultation with the provinces and various interest groups has resulted in a consensus on future strategies and action for the federal Government.

Public spending must benefit the most disadvantaged, as we all agree, especially on the side of the Government. We estimate that about one million families in Canada cannot find decent and affordable housing. The needy groups include senior citizens, single parent families, families with children, the working poor, the handicaped and the native people. In view of the extent of housing needs in this country, without forgetting the always present requirement to restrict public spending, we must obviously do more with the same resources for needy families.

The previous housing programs have surely enlarged the housing bank to which almost all classes in our society can aspire, but they had serious disadvantages, especially their high cost so that very few low income Canadians with core needs were in a position to take advantage thereof. Such a procedure is ineffective and inefficient.

Essentially, there are three ways to help low income households find a home. Housing can be built or purchased, some financial assistance can be provided to allow households to pay current rents or repair cheap and deteriorated houses so that they will meet minimum health and security standards.

Those three solutions must be implemented together, as it is clearly shown by the consideration of housing needs throughout the country and on various markets. What can tip the scales in favour of any one or the three solutions is the local market situation, the conditions of real estate bank in some areas and the needs of certain classes requiring a special kind of housing, for example, older citizens and groups with social problems.

Consequently, to implement the most efficient solution to meet the needs of low income Canadians, much flexibility is required at the regional level. A national housing policy would allow us to use those tools or solutions throughout the country with different arrangements according to the circumstances. He must recognize that housing problems and the ways of addressing them in the Atlantic Provinces or Quebec may not be the same as those used in Ontario or British Columbia. It would be naive and simplistic to pretend otherwise.

This is why income thresholds established for "core needs" recognize the significant differences between Canadian cities where housing markets are concerned.

The costs of housing accommodations of adequate size and quality are not the same in Vancouver, Montreal or Toronto. The differences have to be reflected in the requirements for program eligibility.

This Government felt it had to develop a new package of social housing programs to include a number of major changes to non-profit housing programs, rent supplement programs, RRAP, the Residential Renovation Assistance Program, and rural and native housing programs.

Those changes are all aimed at reaching the same goal; to direct available assistance to the one million Canadians who have housing core needs, thanks to the fixed income thresholds set for the core need group and the provincial contributions now being negotiated. The new social housing programs will manage to help almost twice as many low-income families as before. Of course, social housing programs will be diversely combined in different areas of the country according to the housing needs to be met, to the housing accomodations offered by the private sector, and to the social needs to be covered.

I would like to point out another aspect concerning the implementation of those programs. The new strategy is designed to avoid creating low-income ghettos. Directing social housing assistance to needy families does not mean a return to large concentrations of public housing. The definition of needy families is broad enough to cover a wide income bracket.

One way to avoid low-income ghettos is to use small, scattered housing projects and to use the renovation rent supplement to encourage income integration.

It is important, and we are fully conscious of the fact that people living in social housing should not be isolated. And we are targetting our programs with that requirement in mind. Finally, some provinces, especially Ontario and Quebec, will earmark funds to add to housing projects for people not subjected to means tests.

Mr. Speaker, I would add in concluding that those programs take into consideration the concerns and suggestions made by the Provinces and various groups in the housing sector in the course of our consultations. They are not the result of an unilateral action taken by the Government, but they convey the new national consensus. Finally, the ceilings on fixed income for core needs allow the Government to make sure that its assistance will be beneficial in the first place to Canadians who are really needy.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments. The debate resumes with the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet).

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak this afternoon to the motion moved by my hon. friend from Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), which in fact condemns the Conservative Government for its poor housing policies.

The Minister responsible for housing in Canada (Mr. McKnight) tabled a Consultation Paper on Housing in January 1985, and in a speech he made today, before the Cooperative Housing Foundation here in Ottawa, he recalled the Government's three main objectives with respect to housing. This afternoon the Minister said: "I have identified a number of fundamental principles, as follows. First, programs must take into account the need for reducing the deficit. Second, assistance must be aimed at those who need it most. Third, outside the public sector, others must help solve these problems'."

• (1640)

I say that the Minister's three principles are absolutely out of place and irresponsible, because the truth of the matter is that the Minister, who is also the Minister of Labour, should be defending the rights of our workers, of people on low incomes and the neediest in this country. He should not let his department participate in the Conservative Government's brutal efforts to reduce the Canadian deficit. In fact, he should be demanding additional funding for his department, for the housing sector.

How can we take these objectives seriously, when the Minister who is supposed to be the Government's main spokesperson for housing and who should be the first person to demand additional funding for subsidized housing in Canada, how can we take him seriously when he tells us that his guiding principle is to reduce the Canadian deficit? It does not make sense. It does not make any sense, coming as it does from one of the few Conservative Ministers who should have a social conscience.

Second, he tells us that assistance must be directed towards those most in need. Of course! However I have here a newspaper clipping expounding the Minister's thoughts when he tabled his policy in Parliament: "The Minister indicated that the Government will offer a series of new social housing programs exlusively for needy households, meaning people who cannot find housing at reasonable prices on the private sector market. Statistics reveal that about one million Canadian households cannot find decent housing at reasonables prices."

The direct result of the new definition found by the Government will be the development of the ghettos mentioned by the previous speaker. The worst thing that was done to help social housing was to pile all the low-income families one on top of the other and force them to live together. Eventually, this brought about a whole series of unforeseen social problems.

These mistakes made in the fifties were corrected, first during the sixties, but mostly during the seventies. However, it seems that the Minister is trying to reinvent the wheel in 1986 by bringing back social assistance exclusively for the neediest, who will then be regrouped in ghettos of low-rental housing where health conditions are often deplorable.

I maintain that the previous Government had attempted to come up with a healthy mix of families with various levels of income. Co-operative housing in particular allowed people with somewhat higher incomes to form co-operative groups which would offer housing to low-income families, but also to middle and even higher income families.

In my opinion, this healthy mix is absolutely essential if we want to solve the problems of the neediest in our society and allow them to live decently without other people pointing them out as "the poor who live in subsidized housing".

Now, the policy of this Conservative Government, and its second goal which is to have help provided exclusively to those people most in need, will lead us back to the worst arrangements of the 50s, and I do not want us to relive the sad experiences with the Dozois Plan, for instance, in Montreal East in the early 50s. This is something that must be avoided at all costs in our future housing policies.

The last principle laid out by the Minister is that other people outside the federal Government must work at solving those problems. A tall order! This means that in fact, in this area, in the area of housing as in so many others, this Tory Government, obsessed by its desire to reduce the deficit, is passing the buck, especially to provincial and municipal Governments who will be expected to solve the housing problem in Canada. This in my view is an unfortunate abdication of his responsibilities by the Minister in charge of housing in Canada. I submit he is remiss, he fails to meet the expectations a great number of Canadians had in this Tory Government during the last elections. And again I say the Conservative Party has betrayed Canadian voters by not honouring their commitments because, in fact they promised they would increase housing funds. But the figures are quite clear, Mr. Speaker. I have here the English text of a document issued by the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation, from which I quote:

• (1650)

[English]

The Canadian Housing Statistics recently released by CMHC reveal the direction in which this government is going; funds authorized under the National Housing Act by the Liberals and by the Conservatives are as follows:

This is not a document submitted by the Liberal Party. It is a document submitted by the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. For 1984, public housing loans amounted to $2.4 million. In 1985, the figure was $.7 million—more than $1.5 million was cut.

In the area of federal-provincial housing the amount of money spent in 1984 was $128.1 million. In 1985, it was only $77.4 million. Again, another cut by the Conservative Government.

In relation to residential rehabilitation loans, the amount spent in 1984 was $189.4 million, while in 1985 the figure was $127.5 million. Another cut by the Conservative Government.

In relation to housing research in 1984 some $26.9 million was spent by the then Government. In 1985, the figure was $22.8 million. Again, another cut by the Conservative Government.

With respect to residential rehabilitation grants, some $202.3 million was spent in 1984 and only $159 million was spent in 1985. Again, a substantial cut by the Conservative Government.

[Translation]

When you think, Mr. Speaker, that only in the province of Quebec some 200,000 households presently live in inadequate dwellings, when you think that just in the province of Quebec only 50,000 dwellings are supposed to meet the needs of elderly people and needy families, and when you drive through Quebec and in particular when you visit the various Montreal districts, you realize how pressing, how urgent the need is for adequate housing for low income families and mostly for elderly and lonely people. However, the Minister is telling us that his first goal is to help reduce the federal deficit, his second one to help just a few, and his third one to ask others to assume the responsibilities that he should be assuming himself. I therefore submit that elderly Canadians have been betrayed by the Conservative Government and that the program of housing starts for elderly people, particularly in such a community as Montreal, is absolutely essential and should be extended and increased. And if on the one hand I am pleased that the Canadian Government and the Quebec Government reached an agreement on social housing, I am on the other hand concerned by the new standards applied to people with incomes below the poverty line, incomes that you can hardly live on, on which you cannot afford to live decently, but merely to survive. We are now realizing that the policy of the Conservative Government consists unfortunately in denying those people the help that they used to get from the former Liberal Government. Countless Canadian families which would have qualified for residential rehabilitation assistance will be denied those subsidies that they used to be entitled to because the Conservative Government decided to involve them in reducing the Canadian deficit in spite of the dire housing needs of Canada.

We have the views of a Canadian personality who is neutral, who is not involved in politics. They will help us all reflect on this. I am referring to the comments made by the Bishop of Gatineau-Hull, Mgr. Adolphe Proulx, who recently had very harsh words against the intention of the Canadian Government, the Tory Government to reduce social housing programs. He is wholeheartedly supporting the Front commun sur le logement social, which includes 85 community groups from all Quebec areas.

The Hon. Member for LaPrairie (Mr. Jourdenais), who was faithfully reading from a text prepared by an assistant to the Minister, has mentioned that there had been consultation. I wonder if the consultation referred to by the Hon. Member for La Prairie was really fruitful, because 85 community groups from all Quebec areas have condemned the housing policies of the Conservative Government. It was necessary for Mgr. Proulx to denounce publicly the cut-backs in the housing program to show how badly the housing policy of the Conservative Government had failed.

I therefore congratulate my colleague for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) for having allowed us to discuss this issue today and show once more to the Canadian public that the Conservatives are heartless, that they have money only for the big oil multinationals and that the poorest among us have to pay the cost because this Government cares only for the most powerful members of our society.
