Since we cannot go all the way, we shall therefore support this motion whose effect would be to restrict and reduce the powers of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) and ministerial discretion, because we have to remember that the additional charges will not in fact be imposed by the Minister of Transport, but will be set by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). As everyone knows, the Minister of Finance is looking for money. He is the one who taxes Canadians. He is the one who gets the funds, and if there is one way for him to get them, it is probably by charging for the services provided in the seaway and the ports and by the Coast Guard.

Mr. Speaker, for the information of the other Members, I would like to read the comments of some people who really know what they are talking about. I am thinking especially about the letters sent to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

[English]

This is a letter sent by the Great Lakes Commission, which is a joint commission. The commission is formed of people who look after the Great Lakes transportation problems. It is a letter dated April 14, 1986, signed by James Fish. The letter states in part:

The Great Lakes Commission is deeply concerned about proposed Bill C-75, which would authorize the imposition of cost recovery for Canadian Coast Guard services.

It is interesting to note that the interested parties are concerned and, indeed, worried. In a paragraph on page 2 it states:

The Great Lakes Commission's views with respect to Clause 4 in Bill C-75 are supported by the Great Lakes Congressional delegation and regional maritime interests. A March 25 letter to Transport Minister Mazankowski from several Great Lakes Congressmen and a March 7 letter from Great Lakes Senators to Ambassador Gotlieb are attached for your reference.

This letter sent by Congressmen of the United States and dated March 7, 1986, states in part:

However, we, along with Mr. Fish, remain concerned about the potential damage to Canadian and U.S. shipping and related activities stemming from imposition of a Coast Guard user fee in addition to the current seaway tolls.

We all know that the current Seaway tolls are discouraging traffic on the Seaway. We all know that we have difficulty keeping the traffic on the Seaway up to par. We all know the economic difficulties that are being faced, yet the Government is going to impose user fees on those users making it more difficult and costly for them to operate.

ULS International Inc. sent a letter to the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). It is addressed to "Dear Brian" so I suppose they know him. It reads as follows:

I would like to draw your attention to our concern over Clause 4 of Bill C-75. In its present form the authority it provides this and future governments to charge for Coast Guard services is virtually unconstrained. As a result, the potential for economic dislocation, to the detriment of Lakes-St. Lawrence trafffic, is open-ended.

The letter goes on to say:

Clause 4 requires a great deal of revision before it is ready to be passed into legislation—In the meantime, Clause 4 should be removed from Bill C-75.

We tried that. It did not work. Now there is an amendment before us. Now that we have Government Members interested, I take it that they will participate in the debate on this amendment and indeed support such an amendment.

The amendment provides for any regulation under subsection (1) to be referred to a committee of the House for review. We are working in the spirit of reform so we should agree that review is appropriate. It also provides that the clause not come into effect until January 1, 1988. I take it that most Hon. Members, being in favour of review, would support this amendment. We also want to see a House of Commons committee appraise the results and effects of Clause 4 on the users.

I would like to make several other comments. I see, Mr. Speaker, that you are indicating that my time is almost up. I would like to talk about the charges for icebreaking that will possibly be imposed on users. A lot of icebreaking is done for flood control.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Much of the icebreaking on the St. Lawrence is done for flood control. The Hon. Member opposite laughs.

Mr. Crosby: Do you believe that?

Mr. Gauthier: That is the truth of the matter and it is a fact of life. Icebreaking on the St. Lawrence is done many times to prevent flooding along the St. Lawrence. That cost will, from now on, possibly be passed on to the users. We do not know that because the Government did not tell us how it is going to make that program operate. It did not tell us what the fees are going to be and it did not tell us why we should be paying these fees. Until it has answered the how, the why and the what of Clause 4, we will vote against it.

Mr. Binns: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I did not want to interrupt the Hon. Member during his remarks because he was having some difficulty keeping his train of thought as it was. However, my point is that I did not in fact make a speech to the PEI potato producers on Bill C-75 during the election campaign, but I think I will in the near future in order to straighten out the many false suggestions that are being made by opposition Members.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. It just occurred to me that the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns) certainly would not have dared to bring up Bill C-75 in Prince Edward Island during the election campaign. The election was already lost very seriously by all, including the Premier. If the Hon. Member had raised this matter it is probable that they would not have gotten any seats. I think the Hon. Member should keep that in mind.

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, I am not simply rising at the invitation of the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) to speak on Bill C-75. I think other of his colleagues and his friends in the New Democratic Party provoked me sufficiently, through their presentations to the House of Commons, to cause me to speak.

I should begin with this statement. I sympathize greatly with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth—Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall), whose involvement in marine transportation goes back for at least the 30 years I have been associated with him, and he is intimately knowledgeable in this area. To see a Bill containing amendments to the Canada Shipping Act which relate to marine transportation in Canada and internationally, a Bill designed to protect seamen on the oceans governed by Canada, a Bill designed to protect the marine transportation industry being confused by Members of the Opposition with one item, cost recovery in relation to certain services, is a shame.

Rather than address the House of Commons I would prefer to vote on this Bill and see it go forward so that the seamen of the world may benefit from these provisions. I hope the Hon. Members who speak of elections and of the results that flow to Members who obstruct progress in the House of Commons and elsewhere are warned to be aware of those people outside this Chamber who seek the enactment of this Bill. There are those who wish it to go forward for the good it contains. Obstructionism produces dire results but it also presents misrepresentations with which we must deal.

I have indicated very clearly that this is a Bill dealing with marine transportation, the Canada Shipping Act. It has very little to do with the fishing industry in Atlantic Canada, although it might, in some obtuse way, affect a fisherman or a fishing vessel from time to time. That is the price to be paid for travelling on the seaways and I think every fisherman in Atlantic Canada knows and respects that fact.

I want to point out to Hon. Members who may not be aware of it that in Atlantic Canada, and particularly in the Port of Halifax, contrary to the statements made by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), there is great support for this Clause 4 that has caused so much concern to Hon. Members opposite. The Halifax—Darmouth Port Commission came before the legislative committee to say: "Please enact Clause 4. We are sick of being discriminated against in the marine transportation field".

I can understand the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) rising to say that we should do away with Clause 4 which amends Section 3 of the Canada Shipping Act because it might have an adverse effect on shipments through the Port of Montreal. I can understand her position and I appreciate that she is right to represent her constituents. However, when Hon. Members from Atlantic Canada rise and tell us not to enact the changes to Section 3 of the Canada Shipping Act, then I know they do not know from whence they come or of what they speak.

I can, however, forgive the intervention made by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt who, from that perspective, purports to know what is happening or what ought to happen in Atlantic Canada, and particularly in the Port of Halifax. However, that may well account for the reason there are no members of the New Democratic Party in the House of Commons from Atlantic Canada. You can rest assured, Mr. Speaker, that there will not be any in the many, many years to come for those kinds of reasons.

Can I forgive the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier who looks at the Port of Halifax from the perspective of the Rideau Canal? He wants to say that in Halifax one can simply put a dock 100 feet out into the harbour and accommodate, just through that method, the largest ocean liner floating on the seas of the world; that the largest third-generation container ship can come into the Port of Halifax and tie up to a dock that is simply made of rocks and mortar. He compares that to the Rideau Canal. He thinks ships should not be charged any more to come into the Port of Halifax than to go through the Rideau Canal. If we have to build walkways and laneways and pick out the ice with an ice-pick, that does not matter, do not charge for any of that. Let those people in the Port of Halifax pay for all the costs.

The people from the Port of Halifax, and I am sure the people from the Port of Saint John, are saying it is time to take a realistic view of the matter of how to charge back to the users the costs of providing services. The idiocy of the remarks made by Members opposite is to pretend to the people of Canada that they are not being charged for these services, that they are coming from some kind of mysterious money-tree. If we do not charge fees for services they are paid for in some other way.

I am going to continue my remarks after lunch when I will have another chance to talk about the Port of Halifax.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock today.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG OLDER WORKERS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, on this May 1 let us recall that the struggle for workers' rights in Canada is not over.

Last August the Canadian Employment and Immigration Advisory Council made a report to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) entitled "Older Workers—An Imminent Crisis in the Labour Market". The report pointed out that more than 300,000 workers between the ages of 45 and 64 were unemployed in Canada and that the trend was getting worse. The report also pointed out that older workers remain unemployed longer than the average for all workers.

In order to assist the federal Government in addressing these problems, the advisory council made several recommendations regarding unemployment insurance, pension reform, training, hiring incentives, job creation, and job counselling. Nothing has been done to implement these recommendations.

On this May 1, I urge the Government to get on with the job.

STRIKE AT JOHN INGLIS PLANT IN TORONTO

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, on this May 1, the men and women of the John Inglis washing-machine plant in Toronto have been forced to strike for several weeks. Their owner, the Whirlpool Corporation in the United States, demands real wage cuts and a three-year wage freeze, although United States wages are $2 per hour higher than Canadian wages in that plant, considering the exchange rate. United States labour cost is higher, but Whirlpool has put in $165 million to modernize U.S. plant equipment, and zero into the aged Canadian plant.

Free trade will not help but in fact will hasten shut-down and the unemployment of these workers. The question is: what will the Government do to defend the jobs of Canadians at John Inglis against an American multinational?

SOCIAL SECURITY

SITUATION OF ELDERLY PERSONS

Mr. Édouard Desrosiers (Hochelaga—Maisonneuve): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to draw the attention of the House to the situation of the elderly in Canada. In my riding there are dozens of people who come and complain that cuts have been made in their pensions, the pensions for the elderly. I want to draw the attention of all Members to this incredible state of affairs. I don't know where the problem lies. Perhaps it is the bureaucracy or maybe it is being done on purpose, but there is something wrong somewhere. I hope that our Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) will do something about it.

Mr. Speaker, it is a major problem in my riding and in many other ridings in Canada and I urge all Members of this House to make representations as soon as possible.

TOURISM

WELCOME EXTENDED TO TOURISTS

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, this is going to be a great summer for tourism in Canada. Visitors to our country have already increased by nearly 20 per cent, and Expo has not even begun.

Tourism is a multibillion dollar industry which involves each and every Canadian. We can easily attract visitors with our cities, sites, and scenery. However, it is our warmth and hospitality which will make their stay truly memorable.

Economists cannot put a price on a friendly smile or a happy hello, but the value is enormous. We cannot buy the kind of advertising which a simple good word from a visitor on returning home offers.

Let us make this the best summer ever for our visitors, from the moment they arrive until the second they leave. If we do, we will be benefiting both them and ourselves.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

SAFETY FEATURES OF CANADIAN CANDU REACTORS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, at Pickering, Ontario, there are eight CANDU reactors. In addition to the very extensive safety features which have been built into them, there is a containment building made of concrete which would capture any radiation that might escape from a reactor. The Canadian CANDU reactor has proven to be the safest reactor in the world.

In 1985, 42 per cent of all electricity produced by Ontario Hydro was generated by CANDU reactors. It is safe to say that over a third of the industry located in the Province of Ontario is powered by electricity which is generated by CANDU reactors.

Let us compare hydro rates. In Ontario, where we rely heavily upon cheap nuclear generated energy, in January, 1986, hydro rates stood at 5.3 cents per kilowatt hour. However, in New York State the rate was 20 cents per kilowatt hour because it is using outdated equipment. We not only have the cheapest hydro rate with our CANDU reactors, Mr. Speaker, but we have the safest nuclear reactor in the world, CANDU.

HEALTH

TRANSPLANT INTERNATIONAL—IMPORTANCE OF HUMAN ORGAN DONATIONS

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Mr. Speaker, although National Organ Donor Awareness Week has ended, the spirit lives on. Dow Chemical Canada Incorporated, the head office of which is located in my riding of Sarnia—Lambton, has committed a quarter of a million dollars over a three year period to Transplant International.

This money is to be used for public education aimed at increasing the awareness of the country of the need and importance of organ donations. Dow has produced a video show which has gone across Canada to be shown to all of the company's Canadian employees, and is available on loan to other organizations from Dow. The video encourages citizens to discuss organ donation with their families, as well as reminding them to sign the consent form.

Hopefully, Mr. Speaker, this program launched by Dow will further encourage employees to go out into their communities and spread the word that organ donations are desperately needed. It is hoped that the word will spread and that more people will consider the gift of life they give by donating their organs.

In addition to the generous financial contribution made by Dow Chemical, I would also like to inform Members of this House—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds. The Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands.

EXPO 86

AN INVITATION TO VANCOUVER AND VICTORIA

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, in its April addition Air Canada's in-flight magazine, En Route, has an Expo 86 update which tells some of the exciting things to do and see in Vancouver this summer when it hosts the world fair.

Unfortunately, Air Canada's magazine refers to Vancouver as the capital of British Columbia. Vancouver, one of the great cities of the world, has never been the capital of British Columbia. I join with other British Columbians in inviting people from all over Canada and the world to visit Expo 86 in Vancouver this summer. I also invite them to visit our capital city which is called Victoria.

Victoria is located on beautiful Vancouver Island, a 20 minute flight from Vancouver, or a wonderful one and one-half hour scenic cruise through the Gulf Islands.

Come to Expo 86 at Vancouver this summer. Stay a while and enjoy the rest of British Columbia. Welcome world.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT MEASURES TO ASSIST WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) announcement of the new western initiative is yet another signal that western Canada is important to the Government. It recognizes and provides measures to assist in meeting the severe problems facing western farmers and the energy sector.

Last year our Government provided $160 million in drought assistance. Already this year we have made a record interim grain stabilization payment. The new western initiatives for farmers provide a further fuel tax rebate and a higher domestic wheat price. Farmers are not the only beneficiaries of the western initiative. Small and medium oil and gas producers will benefit from reductions in the PGRT, and 45 of the hardest hit small companies will be relieved entirely from paying this tax. The tax relief for synthetic producers is another important measure to protect jobs and the economy in western Canada.

The biggest advantage of the western initiative is that it will stimulate the economy of western Canada, and that is good for business and for all of us. My congratulations to the Prime Minister for once again demonstrating strong leadership and concern for western Canada, which he pledged to deliver.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

THE ECONOMY

BANK RATE REDUCTION

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, only a few minutes ago, the Bank of Canada announced a further one third of one per cent drop in the bank rate.

Mr. Speaker, as Hon. Members will recall, when the Liberals left us with their runaway Budget deficit and a national debt of $200 billion, the central bank rate was 12.38 per cent.

Today's bank rate of 8.97 per cent is very encouraging, both to consumers and producers. A drop of nearly 4 per cent in the bank rate can, in some cases, bring about an even more significant reduction by our financial institutions. A 4 per cent drop, Mr. Speaker, means $2,000 per year less in interest on a family mortgage of $50,000.

Canadian consumers benefit from this situation, while the business sector has started to expand, to take advantage of the lower interest rates made possible by the Conservative Government.

ALLEGED DISCRIMINATION AGAINST WOMEN BY INSTITUT CANADIEN-FRANÇAIS D'OTTAWA

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I should like to draw the attention of the House to the discrimination against women as practiced by Ottawa's Institut canadien-français.

Established in 1852 as a cultural club for Ottawa Francophones, the Institut requests applicants to speak fluent French, be Catholics, have a good reputation, and be male.

When asked why women are not accepted as members, the president told us he had never thought about it and that, besides, there are very few female applicants.

The way women are welcome, I can easily understand why they are not queuing up at the door.

Mr. Speaker, the Institut canadien-français should behave in accordance with standards of the eighties. Discrimination based on sex is illegal, and so is dicrimination based on religious beliefs.

So the Institut is guilty on two counts. I hope this free publicity will prompt it to operate in keeping with the reality.

AGRICULTURE

GOVERNMENT MEASURES TO ASSIST FARMERS

Mr. Brian White (Dauphin—Swan River): Mr. Speaker, the Government has always stood by the Canadian farmer. Yesterday the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) announced a series of initiatives which will provide immediate relief for hard-pressed Canadian food producers. The maximum allowable domestic price level of wheat has been raised to $11 per bushel. Effective today all federal taxes will be effectively eliminated on off-highway use of farm fuels. Farm debt review panel legislation will be dealt with on a priority basis.

These measures are very welcome news to western Canadian farmers and provide much needed assistance as they prepare for spring seeding. However, the long-term solutions for the farm economy lie in improved international trade. To that end the Prime Minister is meeting today with farm leaders in Vancouver to seek their advice and support before he leaves for the Tokyo Economic Summit. In Tokyo he will aggressively pursue the interests of Canadian farmers. The farmers of western Canada are getting the assistance they so urgently need, and the Government will continue to act on their behalf.

FARM FUEL COSTS AND PRICE OF WHEAT

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to apologize for having inadvertently misled the House yesterday when I congratulated the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) for having removed the sales and excise taxes on farm fuels, and for his decision to allow domestic wheat prices to rise to $11 per bushel. Upon checking with officials, I have discovered that the Government is not removing sales and excise taxes, but is simply providing rebates to farmers of most, but not all, of those taxes. Neither are we getting $11 per bushel for domestic wheat. The price remains at about $7 and will only move up within the announced range of $6 to $11 after some future announcement.

I was not alone in making this error. Many others, including the Member for Swift Current—Maple Creek (Mr. Wilson), the Member for Moose Jaw (Mr. Gottselig), and the Member for Portneuf (Mr. Ferland) also assumed that the Prime Minister's words would fit the forthcoming action. I regret that Prime Ministerial statements are not more specific and direct, and that I have contributed to the spreading of information which was not as factual as it first appeared.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

ORDERING OF CANADIAN WINES ADVOCATED TO ASSIST DOMESTIC INDUSTRY

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of the House the current situation facing the Canadian wine industry. The industry is suffering and jobs are being lost for a number of reasons, primarily, however, as a result of the flood of subsidized European imports. This is unfortunate because the industry now produces an outstanding product.

Members of Parliament and members of the Public Service can help. The people of Canada now pay tens of millions of dollars to transport MPs and members of the Public Service across the country. When flying at public expense it would be very helpful if, when ordering wine, we insisted that it be Canadian. This would be a tremendous boost to the industry, both financially and psychologically.

I think it is only reasonable and fair to assume that, if the people of Canada are paying for our flights, we should be ordering products made by the people of Canada.

U.S.S.R.—FAMILY REUNIFICATION—PLIGHT OF BENJAMIN BUGOMOLNY AND WIFE TANYA

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, Jews the world over have been celebrating Passover, the festival of freedom and hope. We speak out for freedom for all who are so deprived. We speak particularly to the sad case of Soviet Jews deprived of their right to practise ancient traditions, learn about their own heritage, speak and write their own language as others are permitted to do, and join their families here in the West.

We speak of Benjamin Bogomolny and his wife Tanya awaiting Soviet permission to emigrate from Moscow in order to join his sister in Montreal. The courage and tenacity displayed by this man during his 20-year struggle to rejoin his family in the free world is a symbol for all people who believe that the principle of family rejoinder agreed to as part of the Helsinki Accord should be respected.

In Berne a conference on family reunification is currently under way. I urge the Canadian Government, through Ambassador Bauer, to press most vigorously for the reunification of the Bogomolny family and of other such families with members in Soviet bloc countries who wish to join their families here.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

THE ADMINISTRATION

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—APPLICATION OF CODE OF CONDUCT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister and is about the fitness of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to remain in Cabinet. Based on the obvious conclusion from answers he has given, the Prime Minister based his entire judgment about the Minister concerned on a report from an official. Do the Deputy Prime Minister and the Prime Minister not recognize that the guidelines that have been put forward call for more judgment and more inquiry by the Prime Minister than simply relying on the analysis, faulty and inadequate as it was, of some official?

• (1415)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the impression the Hon. Member attempts to leave is totally inaccurate. I have been answering questions, as has the Prime Minister, for three days in a row, to try to explain to him that the requirement is to ensure that Ministers of the Crown comply with the Code of Conduct which was tabled in this House last September 9. Compliance by that Minister has been met. If he does not believe that, the Hon. Member is free to make his own inquiries. If he does not wish to follow that course and he thinks something dishonourable or criminal has been done by the Minister, he has, if he chooses to exercise the courage to do so, an option open to him, and the procedures and processes available to any Member of this House.

APPEARANCE OF PROPRIETY—TERMS OF LOAN

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind the Deputy Prime Minister that under the guidelines the appearance of propriety is as important as propriety itself. I want to ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he does not agree that the spectacle of the wife of a Minister getting an interest-free loan of $2.6 million at the very same time as the company concerned was seeking and obtaining a loan for $62.5 million looks, from the point of view of appearances, like nothing more than a kickback.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman, with no disrespect intended to the occupant of the chair, uses the Question Period not for a legitimate purpose of asking questions and seeking information, but for the purpose of smuggling his version of certain events on to the record of this House. It is unworthy of him, and it is rubbish that should not be tolerated in the House of Commons.

OFFICIAL'S INQUIRY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister is making it appear that a full inquiry has been conducted. Is he satisfied and does he feel that the guideline requirements are met by nothing more than an inquiry by an official? Does that cover conflict of interest and the appearance of conflict of interest? What has the Government done to investigate that?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman should know what the role and responsibility of the Prime Minister and of myself, as Deputy Prime Minister, and of the Government, are in ensuring compliance with the Code of Conduct that was tabled in this House last September 9. He knows, or should know, if he should choose to have the courage to do so that there are procedures and processes available to him if he chooses to make a charge of dishonour or some criminal action on the part of the Minister. Let him do that.

INCORPORATION OF COMPANY

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and it concerns the numbered company that was used to channel the $2.6 million to the Minister's corporation. As the Deputy Prime Minister knows, the numbered company was incorporated in April, 1985, and the $2.6 million loan was made in May, 1985, less than a month later. Will the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that the anonymous numbered company was incorporated solely for the purpose of laundering money to the Minister's company?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is difficult for me to find the question of the company to be a ministerial responsibility. Does the Hon. Member have another question?

Mr. Nunziata: May I rephrase my first question, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

COMPANY DIRECTOR

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister has indicated that he has conducted an investigation into this whole matter. I would like to pose another question to the Solicitor General. Will the Solicitor General confirm that the sole director of the numbered company was under investigation by the RCMP at the time of his unfortunate and premature death last November?

• (1420)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that falls within my responsibility because the subject matter that the Hon. Member is obviously raising is an unfounded accusation of conflict of interest. He commences his question by a totally false assertion. I repeat to him that there are procedures and processes available to him and any other Member who have the courage to stand and charge any Minister of the Crown with dishonourable conduct or criminal activity.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—INFORMATION KIT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Secretary of State for External Affairs recently provided all Members of Parliament and Senators with a publicly financed propaganda kit on the question of free trade, a decision about which has not yet been made by the Parliament of Canada. When the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretary of State were on this side of the House, the Secretary of State described the use of such funds in advance of a decision of Parliament as constituting an improper manipulation of public money. The Deputy Prime Minister knows that it is wrong. We know that it is wrong. Will he do the right thing and send the bill for that kit to the Conservative Party of Canada?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member cannot have it both ways. On one hand he is saying: "Give us information. Involve us and let us know what is going to happen in this debate." We give them the information and now they are complaining. Which way do you want it?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: The whole country knows, the press knows, and Members of Parliament know that the Government has refused to give the studies that would make our debate about this issue relevant and not dependent on propaganda. The Minister knows that.

[Translation]

POLITICAL PROPAGANDA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I will gladly repeat my question to the Minister who answers for the Government.

Political parties are responsible for their propaganda. Why does the Conservative Party not pay for this propaganda?

[English]

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, it is the same question, only this time it was given in French. I can only say that you cannot have it both ways. This was information that was released to all Members of Parliament and all Senators to inform them better and assist them in their dialogue with their constituents. That is the proper function of this Government. That is what we are doing. Don't complain that you are not getting information from us.

CONTENT OF KIT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the only politicians whose voices are used in this propaganda are those of the Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Minister himself and, believe it or not, President Reagan. There is not an opposition politician or a Premier of Canada. Will the Minister produce the studies that would make a debate relevant, and/or produce a package that is fair-minded? That is what we want.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, needless to say, I examined this material long before its distribution and I found it to be an excellent kit. I think it is extremely informative and very fair-minded. I am sure it will assist you in the debate.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In a letter last September 9, the Prime Minister made the following rule: "I wish it to be understood clearly by all Members that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that may arise from activities of their spouse." Will the Minister tell the House if he informed his spouse of this rule and, if so, why was the rule broken?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker—

Ms. Copps: Let him answer. We want the Minister to answer.

Mr. Nielsen: —the matter raised by the hon. gentleman falls within the responsibility of the Prime Minister and by delegation in these circumstances to me. I repeat to the Hon. Member the answer I have given to other Hon. Members repeatedly over three days. If he wishes to make allegations of dishonour or criminal activity against any Minister of the Crown, he is free to do so—

Mr. Gauthier: It's just a question. Answer it and sit down.

Mr. Nielsen: —and there are procedures and processes in place which, if the Hon. Member does not know about them, I am sure his researchers will help him discover.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I was asking the question of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, not the Minister of cover-up for this House.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. McDermid: Next question.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member has a question, please, immediately.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister kow he can possibly continue so blindly to protect a colleague who has ignored his own Prime Minister's guidelines, which I have right here? How can he tolerate such interference?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it is the responsibility, as I have said repeatedly for three days, of the Prime Minister to ensure there has been compliance with the Code of Conduct governing the activities of public officials. I have satisfied myself through the appropriate officials and have so reported to the Prime Minister that that compliance has been had.

The Hon. Member may choose not to believe that. That is his option. There are also available to him procedures and processes which he can invoke if he has the courage to make specific allegations of criminal activity or dishonourable activity by any Minister of the Crown.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF STUDIES

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister for International Trade. Given that the Minister released with other documents this document I hold up which was released earlier this year, in February, prior to the most recent publication which has been given out, will he give for the purposes of public debate copies of all of the studies it was indicated were available as background information but which, to this point in time, have neither been made available to Members of the House of Commons nor to anyone in the press? In fact the press has had to go to court to try to get those studies.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can advise the Hon. Member that the Secretary of State for External Affairs and myself are presently reviewing all the studies which have been made available to us. Studies which will not in any way jeopardize in whole or in part our negotiating position with the Americans—

Mr. Broadbent: Oh, right.

Mr. Kelleher: —of course we are prepared to release in order to engender a better and more informed—

Mr. Broadbent: Do you have any negative stats?

Mr. Kelleher: —debate in this House.

Mr. Deans: One might have thought that the two Ministers would have reviewed those studies before they made their decision to proceed with free trade.

CONTENT OF INFORMATION KIT

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Why does the Minister believe it is appropriate to give to the public of Canada selected information chosen from among those Government Members who have made statements in support of free trade, but refuses consistently to reveal what those who think free trade might do harm to Canada have been saying about what the effect will be in their areas? Why will the Government not now make available the studies it did, upon which it apparently based its decisions, rather than make available a whole lot of propaganda nonsense?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I would like to advise the Hon. Member that all the statistics involved in the video, which I think is an excellent one, are all based—

Mr. Broadbent: Oh?

Mr. Kelleher: One moment. All the conclusions and facts contained in that video are all contained in the recommendations and reports done for the Macdonald Royal Commission.

Mr. Blaikie: Let's see them.

Mr. Rodriguez: Let's see the study by the CLC.

Mr. Kelleher: And what I would like to see are the reports and studies—

Mr. Broadbent: Release your studies. You've got the studies.

Mr. Kelleher: —which substantiate the statements made by the CLC and the Ontario Federation of Labour.

Mr. Deans: But they paid for their own. They paid for their own material. You are using taxpayers' dollars.

CANADAIR PRIVATIZATION—CDIC APPOINTEE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I hope he takes this chance to speak for himself.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: Was the Minister aware, when he asked CDIC to find a buyer for Canadair, that his appointee to the CDIC, Mr. Frank Stronach, was also planning to bid on Canadair through his own company, Magna International Inc.?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that question relates to the subject matter of conflict of interest—

Mr. Johnston: Come on!

Mr. Nielsen: —which is my responsibility in the absence of the Prime Minister. My response to the Hon. Member is the same as it was yesterday.

Quite apart from repeating, once again, the fact of the Minister's full compliance with the Code of Conduct, I draw her attention to my answer yesterday with respect to the process through which privatization is proceeding through a ministerial task force under the chairmanship of the President of the Treasury Board, and not under the chairmanship of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

CHAIRMAN OF BURNS FRY INVESTMENT DEALERS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, at the Deputy Prime Minister's invitation I will refer to his answer of yesterday in which he stated that the decisions surrounding Canadair will include a review under Burns Fry Investment Dealers. Is the Deputy Prime Minister aware of the fact that the Chairman of Burns Fry Investment Dealers also happens to be a director of Magna International?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I really do not know where that leads us. However, in the off chance that it has to do with the subject matter of a conflict, which is the responsibility of the Prime Minister and, by delegation, of myself in these circumstances, if the Hon. Member will read carefully what I said yesterday she will see that I said that Burns Fry, among other firms, was retained by the board of CDIC in order to review the five—

Ms. Copps: Self-dealing at its worst!

Mr. Nielsen: —candidates with respect to their adherence to the criteria established in the privatization—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

FREE TRADE—ALLEGED BENEFITS FOR ALL REGIONS OF CANADA—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, one of the critical studies now in the news is the Quebec study that has demonstrated that 12 out of 18 Quebec industries would suffer negative effects as a result of free trade. Is the Government prepared to admit that saying all regions in this country, as it says here, will benefit from free trade is sheer propaganda?

[English]

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier, the information contained in the video and the statistics which accompany it are all to be found in the report of the Macdonald Royal Commission and in the appendices attached thereto which were tabled in the House last September. I would commend the Hon. Member to sit down and read it.

Mr. Deans: But they're not right.

CONTENT OF VIDEO PRESENTATION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have read it. It states, as I have pointed out to the Minister, more studies were needed before any decision should be made. Does the Government not admit that to put out a high-tech piece of gimmickry such as this, with only Conservatives speaking in it, is the worst form of Goebbels-like propaganda that this country has seen for years?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Look who's talking about propaganda!

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member and his Party should realize that today video tapes are not something new. They should bring their Party into the 20th century like this Party has done.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: So it's a party matter and not a government matter?

Mr. Forrestall: You're a bunch of aging dinosaurs!

Mr. Kelleher: Mr. Speaker, I would also remind the Hon. Member that I have very carefully reviewed the literature put out by the CLC, the United Auto Workers, and the OFL, and I do not see any Conservative speakers in—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Broadbent: They paid for their own.

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. I remind him that a breach of the Prime Minister's guidelines does not necessitate the laying of a criminal charge; it necesitates a resignation. This is a question of ethics.

Will the Deputy Prime Minister explain to the House what was the purpose of the Prime Minister's letter of September 9, 1985? Are Ministers to follow the contents of the letter, or are they to ignore it?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that question is one to which the answer is absolutely obvious.

However, I would take this opportunity to remind the hon. gentleman that the Prime Minister wrote to his Leader, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, on September 9, 1985, with respect to this whole question—

Mr. Gauthier: He is not a Minister!

Mr. Nielsen: —of conflict, inviting the input of both opposition Parties with respect to—

Mr. Gauthier: Distort, distort, distort!

Mr. Nielsen: —any improvements which could be obtained to the Code of Conduct.

Mr. Gauthier: Stick to the facts. You're distorting the whole damn thing and you know it. It talks about MPs and not Ministers. Don't be such a distorting son-of-a-gun. You're a hypocrite.

Mr. Nielsen: The Prime Minister is still waiting for a response—

Mr. Gauthier: That's not true. You're distorting everything.

Mr. Cassidy: It's not true, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: He's distorting the facts.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier will come to order. Supplementary question.

MAGNA INTERNATIONAL INQUIRY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Mr. Gauthier: He won't answer it!

Mr. Dingwall: Notwithstanding the $64.2 million which has been provided to Magna International, will the Minister inform the House with respect to what other loan guarantees, interest-free loans or grants have been provided to Magna International by his Department since May of 1985?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Rossi: That's his Department!

Ms. Copps: Let's hear from the Minister.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It has nothing to do with his responsibility.

Mr. Caccia: What are you hiding there?

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, obviously, under any camouflage which might describe that question, it is still one falling within my present responsibility—

Ms. Copps: Let the crook speak for himself.

Mr. Nielsen: —and no one else's in this House on behalf of the Government. I can continue to answer, as I have before, that Ministers of the Crown are required to comply with the Code of Conduct which was tabled in September of 1985. The Hon. Member has heard me state time and time again for the last three days—

Ms. Copps: Cut him off!

Mr. Nielsen: —that I have satisfied myself that that compliance has been had. If the Hon. Member does not think so, procedures and processes—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—CONTENT OF VIDEO RELEASE

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, the Canada geese are flying again, only this time it's the Conservatives who are goosing the public and circumventing Parliament, instead of the Liberals on the Constitution.

My question is for the Minister of International Trade. Why, in the name of co-operative federalism, did the Progressive Conservative Party choose to use pictures of Premiers Peterson and Pawley in a way which suggests they support the Government when he knows that they do not?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Forrestall: Now he's a defender of Peterson!

An Hon. Member: Let Erik answer the question.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, there is an old saying: There is only evil in the mind of the beholder.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Kelleher: What we depicted—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Kelleher: —in that film—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Rodriguez: Is there a textile industry in Nova Scotia?

Mr. Nystrom: I think it's in the ear of that beholder.

An Hon. Member: What are you beholding these days?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary question.

PREMIERS DEPICTED

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I suggest that, as bad as it is, the Minister should stick with trade and not go into books of quotations.

• (1440)

Mr. Speaker: Just a question, please.

Mr. Blaikie: Did he seek the permission of Premiers Peterson and Pawley before the Progressive Conservative Party chose to use them in this way, a way which is obviously a piece of propaganda which should not be financed by Canadian taxpayers?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the video depicts the Premiers and the Prime Minister of Canada in consultation, trying to repair the federal-provincial relations that were destroyed by the former Government. Surely the Hon. Member's Party is not against consultation. Surely they want reconciliation between the federal Government and the Provinces of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear hear!

MINES AND MINING

EFFECT OF CANADA-UNITED STATES TRADE TALKS

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Mines. One of the segments of our economy to be most affected by the proposed trade talks is Canada's mining industry. Would the Minister advise the House of the effects of the trade initiatives on this industry?

Hon. Bob Layton (Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, based on the representations which we have had from the mining industry, I can assure the House that the mining industry of Canada is fully supportive of the initiatives being taken by the Government. If I may add, Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: No, no, sit down.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. Hon. Members are just costing themselves time.

Mr. Layton: Mr. Speaker, George Albino, the chairman of one of the major corporations in Canada, said the following at the corporation's annual meeting:

The facts clearly indicate that the only option available for Canada to improve its economy is to reach a bilateral trade agreement with the United States—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—PARLIAMENTARY SUMMONS INQUIRY

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister. Yesterday the Deputy Prime Minister invited Members of the House to bring the matter of conflict of interest which we believe exists involving the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to the floor of the House. Will the Government agree to an Order of the House summoning before the Bar of the House Noreen Stevens, wife of the Minister, and Mr. Czapka who loaned the $2.6 million, to be questioned by the House as provided in its long-standing precedents? Will the Deputy Prime Minister agree to that?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. House Leader for the Official Opposition has been a Member long enough to know, and by virtue of his own position of House Leader of the Official Opposition should know, the procedures available to him if he wishes to make a charge against any Minister of the Crown. The procedures are quite independent of any agreement that may be sought and, in any event, as the Hon. Member knows or should know, tradition with respect to Business of the House is to discuss that with the Government House Leader and the other House Leaders.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURES

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, quite aside from the fact that it is not necessary to make a charge in order to ask a question about the conduct of a Minister and his responsibilities, if the Deputy Prime Minister does not agree to apply the precedents for an Order of the House to have these individuals summoned before the Bar of the House to be questioned, then let him tell us which procedures are acceptable to him and the Government.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it is certainly not my responsibility to conduct a seminar on the procedures of the House or to convey to him what the House Leader of the Official Opposition should know by virtue of the very fact that he occupies that position. He should know the procedures that are available to him.

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—STUDIES OF IMPACT ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of International Trade. Unlike the Conservative Party, the farmers of Canada have paid to have their own studies done on free trade. Poultry and grain farmers are concerned about the impact of free trade on their marketing boards. Will the Government now release the studies on the impact of free trade on agriculture rather than just releasing more Tory propaganda films?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Crosbie: You only have one question between the whole lot of you today. What's the matter with you? We want Rodriguez.

Mr. Rodriguez: Dry up, Crosbie.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Minister might be allowed to answer the question.

Mr. Kelleher: Mr. Speaker, I have already advised the House today, and will advise the Hon. Member again, that my colleague, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and I, are reviewing all of the studies, and any studies that will not in any way jeopardize our negotiating position with the United States will in fact be released.

MARKETING BOARDS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, the farmers in my riding are concerned about the impact of free trade on their marketing boards. What right does the Minister have to withhold that information from the farmers of my riding? Why does he not come clean?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I would hope that the Hon. Member took note of the benefit package that the Prime Minister and the Government brought in for the farmers yesterday.

Mr. Nystrom: Answer the question.

Mr. Kelleher: The farmers of Canada have always been well served by this Party, and will continue to be well served under the negotiations that we are going to undertake with the United States.

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

FACE PAINTING CONTRACTS FOR CANADA DAY CELEBRATIONS

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for the National Capital Commission. Canada Day is a day for Canadians to enjoy and to participate in celebration. For the second year in a row the NCC has contracted a Belgian company to do children's face painting at Confederation Square on Canada Day, while denying this contract to a company of young Canadians from right here in Ottawa. Does the Minister think that this action is appropriate and a good use of government funding? If not, will he make his wishes known to the National Capital Commission?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to thank my hon. colleagues for their applause. I know why they want to emphasize my return to the House.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to you, sir, and to this House that I want to congratulate my hon. colleague on his interest in Canadian artists. As for his particular question, it is true that this year, the National Capital Commission will give a Belgian company another opportunity to demonstrate its skills in Canada. At the same time I can inform the Hon. Member that the National Capital Commission has also retained the services of a company from Montreal, La Masquinerie, which will also have make-up workshops. I think this decision to allow us to compare foreign artists with Canadians should make for a better show for Canadians, which is of course the whole point of the exercise.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

POLICY REVIEW—INTRODUCTION OF WHITE PAPER

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. In the 1984 Progressive Conservative election pamphlet on defence entitled "Honour the Commitment", copies of which were sent to all members of the Armed Forces and a copy of which I have here, the Conservatives promised to "review completely our defence policy and issue a new White Paper within months of taking office". Why has the Minister, 20 months later, not honoured this commitment? He has made the commitment on subsequent occasions and has not honoured it. Why should anyone believe the Minister or the Prime Minister that a White Paper on Defence will ever be produced by the Government?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the last White Paper was produced in 1970, and for 15 years there was neglect and indeed downright destruction of the Canadian Armed Forces.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Andre: While in opposition we did not realize how much repair work was necessary and how long it was going to take to straighten out the mess. However, we are working on it and the promise of a White Paper will be kept.

Oral Questions

DEFENCE BUDGET

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, the Government has broken its promise to produce a White Paper. Why have the Minister and the Prime Minister added insult to injury by breaking the promise of a 3 per cent real increase in Canada's defence budget to which they committed themselves? Furthermore, why have they broken their election promise of a 6 per cent real increase in defence spending? The Liberal Government met that commitment every year it was in office from 1979 onward.

• (1450)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think we would not be having this debate if in fact the Liberal Government had not nearly destroyed our military capabilities during those 15 years. The fact is that the deficit has been brought down by the excellent work of the Minister of Finance. Despite all the cuts which have been made, the Department of National Defence has in fact received a real increase of 2.75 per cent. This was not forecast by the Liberal Minister of Finance, Mr. Lalonde, who forecast zero. We found new money and still brought the deficit down.

AIR TRANSPORT

PROSPECTIVE TRAVELLERS TO SOVIET UNION—DENIAL OF REFUNDS

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister for International Trade. In the wake of the Soviet nuclear accident, Canadians planning trips to the Soviet Union and eastern European countries are understandably concerned about the safety of such visits. The Soviet travel service, Intourist, is advising Canadian tour operators that all is well and that no refunds for cancellations will be offered.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I must require a question.

Mrs. Browes: What advice can the Minister give Canadians who do not now want to visit those countries but are unable to obtain a refund on their air fares?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can advise the Hon. Member that discussions have been held with Intourist, the Soviet travel agency. It is prepared to make adjustments and alternate arrangements for people who have made travel arrangements into that particular area. However, it is not prepared to agree to the cancellation of trips already scheduled.

PROSPECTIVE TRAVELLERS TO POLAND

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister for International Trade or for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Will either Minister take up with Polish airlines the cause of people who have to leave tomorrow but only have flight insurance which provides that their flights can only be cancelled on the basis of medical grounds? They are healthy here, but they do not want to get sick there. Will they take up the matter with Polish airlines and other airlines serving eastern Europe to arrange for a refund, a cancellation, or a delay of their trips?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, this is a serious matter. As the Minister for International Trade mentioned, there have been discussions. It is a very difficult situation wherein airlines have been willing to refund money but Intourist has not.

Mr. Benjamin: I am talking about Polish airlines.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I will get to that in a minute. In relation to Poland, I will be making a statement today at three o'clock which I believe will clarify the Polish situation. However, I indicate to the Hon. Member that at the present time there is not a health risk for travellers to Poland in terms of radiation effects from the nuclear disaster in the U.S.S.R.

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—ABSENCE OF P.E.I. FROM MAP—COLOUR OF NEWFOUNDLAND

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. It concerns the kit which he distributed containing propaganda on free trade. I reviewed the kit very carefully, and I noticed on its map that Prince Edward Island is nowhere to be found, that the Gulf of St. Lawrence is empty, and that Newfoundland is painted the same colour as the United States. What did Canada receive in return for giving away Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland in these free trade talks?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I have just been advised by my colleague, the Hon. John Crosbie, that he doesn't mind, but in any event—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: Let's trade Crosbie.

Mr. Kelleher: —I would like to advise the Hon. Member, and indeed all Members of the House, that we do not intend to give away anything in these talks which will be detrimental to best interests and all regions of Canada. You can rest assured of that.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that Mr. Crosbie may not be pissed off, but I am.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Shame, shame!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is the first week I have ever seen with three Wednesdays in it. The Hon. Member will have to withdraw the comment—

Mr. Benjamin: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Yes, he must, and he knows it.

Mr. Henderson: I withdraw that word, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Question, please.

REQUEST THAT VIDEO TAPE BE SHELVED

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister agree to shelve this stupid tape and produce one which includes Prince Edward Island and retrieves Newfoundland immediately?

Mr. Tobin: They are part of Canada.

Mr. Caccia: They are part of Canada until they sell them.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, certainly no insult or slight is intended in any way whatsoever—

Mr. Tobin: It bloody well is an insult.

Mr. Kelleher: —to two such excellent parts of our country, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. There are excellent Members from those areas on all sides of the House.

Mr. Nunziata: You don't understand Atlantic Canada.

Mr. Kelleher: We also think that the tape contains excellent information.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Humber—Port-au-Port—St.-Barbe, the Hon. Minister of Justice, and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East. Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. My goodness. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—BID TO PURCHASE CANADAIR

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I have now learned that when Canada Development Investment Corporation solicited proposals to purchase Canadair to be made to CDIC, the proposal made by Magna International was instead submitted through the office of the Minister. I have also learned that the Minister was directly involved in resolving the Department's arrangements for a $64 million financing package for Magna's investments in Cape Breton. Does the Minister consider that these arrangements are an appropriate way to proceed, in view of the benefit of some $300,000 which the Minister and his wife have received through a loan that was arranged with the assistance of the Chairman of Magna International?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, obviously that question falls within my responsibilities—

Some Hon. Members: Not at all.

Mr. Nielsen: —as shallowly as the Hon. Member attempts to disguise it. What he is doing is indirectly dealing with the matter of conflict of interest which falls within the Code of Conduct that at the moment falls under my jurisdiction. I repeat to him what I have already repeated several times for three days now, that the Minister has fully complied with the Code of Conduct.

Mr. Nunziata: Let him answer for himself. Why have you muzzled the Minister?

Mr. Nielsen: I hear the Hon. Member for York South—Weston, who is not in his seat, shouting across the aisle why do I not let the Minister answer. The simple answer to that is that it is my responsibility, not the Minister's, when it comes to conflict of interest.

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE MEETING

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. He may be satisfied that the Minister has fully complied, but the press increasingly is not satisfied that the Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question only, immediately?

Mr. Cassidy: Will the Deputy Prime Minister arrange for the Commons Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure to hear the Minister out and to satisfy itself on whether or not there has been conflict of interest, particularly since Mr. Stronach of Magna International is eager to attend before that committee?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is a representation, but it is not the Minister's responsibility.

VISIBLE MINORITIES

INTERNMENT OF JAPANESE CANADIANS DURING WORLD WAR II—NEGOTIATIONS INQUIRY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of State for Multiculturalism I will direct my question to the Acting Minister. Recent media reports suggest that a proposal concerning the issue of Japanese Canadian redress is imminent. However, that community has simply been kept on the outside looking in, and the Government has broken a negotiating promise. Even at this eleventh hour will the Acting Minister assure the House that the Government will enter immediately into full and meaningful negotiations with the National Association of Japanese Canadians to ensure that history does not repeat itself in 1986?

[Translation]

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Physical Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, the dossier is now before Cabinet, and the Hon. POINTS OF ORDER

RESPONSES TO QUESTIONS—MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. A practice is developing in the House of Commons over the course of the last few days that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) rises and answers questions that are put to other Ministers.

I draw your attention, Sir, to Citation 359 of Beauchesne which reads:

A brief question seeking information about an important matter of some urgency which falls within the administrative responsibility of the Government or of the specific Minister to whom it is addressed, is in order.

In Sub-section 6 it reads:

A question must be within the administrative competence of the Government. The Minister to whom the question is directed is responsible to the House for his present Ministry and not for any decisions taken in a previous portfolio.

Why is it that questions about actions taken by the Minister for Trade in his present portfolio are being answered by the Deputy Prime Minister? Why is it that, with the Minister in his seat, questions directed to him about his administrative responsibility, not about extraneous matters, are being allowed to be answered by the Deputy Prime Minister?

An Hon. Member: It is not the Minister of Trade but Regional Industrial Expansion.

Mr. Speaker: Order. That is not a comment on the Minister, it is a comment on the Chair. The Chair has listened to the questions and answers and has heard an assertion made by the Deputy Prime Minister. He asserts to the Chair that he has the responsibility for that matter, that that is within his ministerial responsibility. Is the Hon. Member arguing that that is not the case?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, a question was put today about a decision taken by the Minister in his office with regard to a transaction within the responsibility of his ministry.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That is wrong.

Mr. Deans: That was answered by the Deputy Prime Minister who claimed he had the administrative responsibility for that. Quite clearly, it was a question clearly within the competence of the Minister himself and the Deputy Prime Minister had absolutely nothing to do with it. I don't understand why the Minister is sitting here and not answering the questions that fall within his responsibilities.

Mr. Ouellet: Cover-up.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, might I just point out two very serious and glaring errors in the proposition put forward by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

First, the questions were related to a transaction which was not, I repeat, not under the jurisdiction of the Hon. Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens).

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That was explained. If the Opposition would listen to the answers, they would not be raising spurious and specious points of order. It was answered by the Deputy Prime Minister—

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —that the matter was under the jurisdiction of a cabinet committee, chaired by the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret). That is the first proposition. Second, the matters to which the questions are related, relate to alleged and unfounded allegations of a conflict of interest.

Mr. Deans: No. That was not the question asked.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: There is no question about that whole area not being in the responsibility—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members listened to the other presentation. I think it is only fair that Hon. Members listen to this one as well. Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I simply repeat, because I think I was interrupted by the Opposition, that in a matter of the enforcement of the rules with respect to conflict they are prerogatives of the Prime Minister.

Mr. Deans: I agree.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Finally, questions in Question Period are directed to the Government. You have said that on a number of occasions, Mr. Speaker. You have indicated that the Government then is in a position to answer. It is not imperative upon a Minister to stand up and respond to questions with respect to activities, alleged activities, unfounded activities alleged by the Opposition with respect to our spouses or with respect to ourselves. They have no relationship to our ministerial responsibilities.

Mr. Deans: I agree.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I simply make those points to put this in perspective because I think all the questions placed have been answered in the true spirit of ministerial responsibilty by the Deputy Prime Minister—

Mr. Benjamin: That was not the question.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —and he has given good and adequate answers.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) on the same point of order.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): During the Question Period, I recall a question being put to the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) as to what loans or grants were made by his Department to Magna. If that does not fall within the administrative responsibility of the Minister, then what does? Yet, in spite of that question being asked, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) got up and alleged that that had something to do with conflict of interest.

Second, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am happy to hear a procedural argument on this matter, which is the way it started, as opposed to an argument about the substance of Question Period. But if the Member is asking me to check the blues on the answer, I heard the answer from the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has referred to with regard to the question which the Hon. Member is now raising. I did hear it. Does the Hon. Member want to continue on a procedural ground?

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I also recall another question relating to the Canada Development Investment Corporation for which the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion answers to this House. If the Deputy Prime Minister—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Acting Prime Minister.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): —and Acting Prime Minister can answer any and all questions in the House in the guise that it relates to the matter of conflict of interest, then he will be able to achieve his velcro lips purpose of shutting down one of the major ways Parliament has to hold the Government to account. I invite you, on behalf of the people of Canada, to put a stop to this.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I will be happy to read Hansard tomorrow or the blues later and determine whether there is any substance to the point of order.

Mr. Deans: May I rise only to clarify my question very briefly, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Deans: I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker. I would ask you simply, when you review, to look at the question posed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) which was the question about which I was speaking. I do apologize that I had the Minister's title incorrectly. I was referring to the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), not Minister for Trade.

Ms. Copps: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: No. Arising out of Question Period on a separate point of order?

Mr. Cassidy: On a separate point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) on a separate point of order.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I would ask you in reviewing your decision with respect to this measure—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member has just indicated to me that she has a different point of order.

Ms. Copps: I indicated nothing of the kind.

Mr. Speaker: She gets up to ask me—

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member says she has a different point of order and gets up to say something—

Ms. Copps: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I didn't—

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please listen?

• (1510)

Order, please! Does the Hon. Member have a different point of order?

Ms. Copps: I rose on a point of order. The Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) indicated he had a different point of order. I rose on a point of order. If the Speaker will give me a chance, I will be very brief. I would ask him to review the question specifically—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I specifically asked if the Hon. Member was rising on a different point of order. If she is not, I will recognize the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

Mr. Benjamin: How do you know she isn't?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Let us try this again. Is the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) rising on a different, separate, and distinct point of order? She will not mention the one we have just dealt with.

Ms. Copps: The point that I would like to raise is obviously subject to your interpretation, as you interpret everything. I would ask you to consider, in the context of Ministerial responsibility, whether my specific question to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, which dealt with an appointment for which he was responsible to the CDIC, was in fact within his responsibility.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! What did I say to the House a minute ago? I said I would review the point of order and that I would review the "blues" out of today.

Ms. Copps: On a different question.

Mr. Speaker: I just said a minute ago that I will review the "blues" out of today with regard to the point of order the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) raised which was with regard to the—

Ms. Copps: It was a different question.

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please listen. The point of order was raised—

Mr. Caccia: Listen to her.

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) listen as well. The question was raised with regard to Ministerial accountability and answers in Question Period generally by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain. That is what he said.

Mr. Blaikie: You are the Speaker. Leave it at that.

Mr. Speaker: I said I would review that whole question.

Mr. Ouellet: Including her question.

Mr. Speaker: I cannot review Question Period without reviewing the Hon. Member's question. It is impossible not to do that. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST RULES—STATEMENT BY DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I shall try to be very brief. I believe the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) may have inadvertently misled the House. I want to bring it to your attention, Mr. Speaker, because it concerns business which is currently before a committee of the House.

In Question Period today the Deputy Prime Minister indicated that the Government was still awaiting a reply to the Prime Minister's letter of September 9 to the Leader of my Party with respect to the possibility of conflict of interest rules for Parliamentarians. That matter has, in fact, been discussed by the House Leaders and referred to the Committee on Management and Members' Services. There has in fact been the reply called for, contrary to the statement of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order. That is not a point of order.

PRIVILEGE

SUBMISSIONS BY MEMBER—SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) has submitted a detailed presentation to me on the matter which she has already raised in the House. May I take this opportunity of commending the Hon. Member for Hamilton East on the manner in which she presented her written submission to me as it does provide all the information on which she seeks to base her case.

Before ruling, however, I should like to clear up what appears to be a misunderstanding. The Hon. Member first raised this question on the assumption that it was a matter arising out of the Question Period. Although the matter was referred to during the Question Period, there was no allegation that a breach of privilege had actually occurred during the Question Period. In such cases, a written notice of the kind which the Hon. Member has prepared is the proper method of giving the Chair notice of the question of privilege which is desired to be raised and which does not, therefore, arise directly from proceedings in the House. Contrary to some views, there are in fact no grounds for assuming that the question cannot be handled openly only because the submission is in writing.

With regard to the issue itself, the Hon. Member asserts that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) has improperly monitored communications between Members of Parliament and the Assistant Deputy Registrar General with the intention of interfering in the exercise of their duties and attempting to intimidate them. She bases her complaint on the fact that the Deputy Prime Minister had informed himself that communications had taken place between certain Members and the Assistant Deputy Registrar General and on the fact that the latter had informed another Hon. Member that it was not the policy of his office to tell third parties who has consulted him. The Chair must decide whether these facts constitute prima facie evidence of a breach of privilege.

The precedents quoted by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East relate to the invasion of a Member's privacy within the precincts of Parliament, the interception of private communications including mail, electronic eavesdropping on a caucus meeting, and the unauthorized interrogation of a Member and her staff by the police. I must say that I can find nothing in the acts complained of which bear any relevance to the precedents she has quoted.

The fact that the Deputy Prime Minister has inquired whether Members of Parliament have been in communication with the Assistant Deputy Registrar General does not seem to me to constitute an interception of those communications. The fact that the Assistant Deputy Registrar General made a statement with regard to the policy of his office does not constitute evidence of a prima facie breach of privilege either.

The Hon. Member for Hamilton East includes in her submission a quotation from Erskine May's 19th Edition to the effect that any act or omission which obstructs or impedes a Member in the performance of his or her functions may be treated as a contempt of the House. Here we have the essence of the matter. If an Hon. Member is impeded or obstructed in the performance of his or her parliamentary duties through threats, intimidation, bribery attempts or other improper behaviour, such a case would fall within the limits of parliamentary privilege. Should an Hon. Member be able to say that something has happened which prevented him or her from performing functions, that he or she has been threatened, intimidated, or in any way unduly influenced, there would be a case for the Chair to consider. I cannot see that the Hon. Member's ability to perform her parliamentary functions have been impaired in any way. I am, therefore, unable to accord this matter precedence over other business.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations among the representatives of the Parties. The House Leaders were provided with a draft order and I think you will find that there would be unanimous consent to adopt the following motion without debate:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, the House immediately revert to Statements by Ministers for the purpose of receiving a statement by the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare; and Provided that Standing Order 19(6) shall be deemed to be in force for the purpose of this Order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) is refusing unanimous consent.

Mr. Gauthier: I am just asking for clarification of the motion just read by the Minister. The last sentence says: "Provided that Standing Order 19(6) shall be deemed to be in force for the purpose of this order". Would he please add (a) to 19 so there will be no additional time added on.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to have this done on government time as opposed to extending the hours. I know the Hon. Member will take that into account with respect to the length of speeches this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) have the unanimous consent of the House to introduce the motion as amended?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amended motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

DISASTERS

NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—POSSIBILITY OF RADIOACTIVITY IN CANADA

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the House for the arrangements it completed to allow me to make this statement at this time.

The recent nuclear generating station accident in Chernobyl, U.S.S.R., has raised a number of questions including those of the health and safety of Canadians. While we do not foresee any health risks to Canada at this time, Health and Welfare scientists are monitoring the levels of radiation in Canada. I will keep the House and the people of Canada informed.

Weather pattern predictions by scientists of the Atmospheric Environment Service, Environment Canada and in the United Kingdom indicate that the radioactivity measured April 28 and 29, 1986, in the Scandinavian countries moved northward and then southeast over Finland and the northern U.S.S.R. Present and forecast weather patterns do not predict a westward movement of air to eastern Canada from the affected area.

The first results from the daily monitoring are available from two sites in Canada, Vancouver and Ottawa. They show normal levels of radioactivity. Radioactivity from the Soviet reactor will eventually move in the eastward flow of air around the world. It is expected to reach Canada seven to ten days after the April 26 accident. Thus, May 3 is probably the earliest day that any radioactivity from the accident will be collected in the air sampling program. Because of the very low levels of radioactivity expected by the time it reaches Canada, measurements require long processing times and, thus, test results from the May 3 sampling will be available by May 7. If any radioactivity does reach Canada, it will not be visible. It would be detected with sensitive radiation measurement equipment. I can only underscore the fact that the levels of radiation expected to reach Canada would be extremely low.

In 1984 the federal Government established the Federal Nuclear Emergency Response Plan. On Tuesday, April 29, I, as the responsible Minister, and after consultation with my colleagues, activated the plan to assess any impact on the health of Canadians and to keep the public informed. Other federal departments and agencies are helping us to gather as much information as possible. The plan enables us to take action if the need arises and to provide expertise and other federal resources to the provinces.

People in Canada have no need to take any protective measures at this time. Nor do we expect any measures that will be necessary in the weeks to come.

In light of specific questions that have frequently been asked by Canadians, I would like to make two additional points regarding the health situation for Canada.

First, planes arriving from affected areas in Europe have been monitored and found to be free of any radiation. Second, travellers returning from Europe need not be concerned that they may bring with them harmful levels of radioactive dust, either in their clothes, gifts or belongings.

In addition to monitoring closely the situation in Canada, the Government is taking measures to address the health and safety concerns of Canadians abroad. A task force has been established that includes the Departments of Health and Welfare, Environment and External Affairs, as well as experts from Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and the Atomic Energy Control Board. This task force is co-ordinating the Government's response to the immediate problems of assisting Canadians who were in the vicinity of the accident, advising Canadians who may be considering travel to this area and other parts of the Soviet Union and Europe, and contributing to the international effort to respond effectively to the accident.

With respect to Canadians in the vicinity of Kiev, the Canadian Government considers that as a precautionary measure it would be prudent for them to make arrangements to leave that area. In addition, as my colleague, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) stated in the House, those who may be considering travelling to this region should avoid doing so until the situation has been clarified.

The Government has dispatched the Consul at the Canadian Embassy in Moscow to Kiev to obtain a firsthand report on the situation. He will assist Canadians with departure arrangements and provide on-the-spot advice and information.

We are in regular contact with Soviet authorities and are pressing them for more precise data. To date we have not obtained all the information that we need to make a comprehensive assessment of the health hazard. We are also seeking from them any necessary assistance for Canadians.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to assure you and this House, and indeed, all Canadians, that the Government will continue to closely monitor the situation, take appropriate action, and keep the House informed. Thank you.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) for using this vehicle, Parliament, in the form of a statement in order to allow all three political Parties to respond to the same crisis in the international world caused by the accident at the nuclear reactor in the Soviet Union. I would like to applaud him for the efforts he has used to make sure the health of Canadians involved in the immediate vicinity will be monitored.

I feel the Canadian Government should be taking this one step forward. I have talked to a number of Canadians since the incident occurred and their concern is that we now live in a very interdependent world and that Russia, simply by the fact that it has had such a massive campaign of switching over their energy supplies to the nuclear field, has a responsibility that goes beyond the borders of the Soviet Union.

We, as a Canadian Government, because of our past involvement with United Nations agencies, should be taking a more positive step forward. I would ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare to take it one step further and ask the Canadian Government to push the UN agencies in Vienna so that in the future there would be a much better response by the international community to the problems that occurred as a result of the crisis in the Soviet Union. The fact that it took several days after the accident before the rest of the world was informed of this crisis says something for the system by which we monitor atomic reactors throughout the world, whether it is behind the Iron Curtain or in the free world.

As the Minister knows, Canadian technology in this field has put us in the position of being a leader in this area of technology. I would hope that the Minister would instruct the task force he has set up internally to go beyond simply monitoring and assisting Canadians who were in the vicinity of the accident. We should avail ourselves of the opportunity to instruct the task force to review and tighten the regulations here in Canada, and perhaps look at the preventive measures that are in place.

The one thing that is going to be a fall out, if you will—and it is a play on words—from the nuclear accident in Russia will be the request by the Canadian public that we make sure our agencies which exist here in Canada can do an effective monitoring job, can enforce proper preventive care so we can prevent this kind of accident from occurring, not only in Canada but elsewhere in the world.

That is why I hope the Minister of National Health and Welfare will instruct the task force to not only do an internal review of the way in which we react here in Canada but, more importantly, to use our traditional role on the world stage to ensure that the United Nations takes a major role in preventing this kind of occurrence from happening again in the future so that we will never again have to rely on sporadic news reports from other parts of the world to determine our own health and safety.

There should be presentations made to the Russian Government, not only here in Canada but through our United Nations agencies, outlining our concerns about the way in which they reacted to this accident. Canadians deserve, as do world citizens, to know more about what is happening to their health and safety as a result of this accident than what the Soviet Union has exhibited to date.

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I would like to join with the Hon. Member from Sudbury (Mr. Frith) in thanking the Minister for making use of this procedure in the House of Commons. It is a good practice and I hope it will be followed more often. I would also like to thank him for the advance copy. I would like to go through it perhaps on a concern-by-concern basis.

On page one he says the following:

> The first results from the daily monitoring are available from two sites in Canada—Vancouver and Ottawa. They show normal levels of radioactivity.

Is any provision being made for monitoring radioactivity levels in northern Canada because of our proximity to the Soviet Union over the Arctic Circle? Would the Minister look into that and make information available to the House?

Regarding the Federal Nuclear Emergency Response Plan the Minister referred to, I have requested a copy of the plan from the Minister's office and I am told that we may be able to receive it. I wonder, in advance of receiving it, if the plan includes evacuation plans and other measures if, unfortunately, we had a similar accident here in Canada? I am aware of the superiority of Canadian nuclear technology, and I do not quarrel with that, even though I quarrel with nuclear power in general, but the fact is that no technology is perfect. In the event of that imperfection catching up with us, resulting in an accident, I wonder whether we have actually thought things through that far, or whether we have as a country rested too easy on the assurances given us by Ontario Hydro, Atomic Energy of Canada and the nuclear industry in general, that this kind of thing cannot happen here. If we do not have such plans already, I would hope that this incident will result in contingency plans being developed by the Canadian Government.

I hope the Minister will clarify how Canadians can get information about travel plans which they may have for as early as tomorrow. Some people will have to make a decision within the next 24 hours about whether they will follow through with their travel plans. There was a news story the other night about higher than normal radioactivity levels in Vienna, which is not an eastern European city, at least in the ideological sense. It does not border on Russia.

In any event, people are asking questions about travel plans and I hope they do not have to rely on the hot line. Yesterday, I phoned that hot line myself but the information I received was very unclear. Perhaps it has improved since then, but people on that phone did not know it was a hot line and simply replied that they would get back to me. I hope that service has been improved.

Perhaps the Minister can be excused for not addressing the very important point raised by the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith). However, the Government should address this question because it must be made perfectly clear to the Soviet Union that if it wants to be regarded as a responsible member of the international community, the secrecy, lack of communication and lack of information that has surrounded this event is totally unacceptable by everyone's standards.

We live on a very small planet and no matter on what side of the Iron Curtain we live, no one has any less responsibility for being accountable to his fellow human beings for the kind of poisons—radioactive materials in this case—that are let loose upon an ecosphere that we hold in common. Through you, Mr. Speaker, I say to the Soviet Union that this was a grand opportunity for them to live up to some of the rhetoric we have often heard from them about the international community. So far, the Soviet Union has failed miserably in living up to that rhetoric. I hope they will take the opportunity to improve their reputation in the days ahead because we will be responding to this crisis for some time to come. I hope that what little we have to say in the House of Commons might encourage the Soviet Union to be more responsible about giving information than it has been in the last few days.

Finally, Members who have been here for some time know that since I came to the House in 1979 I have been asking the Canadian Government through every means I have had at my disposal to reconsider Canada's commitment to the nuclear energy option. With all due respect to my Liberal colleagues, that option was imposed on us by successive Liberal Governments that consistently refused to do anything other than conduct internal departmental reviews of the nuclear energy option here in Canada. We have a responsibility to look into our own back yard and conduct an inquiry into the whole nuclear fuel cycle in Canada. The Progressive Conservative Party promised to do that in 1979, but after some 18 months in office it has not lived up to that commitment.

In conclusion, I am sorry if it seems as if I were ending my remarks on a partisan note. However, that is not the case. The question of nuclear energy crosses many ideological boundaries as shown by the commitment to nuclear power of both the Soviet Union and the United States. They are taking chances with the world's environment for the sake of short term industrial and economic goals. They are taking an incredible risk with humanity and I believe it is time that Canada gave second thought to the impetus and encouragement it has given to the proliferation of nuclear reactors all over the world.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

CANADA SHIPPING ACT AND RELATED ACTS

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-75, An Act to amend the Canada Shipping Act and to amend the Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act, the Maritime Code Act and the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and Motion Nos. 5, 6 and 11 (Mr. Angus) (p.12764).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Halifax West had five minutes remaining in his speech.

Mr. Crosby: Mr. Speaker, let me begin by repeating the thrust of my earlier remarks in the debate on Clause 4 of Bill C-75. Members will know that Clause 4 enacts a new section, Section 3.1, to the Canada Shipping Act and provides for charges related to the navigational services by the Canadian Coast Guard.

The point that I wanted to make in my earlier remarks is that Clause 4, new Section 3.1 of the Canada Shipping Act, relates to marine transportation. In fact, the whole thesis of the Canadian Shipping Act is marine transportation. It only incidentally and indirectly involves the coastal fisheries.

Members of the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party would have Canadians believe that the whole thrust and purpose of this provision is to impose fees and charges on the fishermen of Canada, particularly those in the Atlantic area. That really is an illusion created by the Opposition. The purpose of the Canada Shipping Act and the amendments thereto are to ensure safety and fair competition on the oceans in relation to marine transportation.

I want to reiterate that because I do not want people to be misled by the remarks of opposition Members who try to portray and characterize these new provisions as having an adverse effect on those who travel the seaways in ships and vessels. That is absolutely not the purpose of this legislation. Canadians can put their minds to rest. Let them not listen to the arcane development of ideas and processes by members of the Opposition. We are here to increase safety on the oceans. We are here to advance the cause of marine transportation for Canada and Canadians.

It was interesting to listen to representations by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) in Ontario and by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), who represents an area of the Rideau Canal. I can understand their lack of knowledge as well as the frustration of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth—Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall), when those Members talk about marine transportation in the narrow context in which they view this international activity that brings millions of dollars of revenue into Canada and employs thousands of Canadians on the East and West Coast. Marine transportation is a major source of employment in the City of Halifax.

It grieves me to hear a Member, whose constituency includes the Rideau Canal, talk in serious terms about marine transportation. I can understand why the Member for Nickel Belt confuses this enormous subject of marine transportation with vague remarks about its effect on the fishery.

Let me enlighten those Members by referring to a presentation made by the Halifax-Dartmouth Port Development Commission when it appeared before the legislative committee. This is what it said in support of Clause 4 of Bill C-75:

> Since 1964, when the St. Lawrence River was opened to year-round shipping activity, the Federal Government has spent considerable amounts of taxpayers' dollars to keep the river navigable.
> Shipping lines serving inland Canadian markets via St. Lawrence River ports, benefit from the free provision of navigational services.
> At the same time, competing shipping lines serving Halifax require extensive rail service to the same inland markets and have to pay the full inland cost by rail at compensatory rates.

Do we hear the Member for Nickel Belt complaining about that? Does the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier argue against that? No.

As the Ports Commission says, we are talking about the subsidization of the all-water route to Montreal in competition with the inland rail route from Halifax which is user pay. The fact that the Port of Halifax has to pay the full cost represents a government-created economic distortion between Halifax and Montreal. The purpose of this Bill is to address that distortion. I defy any Member from Atlantic Canada, including the Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall), to stand in the House and say that Atlantic Canada and the Port of Halifax do not benefit from this kind of provision. Our fear is that it will not be acted upon because of the misrepresentations made by Hon. Members from central Canada, aided and abetted by unknowing Hon. Members from Atlantic Canada. They seize the opportunity to distort the provisions of this Bill and try to fool the fishing industry. In that way they distort the whole process and do a disservice to Atlantic Canada and to all its residents.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I was interested to hear the comments made by the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby). He seems to be taking the attitude that Hon. Members on this side of the House somehow or other oppose this Bill when in fact we on this side have supported the Bill in every way and have expedited its passage.

The only clause on which there has been a great difference of opinion is Clause 4. Clause 4 seeks to impose fees for all kinds of services which are rightfully provided by the Government of Canada, that is, the Coast Guard service, navigational aids and so on. I would point out to the Hon. Member for Halifax West that we are very conscious that Halifax is a major port. However, he should, by the same token, be conscious that the Seaway is very important to my constituency of Algoma. We have the St. Mary's River and more tonnage goes through that river every year, which requires ice breaking and navigational services, than is trans-shipped through the Port of Halifax. I am not in any way putting down the massive responsibility of the Port of Halifax, but the Hon. Member seems to be trying to say that no one should talk about this subject but Members of Parliament from Halifax. It is very important to my constituency of Algoma. We need a lot of navigational aid and a lot of assistance from the Coast Guard. If the Government is going to take on to itself the power to impose charges for all kinds of things for which it has never charged in the past, members of the Opposition have every right to object.

I was interested to hear the comments of the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns). It seemed to me he took the same kind of approach as the Hon. Member for Halifax West. He seemed to be saying: "Look. As long as I am there, you don't have to worry about the Minister of Transport imposing those charges". I am sure that if the potato producers in Prince Edward Island were asked their opinion they would say: "Yes, that is what you told us last year, but then the Government imposed service charges for inspection of our potato crops". The people in Prince Edward Island showed just how much they were ready to trust the Government, both federally and provincially, in the last provincial election.

I would like to refer to some comments made by the National Farmers Union when it appeared before the committee on February 13. I quote from its submission as follows:

> Nonetheless farmers face in Section 4 of Bill C-75 proposals for further indirect taxation of their income already seriously battered by high production costs, rising interest rates, declining world prices, poor crops in some areas and protective trading and farm policies in many parts of the world, particularly in the U.S.
> In its preoccupation to trim the federal deficit the Government is, in effect, telling farmers that the national interest can best be served by still further increasing farm costs at a time when the Farm Credit Corporation estimates that one in every four, or about 40,000 farmers in Canada with $20,000 or more in gross annual farm sales is in severe financial distress. The added costs to farmers implied by the new cost recovery proposals in Bill C-75 will provide nothing to enhance service in the movement of farm products that is not now offered and will only further impoverish farmers.

That is the kind of expression of concern we are hearing from the National Farmers Union. The Potato Marketing Board, on behalf of the Prince Edward Island potato industry, submitted its position paper on Clause 4 on February 13. The board in its submission stated, and I quote:

> The P.E.I. potato industry supports the federal Government's policy on encouraging international trade. Thus we are vigorously opposed to the introduction of charges relating to navigational services until an impact study on the potato industry's export business is conducted.

I do not feel that the two members of the Government, who are obviously trying to cover up what powers the Government is taking onto itself, really do themselves much credit when we look at the briefs which were presented by their local organizations. We can certainly see that there is a great deal of concern. That is why we would like to see Clause 4 removed or at least made available for review in two years' time. The clause is totally sweeping. It is an enabling legislation which will allow the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) to charge user fees for ice breaking services and navigational aids. When he asks for these powers he does not say how they will be used. There is no schedule to show what the charges will be, when they will be used and to whom they will apply.

In many parts of the shipping industry we see higher levies, but at the same time we see a decrease in the use of the Seaway. The additional charges which will be imposed under Clause 4 will discourage just that much more the use of this most important inland waterway. I think Clause 4 really requires a great deal of further consideration.

We are not only talking about services for the commercial vessels which go through the Seaway or ply the coasts of Canada, we are as well looking at the internal waterways of this country. In my constituency fishing is a relatively important industry. We are situated on the shores of Lake Superior and on the north shore of Lake Huron and Manitoulin Island. Our fishermen certainly require the services of the Coast Guard and navigational aids and assistance. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, their position is not such that they can pay for additional services. That is why we are urging the Government to withdraw this clause.

We agree with the Bill. We realize the legislation is out of date and needs to be updated. We want to see it passed, but without Clause 4 which is totally unacceptable to the Opposition and I suspect to many of the government back-benchers in the quiet and privacy of their caucus room. Here on the floor of the House of Commons they have to knuckle under the pressure put on them by the Parliamentary Secretary for the Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), who always steps on the back-benchers. He does not allow them to bring forth their own ideas and prevents them from speaking honestly and fairly. They should be allowed to express the concerns of the potato producers and fishermen in the small craft harbours throughout the Great Lakes and on both coasts. Clause 4 is totally unacceptable and must be withdrawn.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Etobicoke—Lakeshore (Mr. Boyer)—External Relations—Size of Polish consulate in Etobicoke—Lakeshore; the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom)—Trade—Threatened use of subsidies to sell United States wheat to Syria. (b) Minister's position; and the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi)—Immigration—Unscrupulous immigration consultants.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT AND RELATED ACTS

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-75, an Act to amend the Canada Shipping Act and to amend the Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act, the Maritime Code Act and the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and Motions Nos. 5, 6 and 11 (Mr. Angus) (p.12764).

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I would like to follow up on the remarks of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), with regard to the deficiencies in Bill C-75. I see very serious problems for shippers and small ports in eastern Canada in terms of this Bill. I am rather disturbed and upset by the fact that we do not have any draft copies of the regulations as yet.

Mr. Forrestall: Good God, man, what are you talking about?

Mr. MacLellan: I would like to have seen them attached to the Bill. I wish to see what this leniency being given by the Minister will mean to the shipping industry. It is a travesty that the gaping holes in Clause 4 have not been closed.

Mr. Forrestall: In 20 years in the House you never let us look at a regulation before a Bill was passed. What are you talking about?

Mr. MacLellan: I would like to consider one aspect of the Bill in particular. Clause 4(2) states:

> Charges may be imposed pursuant to subsection (1) in relation to any ship, regardless of whether the Canadian Coast Guard actually provides a service to that particular ship, but—

The clause then goes on to make two exclusions. Thus what we will have in a city, port or river which requires ice-breaking services is that an ice-breaker will come into the area in November or December—although it will come in before the actual ice season—and sit there.

Mr. Forrestall: You don't even know about your own harbour.

Mr. MacLellan: The cost of the ice-breaker will be allocated to the port or to particular shippers through the whole winter season. That is not fair. It is not fair to a small port which cannot afford this type of charge. What it would do is literally bankrupt a harbours board or a particular industry because of the cost of maintaining a ship with a crew for a whole winter.

Mr. Forrestall: You are stretching credibility.

Mr. MacLellan: There is also the possibility that this ice-breaker might not be used all winter long. There is the possibility for an appeal to the Minister. What does that mean? What does that have to involve for some poor shippers? The Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) told us that we do not have worry about fishermen. He has said that members of the Opposition are causing undue alarm. We are not causing undue alarm because there is enough alarm already in place without have to fabricate any more. Potentially, this is a very dangerous clause for all shippers and ports in eastern Canada, with the exception of ports such as Halifax, which is ice free. The Port of Halifax has a great deal of traffic and can provide a great many services. However, other areas in Atlantic Canada and on the St. Lawrence face a serious problem in terms of this clause.

Why is this measure being undertaken? Why is this cost-recovery measure being put forward to the detriment of small ports, shippers and people involved in navigation? There is no allocation, for instance, levied against truckers for snowplow services on the highways. The provinces are not undertaking any such move. How will shippers be able to compete when they have to bear the burden of all these costs under the guise of cost recovery? Truckers are able to roll across the highways without having to worry about paying for the cost of the repairs to the roads. They do not have to pay for snowplow services. This measure is just not fair. Yet members of the Government talk about equality and fairness.

Where is the fairness in the Department of Transport giving a subsidy to Atlantic Container for instance, to compete against the government-owned Crown corporation CN Marine? Where is the fairness in that? Where is the fairness in the lay-off of employees at Crown corporations who have worked for 20 years with CN Marine and other companies in the CN chain and who have no hope of finding other jobs?

There is a great deal to be taken into consideration here. I would ask the Government to reconsider a good deal of what it has put into the Bill, particularly with respect to Clause 4. As the Hon. Member for Algoma said, there are not many of us on this side of the House who quarrel with most of the provisions in the Bill. A great many of the provisions are necessary and will be helpful. However, I think that the thrust of Clause 4 is misdirected and it will be very harmful. I know that the Parliamentary Secretary does not agree with this point, but it all relates back to the regulations which we have not seen and on which we cannot rely.

This is something which will have to be examined, regardless of what the Hon. Member for Cardigan (Mr. Binns) said with respect to not allowing any abuses. The Hon. Member for Cardigan, or for that matter any other member of the Government, will not be able to control abuses if the Government wishes to abuse these provisions.

I ask the Government to reconsider Clause 4 of the Bill in the interests of shippers and people involved in navigation in eastern Canada, particularly harbours which require ice-breaking services.

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, I think the Government knew when this Bill was introduced that it would have problems with this particular clause. In speaking to the legislative committee which dealt with this Bill the Minister tried to say in one breath that the Government wanted to have the principle contained in the Bill. Then, in another breath he tried to say that we need to recover 15 per cent of the cost of operating the Coast Guard, navigational aids and ice-breakers. I imagine that an average ice-breaker would cost about $10,000 an hour, the Sir Humphrey Gilbert would.

Mr. Forrestall: Good God, come back to relevancy.

Mr. Baker: That is the fact. So it would probably cost about $1,000 to break out a typical iced-in harbour in the months of February or March on the coast of Newfoundland.

The Parliamentary Secretary does not know very much about iced-in harbours on his coastline.

Mr. Forrestall: Get your chain-saw going.

Mr. Baker: He knows the difficulties fishermen have. He is saying: "Get your chain-saw going." He is right and now I know it. He knows something about it. What will have to happen if the ice-breaker is to be charged to the fishermen in those bays is that they will have to get their chain-saws out and their dynamite out in order to get their boats out in the spring. The Parliamentary Secretary knows what I am talking about. He knows that even now when an ice-breaker is ordered for certain sections of the coastline the draft is such that it cannot get right into the harbour. Of course, then the fishermen have to saw the passageway out with chain saws and dynamite in order to get the boats out for the early spring fishery. This happens maybe every second spring along most of the northern and northeastern coast of Newfoundland. It is not good enough for the Government to say that it wants to recover approximately 15 per cent of the costs of operating these services.

• (1600)

There is another danger here. People who use small boats call on the Coast Guard from time to time to be towed into port or for any number of services. If that person in a boat believes he is going to be charged for that service, then he will hesitate in making the call. There is a danger inherent in this clause just as there was when the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) announced that he was going to charge for telephone calls to the weather office. Of course, the element of danger is that one hesitates to make that telephone call.

The principle in this Bill to which I strongly object is a principle that seems to be prevalent in every action the Government takes. It is called user pay. I can recall a time when the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall) rose day after day complaining about user pay while the former Government was in power. I do not see him now. What is he doing now? He is piloting the Bill through the House. He gets very angry and impatient with Hon. Members because they are not allowing this Bill through in a very quick fashion.

Today, May 1, is a very important day for user pay in Atlantic Canada. Today, for the first time in the history of Newfoundland since 1497, a fisherman has to pay to tie his boat to a government wharf.

Mr. Forrestall: You've got three minutes left.

Mr. Baker: The Parliamentary Secretary says that I only have three minutes left. The same policy that is being followed in Newfoundland has been extended to the whole coastline of Quebec. That is carrying user pay to the extreme. I believe it also violates the Terms of Union between Canada and Newfoundland signed in 1949. Nowhere in those terms does it say that there could be a charge for tying a boat up to a government wharf.

On the coastline of Quebec, up in the Prime Minister's riding, beginning today the same principle of user pay goes into effect on wharfs that were never charged for before. Letters went out to boat owners and fishermen who were regulated because of their licences. All pleasure boat owners will be charged and so will fishermen with boats of 45 feet and longer. Members of the House have objected to the actions of the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon) and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). The principle of user pay contained in this particular Bill carries right throughout the government services.

The Government did an amazing thing in the way it will be trying to collect the money beginning today. The Government will tell a local community man that he can have 70 per cent of what he collects from the user-pay charges. The Bill that is being piloted through the House on behalf of the Minister of Transport has a principle of user pay built right into it. On top of that, today is the first day that these same fishermen who may be charged for their icebreaker, for navigational aids or for any number of things by the Government are being charged to tie boats up to a government wharf owned either by Small Craft Harbours, the Department of Transport or the Department of Public Works.

The only thing the user-pay principle will do in smaller communities is to create incredible divisions within those communities. The Government turns around and says: "Well, the charge is not very much. It is only $1 a day if you have a 45-foot boat". A dollar a day three months in advance is $100. Who is this money to be collected by? It will be collected by someone on social assistance or on unemployment insurance who is told that he can keep 70 per cent of what he collects on the first $1,000, and then the formula goes down. That is the way government policy is translated into action in a great many coastal communities.

Apart from this particular clause, the Bill has other deficiencies which I am sure we will be addressing over the coming days and weeks and perhaps months. We will be addressing them until the Parliamentary Secretary does what he probably wants to do, and that is, bring in closure.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, just now, our attention was drawn to specific aspects of this Bill to amend the Canada Shipping Act and to amend the Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act, the Maritime Code Act and the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act in consequence thereof.

What particularly intrigued me was the insertion of Clause 4 within a very substantial Bill. I think I should explain to Canadians who are watching us today that this Bill is more than 100 pages long, 111 to be exact. Something new has now been added, namely that is the principle of recovering the cost of some of the services rendered.

Mr. Speaker, what also intrigued me was the impressive list of people who made representations that were not accepted.

[English]

The Great Lakes Waterways Development Association is certainly well known as being a very serious organization. Allow me to put on the record for the understanding of those who may be following the debate its membership list: the Alberta Wheat Pool, the Algoma Central Railway, the Algoma Steel Corporation, Limited, the Board of Trade of Metropolitan Toronto, the Canada Steamship Lines Inc., the Carghill Grain Company Limited, the Carryore Limited, the Continental Grain Company (Canada) Ltd., Dofasco, Gulf Canada Products Limited and the Hamilton & District Chamber of Commerce. The membership list continues as follows: Iron Ore Company of Canada, Labrador Mining & Exploration Co. Ltd., Lakehead Terminal Elevators Association, Les Élévateurs des Trois-Rivières, Louis Dreyfus Canada Limited, Manitoba Pool Elevators, Maple Leaf Mills Limited, Marsh Engineering Limited, and Ogilvie Mills Limited.

I am sure a number of Members have shares in this company.

• (1610)

Also it includes: Ontario Hydro, Ontario Paper Company Limited, P & H Shipping, Palliser Wheat Growers' Association, Port Colborne Chamber of Commerce, St. Catharines Chamber of Commerce, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, Stelco, Thunder Bay Chamber of Commerce, Ultramar Canada Inc., and United Grain Growers Limited.

Mr. Speaker, as members of the Great Lakes Waterways Development Association, those people got together through the Association's Chairman of the Board, Mr. Runciman, wrote a letter to the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney), in which he said: Dear Prime Minister—and, among other things:

[English]

In part it reads:

—in the opinion of our members, the Government does not need all the power it is seeking via Clause 4 to achieve its announced objective. The excess power has the potential of inflicting serious damage on industries using the Great Lakes if misapplied in the years to come—In the meantime, we recommend it be removed from Bill C-75 prior to enactment.

I should like to refer to a brief entitled "Proposed Amendments to the Canada Shipping Act—Presentation to the Special Legislative Committee Examining Bill C-75", which was presented by Mr. C. R. Lunn on behalf of the Canadian Harbour Commission Ports. In part it reads:

Since the new Clause 4 allows for the possibility of Coast Guard recovering 100 per cent of the cost of its services, there is the potential for the cost of doing business in Canada to escalate to the point of being non-competitive. The ports are currently negotiating the guidelines for a user-pay dredging policy with Coast Guard—the option of the port authorities to pass these charges on does not exist if we are to avoid losing cargo to the United States.

He therefore humbly asks that this House, that Hon. Members with more expertise than I have, that is pretty obvious, would consider the representations that have been made. There were many witnesses who said that Clause 4 should not be included in this very substantial piece of legislation. Nevertheless, the Minister decided to maintain a new Clause 4 in this new Bill.

Mr. Speaker, we are very concerned, not that we are any less Canadian because we are proud Quebecers, but we are well aware of the struggle that has been going on for years to be able to keep our ports open year-round.

I am thinking about us Montrealers. If we had to begin charging for this service to keep the Montreal harbour and surrounding waters ice-free all year round, and I mean charging what it would really cost, well it stands to reason that it would give a definite advantage to certain other sea ports which remain operational throughout the year.

Surely the Members who represent the Halifax area will understand that we too want to put up a strong defence on behalf of the ridings we represent.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill introduces a new concept whereby the federal Government will be expected to recover the full costs of the services it has to offer.

I agree that the principle in itself is justifiable, particularly in times of economic hardships when all Governments—provincial, municipal and federal alike—are strapped for cash. So the Government wants to boost its revenues as much as possible.

But must this be considered as being fair to all classes of society? A moment ago my colleague the Hon. Member from the Province of Newfoundland told us that beginning today . . . what a surprise, May 1, usually the occasion to celebrate workers the world over. Well if we consider that fishermen are workers, this is their celebration and on that very occasion we are told that, beginning today, even in the riding of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), any fisherman who wants to use a federal pier to moor his boat will have to pay, if I understood correctly what my colleague said. He is indignant because there had never been any question about that since his province joined the rest of Canada. As you know, Mr. Speaker, there are quite a few fishermen in eastern Canada. I do not like to talk about Quebec all the time.

[English]

It is not a question of saying that we are in Quebec. I would rather say eastern Canada, because then we would have a lot more in common. If we talk about eastern Canada, of course we include the Province of Quebec and the Atlantic or Maritime provinces as well. As I said earlier in French, they received a shock today. Today, being workers' day around the world, fishermen are among the people who should be celebrating as workers. However, they are being hit by a new indirect tax of which they were unaware. It is called a user fee.

I do not really understand the attitude of the Government. I think the Government could get this very imposing Bill through, but it is stubborn and will not accept the suggested changes to Clause 4, which is only a small part of the immense effort that has gone into the Bill. If these amendments were accepted, the Bill would go through. However, the Government has insisted upon including Clause 4, and insisted that we must accept or reject the Bill as a whole. That is sad. Much of what is contained in the Bill is acceptable, but the Government is being stubborn and wants to include Clause 4, the one dealing with user fees, even after many protests by the Great Lakes Waters Development Association and its membership, as well as many representations from the Montreal Chamber of Commerce and others. The Government still insists upon including it and refuses to see the exact cost of doing so.

The Minister wants to be given a blank cheque. I do not think my Party or the NDP want to give the Minister a blank cheque so that user fees can be charged. We are totally unaware of the cost of these user fees. However, I gather that we have a number of speakers in the two Parties who are interested in participating in the debate. If the Minister wants to get the Bill through, he should rethink his position and say: "If I can get the Bill through without Clause 4 and a couple of other clauses, I may as well take what I can now and come back later on the user fees".

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think there is disposition for us to move to the vote on my grouping of amendments at this point and proceed with the Liberal amendments thereafter.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. Is it correct that the Royal Assent is scheduled for some point this afternoon?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes, the Royal Assent is scheduled for some point this afternoon, but I cannot tell the Hon. Member the exact minute.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, let us be absolutely upfront about what we are doing. I believe there might well be a disposition on the part of everyone to complete the report stage of Bill C-75 by five o'clock today. In order to accommodate that, we would have the deferred vote taken, if you allow, or the necessary formalities gone through and then go to the Liberal amendments. In return for that we will hold third reading on this Bill until a subsequent date after the committee has returned from its travels.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that there have just been some consultations on this matter. On the advice of our critics in the Official Opposition, we are disposed to allow report stage to be completed this afternoon on the understanding that the Bill will not be called for debate at third reading until the Transport Committee comes back from a trip it has undertaken to carry out some hearings outside of the city.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the comments of the two gentlemen who have just spoken. Would either of the opposition House Leaders be able to give me some indication as to whether or not there was an undertaking in those consultations as to how long third reading stage would last?

Mr. Deans: There was no discussion on that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I happened to have heard the very worth-while suggestion made by the House Leader for the Official Opposition and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans). That suggestion seems to be reasonable. We understand that we will call third reading debate on the return of the standing committee.

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, with the consent of the House may I now ask the traditional Thursday question on House business. I did not raise it earlier because we wanted to have certain consultations. If there is disposition of the House it may be timely to do it now since all three House leaders are here.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have had the benefit of some discussions and consultations with opposition House Leaders. On the basis that we will be voting on report stage on Bill C-75 later this afternoon, it is my intention to call Bill C-96, the EPF legislation for tomorrow. There is a Ways and Means motion on the Order Paper with respect to the scientific research provisions of the Income Tax Act. I would ask that we consider concurrence of that motion on Monday morning next. We would then proceed with Bill C-96, if that is not concluded tomorrow, followed by Bill C-92, followed by the legislation with respect to the Ways and Means motion for which we will be asking concurrence on Monday. That is the sequence for next week. As usual, we will continue to monitor the progress of legislation and announcements will be made if there is any change to that sequence or order of business should that be decided upon.

CANADA SHIPPING ACT AND RELATED ACTS

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-75, An Act to amend the Canada Shipping Act and to amend the Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act, the Maritime Code Act and the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and Motions Nos. 5, 6 and 11 (Mr. Angus) (p.12764).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motions Nos. 5, 6 and 11 have been grouped for debate but will be voted on separately. The first question will be on Motion No. 5. Mr. Angus moved:

That Bill C-75 be amended in Clause 4 by striking out lines 19 to 37 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor;

"(3) A copy of each regulation of Governor in Council proposes to make under subsection (1) shall be laid before either House of Parliament.

(4) Where, within twenty sitting days after a proposed regulation is laid before either House of Parliament under subsection (3), fifteen Senators or twenty Members of the House of Commons, as the case may be, by notice in writing addressed to the Speaker, request that the proposed regulation be referred to a committee, the proposed regulation shall stand deferred to the standing committee of the Senate or House of Commons, as the case may be, that deals with transportation matters, or to such other committee as the Senate or House of Commons may order.

(5) A committee to which a proposed regulation is referred under subsection (4) shall forthwith consider the proposed regulation and report thereon to the Senate or the House of Commons, as the case may be, within thirty sitting days after the referral is made.

(6) Where a proposed regulation relating to any particular subject-matter is referred to a committee of either or each House of Parliament pursuant to subsection (4), a regulation relating to that subject-matter may be made under subsection (1) within six months after the committee that reports or last reports, as the case may be, has reported under subsection (5).

(7) Where a proposed regulation relating to any particular subject-matter is not referred to a committee of either House of Parliament pursuant to subsection (4), a regulation relating to that subject-matter may be made under subsection (1) on the expiration of the time limit set out in subsection (4) in respect of the House of Parliament before which the proposed regulation referred to in that subsection was last laid."

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 6. Mr. Angus moved:

That Bill C-75, be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 19 at page 6 the following:

"(10) Two years after the coming into force of section 3.1 and every two years thereafter, the Minister shall refer section 3.1 to the Standing Committee on Transport for the purpose of reviewing its economic impact on users of services provided by the Canadian Coast Guard and the committees shall report not later than the sixtieth sitting day of the House, following the request for review."

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 11. Mr. Angus moved:

That Bill C-75 be amended in Clause 87 by striking out line 32 at page 111 and substituting the following therefor:

"by proclamation, with the exception of Section 4 which shall come into force on or after January 1, 1988.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

We will now proceed with Motions Nos. 7, 8 and 9 which will be grouped for debate and voted on separately. Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate (Mr. Baker) to move Motions 7, 8 and 9 for the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin).

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. George Baker (for Mr. Tobin) moved:

That Bill C-75 be amended in Clause 10 by striking out lines 10 to 21 at page 9.

Motion No. 8

That Bill C-75 be amended in Clause 52.1 by striking out lines 4 to 18 at page 34.

That Bill C-75 be amended in Clause 76 by striking out lines 18 to 26 at page 58.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have just a few words to say concerning the amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin). The amendments arise from the report on the Ocean Ranger disaster and the actions of the Government to date regarding those recommendations. When one examines the actual amendments, one discovers that the main points raised in the amenments have to do with the jurisdiction of the federal Government over drilling rigs in one way or the other. In other words, as things presently exist on the drilling rigs offshore, there are at least two jurisdictions as far as safety is concerned: first, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney); second, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski); and we could add a third jurisdiction, that being a provincial authority. In the case of the Province of Newfoundland, perhaps there could be an agreement between both Governments to have joint jurisdiction, but certainly we should have provincial regulations set down by the provincial petroleum authority. There is perhaps a fourth jurisdiction involved, and that is the international code or the building standards from which the rig originates or where the rig was built.

Under this Bill certainly, safety standards are tightened up as far as the construction of vessels or oil drilling rigs in Canada is concerned, but it does not address the question of an oil rig from the United States, from some part of Europe or from some other part of the world that is presently drilling just outside the 200 mile limit, say in Hibernia. It does not cover those particular oil drilling rigs.

That opens up perhaps another question relevant to these amendments, and that is the extension of jurisdiction of the Canada Shipping Act to cover areas outside of the present jurisdiction of 200 miles. It also raises the question, as was raised in the Ocean Ranger report, of who is in charge of a vessel. Under the Canada Shipping Act, it is the captain. If you visit an oil rig, you will find that there is perhaps a mixed jurisdiction between the so-called captain and the tool pusher, who is in charge of the drilling that actually takes place on that rig. That is the foundation for the three amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin).

When one reads the report on the Ocean Ranger one can see why the Hon. Member from Newfoundland is so concerned about these amendments. One could not read the report without wondering what is wrong with our present system of monitoring activities and allocating jurisdictions with regard to safety aboard these drilling rigs on Canada's offshore. One wonders why none of the 20 to 30 people, who were alive in the water and threw a line aboard a rescue ship, were saved, especially with helicopters on site. A line was thrown aboard the so-called stand-by vessel which was supposed to be carrying out search and rescue activities as part of its operation as a stand-by supply vessel. One wonders how a line could be thrown aboard that ship from the people in the boat without those people being saved.

That is the foundation of the amendments moved by the Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe. The basic question asked by the Hon. Member in this Chamber through these amendments goes unanswered. It has not been responded to by the Government of Canada. The Royal commission report and the follow-up reports explained exactly what went wrong. All of the recommendations were submitted after the present Government took office. The Government of Canada can say that it has instituted 85 per cent of the recommendations made in the royal commission report. That does not, however, address the basic question of who has jurisdiction in the offshore. It cannot be divided between the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, the Minister of Transport, the Provincial Petroleum Directorate, and the United States Shipping Standards.

An Hon. Member: Sure you can.

Mr. Baker: Indeed you cannot. The Hon. Member is saying you can. That cannot be done in a safe fashion. There cannot be, aboard a boat, a group of people who claim to be in charge who are going to make a decision when a disaster happens when no one knows who is actually in charge. Is it the man representing the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources? Is it the tool pusher? Is the captain in charge? The three amendments proposed by the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe tried to answer the question of who has jurisdiction. This is a very, very serious matter. It did not help matters when the Government of Canada did not act as it should have in the aftermath of this disaster.

Another matter is that of the settlements awarded to the surviving families in this case. That is another law which must be changed. Something must be done about that by the Department of Justice. The settlements ranged from hundreds of thousands of dollars to millions of dollars. A great many Newfoundlanders suffered the embarrassment of having the question referred to a public forum. The settlements certainly reflected what is right with the U.S. law and what is wrong with the Canadian law.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say that the amendments moved by the Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe address a very important question which has not yet been addressed by the Government of Canada. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall) has assured us on a couple of occasions that proper amendments will be introduced, perhaps sometime in the near future, to extend jurisdiction under the Canada Shipping Act. We look forward to that. In the meantime, we will vote in favour of these amendments and against the existing Bill in relation to these subjects.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, I want to join in the debate on the amendments moved by the Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin). The amendments before the House are identical in purpose to those moved in committee by me. These amendments would clearly outline that the responsibility for the safety of people who work on mobile offshore drilling units is in the hands of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski). I give the Government credit for moving on the interpretation of the area of responsibility. If my memory is correct, we moved from strict jurisdiction by the Ministry of Energy, Mines and Resources to jurisdiction split between the Ministry of Energy, Mines and Resources and the Ministry of Transport.

Unlike the debate on Clause 4, through which we tried to restrict the powers of the Minister of Transport, through this amendment moved by the Liberal Party we want to increase the powers of that Minister. We do so out of recognition that with regard to matters dealing with a vessel, which for all intents and purposes a mobile offshore drilling unit is, it should be under the strict control of the master of that vessel. The jurisdiction should not be shared with the person who has knowledge of how to extract resources from the sea but, rather, should be the sole responsibility of the person who knows the ocean, the currents, and the seaworthiness of the drilling unit of which he or she is in charge.

This issue arises out of the very unfortunate sinking of the Ocean Ranger. I would like to quote briefly from that report as it relates to the issue at hand. It reads:

It is instructive to note, however, the general trend towards a lead agency, if not a "single window", for regulatory purposes.

The United Kingdom has adopted the single agency approach in allocating full responsibility to the Department of Energy, and Norway has initiated the process of moving full responsibility to the Petroleum Directorate . . . .In Canada the principle of a single window approach was adopted by the establishment of the Canada Oil and Gas Lands Administration (COGLA). It is recommended:

86. That Canada maintain the approach of a single regulatory agency, in concept and in practice, in exercising regulatory control over MODUs and the varied aspects of their drilling operations including the standby role of vessels and the rescue role of helicopters under contract to industry.

A device common to all jurisdictions under review to ameliorate jurisdictional jealousies, administrative overlaps and lack of co-ordination is the Memorandum of Understanding negotiated between the lead agency or single window agency and another department or agency—In Canada, the Memorandum of Understanding has been used for transferring powers in the reverse direction, as, for example, the empowering of the Canadian Coast Guard, through delegation from COGLA, to undertake certain functions that would otherwise be outside their jurisdiction.

It is suggested that this practice be reversed. If the single regulatory agency referred to in Recommendation 86 is to have the authority and capability to exercise fully the responsibilities envisaged for it in Recommendation 80, then powers, and in some cases personnel, will need to be transferred to it. It is recommended:

87. That powers and, where necessary, personnel be transferred by Memoranda of Understanding to the single regulatory agency from other line departments and government agencies so that it can exercise fully and effectively its responsibility for safety of MODUs and the varied aspects of their drilling operations including the standby role of vessels and the rescue role of helicopters under contract to industry.

While the presentations made to the legislative committee with this matter were very small relative to the number that were made on the matter of Clause 4, the cost recovery clause, there was consistency throughout. Everyone who came before us said that there should be one agency. They said quite clearly that it should be the Minister of Transport who is responsible ultimately. Therefore, it would be the master on the MODU who would have responsibility in a time of crisis to make the decisions as to the safety of staying where they were, or whether, in fact, they should pull up their anchor and the pipes and get to an area of the ocean that is safe for both the people on the equipment and the equipment itself. The company of Master Mariners of Canada in a letter to the Minister of Transport wrote the following:

The Sea is an exacting mistress and Safety at Sea will be severely compromised should the use of uncertified and probably inexperienced personnel be allowed to take charge of Drilling rigs and Offshore supply vessels. There is no substitute for an experienced and well qualified seaman.

I think that sums it up. It makes the point that we should give the Minister of Transport the power to have jurisdiction. He should not have to negotiate with the Minister of Energy. He should have the power and ability to decide what is needed for the safety and the protection of those people on the rigs. I would encourage the Government to move that one more step and to accept this amendment.

Mr. Baker: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Forrestall), I believe, rose and wanted to say a few words.

Mr. Forrestall: May I deal at third reading with the very good points raised by the Official Opposition and the NDP. There is a rationale for this and I thank them for their contributions.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The questions will be taken separately on Motions Nos. 7, 8 and 9. The first one is on Motion No. 7. Mr. Baker (for Mr. Tobin) moved:

That Bill C-75, be amended in Clause 10 by striking out lines 10 to 21 at page 9.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 8. Mr. Tobin moved:

That Bill C-75, be amended in Clause 52.1 by striking out lines 4 to 18 at page 34.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 9. Mr. Tobin moved:

That Bill C-75, be amended in Clause 76 by striking out lines 18 to 26 at page 58.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Call in the Members.

• (1700)

And the division bells having rung:

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The first question is on Motion No. 5. Mr. Angus moved:

That Bill C-75, be amended in Clause 4 by striking out lines 19 to 37 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor;

"(3) A copy of each regulation that the Governor in Council proposes to make under subsection (1) shall be laid before either House of Parliament.

(4) Where, within twenty sitting days after a proposed regulation is laid before either House of Pariament under subsection (3), fifteen Senators or twenty Members of the House of Commons, as the case may be, by notice in writing addressed to the Speaker, request that the proposed regulation be referred to a committee, the proposed regulation shall stand referred to the standing committee of the Senate or House of Commons, as the case may be, that deals with transportation matters, or to such other committee as the Senate or House of Commons may order.

(5) A committee to which a proposed regulation is referred under subsection (4) shall forthwith consider the proposed regulation and report thereon to the Senate or House of Commons, as the case may be, within thirty sitting days after the referral is made.

(6) Where a proposed regulation relating to any particular subject-matter is referred to a committee of either or each House of Parliament pursuant to subsection (4), a regulation relating to that subject-matter may be made under subsection (1) within six months after the committee that reports or last reports, as the case may be, has reported under subsection (5).

(7) Where a proposed regulation relating to any particular subject-matter is not referred to a committee of either House of Parliament pursuant to subsection (4), a regulation relating to that subject-matter may be made under subsection (1) on the expiration of the time limit set out in subsection (4) in respect of the House of Parliament before which the proposed regulation referred to in that subsection was last laid."

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Angus), which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I sense that the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) is rising to suggest that the same vote be applied to Motion No. 6.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, in fact, I am suggesting that the same vote be applied to all of the remaining motions and that on the concurrence motion the same vote be applied but in the reverse.

Mr. Malone: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I was unexpectedly detained. I have decided to vote with the government side on this motion.

Mr. Speaker: I take it that the Hon. Member for Hochelaga—Maisonneuve (Mr. Desrosiers) and the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) are rising to indicate that they are voting in the negative on this motion.

Therefore, the next question is on Motion No. 6. The vote on this motion will be recorded in the same way in which it was recorded previously but with the votes of the Hon. Members for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), Hochelaga—Maisonneuve, and Gatineau counted in the negative.

Therefore, the next question is on Motion No. 6. Mr. Angus moved:

That Bill C-75, be amended in Clause 4 by adding immediately after line 19 at page 6 the following:

"(10) Two years after the coming into force of section 4 and every two years thereafter, the Minister shall refer section 4 to the Standing Committee on Transport for the purpose of reviewing its economic impact on users of services provided by the Canadian Coast Guard and the committee shall report not later than the sixtieth sitting day of the House, following the request for review."

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Angus), which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried. When shall the Bill be read the third time?

Some Hon. Members: Now.

An Hon. Member: At the next sitting of the House.

Grand Canal Project

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if I might seek the unanimous consent of the House to permit that, indeed, the Private Members' Hour be 60 minutes from the time the first Member starts to speak and that in the event that all of the 60 minutes are not used up with debate, there be no vote taken regardless of the time at which the actual debate ends.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, that sounds like a reasonable proposition. To put the understanding in straightforward language: there will be 60 minutes of debate on Private Members' Hour and there will be no vote. If the hour is interrupted by Royal Assent—I guess we cannot mention that—but if we were able to mention it, or if we are interrupted for any other purpose, then that time will not be included in the 60-minute calculation. We will also carry on with the "Late Show" proceedings following Private Members' Hour.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the members of the Official Opposition are willing to agree to what has just been proposed, provided it is understood that if on a future occasion we ask for the same consideration for one of our Private Members' Bills it will be accorded to us.

Mr. Deans: Absolutely.

GRAND CANAL WATER DIVERSION PROJECT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill) moved:

That:

Whereas certain Canadian private interest groups are seriously proposing the Grand Canal project, which would involve constructing a dike across James Bay and diverting water to the Great Lakes—St. Lawrence water basin through a system of canals, dams, underground water tunnels and pumping stations, for sale and redistribution to arid regions of the United States; and

Whereas the Grand Canal project is looked upon favourably by the Prime Minister of Canada, Premier of Quebec, Canadian Free Trade Negotiator Simon Reisman and other public officials; and

Whereas concern has been expressed that Canadian fresh water may be included in free trade negotiations with the United States; and

Whereas there has been no consideration given to the impacts of the Grand Canal project on the enviornment and on the native population of the James Bay area whose livelihood depends on this water resource; and

Whereas proposed government studies of the Grand Canal project are contradictory to the goals and objectives of the 1985 Great Lakes Charter and a long-standing Canadian Government policy against mass water exports.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that this House expresses its outrage that the Grand Canal project could be seriously considered by Canadian private interest groups and public officials and opposes any study or further consideration of the proposal.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I suppose that at any moment we will be faced with the usual interruption from the Senate in order that we go down to witness Royal Assent in the Senate Chamber. I hope that will happen sometime after I finish my speech and not before.

In any event, I wish to speak about the Grand Canal scheme which is the brain-child of a Newfoundland-based engineer, Thomas Kierens, who proposes to build a dam across James Bay, thereby preventing fresh water from the James Bay watershed from flowing into Hudson Bay, eventually turning James Bay into a huge fresh water lake. This fresh water would then be rediverted south through a system of canals, tunnels and pumping stations to the Great Lakes, and beyond to points in the mid-west and southwest United States. At an estimated cost of $100 billion to $200 billion, the Grand Canal would be the most expensive construction project in Canadian history and would be a truly massive undertaking.

Mass water diversion and export proposals such as the Grand Canal are not new. Diversion schemes involving James Bay date back to the 1930s and several water diversion and export projects in western Canada have also been proposed, most notably the North American Water and Power Alliance or NAWAPA project. In the past, these proposals were considered too bizarre to be accorded much credibility. Lately, however, this situation has apparently changed and the Grand Canal has been given unsettling credibility in certain circles.

Kierens and his company, Grandco, have managed to line up an impressive number of influential people to back the Grand Canal scheme including Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa; Louis Desmarais, a former Liberal MP and brother of Paul Desmarais, the Chairman of Power Corporation; Bechtel Canada, the builders of the James Bay project and a subsidiary of the largest engineering firm in the world; and Canada's free trade negotiator, Simon Reisman, to name but a few. Many of these groups and individuals have been quietly lobbying the Government to support the Grand Canal project and to fund studies of the scheme. Grandco has already received a $30,000 grant from the St. John's office of the National Research Council and the NRC, and other government Departments are currently studying another request for an additional $750,000 for a pre-feasibility study of the scheme.

In the face of this lobbying, not to mention persistent questions by myself and others who are concerned about this issue, the Government has taken a curiously vacillating and inconsistent approach to the whole question. On the one hand, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) said recently that any decision on mass water diversion or export schemes would have to await the formulation of a national water policy. He also added that he is personally opposed to the Grand Canal scheme and other inter-basin transfers of water. On the other hand, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has not only endorsed the export of water by tanker from his own riding but he was also quoted in Fortune magazine of March of last year as saying something to the effect that he would be willing to consider mass water exports to the United States.

Then last April 19, in response to a question put by the Hon. Member for Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador (Mr. Rompkey), the Prime Minister indicated his support for the Grand Canal when he said the following:

> I want to give my hon. friend the assurance that I view the prospect with enthusiasm. In fact, I can tell him that I am working on draft terms of reference whereby the federal Government might properly involve itself in co-operation with the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador and the Government of Quebec in developing these kinds of resources for the benefit of the citizens of those two provinces and Canada.

Those were the words of the Prime Minister of Canada speaking in this House, and his comments cannot be misconstrued or attributed to comments made before the last election as the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) tried to imply when I asked a question on this matter on January 22.

Tonight, hopefully someone from the government benches will clarify for the House just who, the Prime Minister or the Minister of the Environment, speaks for the Government on the Grand Canal and on water exports in general. If it is the Prime Minister, perhaps the government spokesperson could also explain what happened to the terms of reference to which the Prime Minister referred last year and why the Government has abandoned a long-standing Canadian policy against water export schemes such as the Grand Canal.

We also need clarification from the Liberal Party. On one hand, the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) appears to be genuinely opposed to the Grand Canal and other mass water export schemes. On the other, as I have already noted, at least one influential former Liberal MP, the current Hon. Member for Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador, and the Liberal Premier of Quebec appear to be enthusiastically supportive of the Grand Canal. For his part, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), when I asked him about his position on the Grand Canal, merely said that he thought it should be studied. The Liberals are obviously of two minds on water exports and the Grand Canal just as they are on other issues like free trade and universality.

This leads me to another concern I and others have about the Grand Canal and similar water export schemes. In recent months, Simon Reisman, Canada's free trade negotiator and a vocal proponent of the Grand Canal, has not only said on numerous occasions that Canada's fresh water should be on the free trade negotiating table but has gone as far as to say that allowing American access to Canadian fresh water may, in fact, be a cornerstone of any free trade agreement with the United States. The Secretary of State has said that Canadian water is not on the bargaining table and has even gone as far as to be irritated with me for asking the question more than once. Yet Mr. Reisman voices his personal views with sufficient regularity and the Government, particularly the Prime Minister, is sufficiently vague on water exports that one cannot help but be worried.

Canadian waters are not ours to sell, Mr. Speaker. In this sense, opposition to the Grand Canal and other water export schemes is not to be seen as selfishness but as good stewardship of that which has been entrusted to us. Furthermore, the inclusion of Canadian water in free trade negotiations with the United States would pose serious consequences for Canadian sovereignty. Unlike other resource projects, once something like the Grand Canal is in place, Canada cannot just decide to turn off the tap. No mater what, Canada will be obliged to keep the water flowing. That is the simple, hard fact of the matter. What is more, once one diversion scheme like the Grand Canal is in place, a precedent will be established. Not only might the Americans come to expect ready access to Canadian fresh water but Canadians, particularly under Tory or Liberal Governments, might feel obliged or pressured to deliver. This one precious resource could draw Canadians inextricably into the already stifling embrace of the United States. For those of us who value this country and would like to see Canada pursue independent foreign, domestic and environmental policies, mass water export schemes such as the Grand Canal must be resisted.

What about the social cost, Mr. Speaker? The Grand Canal project would entail a massive disruption and dislocation of northern communities due to a rapid escalation in development. Particularly hard hit would be native Canadians whose traditional lifestyle would be severely compromised. Furthermore, should the grand Canal project go ahead, it would place a multitude of obstacles in the path of equitable Indian land claims settlements and Indian self-government.

We have seen far too often in the past that Indian rights invariably take second place to mega-projects and there is no reason to believe that the Grand Canal would be any different. This is no doubt one of the reasons the Nishnawbe-Aski Nation, which represents 42 northern Ontario Indian bands and whose Grand Chief I had the opportunity to meet recently, has been one of the most vocal opponents of the Grand Canal.

In a telex objecting to the Grand Canal that the Nishnawbe-Aski Nation and Great Lakes United sent to the Prime Minister on February 10, the Nishnawbi-Aski Nation outlined its concerns clearly when it noted the following:

> Your government has brought into question the strength of constitutional guarantees for the Nishnawbe-Aski peoples' aboriginal and treaty rights.
> Doubt has been cast on the seriousness with which your government will support Indian self-government initiatives and the future Indian control of resources.

These are legitimate concerns and all of us in the House have an obligation to resist any efforts to further degrade and abuse the rights and land of Canada's aboriginal people.

Finally, there are the environmental consequences of the Grand Canal to consider. The most obvious of these would be the scars on the landscape and environment in general that would result after an army of engineers and construction workers had blasted, hacked and carved their way through the Canadian Shield in building the various dams, canals, tunnels and pumping stations necessary to create a man-made lake at

James Bay and to transport the resulting fresh water. Another obvious environmental consequence would be that the Grand Canal would condemn to destruction the entire marine ecosystem in and around James Bay including all the fish, seals, whales, sea birds, vegetation and other living organisms that depend on a saltwater environment to survive.

It is also believed that this project could seriously affect global climatic conditions by blocking the flow of fresh water that flows into James Bay and on into Hudson Bay and the Arctic Ocean. Scientists fear that the Grand Canal, by shutting off James Bay, would increase salinity levels in Hudson Bay and the Arctic Ocean thereby melting icebergs and the polar ice cap and increasing temperatures in the Arctic. If this were to happen, weather conditions around the northern hemisphere could be permanently altered, affecting agricultural and other important social and economic activities. What a prospect: if the Grand Canal were to go ahead in the rush to find a quick fix, a technocratic solution to irrigation problems south of the border and economic problems here in Canada, we could in fact destroy countless acres of productive land around the world.

Another aspect of the Grand Canal is one I have raised on numerous occasions, including this afternoon, and that is, nuclear energy. The backers of the Grand Canal are considering using nuclear power to pump water from James Bay down to the Great Lakes. Atomic Energy of Canada admitted recently that it is already studying the feasibility of using nuclear power in connection with the Grand Canal scheme. According to Energy Probe, the Grand Canal Scheme would require 12,500 megawatts of generating capacity, a power demand that equals half the demand of the Province of Ontario at peak hours. To provide this power, one would need more power than is available from the entire James Bay project or, worse, 17 Bruce-sized nuclear reactors.

As one who has long opposed nuclear power and the underhanded nature in which the nuclear industry operates, I am hardly surprised that AECL sees a great opportunity here. AECL is always looking for an excuse to justify its nuclear reactor program. However, as we have seen this week as a result of the tragic nuclear accident in Ukraine—

Mr. Speaker: I am in some difficulty. Can the Hon. Member conclude very briefly, please.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I have two brief paragraphs to go. We have seen this week the result of a tragic nuclear accident in Ukraine. Nuclear power is a deadly energy option with truly horrific and catastrophic consequences should something go terribly wrong, as just happened in the Soviet Union. To build 17 additional nuclear reactors to service the Grand Canal would virtually double the number of reactors in service or under construction in Canada and would make the Grand Canal even more of a technological and environmental Frankenstein than it already is.

Finally, I should also point out that the Soviets recently decided to go ahead with a massive water diversion scheme of their own that, like the Grand Canal, would divert waters now flowing into the Arctic Ocean southward. The Soviets did not take this decision lightly. In fact, they delayed the project four years for many of the same reasons I have already mentioned in connection with the motion before us. As we have seen this week, the Soviets have hardly had an enviable environmental record—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Blaikie: One more sentence, please.

Mr. Speaker: I must interrupt the Hon. Member because he has now taken quite a lot more than the 10 minutes he is allowed. I think he knows that and will understand.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by saying that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) deserves the commendation of the House for bringing a motion of this kind to our attention. It is a timely motion and, if I may say so—and I am not attempting to flatter the Hon. Member—I think he gives meaning to the following phrase in our National Anthem: "O Canada, we stand on guard for thee".

The Grand Canal Project is an engineering proposal which has rather frightening aspects to it. When I first came to the House, I really cut my teeth on controversial issues by becoming involved at that time in proposals which had been developed between Canada and Ontario on water diversion schemes in northern Ontario. Mr. Speaker, may I ask for your guidance on the knock at the door? Should I continue?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member has paused, and I will now pause. May I say for his guidance and that of others, it is entirely up to the Hon. Member to decide whether to stop. However, having paused, I think we will take advantage of his pause.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the Chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

[Translation]

And being returned.

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that when the House went up to the Senate Chamber, the Deputy Governor General had been pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bill:

An Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadian Arsenals Limited and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof—Chapter 20.

NATURAL RESOURCES

GRAND CANAL WATER DIVERSION PROJECT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Blaikie:

That:

Whereas certain Canadian private interest groups are seriously proposing the Grand Canal project, which would involve constructing a dike across James Bay and diverting water to the Great Lakes—St. Lawrence water basin through a system of canals, dams, underground water tunnels and pumping stations, for sale and redistribution to arid regions of the United States; and

Whereas the Grand Canal project is looked upon favourably by the Prime Minister of Canada, Premier of Quebec, Canadian Free Trade Negotiator Simon Reisman and other public officials; and

Whereas concern has been expressed that Canadian fresh water may be included in free trade negotiations with the United States; and

Whereas there has been no consideration given to the impacts of the Grand Canal project on the enviornment and on the native population of the James Bay area whose livelihood depends on this water resource; and

Whereas proposed government studies of the Grand Canal project are contradictory to the goals and objectives of the 1985 Great Lakes Charter and a long-standing Canadian Government policy against mass water exports.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that this House expresses its outrage that the Grand Canal project could be seriously considered by Canadian private interest groups and public officials and opposes any study or further consideration of the proposal.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I was indicating to the House that when I first came to Parliament I cut my teeth on controversial issues by opposing a scheme that had been financed by Canada and Ontario to divert a number of northward flowing rivers, rivers like the Albany, the Severn, the Attawaspaskat, to divert those magnificent northward flowing rivers into the Great Lakes system. A great deal of money had been spent by the two levels of Government to consider its feasibility. Eventually the plan was rejected, but in the meantime while the study was going on it created anxiety and concern throughout northern Ontario and most particularly among the Indian people, the aboriginal people who occupy that part of the province.

I want to indicate to the House that what we are talking about today is not a water diversion scheme in that sense. We are talking about a plan or a proposal for the transfer of water from the north to the south. My hon. friend, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill described this process very carefully and effectively. It really staggers the mind to imagine building a dike across the entire northern section of James Bay where James Bay meets Hudson Bay and turn what is now a salt water body into a fresh water lake. Then, if you can believe it, Sir, they are going to transfer, by means of a series of step reservoirs and pumping stations, fresh water from the north over the height of land where the rivers flow northward to where they begin to flow southward and allow all that fresh water to go into the Great Lakes system. The Great Lakes will then become a great storage basin for water which will be called upon, on demand, to feed the parched areas of North America. It is a mammoth, massive engineering scheme that staggers the imagination.

Let us begin with the costs. My hon. friend from Winnipeg—Birds Hill said it is somewhere between $100 billion and maybe as much as $200 billion. Knowing about cost overruns and the way these projects always seem to get much larger than they are—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa Centre): Do we hear $300 billion?

Mr. Penner: —we may as well have an auction because the amount of money will be so enormous that I think we could put the whole debate to bed right now because that amount of money is not available; $100 billion is not available and it never will be, at least in the lifetime of all of us in this House of Commons.

This grandiose scheme to pump water thousands of miles from the north to the south is an engineering project that I do not think we will ever see. Therefore, the question is: does it make good sense at a time when we are trying to save money and watch our expenditures? Every one of us is cognizant of and worried about the deficit, even my friend from Winnipeg—Birds Hill must have had a few sleepless nights about the deficit.

Mr. Blaikie: I am fiscally conservative. It is my Presbyterian roots.

Mr. Penner: He is fiscally conservative. Even the new socialist Government in New Zealand has great concern about the deficit and is being very effective in dealing with it.

My hon. friend asks whether the Liberal Party was together on this. I doubt it, I doubt it very much. I am not on the same wave length as the Premier of Quebec, Mr. Bourassa. I am not on the same wave length as my former colleague in this House, Mr. Louis Desmarais, a distinguished Member of Parliament who is promoting the project. Simon Reisman once served a Liberal Government. I do not suppose he was ever on side although I have no way of knowing that, but he has provided expert advice on this project. We are not all of us together on this. If that bothers my hon. friend, I want to say that the Liberal Party is not a church. We are a political Party. The great thing about the Liberal Party is that Members do not need to be afraid to think.

Mr. Nickerson: They never do.

Mr. Penner: When they go to a national convention and want to think about how they can change the size of the deficit, that is permissible. We can do that. We have proven to Canadians that we know how to spend money. Now I think we have to prove to the Canadian people that we also know how to be fiscally responsible. That may involve changing a few things, but I will save that for another debate.

To show you that I am at least on side with the environmental critic, let me tell you what the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) the former Minister of the Environment, said about the Grand Canal project. Then you will know that there are at least two of us on the same wave length on this project. He said, writing to Mr. Thomas Kierens:

It is a crackpot idea which for political, social and environmental reasons should never get off the ground.

Mr. Nickerson: That is what they said about the CPR.

Mr. Blaikie: It is still a crackpot idea.

Mr. Penner: Great Lakes United is an international organization dedicated to conserving and protecting the Great Lakes. It has looked carefully at the Thomas Kierens project from its point of view, and I give a great deal of credence to the arguments that this organization puts forward. It said that the environmental and social impacts of what it calls a $100 billion monster would be severe. That organization goes on to argue as well that it would probably violate the Great Lakes Charter.

For the benefit of Hon. Members who are not aware of the Great Lakes Charter let me say that it was signed in 1985 before Mr. Bourassa was back in office. It was signed by Ontario and Quebec. It was also signed by eight American states, all the American states that are on the Great Lakes system. This Charter is dedicated to protecting the Great Lakes from any severe impacts, either water levels or anything that would have some kind of negative impact on the ecosystem around the Great Lakes.

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to put your mind for a moment on this Grand Canal project and imagine using the Great Lakes as a great water storage system. Can you imagine anything that would go contrary to the Charter more than that? I think that Mr. Bourassa had better review the commitment of his province to that Charter. I know it will be done in Queen's Park, but I think that enough has been said on the question of looking at the cost, the Charter and what it would do to the ecosystem. I think all Hon. Members will want to be of one mind on this issue at least and will want to support my friend and recommend to the Government that no more funding of any kind, even a few dollars, should be given to the Grand Canal scheme.

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on this motion moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie). He and I see eye to eye because of our height, and we also see eye to eye on this particular motion.

Large scale water transfer projects, such as we have already seen in Canada, are a technical possibility with sometimes undesirable environmental and social consequences. In the rush to meet increasing water demands for energy, agriculture and other needs, we often tend to forget that the development, management and regulation of our own water heritage must correspond with ecological realities. Technical feasibility and socioeconomic gain can no longer be promoted at the expense of ignoring environmental issues. A planner's perspective must now transcend what is technically and economically feasible, socially and politically acceptable and legally permissible, to include the consideration of ecological constraints and consequences of water resource development. Canadians no longer tolerate ecological naivete, and neither will the Government, especially when it applies to land use for embassies in Ottawa which may impact on the fresh water of the Ottawa River.

Public reaction to such recent domestic water projects as the Slave River Hydro Development, Skagit, Garrison Diversion and others, when they appeared to threaten ecosystem stability, was immediate and vociferous. Public reaction does not stop after flagging the issues. For example, in the case of the James Bay Project, the first environmental impact studies based on new research were undertaken, not by developers but by independent scientists working on behalf of native groups and funded by the federal Government.

Technological advances and a gradual progression northward in search of suitable sites for damning or diversion have led to the recent advocation of megaprojects. Disadvantages of such proposals are often found in the inherent complexity of the projects themselves. Their large size increases the potential interaction between project components and the ecosystem. For these large projects our understanding of all the components and links are often incomplete. Unfortunately, the aspects which are studied are those which address short-term concerns.

It would appear, therefore, that as the magnitude of such projects increases with greater influence on the biosphere, so does the inaccuracy and uncertainty of being able to predict the project's environmental consequences. Also, inadequate lead time for study and research of the project-environment relationship has, on occasion, resulted in a failure to anticipate major ecological changes outside the sphere of influence of the development. Operation of the W.A.C. Bennett damn, for example, resulted in major adverse changes to prime marsh habitat 800 kilometers downstream of the damn site. That is quite remarkable, Mr. Speaker.

It seems, therefore, that the more drastic the changes in the river regime, the more extensive will be the expected disruption to the ecological balance. On occasion, such imbalances have led to direct economic hardships or health concerns as in the case of mercury contamination of commercially important downstream fisheries in the Churchill-Nelson system in Manitoba or reduction of the subsistence fishery in the La Grande River in Quebec.

On the other hand, we can rest assured that environmentally significant activities such as large scale water transfers will be subject to the full attention of the federal Government's regulatory apparatus and environmental protection mandate. In addition, guidelines, regulations and legislation protecting wildlife—in which I have a great personal, professional, and political interest—water quality, endangered species, environmentally sensitive regions and heritage rivers come into play in the planning, evaluation and implementation of such activities.

I am reminded that in 1969 I did a paper in the ecology class of Dr. Vaillancourt at the University of Ottawa in co-operation with a classmate, Cathi Campbell. I quote myself from that paper as follows: "The importance of our water resources will become immense before the end of the century".

Specifically, the federal environmental assessment and review process requires federal agencies to administer the process when proposed activities have federal involvement and may significantly affect the environment. An undertaking of such magnitude as water transfer would likely meet one or more of the criteria for federal involvement. If a review were to demonstrate environmental deficiencies in project planning, the construction of a water transfer project would not go forward until appopriate studies were completed and the deficiencies corrected.

Furthermore, should a review demonstrate the potential for major environmental damage, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) has the final option, as part of the process, not to approve construction of the project. From this it can be seen that when projects of this magnitude come under government scrutiny, the federal Government retains a firm controlling hand. Environmental assessment in Canada has neither wisely used, nor demanded, post-development audit information for diversion schemes on which to build a predictive base for possible environmental impact assessment. Despite Canada's poor record of post-development auditing, certain general environmental issues can be suggested as requiring attention for water transfers of any consequence. Large scale diversions of northward flowing rivers that are proposed or under way on several continents have certain environmental impact features in common.

Inter-basin water transfers where two or more distinct drainages are involved retain the potential for biotic transfer. Invading fish species may replace more economically desirable ones or introduce parasites to previously isolated populations. Such biological changes may range from beneficial to totally catastrophic. I am reminded of what happened when eels infested our Great Lakes system which created a tremendous problem. A former professor of mine, also at the University of Ottawa, Dr. Vladikov, was instrumental in solving that problem.

When the riverine discharge to the sea is altered in quantity or timing, the resulting changes may cause dramatic shifts in the dynamics of coastal marine processes and organisms. Altering James Bay from salt to fresh water would most certainly cause complete changes in characteristics of the bay's wildlife with as yet unidentified far-reaching consequences.

Assessing the environmental impact of major diversion of northward flowing rivers is, at the present, speculative at best. Examination of analogous situations in the U.S.S.R. and our own experience with diversions, albeit of smaller magnitude, have raised the level of public and scientific concern. Long-term ecological and climatological effects, particularly major changes in Arctic ice pack formation, atmospheric circulation, temperature, and in precipitation patterns in the northern hemisphere are all within the realm of possibility. Even if we can convince ourselves that one project by itself does not cause measurable impact on such factors, we must look ahead and consider what the impact of separate projects in one country, or projects in several countries, will have.

For the Grand Canal scheme augmentation of existing data bases would be a necessary requirement in order to make realistic predictions of the potential effects of terminating the freshwater flow of James Bay into Hudson Bay. We know that a major ecosystem shift would follow the altering of James Bay from salt to fresh water and include the loss of salt marshes, an estuarine habitat important to a major portion of the North American migratory bird population. The understanding of the dynamics and economic cost of such changes remain, at present, out of reach until engineering scenarios are better defined and biological data bases completed.

The creation of "anti rivers" and hydrological pumping systems to transport the water south may also result in classical environmental problems of erosion, water quality, fish migration problems and habitat loss, etc., already associated with existing, less ambitious water transfer schemes. When reservoirs are introduced into the scheme of things as part of water transfer projects, those impacts normally associated with reservoir construction and operation also add to the projects over-all complexity, degree of environmental disturbance and need for mitigation.

Environmental concerns are no longer a "frill" in the minds of Canadians and must be taken very seriously. The Minister of the Environment has already indicated that more must be learned about the environmental effects of large-scale water diversions before we can proceed with implementation of any such scheme. Massive export and sale of our fresh water is not acceptable. As far as I am concerned it is not now and never should be—and God help us if it ever is—on the bargaining table.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, since this will be my first long speech in French in this House, I intend to use a written speech. I admit the speech was drafted by civil servants, but I trust you will find it both entertaining and edifying.

Grand Canal Project

In recent years, Canadians have become increasingly aware of the vital connection between the environment and the economy. As a result of this awareness, we now see a healthy and growing interest in our environmental resources. We know that economic growth and maintaining our economic perspectives require us to have pure air, clean water and good soil conditions. We know that like any prosperous merchant, we must take an inventory of our natural environment. Exhausting our natural resources, as a result of bad management and a thirst for profit, means that we compromise our prospects for the future. In a world that is becoming increasingly competitive, only careful management of our natural resources will give us an edge over our competitors.

Water is undoubtedly one of our most precious resources. In Canada we have become very much aware of our responsibility for maintaining the quantity and improving the quality of the water we have. Canadians understand more than ever before that careful management is essential if we are to transfer this resource intact to future generations.

In Canada, we are lucky to have an abundant supply of hydraulic resources. However, it is clear that vital elements of our economic well-being depend on a delicate balance between the reserves at our disposal and how we use them. In recent years, Western Canada experienced the devastating effects that insufficient precipitation can have on agriculture and forestry, and further east, the Great Lakes region suffered excessive precipitation which caused considerable damage to lakeshore property and serious economic problems. There is also the increasing problem of water pollution, caused either directly by spillage or indirectly by airborne pollution. Thus, even if it is an abundant resource, we cannot take it for granted. The time has come to act quickly to protect both quality and quantity.

This is a task that will have to be shared by all, by the federal Government and the provincial governments, by industry, cities and municipalities, by farmers and by all Canadians. Those who share the benefits must also share the responsibility for managing this resource. This will require a national consensus on the best way to manage and use this resource, while ensuring that it is improved and maintained for future generations of Canadians.

I think a step has already been made in the right direction. The Government is now looking at the findings and recommendations of the Pearse Commission whose mission it was to investigate our federal water policy. The Commission examined every aspect of the situation, from pollution to international agreements on management of international waterways. I think it is important to point out that the Commission examined the various management aspects of the question, while at the same time considering water as a complete and indivisible entity. I believe that in drafting a sound management policy we must continue to look upon this very precious resource as a whole rather than try to deal separately with one or the other aspect of its management.

I have already referred briefly to a number of serious problems facing Canadians with respect to the quality and quantity of available waters. I would suggest that priority will have to be given to a serious examination of the social, economic, intergovernmental, international, technical and environmental impact of current or proposed water uses because all these factors will influence the over-all and coherent management of this resource, and will in turn be influenced by the way it is managed. One of the earlier problems concerning water management was that, although we had the required technical know-how to build dams, hydro lines and waterways, or to develop new chemical products, we simply did not know how to minimize as quickly as possible the unforeseen and undesirable secondary effects such as social upheavals caused by community disruption, loss of a traditional means of survival, or again damages to the environment due to the destruction of spawning grounds, or water losses caused by industrial or agricultural pollution.

Oftentimes in the past the benefits derived from such activities were offset to various degrees by these secondary effects. Efforts were made as well to remedy certain situations, but in a number of cases they gave partial results only, or required much time, energy and money.

In my judgment, part of the problem was and still is our tendency to consider only the positive aspects of any new plan or development. The sound management of our water resources requires us to examine closely all factors which might have a direct or indirect impact on them.

Mr. Blaikie: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I just want to say to the Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley), and anyone else who might rise to speak before the House recesses, that I did not anticipate we would go beyond six o'clock. I made a commitment to be elsewhere at 6.30 p.m. and I apologize for not staying and listening to the Hon. Member.

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I say to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie): apologies accepted. The Hon. Member's Motion No. 104 deals with a very important issue of concern to many Canadians. I am glad that the Hon. Member has given us the opportunity this day to discuss the issue further.

Last year, the Priorities and Planning Committee of Cabinet empowered the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) to act for the Government in formulating a national water policy. Indeed, the Minister has given this matter top priority. The Cabinet has further decided that until this policy is in place, there will be no major inter-basin diversions or large scale exports of water. Even then, any decision for or against water policy will be made in the context of an over-all policy and not on an ad hoc basis.

The first step in developing the water policy was the inquiry on federal water policy headed by Dr. Peter Pearse of the University of British Columbia. The Pearse inquiry was established in January, 1984, and reported to the Minister of the Environment in September, 1985.

The mandate of the Pearse inquiry was to consider the nature of emerging issues. These issues included the state of the water resource, future requirements for water, inter-jurisdictional dimensions and scientific and research expertise with a view to ensuring the enhancement of the health, well-being and prosperity of the people of Canada. In conducting its work, the inquiry actively sought the views of provincial, territorial and federal government departments and their agencies, of private citizens and public groups, as well as the input of industry and the academic community in Canada.

Between late September and early December, 1984, 201 presentations were heard at 33 days of hearings in 17 locations across Canada. Over 300 written submissions were received by the inquiry. In addition, the inquiry commissioned 22 separate research papers on special problems. Praise is due to the inquiry members for their wide and effective process of consultation.

Not surprisingly, one of the topics that generated keen interest in all parts of Canada was the issue of water export. Of the 77 briefs on this subject, most were opposed to the idea. Only a few, mainly the promoters of particular projects, regarded exports as a promising economic opportunity.

In its final report entitled Currents of Change, the inquiry made 55 recommendations. Three of these recommendations deal with the subject of water export. The inquiry concluded that:

> It would be imprudent for the Federal Government to reject all exports out of hand.

The inquiry members went on to say that any water export policy: "Should clearly set out the conditions that must be met for any proposal to be acceptable", and that there should be: "Clear procedures for assessing export proposals." Therefore, in its conclusions, the inquiry recommended that:

> The Federal Government should pass legislation to require anyone who proposes to export water to obtain a licence. This legislation should identify the matters that will be taken into account in considering a licence application.

Small scale export proposals, such as those involving tanker operations, were viewed in a different light than the inter-basin transfers to the United States because of the obvious differences in their impacts and the volumes of water involved. Because diversions for large scale water export to the United States, which would include proposals such as Grand Canal, require very careful scrutiny, the inquiry recommended that:

> The Cabinet should determine whether the Government is prepared to consider large-scale diversions of water to the United States and, if so, the criteria that must be met for approval of proposals.

Further, if the Government is going to consider diversions to the United States, the Pearse inquiry recommended that for the purposes of assessing water export proposals having significant environmental, social or economic implications, the Minister of the Environment should be empowered to appoint a special review panel for each proposal. These panels should consist of members appointed in consultation with the governments of provinces or territories directly affected by the project.

Further, the panels should investigate the full range of matters that the Minister must review in considering an application for an export licence, according to criteria determined by government. Third, these panels should receive information and analysis from relevant governments and agencies, as well as from the proposal's proponents and other interested groups. Fourth, the panels should consider feasible modifications of the proposal in terms of scale, characteristics and time of construction.

Fifth, the panel should hold public hearings where no other suitable provisions are made for the public to review the implications for the interests of all Canadians. Finally, the panels should publicly report their findings, with recommendations about whether the licence should be granted and, if so, what terms and conditions should be attached to the particular licence.

The Pearse inquiry made two additional points on the export of water issue. First, applicants should bear the costs of assembling the information required for assessments, and the Government should not be doing their homework for them. Second, the Government should resist pressures to support any large international diversions, at least until recommended arrangements are in place.

This is exactly what the Government had been attempting to do. The Minister of the Environment has said publicly on many occasions that decisions on water export will not be made until a national water policy is in place.

Developing that water policy is now a top priority of the Government. Within a week of receiving the inquiry's report, the Hon. Minister of the Environment presented it to his provincial colleagues at the meeting of the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers. He requested their reaction within six months. In November, 1985, the Minister similarly met and discussed the report with about 300 representatives of the environmental, non-government organizations. Following this inquiry, the Minister also established an interdepartmental water policy task force to assist him in developing the new national water policy. The task force will be reviewing the inquiry's recommendations and taking into account the views of the provinces, the non-governmental organizations and the general public. This group will be advising him, this summer, on a course of action.

In developing that portion of a national water policy on large scale water exports, there clearly are a great number of issues that must be considered. For instance, transferring water from one watershed to another or one oceanic basin to another can have uncertain ecological effects. Diversions involve significant changes to the natural environment by interrupting river flows, flooding, the transferral of life forms and may even have the potential for changing atmospheric or oceanic conditions. These changes would impinge on land and other uses of natural resources and threaten to dislocate established communities that are dependent on them. Really, their environmental and social impacts must be considered irreversible for all practical purposes.

The question of capital investment must also be considered in such a discussion. It would be enormous and difficult to predict, given long construction periods. Moreover, capital costs could be recouped only over long operational periods. This presents additional uncertainties about cost, benefits and the future direction of technological change.

To aggravate the situation, there are the international dimensions of such large water diversion schemes. How do they fit into international law and established arrangements between Canada and the United States under existing treaties? The recent Great Lakes Charter, a statement of intent among the eight states and two provinces bordering the Great Lakes, is opposed to any diversion schemes. Perhaps the most important factor of which we must take note is the lack of demand at this time for our water. As the Hon. Minister of the Environment said: "The Americans are not beating down our door yet". In fact, we have not had official overtures from the United States or from any other country at this time for our water. The report of the inquiry states that: "Foreign demand on Canadian water is so far a made-in-Canada controversy". U.S. officials have continued to be indifferent to water importation schemes, which is in marked contrast to the heated public debate on this side of our border. This factor can no longer be ignored.

Later this year policy measures which emerged from the inquiry's recommendations, from provincial and public discussions and the task force will be discussed in Cabinet. At that point the position of the federal Government on water export in general, and on such proposals as the Grand Canal in particular, will be made much clearer.

To conclude, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Birds Hill can rest assured that the federal Government will take no action on the Grand Canal until the national water policy is clearly established and in place. That policy will recognize the very complex and controversial nature of this issue.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge—Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have a minute or two to speak on this Private Members' Bill. I have always enjoyed Private Members' Hour because we hear different perspectives from Hon. Members who come from different regions of the country. I am always amazed at the official position of the New Democratic Party, which has truly become an entrenched ultra-Conservative Party. It does not even want to study any question. Rather than being opposed to studying a question, if that Party is convinced something is not good for the country, there is all the more reason to have these studies in order to verify the points they put forth so strongly. It seems to me the Government has a positive duty to study the issue so that it can be settled.

This country has always relied upon its resources. If we had accepted the position of the New Democratic Party on development, we would have no development. Canada would never have come to exist. We started with fish. That meant fish had to be pulled out of the sea, which made for fewer fish. We then moved on to beaver. We all appreciate what the beaver meant to the early development of Quebec, northern Canada and Ontario. The buffalo had its use for leather in the West. Then there was oil and gas. This country is immensely more rich and our standard of living is higher because we used and developed our resources. It seems incongruous to me that the Socialist Party seems in favour of exporting a reasonable amount of oil and gas, which is a non-renewable resource, yet is opposed to a study with respect to exporting water, which is perpetually renewable. If I had to choose, I would far rather keep our petroleum products in the ground for our grandchildren and great grandchildren than our water, which flows off and is forever lost.

I think we ought not to forget that our life-style, which is very high indeed, depends on the use of our resources. That is not to say that we should exploit those resources and destroy our environment. We very much need to spend our time studying ways in which to use our resources so that they will be available 10 generations down the road. We have much to learn. If we do not develop our resources, we might have to be prepared to see our life-style drop by 50 per cent or 75 per cent. I do not believe people are prepared to let that happen.

I personally—and we all speak personally in Private Members' Hour—see the Grand Canal concept as an enormous opportunity, just as the Lachine Canal has enhanced our standard of living and just as the Rideau Canal provides immense enjoyment for thousands of tourists and has created thousands of jobs. We have the Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence Seaway. Just think of what the Grand Canal would mean to those 4,000 unemployed engineers in the city of Calgary alone. Those engineers should be put to use. We have spent billions of dollars in a very expensive educational system, giving our young people a high level of education for which we are not providing jobs.

It strikes me as very worth while to study this project. I would stand four-square behind the study. How are we going to get $12 billion to pay for our old age security if we do not make the investment today? If we do, our children can have the jobs which will create the wealth so that they can look after us when we are old. If there had been no CPR, I for one, as well as I suppose six million other people in the West, would not be here today. When Canada was created in 1867, there were a mere three million people in Ontario and Quebec, primarily on farms. The Government had the wisdom to buy Rupert's land from the Hudson's Bay Company. It then had the wisdom to invest more money to build the CPR so that millions of our ancestors could come in and settle that great western plain.

Coming from a semi-desert area, I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that I know what water can do. A piece of land worth perhaps $20 an acre can increase in value to $2,000 or $3,000 an acre with water. Those things have increased our standard of living so that we can afford old age security for our seniors and university education for our children.

In conclusion, I will say that I generally believe that we as a Government should be prepared to study anything which will put our people to work, which will develop this country so we can maintain a standard of living to which we have become accustomed, and which will provide a future for our children and grandchildren.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Nickerson): The hour allotted for the consideration of Private Members' Business has expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), this item is dropped from the Order Paper.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the house under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

IMMIGRATION—UNSCRUPULOUS IMMIGRATION CONSULTANTS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the Adjournment Debate. My question follows from a question I directed to the Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. McLean) on April 18. It concerns the whole issue of the refugee determination process with which we as a Parliament and as a Government need to come to terms. Within that framework, the Minister of State for Immigration publicly and in the House has said that he would like to rid the system of phoney refugee applications.

I think there is some degree of unanimity on that score simply because there are a great number of legitimate claims which will certainly be hampered by those which are illegitimate. The backlog is becoming serious and alarming. As you may know, Mr. Speaker, it numbers 21,000 and is rising. We need to maintain a sense of balance. If the Minister wants to rid the system of "phoney refugees", then I believe he has to come to terms with the question of phoney immigration consultants and phoney immigration lawyers. I say "phoney" advisedly. I mean those who prey on innocent individuals. They are so-called immigration lawyers who are charging exorbitant fees for services which are readily available at our immigration offices and through the normal channels here in Canada. They are individual consultants and lawyers who are using fraudulent schemes in terms of advertising in other countries about a system with respect to how people can come to Canada.

Once these people come to Canada, they face a reality which is very different from what it was purported to be. They face deportation. Therefore, what we have is a large number of individuals who claim refugee status based on advice and advertisements which are clearly delineated by the so-called consultants. As a last resort, these people put in a claim for refugee status rather than face deportation. A good number of individuals have given up their lives in the other country. They have sold their homes and properties. They come to Canada with the expectation that what the so-called immigration consultants told them was the truth. Much to their disbelief, they find out that there is a different reality once they come to Canada.

This issue was recently brought to light as a result of the so-called problem facing the Portuguese-Canadian community. There were a large number of individuals from Portugal claiming refugee status based on the grounds of religious persecution. If we are to react, as the Minister has, in terms of a rating system for phoney refugees, then we cannot do that without addressing ourselves to the question of phoney immigration consultants and lawyers. This is why on April 18 I asked if the Minister had the intention of offering some balance into the equation. I asked whether he or his colleague, the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty), intended to prosecute those who are preying on innocent individuals. The Department has specific information about a number of such practices, specifically in Toronto, with regard to the Portuguese-Canadian community. There is inaction on the part of the Government in terms of putting a stop to those individuals who are using fraudulent schemes and who are exacerbating the problem of the refugee backlog.

Another interesting argument is the possibility that the Minister of State, as a result of the increasing number of refugee claimants based on the grounds of religious persecution in Portugal, will clamp visa requirements on Portugal. I raised a question in the House with respect to this matter on another occasion. Today, I submit that that is an incorrect, knee-jerk reaction. If we were to clamp a visa requirement on Portugal, we would be doing a disservice to a European friend and ally. We would be punishing the majority for what is a small minority-type problem. That is to say, of the 21,000 people who make up the backlog, approximately 1,000 of those are from Portugal. If we use the logic of the Minister of State and impose visa requirements on Portugal, which represents 1,000 of the 21,000 backlogged cases, then what are we to do with other countries which have the remainder of refugee claimants?

I am interested today in pursuing this discussion to see what the Minister of State is thinking with regard to the whole question involving the refugee problem and specifically as it relates to the Portuguese dilemma. On the one hand we need to come to grips with these consultants and immigration lawyers who are coming across with tactics which should not be tolerated. If we come to grips with them, then we will be heading in the right direction in terms of solving the problem and in terms of limiting the number of fraudulent refugee claimants from that particular country and, indeed, from other countries. In this way we would be sending out the proper signals that we will not tolerate individuals of that kind.

I am looking for assurance that the Government will not impose visa requirements on Portugal, thereby making it the only country in western Europe with visa requirements. That is not the proper way of addressing the refugee backlog. The proper way would be to bring in a comprehensive refugee determination process that is fair and equitable to everyone and does not specifically target one country with the problem. I see that my time is up, and I look forward to the Parliamentary Secretary's response.

Mr. Jean-Guy Hudon (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity today to expand on the reply given by the Minister of State for Immigration and Minister responsible for the Status of Women (Mr. McLean) to the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) on April 18, 1986.

The Commission tries to investigate all sources of fraud and exploitation, and its representatives are quite willing to receive complaints from persons who feel their interests have been harmed by unscrupulous consultants. I repeat that the Commission is quite willing to hear complaints on the subject. At the local level, volunteer groups and ethnic communities have been approached with a view to setting up consultation services and stopping the exploitation of people claiming refugee status by immigration lawyers and unscrupulous consultants.

Mr. Speaker, we have been asked to press charges against the lawyers and these consultants, and we are seriously considering doing so. Under the provisions of the Immigration Act, and especially paragraph 95(m), persons committing an offence may be charged, and we have asked the help of many of the parties concerned in the hope that we can accumulate the evidence we need to take this route with some measure of success. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the problem often is how to get all the evidence.

Mr. Speaker, the RCMP is also proceeding with investigations in this area. We feel this is a very important matter, because it specifically concerns a group of individuals who are free and who want to opt for the freedom of coming to live here in Canada.

TRADE—THREATENED USE OF SUBSIDIES TO SELL UNITED STATES WHEAT TO SYRIA. (B) MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, a few days ago, I raised in the House the question of the possible sale of wheat by the United States to the country of Syria. On April 8, Syria was offered 700,000 tonnes of American wheat. No sales have yet been announced, but the Americans decided to use their export enhancement program of the Farm Bill to subsidize the sale of wheat to the great country of Syria.

Syria has been a traditional Canadian customer. When we sell wheat to Syria, we cannot use subsidies under the Canadian Wheat Board. The Government does not subsidize the export of Canadian wheat. My concern is that the Americans will go into Syria with great big subsidies and, since we do not have any subsidies at all, we will not be able to compete. We are going to lose many of our traditional markets in the country of Syria. That is of great concern to farmers right across western Canada and to Canadians in general because if farmers go broke, there will be a loss of jobs right across the country.

I am very concerned about growing protectionism in the United States and about the American Farm Bill that President Reagan signed into law last December, which adds even more export subsidies to American grain exporters and subsidizes to an even greater extent the American farmer.

I would like to put on record how the American export program, the BICEP program, works. In the last five months, there have been 11 separate sales to Algeria by the United States, totalling one million tonnes of U.S. grain. These sales were made at prices as low as $85 American per tonne. That sale occurred on February 28, 1986. In March, a sale was made at $88 American per tonne. On October 23, a sale of $103 American per tonne was made. We can see that their selling price runs from $85 to $103 American. At the same time, their sales are subsidized by anywhere from $23 per tonne to $54 per tonne.

The best example would be the sale which occurred on October 23, 1985. At that time the Americans sold 135,000 tonnes of grain to Algeria. The selling price was $103 per tonne and the subsidy was $54.38 per tonne. What the Americans have really said to the Algerians is that they would sell them two bushels of wheat at $103 per tonne and give them one free. How can we, as Canadians, compete against such a policy?

I know the European Common Market is not any better. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said the other day that it was a little better than the Americans, but not much. We have two big giants, two cowboys fighting it out in a trade war—the Americans and the Europeans. We as Canadians, along with the Argentinians, are caught in the middle.

It is not only Syria and Algeria. I have figures for a number of other countries. I will give a few more examples in the short period of time I have available to me. The Americans have made four sales to Egypt, going back to September, 1985. These sales involved wheat flour, soft red winter wheat, and frozen poultry. In all cases the sales were massively subsidized. For example, in the case of frozen poultry, the Americans sold 8,000 tonnes on December 27, 1985 at $558 per tonne, and the subsidy was $345.46 per tonne. These are official government figures which the Minister has confirmed he has in his possession.

Another example would be the sale of wheat flour by the Americans to Yemen on January 28 and on February 14, Valentine's Day. The sales involved 31,500 tonnes of wheat flour at $166 per tonne, and the subsidy was $123 per tonne. How can we compete for the market of Yemen when the United States provides such a massive subsidy?

[Translation]

And the other country is Morocco, Mr. Speaker. There were five sales of Canadian wheat to Morocco. The price was about the same as for Algeria: $106 per ton, with a subsidy of $20, $22, $24 and $25 per ton. Mr. Speaker, that is not fair at all.

[English]

Another example is Turkey. There were six sales to Turkey, going back to November, 1985. The selling price was from $100 to $115 per tonne, and the subsidies were between $18 and $38 American per tonne. Once again, how can we as a country compete?

Another example is the Philippines. Many sales were made and there were large subsidies. In the case of Zaire, there were sales of wheat flour and hard red winter wheat, again with massive subsidies.

Of course there are other countries where sales have not been made, but the Americans are trying to make such sales. One would be Syria, about which I raise a question this evening. Their sale of 700,000 tonnes to Syria represents the entire Syrian wheat market for one year. Last year I think we had about 45 per cent or 46 per cent of that market, and the Americans only had about 6 per cent or 7 per cent. They are trying to use the same program of subsidies to get into the markets of Iraq, Nigeria, Tunisia, and Benin. That is only the beginning of the list. I am convinced that they will try to use the same subsidies to go into the Soviet Union, China, and perhaps South Korea, other very good traditional Canadian markets.

I want the Government to take a strong stand with the Americans and with the Europeans. It should tell them that this kind of trade war is not right and lodge a complaint with the International Wheat Council in London. It is wrong; it is a violation of the International Wheat Agreement, if not the letter of the law, certainly the spirit of the law. The Government should raise this question at GATT and in Tokyo. It should speak out on the world scene.

Let us not be timid. Let us stand up for Canada. Canada is a great country. Let us take a strong stand for Canada against what the Americans and Europeans are doing. Otherwise, our farmers will go under. They will not survive with $3 per bushel when the Americans are getting $6. Mr. Speaker, you are from the Northwest Territories and I am sure, even though there are no grain farms in your riding, you know exactly what I mean.

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport) and Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to respond to the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom). I was afraid he would not show. However, better late than never, and I would like to respond to his comments.

Mr. Speaker, during the 1984-85 harvest year, Syria imported 1.5 million tons of wheat. Canada has 45 per cent of this market, European countries 40 per cent and the United States 9 per cent.

In the past, the United States have always given us the assurance that their export program was not aimed at Canada's traditional markets. It was aimed at subsidized markets such as those of the European Economic Community rather than markets like ours.

We have an excellent reputation as a result of the quality and consistency of Canadian wheat exports. Our fertile soil, our inspection system, an efficient transportation network and recognized trading practices are all factors that have helped to build and strengthen this enviable reputation.

It is thanks to this reputation that we keep our customers. The selling price is one of many arguments that may tip the scales one way or another.

Mr. Speaker, the real problem is not the projected sale of American wheat to Syria, but an escalating subsidy war between the EEC and the United States.

Our Government is reacting on several fronts, Mr. Speaker, both on the international market and in our own country.

The Prime Minister is now on his way to the Tokyo Summit, where Canada has put agricultural trade at the top of its priority list. This step shows how serious this Government is about maintaining our export markets.

Earlier today, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) met with agricultural organization leaders before taking off for Tokyo. He wanted to know their views before discussing, with the summit participants, the escalating war of grants between the EEC and the United States.

Mr. Speaker, Canadian farmers just happen to be in the line of fire, and it was precisely to help them that yesterday the Prime Minister unveiled a series of very important measures. This Government has always been a strong supporter of the agricultural community, and yesterday we made another significant contribution. The Government has decided to raise domestic wheat prices, which will now range from $6 to $11 a bushel. A special committee of the House of Commons has just launched a series of hearings on the pricing of domestic wheat. In addition, the Government has decided to freeze the farmers' share of wheat transportation costs during the 1986-87 crop year. This represents savings of $40 million for our wheat growers.

Mr. Speaker, I know that my time is running out, but I would have a lot more to say about this very important question. We have removed all federal excise and sales taxes on diesel and gas used on farms. The federal tax rebate now given to producers for fuel sold to farmers will be increased to 5.5 cents a litre, a measure which entails net savings of $165 million over the next two years. The total 5.5-cents-a-litre rebate will rise to 6.5 cents on January 1, 1987.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Nickerson): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.49 p.m.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—INFORMATION KIT MAP—OMISSION OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the people of Atlantic Canada petition this House that the Prime Minister send the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) back to kindergarten for basic Canadian geography lessons. The Minister endeared himself to the people of Nova Scotia several months ago by telling Haligonians the Stanfield textile industry did not exist. Yesterday, zap, he wiped Prince Edward Island out of existence, and with a wave of his magic marker, added one half million more Americans in what used to be the Province of Newfoundland.

The people of New Brunswick live in frenzied fear of the next attempt by the Minister to open his mouth to change feet. The Government should shelve its attempts to promote free trade and should instead promote free geography lessons for Ministers, particularly the Minister for International Trade who has not had the common sense up to this stage at least to look embarrassed for his latest faux pas.

May the Minister withdraw gracefully his promotional exhibit and consign it to the nearest—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

POLITICAL PARTIES

BRITISH COLUMBIA PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I bring to the attention of British Columbians the sleazy politics being practised by the Conservative Party. Since the election, Members of Parliament from British Columbia, and some followers, have practiced the "good cop" and "bad cop" routine on everything from fish to parks.

When the Hon. Member for Vancouver South (Mr. Fraser) supported the creation of a national park in South Moresby, the Hon. Member for Cariboo—Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway), the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain), and the Hon. Member for Nanaimo—Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg) said it wasn't so. When the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) publicly supported South Moresby, the same crowd, and more, said it wasn't so.

When the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Crombie) announced a policy of co-management in fisheries along with the new Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon), the same crowd, and more, said it wasn't so. When the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development said aboriginal title was likely in British Columbia, B.C. Tories and Socreds freaked out and said it wasn't so. In fact the Tory Member of Parliament from North Vancouver dissociated himself from the Minister and told the press it just wasn't so. What is clear is that the Tory Members of Parliament from B.C. have no voice in Cabinet. They rely on saying it just isn't so, and hope that B.C. voters "believe it or not".

ENERGY

NORTH AMERICAN ENERGY ACCORD PROPOSED

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, as an energy-producing nation Canada must urgently consider new methods to free itself from OPEC price manipulations. The drastic decline in the price of oil has cost thousands of jobs in Alberta, which could climb to 9,000 by June if the price remains low. As we enter trade talks with the United States, we are in the strongest possible position when it comes to our ability to supply energy. Perhaps it is time for us to take another look at a North American energy accord.

Instead of falling prey to OPEC's manipulations, let us build a secure future for western Canada through new accords which secure a larger market for Canadian oil. If OPEC wants to play games with oil, let it not affect us. A North American accord could secure and create thousands of needed jobs and stimulate massive new development, especially in Alberta.

AIRPORTS

OTTAWA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—OFFICIAL OPENING OF RENOVATED WEST WING

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, you will shortly see, as will all Members of the House and all Canadians, that the Ottawa-Gloucester International Airport has a new look.

Yesterday I had the honour to represent the Government and our great Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) when the Mayor of Gloucester, Harry Allan, and I cut a beautiful blue ribbon to open officially the renovated west wing of the airport in the nation's capital.

Cold, wind-blown, wet or snowy external departures or arrivals during fall or wintery days are gone. There are magnificent functional open spaces, with superb views of all tarmac activities through easily accessible glass walls; better access to all services, including direct access from the parking lot to the loading bays for business travellers with no baggage; special features for the handicapped; and a baby room for mothers or fathers with young ones.

It is not all finished. It is a little bit behind schedule, but it is on budget.

Vancouver has its world-class Expo 86. We now have a world-class airport.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

BUDGET PROJECTED BY FORMER LIBERAL MINISTER OF FINANCE

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Andre) stated in the House that the Lalonde Budget had forecast zero growth in 1986-87 defence expenditures. He was dead wrong—again.

The fiscal plan which accompanied the last Lalonde Budget showed a projected 3.8 per cent real growth for the 1986-87 period, after one applies a 4.9 per cent DND deflator. Given lower than expected oil prices and an actual 1986-87 DND deflator of 3.8 per cent, we see that the DND budget, as projected by Mr. Lalonde, would actually have had 4.9 per cent real growth, contrary to the incorrect and incomplete impression provided by the Associate Minister yesterday; and the Conservative Government is not even meeting the NATO commitment of 3 per cent.

Furthermore, Mr. Lalonde projected total DND expenditures for next year, 1987-88, of $11.14 billion as compared to the latest Wilson projection—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY

FUNCTIONS AND OBJECTIVES

Mr. Tom Hockin (London West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind the House of the existence of the International Atomic Energy Agency which was established in 1956. The functions of the agency are very relevant in the midst of the nuclear accident which occurred in the last few days.

The functions of the agency are to "seek to accelerate and enlarge the contribution of atomic energy to peace, health and prosperity throughout the world" and to ensure that nuclear energy "is not used in such a way as to further any military purposes". This is a quotation from the statute of the agency.

I would ask the Government to urge this agency to be prepared in the future to help in the case of accidents. I would also like to encourage that this agency develop more resources and procedures for dealing with accidents and, above all—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

STATUS OF WOMEN

ELECTION OF WOMAN AS PRESIDENT OF CANADIAN LABOUR CONGRESS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, this week a coalminer's daughter from Cape Breton became the President of the CLC. This is a truly notable accomplishment. Not only is Shirley Carr the first woman to achieve this high office, she is universally recognized as a tough but thoughtful advocate for those in our society who need a voice, whether or not they be from within the trade union movement.

Shirley came up through the ranks, understands the problems of Canadian families, and is dedicated to making Canada and the world more humane.

As a highly respected leader in the trade union movement she has established herself as a conciliator par excellence. I trust that the Government of Canada will both seek out and listen to the views which Shirley Carr will bring to the public debate of Canada. Her election makes Canada a better place.

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, our Government's sustained efforts to boost the Canadian economy continue to bear fruit.

Among other things, five-year mortgage rates have gone down 3.5 per cent since September 4, 1984, a monthly saving of $116, or $7,000 in the case of a $50,000 mortgage.

In addition, mortgage rates have never been this low in eight years.

The Bank of Canada rate is down 3.41 per cent and the chartered banks' prime rate has declined by 2.5 per cent.

Since the Budget was tabled hardly two months ago there has been a 1.25 per cent drop in mortgage rates, while the Bank of Canada prime rate decreased by 2.5 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, this encouraging economic performance by our Government will continue and, between now and 1990, the Government's financial requirements—

GOVERNMENT MEASURES TO ASSIST FARMERS

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, the federal Government has shown that it is willing to listen and ready to act for Canada's farmers. During a difficult time for the agricultural community, farmers have been justified in asking for measures of relief. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has responded personally by announcing the complete removal of all sales and excise taxes on farm fuel, a freeze on grain freight rates, an increased ceiling on domestic wheat of $11 per bushel, a fast-track approach to farm debt legislation, and Canada's role of advocacy on agriculture at the Economic Summit in Tokyo.

These measures are a clear and timely response to prairie agriculture. While we know that there is more to be done to find long-term solutions for farmers, the agricultural community can count on the Prime Minister and the Government to find the answers.

ENERGY

FUEL PRICE DIFFERENTIAL BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, the gas price gap between Canada and the United States has widened to the extent that Canadian airlines would rather buy their fuel in the United States. An analyst has indicated that fuel costs 20 per cent less south of the border. Burning more fuel on the way back to Canada because of full tanks is still cheaper than filling up in this country.

Again Canadians are losing money. Revenue losses on the Canadian market are recuperated by our southern neighbour because the federal Government's gas taxes are too high. The heavier the tax load, the higher the price in Canada and the longer our airlines will continue to buy American fuel. This anomaly is due to the Government whose first responsibility should be to put our country back on a competitive footing.

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—CALL FOR INTERNATIONAL INSPECTION

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, we are witness to a tragedy of incredible proportions. Thousands are reported dead, tens of thousands may be suffering the effects of radiation sickness, and the 2.5 million residents of Ukraine's capital, Kiev, are threatened by the contaminated water reservoir that supplies the city. Intelligence reports indicate that there may be a second meltdown in process.

The nuclear accident at Chernobyl, Ukraine, has endangered the lives of millions of Ukrainians and people of neighbouring countries and will be felt for generations to come. Yet Soviet authorities have not accepted offers of assistance from the United States and Canada; they refuse to provide information. This callous disregard for human life and the environment must be condemned.

It is imperative that the Soviet Union allow an international team on site to inspect the damage and to provide medical and technical assistance. Every effort must be made to alleviate the suffering of thousands of Ukrainians. Continued non-acceptance of international aid is a heinous crime against humanity.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

THE PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, is the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) somehow immunized against respect for the honesty of most Canadians or is he plagued with some debilitating disease which compels him to promise what he will not deliver, to say what he surely cannot believe, and to so frequently rearrange the facts to suit some new purpose? If so, it is a pathology of evil consequence, not because it damages his credibility for he is but a momentary player, and not just because he discredits politics, but because he damages the credibility of our country and may in the end cost the lives and compromise the freedom of those who were promised our support.

Remember that ringing declaration at the United Nations that sanctions would be imposed and diplomatic relations broken by Canada if South Africa failed to make fundamental changes in apartheid? Now the Prime Minister says that Margaret Thatcher will lead the fight. Canada's Prime Minister has a new commitment to do a tiny little bit, only a tiny little bit.

YEAR OF INTERNATIONAL PEACE

MONTREAL MARATHON DEDICATED TO PEACE

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, 1986 has been proclaimed by the United Nations as the Year of International Peace. On this occasion a group of very dedicated and highly multicultural people from Montreal, known as Park Extension Youth Organization, have decided to dedicate their annual marathon to honour this very important year for international peace.

I think these people are to be congratulated on having had this wonderful idea of inviting the people of Montreal to take this particular opportunity to reflect on the Year for International Peace proclaimed by the United Nations. ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. The conflict of interest guidelines provide that Ministers shall perform their official duties and so arrange their private affairs in such manner that public confidence ana trust in the integrity, objectivity, and impartiality of Government are conserved and enhanced. In that the Deputy Prime Minister has been telling us day after day that it is up to the Opposition to prove that the conflict of interest guidelines have been violated, I want to ask him the following. Is it not the job of the Prime Minister to ensure that the ethical standards of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion are appropriate for him to remain in his Cabinet? Is it not the Prime Minister's job?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, there is no difference in that question from those which have been asked repeatedly over the last four days. I will simply repeat to the hon. gentleman that the Code of Conduct, as it is and has been in place since September 9, 1985, requires that all Ministers comply with that code. The Minister has complied with that code, and that is a fact which he can establish for himself simply by looking at the public records with the Assistant Deputy Registrar General.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, on April 30, the Prime Minister said that there was what he called unproven and undocumented evidence. He referred it to the Assistant Deputy Registrar General who did not look at it. All the Assistant Deputy Registrar General did was have a short discussion with the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Is there not a duty on the part of the Government, knowing the limited investigation which was done by the Assistant Deputy Registrar General, to do an independent investigation and verification of the documented in evidence which is available and condemns the Minister, under the guidelines?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I disagree with that, Mr. Speaker, particularly the last portion of the allegation of the Hon. Member. The duty of the Assistant Deputy Registrar General is to ensure compliance by the Ministry with the Code of Conduct. That is the beginning and end of his responsibility. He has done that. I am satisfied, as is the Prime Minister, that that has occurred.

APPEARANCE OF CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, compliance also involves an obligation to avoid the appearance of a conflict of interest. Is the Deputy Prime Minister telling the country that an Assistant Deputy Registrar General is the one who determines whether there is the appearance of a conflict? Surely not. Surely the Government—and it should admit it—has failed in its duty to provide a standard and to maintain it within the guidelines.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am saying nothing of the kind. It is the hon. gentleman who is saying those things. I am telling him repeatedly, as I have been for the last four days, that the Assistant Deputy Registrar General has a responsibility to seek compliance with the Code of Conduct. That is the Prime Minister's responsibility and, in his absence, my responsibility. I have taken the necessary steps to ensure that that compliance has been had, and I have been saying that for the last four days. Indeed, I started saying it last April 7.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF PRIVATIZATION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would have liked to have directed my question to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, but in his absence I will direct it to the Deputy Prime Minister. With respect to the sale or privatization of Crown corporations like Canadair, would the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that the recommendations of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion are submitted to the Task Force on Privatization and ultimately brought to Cabinet, as stated by Mrs. Margaret Rudolf, a Treasury Board official, and contrary to the what the Deputy Prime Minister declared in the House yesterday, when he said that the President of the Treasury Board was responsible?

• (1120)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is obviously not familiar with the process. I outlined it the day before yesterday and again briefly today.

Mr. Frith: Contradicted.

Mr. Nielsen: Not contradicted at all. Let me set it on the record. First, CDIC will undertake a thorough analysis and conduct follow-up negotiations as appropriate for each of the proposals. Each will be judged objectively on its respective merits. Second, the analysis of the proprosals and follow-up negotiations will be presented to the CDIC board of directors.

Ms. Copps: Analysis?

Mr. Nielsen: —which will in turn present its recommendations to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion.

Ms. Copps: Pay their dues. Is that the analysis?

Mr. Nielsen: Third, the Minister will then present the CDIC recommendations to the Government's task force on privatization chaired by Mr. Robert de Cotret, President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Baker: Order.

Mr. Nielsen: Finally, if the Government decides there are proposals worth considering with a view to divestiture—

Mr. Baker: Order.

Mr. Nielsen: —the matter will be taken before Parliament for appropriate consideration.

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF PURCHASE OFFER FOR CANADAIR

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, we want to make sure that all offers for Canadair are given the same treatment.

I would therefore ask the Deputy Prime Minister to confirm whether it is true that Magna International Inc. filed its proposal to purchase Canadair with the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion instead of filing it with the Canada Development Investment Corporation like the other prospective buyers. This question was not answered yesterday in the House. What is the answer?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I believe I have answered that. There are five candidates that have expressed an interest. All five proposals will be considered in accordance with the process that I have precisely set down in my response to the immediately preceding question. All five of them will be subject to that process, which includes not only the cabinet committee and the cabinet process but also the House of Commons process.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Does the Magna proposal go to Stevens first?

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—INFORMATION KIT EXPENDITURES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister. Yesterday he refused to answer a serious question on the propriety of the Government spending public funds on matters not yet approved by Parliament. I hope he will deal with that today.

Not long ago the Secretary of State for External Affairs, when he was Leader of the Opposition, said:

> I think that the attempt to spend public money, to manipulate public opinion on public questions that have not yet been decided, is an improper practice that offends the rights of this House of Commons.

Would the Deputy Prime Minister tell the House why this sound principle does not apply to the propagandistic, one-sided case put out by the Government in favour of free trade?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The truth hurts, Ed.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I should set the Hon. Member straight. He knows that I didn't refuse to answer the question yesterday. The Minister responsible was here—

Mr. Broadbent: I asked you the question.

Mr. Nielsen: —and he answered. In his absence today, I will answer it on behalf of the Government. I can see no productive reason for departing from the answers he gave yesterday in response to a series of questions that were put to him on that matter. He being the Minister responsible answered fully and, I thought, very adequately.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister is either inadvertently misleading the House or he didn't listen to what the Minister said yesterday. He didn't deal with that question. He answered other questions.

When the Deputy Prime Minister was on this side of the House and the Secretary of State for External Affairs was Leader of the Opposition they both made the case that a Government of the day ought not to spend public money promoting a policy of the Government until it has been approved by the House of Commons and Parliament. Considering that was their position then, why does it not apply to the same Party when it forms the Government of Canada?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman may feel that the Minister did not answer the question yesterday. I believe he did. If he chooses not to believe that he did, that is fine.

Mr. Broadbent: Has Parliament approved the policy?

• (1125)

Mr. Nielsen: It has been part of our longstanding tradition that, while the Ministry is required to respond, the nature of that response is not open to question by opposition Members.

Mr. Broadbent: I do not know what the Minister has been drinking or eating this morning.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: No, no.

Mr. Broadbent: I mean coffee.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member knows better. Just a question, please.

DEPICTION OF PROVINCES ON INFORMATION KIT MAP

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I hope that my last question on this will get some answer. The outrageous map which is conveyed in the same kit depicts one province of Canada as part of the United States, and totally omits another province. Will the Government at least have the decency to show consideration for the Canadians directly affected in Atlantic Canada by at least withdrawing the kit and correcting the map before it is circulated?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I will draw that representation to the attention of the Minister responsible, Sir. In the meantime I can inform the hon. gentleman that indeed I have been drinking this morning: four cups of coffee, two glasses of milk, and one glass of orange juice.

Mr. Broadbent: Then you ought to change.

MAGNA INTERNATIONAL—REQUEST FOR TABLING OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. Due to his desire to assist opposition Members of Parliament in their responsibilities, would he table in the House of Commons all agreements, loan guarantees or grants that the Government of Canada has concluded with Magna International or its subsidiaries? Would he also table in the House copies of the minutes of the meeting of the board of directors of the CDIC which discuss the subject matter and the terms of reference of the proposed sale of Canadair? Will he table that information?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman is a seasoned Member and knows that there are processes and forums which he should address in order to achieve the objectives which he wants to achieve in the House of Commons.

Mr. Deans: This is one of them.

Mr. Nielsen: The Estimates of the Ministry will be before committee and he can ask all the questions he wishes there. In any event, the detail which the hon. gentleman has outlined seems to be of a nature which would be more properly an Order Paper question.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): You can answer that "yes" or "no".

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I respectfully suggest to the Deputy Prime Minister that his continual stonewalling and refusal to provide information to the House is leading Canadians to conclude that this is a cover-up. Will the Deputy Prime Minister explain why he refuses to give important information which may remove the cloud of doubt hanging over the head of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion? Why does he refuse to give us that information, or is there a cover-up?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, any clouds that are around are in the mind of the hon. gentleman and those like him who have been asking this kind of question. As an experienced Member of the House he knows that he has available to him processes which he can employ in order to achieve the objectives which he states he desires.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PRIVATIZATION OF CANADAIR—MINISTER'S PARTICIPATION IN CABINET COMMITTEE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister, in the absence of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Since the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is a Member of the Cabinet Task Force on Privatization, is it the Government's intention that the Minister sit on this Committee when it will be considering the CDIC's recommendation for privatization of Canadair?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I do not know what are the calendar commitments of the Minister. It seems to me that the question itself has considerable future dimension because the proposals by the five candidates, as we know them today, have to go through four different stages. As far as I am aware, they are not even through the stage of the CDIC board of directors.

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S REMOVAL FROM CONSIDERATION OF PRIVATIZATION PROPOSALS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, whatever the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion knew last May, he now knows that his interests have received a very major financial benefit with the intervention of the Chairman of Magna International. Can the Deputy Prime Minister therefore explain to the House why that Minister has not been removed from all further consideration of the sale of Canadair? Mr. Stronach, the Chairman of Magna International, has been excluded from participating in meetings or receiving any information from the CDIC Board of which he is a member because of the fact his company is bidding for Canadair. Why the disparity?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman states a whole clutch of allegations as though they are absolute, beyond any shadow of a doubt, fact. I do not accept that clutch of allegations made by the hon. gentleman at all.

Mr. Cassidy: They are fact, Erik. You should know it by now.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—COMPLIANCE WITH CODE OF CONDUCT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. On April 30, 1986, in reply to my colleague from Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe, the Minister said that the Code of Conduct for Ministers has been complied with by the Minister in question. I want to be absolutely clear what that means. Does it mean that from now on Ministers or their spouses are free to seek or obtain financial advantage from companies doing business with their respective Departments?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the compliance which I have stated and restated over the last four days means exactly what it means and exactly what I said, and not the twist which the hon. gentleman wants to put on it.

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC DECLARATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion are now aware that the interest-free loan in question was provided. In view of that, will there be a public declaration under Section 35(1) of the conflict of interest guidelines which requires that Ministers are supposed to declare a direct or indirect benefit in excess of $200? Now that we know that, is there going to be such a declaration pursuant to the guidelines, yes or no?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman's statements and the premise in the hon. gentleman's question are false.

Mr. Boudria: They are not false. He knows. We talked about it in the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

REQUEST FOR DISCLOSURE OF FAMILY'S DEALINGS WITH MAGNA INTERNATIONAL

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the same Minister. The conflict of interest guidelines say that public office holders have an obligation to act in a manner which will bear the closest public scrutiny, an obligation which is not fully discharged by simply acting within the law. Given that, why does the Deputy Prime Minister not require the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to disclose all of the details regarding his family's dealings with Magna International or any of its principals?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, compliance with the Code of Conduct requires that the Minister divest himself of his assets and place those assets in a blind trust. There has been that compliance.

Mr. Tobin: His wife is managing it.

Mr. Nielsen: The details of that trust are not public for obvious reasons. All of the arrangements made to establish the trust are public and available for inspection by the hon. gentleman and any other member of the public who chooses to inspect those records.

NATURE OF DEALINGS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, would the Deputy Prime Minister consider the implications of the principle I read to him that public office holders have an obligation to act in a manner which will bear the closest public scrutiny, an obligation not fully discharged by simply acting within the law? Will he recognize that there is a serious cloud hanging over the Minister as a result of dealings with a corporation not at arm's length from his Ministry? Will he not now require that Minister to meet that particular principle and disclose to this House of Commons and the public the nature of the dealings between his family and Magna International?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): My answer must be the same, Mr. Speaker. The requirement and responsibility are to ensure that all Ministers of the Crown comply with the Code of Conduct tabled in this House September 9, 1985. That responsibility has been discharged. The Minister has complied with that Code of Conduct.

ORIGIN OF LOAN

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister as well. Did he request the Assistant Deputy Registrar General to trace the $2.6 million interest-free sweetheart loan to the Minister's company to determine whether or not the money originated with Czapka's numbered company, Magna International, or the Hanil Banking Group of Korea?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): The Hon. Member is an experienced Member of this House. Indeed, he is a former Minister. He knows very well that that is not the responsibility of the ADRG. Not at all. He should know better than to put that kind of question.

PRIME MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, the response is quite true but does the Minister not agree it is the responsibility of the Prime Minister, and I take it delegated to the Deputy Prime Minister, to ascertain those facts so the public can have more faith in our public officials?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): I do not propose to accept the allegations that the Hon. Member and his colleagues in the opposition Parties are throwing around with such abandon.

Ms. Copps: They are facts.

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East says they are facts. She has her version of the facts, I have my version of the facts.

Some Hon. Members: That's right!

Mr. Nielsen: Normally they really are not facts until they appear on the front page of The Toronto Star or The Globe and Mail.

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—ADVICE FOR TRAVELLERS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Can he bring the House up-to-date on any information pertaining to the accident in Ukraine which he has received subsequent to his statement of last night? Can he explain why the information contained in that statement is still not being made available on the hot line? If you call the hot line you are still referred to the embassies of the respective countries you may be inquiring about concerning the wisdom of travelling to them.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I will try to give the Member, the House and the country the full information I have. I say to the Hon. Member, and I know he is aware of this, that our information is coming in literally on the hour. We did an update last evening which indicates that Heads of Mission in Poland were to analyze the situation as to whether family members of mission personnel as well members of the Canadian community in Poland should withdraw from the country for the time being. That decision has been taken and that withdrawal is under way.

Regarding the hot line, I checked that again yesterday. The difficulty we are having with the information concerning whether or not people should travel is that we are getting it from the countries involved. We do not see danger in western Europe beyond the one I have mentioned. Further questioning would relate to Bucharest and Moscow.

CONDITIONS WITHIN 800-KILOMETRE RADIUS OF ACCIDENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I am wondering why at least the information in the statement with respect to the 800-kilometre radius is not available on the hot line. What steps is the Minister taking to lean on the travel insurance industry to get them to consider the situation in those countries within the 800-kilometre radius as a legitimate reason for people cancelling their travel plans without penalty?

• (1140)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, there is no question that if this Government is erring at all, we are erring on the side of safety. That is my obligation. I regret very seriously as a Health Minister that my attempts to convey to Canadians the best health information from the Soviet authorities have not been more fruitful. I think on a world-wide basis that feeling is generally being expressed. We are trying to give whatever information we have available.

What I cannot do is give more detail from countries such as Austria. We have had a lot of questions about Austria. Our information at the present time is that it is safe to travel there. The prudence we have been expressing has been related to the 500-mile radius, or the 800-kilometre radius, and specifically Poland and the two other centres I mentioned.

SAFETY OF VISITING CANADIANS AND LOCAL POPULATION OF KIEV

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the secrecy and misrepresentations of the Soviet Government on the nuclear tragedy in Ukraine, what efforts are being made by our Government to inform visiting Canadians and the local population in the Kiev region of the seriousness of the situation? What assurances and updated information can the Minister give to Canadians with relatives in the region?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, to the best of our knowledge the Canadian consul who arrived in Kiev yesterday was the only representative of a foreign Government who was allowed into the area up to that point in time. That has been because of a lot of Canadian effort. He was equipped with emergency credit cards and other authorizations to get any Canadians out of the area.

As I said yesterday, I am advising Canadians not to go into the area as visitors. As far as the local citizens are concerned we cannot do anything about that as it is under U.S.S.R. jurisdiction, but CBC International is conveying as much information as possible. Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your patience. I am meeting with the Ukrainian-Canadian Committee today at Winnipeg at approximately four o'clock to discuss further—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I tried to grant you a little more latitude but it is time to go on.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—MAILING ADDRESS OF BLIND TRUST SUBSIDIARY COMPANY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. I would like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister how he expects Canadians to believe that the Minister in question has put his interests and assets in a blind trust when a wholly-owned subsidiary of York Centre Corp., by the name of Highlands of King Investment Group, on a public document which we received today lists the mailing address of the wholly-owned subsidiary as one Sinclair M. Stevens, R.R. 3, King City, Ontario, Canada. How is that a blind trust in the Government's perception of what a blind trust is?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member can make her allegations. What is required is compliance with the Code of Conduct by the Minister. That compliance has been had, and I have been saying that for the last four days.

NATURE OF BLIND TRUST

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the simple fact is nobody believes the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! The Member's comment is out of order. Just a question, please.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, how can the Deputy Prime Minister expect Canadians to believe that the Minister in question has his assets in a blind trust when his wife is running one of his subsidiaries, his law firm is attached with their own offices and the telephone number is a number of other subsidiaries, and when, in fact, his own name is listed as the mailing address of one of his subsidiaries? How is that a blind trust?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I feel I have an obligation to answer questions. I do not feel I have an obligation to respond to personal insults, either directed to me personally or to others in this House.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

JAPANESE AND KOREAN COMPANIES' INVESTMENT IN CANADA

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is intended for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, but anyone on the government side who is not at Expo, and I am sure there must be somebody over there to whom the question can be addressed, can answer. The Government has on numerous occasions cited with some pride the fact that $1 billion worth of investment in Canadian plants has been made by Honda, Toyota, and Hyundai, in spite of the fact there are no value added or parts purchases commitments. Will the Deputy Prime Minister tell the House how much tooling and other capital equipment, which constitutes the majority of the investment that will be made, will be sourced in Canada?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I cannot provide that information. It is obviously the kind of detail that might find a more appropriate response on the Order Paper, or await the return of the Minister who can respond in that kind of detail.

SOURCING OF CAPITAL EQUIPMENT AND TOOLING

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Deputy Prime Minister can confirm, and this does not require a complicated answer—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. McCurdy: Will the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that virtually none of the capital equipment and none of the tooling will be sourced in Canada, that perhaps at a maximum $100 million of the billion dollars is going to be spent to the benefit of the Canadian tooling and capital equipment manufacturers?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Minister may want to reply, but it is difficult to find that supplementary to the first answer.

[Translation]

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Small Businesses)): Mr. Speaker, if I heard correctly the beginning of the first question and the second question which was related to it, I would say that Hyundai, in its negotiations with Quebec, always said that it intended to make as much of its purchases as possible in Canada. As for automobile parts, Hyundai maintained throughout the negotiations that it wanted to come as close as possible to the terms of the Auto Pact and to purchase as much as possible from Canadian suppliers. I have no reason to believe that Hyundai was not sincere and I have no doubt that it will keep to what it has already said publicly.

PUBLIC SERVICE

INDEXATION OF PENSIONS

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the President of the Treasury Board I direct my question to the Government House Leader. Myself and others in this House have been asking this for many months now, and since this week seems to be one for repetitive questions I ask on behalf of superannuates, RCMP and military retirees, when are they finally going to hear an announcement concerning indexation of their paid for pensions?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity of responding to the Hon. Member in the absence of the President of the Treasury Board who is on important government business today. I would like to advise the Member that there is progress being made between the President of the Treasury Board and the representatives of the people for whom he speaks and also with respect to public servants generally. The matter is before Cabinet receiving attention, and I hope it will not be too long before some firm statement can be made by the President of the Treasury Board on behalf of the Government.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PRODUCTION OF WHITE PAPER

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of National Defence. Can the Minister screw up enough courage and accuracy now—

Mr. Speaker: Order, order, order. The Hon. Member has been around long enough to know that personal comments such as that are out of order.

Ms. Copps: It's okay to call somebody a character assassin though.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Just a question, please.

Mr. Hopkins: Can the Minister of National Defence tell us now in a very clear statement when he will be issuing the long, and many times promised, White Paper on national defence, or are all the broken promises of the Government causing them to smother in their own rhetoric and confusion?

• (1150)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I could be immodest enough to say to the hon. gentleman that if he wishes to view my credentials in the courage department, I would be glad to meet him any day on that score.

As to the date of the White Paper, that has not yet been set but is being worked upon.

CONTENT OF PROPOSED WHITE PAPER

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, we know it has been promised many times. If this elusive White Paper does finally come out, will it be one comprehensive document or will it be a series of papers crafted or designed to avoid embarassing issues for the Government such as commitments to real growth in the capital budget to which it has not been commited in realistic terms since it took office?

Mr. McDermid: Wait for it.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I do not accept that at all. I would invite the hon. gentleman to compare the record of his own Party when it was in government for over 16 years and to view the wreckage which was strewn behind that Liberal Government over those years to the desperate point at which the Armed Forces find themselves today. The problem we have to cope with now is trying to put things back together again after the way in which the destroyers in the Hon. Member's Party left them after 16 years.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—JOB IMPACT STUDIES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It concerns his Government's policy on free trade. Studies done in Quebec indicate 320,000 jobs are at risk. Studies done in Ontario indicate that 300,000 jobs are at risk. Would the Deputy Prime Minister explain the quotation from page 30 of the document released yesterday which states: "All studies confirm that Ontario will be the greatest net beneficiary" of free trade? Is that true, and is that the reason why the 84 studies will not be released to the public or to this House?

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Landry (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I wish to tell my colleague that, unfortunately, we cannot comment on studies if we did not get them and that, in any case, both the previous and present Quebec Governments have stated that the studies are incomplete.

[English]

REQUEST THAT STUDIES BE RELEASED

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister with respect to the 84 studies. Yesterday, Canada's Information Commissioner, Inger Hensen, said that there is no valid explanation in existence for the Government's delay in releasing those 1984 studies. Would the Deputy Prime Minister tell the House why, in relation to all the debate which has gone in this House, he and his Government will not release those 1984 studies? What are you hiding? And are you hiding it from the west, the north, or from some other part of the country?

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Landry (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Minister for International Trade gave a very good answer to that question yesterday. He said that he and the Secretary of State for External Affairs were looking at the studies and would very shortly publish those which cannot jeopardize the position of Canada in future negotiations.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

PCBS—MOBILE WASTE DISPOSAL UNIT

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. As the Minister knows, the E.S. Fox Company in my riding of Welland has developed a state-of-the-art-mobile waste disposal unit capable of destroying PCBs. This mobile unit will be in use very shortly, perhaps this weekend, at the Love Canal site in New York State.

Would the Minister tell the House what the possiblity is for authorized use of this unit in Canada, in particular for the pollution problem site in the Niagara River?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman is correct. The mobile unit in question with respect to PCBs is being put into use at the Love Canal site this summer, I believe, but on an experimental and pilot project basis. My own Department is co-operating very actively with all concerned in that connection.

The actual permissive authority as far as the possible use of this unit in Canada is concerned resides with the Ontario Government in connection with which public hearings undoubtedly would be required. My own Department would provide all the technical and expert back-up required.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS

HEALTH PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. Can the Minister tell us how the provinces are supposed to meet their commitments with regard to overflowing emergency rooms, beds for chronic patients, the care of senior citizens and the salaries of health care workers when they have to make up for a reduction in real terms of $8 billion in assistance from the Federal Government?

[English]

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I believe this question comes in response to the Quebec Budget which was released last night. I would like to point out again to the House that the payments we are making to the provinces, including the Province of Quebec, for health care and post-secondary education, are continuing to increase at a faster rate than inflation.

STATEMENT MADE BY QUEBEC FINANCE MINISTER

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I find that absolutely extraordinary. Does the Minister agree with the statement made by the Finance Minister of Quebec, that because the federal Government owes the province of Quebec $148 million, the province of Quebec is obliged to resort to taxation to compensate for the shortfall resulting from federal cut-backs? Does the Minister agree with that? And will she meet her commitment and promise, and pay Quebec what she owes it?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I think the statement—

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It was your formula.

Mrs. Finestone: No, no, you broke it. Come on.

An Hon. Member: Did you finish your question?

Mrs. Finestone: He didn't keep his word. More broken promises.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mrs. McDougall: I think the statement made last night by the Minister of Finance for Quebec reflects some misunderstanding of the formula which was arrived at last year. All the provinces are treated equally and Quebec received half the equalization payment. But because the Quebec economy is doing so much better, the percentage does not work out quite the way it did in the first place. But Quebec is also doing well under the policies of this Government.

DISASTERS

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—SITUATION OF CANADIAN TRAVELLERS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Yesterday the Minister said in response to my question: "At the present time there is not a health risk for travellers to Poland in terms of radiation effects from the nuclear disaster in the U.S.S.R." This morning The Ottawa Citizen announced a joint statement by the Minister of State for External Affairs and the Minister of National Health and Welfare withdrawing diplomatic staff and families because of the continuing uncertainty of the dangers remaining downwind—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is there a question?

Mr. Benjamin: Will the Minister of National Health and Welfare clarify just what is the situation with regard to travelling Canadians? Will he see to it that the same efforts which are being made on behalf of families of diplomatic staffs made regarding Canadian travellers to Poland?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have said in the House, and in fact the critic for the Hon. Member's own Party has said the same thing, that if we could get more up-to-date on site information it would be very helpful. I did an update last night along with the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I can say to the Hon. Member this morning, as I did last night, that not only are we moving out families, we are contacting the Canadian community in Poland. From a point of view of prudence, we are advising Canadians not to travel to Poland at this time. That is the point we have been making since last night. What the Hon. Member is asking me is somehow at this time to be able to get IATA or international airlines also to refund money—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Supplementary question.

TRAVELLERS' AIRFARE COSTS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister if he will arrange that the powers of the Government be used, since I gave people travelling on a flight to Warsaw today the Minister's advice of yesterday, and see to it that when those people have to return and are penalized with extra airfare that they obtain refunds or are allowed cancellation insurance?

• (1200)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, along with the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and I am sure the Minister of Transport, we will take whatever steps we can to protect Canadian travellers. I regret that that information has to be updated, which is what we are doing. As I have told the Hon. Member, we are doing it on the basis of the conditions and the information that we are receiving. Some airlines have, in fact, offered refunds. I cannot state today whether all airlines are doing the same thing.

POINT OF ORDER

HANSARD—TIME OF DELIVERY

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, copies of yesterday's Hansard were delivered to Hon. Members in their seats in the House rather than being distributed at the usual time, which is early in the morning, to their offices. With Hansard turning up at about 11.50 a.m. it is very difficult for Members to prepare properly for Question Period and to prepare generally for debate. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to take steps to see that this is not repeated.

Mr. Speaker: I sympathize with the Hon. Member's concerns. We had a glitch this morning. I am trying to ensure that it does not happen again.

EQUALITY RIGHTS

On the Order: Private Members' Business

March 3, 1986—Mr. Robinson—That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should implement the recommendations of the sub-committee on Equality Rights of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs:

(1) That all trades and occupations in the Canadian Armed Forces be open to women.

(2) That Canadian Armed Forces practices relating to the employment and promotion of women be monitored by the Canadian Human Rights Commission and that progress in revising policies in the manner we recommend be evaluated by the Commission at regular intervals.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions between the Parties. I think that if Your Honour were to put the following draft order to the House you would find that it would be unanimously accepted. I have provided copies to the other two Parties and I have a copy for the table. It states:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, the item listed as number one on the Order of Precedence of Private Members' Business in today's Order Paper and Notices shall be placed at the bottom of the said Order of Precedence for the next sitting day; and

Provided that the House shall continue with the business before it at 4.00 o'clock p.m. this day until the ordinary daily hour of adjournment.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, this proposed order represents the results of consultations between the House Leaders. We are prepared to agree to it.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

TRANSPORT—PRESENTATION OF SEVENTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Vince Dantzer (Okanagan North): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 99, I have the honour to present the seventh report of the Standing Committee on Transport. The report deals exhaustively with the Canadian National Railway pension system and specifically answers, in detail, certain fears and certain complaints of many pensioners of the CNR system. It also makes recommendations for future administrations of the fund.

ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES—PRESENTATION OF REVISED FIRST REPORT

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 99, I have the honour to present the revised first report of the Standing Committee on Energy, Mines and Resources.

PETITIONS

ASSESSMENT OF CN MAINTENANCE FACILITIES—MONCTON SHOPS

Mr. Dennis H. Cochrane (Moncton): Mr. Speaker, you will be pleased to note that this is the twenty-first time I have been up, and the last, on petitions relating to the CN shops in Moncton. Once again this petition points out to Members of the House of Commons the fears which exist in our community with regard to the assessment currently being conducted by Canadian National. The petitioners are asking Members of Parliament to pay attention to the situation and to attempt to prevent in any way any downgrading of these facilities, which would have a drastic effect on the employment picture in southeastern New Brunswick.

REINSTATEMENT OF UI BENEFITS

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition to present signed by citizens of Restigouche. They state in their petition that the Unemployment Insurance Commission is saying that Mr. James Bertin of R.R. 1, Nash Creek, New Brunswick, is not eligible for UI benefits due to the fact that he received vacation pay and severance pay. The petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to have Mr. Bertin's UI benefits reinstated beginning with a two-week waiting period after March 11, 1986.

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Brian White (Dauphin—Swan River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by 89 residents of the federal riding of Portage—Marquette. The citizens express their concern about federal taxes applied to gasoline. They ask that Parliament consider withdrawing all of these taxes and call a First Ministers' Conference to discuss methods by which provinces could also reduce their taxation levels.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Monday, April 28, 1986, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a Legislative Committee; and the amendment Mr. Murphy (p. 12683).

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of Bill C-96 before the House today is to reduce federal contributions to post-secondary education by 2 per cent as of April 1, 1986. The Conservative Government wants to take more than $8 billion away from the provinces over the next five years.

For the province of Quebec, my own province, this reduction introduced by the Conservative Government represents more than $2 billion. We have seen its effect on the Budget brought down by the Government of Quebec last night, when that Government was obliged to levy a surtax on company profits for the year 1986-87, to compensate for the potential loss in transfer payments to the province. The surtax levied by the Quebec Government is expected to raise about $152 million during the current year, which equals the amount lost as a result of federal cutbacks.

Mr. Speaker, as far as I am concerned, this is one of the most important Bills we have had for debate in this House. Education should be at the top of the list of a national Government's priorities.

For some time, Canadians have realized, and I am sure you will agree, Mr. Speaker, that education forms the very basis of our social, economic and cultural wealth. That is why Canadians, through their Government, have provided almost universal access to the various forms of post-secondary education and the various training programs available.

Today, international competition compels us to take a very close look at the very foundation of the wealth of our society, and I am referring to education in every form, and especially higher education.

This Bill shows that the Government does not understand what is at stake. It is clear that the Government has its priorities all wrong. Instead of leading the way in post-secondary education, the Conservative Government has shown Canadians, by this Bill and by what it has done since the election for research and education, that education and research are not one of its priorities and that they are not important to the Conservative Government.

We know that this has been a rather controversial issue for many years. We also know, Mr. Speaker, the important role played by the federal Government in post-secondary education. I think we should remember the facts.

Mr. Speaker, under the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Established Programs Financing Act, 1977, the Canadian Government pays 80 per cent of post-secondary education costs. This is the legislation we are amending with the Bill now before the House. Pursuant to the Act, the federal Government's fiscal transfers have soared since 1977, such increases being geared to the country's rising Gross National Product. And of course we know that certain provinces did not give the same priority to education and used these federal Government funds for other purposes. It is common knowledge that some provinces spend transferred education or even health funds on road construction or other provincial priority projects.

Mr. Speaker, this situation has led to a crisis in Canadian universities and colleges, and conditions have been growing worse since 1978. The Liberal-Government-sponsored Johnson report highlighted some of the consequences of this crisis. First, the Gross National Product share allotted by Governments to universities and colleges dropped from 1.35 per cent in 1977-78 to 1.24 per cent in 1984-85. Here again this can be traced back to provincial policies, because the federal Government contributions have always matched GNP growth.

During the same period, Mr. Speaker, university and college registrations went up 27 and 36 per cent respectively, and Government assistance for basic operations rose by only 2.5 per cent in real terms. Real expenditures per student have been decreasing steadily since 1977 and 1978.

The result is obvious, Mr. Speaker—the quality of teaching is affected. The number of students per teacher is increasing considerably. Teachers cannot give the same kind of attention to their students. Equipment is getting more and more obsolete. Over the last few months and years, the situation has been described by many as close to a national crisis. I will come back to this in a moment.

After the last elections, the Liberal Government commissioned a study by Mr. Al Johnson. I would like to point out a few highlights of his report. First, he made a recommendation that is quite complex, but in essence it suggests the Federal Government should make a commitment to maintain its contributions to post-secondary education at a level commensurate with the increase in the Gross National Product and should ask provinces to maintain the same rate of increase.

Whether the Government accepts the solution recommended by Mr. Johnson or not is of little importance. What I find shocking, Mr. Speaker, is that this Conservative Government, through its actions, completely abdicates its responsibility to post-secondary education. It does not even recognize that responsibility, although it was very clearly identified by Mr. Johnson.

I would like to quote from the current Act, which is referred to by Mr. Johnson on page 4 of his report.

There is a section in the Act under which the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard)—who unfortunately is not here today, and I do not know if his Parliamentary Secretary is here either, although I hope he or she is—anyway there is in the Act a section under which the Secretary of State shall, and I quote:

> "as an essential and continuing indication of the interest of the Government of Canada expressed by the funding arrangements in respect of the post-secondary education financing program . . . consult with the governments of the provinces with regard . . . to post-secondary education."

In other words, Mr. Speaker, that section recognizes the "essential and continuing indication of the interest" of the Canadian Government in post-secondary education.

To show how little the Tory Government understands the essential role of the Canadian Government and of Parliament in this area, I need only quote from an article published in Le Devoir of February 6, 1986, where the Secretary of State is quoted as saying: "Provinces are getting federal monies but it is their responsibility to allot it according to their priorities." There is not a single word concerning the Federal Government there. But interestingly, only two months later, in an article published in La Presse on April 14, 1986, the same Secretary of State seemed to have learned a lot of things during those two-odd months.

The reporter Mr. Jannard quotes Mr. Bouchard, the Secretary of State, as saying:

The Federal Government has a role in education which is more than simply providing provinces with money without looking at where the funds are going—

And then Mr. Bouchard says this:

Following the growing recriminations of students, deans, professors in colleges and universities, the Minister confides that sometimes he gets rather impatient and that if the Prime Minister agreed, he would initiate discussions with the provinces which could create some frictions.

But what is going on, what is it they want? That was on April 14, 1986 and now the Government is tabling a Bill which entirely ignores the federal role played in education, which is inconsistent with the legislation now in effect and with the statements made by the Secretary of State himself. It is rather amusing to read what he said:

—I understand today the position of Pierre Trudeau or Serge Joyal who had a portfolio under the previous Liberal administration.

This is quite a reversal on the part of the Secretary of State, except that we have noted that his comments are not reflected in the Bill before us, which is inconsistent with what he said in that article only a few weeks ago.

Then what is the consequence of the irresponsibility shown by the Conservative Governement? Firstly, it is tranferring its deficit to the provinces; secondly, it is taking unilateral action without seeking the advice of the provinces. Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government is also violating the promises and commitments it made during the last election campaign, but this is nothing new, because we are used to broken promises since the very first day after the last election. It is a routine Canadians are quite used to by now. They know where to stand. They will not forget those broken promises when the next election comes.

[English]

I should like to quote from an article which appeared in The Toronto Star on January 31, 1986, wherein David Vice, President of Northern Telecom, who had appeared before a Senate committee stated the following:

Canada needs a "dynamic, well-supported system of education, with recognizable centres of excellence" to stay competitive in the world economy—

He raised the same problem to which I referred earlier in my remarks. Also he said:

"Instead we find crumbling structures, inordinately high student-faculty ratios and poorly equipped laboratories.

The emergence in Canada of distinguished research and teaching centres—comparable to Harvard, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, or Stanford—seems next to impossible."

He went on to say that no aspect of the solution to the country's economic ills would be more important than the subject of our educational system. He called for a reordering of priorities. In fact, he called upon the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to spend more money on education and less on other areas. As well he called upon the Government and the provinces to convene a national conference on the crisis in higher education and to work together to develop a national policy.

We see no leadership of this nature from the Government. On the contrary, as I have said, we have seen a total abdication of its responsibilities in the area of post-secondary education. We see the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) suddenly awakening in the month of April and realizing the responsibilities of the federal Government in the area of post-secondary education, the vital role which it plays. He now says that he understands how Pierre Trudeau and Serge Joyal acted and felt in their day. However, we have a Bill before us which contradicts completely the role of the federal Government and the words of the Secretary of State.

In the same article it is indicated that he would take on the fight only if the Prime Minister would allow him. We can only conclude from that that it is the Prime Minister who does not give a damn about the future of education in Canada.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for my hon. colleague. I have here an editorial written by Michel Roy which appeared in La Presse on March 11, 1985, and which says the following:

When the existing agreements (1982-87) were negotiated in 1981 and 1982, the central Government—

In other words, the previous Government of which he was a Member.

—was doing everything in its power to reduce the massive provincial transfers. Indeed, these transfers were increasing at an incredible rate while the problem of the federal deficit, which has now reached $35 billion, was getting worse.

He wrote this in 1985.

The decision was made to limit the costs of established programs—

Since this new provision had been met by loud protests, Ottawa had agreed to extend until March 31, 1985, the tax revenue guarantee. The provinces had therefore known for three years that they would not receive the amounts they had expected for 1985-86. This was not a decision made by Mr. Mulroney and it is not a surprise for Quebec.

Naturally, it would be useful to improve the equalization system whose purpose is to bring about a more equitable distribution of revenue, to promote equality of opportunities and to ensure an acceptable level of services.

However, at a time when the central Government is launching a much needed fight against our monstrous national deficit—

A deficit which was created by the Party of the Hon. Member.

—the moment would not be appropriate for an increase in federal transfers to the provinces, which are in a better financial position than the Federal Government.

I would like the Hon. Member to comment this editorial.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, I can see that the Hon. Member is skilled in reading editorials. However, it would be nice to hear her own opinions occasionally. I can simply refer her to a graph contained in the Budget of the Quebec Government tabled yesterday evening which shows the impact of the action taken by the previous Liberal Government on the financing of established programs in relation to Quebec. We can see that there is a slight decrease over a period of five or six years, but there is a very substantial decrease up to the year 2000. I may not be expressing myself correctly, but there is a rather minimal decrease for the next few years. However, if we look at the impact of the action taken by this Conservative Government, we find a total abdication of responsibilities by the Federal Government as concerns post-secondary education and health care.

In its budget, the Quebec Government states that the Federal Government, by applying this formula another 11 years, could also withdraw from the financing of health care.

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has failed to answer my question. I wanted him to comment on an editorial which claimed that over the past three years, the provinces had . . . that they would not get for fiscal year 1985-86 the amounts they were counting on, and moreover that it was not the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who had made this decision, but that steps had to be taken because of the monstrous deficit, to use the author's expression.

The Hon. Member has failed to answer my question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, I will simply tell the Hon. Member that I do not agree with the editorial writer's interpretation of the deficit.

It seems to me that the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly), through the article she is quoting, is giving us an interpretation which does not reflect the issue as a whole. Could she indicate to us what the Government is going to do to reduce the deficit on our hi-tech products? She must certainly be aware that we are faced with a deficit of some $12 billion and that if this deficit was—

An Hon. Member: It is not relevant.

Mr. Berger: It is quite relevant. If we could eliminate this deficit, we could create in Canada some 120,000 jobs in hi-tech industries, and your deficit which you keep on mentioning would disappear very rapidly.

Mr. Prud'homme: If it is for a question, Mr. Speaker, I will yield the floor to my colleague the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

• (1230)

[English]

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger). He made an excellent representation which showed a very sound understanding of the issues. His constituents are certainly well served.

Does he agree with the statement made last night by the Finance Minister of the Province of Quebec, Mr. Gérard Levesque? He said:

> At a time when our population is aging and costs are going up, Ottawa was withdrawing from the financing of essential services.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for her kind words. I will pass them on to my friends. Of course I agree with the Minister of Finance from Quebec. He is a Liberal. He has his priorities well placed and he knows what he is talking about.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Berger: He has been in the National Assembly for 25 years. Unfortunately we do not have much of that kind of experience in this House of Commons. We have just heard from some of these rookie Members who obviously have not woken up to the realities of life in this country.

[Translation]

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I should like simply to ask my hon. colleague, since there are going to be other debates this afternoon, if he could define what some people call consultation. What does that mean in his mind, because this is what provincial premiers have been complaining about? What does consultation mean in his view?

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. Perhaps I should reply to him by saying instead what consultation is not.

I would like to remind Hon. Members of the House about the words of another great Liberal of this country, the Premier of Ontario, who stated, during the Federal-Provincial Conference in Halifax, in reply to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and I quote:

[English]

> I think it takes an unbecoming amount of temerity to unilaterally break an agreement we are all counting on.

This was just before the following indignant Mulroney counter:

> I would think it takes an unbecoming degree of temerity to suggest we are any less committed to hospital beds or schoolrooms—to these noble promises than anyone else.

The Premier of Ontario put the Prime Minister of Canada in his place very quickly by saying what I quoted earlier:

> I think it takes an unbecoming amount of temerity to unilaterally break an agreement we are all counting on.

We know how the Prime Minister can be so eloquent. He has the gift of the gab as we say back home. He refused to call this a cut. Mr. Peterson said:

> You don't call it a cut. You could call it a breach of faith. You could call it breaking a promise.

Mr. Boudria: Tories break promises?

Mr. Berger: As Gertrude Stein once said: "It is a rose by any other name".

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Mr. Speaker, I join the debate on Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act. Under the terms of Part VI of the existing Act, the federal Government provides financial assistance to provinces in respect of health care and post-secondary education. These provinces receive substantial federal financial support because of the national interest of these vital services. As previously stated by government Members, this Bill will result in a more moderate and sustainable rate of increase in Establishing Programs Financing in future years.

I would like to respond to the allegations that EPF transfers have been reduced. Let us be clear about this from the outset. Federal transfers will not be reduced this year or in any other year. They will increase and increase substantially. While actual increases will depend upon economic performance and population change, these transfers will grow about 5 per cent each year. We consider these increases to be fair and reasonable. This 5 per cent average growth rate of increase in EPF over the next five years will be greater than the estimated 3.2 per cent average annual increase in federal programs expenditures generally. As you know, Mr. Speaker, according to the budgetary program we are going to hold Government expenditures to an increase of 3.2 per cent across the board. In this instance, the transfers under EPF will be 5 per cent.

Total EPF transfers over the next five years are expected to amount to over $90 billion or about $25 billion more than over the previous 5 year period. The EPF transfer this year will amount to $16.7 billion. This is expected to rise by roughly $1 billion each year to reach a total of about $20.6 billion by 1990-1991. These increase should allow provinces to improve health care and post-secondary education services.

The legislation provides that the contribution will be determined in the same manner as before, except that effective April 1, 1986, the escalator will be reduced by 2 percentage points for 1986-87 and subsequent years. That reflects the drop in inflation to its present level. Fundamentals of EPF have not been altered by this legislation. Under the terms of the Established Programs Financing Arrangements, provinces receive equal per capita federal contributions. Increases in the transfers are linked to growth in the economy as reflected in the gross national product figures and to increases in the population of each province.

The federal contribution is not determined by provincial expenditure. I mention this only to caution anyone labouring under the impression that the old pre 1977 cost sharing arrangements for provincial medical care, hospital care insurance and post-secondary institutional operating costs are still in effect. This approach was rejected in 1977 by both levels of Government in favour of the present arrangement.

This Bill should come as no surprise. It is an integral part of the Government's fiscal program and implements an important decision announced by the Government some time ago. Members will recall that in November, 1984, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) released an agenda for economic renewal which said in part that if the federal Government is to contain its expenditures in general it is appropriate to ask whether transfers to the provinces should be insulated from policies of restraint. In the Budget speech of May, 1985, the Minister of Finance said the following:

> To spread the burden of expenditure reduction fairly, the Government will also be seeking to limit the rate of growth of transfers to provinces to yield annual savings of $2 billion by the end of the decade. There will be no absolute reduction in federal transfers. Even after this adjustment, federal transfers to provincial governments will grow significantly over the balance of this decade.

To slow the existing EPF growth rate a number of proposals were discussed with the provinces. The Minister of Finance consulted with his provincial counterparts throughout 1985 immediately following the May Budget, and with the first Ministers in September, November, and December. Anyone who says that there has not been consultation is not aware of the facts. There has been a substantial amount of consultation with the provinces over that period of time. This legislation reflects the outcome of these extensive consultations.

The EPF provides clear and compelling evidence of the importance the Government attaches to quality health care and post-secondary education and to our country's medical and academic communities. Moreover, the support provided through EPF is augmented substantially by other federal expenditures on students' education, training, health research and so forth. The Department of the Secretary of State and the Departments of National Health and Welfare and Indian Affairs and Northern Development, among others, are involved in augmenting federal support for education and health.

The Department of Finance is also involved in helping to defray the costs faced by the infirm and elderly, and in assisting students through various provisions of the Income Tax Act. We all became familiar with that when we reviewed the recent Budget of the Minister of Finance. The federal Government's support for health and post-secondary education is wide-ranging and comprehensive.

I want to emphasize the significance of federal transfer payments, both as an integral element of the Government's comprehensive deficit reduction program and as a vital bridge to national reconciliation. Federal cash and transfers to the provinces total roughly $27 billion. These transfers are not only large, but have been growing rapidly and will continue to increase in the years ahead. Over the period from 1957 to 1986 these transfers have increased at an average annual rate of nearly 17 per cent. The comparable figure for Canada's GNP over the same period is just under 10 per cent. Further increases in EPF of this magnitude simply could not be sustained.

To secure economic growth in Canada and to provide jobs for Canadians the Government has consistently sought to encourage private initiative to improve the effectiveness of government and to control the national debt. Public debt charges are growing in size and gaining in momentum. If allowed to roll on unimpeded, they will threaten our very ability to contribute to the vital social services Canadians now enjoy. We should all remember that we can only provide what we can afford.

To bring the growth of debt under control the Government has confronted the difficult job of reducing expenditures and increasing revenues in a fair and balanced way. The recent Budget is just the latest of a series of steps taken to reduce the federal deficit, primarily through expenditure reductions. Slowing the rate of growth of EPF transfers is part of this plan.

This legislation cannot be reviewed in isolation. It must be seen in the context of the hard economic and fiscal circumstances which compel Parliament to consider these measures. Given our limited resources, indeed, given a lamentable legacy of living beyond our means, I would argue that the annual increases of about 5 per cent are fair and even generous, and that $90 billion over the next five years represents a significant federal contribution to the betterment of health care and post-secondary education in Canada. I am satisfied that this legislation is both fair and equitable.

I would like to conclude my remarks by making three points. First, I suggest that the change is fair and reasonable because no balanced and comprehensive deficit reduction program could exclude transfer payments. Federal transfers to other levels of Government constitute a large portion of the total federal expenditures. If transfer payments were excluded from the imperatives of Government restraint, other programs in areas of exclusive federal jurisdiction would have to bear an unreasonable and disproportionately heavy burden of restraint. Of course, as I indicated earlier, we are in a position of reassuring provincial Governments that EPF entitlements will continue to rise in each and every future year and that EPF increases will actually exceed the average annual increase accorded to federal programs over this whole period. As I said, the average federal program, as was set forth in the Budget, will be allowed to increase by about 3.2 per cent and these transfer payments will increase 5 per cent over the next five years to a total of $90 billion.

The second point I want to make is that it can be demonstrated that this change is an equitable way to proceed, and that all regions and provinces are being treated equally. Unlike equalization payments which give important supplementary financial support to benefit those Canadians who reside in less wealthy provinces, EPF entitlements will continue on an equal per capita basis and will provide basic support for services to all Canadians regardless of where they live. No province will be affected any more or any less than any other under the terms of this legislation.

The third point I want to make, Mr. Speaker, is that we have provided for an orderly transition. A national goal of $2 billion in annual EPF savings by 1990-91 will not be achieved by abrupt and radical reduction imposed overnight. Provincial governments have been given adequate and advance notice and an adequate opportunity to adjust to these new arrangements. The dynamic fiscal arrangements and mechanisms developed over the years between the federal and provincial Governments have evolved in response to changing economic conditions and to allow provinces to meet the changing social needs of their residents.

Circumstances today dictate that Canadians rightly demand a balanced and comprehensive program to limit and control federal expenditures. Surely it is essential that the growth of transfers be modified to bring the rate of increase more in line with other federal expenditures. I believe that we have done so in a way which is both fair and equitable.

I ask all Hon. Members to reflect seriously upon these remarks. I look forward to a fruitful discussion both here and in committee. I respectfully ask that Parliament give its consent to these measures so that we may proceed to put in place the arrangements now widely anticipated.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments.

Mr. Berger: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his contribution to this debate. He talked a lot about the federal Government's financial problems, problems of which we are well aware. He did not, as far as I could tell, address the essence of the problem here, which is our university system. Is he concerned about the crisis in our universities today? Does he recognize, as the Johnson report pointed out, that Government support for universities since 1977-78 has increased by only 2.5 per cent? Compare that with the fact that enrollment has gone up by 25 per cent in universities and 36 per cent in community or other colleges. Is he concerned about this problem? What ideas does he have about it? What choices would he offer to the provinces? Should they close universities or raise tuition fees? What is the roll of the federal Government? Should it just say, as it is doing now, that it is going to cut its spending and they can deal with the problem? Does he feel that is a satisfactory way for a national Government to deal with national institutions?

Mr. Kempling: Mr. Speaker, the whole country knows we have a very serious deficit which we have to contain. Everyone has to play a part. If we believe the comments of the hon. gentleman we would have to believe that the administration of the universities is perfect, that provincial financial administration is perfect, and there can be no further savings or efficiencies. I know from my own experience in business how to bring things into order. He knows that from his own experience as well.

Certainly we are concerned about the universities. The quality of university graduates is one of my major concerns. However, when we look at the over-all problem we have, it is incumbent upon us to do whatever we can to effect efficiencies in federal expenditures.

As I said, EPF transfers were growing at a rate of 17 per cent annually. We have now said that federal Government expenditures, which were growing at a rate much higher than 17 per cent a year, are now going to grow at the rate of 3.2 per cent a year. We are going to keep the increase in transfers to 5 per cent. We are going to give the provinces $90 billion over the next five years. Given advance notice, knowing how much they are going to get, the provinces can plan accordingly and take care of the concerns which the Hon. Member has raised.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling) talked about efficiency in the universities and hospitals. He talked about $90 billion over the next five years. The 1977 formula provided for increases in line with the GNP which is projected to increase between now and 1990 at a rate of 7 per cent. The Hon. Member bragged about an increase in transfer payments of 5 per cent. Under the old formula there would have been a transfer of $97.7 billion instead of the $92.1 billion which they will now get, a cut of more than $5 billion. We all know that the universities and hospitals have pared themselves to the bone financially as a result of pressure by both federal and provincial Governments. How does he reconcile that with what he said about this being a fair proposition?

Mr. Kempling: Mr. Speaker, in financial matters you have to keep your eye on the apple all the time. Our objective in the budgetary proposals is to bring the deficit in line. We have today probably one of the best health care systems in the world, bar none. We are going to see to it that it stays that way. We believe that management and nurturing of the resources directed towards our health care and educational systems can be improved.

We think we are being fair with this formula. It has been agreed to by the First Ministers and provincial Ministers of Finance. The old 1977 formula has been thrown out the window. I think this is a fair and equitable way to proceed to address the problem. The problem is to reduce our deficit to the lowest possible level within the guidelines as set by the Minister of Finance. If we do that, it will be to the benefit of all Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme). A question or comment.

Mr. Prud'homme: Certainly, Mr. Speaker.

I have listened quite attentively to the Hon. Member, as I always do when he rises in the House. Because he is so knowledgeable about not only the federal administration, but also the various provincial administrations, I should like simply to ask him—

[English]

I will ask him in the language he is more familiar with about which services he would suggest that provincial Governments cut; emergency health departments, cancer research programs? We all know he understands very well the difficulties of provincial Governments. He is saying we must go down the avenue of cutting these payments. Would he also be willing to make suggestions to various provincial Governments as to how they should put their houses in order?

Mr. Kempling: My friend has been in this House a good number of years. I greatly respect his views. With all due respect, he knows very well that it is not our responsibility to tell the provinces where and what to cut. We make transfer payments to the provinces under specific arrangements. We are telling them that they are going to have $90 billion over the next five years and it is up to them to cut the cloth accordingly. I know the Hon. Member does not seriously expect us to tell them to cut this health service or that health service or reduce this university course, or whatever he has in mind. That is not our responsibility. We have put forward what I believe is a reasonable proposition. It has been discussed in great detail with the provinces. I think by and large it has their agreement and concurrence.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock today.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, it is a little more than four years since we first debated the infamous Bill C-12 in this House and in the parliamentary committee. That was the Liberal Bill that six and fived transfers for post-secondary education and health care. I remember that debate particularly vividly because I was post-secondary education spokesperson at the time for the New Democratic Party. The Conservatives were then in opposition and joined with me in deploring this cut-back in transfers for education and medicare. The Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands (Miss MacDonald), who has a university in her constituency, the renowned Queen's University, was particularly outspoken and critical of the then Liberal Government's disastrous policies in the area of post-secondary education and, in particular, their six and fiving of the transfer payments under the Established Programs Financing arrangements. There were certainly at least two dozen members of the Conservative Party, many of whom are still in the House, who joined the Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands and myself in denouncing the Liberal Government's lack of care and concern about post-secondary education.

Here we are today, just over four years later, with Bill C-96 before us, which hands out even more drastic cuts in the financing of post-secondary education and medical care than did Bill C-12. We have this Bill coming forward, and many other members in this Party have already alluded to this, which no matter how you look at it constitutes real cuts in the funds intended for these purposes. Of course there will be some increase, but the increase there would have been had this Bill not been put in place would have been, by the end of this decade, something in the order of an additional $5 billion to the post-secondary institutions in this country. It seems to me that that is a cut. If you would have gotten $5 billion and you do not get it now, that is a cut, far more serious actually even than the six and fiving of the increases back in 1981-82.

Those very same Conservatives who argued about the importance of our colleges and our universities to the young people of this country and to the future of this country seem to have lost their voices. Since the election of September, 1984, I do not think I have read a single speech from any of those Conservatives, or, indeed, from any Conservative, including the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), on this subject of the importance and the value of our colleges and universities. There may have been one that escaped my notice, but I cannot recall a single speech about our young people and their education.

I wonder if the Government really has its priorities in order. I wonder if this has been a lapse that they have not addressed these issues, or whether they have just decided that these are not significant and important matters.

On the one hand the Government has been saying that we have to have economic growth, economic development, new secondary manufacturing industries and new knowledge based industries if we are to have a strong economy at home and to be internationally competitive. Indeed, the External Affairs Minister's Green Paper on Canada's international relations has the first words in its title, "international competitiveness". The whole thrust of that part of the Government's economic policy has been to make Canada internationally competitive with nations such as Japan, for example. Certainly that would seem to be, judging from everything the Government has said, a very high priority of this Government. I accept that it is, but if it is, then why in the world has the Government said nothing about helping to provide to the young people of this country the knowledge and the skills that are absolutely essential if its goal of Canada being internationally competitive is to be realized. It is sheer folly to talk about a knowledge-based society and do nothing, or very little, to ensure that that knowledge is developed, expanded for the enrichment of the individuals concerned, of course, but for the enrichment of the whole society and for the salience of Canada on the world scene. I hope during the course of this debate someone on the Government side, because there are some university academics on the Government side, will talk about what has happened under the Liberals to our universities and colleges and what will happen under the Conservatives if legislation such as we are discussing today is passed.

Another aspect which I believe should concern us all, additional to our providing for a real knowledge-based society, is that cuts like this, following on the cuts we had with the six and five program, will increasingly make our university and college system the preserve of the wealthy. That is already happening as a result of past actions of the Liberals. It really breaks our hearts when we talk to people in our ridings who care about education to see almost the same situation as in the 1940s or 1950s. These people feel there will be no chance of their sons and daughters getting to college or university because of the increasingly prohibitive costs. We cannot cut back on public funding of education without having to raise tuition fees and limit enrolments. We cannot do that without our having to say to our young people: "I am sorry. You are going to have to finance an awful lot more of this yourself". If they are lucky enough to get into college or university, they come out with a debt of perhaps $30,000. I know families where the thought of taking on a debt of $30,000 is unthinkable. They cannot see that as a real option for them.

We are already going back and we are going to go back even farther to where we were three decades ago in terms of accessibility to our colleges and universities. We are restricting accessibility with admission increasingly going to the haves and being denied the have-nots, whether on the basis of income or region because, of course, in some regions the situation is worse than in others. Surely we are going to hear something from the Government as to whether or not education, and I am emphasizing post-secondary education, is a human right in this country. This is a country rich in history, resources and talent, native talent. I have always argued that talent is randomly distributed throughout a population. It is not just lodged with those who have means. That Canada, of all countries, would deny the basic human right of an education, is intolerable.

In addition then to my first argument, that if we are going to live in the new information society, which is highly knowledge based, we must prepare our young people for it, my second argument is that even if that were not the case, there is a basic human right to education at all levels in Canada. Therefore, accessibility must remain or become once again a fundamental principle in the funding of our education system.

There is a third point I would like to raise today in this debate. If we continue these cut-backs, which I may say are having a drastic effect on our graduate schools as well as our undergraduate and professional schools, we are going to lose talents we have already developed in the past. It is becoming increasingly difficult for a young person who has achieved a PhD to continue doing his research in a university or, indeed, in any other atmosphere. He is simply not getting those opportunities. He is driving a taxi or doing something else.

Indeed, the numbers of young people in our graduate programs are drying up. If we could just cast our vision ahead, say, five or six years, we will find, as many experts have pointed out, that we will not have the young people ready for university and college teaching and research. We are going to need them and we will not have them. Those who are able to do that today and cannot get jobs because of all the cut-backs are going to lose all the knowlege and talents they have developed. Then there will be no more teachers following them. Certainly by the mid-1990s, Canada, as it did many, many years ago, is going to have to again import all its skills because it will not have developed its own or kept in tune those who have recently been in graduate schools.

I feel it is just not good enough to say: "Well, this is a provincial responsiblity. Let the provinces do it". For one thing, I do not believe the provinces, and my own province especially, are all that concerned about a knowledge based society. Nor do they care about that. However, apart from that it is not a good thing to leave it only up to the provinces, because education is a national matter. Indeed, with respect to the papers on international competitiveness of the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), education becomes a matter of international importance if Canada is going to play a significant role in trade, diplomacy and politics on the international scene.

When we debated Bill C-12 four and a half years ago almost all of us at that time, and I refer particularly to some Hon. Members of the Conservative Party, realized the significance and importance of post-secondary education, research, libraries and laboratories, of accessibility of young people and of their basic human rights. I think we all realized that then. That is why we were so outraged by Bill C-12. Where are those voices today when our outrage should be even greater, given the much greater impact on the universities and colleges of Bill C-96? This Bill means that billions and billions of dollars will not go toward building the type of society we used to say we wanted to build. This is the case whether we talk about the young people, the academics, the libraries or the laboratories. I ask Hon. Members to take another look at what we are doing. I ask them to undo it before it is too late.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly).

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, in her speech the Hon. Member showed that she feels very strongly about education, which is not surprising considering the extensive experience she had when she was, I believe, President of Simon Fraser University. Am I right? However, I have a question.

Is it not true that under the system of fiscal transfers we are discussing today in this Bill, a contribution is made by the federal Government to the provinces, according to a specific agreement, and that it is up to the provinces to use these funds according to their priorities?

In other words, if a province decides that education is a high priority, and it should be, as the Hon. Member said so eloquently, then why, despite the fact that we are going to contribute even more money through these fiscal transfers—we are reducing the rate of growth but not the total amount we are going to grant the provinces, the provinces themselves decide what their priorities are . . . According to the Constitution, education is a provincial matter. The federal Government is not responsible for ensuring the quality of education. We help with the financing.

So I do not understand why the Hon. Member seems to be making the federal Government responsible for the future of education in this country, the future of our teachers, and all this when in fact it is a matter that falls under provincial jurisdiction.

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for her question. I would like to remind her that Parliament accepted some responsibility for higher education years and years ago.

Ms. Mailly: Some!

Ms. Jewett: No, a great deal. Even before that our original grant system to the universities of the country did not go through the provinces. I speak now of the time after the Second World War when these funds went directly to the institutions. We made it clear then that federal spending took precedence in the field of post-secondary education, a field of such national and international significance.

Later, when we revised the system to a shared cost system it was done on the condition that the provinces spend the money on the purposes for which it was granted. This is a system we dropped in 1977. It was a conditional system and it should never have been dropped. Members of the New Democratic Party were the only ones who said it should not be dropped. The other two Parties in the House did not feel the same way about the issue and it was dropped. After that the provinces had to spend the money on its intended purpose or else they would not receive it.

I also remind Hon. Members that although some people said this was unconstitutional no one, including Mr. Duplessis, ever challenged in the courts the exercise of federal spending power. I think that is a significant point. Thus, I cannot accept the Hon. Member's argument that only the provinces should be concerned in this matter. It has never been a case of just the provinces being concerned.

I would point Hon. Members to what we did for the veterans after the Second World War. We instituted the most marvellous program ever instituted by any country. It was done strictly with federal funds. This, of course, applies to the post-World War II era. I agree that prior to that we did not have as much responsibility. However, no one was involved prior to that time. Our educations were paid for privately. It was only when we all realized that this was a public need and a basic human right that Governments became involved.

One of the great things about the Canadian educational system is that it does not have extremes. It does not have lousy little universities at one end and Harvards at the other, but we have some excellent institutions. I refer to Laval, Montreal, UBC, Toronto and so on. It is because we have had such a large public concern regarding education that we have such a high class system. All I am asking is that we continue to have such a system.

Mr. Tupper: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) pays the House a minor disservice when she says that there are few members of the Government speaking out in support of education and research. In fact, I believe she said that she could not recall a single speech in this regard. I would point out to her that the present Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) and his predecessor have spoken out on many occasions, both in the House and elsewhere, in support of the importance of science and technology and in support of education and research. The same is true with respect to the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard) and the Hon. Member for Nepean—Carleton (Mr. Tupper). So there are many government Members who appreciate the value of post-secondary school education. They know what it can give to the country and they are supportive of it.

Having said that, I would like to ask the Hon. Member a question. Between the time she was President of Simon Fraser University and today would she share with Members of the House what proportion of funding for post-secondary school education in her province is in fact being used for that purpose and how much is being used for the building of roads?

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, perhaps because the Hon. Member is new to the House he does not know that I have probably been the most critical British Columbian of the Socred Government in British Columbia for not having passed over to colleges and universities all of the increase in funds, such increases as there were. British Columbia, unlike other provinces, has a terrible record in this regard. I have criticized this trait since time immemorial and I continue to criticize it. The proportion of funds from the provincial budget which is directed to health and education is decreasing. I believe it is the only province in which this is happening.

Having said that, the point I am trying to make, and the one which I am trying to emphasize, is that there should be a system of accountability. There used to be such a system. In debate on Bill C-12 the Tories joined myself and other members of the New Democratic Party in saying: "Let's have a system of accountability". Up until 1977 we had such a system. When I mentioned Conservatives not speaking out in this regard I was referring to those Conservatives who were so exuberant in their speeches four years ago. The Hon. Member for Nepean—Carleton (Mr. Tupper) was not in the House at that time. I mentioned specifically the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands, since we had such a terrific campaign going against the six and five program back then. What has happened since then is that I do not see any demand for accountability being made by members of the Conservative Party. Will someone from the Conservative side rise to say: "Yes, the system was better prior to 1977 when one could not get a dollar unless one spent it for the purposes intended"? Will someone please say that we are going to have a system of accountability?

The only thing we won from the Liberals in 1984 was that the provinces were to table annually how they spent the money. It was a declaratory policy but not a real policy of accountability.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my friend opposite if she would be prepared to acknowledge the substantial difference between what happened a couple of years ago when the 6 and 5 was brought in, at a time when the inflation rate was 12 per cent to 15 per cent, and what is happening now with the present Bill which will transfer an additional 5 per cent, at a time when the inflation rate is 4 per cent. That is a substantially different situation than the one of two years ago.

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, later in the day, one of my colleages will bring the particular figures before the House. I do not have the exact figures in my mind right now. Generally speaking, although what the Hon. Member has said is true, that the inflation level was much higher then than it is today, it appears as though the six and five program was a more serious and damaging policy than the present policy in Bill C-96. However, the Hon. Member will find that the actual loss in dollars between now and 1990, should this policy be passed and stay in place, will be double or triple the actual loss under Bill C-12. We can provide the actual figures but, since I do not have them in front of me, I will leave it for the moment by saying that the difference between what was lost under the 6 and 5 program and what will be lost under Bill C-96 is in the billions of dollars.

[Translation]

Mrs. Claudy Mailly (Gatineau): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-96 before the House today does not reduce fiscal transfer payments to the provinces. It merely moderates the rate of growth of these payments, and it is important to make this distinction. Up to now, Opposition Members have been talking about cutbacks and reductions, and also about a lessening of our responsibility with respect to the provincial areas to which we contribute. The truth of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, that Bill C-96 moderates the rate of growth of these payments but does not reduce them. In fact, they are going to increase.

According to the legislation, the annual average growth rate of EPF transfers over the next five years will be about 5 per cent. The federal Government expects to transfer to the provinces more than $90 billion in cash and in fiscal support, in other words, in total EPF tax points during this period. Conversely, transfers totalled about $65 billion over the last five years. It is therefore erroneous, Mr. Speaker, to say that we are reducing our commitments to the provinces. On the contrary, this is a clear indication of the Government's commitment to provide substantial support for provincial health and education programs.

EPF transfers help to finance provincial programs such as hospital insurance, health insurance, additional health care and grants for post-secondary education. The provinces allocate funds according to their own priorities, as I said earlier to the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett). To give some idea of the amounts involved in these transfers, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote a few figures.

For the fiscal year 1985-86, federal transfers to other administration levels amount to $20.1 billion in cash payments and $7.2 billion in tax points—a total of $27.3 billion. Mr. Speaker, cash transfers account for 19.4 per cent of all federal outlays, which is another way of saying that they are a major federal expenditure.

Needless to say, the revenues which make it possible for the central Government to spend money come from the same working taxpayer who pays his or her share of provincial taxes as well. We must keep everything in perspective when we say that 19.4 per cent of all federal outlays are earmarked for such fiscal transfers: they represent the third largest Government expenditure, after the public debt service and program expenditures.

Over the past 18 years, Mr. Speaker, since 1957, these transfers have been increasing at an annual rate of 18 per cent, whereas Canada's Gross National Product yearly growth has been slightly below 10 per cent. Mr. Speaker, this is one factor which the Opposition is prepared to gloss over, for under the formula we are supposed to take the GNP growth into consideration. And yet these expenditures have been increasing at a much faster rate than the GNP in the last 18 years. Disregarding for a moment the cost of servicing the national debt—our huge national debt which is the source of so much concern and which, as it happens, forces us to slow down the growth of these transfers—transfer payments rank first among ever increasing federal expenditures.

Even so, Mr. Speaker, Established Programs Financing is not the main provincial transfer program, not by a long shot. However, it is the one where costs have increased the most these last few years. This involves a payment per capita to the provinces which covers approximately 50 per cent of the expenditures of provincial Governments for, as I have already noted, health insurance, hospital insurance and the operational costs of post-secondary education institutions. EPF transfers have increased based on the growth rate of the GNP during the previous three years in relation to population growth.

Based on present projections, they would increase by over 7 per cent a year during the next five years under the existing formula. To make savings and reduce the deficit, this growth will be reduced by 2 per cent. This will result in savings of $2 billion in 1990-91, but this will not begin this year because the previous formula has been maintained for 1985-86. We are beginning this year. In 1990-91, there will have been a $2 billion savings, which will help to reduce the deficit. The rate of growth will be reduced only slightly and will remain much higher than inflation or the rate of growth of the economy.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I must emphasize that we are not reducing transfer payments to the provinces. To say so is incorrect. EPF transfers will continue to increase quickly, at a much higher rate than other program expenditures of the federal Government. Provincial transfers will amount to $90 billion during the next five years, which is $25 billion more than during the five previous years. It is therefore a canard to say that we are reducing these expenditures.

Our commitment to health care and post-secondary education is stronger than ever. These transfers, which will represent nearly half of provincial expenditures, will continue to be paid into the provincial coffers. It is to the advantage of all Canadians that the provinces provide health and education services while showing some financial responsibility.

In this context, Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak about the Quebec provincial Budget tabled yesterday in which the Finance Minister said that, according to his own figures, since he had been expecting a rate of growth of X per cent and X million dollars, there would be a shortfall of $2 billion because of this bill. He has announced that, to compensate, he would impose a surtax on business.

There might be some expectation that the Federal Government will say: "That is really too bad!" However, for my part, I find it really too bad to use this type of creative accounting because the Provincial government has known since November 1984 that the new formula would mean a lower rate of growth.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, we have done much to improve the financial conditions of provinces generally. For example, we are aware of the fact that some of them are in underdeveloped areas of the country. They are subjected to financial constraints similar to those of the federal Government. We are also aware that Quebec has to reduce its expenditures. Incidentally, Mr. Gobeil, the provincial Treasurer, said quite adequately in his statement a few weeks ago that they have to reduce their deficit and such is the objective of the budget introduced yesterday. We are aware of their conditions.

However, we should not forget that it is specifically because we are conscious of the problems of have-not provinces that an equalization system has been set. I realize that the opposition often confuses both. I think that even yesterday, the Quebec Minister of Finances confused them. The equalization system and fiscal transfers are not the same thing. Equalization payments are made under a formula to be reviewed. In the past, the provinces were not consulted about how to come up with such a formula, but we are to do so now.

When we conclude a new agreement in 1987 at the expiry of the present one, we will consult the provinces, as we are now doing, about perequation payments which are quite different from transfer payments. They should not be confused.

The provinces will also enjoy substantial increases in their revenues during the next few years as a result of measures announced in the May budget and in view of the fact that tax revenues increase to the extent that our economy is growing.

We often meet with laughter when we keep repeating about the 580,000 jobs created. We also meet with laughter when we suggest we have the lowest interest rates in 8 years. However, Mr. Speaker, it is because we are moving with fiscal and financial responsibility that there is now the kind of interest rates that allow average Canadian families to buy homes. Hardly two years ago, rates were hovering around the 22 and 23 per cent mark and people were losing their homes.

Mr. Speaker, the move in this legislation must be viewed in the context of our overall financial responsibility and our commitment to put our affairs back in order.

Concerning the deficit, Mr. Speaker, I quoted earlier for the benefit of the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger) an editorial that appeared in La Presse over the signature of Mr. Roy, who seems to be a sensible individual. He had this to say, and I quote:

Since that new provision met with violent protest—

He was referring to the amendment to the formula used by the Federal Government. And for that reason—

—Ottawa agreed to extend to March 31st, 1985, the fiscal revenue guarantee. This means that provinces have known for three years they will not be getting the amounts they were expecting for fiscal 1985-86.

As I mentioned before, he also added the following:

Mr. Mulroney did not make that decision. And it is no surprise to Quebec.

I want to repeat that because yesterday, in the Quebec budget, there was an attempt at imputing motives to the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), motives that are not his.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude by suggesting that this legislation fits into the framework of our overall fiscal responsibility.

Up until now, we have already seen the positive results of all the steps we took in that economic area. As I said, we have seen job creations, lower interests rates, our goals for deficit reduction were reached, and we have a program for reducing the deficit. It is very well known, Mr. Speaker, that without deficit reduction, without lowering of our national debt that is a heavy burden on the Canadian Treasury, we will not have the required economic recovery.

It is absolutely necessary for the provinces as well that this economic recovery and expansion should take place, because they also need at the federal level a sound fiscal environment and responsible policies. Indeed, they suffer a lot, just as individual taxpayers naturally do, when interest rates are high. They suffer again enormously when the unemployment rate is high and when people end up on welfare after having used up their unemployment benefit entitlement.

Therefore, the purpose of this Bill is to enhance the future of our social programs, the financial responsibility of our Government and our country, and the full development of our potential.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill should not be considered as an ad hoc measure, in a void, but in the context of very serious, determined and even courageous programs, judging from the various responses. We can read about it on the front pages of newspapers when people act responsibly, just as we can read about it when others act irresponsibly, as Members of the Opposition often do. Courage was therefore required to take steps such as these.

Mr. Speaker, I find it deplorable when Members of the Opposition, anxious to hit the healines, use slogans and criticism which are so simplistic that they really obscure the reasons for introducing this Bill in the first place.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask my hon. colleagues of the Opposition to refer this Bill to the proper legislative committee as soon as possible, so that we can deal seriously in committee with a some aspects of the legislation which perhaps might be improved upon. I urge them also, instead of moving more amendments seeking to postpone for another six months or a year the referral of this Bill to the proper committee, to send it at once to this committee for serious work and consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) has the floor.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I shall be very brief. Is the Hon. Member aware of the fact that the purpose of the amendment calling for a six-month delay is to enable us to get a clearer picture of the situation? I understand that we might be able to improve the Bill in committee, but experience in the past 18 months has shown us what happened with any attempt to improve bills in Parliamentary Committees. I chaired one of them, and I did not take part in the vote. But no substantial amendment moved by the Opposition, if my memory serves me right, by either party was accepted.

In suggesting this six-month delay, we are therefore trying to give the Governments that will be directly involved a chance to make a last appeal to the Federal Government.

Would the Hon. Member therefore not agree to give the Government a chance to postpone for six months the implementation of that Bill in order to allow it to better scrutinize the impact of the Bill? There is for instance a new recently elected Government in Prince Edward Island, whatever its political colour may be. This new Government will now have to review the financial books of the province and will want to know the impact, the possible benefits, what the expected benefits were and what they will be now. It is therefore not just for the sake of delaying things that we—like the other party in this House—are calling for a six-month postponement. We are indeed trying to enable the main parties involved to come to grips with the situation. There is evidence of this in the budget tabled yesterday by the Government of Quebec which said: Look, we are going to bring in new taxation of $148 to $152 million, if I remember correctly, unless the Federal Government curbs its plans.

So would the Hon. Member, a Minister to be someday for sure—everyone hopes so—would the Hon. Member like—

An Hon. Member: It took a while in your case.

Mr. Prud'homme: You see, I have already got smiling faces all over the place, but I also have sad ones at the same time, because if she is appointed, someone else will not.

However, having said this as we are on a Friday afternoon, I would not want the Hon. Member for Blainville-Deux Montagnes (Mrs. Landry) to be sad because the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) is considered by some as a possible future Minister, but I ask the Hon. Member for Gatineau if she would care to comment on the aim and goal of the "six months"? Would the Hon. Member care to comment on those "six months"?

Mrs. Mailly: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows full well that in the Parliamentary process a bill referred to a legislative committee can be amended in some minor way but not in substance. If a bill has been introduced in the first place, it is because it is part of an established policy on a given subject. That is when its main thrust was discussed. When it comes to the committee, the general direction of the Bill cannot be changed.

I am sorry that he mentioned the Bill on employment equity. I had the privilege of sitting on that committee which he chaired, very well I would say, and we were able to make very useful amendments. But you cannot expect to change a Bill drastically. Such is the Parliamentary process.

As to the situation in Prince Edward Island, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) that the provinces can use the money as they see fit. Consequently, it is up to the new Government to set its priorities according to its needs. We are not to be the victims of a change of circumstances and, besides, Mr. Ghiz seems to be a very responsible person. He will know how to make the necessary choices to ensure that education and health in his province are adequate for his taxpayers.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, does the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) remember that during the election campaign the Conservative Party made a number of promises and I have them here, Mr. Speaker—

[English]

I have them in this little book entitled "338 Tory Promises". Out of those promises, 113 were to spend more money; five promises were to spend less money; 2 promises were to increase revenues and 26 promises were to decrease revenues. Does the Hon. Member recall those promises? Does she recall that the Government promised to reduce the revenues to the provinces, or does she remember, like I do, that the federal Conservative Party promised at page 29, Article 6 in the "338 Tory Promises" to consult with the provinces, groups, individuals and the health care professionals in making improvements to the system? If the Hon. Member recalls that promise, how can the Government make improvements to the system by taking away the money?

• (1450)

Mrs. Mailly: First, Mr. Speaker, we are not taking away the money, as I said before. We are reducing the rate of increase of the payments. Second, I do not know which book the Hon. Member is referring to. I do know of one book because I was the executive director of our national policy advisory committee and we published a good book which contained solutions to the problems that the Liberal Government had created. I remember that book. I do not know which book the Hon. Member is referring to.

Mr. Boudria: It is a book of 338 Tory promises.

Mrs. Mailly: The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) had a very good chance to observe the work of this Chamber when he was a staffer on the Hill. He knows that in this House we like to keep a high level of discussion on serious matters. I am sad to see that he is sinking again to little high school tricks. I would have thought that by now he would have grown in maturity in this House in exercising, if only his lungs. Rather than discussing these matters seriously, he wants to bring up the same old chestnuts.

In the book we prepared for our campaign we said that we would bring fiscal responsibility to this country, and we have. We said that we would create jobs, and we did. We created 580,000 jobs at the last count. We said that we would reduce interest rates because they were very harmful to low income families, to small property owners, to small businesses and to the whole economy. We have done that. Interest rates are at the lowest level in eight years. I believe the interest rates are now under 9 per cent, Mr. Speaker. We also said we would bring a better climate of relations between the federal and provincial Governments. We are doing very well, except it seems the Government in Quebec, which is a Liberal Government, seems to be picking up where the federal Liberals left off when they were fighting with the previous Quebec Government. I deplore that.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: I think that it is really regrettable. We had succeeded in establishing a climate—not by agreeing to everything—whereby we could talk in a civilized way with the provinces, but now that Liberal Governments are being elected in the provinces, we are back to square one. It looks like the Federal Liberals have passed all their bad habits to the new provincial Governments who are now starting the bickering again.

[English]

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. In reply to the Hon. Member when she was wondering what the source of the Tory promise was, that particular promise came from a 46 page policy manual for Tory candidates known as the Pocket Politics 1984. I know that the Tories want to forget about their promises of 1984, but we in the Liberal Party are going to remind them of those promises. Those are the commitments by which this Government was elected. It is those rules under which the Government is going to be held accountable.

Finally concerning the quality of debate, I have no lessons to take from a Tory as to the quality of debate. This is a Government laden with conflict of interest, patronage, cynicism and broken promises. I take no lessons from the Tories.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly).

Mrs. Mailly: I do not want this to be taken off my alloted time for answers.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) has the floor.

Mrs. Mailly: Well then, I will use up my time.

This Hon. Member has shown precisely, what I said earlier, that he is immature and uncivilized.

Mr. Boudria: Is that so!

[English]

The documents the Member mentions, I repeat, Mr. Speaker, were solutions to problems that had been created by the previous administration over 16 years of mismanagement. We are doing our best trying as quickly as possible to remedy these problems. I think the Hon. Member, rather than associating himself with the previous Government, should be trying to give a new look to his Party, a much better one than he is trying to give.

Mr. Boudria: I can't give it a worse look than it has right now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Resuming debate.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary and Health Contribution Act. I would like to be able to say that this Bill is wonderful and will provide endless opportunities and hope and a chance for our country's children to be able to dream the dreams which we used to dream. I would love to be able to say that the Bill reflects the commitment and involvement of a very concerned Government elected by majority vote. Sadly, I cannot do that. I would like very much to be able to say that this Bill will respond to the concerns of the growing number of elderly in our society who will have increasing health needs. I would love to be able to say that this Bill will respond to the changes through high technology which will bring good medical care to all citizens across the land. However, there is no equity or equality in this Bill. It will certainly cause a diminution in the services which we will be able to offer to our youth, our older citizens, and the sick in our society. I find this to be a very sad Bill.

The Government has made cuts to youth job-creation programs. The Government tried to deindex old age pensions. It partially deindexed family allowances, and it cut Katimavik. Now the Government is cutting back on funding for our universities through transfer payments to the hospitals. It is cutting the potential for the delivery of proper health services.

I listened to the Member across the way with a degree of sadness. I do not think she understands the total impact of this Bill. While she recognized that increased dollars are being spent, she did not recognize that there is a massive increase of dollars which are not going to the provinces. Later in my remarks I will indicate that if I were in her shoes I would be most discomfitted to have spoken about the leadership in Quebec in the way in which she did. I think that is very poor judgment on the part of a Member of the federal House.

In 1984 the Leader of the Tory Government said: "Long-term job security and job creation for Canada's youth is a priority of the Progressive Conservative Government". The Member may not like to hear those promises. May she choke on them unless they are fulfilled. With over half a million young Canadians tragically unemployed we are crippling our future abilities as a nation. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised "jobs, jobs, jobs". The Member ensured that we recalled that the Government created 500,000 jobs. That would be lovely if they were full-time jobs which met the a growing needs in the market. The youth and adults of the country believed those promises. However, we have had a great deal of cuts with regard to permanence.

Education is the key to the future of Canada and our young people. They are inextricably tied. If our youth are properly trained and educated to face the future, Canada will be the beneficiary. If our youth gain the required education they will, through their imagination and intelligence, be stimulated to think, invent and produce, and to make Canada's economy much stronger and healthier. Not only will our economy be stronger and healthier, Mr. Speaker, but so will the entire Canadian population. Our culture, values, and quality of life will be enhanced by exposing our youth to post-secondary education.

Statistics have indicated that the level of one's education indicates the level of one's potential achievement in society. The higher the level of education, the better the chance of becoming successful in today's society. Much of our future is in the hands of our youth. If we are to be competitive in the future, we must have well educated young people. Our young people must be given access to post-secondary education. What legacy will be left to our young people with the application of the policies in this Bill? I do not think they augur well for the future.

If we want to enhance and express our Canadian cultural dimension and exclusivity, we must train students to become far more qualified. As we move toward bilateral trade and free trade it is key that Canadians know, see, hear, and write about who we are. We must put great emphasis on post-secondary education because we are being invaded by American television, books, programs, and advertising. If we do not want to become the fifty-first state we must invest in post-secondary education for the development of professors, educators, artists, writers, and film makers who can express what is indigenous to Canadians. We must transmit our heritage and culture with a great deal of pride and sensitivity. If we do not promote that excellence we will not carry it on. It is vital that we enrich our natural heritage and reflect our societal values through the post-secondary level of education.

As we examine the global village, let us look at the international scene and compare our degree of competence and productivity to that of the Americans, the Europeans, and the Japanese. In every instance we do not compare well. If we want to compare well, we must invest in education and research and development in order to become competitive in the international scene. Let me turn to the situation which the Americans are facing as a result of a lack of emphasis and money spent on education.

In America's largest cities, 8 per cent of those entering the workforce test out as functionally illiterate. They cannot read at a fifth grade level. We can ill afford a repetition of that in Canada. The average American 17-year old learns half as much mathematics as the average Japanese 17-year old. Given such science and math scores it comes as no surprise that Japan produces twice as many engineers per capita as the United States and that with twice as many engineers on the payroll Japanese products seem to be better engineered.

In America, test scores, both for those leaving high school and going on to college and for those leaving college and going on to graduate school, have fallen 10 per cent in the last 15 years. It is sad that this is the role model we follow. America once had a labour force with educational ability equal to that of the best, but no longer is that the case. West Germany, Japan, and many other small countries far surpass the United States because they put their energies into the field of education. In Canada we have not yet reached these tragic figures.

For these reasons I urge the Government to reconsider this Bill and to take it back for more thought, study, and consultation. We want to have the best and the brightest in this country. We want to give them the fullest of opportunities. Through the transfer reductions in this Bill, education funding will be cut. The provinces expected to receive an 8 per cent increase in funding from the Government of Canada in cash and tax points. They will now receive an increase of only 6 per cent. The provinces will receive less than they had anticipated and planned for. That is the reality.

My hon. colleague in the New Democratic Party, who was previously the President of Simon Fraser University, spoke in a very thoughtful and considered way about the history of the development of post-secondary education. I will not go into that area. Over the years both provincial and federal Governments have cut funds for post-secondary education. It is time that stopped. Enough is enough. We cannot afford the consequences of poor quality university education.

In 1986-87, Quebec will experience a shortfall in transfer payments of $82.3 million. It will be $174.9 million in 1987-88, escalating to $277.2 million in 1988-89, $389 million in 1989-90, and $512 million in 1990-91. If it continues the way it has been presented in this Bill, Quebec will suffer a loss of $647.6 million in 1991. The total cumulative loss over those six years will be in excess of $2 billion for post-secondary education and health care. Tell me, if you are a provincial Minister of Finance or Premier, how on earth are you supposed to be able to fulfil your commitments to M. et Mme. Tout-le-Monde and the province's youth? I would like to know. The Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly) seems to know better than the Premier and the Minister of Finance of Quebec. She ought to offer her services as a consultant to the province. She says there is no impact on the province. She feels that because Monsieur Lévesque is a Liberal Minister of Finance, he is not really aware of the consequences of what he is talking about. I find that utterly disgraceful.

By 1991-92, these cuts proposed by the Conservatives will mean a loss of $8 billion to the provinces. The Conservatives object to calling this a cut. When I get $8 billion less than I expect to get I call that a cut, even if it may be a decrease in the amount of increase that I am getting.

How should the provinces make up for that loss? Should they cut the number of hospital beds or emergency departments? Should they cut health care for senior citizens? Should they cut cancer research programs? Should they close hospitals down? Should they force senior citizens and the handicapped to pay user-fees? Should they close down universities? Should they reduce the number of educational departments? Should they terminate all research at universities in the field of high technology, which we need to give us the degree of excellence required? Should they close professional schools such as medicine, dentistry and architecture? The University of Toronto has just closed down its School of Architecture. Should we close down the computer and high technology departments in our universities? Should we close down good research programs? Should we increase tuition fees? Shall we eliminate scholarship grants? We of course do not have to consider P.E.I. and some of the Atlantic provinces because the Conservatives just dropped them off the map. We now have a few more dollars to spend. A wonderful way to save money. Let us take into consideration what the Quebec Minister of Finance, M. Lévesque, had to say about this and how the Premier saw the issue. What they have said is—

Bill C-96 will cost Quebec $2 billion in six years. The federal legislation, and I now quote Claude Picher from the Montreal newspaper La Presse of Friday May 20. He said the following:

In the province of Quebec, Bill C-96 will result in a shortfall of some $2 billion over the next six years.

The main purpose of the Bill is to reduce federal contributions to the financing of health and post-secondary education programs. "It makes no sense", said the Quebec Minister of Finance.

For the past nine years, federal transfers have increased from year to year at the rate of growth of the economy. Ottawa wants to change the formula so that the increase in its contributions will be the same minus 2 percentage points.

This proposal has brought about a real confrontation. In his budget documents, the Quebec Minister of Finance speaks bluntly about the "inconsistency" of the budgetary proposals of the Federal Government.

That is to say, the Conservative Party opposite.

Thus, he recalls, Ottawa made a commitment last year to withdraw from oil and gas taxation in the producing provinces. By 1990-91, that measure will represent a revenue loss of $3.9 billion for Ottawa, that is more than twice the amount of cuts to be made that year in all provinces, in the health and education areas.

Incidentally, it shows the priorities of this Government. He goes on to say:

In Quebec alone, for 1986-87, the Bill will result in a shortfall of $82 million.

In the same breath, the province of Quebec strongly objects to federal cuts in equalization payments.

I will not go into the details because the lady gave us a background on the matter. In fact, equalization payments are also at stake and there was no consultation, Mr. Speaker. This Government says it is always prepared to consult, to improve the climate of federal-provincial relations, but suddenly, without any warning, the decision is made without consultation. Mr. Speaker, there is a lesson to be learned from this.

[English]

In the Atlantic region this has had a very serious impact. I am sure my confrères will discuss that. Health care is a very serious responsibility. During the 1984 election campaign, at a Quebec Conservative caucus meeting held in Sherbrooke, the Conservative Party promised to respect the federal obligation to finance health care in the provinces through EPF funding. They would provide additional funds to the provinces on a parity basis to create and enhance those programs identified by a national conference of provincial Ministers of Health as the ones most likely to improve the general health of Canadians. They would limit the cost of the system in the long run. All I can say is that I do not know where the consultation was, but it certainly has not been heard or seen by most of the Ministers. I am sure they would love to know when that meeting took place. What will the provinces do? Will they impose user fees? Is that what the Minister of Finance wants? Are our universities going to go down the drain? Are they going to charge more fees?

Let me say in conclusion that the formula prescribed in the 1977 Act, which will be amended by Bill C-96, provided that provincial transfers for post-secondary education and health care programs would increase at the same rate as the GNP. The provincial Governments used to plan ahead and develop five-year plans on that basis. The time has come for a little leadership. We should not throw away our investment in our universities and our belief in the universality of health care in a fit of absence of mind.

[Translation]

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleagues for listening today to the debate on post-secondary education and health care financing.

It is too bad that Opposition Members, and especially the Liberals, seem to want to make this a political debate by introducing the overall equalization agreement the federal Government has with the provinces.

I don't know whether we can talk about collusion with the Quebec Liberal Party, but in any case, yesterday the Quebec Minister of Finance blamed his tax increases on the federal Government.

An Hon. Member: It's the same gang.

Mr. Leblanc: Exactly. I could not agree more with my colleagues who said "it's the same gang". It is really too bad.

Yesterday, the Quebec Minister of Finance tried to confuse people by having them believe that the Quebec supplementary tax was due to cutbacks in transfers between the federal Government and the provinces. I think it is petty of them to put the blame on another Government. They should first set their own house in order and try to administer the province, because, as a Member from Quebec, I know the province has a lot of potential and can develop a lot quicker than they think, and that it does not have to blame the federal Government.

As far as transfers are concerned, Quebec will be receiving more than $9 billion from the federal Government in 1986-87. This transfer will cover equalization payments and established programs financing.

The sole purpose of Bill C-96 before the House today is to limit the growth of transfer payments. For established programs financing alone, Quebec will receive over $4.3 billion in 1986-87.

The growth in funding allowed under the new legislation will, over the next five years, mean $1.2 billion more than would have been the case without any increase at all.

When Opposition Members, especially the Liberals, say that we are reducing funding in this area, they are wrong. We are increasing funding and increasing it quite a bit, and we are aware of the needs of Canadians and we are showing this by helping the field of education. And that is why we will continue to increase, not reduce funding.

What a lot of hypocrisy on the part of the present Opposition, which would have the people of Quebec believe that the federal Government and the Conservatives are nasty people who make nasty cutbacks. They are wrong, because we are increasing our funding, and I will explain a little later how we are doing this.

Mr. Speaker, the average increase over the next five years will be 5 per cent per year. This is a lot more than the increase in the cost of living, and also a lot more than the increase in our Government's general expenditures. Mr. Speaker, our expenditures increase about 3.6 per year, and here we are granting an increase of about 5 per cent a year. So imagine when someone says we are cutting back and we are nasty to the provinces and callous about areas such as education and health care. That is totally false, so much so in fact that we are making an additional effort by increasing it more rapidly than we do our own federal Government Budget. I am sure Quebecers and Canadians in the other provinces will agree that we are doing more than might be expected, and that they will ignore these claims of the Liberals who are again trying to score political points and confuse the whole issue related to this Bill.

Although the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) had to give serious consideration to limiting the growth of transfer payments for Established Programs Financing when he made his November 1984 economic statement and delivered his May 1985 Budget address, it is a fact that Quebec will be getting more over the next few years. For example, in 1986-87 Quebec will receive about $250 million more for Established Programs Financing.

The difference will become obvious if I give some figures: 1986-87, for example, $4.328 billion; 1987-88, $4.563 billion; 1988-89, $4.798 billion; 1989-90, $5.37 billion; and 1990-91, $5.277 billion. Any way you look at it, this is not chicken feed. It is a lot of money, and nobody can argue with that. The evidence is there, these are official Government figures. Financial education assistance is going up regularly every year. The Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) said earlier that we are cutting back, that we are not aware of costs for training teachers, and so on. That is utterly false. We will proceed at a faster rate, considering the means we have.

Several Opposition Members have been trying to make people believe that we are cutting back, I repeat—I will quote from another table I have here. Among other things, $3.1 billion for health in 1986-87; $3.2 billion in 1987-88, and here I make a distinction between health and welfare versus education to clear up the record and contradict my Liberal colleague from Mount Royal who stated a moment ago that we are reducing transfer payments for education. Well now, for education alone: $1.2 billion in 1986-87, $1.3 billion in 1987-88, and $1.4 billion in 1988-89, or $100 million more a year for education. The picture is the same in the health sector, so let us not distort the facts.

The Opposition seems to forget all the agreements signed by the federal and provincial Governments. During the electoral campaign, we said, and someone spoke about promises a while ago, that we would make sustained efforts to bring about a reconcialiation with the provinces. There used to be constant conflict. No progress was being made between the provinces and the Federal Government. It was essential to find solutions to be able to work together maturely. In this regard, for instance, there have been agreements between the Quebec Government and Canada. For tourism development, $100 million have been invested by the Canadian Government in co-operation with Quebec. This is very important and we wanted to co-operate in this regard. For industrial development, $350 million; for communication businesses development, $40 million; for cultural materials, $40 million; for forestry development, $300 million; for scientific and technological development, which was mentioned earlier and where research has come to a standstill, $100 million; for transport development, $177 million. This adds $1.2 billion to the $9 billion mentioned earlier. Just imagine! The Opposition says that we are not co-operating with the provinces, that we want to reduce transfers for education, and so on. This is absolutely false. I want to tell the people of Quebec who are listening to me that we are making sustained efforts and that we shall have a healthier financial management because of this cooperation. It will be even more economical since we are saying: Here, Quebec, you must administer such or such a sector and we shall administer another, which means that the administration costs will be lower and that there will be more money for development, research, education and health care.

As for research and development, under the Liberal administration, money was being spent. There is nothing easier than to spend money, and the quality of the service used to be evaluated by looking at the amount of money spent, even though there is often very little relation between the two.

After being in the private sector for 15 years, I know that you can sometimes accomplish a lot with very little money. This is not what was happening before. Millions, hundred of millions and even billions of dollars were being spent haphazardly and wastefully because the Government did not take the time to make a careful study and to evaluate how this money should be spent.

We consulted the provinces, universities and large businesses and told them: How could we co-operate on research and development? For example, should research be done in universities? Should we undertake basic research or look into areas which could yield a profit as soon as possible? This is where the big difference is. It has been shown that, with less money, we have created more jobs in less time. This is the intelligent way to spend our money. This is how public funds should be administered. And it is important when the opposition seems to suggest that decreasing expenditures mean inferior results. It is absolutely false. We have evidence to that effect. In a few months, there will be 1 million more workers in Canada. A million is a lot when we consider that there are 26 million inhabitants in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, that is what I wanted to explain today because it has become a political debate and it should not be so.

Mr. Speaker, with respect to the financing of established programs, the federal Government has acted in co-operation with the provinces, contrary to what the opposition has been trying to make us believe. I have made inquiries and I can tell you that we have extensively consulted the provinces.

In November 1984, for example, soon after the elections, there was a meeting of the Ministers of Finance. The question of a ceiling on the growth of programs was dealt with as it is in Bill C-96 and the Ministers of Finance are fully aware that the federal Government in order to control the deficit has introduced the bill now under consideration. There were two, three or four meetings with the Ministers of Finance and with the premiers to see how the distribution would be made. Now, they should not tell us that there was no consultation, because there was a lot.

This is the reason why, Mr. Speaker, I have risen today to support Bill C-96 and I am convinced that the provinces will readily accept it if they are well-informed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone).

• (1530)

[English]

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I notice that the Hon. Member has made the speech he wanted to make so he can have it printed and distributed. However, that does not mean it is perfect in its content. I would like to ask the Hon. Member two questions. First, does he or does he not agree with what the Finance Minister of Quebec said last night in his Budget Speech, and I quote:

> Bill C-96, now before Parliament, will also deprive the province of funds for post-secondary education and health care—At a time when our population is aging and costs are going up, Ottawa is withdrawing from the financing of essential services.

Does the Hon. Member agree or disagree with the Finance Minister of Quebec?

[Translation]

Mr. Leblanc: I am definitely not in agreement, because I feel he did not understand. That is the problem. He did not understand we are making tremendous efforts to foster education. He did not understand, because there is an increase rather than a reduction, we are still increasing that at the rate of 5 per cent a year over the next five years. Since he is not here to defend himself, I will not insist too much because this would be talking about somebody who is absent from the House. But I can tell you that I do not agree, and above all I have a feeling there is some connivence between you and him.

An Hon. Member: Quite right, yes.

Mr. Leblanc: As I had an opportunity to know you, I know you worked for this party in the past, so I am hardly in a position actually to—

Mr. Prud'homme: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Montreal-Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on a point of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I submit the Hon. Member in his comments, as he will see if he reads them over, in absolutely out of order. It is just as if we were accusing them of conspiring with the Parti Québécois during the last election. I think that is not in keeping with the quality of this debate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That may not be relevant to the debate.

[English]

The Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett).

Mrs. Finestone: Am I not entitled to a supplementary, Mr. Speaker?

An Hon. Member: No, that's enough.

An Hon. Member: That's enough, Sheila.

Mrs. Finestone: He has already put his feet in hot water. All right.

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I will not get involved in these political wrangles, for the moment anyway.

Mr. Jourdenais: Have you anything to say?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Jewett: On the political wrangling? New Democrats are above that. I want to ask the Hon. Member for Longeuil (Mr. Leblanc) how he can actually say there will not be decreases. We all know that there will be 5 per cent increases. However, we also know that the increases would have been substantially more if we did not have this Bill. What the Bill is doing is cutting back on what would have been increases. I will just give one example.

The Speaker is not paying any attention anyway.

Mr. Jourdenais: Again I have to say he knows you have nothing to say.

Ms. Jewett: Excuse my back, Mr. Speaker.

According to the Finance Department, in the Estimates of November 1985, the province of Quebec, to take it as an example, under this Bill if it is passed, in 1986-87 will receive $81.9 million less. In 1987-88, it will receive $174.9 million less. In 1988-89, it will receive $276.9 million less. In 1989-90 it will receive $388.8 million less, and in 1990-91 it will receive $512.9 million less. That makes a total of $1,435.4 million which health care and post-secondary education in Quebec will not receive if this Bill is passed. Would the Hon. Member not agree with that?

[Translation]

Mr. Leblanc: As you know, Madam, there is nothing to be taken for granted in life. If we reduce growth, it is because that growth was found to be too high. This is quite an accomplishment, because the Liberal Party had previously said the growth should be 10, 13 or 15 per cent. But to them money was no problem, they had lots of it. This is one thing we found out about, because we found ourselves with a $230 billion accumulated deficit for a 25 million population. So we had to put matters straight. This is what we are doing. But despite all that, we are still increasing support in education and health faster than we are doing in any other area, because in other areas, the average is 3.6 per cent. Of course we can give examples: I should have had ten children, but I had only two. So I had eight less than expected. But I decided I could not afford to have more than two children. It is that simple. So your suggestions are frivolous, they were invented by other people before. We say that growth should be . . . And moreover, we say we should work closer with Government research and development centres, with corporations, with universities. We should work closer in research, which means that with less money, we are going to do more. And so have we done up until now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme). For a question or comment.

Mr. Prud'homme: First, a comment, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased with the Hon. Member's remarks. I imagine that the Quebec Minister of Finance will be delighted to hear from the Hon. Member from Longueuil (Mr. Leblanc) that the Quebec Minister of Finance, Mr. Lévesque, has understood absolutely nothing. At 5 p.m. today, I will hasten to send this good message to the Quebec Minister of Finance. It's a comment which, I think, he will appreciate tremendously.

I am told that I could also add the name of the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly). Therefore, according to the Hon. Minister and the Hon. Member, the Minister of Finance has understood nothing—I hasten to say "Minister", because I would not want to stir up ill-feelings in the Conservative Party . . . However, I know that the Minister of Finance will be grateful to me for at least reporting faithfully to him what happened in this House.

This morning in Le Journal de Montréal newspaper, in an article signed by Normand Girard, we can read the comments made last night by the Hon. Minister of Finance. Nobody can doubt the integrity of Normand Girard, a great parliamentary newspaperman. It's a well-known fact that Normand Girard, as always, faithfully reports what he hears and sees. If you want me to send him a message, I am sure that . . . Fine.

Therefore, I should like to ask my hon. colleague if he has any additional comments to send the Quebec Minister of Finance who, last night, was reported as saying, and I quote:

"Quebec public finances are progressively being caught in a real squeeze", he said after having indicated that the provisions of Bill C-96 represent—

I am still quoting the Minister, as reported in the excellent Journal de Montréal:

An Hon. Member: Nonsense.

Mr. Prud'homme: It is printed in my own riding. And I am quoting the Minister as reported by Normand Girard. This seems to annoy my hon. colleague.

"one more step towards total federal withdrawal from the field of the financing of essential services".

In an annex to his Budget Speech, Mr. Gérard-D. Lévesque analyzes at length the whole question of fiscal arrangements and quotes a remark the federal Minister of Finance, Michael Wilson, made on March 23, 1982.

My first question to our hon. colleague is this: What does he think of the statement made by Mr. Lévesque, the Minister of Finance? Also, what does he think of the following statement made in the House of Commons?

The only sign it (the federal Governement) shows of cutting spending is by shifting the burden of the established programs funding on the provincial governments.

Could the Hon. Member comment on these two questions?

Mr. Leblanc: On the first question, Mr. Speaker, I can tell the Hon. Member that in my opinion the Quebec Finance Minister did succeed, because one can read in the papers in black and white, or rather in white and black how they twisted things around and blamed the tax increase —and this has been said many times— on the federal Government.

That is easy to say, yes, very easy to say. I think anybody could have done that. Anyone having to make a budget who shifts the blame on someone else sinks in my estimation.

As for me, if the auditor of my business were to tell me things like that, I would tell him that I did not need him anymore. Because one must never shift the blame on others. And I think this is the comment I could make straight to his face if he were here. This takes care of the first question.

As for the second question, the answer is along the same lines. I have concluded, Mr. Speaker, and I thank you.

Mr. Prud'homme: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The period for questions and comments is now over. I am sorry but the period is over. Debate. The Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) has the floor.

• (1540)

[English]

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina):

Mr. Speaker, this is a deplorable piece of legislation because the principle of it is one of betrayal. The Bill betrays the provinces of Canada, the provincial governments of Canada and betrays the universities of Canada. It betrays post-secondary institutions of Canada, it betrays the young people of Canada and it illustrates rank hypocrisy in the actions of the Government.

Mr. Speaker, I have to admit that those are not my words. They are the words of the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), the Minister of Justice. I regret that he is not here to say those very words himself at this time. I cannot match the wonderful twang and dialect that he uses when he is on stage; but he did say those words. He said them on February 7, 1984. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that on that day the Hon. Member for St. John's West spoke the truth. I have only been here four years. I do not want to get into any disputes with my colleagues about whether there was another occasion when he spoke the truth. But I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that on February 7, 1984, the Hon. Member for St. John's West said something that was very true at that time, as it is very true today. That is why I regret that he is not here so that we can see whether or not he still remembers the truth.

This is a deplorable Bill and it is a betrayal, just as two years ago Bill C-12 was a deplorable Bill and a betrayal. We have been told by some of the Government's spokespersons that this is not a cut, it is an increase and not a cut. In fact, the short title of the Bill is: "an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977". In other words, this Bill changes what was agreed upon between the federal Government and the provincial Governments almost 10 years ago. That is a cut and it was called a cut by a colleague of the Hon. Member to whom I have referred.

I also wish to refer to what was said by the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) in the same debate when she was attacking the then Government about a cut. At that time we were debating the same sort of Bill, a Bill to amend the formula. The formula was supposed to increase the contributions of the federal Government to health and post-secondary education in the provinces in accordance with the growth of the economy.

Two years ago, the Government was cutting back on the increase that would have kept pace with the cost of providing health and post-secondary education services. At that time, the Minister of Employment and Immigration, who was then in opposition, said that, first and foremost, Bill C-12 is still a tax grab by the Government. It is the same kind of tax grab that the Government is getting into with this Bill.

When is a cut or a tax grab not a cut or a tax grab? The answer, of course, is when the speaker crosses the floor and becomes a member of the Government. In fact, this Bill provides for a very serious cut, much more serious than the cut provided by the Bill that was condemned by the Minister of Employment and Immigration and the Minister of Justice two years ago.

A question was raised about an hour ago by an Hon. Member who did not stay around for the answer. Two years ago, a cut was made by then Liberal Government over the protests of the Official Opposition, now the Government, that in five years totalled $911 million, a little under $1 billion, to post-secondary education transfers. We are now facing a cut which in the next five years will total $5.5 billion, six times as much as the cut that was considered so outrageous by the Minister of Justice and the Minister of Employment and Immigration, and on the same basis as they had reckoned it.

There had been an agreement between the provinces and the federal Government on a certain formula by which expenditures for post-secondary education and medical health care would increase in proportion to costs. When the Government cut that back by a figure of less than $1 billion, the then Opposition condemned that as a cut. The Government, the former Opposition, now wants to cut by six times that much and it says that the cut is an increase.

This cut will seriously hurt the young people of Canada and the future of Canada's industries and educational system. I can give examples of this from one province, the province which I represent, namely, Ontario. These cuts will affect three post-secondary education institutions connected to the riding that I represent. It will affect the University of Toronto and it will also affect the University of York, many of the students and staff of which live in the riding of Spadina. The same is true for Ryerson Polytechnical Institute. In the next five years, the Bill being pushed through the House by the Government will cut $2 billion out of Ontario resources for education.

I have spoken before about the very specific deterioriation of education at the University of Toronto. There have been cuts in staff and in vital programs. Whether it is considered vital that students should learn the languages of Canada and the world or learn mathematics and computer programming and sciences, those programs are being cut.

I would like to refer to some of the remarks made by the Premier of Ontario recently. He pointed out that these cuts which will amount to more than $2 billion in the next five years will weaken our country in the very areas where we must marshal our greatest strength. He points out that a cut to Ontario transfers, by the end of the expiry date, will amount to the equivalent of 90,000 hospital in-patients or one million hospital out-patients per year. He has also put it another way. He compared the cuts to 75,000 full-time students at post-secondary institutions being cut out. He went on to point out that it is a fact that hospital insurance costs have risen from 1984 when they were $2 million to $9 million in 1985. That is the cost for 110 hospitals in Ontario which pool insurance costs in order to get the best deal. Costs have more than quadrupled. Those costs will have to be borne by the hospitals.

A famous cancer treatment hospital, the Princess Margaret Hospital, has 202 beds. Studies have shown that that hospital is overcrowded and deteriorating and it is said to be at the risk of reaching a point beyond which it may not be worth salvaging. The Ontario Hospital Association has estimated the total hospital deficit for the year ending March 1986 as being roughly $50 million. With this cut-back of $2 billion over five years, those hospitals will fall short of making their commitments. The hospitals cannot simply stop paying their mortgage debts or any of their operating debts. They cannot simply cut back on staff without decreasing services. They cannot cut back on the research and teaching that is done for the benefit of people not only from Canada but from all over the world without the quality of that research and teaching declining.

It has been pointed out that there are very few empty spaces in Ontario post-secondary institutes. For example, at the University of Waterloo's electrical engineering program, no student was accepted with less than a 90 per cent average in grade 13. The schools are being very selective. Yet with cuts like this, we will lose some of those students as well. Last year, 2,125 people applied to Queen's Law School for some 150 positions. If we support these cuts, institutions like those will have to take fewer students.

The University of Toronto has announced it is closing its faculty of architecture. That faculty is almost 100 years old and has served not only the City of Toronto and Canada as a whole but the entire world as one of the leading schools of architecture. People who have studied there have become city planners and architects in many cities in Canada, the United States and abroad. However, the University of Toronto has been forced to close that faculty because of the cuts already made by the previous Liberal Government. Now further damage will be done by the Conservative Government which may be recycling an old Liberal piece of legislation and taking responsibility for it itself. If that is not so, then the Liberals had taken an early leaf from the Conservative book and had put forward Conservative legislation which is now being endorsed by the Conservative Government itself.

There is a better way, and my colleague, the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett), referred to it. Those of us who were in the forces during World War II and came out at the end of it and looked at the options offered to us by the Government of the day, remember that the slogan which every Party had to adopt was the slogan of full employment. We were six years away from the Depression, from the "dirty thirties". The one thing everyone agreed on was that we were not going back to mass unemployment. For any Government to get elected in 1945, it had to promise full employment. Part of the full employment package was a full education package, and part of the specific package for the veterans under the Department of Veterans Affairs was university education. There were other options. One could go into farming. One could go into small business. One could build a house. There was a certain amount available under each of those headings, and there was a certain amount available for university education.

I well remember many of my fellow students at Queen's University, many whom would never have got to university if it had not been for the monthly living allowance and tuition fees which were provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs. We had to study. We had to make a certain grade in order to continue. That was fair and reasonable, and nobody complained. I also remember that some of the graduates of Queen's University, some of those who would not have got there without that help, became leaders in Canada in the academic world, in the medical world, in the sports world, in business, in politics, and in international affairs. Some of the best minds of the country were given the opportunity to show their quality by the allowances given by the Department of Veterans Affairs to students then. It was a good investment; it was a very good investment. It was money very, very well spent by the Government of that day with the full support of the people.

That would be a good investment today as well. I want to couple with that another investment which was made almost at the same time. When I was in the army I received medical care. Fortunately I did not need very much; I did not need it very often. There were some minor things. When I sprained an ankle on my first parachute jump, I was examined by the medical officer of the station to see whether or not I could continue with the training. Fortunately I could. When I had a little dental trouble I got treatment. All this was at the expense of taxpayers. I did not pay a cent. I was healthy. The medical officers in the forces were doing their job. They had the same goal that we had. They wanted a healthy army. We wanted to be a healthy army. We were. It was the same with the other forces.

When the Government and the country understand that we want healthy people, they know that the most efficient way is to pay for it rather than to tell sick people: "Hurry up and get well". The rate of expenditure per capita on health care in Canada is about half the per capita rate of health expenditure in the United States. Yet, the rate of mortality and morbidity in Canada is lower than in the United States. In other words, for fewer dollars we get more health, since we instituted a strong measure of publicly supported health care in Canada, compared with the United States which leans much more to the do it yourself, everyone for himself and devil take the hindmost kind of health care. In the United States, the rate of morbidity and mortality is much higher than in Canada. Therefore, it is false economy for the Government to claim that in the interests of lowering what it claims to be the deficit, in the interests of making our economy more healthy, it will take measures which will make our people less healthy and will reduce educational opportunities for our young people. It is a grave mistake. I hope the Government, even at this late moment, will still have some second thoughts in the matter and not carry on such a foolish program of cuts.

Members of that Party went up and down the country two years ago promising that if they were elected they would restore the funding the Liberal Government cut out. They promised that they would not just maintain the same level; they would restore the cuts or the money cut out. That was the promise of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his colleagues during the election campaign. It is shameful that now they are in office they have not only broken that promise and not put back the money the Liberals cut out, but that they have done worse than the Liberals ever did by cutting out six times as much, as they have undertaken to do with this legislation. It will be a black day for Canada when Bill C-96 will be declared law.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, I listened with a great deal of interest to what the Hon. Member had to say. Does he think there is a message or a subliminal intention, or perhaps it is rather direct, in the Conservative perspective—and they have the right to have that political philosophy and ideology, except they also have the responsibility to present it in a courageous way—which suggests that young people who want post-secondary education and professors who want to work toward a doctoral degree or a masters degree have to pay the shot, that society can no longer afford it? It is a fair decision if that is their decision, by the way. Are they also saying that there does not seem to be the opportunity any longer for universal health care at the hospital level, let us say, and therefore they think that the proper option is to remove the National Health Care Act and put in place a user fee? Does the Hon. Member think that those are the subliminal messages which we might be hearing behind the $8 billion cut in the EPF payments to the provinces?

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, I am asked whether I think the intention of the Government is to privatize higher education by making the student or the professor pay for any education they get by their own individual efforts, and whether I think it is the intention of the Government to privatize health care. I do not know, but I think it is against the rules for us to try to read the Government's mind. However, I would like to compare this with a policy which I witnessed in a country that I visited last summer, namely, Chile. Since 1973, when the military dictatorship took over, Chile has been following a policy very much like this one. It has been cutting back on education so that there are only half as many professors in Chile as there were 13 years ago. It has cut back on health so that 46 per cent of the children under six years old are malnourished and infectious diseases are rapidly increasing. Now, not to speak for the Government but to quote what the Ambassador said to me—by the way, it is the Canadian Ambassador; we paid his wages—he said that this was the correct policy for the Chilean Government in order to promote its competitiveness internationally, and that Canada must do the same thing. That is only one official, but there seem to be signs that it is the opinion that Canada does not need educated people or that Canada does not need healthy people.

There was a time when the Government thought we needed healthy and educated people to do the proceedings work of production in this country. But it seems there is now a class of people who say: "We will buy what we want offshore from the United States or elsewhere. We do not have to care whether or not Canadians are physically or mentally able to produce." It is a very short road those people would be running if that is their attitude. If it is not their attitude, perhaps it is the attitude of the questioner, but I think they both come down to the same thing. The Government has made a decision not to provide, not to care for the physical and mental needs of the people of Canada.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Speaker, could the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) describe what happens with the formula that provides post-secondary education and health care to the provinces? He gave some figures. Could he expand on those numbers and perhaps tell us what it would mean in the forthcoming four or five year period as to what sort of losses in revenues will be experienced under this new proposed formula versus the formula that has been in effect since 1977? Could he tell us what sort of losses various provinces might expect as a result of this new conservative approach to federal-provincial financing?

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, it just so happens I have some figures with me that are relevant to the Hon. Member's question. In 1986-87, there will be a loss of $318 million. The next year there will be a loss of $680 million, the next year $1,078 million, the next year $1,520 million, the next year $2,009 million making a total of $5,608.3 million. That is spread among the provinces. Newfoundland in total will lose $128 million; Prince Edward Island will lose $27.5 million; Nova Scotia will lose $195 million; New Brunswick will lose $156.8 million; Quebec will lose $1,435.4 million; Ontario will lose $2,014.1 million; Manitoba wil lose $235.8 million; Saskatchewan will lose $227.4 million; Alberta will lose $530 million; British Columbia will lose $641.8 million; Yukon will lose $4.8 million; and the Northwest Territories will lose $11.7 million.

I do not think there is one of those provinces or territories that can afford to lose that much money from education and health services.

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, I have been listening to this debate this afternoon and I have noticed a tremendous amount of confusion in the minds of opposition Members and particularly with respect to the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap). Opposition Members are always talking about cuts, cuts, cuts in an area in which there has been an increase. That is the problem that I have as I sit here and listen to them.

This is the first responsible Government we have had in 23 years, other than the nine months in 1979. We are trying to balance the budget. There have been cuts, but in this area there are no cuts. The Hon. Member is talking about a supposition, something that may be, and I suggest that the Hon. Member should realize that this is not a cut; it is a lack of an increase. Why not speak the truth, as we know it and as the Member knows it? These increases will be experienced by all provincial Governments. I cannot understand cuts that are on mythical figures.

Mr. Heap: Mr. Speaker, if I might take those comments as a question, I would refer the Hon. Member to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. She could explain it to him very well. Let me quote some of her words. She said:

> First and foremost, Bill C-12 is still a tax grab by the Government. In the 1983-84 fiscal year the Government is able to reduce its projected transfers to the provinces for post-secondary education by almost $120 million and next year that reduction will amount to $260 million. That is the kind of tax grab the Government is getting into with this Bill.

A tax grab is the same as a cut. As I said, when is a cut or a tax grab not a cut or a tax grab? The Hon. Member cannot understand this because he was not here two years ago and did not hear the eloquent words of the Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands. A cut became an increase when she crossed the floor.

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, as you know, the main role of a Member of Parliament is to defend the interests of people in general and particularly his constituents and his fellows citizens.

I would be remiss if I did not stand up today to speak on Bill C-96, but I feel that I have had to take the floor frequently to defend the interests of my constituents lately.

Two days ago, it was on Bill C-75, which will somehow affect fishermen, farmers and shippers of goods using waterways. Today, we are dealing with Bill C-96, which affects another group of people, namely those who need services, health care, the senior citizens, and of course another major component of our society, young Canadians who need an adequate educational system.

You will agree, Mr. Speaker, that education and health care are two vital areas for the balance and well-being of our people. I feel that if we want to be logical, we know very well that by making cuts in education and health we are jeopardizing the future of our people and our institutions.

Every Canadian province will of course be affected by Bill C-96. Let me tell you however, Mr. Speaker, that some provinces will be hit harder than others, and I mean the Atlantic provinces. This may be, Mr. Speaker, a reflection of the present trend of thought of this Governement with respect to the Atlantic region, which is more or less abandoned. Indeed, we could see—

An Hon. Member: It was given over to the Americans!

Mr. Robichaud: Yes indeed, we could see yesterday, in the propaganda project we were faced with, that Prince Edward Island had simply been left out, and that Newfoundland, as far as it was concerned, had also simply given up to the Americans.

An Hon. Member: Shame!

Mr. Robichaud: Is that therefore how the Government feels with respect to the Atlantic Region?

We are told that this bill provides a 2 per cent decrease in the growth of EPF federal funding starting April 1st 1986. We do know, Mr. Speaker, that the established program funding has been used to fund health care, namely hospital insurance since 1958, health insurance since 1967 and supplementary health services since 1974, as well as post-secondary education since 1977.

Mr. Speaker, the total contribution of the federal Government is expected to be reduced by slightly more than $300 million in 1986-1987 and close to $2 billion in 1990-1991. This will therefore translate for the federal Government into a cumulative savings for 1986-1987 and 1990-1991 of close to $8 billion, and even more than $8 billion.

The $8 billion reduction for the federal Government represents an unprecedented loss and a deficit for the provinces. For some of them, it will be quite difficult to make up that deficit. The Atlantic provinces will not only be heavily affected but also hard-pressed.

However, Mr. Speaker, it should be stated that the provinces will still have some options to mitigate the losses incurred as a result of the cuts made by the federal Government. The provinces will have some choices, that is either to increase their taxes or their deficit or reduce some services, perhaps cut the number of hospital beds.

Mr. Ferland: In French, that is called "rationalizing the administration".

Mr. Robichaud: The Hon. Member who interjected seems to have understood nothing of the matter.

So I repeat the options: reduce the number of hospital beds, or even simply shut down hospitals, or reduce emergency services, or perhaps reduce health programs for senior citizens, or eliminate all research, or reduce post-secondary education or access to that education.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, if we view these as logical options, and of course there are many, there only remains to choose those that will penalize taxpayers the least, because one way or the other, our people, our poor people will pay the price and suffer.

The only result of Bill C-96 is to reduce services to the community, and even our quality of life. This is a sad fact that goes contrary to the Government's good intentions, if there are any. Perhaps that was the real intention of the Government when it said: Here is how we confirm our commitment to give significant support to provincial health and education programs.

Well then, if a $6 billion or rather an $8 billion cut is considered to be a significant support, it is the kind of support we could do without. The Government is basking in its own rhetoric, but certainly it is starting to realize that people are now seeing the difference. We saw this recently in the elections in Prince Edward Island. People can see the difference.

In New Brunswick, Mr. Speaker, it is only a matter of time.

As we know, Mr. Speaker, the premiers have refused to support the proposal of the federal Government to reduce its transfer payments. In spite of what the Hon. Member for Longueuil (Mr. Leblanc) has said, I maintain that the premiers have refused to do so. It is true that these programs are governed by legislation which can be amended unilaterally by the federal Government without the consent of the provinces, but it has always been the practice and the tradition to obtain their consent. There had been a first agreement in 1977 which was amended in 1982 and a new agreement was supposed to be negotiated to come into force on April 1, 1987, but that is not what is happening. Obviously, by introducing Bill C-96, the Government has decided not to respect tradition and to announce unilaterally changes to become effective as early as April 1, 1986, one year before the expected date.

Instead of transferring funds to the provinces, Bill C-96, transfers the deficit of the federal Government to the provinces. Indeed, the Goverment has justified its decision by stating that the cutback is the price that all Canadians and provinces must pay to reduce the federal deficit. What we have to understand in this explanation is that the real cost will not stop at the reduction of the federal deficit. It will cost us much more than that. We shall have to support the stagnation of our post-secondary education system and a reduced access to post-secondary education. We shall have to support the reduction in health care and education services. We shall also have to support the interruption in the growth of our society. Finally, we shall have to support a lower standard of living for the Canadian population, and I am certain, Mr. Speaker, that Canadians will not forget how they are being treated.

Provincial Governments are very conscious of the hole that a $6 billion cut will create in their budgets. In health services, more beds are needed in hospitals, and the aging of the Canadian population is creating new requirements. In education, there are increasing pressures to develop the present system in order to meet the increasing needs of new technologies and those of an ever changing society. This is why the Federal Government has very important responsibilities, and particularly that of ensuring the development, or at least the maintenance, of a minimum quality of service. To refuse this responsibility is to accept in advance a step backwards for Canadian society in fields of endeavour that other countries used to envy us for.

The maintenance of transfer payments at their present level is also important to ensure a balance between regions like Atlantic Canada, including New Brunswick, and the rest of the country. New Brunswick depends to a large extent on federal transfer payments. A cut in those funds would have an immediate impact on provincial revenues and expenditures. The province does not have the funds nor the capacity to impose more taxes to make up for that loss of income.

In the area of health care, it should be mentioned that the implementation of a universal health care system was one of the great achievements of the Pearson-Trudeau era. During the general election of 1984, the Leader of the Official Opposition renewed this commitment to our health care system, a system that needed to be protected and reinforced, but that promise was not kept. It is another broken promise, one of the 338 listed in the file prepared by the Hon. member for Glengary—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria).

According to the Canadian Medical Association, this cut will create two quality levels for health care in Canada, that is, higher quality services for the richer provinces, and lower quality services for the poorer provinces. Mr. Speaker, I must say that the Atlantic provinces are still poorer than some other Canadian provinces. According to statistics emanating from the Department of Finance, the fiscal capacity of some Atlantic provinces is as low as 60 per cent of the national average.

The New Brunswick Medical Association has also indicated its opposition to the Bill. It has explained that over the next five years, the province of New Brunswick will lose several million dollars in transfer payments for health care and that this loss will affect the quality of health care in that province. According to the president of the Society, Mr. Emeneau:

[English]

He said that for New Brunswick, which has two-thirds of the ability of most other provinces to pay for its medicare and higher education, the change would allow little option to cutting back in either or both of these fields. After P.E.I. and Newfoundland, New Brunswick already has the lowest level of medical care in Canada. Health care is already underfunded.

Cutting even more the funds available will not improve our situation. In New Brunswick, for instance, for fiscal years 1986-87 and 1987-88, the increase in established program financing, based on the 1986 formula, will be lower than the rate of inflation. And by 1990-91, the province will receive from the federal Government $228 million less for health care. The real cumulative loss resulting from this cut between now and 1991 will reach approximately $465 million.

Between 1972 and 1982, the federal Government's contribution reached 47 per cent. In 1985-86, it fell to 41 per cent, and it is expected to fall still more. In view of these disturbing figures, the New Brunswick Minister of Finance stated, and I quote—

Mr. Prud'homme: Is he a Liberal?

Mr. Robichaud: We still have a Conservative Government in New Brunswick. Not for long, but still there for a while.

I quote again the New Brunswick Minister of Finance:

[English]

He said the recent cut-back in EPF makes a bad situation worse, and unless New Brunswick gets a substantial increase in equalization over and above that which the current program would provide, the provincial Government will not be able to maintain current levels of service. Indeed, unless New Brunswick gets such an increase in equalization, the federal Government will not be meeting its constitutional obligations and New Brunswick will not be able to provide reasonably comparable levels of public service at reasonably comparable levels of taxation.

In other words, if the federal Government fails to substantially increase transfer payments, the province will be unable to maintain its present level of services, eventually leading to cutbacks in services connected with health care and post-secondary education. That is what Bill C-96 proposes to do, and that is why I am categorically opposed to this legislation. We must not forget that health and education are two vital sectors. We are not talking about frills, we are talking about necessary services.

An editorial writer with the Saint John Telegraph Journal in New Brunswick quoted the New Brunswick Medical Association, which clearly explained what kind of impact cutbacks and transfer payments would have on New Brunswick.

[English]

He said it would not only jeopardize the existing level of health care service in New Brunswick but would make future development of that service virtually impossible. Patients and health professionals would be forced to function in a system barely able to sustain itself and with absolutely no potential for growth. The bottom line, added the reporter, would be an inferior standard of medical care in New Brunswick. That is absolutely unfair and unacceptable and flies in the face of the constitutionally enshrined assurance of reasonably comparable levels of public service in Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, during the last election campaign, the Conservative Government made a solemn promise, and the people of Canada took them at their word, but it turns out they were only trying to deceive Canadians. How many times since the Conservatives formed the Government did we have to mention that they broke their promises? I wonder how many more times we will have to do so.

An Hon. Member: Never believe the Conservatives.

Mr. Robichaud: Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Party promised to respect the federal Government's obligation to finance provincial health care within the framework of established programs financing. The Conservatives had also promised to give the provinces additional funding, on a parity basis, to establish or improve programs which will be made official during a national conference of health Ministers and health care professionals.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, they simply did not live up to those promises. First of all, they completely forgot their promise to fund health care. Second, as Bill C-96 makes it crystal clear, they act unilaterally without provincial agreement.

The Nielsen report itself indicates that, regardless of choices made, it is absolutely essential that the Government consult the provinces, and I mean consult in a spirit of full co-operation. And that is exactly what they are not doing.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that if the Government keeps acting this way and goes ahead with its Bill C-96, the people of New Brunswick will definitely not forget such shabby treatment.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Questions and comments? Debate. The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria).

M. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased today to take part in this debate, and I fully appreciate the fact that Conservative Members opposite also seem to welcome the speech I am about to make in this House.

Mr. Speaker, on February 14, 1986, all Members of Parliament were made aware of the tabling of a Bill respecting the funding of established programs. At the time, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said, and I quote: This is an unequivocal confirmation of the Government's commitment to provide a substantial amount of support for provincial health and education programs.

Mr. Speaker, those words were spoken by a Government which was cutting down grants to the provinces. Would you believe, Mr. Speaker, that a Government could act in such a way?

[English]

Let us take a moment and examine the effects of these cuts on some of the provinces.

Mr. Lewis: Your colleagues are leaving.

Mr. Boudria: This is for the benefit of Hon. Members across the way, especially those from Ontario, a part of which great province I have the honour and privilege to represent.

Mr. Nickerson: On a temporary basis.

Mr. Boudria: In 1986-87, the Province of Ontario will lose $114 million. In 1987-88, it will lose $243.4 million. In 1988-89, it will lose $387.5 million. In 1989-90, $546.3 million. In 1990-91, $722.2 million. In 1991-92, $916.6 million.

• (1640)

In summary, during that period of time from 1986 and 1992 the Province of Ontario will lose $2,929.9 million. That is the magnitude of the cuts. We are not here today talking about something small, we are not here discussing a trivial issue. We are discussing a very important issue for those people whom I represent in this House, and for the province that I represent here. Now these cuts—

Those cuts, Mr. Speaker, were referred to earlier by a Conservative Member, and I think it is the Hon. Member for Portneuf (Mr. Ferland)—when my hon. colleague for Westmorland—Kent (Mr. Robichaud) also stressed the importance of those cuts in his speech before the House—were referred to as management rationalization.

Mr. Speaker, how come that today Conservative members come and tell us that such cuts amount to management streamlining whereas when they were sitting in the Opposition benches they claimed that the 6 and 5 program—which was minimal in terms of cuts as compared with what we have today—was a series of major cuts? How did this turnabout happen, Mr. Speaker? Is it simply because Conservative Members are now sitting on the other side of the House—temporarily, of course—that they have changed their mind? Is that the reason? Or is it that Conservative Members refuse to defend the interests of their own province in this House and would rather blindly support the government?

Mr. Speaker, we do not know. We may never know. In view of the fact that many Conservative Members will soon be gone we may never have the opportunity to find out. This is why we have to know today, while they are still here.

[English]

The Government claims that it announced these measures in the 1985 Budget. We know that that is not entirely true. We know that the Budget Speech did refer to a reduction in EPF contributions, but it made no mention of a date. Therefore, only a general statement was made in the Budget, and it is now used as an excuse for zapping the provinces in this manner.

What did the provinces say about these cuts? You will recall that there was a conference in Halifax in November of 1985. I want to remind you that at that conference the Premiers were really upset with these cuts. Let me remind you, although I am sure you remember it vividly, what the Premier of the Province of Ontario said at that time, and I quote from Le Devoir. He said the following:

> This reduction in the funds provided the provinces will translate into a reduction of services. There will be fewer hospital beds, warned the Ontario Premier, David Peterson, who believes as well that by 1990 the province will also lose some 75,000 places in its colleages and universities.

That is what one of the Premiers had to say, the Premier of the province that I have the honour to represent in this House. We have to take that very seriously. I am sure the Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney), who is sitting across the floor and paying attention to this speech—I thank him for that—is taking note of this, and behind the curtain he will be raising this with the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). Let me read further from the same interview. This one is with The Gazette, dated November 29, 1985. It states the following:

> You don't call it a cut, you call it a breach of faith. You call it breaking a promise.

That is what the Premier of Ontario said to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). The Prime Minister shot back the following:

> It is not a broken promise. It is a responsible attempt to deal with a major Canadian problem.

Is that not unusual that when you make promises it is perfectly reasonable to make them, but when you break them it is not unreasonable to break them, that then it is a responsible attempt to deal with a major Canadian problem? If it is such a major problem when it comes time to delivering on a campaign promise, why is it so easy to make these promises during the campaign? Perhaps the Tory Members who will speak after me today will clarify that for my benefit and yours.

Premier Peterson then said to the Prime Minister the following:

> You have not solved the national problem, you are only transferring that national problem to us.

The Government of Canada has taken the problems it has with bailing out banks, foolish spending of funds and doling out patronage and handing them out to the provinces because it cannot handle them. It is shirking its federal responsibility, and that is unfair.

I want to quote now the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario, a man who has the respect of all Members of this House, I am sure. The Hon. Robert Nixon, Treasurer of Ontario and former Leader of the Liberal Party of Ontario, said the following:

> There was uniform opposition to Ottawa's plan. Nobody thought it was a good idea.

That is the Treasurer of Ontario who said that. The Members across perhaps do not believe it because this statement was made by a Liberal, and that is just because they are so partisan.

Let me read to you what the Premier of New Brunswick said. He is certainly not a Liberal. There will be a Liberal Premier in New Brunswick very shortly, but at the present time Premier Hatfield said the following:

> I will have no choice but to increase user fees for health services.

That is what a Conservative Premier said about the effects of this. If the Tories across from us are so partisan that they cannot listen to Liberal Premiers and the Liberal administration of the provinces, surely they will listen to Tory Premiers. It is the Conservative Party during the last election campaign which talked about co-operation and consultation with the provincial Governments. Where is that co-operation now? It is gone. It has disappeared. Maybe it was never there to start with.

We are talking about cuts that will affect universities. We are talking about cuts that will affect health care. The Members across have said, "Well, the provinces can spend the money as they please". Does it please a province to have to put funds into health care? I would like to think that that is not a pleasure, that that is a necessity the provinces have to provide. Do they derive pleasure in handing out welfare to the unemployed people of this country? That is a need that the provinces are providing. The large majority of those funds have to be given out by the provincial Governments, and they have little or no choice at all as to whether or not the expenditures will be made. It is this Government and this Parliament that has the choice. It is up to us to make the proper choices here today or on another day when we vote on this legislation.

Let me read to you a quote from Doctor Donald Savage, President of the Canadian Association of University Teachers. He said about the proposal of the Government the following:

> Such a measure would result in reductions that would exceed by nearly 20 per cent those implemented by the Liberals and that the Conservatives opposed at the time.

Now, is that not unusual? The Conservatives voted against a Liberal measure and then replaced it with one which cuts 20 per cent more than the previous one. What is wrong with those Conservatives? Their only consistency is that they are never consistent. That is all we can say about them.

Let me take a minute and give some excerpts from the speech of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) which I found in Hansard. The Hon. Member when he was in opposition said, and I quote:

> We must have the development of intellectual capacity in the country. The only place in which that can happen is in the post-secondary educational stream. We require universities, technical colleges and community colleges. If we do not train our people, they will be incapable of competing in a highly technical world, will have to use the technologies of others, will truly be hewers of wood and drawers of water, and will have to live to the standards that exist in South Korea and Taiwan.

That speech was made by the Hon. Member when he was urging this House to pass legislation to ensure that there would be proper funding of our university system and for other services we require. What has happened to that Hon. Member? Why is he not coming to the rescue of our universities? He is speechless.

It is not just the people who want to hand out the taxapayers' dollars freely who are urging more funds for our university system. I would like to quote an excerpt from an editorial in the Star Phoenix of August 24, 1985. It is entitled "University Needs". It reads:

> When as Conservative and influential a group as the Canadian Chamber of Commerce urges more Government spending, it's time to take notice. The Chamber has been pressuring the federal Government for years to reduce its deficit and improve its debt position.
> With about 165,000 members across the country, ranging from cornerstore operators to heads of major manufacturing firms, the Chamber has consistently welcomed any indication that Ottawa plans to cut spending. But this week, Chamber President Roger Hamel urged Science and Techology Minister Tom Siddon to spend more on universities. He said the business community is increasingly concerned that the squeeze on post-secondary education funding will make it impossible for universities to meet the demand for research and development, or even to provide adequate basic instruction for students.

Those are the words of a very Conservative group. Everyone on both sides of the House will acknowledge that. This group is urging the Government and this Parliament to increase funding to post-secondary education. I ask all Hon. Members of the House to take note of that.

I would like to refresh your memory as well, Mr. Speaker, with respect to a speech made by the Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands (Miss MacDonald), when she was in opposition, concerning the same topic. She said, and I quote:

> I would say that the consequences may not readily be discernible to the federal government, but to the thousands of young Canadians in post-secondary institutions of this country and to the hundreds of people who staff our community colleges and universities, the consequences are very clear. In fact, they are frightening.

That is from page 823 of Hansard. That is what the Conservatives were saying when they were in opposition.

In closing I would like to remind the House that the Government made several promises to the people of Canada. In the book of promises, to which I often refer, there are promises regarding research and development. The Government said it would double its research and development efforts to 2.5 per cent of the Gross National Product in the first four years in office. Yet what has the Government done? It is cutting funding to universities which are doing this research at the same time it is trying to make us believe it has the will to live up to the promises and commitments it made to the people of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we, of the Liberal Party, do not support this Bill. We intend to let the Canadian people know that we will never support such legislation. We are calling upon every Member, on both sides of the House, to take the initiative of convincing the Finance Minister (Mr. Wilson) to withdraw this Bill. Should he refuse, all Hon. Members should feel duty-bound to vote against it immediately.

[English]

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Hon. Member would refresh my memory about the exact date of the speech of the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald), if he has it?

Mr. Boudria: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for that question. I should have brought it to your attention, Mr. Speaker, although I am sure you remember the speech vividly as well as do all Hon. Members. In case someone wants to read the speech in Hansard, because it is a very important speech made by the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands when she was in opposition, it is found in Hansard of January 27, 1984. The speech of the Hon. Member for Mississauga South will be found at page 816 of Hansard, and the comments I referred to subsequently, also made by the Hon. Member for Mississagua South, will be found on page 818. I know the Hon. Member for New Westminster—

Coquitlam (Miss Jewett) would like me to elaborate slightly on the speech of the Member for Kingston and The Islands, who said, as reported on page 824 of Hansard:

> The Government is willing to endanger the future of the young people in this country, and in many others presently in the workforce who are going to be needing retraining or re-education in one way or another.

So very clearly the Hon. Member for Kingston and The Islands when in opposition wanted to tell all Members of the House how important it was for the Government to increase funding to post-secondary education. She obviously wanted to do that. I am sure that is exactly what she would want to do today. I just cannot wait for her to commence her speech, which I am sure she will want to do immediately after I resume my seat because she was very much in favour of what I explained to you today, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being five o'clock p.m., this House stands adjourned until Monday at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

REPRESENTATION AND ELECTORAL DISTRICT READJUSTMENT ACT (ONTARIO)

On the Order: Private Members' Business

September 24, 1985—Mr. Foster—Second reading and reference to a Legislative Committee of Bill C-249, an Act to readjust the representation of Ontario in the House of Commons and to readjust the electoral districts in Ontario.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions between the Parties with respect to Private Members' Business this afternoon. I think that if Your Honour were to put the following motion to the House, you would find that it would meet with unanimous consent. It states:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, the item listed as number one on the Order of Precedence of Private Members' Business in today's Order Paper and Notices shall be placed at the bottom of the said Order of Precedence for the next sitting day; and

Provided that the House shall continue with the business before it at 5:00 o'clock p.m. this day until the ordinary daily hour of adjournment.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following question will be answered today: No. 553.

[Text]

TAX EXPENDITURES—CORPORATE TAKEOVERS

Question No. 553—Mr. Riis:

From 1979 to date, what was the total value of the tax expenditure arising from the ability of corporations to deduct the cost of borrowed funds used for the purposes of taking over other corporations?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Statistics are not captured by Revenue Canada on expenses incurred by various corporations.

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

POINTS OF ORDER

POWERS OF COMMITTEE UNDER STANDING ORDER— GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Speaker: I indicated to Hon. Members who wished to make procedural arguments about another matter that they would be free to make them now. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I would be prepared to yield to the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) since he spoke first on the prior occasion, and then I will follow him if Your Honour so wishes.

Mr. Speaker: On the procedural question, the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I thought it might be helpful if I were to offer for your consideration some precedents on this point. The practice of requesting a Government response to certain recommendations contained in Public Accounts Committee reports has been used for a number of years. I have before me some examples.

The eighth report of the Public Accounts Committee concerning CIDA was tabled on October 22, 1985. Of the eight recommendations, the Government was asked to respond to only three. On February 13, 1986, the Government's response to those recommendations was tabled. On March 26, 1986, CIDA responded to the remainder of the recommendations.

The twentieth report of the Public Accounts Committee dealing with the Canada Post Corporation was tabled on May 30, 1983, in the first session of the thirty-second Parliament. Pursuant to the then Standing Order 69(13), two ministerial responses were received to recommendation 7(a) on September 19 and 27 of 1983.

The last precedent concerns the eighteenth report on the Canadian Dairy Commission which was tabled on March 29, 1983, during the first session of the thirty-second Parliament. A Government response was requested to recommendation 6(a) and one was received on July 11, 1983.

I would like to take a moment to explain why this practice has been followed. It is because reports dealing with departments or agencies sometime refer to broad and related policy objectives and the individual department or agency may not be able to respond to a recommendation because it needs an overall government statement. For example, in the case of the eighth report of the Public Accounts Committee concerning CIDA, the committee was concerned with problems of planning and monitoring procurement which involved economic and regional concerns. Clearly this was an area that needed a Government response since it concerned many departments.

Second, in the case of overlapping or divided jurisdiction, a department or agency cannot provide a response, and this is somewhat the same issue, if the response is directly involved through legislative or ministerial direction. Again, in the case of the eighth report of CIDA, the committee was concerned about divided responsibilities for the Food Aid Program. CIDA is involved with three departments and therefore the committee requested that the Government clarify the roles of the various departments and agencies.

In the case before us, most of the recommendations were addressed to the Public Service Commission which is responsible to Parliament, but there were recommendations concerning the division of responsibilities between the Public Service Commission and the Treasury Board which seemed to the members of the committee to call for a Government response.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, very briefly, I think the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) has covered most of the salient points. Suffice it to say, therefore, that I agree with the precedents she has brought forward as being relevant in this particular case.

I would like to make the point that in this particular report, it is primarily referenced to the commission itself, and that in this one instance under No. 15(b), it requests from the Government a certain response. It would be possible, I would say, for the Commission to prepare a comprehensive report without dealing with the question of the Government response. That report could therefore be submitted to the House of Commons.

However, more importantly, in the interest of common sense, I think we all understand that it would be possible for a committee to file a number of separate reports if it were determined that it could not ask for specific responses to specific items within one report. It would be possible for a committee, for example, to have held more than one day of hearings and to report on its deliberations as they affect the Commission and then on its deliberations as they affect the Government. That would stand as two separate reports which of course would have to be responded to in any event. To put a committee into a position of having to go through that rather false procedure rather than to simply allow it to highlight that part of the single report which refers directly to a Government responsibility would, in my opinion, be counter-productive and would not make much sense in the way in which committees operate.

I would respectfully urge, Sir, that you find that it is appropriate in the circumstances and is not in any way denied as a right under Standing Orders for a committee from time to time, on matters that refer directly to Government operations, to draw the attention of the Government to its specific request for a government response to a part of a report which in fact would normally be responded to by the Commission itself.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) for making this clear. I am also in favour of a committee being able to request a Government response to certain recommendations in its report. I think there is a very good case for this if we look at the mandate of the Public Accounts Committee as set forth in Standing Order 96(3), which includes, among other matters, review of and report on the Public Accounts of Canada and all reports of the Auditor General of Canada which shall be severally deemed permanently referred to the Committee immediately they are laid on the Table.

Mr. Speaker, the point I am trying to make is that we have a report dealing with two agents of Parliament, the Auditor General of Canada, who examines all public accounts, and another agent of Parliament, the Public Service Commission, which has certain obligations under its legislation with respect to applying the merit principle. Mr. Speaker, this report contains a recommendation to the Government which is addressed directly to Treasury Board, not to the Commission.

Perhaps upon reading this transcript, the Commission will understand that there has been no oversight on our part and that we are indeed anxious to see the Commission meet the 30 September deadline as requested by the Committee, and that while the Government is being asked to give its response to 15 (b), the Commission will have an obligation to respond to all other recommendations by September 30, 1986.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I thank Hon. Members. That is helpful to the Chair. The Chair will reserve and consider all the arguments.

RESPONSES TO QUESTIONS—MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY—SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr. Speaker: I thought it would be useful if I now respond to the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) last Thursday. I would rather do this before Question Period.

In effect, the Hon. Member rose on a point of order to ask the Chair to consider the question of who could answer questions. I think that is the right way to put it. Perhaps the best way I can say this to the House is to start by simply reminding the House that questions are asked to the ministry as a whole or, if you will, to the Government. While questionners may, as a courtesy, indicate the Minister the questionner believes has responsibility for the matter, it is perfectly in order for the Government not to answer and in fact no specific Minister can be compelled or required to answer.

Should the Government decide to reply, it is in order for any Minister who has ministerial responsibility either directly or in an acting capacity to answer for the Government. There is, of course, occasionally a difficulty for the Chair because the Chair may not know who is in an acting capacity. In that case, as has happened in one case, the Chair asks for an explanation as to the capacity in which the Minister was replying.

Finally, because of the over-all responsibilities of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), it is perfectly in order for the Prime Minister or for the Acting Prime Minister to respond to any or all questions. Again, neither the Prime Minister nor the Acting Prime Minister can be compelled or required to answer any question.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, may I seek clarification on the ruling? Would I be correct, then, in assuming that if the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) were present in the House of Commons, quite clearly he would be the Acting Prime Minister and would therefore be the person who would have to answer if he were answering for anyone in the Government and that therefore the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), in the presence of the Prime Minister, would not be able to rise and take the place of the Prime Minister since the Prime Minister was already present? The second point I would seek clarification on is whether there can be a Minister other than the Minister who is specifically charged with the responsibility for administering a department or ministry who could be deemed to be acting on behalf of that Minister in the Minister's presence, other than the Prime Minister, were he present, or the Deputy Prime Minister, were the Prime Minister absent. This is very key to some of the problems that arose.

I do understand that another Minister could be designated as an Acting Minister but he cannot be the Acting Minister if the Minister is present. That solves one part of my problem, I think. The other question then is if the Deputy Prime Minister is here but also if the Prime Minister is here, it would be up to the Prime Minister to answer or nobody to answer.

Mr. Speaker: In fairness, the day about which the Hon. Member was asking, the Deputy Prime Minister was here in his capacity as Acting Prime Minister and that is the point of order the Hon. Member raised and on which I have replied. I take it the Hon. Member is now asking me to consider a different point of order.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the House Leader for the New Democratic Party has raised a novel point. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) will understand that in this Government, we have a Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and a Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen). Obviously the Deputy Prime Minister assists the Prime Minister in the performance of a multitude of responsibilities.

Mr. Deans: But he has no status in the House of Commons.

• (1120)

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, indeed he has status in the House of Commons as Deputy Prime Minister and is so recognized as a member of Cabinet in that responsibility.

Mr. Deans: No, he is a member of Cabinet as the Minister of National Defence.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Notwithstanding the protestations of the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans)—

Mr. Deans: I am right, and you know it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I find it difficult—

Mr. Deans: You are wrong.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I always know that I am on the right course when the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain attempts to shout or to interject from his seat.

Mr. Deans: I am not shouting.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: In this particular instance, there has been specific indication from the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) that he indeed was fulfilling a role as Deputy Prime Minister for the Prime Minister in respect of conflict of interest questions which have nothing to do with the carrying on of a responsibility of any department or line department. In any event, I simply reiterate that the Deputy Prime Minister is precisely that.

Mr. Deans: No, no.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: He assists the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in the performance of his responsibilities and duties and, accordingly, would have a very broad mandate to answer questions on behalf of the Government in that particular capacity.

Mr. Deans: In that it is a very important point—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not want this to become a debate.

Mr. Deans: It is a vitally important point. I just want to indicate—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I will interrupt you.

Mr. Deans: I urge my colleague to interject if he wishes.

There is no such person as the Deputy Prime Minister within the rules of the House of Commons. In order to hold a cabinet position, the Deputy Prime Minister had to be either the President of the Privy Council in the first place or now the Minister of National Defence in order to sit in Cabinet, since there is no cabinet position for which remuneration can be paid as designated Deputy Prime Minister. However, that individual can be designated as the spokesman for the Government and the Acting Prime Minister, as can any other cabinet Minister. The Deputy Prime Minister's role is only within the mind of the Conservative Party.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No. We have had Deputy Prime Ministers for many moons.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is becoming difficult. Hon. Members are now rising on an entirely separate point of order arising out of a ruling on a different point of order. May I simply reserve on what we have heard so far. Does the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) have a different point of order?

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. As the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) raised his initial point of order arising out of a question which I had put, I am seeking some clarification. I understand that if the Deputy Prime Minister, or whatever title he happens to hold, is in the House, in the absence of the Prime Minister, he is entitled to field a whole range of questions on any departmental responsibility in the same way as the Prime Minister is entitled to intervene.

What I should like to know is whether the Deputy Prime Minister is entitled to do that and to take questions which relate to a particular department at a time that the Prime Minister is in the House, or is the Government obliged—

Mr. Speaker: Order please. That is exactly the question the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) just raised. The Hon. Member is simply repeating it. I have indicated that I will reserve on it, with respect.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Friday, May 2, 1986, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mr. Murphy (p. 12683).

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, we must now focus on Bill C-96 which affects federal grants for post-secondary education and especially for health insurance, established programs that are financed by the provinces.

My purpose in taking part in this debate is mainly to discuss the particular problems of Quebec, starting with the $66-million loss incurred by that province as a result of the federal Government's decision not to meet its commitment to maintaining subsidies for established programs financing at 95 per cent of what was paid during the previous year.

Apparently, Mr. Speaker, in his Budget last Thursday Quebec's new Minister of Finance, Gérard D. Lévesque made the best defence of or the best statement about the province's difficulties. In his Budget, Finance Minister Gérard D. Lévesque pointed out that Bill C-96 is one further step towards Ottawa's gradual withdrawal from essential services funding. As Quebecers see it, Mr. Speaker, and we in the New Democratic Party share this view, the only way the central Government is going to cut expenditures is by letting the provinces assume responsibility for Established Programs Financing.

According to Mr. Lévesque, Mr. Speaker, this is predatory federalism, not co-operative federalism. This is what Mr. Lévesque is saying now, but who first made that comment? Mr. Wilson—now Minister of Finance—when he was the Official Opposition financial critic, therefore in 1982.

Truth to tell, Mr. Speaker, like all other provinces, Quebec is put in a very precarious position as a result of Bill C-96. This predicament is due to cutbacks in funding and grants for educational and health insurance programs set up by the former Liberal administration. The situation has been made worse by the federal Government's decision not to give the provinces the full cost of those programs and to cut down—at the annual rate of 2 per cent in real terms—its contribution to these provincially administered-programs.

Mr. Speaker, I would remind you that one of the Conservative solemn promises during the 1984 election campaign was to maintain Established Programs Financing. Here is what they said:

"Position of the Conservative Party: We will go back to the 1977 financing formulae, even though we cannot compensate the provinces for losses incurred through the 6-and-5 program."

So the Conservatives were not quite prepared to compensate the provinces for losses incurred in the past, but they did promise to reinstate the 1977 financing formula.

They made that promise during the 1984 election campaign, Mr. Speaker, at the same time as they made a commitment to tackle the deficit. We can therefore assume that the Conservatives had given serious consideration to the problems created by the former Liberal Government and decided they could afford to promise the full reinstatement of the 1977 financing formula in spite of cash shortages and the deficit problem. So what happens now that they are at the helm? Not only do they fail to maintain the programs established by the Liberals, but they also conveniently forget their promises. They simply will not maintain the Liberals' new formula and they will even deprive the provinces of the funds needed to continue the educational and unemployment insurance programs.

Mr. Speaker, Ottawa now pays roughly 40 per cent of expenditures for education, health and post-secondary education. In 1990-91, its share would be only 36 per cent. These are now shared cost programs.

When the federal Government encouraged the provinces to join medicare, it promised to pay half its cost. The same applied to the program to finance post-secondary education. Now, the share of the federal Government will fall to 36 per cent. This means that the provinces will have to pay the rest, or about 64 per cent of the additional $19 billion which will probably have to be spent for health care and education during the next five years. It has been estimated that the new federal contribution will only amount to $1 billion, which will leave the provinces with a reduced and very unbalanced taxation capacity when we compare the situation in Ontario and Quebec, or the Maritime Provinces, or even Alberta now. These provinces will now have to find the other $18 billion.

This is why, Mr. Speaker, everyone, especially in Quebec, is concerned about the position of this Government. The hypocrisy of this Government is also a source of concern. I would like to refer, Mr. Speaker, and I have the quotations here, to the debate on Bill C-97, which, strangely enough, had nearly the same number as Bill C-96 now under consideration. At the time, Mr. Michael Wilson, then financial critic of the Conservative Official Opposition, said that the federal Government wanted to transfer its financing problem to the provinces. It wanted to displace the deficit problem which had taken monstrous proportions, both federally and provincially. For instance, in its last Budget, Quebec found it very difficult to keep its deficit under $3 billion. Quebec therefore has a problem.

Mr. Speaker, in 1982, Mr. Wilson criticized the federal Government by saying that the only thing it was doing to show its desire to reduce its expenditures was to transfer the burden for Established Programs Financing to the provincial governments. The provinces were beginning to have deficits themselves, which made it much more difficult for them to finance these displaced expenditures. According to Mr. Wilson, this was especially true in Ontario and the eastern provinces, which did not have the substantial energy revenues of the western provinces. This has changed, but Quebec continues to have financial problems. This is not co-operative federalism, but predatory federalism, and such methods cannot work in Canada. This is what Mr. Wilson said on March 23, 1982. What he is now proposing in Bill C-96 seems to show that he has forgotten what he said four years ago.

Mr. Speaker, I also found a question asked by Mr. Wilson to the former Minister of Finance on February 1, 1982, about the elimination of guaranteed income. He said that the Minister was prepared to risk major cutbacks in medicare and post-secondary education. Instead of hurrying unilaterally in this sector to force cutbacks in provincial expenditures and services, would the Minister be willing, asked Mr. Wilson at the time, to consider holding two or three federal-provincial conferences on health and post-secondary education to develop agreement on the national objectives of the various government levels in these two important sectors before reducing expenditures and before causing cutbacks in hospital services and post-secondary education? Mr. Speaker, is the present Minister of Finance willing to avoid these cutbacks? Is he willing to call these national conferences to define the national objectives? No, he is not. Just like the previous Government, he is acting unilaterally without considering the impact of his actions on Quebec or the other provinces.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to quote the comments of Mr. Roch La Salle, the present Minister of Public Works, at the third reading stage of Bill C-77, on April 5, 1982. According to him, one thing was clear, and that was that, a new formula, the federal Government would have been better off than before since it would pay $5 billion less in the following five years than under the old formula. Those facts are inescapable, Mr. Speaker. And we know indeed that the cost of those services that are so vital to all Canadians is increasing and will keep increasing, in tune with the current economic conditions.

Mr. Speaker, the present Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) said the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has crammed the provinces into a financial strait-jacket because the Federal Government is reducing the deficit by slashing transfer payments to the provinces. He goes on to say that this Bill involves billions of dollars and has very important ramifications for the service areas concerned.

I cannot understand, said the Minister when he was speaking for the Opposition, why the Government did not succeed in reaching a consensus and an acceptable compromise. He concluded by saying: Because of its actions, attitude and arrogance, the Government has succeeded in creating a climate of suspicion.

Mr. Speaker, I could not myself do a better job of saying that than the present Minister of Public Works when he was the Opposition critic. It is because of its actions, its attitude, its arrogance that the Tory Government is now creating all those problems with the provinces, including Quebec. The Conservatives are the ones who made those big promises, those generous promises: They would maintain the 1977 formula. No cuts! They would restore the situation to what it was before cuts were introduced by the Liberals. Mr. Speaker, what we now find is that the Conservatives have turned out to be the new Liberals. They are just so bad as the Liberals who were in Government before September, 1984.

I put the question to you, Mr. Speaker, you are a politician of great ability. You know the situation in Quebec because you are yourself a Quebecer. Could you yourself see any difference between the Liberals under Pierre Trudeau and the Conservatives under Mr. Mulroney? Were Mr. MacEachen's policies when he was Minister of Finance any different from the policies of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) as regards those cuts and the funding formula for health and post-secondary education, where Quebec is concerned? Mr. Speaker, if you are really sincere and honest, you will resume your place and respond by suggesting that no, you can see no difference at all, other than you are Tories and the others are Grits. Mr. Speaker, we in our Party can see no difference.

I remember my Leader asking this question during the elections: What is actually the difference between Visa and Mastercard? It was tweedledum and tweedledee, as we say in English. They are the same. It might even be said, Mr. Speaker, that there could be a slight difference in that the Conservatives are worse, because they added other cuts on top of those that were imposed by the Liberals.

Let us now look at the impact of those cuts, Mr. Speaker. In Quebec, for instance, the estimated loss for 1986-87, besides the $66 million already lost by Quebec, will be $81.9 million; in 1987-88, the loss will be $174.9 million; in 1988-89, $276 million; in 1989-90, $388.8 million; in 1990-91, Quebec will lose more than $500 million that are essential to pay for post-secondary education and to keep our hospitals open, to ensure a good level of health services to Quebecers. When the people of Quebec elected 57 Conservative Members during the last elections, it was like chicken voting for Colonel Sanders. Now they will be losing $500 million a few years ahead, in terms of health services and post-secondary education. The total over those five years, Mr. Speaker, will be $2,435.4 million. Now, what does that mean?

I therefore appeal to Hon. Members here, because Conservative Members from Quebec apparently do not wish to get involved in the debate. The guarantees which were given by the Minister of Finance and other Conservative Members to the Opposition, to the effect that such cuts would have just one result. They will decrease Quebec's ability to really enter the post-industrial age, to maintain a capacity to lead with state-of-the-art technology, to maintain its ability to compete in a very difficult world. All this because of the cuts that will be hitting Quebec's post-secondary education and community colleges.

Such cuts, Mr. Speaker, amounting to $2,435.4 million over five years, cannot but affect the province's health services.

Now Montrealers will perhaps continue to enjoy satisfactory health care. However, will the Quebec Government be in position to maintain those same standards in Rimouski, on the North Shore, in the Abitibi and in all other Quebec areas? I would say that the answer is probably no. People will have to travel to Montreal to obtain the services that are unavailable in their own area.

The entire province will suffer from a reduction which will increase as far as hospital beds are concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I ask all the Quebec Members who are here this question: Are you proud of your performance as elected representatives now forming a new Government? You had promised so many things to Quebecers, but they will now suffer still more as a result of additional cuts to those already made by the previous Liberal Government.

Mr. Speaker, I ask those Members to give their views on that prejudicial Bill and tell us what should be done in Quebec.

As we know, Mr. Speaker, the subject matter of the Bill is that payments for the financing of established programs will be cut by 2 per cent per year.

It means that if we have a 5 per cent inflation, the tax points and grants provided by the Government to maintain educational and health services will be increased. Instead of increasing by 5 per cent, they will according to the old formula, that is by 3 per cent. This does not seem much in a one or two-year period. However, as I have shown, for a longer period, the impact increases every year and the total impact for the entire country will be about $6 billion. This is what we are discussing today in this House of Commons and for Quebec which is experiencing problems in terms of subsidization of very important programs for the future of its population and its competition capacity, this represents a loss of $1.4 billion.

Mr. Speaker, I challenge all Tory Members from Quebec. Defend those cuts which I say are indefensible. If no Quebec Member is to rise during the remainder of the debate, I will say that those cuts are indefensible and that not a single Tory Member was willing to fight for them. They all know, those 57 Tory Members from Quebec, and they all admit by not taking part in the debate that those cuts are indefensible.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments?

Mr. Cassidy: No question, no comment? Where are the Members?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments? The Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy).

• (1140)

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, I will take this opportunity to ask the Hon. Member a question. I wish one of the government back-benchers will take advantage of the opportunity as well. This legislation has a negative effect on provinces throughout the country. Promises were made to the Province of Quebec in the past which are not being kept and I think it is ironic that no Member on the Government side, and particularly no Member from Quebec, has asked a question although directly challenged by the Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) to do so.

This same matter was debated in 1981-82. The Liberals, with a massive majority of Quebec MPs, passed legislation at that time which reduced the federal commitment to post-secondary education, medicare, and hospital services. At that time 74 out of 75 Quebec Members were Liberals and they would not speak up for their province. At that time the Conservatives attacked the Liberals. The present Ministers of Finance (Mr. Wilson), National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), and Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) condemned the federal Government for its treatment of the Province of Quebec, among other provinces. They were right in doing so.

Government Members, especially Quebec Members, should read the speeches of the present Ministers of Finance, National Health and Welfare, and Employment and Immigration. Government Members should read how those Ministers criticized the Liberal Government and the Liberal back-benchers at that time. History is repeating itself but no one is standing up for the people in the Province of Quebec and elsewhere who are affected. I ask my hon. colleague to comment on that.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I find this strange. I appreciate that, as Speaker of the House today, it may be more difficult for you to resume your seat and take up the challenge which I have just issued. Nevertheless, you have many colleagues who are now here or watching the debate on TV. It is rumored, because the Progressive Conservative Party has only a one per cent edge on the New Democratic Party, according to the most recent poll, that a number of Conservative Members from Quebec have come to the conclusion that they will lose their seats unless they become very active in their respective ridings.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that the best way for them to demonstrate that they are truly concerned about their constituents' interests would be to rise, not only in their own caucus, but here in the House, to deal openly with the problems created by the decisions originating from the Cabinet. The Cabinet is not made up of strangers, for several Quebec Members are Ministers. There are strong men, such as the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse), who are Members of the Cabinet and represent Quebec. Mr. Speaker, it may not be necessary for a Quebec PC Member to use the same expressions as I did. We all know that even remarks that are only slightly critical, that address the issue, are better than nothing.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, as my colleague the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) has just indicated, just as Liberal Members from Quebec were silent in 1982 when we had to deal with the same issues in Bills C-77 and C-12, so are Conservative Members from Quebec now. I deplore this shyness on the part of the Quebec representatives in both the former Liberal Government and the present Conservative Government.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Debate. The Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) has the floor.

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): As I was listening to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) comparing the Progressive Conservative Party to the Liberal Party, Mr. Speaker, I could not help reflect, to their credit, that at least the Liberal Party and the Conservative Party both have definite party platforms and consistent ideas, while the socialist party of which he is a Member has never had any idea of its own and has never done anything except complain about the stands of either of them and particularize certain issues. That is the remark I wanted to make. The platform of the Liberals is to favour and accelerate the collective and progressive indebtedness of all Canadians, whereas that of the Conservatives is to pay the debts accumulated by the Liberals and to encourage the economic recovery.

The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre is not in a position to advise either me or my Conservative colleagues on the Quebec situation. As a matter of fact, he should have listened to the message which Canadians from Quebec and all the other provinces east of Ontario have sent to this socialist party of his, namely, that they do not care about socialism.

This being said, I am pleased to deal with Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contribution Act, 1977.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, when these arrangements were made, Canada was faced with sky-high inflation rates. At the time, the increases in the federal Government financial contributions to the provinces' established programs were based on rates which were below the sky-high inflation rates of the time. Today, we are indeed proposing a reduction of the growth rate of our additional contributions to the established programs, and we say that our contributions will always be at least superior or equal to the inflation rates, something which did not exist before.

Our Government's contributions will continue to increase, so that over the next five years, our Government will contribute some $90 billion in Established Programs Financing. That is $25 billion more than in the past five years. So let my colleague enquire before he suggests that Quebec will be disadvantaged because of this Government's action.

Since the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre suggested that we were not delivering what we had promised to the Canadian people during the summer of 1984, I have to tell him that he should know that we are indeed carrying out that message and that we have already had a number of very concrete achievements.

Our message developed along three major lines. Firstly, there was the reconciliation of the various provinces, and we were proud, Mr. Speaker, to sign the Eastern Accord on energy, the Western Accord. And never in the past 20 years, Mr. Speaker, have the relationships between my home Province of Quebec and the government in Ottawa been brighter.

So that is one of the aspects of our message. I can easily understand that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre may resent the fact that we are on excellent terms with the Government of the Province of Quebec. You have always banked on a gap between Quebec and Ottawa, but we Conservatives removed that atmosphere of tension and distance.

I would advise my hon. colleague for Ottawa Centre to try and find out about the aspirations of Quebecers and their desire to belong and to participate in the Canadian Confederation.

We also had another theme, Mr. Speaker, which we discussed during the election campaign, and that was our economic recovery. Since we were elected in September 1984, unemployment has gone down significantly.

More than half a million new jobs have been created, and this government did not do it the way the Liberals used to in their days, by implementing ad hoc programs in order to create temporary employment followed by unemployment. We developed a context that allowed businessmen . . . You will never understand what businessmen are, and I am talking to the Socialist Party, you will never understand that because you are the parasites of the Conservative as well as the Liberal party depending on how it suits you, parasites of the workers because you live off their contributions. So you will never know what a businessman is, a person who can handle the capital and the management of a business, you will never understand that. Businessmen, Mr. Speaker, did get our message and decided to invest, and Mr. Bullock, the Chairman of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, recently stated that there had been an increase of more than 20 per cent in recovery and investment intentions since we took office. This is a true fact that my socialists colleagues should also take note of.

In the package we were offering to the Canadian people, we also said that we were updating our trade relationships with the United States, and you know that the United States trust our sincerity, but they are afraid of our relationships and it was indeed very difficult to get the U.S. Congress to agree to the so-called fast lane for the bilateral trade talks with the United States. Now, the reason they took a very hard line . . . The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) could listen to me, he might learn something and he certainly needs to.

An Hon. Member: He is only interested in television.

Mr. Fontaine: Now, the trade talks with the United States are under way, and those talks will in the first place have a grandfathering effect, as you very well know that 80 per cent of the trade with the United States is unhampered by customs barriers. You should also know that out of a total of $165 billion of goods sold out of Canada, 80 per cent are sold to the United States. This is why it is vital for us, firstly, to preserve our access to that market and, secondly, to enlarge that access to the American market and open up a potential market of 240 million customers to our producers and manufacturers. This also, Mr. Speaker, is what we are delivering to our people. Instead of putting questions to the Conservatives across the aisle, you should do your homework and stop contradicting other people, and that means the people in your own party as well. In fact, that is why you won't have any leadership candidates left in a few months. Well, Mr. Speaker, these were just a few comments I wanted to make to my Socialist colleagues.

Mr. Speaker, my colleague opposite said that the proposed changes would reduce the federal Government's contribution to education from 40 per cent to 36 per cent. What the Hon. Socialist Member should have said is that this Government's spending on transfer payments will represent about 19.4 per cent of the total Budget. There is no reduction in this Government's spending on transfer payments. The Hon. Member might have added that to date, we have signed an impressive number of agreements with Quebec, including agreements on development of the tourist industry, those were signed and you didn't mention them, agreements on science and technology, those were signed and you didn't mention them either, agreements on regional development, those have been signed and you didn't mention them, agreements on forestry, signed again and not mentioned by the Hon. Member. There is an agreement on agriculture about to be signed, and it soon will be, according to a statement made last Thursday in the House by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise). It is now with the Quebec Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Pagé, and apparently will soon be finalized. These are some of the things that should have been mentioned by the Hon. Member opposite.

The Hon. Member also implied that our Government was passing on its deficit to the provinces. That is certainly a misleading way of putting it in the House, Mr. Speaker, because we have been reducing the deficit by . . . take some notes, they will come in handy when you write a book before leaving politics—

Seventy-five per cent of the deficit reduction proposed to Canadians will come out of reducing the Government's present expenditures, and 25 per cent out of tax increases. Since we have a deficit of $240 billion, I think it is only fair to ask all Canadians—and that is something you have never understood either—to tighten their belts in order to put our country back on the road to prosperity.

And speaking of this country . . . to ensure their political survival, the Liberals who formed the previous Government were always very fond of thinking up new social programs—in fact, you were in bed with them many times . . . in order to win the votes of Canadian men and women. Today, that is over with. No more borrowing to pander to the voters and mortgage our country's political aspirations. Those days are over.

We now have to fight to reduce our $240 billion deficit and you object to this fight against the deficit. You object to the fact that the Government is asking us, Canadians, to make a few sacrifices. When I hear you, I wonder if you are a true Canadian. Where do you think that the Canadian Government will find the money to live according to our means, to reduce our deficit and to stop letting our children and grandchildren pay for what we are spending today and for the mismanagement of the Liberals who were here before us?

Mr. Speaker, the comments made today by the spokesman of the New Democratic Party are unfounded, and in reply to his questions, I can assure him that the representative of Lévis is 100 per cent behind the policy of his Government because my own policy is based on the economic facts. A country cannot keep borrowing to pay for its day-to-day operations, but this has never been understood by your party either. Canada must develop structures to promote economic recovery, which has already begun, so that there will be more Canadian contractors and businessmen hiring more people. In this way, we shall be able to sell our products abroad. This is why we are working at the same time on our negotiations with the United States. These are matters that the Hon. Member should appreciate and understand before he tries to speak in this House.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that we are going to defend this Bill and that it will pass. I would like to ask the Members of the Opposition to stop their biased comments and to show that they understand the economic facts so that our Bill may receive quick passage.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I am glad that a Conservative Member has been able to take part in this debate and to speak about Bill C-96 not only to the Members of this House, but also, through television, to the entire Canadian population, especially to say what he has just said. If I have understood him correctly, in the context of this debate, the reason for the deficit is that the previous Government spent too much for post-secondary education, medicare and hospital insurance since these are the issues with which this Bill deals.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at this Bill, we find that it amends before it should an agreement signed by the provinces and the federal Government following lengthy discussions to change the way things were done between 1977 and 1982. This Bill re-opens an old discussion but despite what has been said several times, the 6 and 5 program had a very specific objective and it did not affect social programs, medicare or hospital insurance. However, in this Bill, the rules are being changed in the middle or near the end of the game since there was still one year remaining before the expiry date of the 1982-87 federal-provincial agreements, and the provinces will lose $317 million.

Here is my question to the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine): If he were a provincial Government Minister and that half way through his fiscal year he were to receive from the federal Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) a note to the effect that for the next year alone Quebec would get $82 million less for those projects—$114 million in the case of Ontario—would he reduce hospital services, or would he increase university tuition fees? Would he reduce health care provided under health insurance? What would he advocate, and what would he tell those people, knowing as we do that hospital emergency rooms are overcrowded and that patients have to wait for months before being hospitalized? We know as well that post-secondary educational institutions are very hard pressed as a result of huge cutbacks made over the past few years.

I would like to know what the Hon. Member for Lévis would recommend to the provincial Education or Finance Ministers to balance their budgets after learning half way through their fiscal year that the federal Government will not live up to its commitments and reduce transfer payments which had been promised and on which the provinces relied to finance their programs.

Mr. Fontaine: First of all, Mr. Speaker, I take the liberty of expressing pride at witnessing the quick transition of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) from the back benches to the front row, right next to the Leader of the Official Opposition. I commend him for his performance, but that is about the last congratulations he will hear from me for a while.

I might point out that when he was Quebec Finance Minister, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides set up various health programs. Well, Mr. Speaker, do you know how much it costs today to keep a patient in a hospital room for one day in the Province of Quebec? As a result of their decisions and the kind of health system we have Quebec, it now costs $550 per day to have someone in hospital in Quebec. This is a result of the action taken by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides when he was a member of the team managing Quebec.

Secondly, I will point out, in answer to a question asked by the Hon. Member, that the contributions to transfer payments by the Government of Canada remain at 19.4 per cent of its Budget; there is no reduction. I will also point out that the economic renewal which we launched in September 1984 largely makes up for the sacrifices the provinces are now asked to make because that renewal has allowed the hiring of people. Over 120,000 new jobs have been created in Quebec and these people will pay taxes and provide funds to the Quebec treasury.

This is not what the Liberals were doing. They created unemployment which did not bring in any money. They had to compensate with additional transfer payments.

I will also point out to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides that Canada-Quebec agreements are still being signed and are very generous where Quebec is concerned.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I know that our time is limited, but I would ask the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) who is perhaps quite concerned about the presence of the Socialist Party in the House of Commons to please respond to several arguments which I put forth in my speech.

He also seems to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that what I said was unfounded. He ignores the statements made by the Quebec Minister of Finance in his Budget speech last Thursday. They were not casual comments made by the Minister of Finance, but in the well-considered part of his speech, he criticized the federal Government for its reduced assistance to educational programs and medicare.

Also the Hon. Member, when criticizing the Socialist Party, apparently ignored the fact that according to polls there are now more people in his region, in Quebec, who support the New Democratic Party than the Progressive Conservative Party. This is a historical point in time. But I would like to emphasize the fact that we are starting indeed, we are doing our share to defend Quebecers, much better it would seem than the Progressive Conservative Members are doing.

Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member suggests we are wrong when we say that the deficit is being transferred to the provinces. I quoted from the comments made by the former Finance critic of the Official Opposition, who is now Minister of Finance. Now, does the Hon. Member really believe that his Minister of Finance was wrong when he made those criticisms three or four years ago? Mr. Speaker, I suggest the Hon. Member should think that over. The fact that he has touched on almost every subject under the sun without directly supporting the cuts made in those payments under the established program funding, indicates the Bill cannot be defended.

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Center (Mr. Cassidy) once more has missed a beautiful opportunity to remain silent. Is the Hon. Member aware, when referring to polls, that the Socialist Party has no Member whatsoever east of the Ontario border? I would advise him to pay attention at the next election. He will realize that the real poll then will probably result in their losing seats.

Now, when the Hon. Member refers to the speech made by the Quebec Finance Minister, I must inform him that I read the speech and it is on page 14 that he is referring to what Mr.Lévesque stated.

Mr. Lévesque, speaking as a politician rather than a manager, had to put the blame on somebody else for increasing the tax burden of Quebecers. That is quite normal. But Mr. Lévesque is still more competent than you are at managing a province. He knows we are at a point in time when belt-tightening is in order. You also should have understood the over-all gist of his Budget, the thrust being to use restraint and recognize the constraints imposed by the current deficit. Those constraints were put in place when you were in bed with the Liberals, when they were in power.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: A brief question by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper).

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has just said that everybody must share in the sacrifices to reduce the deficit. I should like to know why his Government has reduced the tax rates for the most affluent people in our society? Why have they given the capital gains tax exemption if they really think that everybody has to make sacrifices?

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, this socialist Member does not understand that people are in business to make profits. Theoretically speaking, it is because of these people who are in business that you, people of the socialist party, can live without doing anything. It is thanks of them. They are the people who have achieved a standard of living which allows you to earn a living while complaining about what others are doing and saying.

You have never had any philosophy or means to develop the human and natural resources of this country. You are nothing but parasites in the society. That is the reason why there will never be any business development under any socialist system anywhere in the world.

[English]

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, no Bill that we have considered since the Tories came to power is more important than Bill C-96. I welcome the amendment that we are debating, which calls for this Bill to be read six months hence in order to give the Government an opportunity to reflect upon the Bill.

I believe that this Bill is disastrous. Not only will it have a bad effect on every Canadian because it endangers our health and our education, it will affect our future in every sense.

The Conservative Government in Ottawa did not ask or consult with the provinces, but unilaterally decided to advise the provinces that the federal Government will cut the expected federal transfer payments to the provinces. Those payments which are to be made for health and education will affect everyone in our country.

The Tory Government in Ottawa did this in spite of the protestations of the provinces and despite the appeals from those who work in the field of education and in the field of health. They warned of the disastrous repercussions coming from this Bill.

Over the next five years the Government will slash $6 billion from these promised transfer payments to the provinces, $4 billion of which should have gone to health and $2 billion of which should have gone to post-secondary education. The Conservative Government in Ottawa is making a grave mistake for which all of us will eventually have to pay. Some of us will pay sooner, in health, and some of us will pay later, in education.

The Government's first grave mistake is that it has shamefully broken almost all of its promises.

An Hon. Member: That is not true.

Mr. de Corneille: Second, it is taking from the weak and giving to the strong; taking from the poor and giving to the rich. The third grave mistake of the Conservative Government is that it is short-sighted. It is cutting back on our richest and most precious treasure—our people.

I said that the Tories had broken their promises and one of the Tory Members across the way said that this was not true.

I will illustrate how the Government has betrayed the people of Canada by not keeping its promises in regard to post-secondary education. Prior to the 1984 election the Canadian Association of University Teachers asked the Government what the future would have in store in the field of post-secondary education financing if the Tories were elected to power. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) supported the official Conservative response before the last election that: "We are committed to sustaining the current federal financial commitment according to the formula set out in the 1977 agreement." In order to ensure that the Tories were not misunderstanding or hedging on that question, the Canadian Association of University Teachers asked a second question to elucidate on the answer to the first question. They asked if the Conservative Party supported the continuation of the Established Programs Financing Act in its present form with regard to post-secondary education and, if not, what they believed should replace the EPF transfers to the provinces for post-secondary education.

The Tories replied that they fully supported the original 1977 funding formula and the legislation providing for that. Prior to the last election, nothing could have been more clear than that promise made by the Conservatives. Those were their words, not in one answer but in two.

We know that the Prime Minister did not keep his promise. He broke it. The proof of that is found in Bill C-96. He did not keep his promise since this Bill changes the 1977 funding formula. It cuts the formula back from what was approximately 7.4 per cent to a figure of 5 per cent. Worse than breaking a promise, the Government has broken its agreement with the provinces. Before the end of the fiscal year, March 31, 1987, the Government has cut back in terms of its agreement. This move is not only a breach of promise but it breaks an agreement which was in existence between the Government of Canada and the provinces.

Obviously, the Tories do not care one whit about the promises they made during the election campaign. As my colleague from Laval-des-Rapides pointed out, the breaking of this agreement with the provinces leaves them in a situation of finding themselves with an unfulfilled promise. A breach of promise and a breach of agreement are totally unacceptable to the morality of this country. Beyond any question, this is inexcusable.

In fact the Tories admit that they have changed the formula. This is a devastating and savage attack on the medical care programs of the provinces. I wish to point out that even when the Liberal Government was carrying out a special short range attack on inflation in its famous and successful 6-and 5-program it never touched the medical side of the transfer payments. Indeed, at that time the Tories vigorously criticized the Liberals for imposing a cap of 6 per cent for the first year and 5 per cent for the next on the post-secondary education section of the transfer payments. As Don Savage, the Executive Director of the Canadian Association of University Teachers, pointed out, the Liberal Government caps were temporary. They were in place for about two years. The Conservative cap of 5 per cent is permanent. This is what Mr. Savage had to say about the matter:

In the 1984 election the Conservatives promised to maintain the 1977 arrangements. Now they are subverting them.

The Government is subverting them in this Bill. That is the tragedy of it.

How the Tories complained about the way the Liberals cut back to 6 per cent and 5 per cent in order to fight inflation for two years with regard to a section of these transfer payments! Not only did they swear that if they were elected they would go back to the old formula but they said that they would increase support for post-secondary education and for research. The following are the words of the Conservative Member of Parliament for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) who pleaded the case eloquently in 1982. He said:

We must have the development of intellectual capacity in the country. The only place in which that can happen is in the post-secondary educational stream. We require universities, technical colleges and community colleges. If we do not train our people, they will be incapable of competing in a highly technical world, will have to use the technologies of others, will truly be hewers of wood and drawers of water, and will have to live to the standards that exist in South Korea and Taiwan. It is a competitive world. If we do not keep up and keep ahead, our standard of living will drop to those of other countries.

We must keep our universities and colleges staffed, growing, capable of doing research and development and training people. That is a priority.

Those are the words of a Conservative Member of Parliament spoken at a time when the Liberal Government was in power. He was criticizing that Liberal Government for a temporary cut of transfer payments to 6-and 5-in order to fight inflation. His Government has now placed a permanent cap of 5 per cent on the matter. The Hon. Member for Mississauga South knows that this move is disastrous. However, we do not hear him complaining now about Bill C-96 to say that, in fact, his own Party has reneged on the priority of which he spoke.

The following are the words of the present Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) as she said them prior to the Tories being elected. She said:

What really seems clear to me from the Minister's speech this morning is that the Government, divorced as it is from the real world, does not seem to be aware of the growing crisis in Canadian post-secondary institutions.

After one more quotation I will stop torturing my Conservative colleagues across the way. The following are the words of the Hon. Member for Brandon—Souris (Mr. Clark) who said:

We need more consultation with the provinces. We need the development of a national education strategy. Above all, we must understand that this is not the time to reduce in any way the vital resources which the federal Government has been transferring to the provinces.

That is what was said then by those members of the Government who were criticizing the cuts. Until that time the actual escalators which the Liberals brought into effect for the years 1970 on were 11 per cent, 10 per cent, 10 per cent, 11 per cent and 12 per cent. We then brought in the 6-and 5-program. Of course, this certainly indicates that the previous Government was providing escalators which were at least much larger and more significant. Nonetheless, the Tories considered that that record was not good enough.

Where are these Tory MPs now when their Government, their Party, and their Prime Minister have broken faith with the provincial Governments and, above all, with our youth, the future of us all? Why do Conservative Members of Parliament not speak up now as they did before the last election and try to do something to save our educational system?

I have said that the Tories stand condemned for three reasons. The first is for their breach of promise, upon which I have elaborated. The second is that they make the strong stronger but, tragically, in doing so they make the weak weaker. The Government has a knack, not only in its Budgets but in its programs, for making the rich richer and the poor poorer. As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador (Mr. Rompkey), said so eloquently on April 25:

In my own Province of Newfoundland there will be a reduction of $7 million in 1986-87. Newfoundland will get $7 million less than it had expected. It will have to find that money within its own economy. Over a five-year period the province will receive $48 million less than it expected. That is in the province which has the highest unemployment rate in the country and an economy which is very, very vulnerable, and which has already experienced cut-backs in government programs. It has seen the lay-off of public servants. It has seen the world oil price plummet, which has put in jeopardy the one great hope which the province had, that is, the development of Hibernia. Newfoundland and other provinces like it will be forced to look to their already weakened economies to make up the disparity in funding.

In his attempt to come to grips with inflation at the federal level and to lower the federal deficit, the Minister is passing the problem on to the provincial economies. I am not alone in taking this position. It has been echoed by the Premier of Newfoundland.

This is the concern which we have. There is no doubt whatsoever that it will be students and the economically poorer provinces who will suffer the first and the most as a result of this cut and others imposed by the Government. I say this, whether or not we are referring to student loans, bursaries, tuition fees, or the quality of facilities in education. Because of this regressive Tory policy the poor will get poorer and the rich will get richer. There will be poorer education and fewer opportunities for the poor.

In November, 1985, Premier after Premier protested the action of the Government and said that the reduction in the growth of federal funds for health and education was made without consultation. Take, for example, some of the concerns expressed by Tory leaders in the provinces. Terence Donahoe, Nova Scotia's Minister of Human Resources Development and Training, said the following as quoted by The Globe and Mail of January 28, 1986:

—if Ottawa goes ahead with a reduction in grants, "it simply will emasculate the post-secondary education system. It is going to be chaos and chaotic. Regardless of whose numbers you are going to use, the system is simply going to fall apart.

How can the Tory members of the Government here in Ottawa say that it is not true that this will have devastating effects on the provinces or that the provinces understood and agreed with this? How can they possibly put that notion forward when we heard from Newfoundland Tory Premier Brian Peckford, as reported in the same article, the following:

We will have to limit students going to our universities and everybody won't have a free chance to go to university.

Saskatchewan Tory Premier, Grant Devine, said:

Before you ask teachers and nurses (to bear the cuts), you got to carve up a bit.

The Tory Premier of New Brunswick, Richard Hatfield, said:

I don't have a choice. I can gouge the economy or I can gouge social programs.

Howard Pawley of Manitoba also protested, as did the Premier of Ontario.

Practically every Premier protested this action of the federal Government. Tory Members are acting as if this was only part of the course of nature. It is not. As Patrick Kenniff of Concordia is quoted as saying, "If you think education is expensive, try ignorance".

Canadians will not fall for this kind of explanation or for this kind of Government. That is one of the reasons for Tories being turfed out in province after province. Tories are burying our talents in the ground rather than risking them by investing in the health and education of our people.

The Bill that cuts back on what the provinces were promised for post-secondary education and health care is mean. It hurts the weak and the young people. It does all of those things that Tory MPs from Kingston and the Islands, Mississauga South and Brandon—Souris said, while in opposition, should not happen. Those exact things are happening under the Tory Government.

This measure will not lower the deficit as the Premier of Ontario, David Peterson, so rightly said to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). He said:

You are only transferring the national problem to us.

Yes, the Prime Minister is not eliminating the deficit, he is just passing the buck. He is passing it on to the provinces and the provinces often have to pass it on to the young people. The young people have to pay for the deficit with their careers and their futures. The Government has passed the buck to them.

The Government was not listening to Ed Anderson or Don Savage of the Canadian Association of University Teachers, or to the Association of University Colleges of Canada, or to John Casola of the Canadian Federation of Students. Despite the recommendations of the famous Johnson report and the findings of the Bovey Commission in Ontario, the Royal Commission in Nova Scotia, the Wright report and the Macdonald Royal Commission report, the Government is not listening and is not offering leadership. We need leadership in this area.

The Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) has been going across the country speaking and listening to university students, professors, and administrators. He is profoundly concerned about post-secondary education. As the Leader of the Official Opposition, he has been alerting the country to the need for a national approach to post-secondary education. He is insisting that we need a way to get the provinces and the federal Government to co-operate and to make sure that the money the federal Government transfers to education in the provinces is spent on education, unlike what happens in the Province of B.C. He wants to make sure that federal incentives to the provinces be arranged for research and development and that the promised targets for research and development are reached. He wants to see that attention is given to strengthen centres of excellence, that business and school co-operation is encouraged, and that we increase our effectiveness in spending. That is the program of the Leader of the Official Opposition. That is what this Government is not doing for us. It is not offering leadership. It is simply cutting back on its promises and even on its agreements.

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) on his excellent speech. In a province like Ontario, for example, this change in the transfer payment will mean the loss of close to $3 billion by the end of 1991-92. Although the Province of Ontario is probably one of the richest provinces in Canada, does the Hon. Member think that the Ontario Government can accept this cut and manage to keep the same level of services, or will the Department of Education, for example, have to cut back on university services or increase tuition fees? Perhaps the Hon. Member could comment on that.

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Speaker, yes, the price the Province of Ontario alone will have to pay in the period indicated in loss of promised revenues for post-secondary education certainly will be, as pointed out by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), $3 billion. Obviously this will mean that there will be a lessening of the quality of education and a deterioration in the capital assets of the universities.

It is a shocking fact that the library of Queen's University is now rated 85th among those of North American universities. This obviously means that that university is not finding the funds necessary for capital expenditures. This is just one example of what is happening.

We think of Queen's University as being one of the great universities in this country. It is now suffering these kinds of set-backs. Imagine what the other, newer universities in the province must now face in terms of required capital expenditures and operating expenses.

Obviously, in answer to my colleague's question, the situation that exists in the Province of Ontario is grave. Already the Premier has given an additional $50 million to the universities. That Government is looking at this problem and is trying to find a solution.

The other solution suggested by my colleague was to increase tuition fees. That was something that the Bovey Commission of Ontario began to think might be necessary because of the cut-backs in promised support. Obviously this means less access to universities for the poorer students. Why do I say that? Are there not student loans? There may be student loans, but parents will probably not allow their children to run up debts that are so high if the price of tuition goes out of sight. This is a very serious cut-back to the future of our young people, and the students from less affluent homes will continue to bear the brunt. The children of the elite will get to university but the children of those who are in the working and middle classes will have to suffer. They will not get the education and they will then become the hewers of wood and drawers of water, thanks to the Tories.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the speech made by the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille). Of course we agreed with him when he called for a revolt in the Tory ranks in protest against the legislation that is before us today. I am also appreciative of the revelation that the Leader of the Liberal Party is now engaged in the kind of consultation process with universities in which we have been engaged for some 18 months now.

I listened with particular interest to the Hon. Member when he referred to the 6-and 5-cuts which were perpetrated by the Liberal Government. Those cuts clearly hurt the post-secondary educational system in Canada and made their own contribution to cutting back accessibility. The Hon. Member indicated that they were not permanent changes as were the changes suggested in the legislation before us. I was quite reassured to hear that. I just want to know when the money was put back.

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend will find that it immediately and automatically reverted back because the legislation was only for the periods of 6-and 5-. Inevitably there was some loss over that period, but the formula reverted back automatically to the original formula which remained in place. If the Hon. Member examines the legislation more closely, he will find that it automatically reverted. In fact for one year the Tories brought in about a 7.4 per cent formula which followed the existing formula automatically.

What I am criticizing is that for the next year, the year leading up to March 31, 1987, they have cooked up a new formula which breaks the existing agreement that does not expire until March 31, 1987. They are not only breaking their election promise to keep the 1977 funding formula, they are also breaking into the middle of an agreement period which does not expire until March 31, 1987. It is disgusting for any Government to break faith in terms of an agreement which exists between the Government of Canada and the provinces.

I should like to refer to the activities of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. Ever since he was elected to the House he has been active and has shown a total involvement in the whole area of youth and post-secondary education. Hardly a month has gone by that he has not visited a large number of universities and colleges to listen, to speak with, and to assess the problems in that area of our future.

I thank the Hon. Member for his question and the opportunity to make that clarification.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Just to ensure that the facts are clear, I proffer a further question to my hon. colleague. Were the six and five cuts made with the unanimous consent and enthusiasm of the provinces? Was the $350 million which was involved ever returned to the universities? Is the loss in those two years appreciably less than the two-year loss which the post-secondary educational system will experience as a result of the Bill before us? Finally, was there an organized effort on the part of the Official Opposition in the form of a task force, such as the one established by the New Democratic Party, to speak with young people about the problems of post-secondary education?

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Speaker, I am not familiar with the activities of the New Democratic Party. I am not aware in detail of what it has been involved in, in terms of its tours, trips, and research. I hope the NDP will share it with the House by reporting on the matter.

I should like to deal with the more important question the Hon. Member asked. I pointed out that obviously the funds lost during the 6-and 5-, during the period of time in which we dealt with the inflation emergency, were lost for good. Since our dear friends in the NDP never govern and never have to be responsible, they enjoy the opportunity to criticize any efforts which are made to deal with economic problems, whether they are made during a Liberal or a Conservative regime. When the subject of inflation arose, I do not remember them taking any kind of responsible action in that respect or making any supporting efforts to find a program to bring down inflation. However, I have to point out that the 6-and 5-measures were successful. They were temporary, they were taken off, and we returned to the present system.

As a final comment, I am not satisfied that enough was done in the past, even though the Liberal Government made an important enough contribution to post-secondary education and showed that the federal Government had an important role to play. We do not need to do less, as was suggested by the Tories. I suggest that we need to do more. The Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition has shown leadership in this question, not only by throwing money at post-secondary education but by working out ways whereby we can work with the provinces to ensure that the money given to them reaches the targets, to ensure that the provinces themselves can participate, and to ensure that there is an over-all approach to the important areas of financing universities and colleges, of financing economically important research which helps business, and of pure science and the social sciences, all of which are important to the future of the country.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I must remind Hon. Members that from this point onward speeches will be limited to 10 minutes.

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I cannot say that I am pleased to be speaking on Bill C-96 because it is a Bill which we do not want to see before the House. It attacks two absolutely essential programs in terms of health care and post-secondary education. Also it shows a betrayal of promises made by Conservative Party Members when they were in opposition and repeated at length during the 1984 election campaign. They indicated that they would respect and indeed return to the EPF formula of 1977.

We see a chipping away of our social programs in the case of the old age pension, from which they backed off, the family allowance, and the child tax credit. It is a 3 per cent attack. They do not have the nerve to attack 100 per cent of the program. They want to reduce it by 3 per cent per year. Here we have a reduction in the order of 2 per cent per year. Perhaps it does not seem all that serious, but people must realize that it is a cumulative 2 per cent and that it is in vitally important areas. With a rising elderly population, we can expect in any event that health care costs will rise. In the area of post-secondary education, the Government says that we need a well-trained labour force and well-educated people in order to stimulate the economy, to develop research, to develop technology, and to compete in the modern world. The Tories are going in the wrong direction.

The problem arises out of the projections which have been made for growth in expenditures under the Established Programs Financing Act, 1977. The agreement which was negotiated with the provinces and entrenched in legislation was that there would be increases in the federal contribution in line with the Gross National Product and population growth. The projected increase was 7 per cent. With the proposal before us in Bill C-96, the object is to cut 2 per cent, leaving 5 per cent. Under the old formula the provinces could have expected $97.7 billion between 1986-87 and 1990-91. Under the new formula, if Bill C-96 passes, they will receive $92.1 billion, or $5 billion less than they were led to believe they would receive. For Ontario that is roughly $2 billion less than it expected.

Let us look at the breakdown between health care and education. Roughly 68 per cent is for health and 32 per cent is for post-secondary education. Both will be hit very badly. Let us remember that when the Liberals hit these two programs with their 6-and 5-measure, the Conservatives in opposition said that it was wrong and that the programs should not be attacked. Now we have the Nielsen report of the Conservative study team. It recommends against Established Programs Financing because:

> It restricts flexibility of provinces in responding to pressures within their health systems.

This is a euphemism. Yes, it indeed restricts what provinces can do in order that Canadians will get some protection against extra billing and privatization. We need that kind of protection.

The Conservatives in their campaign handbook said:

> We would return to the 1977 funding formula.

During the campaign itself the Tories said:

> We are committed to sustaining the federal financial commitment according to the formula set out in the 1977 agreement—we believe that financing of post-secondary education is an important priority for both levels of government.

We see Tory Governments provincially cutting post-secondary education, and we see it being done federally.

Before the Established Programs Financing Act of 1977, programs were cost shared on a 50/50 basis. Since then the federal share has dropped. In the first year of operation, 1977-78, the federal share went down to 48.7 per cent. By 1982-83 it was 42.6 per cent, in 1986-87, 41.0 per cent, and the projection for 1990-91 is 36.0 per cent. Yet throughout this time we see health care costs rising simply because of demographic changes. Elderly people require more health care. This legislation does not take their needs into account. Health care technology is changing. If we are going to give the best quality care to people, there will be increasing costs.

The Canadian Medical Association says this legislation will create a two-tier health care system as between rich and poor provinces, and:

> The dream of Canadians having access to reasonably comparable health services, no matter where they live or travel, appears to have been abandoned by the Government of Canada.

> Health care is already underfunded. Hospitals operating on a financial deficit have become the norm. Hospital beds are not available, emergency departments are overcrowded with patients stored in the corridors and many patients wait for months for admission to hospital as waiting lists grow longer.

In the poorer provinces there is already a crisis situation. This Bill will make things worse.

Manitoba has been leading the fight among the provinces to maintain services as they are. All provinces are critical of cuts of this nature. The Manitoba Government has made it very clear that it thinks that health care and post-secondary costs should be brought into line with economic growth, but it cannot be done overnight. It cannot be done by one level of Government acting arbitrarily and unilaterally. There has to be orderly progress.

In the case of post-secondary education in many provinces, we see universities and colleges attacked by their own provincial Governments. Universities and colleges are being attacked both ways by cuts federally and provincially. Students are suffering as a result. Tuition costs have gone up. Universities are much less accessible than they were before. There are limitations on enrolment. It is not just the largest and most prestigious universities that are limiting enrolment. Whole programs are being cut.

I notice in Toronto that the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education is to be closed. The situation in B.C. is much more dramatic with really serious cut-backs throughout universities and colleges there.

Let me quote from a report prepared for the Secretary of State of Canada (Mr. Bouchard) on the federal financing of post-secondary education, by A. W. Johnson. A number of absolutely key points are made about the changes that we have seen in recent years. Let me quote:

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act

The proportion of the GNP made available by government to Canada's universities and colleges for their core operations has been declining since 1977-78, the year the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Established Programs Financing Act was passed—from 1.35 per cent in that year to 1.24 per cent in 1984-85.

The proportion has probably gone down since then but these are the latest data available. The report goes on:

Between 1977-78 and 1984-85, enrolment in universities increased by 27 per cent, and that in colleges by 36 per cent.

These are substantial increases. It continues:

During the same period government support of core operations, expressed in real terms, increased by 2.5 per cent.

That is shameful and it means that real programs have had to be cut, classroom sizes go up, purchases of equipment and library supplies and all of that have suffered as a result of expenditures not keeping pace with increasing enrolment. The report goes on:

University tuition fees, when expressed in real dollars, have been rising in every province since 1981-82—except in Quebec.

Enrolment limitations—services which are vital to research and higher education, library services, research equipment, computer services—are falling behind, in many cases seriously so.

I see that my time is up, Mr. Speaker. Let me close by saying this is shocking legislation. It attacks all people by attacking the health care system, elderly people in particular. It is unwise legislation, it is hitting young people who want post-secondary education, and the Government has the gall to say that young people and a trained labour force are needed in order to stimulate the economy and to make Canada competitive in the world. But we will not have that so long as universities and colleges do not get the funding they need. That is the situation as it is right now. We have a Conservative Government going in the wrong direction, absolutely contrary to the promises made in the election campaign, absolutely contrary to everything it said in opposition.

We are going to oppose this Bill. We have taken the view that the Bill should be sent back for study for another six months in order to give a chance for the federal Government and the provinces to work out better terms, ones that will respect the needs of Canadians. We should not proceed with Bill C-96 as it is now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On debate I will recognize next the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—St. James (Mr. Minaker).

Is it the pleasure of the House that I call it one o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock today.

At 12.58 p.m. the House took recess.

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

THE SENATE

APPOINTMENT OF MICHEL COGGER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, it is not what you know but who you know. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) proved that last Friday night when he appointed his close friend and backroom schemer, Michel Cogger, to the Senate to represent the Province of Quebec. Whatever happened to the sanctimonious platitudes of the summer of 1984 which were repeated in the House of Commons in September of 1985? The Prime Minister was to "reform this instrument of our national life".

So proud was the Prime Minister of his friend, Cogger, that he appointed him at 6 p.m. on Friday after the lights had dimmed in the Press Gallery. Perhaps the statement of the Conservative Leader on May 24, 1983, was the most accurate. He said: "There will be jobs for Liberals and NDPs, too, after I have been in power for 15 years and I can't find a single living, breathing Tory left to appoint".

FORESTRY

CALL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF SEPARATE MINISTRY

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, this week is National Forestry Week in Canada. The Conservative Government has committed the sum of $4 million to be spent over the next two years on advertising designed to create public awareness of the importance of our national forests. Canada needs more than public relations and election promises if our forests are to continue providing jobs and resources for our future.

Last June the Committee on Fisheries and Forestry passed a motion as follows: "This committee urges the Government of Canada, in the strongest terms, to establish a separate federal Ministry of Forestry and a Standing Committee on Forestry". My amendment, which also received all-Party support, added: "—and a national forest and forest industries Act". Action on this motion would constitute practical and far-reaching recognition on the theme: "Your forests, your future".

THE LATE ALAN BORDEN

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Alan Borden who lost a courageous battle last Wednesday, April 30, 1986. Alan was the immediate past-president of B'nai Brith Canada. In 1978 he was instrumental in arranging to have a Jerusalem pavillion in the Metropolitan Toronto International Caravan. He also led with excellence the fundraising activities of the B'nai Brith Foundation. His vision was also evident in Israel where, thanks to his initiative, a Mother and Child Health Care Centre was established in Tel Aviv for disadvantaged people.

Alan will be remembered by his many colleagues at B'nai Brith across Canada and internationally. Alan Borden will be missed most by his wife Betsy and their two daughters, Samantha and Lindsay, his parents, Harvey and Ruth Borden, and many other close relatives. May his family be comforted among the mourners of Zion.

RESPECT FOR LIFE WEEK

WORK OF PRO-LIFE MOVEMENT

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of Members that this week has been designated Respect for Life Week in Canada. The goal of this week is to heighten public awareness of the work of the pro-life movement in Canada. The pro-life movement embodies the concerns of millions of Canadians who view the right to life of the unborn as a fundamental human right.

Several years ago over one million Canadians signed a petition to this Parliament to afford legal protection for the unborn. Every year in Canada over 65,000 pregnancies end in abortion. This needless waste of life must be addressed by all of us as concerned Canadians working to reform attitudes and to change laws. During this Respect for Life Week may we, not only parliamentarians but all Canadians, rededicate ourselves to the respect for every human life.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

WHITE PAPER—TIMING OF PUBLICATION

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, I have questioned the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Andre) in committee, and last Thursday and Friday I questioned both the Associate Minister and the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen) on when the Government will release its long promised White Paper on defence policy. This is the paper which was to fulfil Tory promises and give the Armed Forces a glorious tomorrow. Tomorrow has come and gone, but there is still no policy paper. Straight forward questions have been met with smart aleck replies. Diversionary tactics are used to confuse the issue and the Ministers look increasingly silly as it becomes more apparent each day that the Emperor has no clothes. The Government wrapped itself in promises of 6 per cent real growth in the defence budget, but the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) tore this off and exposed two ashen-faced Ministers protected only by the wilting promises of a Government which cannot be trusted. The Tory defence cupboard is bare. It is apparent, Mr. Speaker, that despite their self-righteous protestations the Ministers are bare as well.

NEW DAIRY POLICY

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Today, Mr. Speaker, I want to bear witness in the House to the Quebec dairy producers' very high level of satisfaction toward our farm policy. They are aware of the dairy policy which has now been established for the next five years. Hon. Members will remember that the former Liberal administration used to hold our farm producers hostage by making public every 12 months a new dairy policy or maintaining the status quo.

Moreover, since May 1, 1986, these same dairy producers are entitled to a 5.5 cents a litre exemption on the fuel they use for agricultural purposes.

Our Party has faith in the future of agriculture. Since September 1984, it has worked together with small and medium-sized farms, and our Government will continue to get involved in the Quebec agricultural industry, as all Quebecers will appreciate when the Province of Quebec has examined and accepted the Canada-Quebec farm subsidiary agreement.

MULTICULTURALISM

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Jelinek) has challenged the multicultural policy developed over the past 15 years. He appears to believe that grants supporting cultural retention have led to the social, economic and political isolation of minorities to the detriment of Canada. It is not the support of programs within minority communities which inhibits their participation in Canada, but rather the feeble efforts of Government to encourage that participation.

Even while high rates of unemployment hurt minorities most while exacerbating the scapegoating of the same minorities, the Government adopts employment policies which can but make matters worse, while itself failing to provide leadership in the hiring of minorities in the Public Service. Indeed, cuts in the Public Service promise little hope for future progress. Cynicism abounds in the form of employment equity instead of mandatory affirmative action, promises, not kept, of greatly increased minority appointments, and immigration policies which sacrifice families to money. This Government still perceives one third of our people as on the outside looking in.

PENSIONS

CALL FOR REFORM OF PRIVATE SECTOR

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, as with the weather, there is much talk about pension reform in the private sector, but with little action. In the context of current legislation, the time is now for that sector to increase substantially the numbers covered. Provision must be made for a more mobile workforce, giving earlier vesting rights and increased portability. Pension fund assets now exceed $125 billion. The time has come when such funds may not be subject to unilateral use or abuse, or even to the risk of third party claims. So long as those funds are subject to corporate benefit and tax breaks, it is the individual employee who should be protected. Even an allocation of one-third of the amount of those funds would greatly assist those early retirees who live on fixed pensions, a pre-CPP plan, and pre-inflation dollars.

MONTREAL BOTANICAL GARDEN

ESTABLISHMENT OF COMPUTER SYSTEM

Mr. Guy Ricard (Laval): Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to a major Quebec and Canadian institution, namely, the Botanical Garden in Montreal. Ever since it was established in 1931, this international centre for botanical study has been a source of enjoyment for several generations.

The botanical garden is starting another season of activities aimed at increasing our knowledge of horticulture, nature and ecology generally. Beginning this week, a computerized system will enable the many visitors to discover the various facets of plant life and horticulture. Thanks to this world first, the botanical garden in Montreal will be at the forefront of horticultural information.

From Quebec flora to the interrelations which make it possible for men and plants to live side by side, there will be points of interest for all. Moreover, the largest monocoque greenhouse in Canada, built at a cost of over $1 million, will be opened next Thursday night. I invite therefore all my fellow Canadians to come and visit this summer «la belle province» and especially the great City of Montreal and enjoy true Quebec hospitality.

AIR TRANSPORT

POSSIBLE CLOSURE OF MONCTON-RIVERVIEW AIR TRAFFIC CONTROL CENTRE

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, again New Brunswick, this time the Moncton-Riverview area, is being threatened by the prospect of unemployment as a result of the Government's decisions. After the CN workshops in Moncton, the same situation may arise at the air traffic control centre in Moncton-Riverview.

It seems the Government intends to close down this control centre, and if that is the case, 200 workers will lose their jobs, and Moncton and area will lose $6.5 million in income.

It seems no consultations have been held, which has made workers very concerned. I too am very concerned, Mr. Speaker, about Moncton and New Brunswick. What is going on with this Government? Has it decided to erase our region from the map? Is it going to apply the Schefferville solution to New Brunswick? Ever since this party came to power, workers in New Brunswick have been made to feel insecure as a result of the threat of unemployment. It is an insult to the people of New Brunswick!

DISASTERS

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—LACK OF INFORMATION

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, the Chernobyl incident was handled by Moscow in the most high-handed and irresponsible manner and reflects, once again, its obsession with losing face internationally. It is very difficult to believe that the second most powerful country in the world would apply its weapon of disinformation at a time when it has created such a horrible threat to its neighbours. It had both a moral and legal responsibility to make public this accident. Yet, it was not until Sweden and Finland discovered abnormally high radiation readings that the matter received the attention it required.

This is in sharp contrast to the Three Mile Island incident. In that case when a nuclear power plant reactor sprung a leak, detailed information was made available immediately, both to the public and to the International Atomic Energy Agency. Secretary General Gorbachev's promise of greater—

THE MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

CULTURAL CUISINE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of my hon. colleagues to how quickly the events of this House find their counterpart in the popular culture of our country. I refer specifically to the business arrangement between the Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) and his wife, which the Canadian public has heard so much about in the last week.

In the Byward Market in Ottawa this weekend I happened to enter the Budapest Delicatessen, which was featuring as its special, the Sink Stevens sandwich.

Allow me to share the ingredients with you. First you take a layer of turkey, you add a layer of hot air and you finish it off with a layer of baloney. Lay it away interest free and there you have the Sink Stevens special. At $1.99 it is a real steal.

EXCITEMENT OF EXHIBITS AND PAVILIONS

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Awesome—it's the only word to describe Expo 86 in Vancouver, British Columbia. It is electric, colourful, fast-moving and fun. From the Scream Machine to the newest space technology; from African artifacts to Indonesian frog dancers; from opera to rock, it is all there.

The Canadian pavilion is a must where outstanding films and exhibits show how transportation and communications have shaped our history, our culture and will provide exciting opportunities for our future.

On behalf of all Canadians our thanks to those who had the dream, who created the magic, and who made it happen, and especially to Mr. Expo, Jimmy Pattison, B.C.'s newest national treasure. Friends, visitors, countrymen, don't miss it. From now until October 13 you will be glad you left home to be there.

THE YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT

SUPPORT FOR AMENDMENTS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate and thank the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Beatty) for introducing in the House last week a Bill to amend the Young Offenders Act to better protect the public.

During the past two years the Young Offenders Act has been the subject of much public criticism. Now, after developing a consensus of support among police, social service agencies, the legal profession, provincial Governments and citizens, the Solicitor General has introduced amendments allowing consecutive sentences greater than three years where a young person commits a subsequent offence while subject to an earlier sentence; ensuring records are kept in cases of acquittals by reason of insanity; allowing names to be published in some cases, and making it illegal to counsel children under 12 to commit crimes.

These are major improvements in the Young Offenders Act. I urge the House to pass them quickly and to ensure that they become law before the summer recess.

PUBLIC POLL BY RADIO-CANADA—SOCIO-ECONOMIC REALITY

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, last week we were treated to a number of comments by Conservative Ministers and Members who were bragging that a survey of public servants released by the CBC was an endorsement of the present Government's policies. A Conservative Member even congratulated public servants on their objective analysis of this Government's performance and leadership. The Hon. Member must not have a very high opinion of our federal public servants if he thinks they are quite happy to be told they are going to lose their jobs.

Mr. Speaker, it is easy to analyze a survey the way they did it, but it is not that easy to tell the truth, and I think it would have been more accurate to say that the sample taken by the CBC did not at all reflect the social and economic situation in this area; that the cutbacks in staff announced by this Conservative Government did not become effective until April of this year; and that the really serious, dramatic and disastrous impact that the loss of these jobs will have on the local economy will not be felt until next year—

Mr. Speaker: Order please. The 60 seconds are up.

AGREEMENT ON CONSTRUCTION OF HYUNDAI PLANT IN QUEBEC—MINISTER'S ROLE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Once again, we have a Minister involved in a secret and very questionable deal. Only this time, by allowing the Korean auto company to break a commitment, it cost a minimum of 10,000 jobs to the Canadian economy last year. Under what authority did he waive the agreement with a Hyundai plant that would have required Hyundai to purchase over $300 million worth of Canadian goods? Was this done with the knowledge of the Prime Minister, was it done with the knowledge of the Cabinet, or was it his own private negotiation for his own private purposes?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, concerning the Hyundai negotiations, I think it is wise that we bear in mind that Hyundai is the first automotive company to go into the Province of Quebec in over 20 years and I am proud of it. We feel, in the negotiations leading up to Hyundai's decision to go into the Province of Quebec, that we negotiated an undertaking with the Hyundai motor car company that is more satisfactory and much more job creative than the previous Government had in place.

COMPANY POSITION ON AGREEMENT—AMOUNT OF GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister tell us if Hyundai demanded during those negotiations that it be allowed to break the agreement to purchase over $300 million worth of Canadian goods and, if so, why did the Government give such other generous financial assistance amounting to another $100 million? Why was that broken agreement not made public at the time? Why did you keep it secret? What were you trying to hide?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member asks what we are trying to hide. Absolutely nothing, because it is a good deal. It will result in 1,200 direct jobs alone as far as Bromont, Quebec is concerned, as well as another 1,200 indirect jobs. It is one of the finest job creation programs that that area of Quebec has in hand at the present time.

Mr. Axworthy: I would only say to the Minister that it is hard to say it is a good deal when you lost 10,000 jobs last year because you allowed that company to break the agreement.

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, now that this particular deal has been made public, along with all the other deals that have been made public, is it not time for the Minister to live up to his responsibility for accountability and step down until we can investigate what is going on?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, let me assure the House and all Hon. Members that I do not feel that making good deals, especially for the Province of Quebec, is any reason why this or any other Minister should step down.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO VICE-PRESIDENT OF HYUNDAI

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. How can the Minister say that he has made a good deal for Canada when Mr. Gibbons, Vice-President of Hyundai, confirmed publicly that the Minister gave up a legally binding undertaking with respect to the purchase of $300 million worth of Canadian goods in return for nothing more than a gentleman's agreement? How can he say that that is better than something which is legally binding? It is nothing more than a sweetheart deal, rather than jobs for Canadians.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, again, the Hon. House Leader of the Official Opposition has not been doing his homework. It is no gentleman's agreement. The fact is that the Hyundai motor car company has agreed to spend $300 million to create a new automotive plant facility in the Province of Quebec. As I indicated before, that is something which will directly and indirectly result in the creation of 2,400 jobs in that area.

I must also remind the Hon. Member that it was a jointly shared deal between the Province of Quebec and Canada. If he is criticizing this Government, then he must also criticize the Government of Quebec which felt it was a good deal.

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF DOCUMENTS

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is contradicting the Vice-President of Hyundai, Mr. Gibbons, who said he gave nothing more than a gentleman's agreement. If that is the case, will the Minister undertake right now to table today in the House each and every document pertaining to this deal so that the public can make its own judgment?

[Translation]

Will you do that, because the agreement you negotiated is a gentleman's agreement, not an agreement to create jobs

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member would get away from using as his chief source of research a 25-cent copy of The Toronto Star, I think his questioning would be a little better.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stevens: The fact is that it is a signed agreement. As the Hon. Member must know we announced publicly the signed agreement with Hyundai at the time it was signed. We gave the high points as far as that agreement is concerned.

Mr. Axworthy: But you didn't talk about breaking this agreement.

Mr. Stevens: It is an agreement which I think will be demonstrated to be one of the finest agreements ever signed by the Province of Quebec and by Canada in the interests of encouraging more automotive manufacturing in the Province of Quebec.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

APPROVAL OF GOVERNMENT DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is a supplementary question for the same Minister. The Minister knows that if they had lived up to their original agreement instead of getting the jobs that are now coming there would have been an additional 10,000 to 15,000 jobs in Canada. The Government has let them out of that. Only the present Minister could call that a good deal.

Will the Minister confirm that the decision to free them from this commitment was made last November? Will he tell us if he did it on his own authority—and he did not deal with this question—or did he take it to Cabinet and was it approved by the full Cabinet?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure the Hon. Member that when he starts bandying around so-called alternative job-creation figures the thing which we found most deficient with the previous Government's arrangement of simply saying: "In dollar terms, if you import so much we want you to export so much"—

Mr. Tobin: Did you have cabinet authority? Yes or no.

Mr. Stevens: —there was no job-creation relationship between those figures. We believe it is much more important to weigh the number of jobs that are being created. That is what we have done in this project.

Mr. Gauthier: Answer the question.

SOURCING OF PARTS BY HYUNDAI

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the House will know that the Minister went through the whole of last week not answering one question. He has not answered a single, serious—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order. Shape up there.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Broadbent: I wish to ask—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a question.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, considering that the agreement which the Minister unilaterally broke on his own would have required that company to spend some $300 million in Canada, which even the present Government should be able to figure out would have created a few jobs, and since it has given up that commitment, and also considering that the same company, Hyundai, which does not sell a single car in Japan—not a single car—spends hundreds of millions of dollars in Japan—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Broadbent: Why did the Government not get an explicit commitment from Hyundai to purchase some $300 million in parts in Canada?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if I may go back to the answers I was giving initially, the fact is that it was a negotiation which we felt resulted in an automotive plant being built in the Province of Quebec. That will not only be job-creative, as I have indicated, it will also result in substantial sourcing as the company works to a full auto pact status. In truth, the full agreement shows very clearly that this will be a much more job-creative approach than one under the old agreement. We have all the benefits of the old agreement but more assurance that we are going to get jobs out of this agreement. That is what this Government believes in.

FUTURE OF SAINTE-THÉRÈSE AUTOMOBILE PLANT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, considering that General Motors, Chrysler and Ford met very specific auto pact requirements to invest in Canada, and considering that one of those companies, General Motors, is now considering investing in the Province of Quebec but has objected seriously to the giveaway of the Government to Hyundai, is the Government going to accept responsibility for the possible destruction of 4,000 existing jobs in Sainte-Thérèse because it is trying to be a quick-buck artist by luring Hyundai here in the short run?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the—

Mr. Broadbent: Have you talked to GM recently?

Mr. Stevens: The Leader of the NDP has, I think, made an unfortunate reflection on a very worth-while automotive development in the Province of Quebec. He asked me if I have spoken to GM recently. Sure, I have spoken to George Peepples of GM recently and, contrary to what the Hon. Member is saying, Mr. Peebles is now very encouraged by the developments at Sainte-Thérèse and hopes that there will be a favourable announcement in due course. I wish the Hon. Member for Oshawa would show a little positive thinking concerning that plant rather than his negative thinking.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST INQUIRY

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. He knows that at the time he made the sweetheart deal with Hyundai, his personal company had loans outstanding with the Hanil Bank. He also knows that Hyundai is a major shareholder of the Hanil Bank. Would the Minister not agree that it constitutes a blatant conflict of interest when his personal business interests conflict with his public duty?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the truth is that regarding the preamble the Hon. Member put in place, I did not know what he alleges I knew.

LOANS WITH HANIL BANK

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, that is pretty hard to believe. He is asking Canadians to believe—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question, please.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, that stretches—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Nunziata: I would like to ask the Minister if he is prepared to rise and provide full particulars of the loans that remain outstanding with the Hanil Bank in order to ensure that the public interest was maintained and that his personal interests were not furthered by the sweetheart deal made with Hyundai.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that questions to Ministers are about their ministerial responsibilities, not their personal affairs.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: He set up a sweetheart deal!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The first question was in order, the second was not.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Deputy Prime Minister then.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You can question John Turner but you can't question the Speaker.

Ms. Copps: Slime!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Member will understand—

Mr. Nunziata: I would like to question the Deputy Prime Minister then.

Mr. Speaker: —that the Chair has to make those distinctions. Order, please.

HYUNDAI CONDITIONS INQUIRY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the same Minister. Would the Minister tell the House whether, during the negotiations, Hyundai told the Government of Canada that it would not build the plant in Quebec unless the $300 million purchase agreement was rescinded?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I can only relate to the Hon. Member what is in my own knowledge. As far as the Department is concerned, I would have to check, but as far as my knowledge is concerned, there was never such an ultimatum given.

REASON FOR GOVERNMENT DECISION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question must be obvious even to the Minister. If there was no such ultimatum, why then did the Government of Canada relinquish the $300 million purchase agreement since Hyundai was going to locate the plant in Quebec in any event?

• (1430)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think those in the House who have negotiated these types of deals will be well aware that they take a lengthy time. Much is negotiated; much is on the table. Our feeling was that over all we obtained a much better deal than the previous Government had obtained. As a term of that deal, we not only got the assurance in respect of the investment of $300 million in the plant in Quebec, but the assurance that there would be sourcing very similar to the sourcing which was contemplated under the earlier agreement, and a more concrete, binding agreement to ensure jobs for Canadians. That is what I hope the NDP will be supportive of.

MINISTER'S ROLE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister if, when he decided to drop the $300 million commitment concerning Hyundai, he had taken the decision on his own or whether he had obtained Cabinet approval?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, on this suggestion that somehow I took the decision alone, of course it was a cabinet decision.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stevens: As far as we are concerned, the negotiation with the Hyundai motor car company was one which we carried on jointly with the Province of Quebec. Eventually our portion of the deal was something that was supported by Cabinet. I really question why the Hon. Member would assume that anything else other than governmental approval was secured.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, in light of the Minister's statement that the decision was made by Cabinet, not by himself, did he in fact follow Subsection 16(8) of the conflict of interest guidelines and in fact declare his conflict, in light of the fact that the connection between his family's personal loan and the Hanil Bank was known not only to himself but to most of the people who were involved in the deal?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Axworthy: To the rescue.

Mr. Gauthier: Are you back in the saddle, Erik?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, all Hon. Members—

Mr. Tobin: Don't waste your breath. Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I would like an answer to my question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Ms. Copps: The Minister has a responsibility, and I would like an answer to my question for the people of Canada.

Mr. Crosbie: Name her.

Ms. Copps: I would like an answer—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will resume her seat.

Ms. Copps: I would like an answer.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the Hon. Member wants to read what I said to the House earlier this morning, the Hon. Member has the right to ask questions.

Ms. Copps: He should have pulled himself out of the discussion.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

SALE OF CANADAIR—ROLE OF MINISTER

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Since the Minister is a member of the Cabinet task force on privatization, is it his intention to sit on that committee when it considers the bids for Canadair and the CDIC recommendations on which of the bids should be accepted?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as far as the bids on Canadair are concerned, as I announced publicly, certain proposals, five in number, were received by CDIC. The officers of CDIC have been reviewing the proposals and have been discussing the proposals with the principals. They have turned to S. G. Warburgs, Merrill Lynch and Burns Fry for advice concerning how the proposals stack up. In due course they will be making a recommendation to the divestiture committee of the board of CDIC. That divestiture committee will likely then make a recommendation to the CDIC board, which in turn will make a recommendation to me. I will then deal with that recommendation and will eventually carry that recommendation to the privatization task force to which the Hon. Member has referred. There is no mystery about that process.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER REMOVE HIMSELF FROM CONFLICT OF INTEREST POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Whether or not the Minister knew about the loan which his wife arranged with the assistance of the Chairman of Magna International a year ago, the Minister, like most other Canadians, knows about that loan now. Will he tell the House what steps he is taking in order to remove himself now that the conflict is obvious? Is there any other way which he has to remove himself from the conflict except to resign from his position as Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Tobin: Save your breath, Erik. Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nielsen: We are back on the same track as last week. The question, which has really been raised by the hon.

gentleman since April 7 and through last week, has the same essential core—an allegation of a failure to comply with the Code of Conduct governing public office holders. I assured him and other Hon. Members all last week, for four days, that that compliance has been had. The Minister is certainly responsible pursuant to our traditions to answer questions arising in the House pertaining to his ministerial responsibility, but certainly not those affairs that are in a blind trust, nor those of a family nature.

Mr. Cassidy: It is not blind anymore.

AGREEMENT WITH HYUNDAI COMPANY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. It is about the public's right to know about the Hyundai deal. The Minister made announcements about the deal with Hyundai and its plans to build in Canada. He tells us that they were forgiven from the $300 million obligation to buy Canadian at that point. Why was that not included in the public statements which he made about the deal? Should not the public have been told when he was giving his Hyundai good news that at the same time 10,000 to 15,000 Canadian jobs were being lost in the forgiveness factor?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the Hon. Member's question is totally unfounded. The truth is that we renegotiated an arrangement as far as the Hyundai motor car company was concerned which we thought would be more beneficial to Canada, would be more job-creative for Canada and, in particular, would give an automotive plant to the Province of Quebec that badly needs more of that type of job-creating activity.

Mr. Kaplan: I do not know why he did not say so at the time.

SOURCING IN CANADA—KNOWLEDGE OF PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Minister said that Cabinet knew about this forgiveness. I want to ask him about the Government of Quebec. Was the Government of Quebec told that part of the consideration for the establishment of the plant in Quebec was the forgiveness of the obligation to provide all those purchases in Canada?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member refers to forgiveness, it shows how little he understands about the previous commitment. The previous commitment made no guarantee, other than a very minimum guarantee, as far as job creations are concerned. Our agreement preserved the job-creation aspect of the initial agreement but widened it tremendously as far as future jobs in Canada are concerned for the Hyundai motor car company.

Mr. Kaplan: Why did you not tell the Canadian people that?

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—ADVICE TO CANADIAN TRAVELLERS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, in view of the way in which the Tokyo Summit has decimated the front bench, perhaps I could direct my question to the Minister for International Trade. Despite possible risks from radiation which leaked from the nuclear plant in Chernobyl, many Canadian tourists are continuing with their trips to Ukraine. What is the Government doing to minimize travel by Canadians to Ukraine, and what steps will it take to minimize the financial losses of Canadian travellers who cancel their trips?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Tokyo Summit is being very well served by the Prime Minister and other Ministers who are in Tokyo, and the matter as it concerns Chernobyl is being handled as well. In terms of the answers which the Hon. Member wants, I give him an update which has also been made public—and the last date was May 3 at 1600 o'clock—namely, in Moscow and in Bucharest, the advisory is off; in Warsaw, the advisory remains for children under 16 and pregnant women; and for travellers to that affected area, to the affected area of Kiev and around Chernobyl, the advisory remains that Canadians should not travel to those areas.

AIR CANADA—REQUEST FOR REFUNDS OF AIR FARES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, will the Government commend to Air Canada the example of British Airways which is making refunds on request to those people cancelling trips, or are we going to stick with refusing refunds for those who feel it would be hazardous to their health?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the issue relates not only to the repayment or the refunding of monies paid for air tickets or air travel. Some companies have indicated there would be a refund or a rescheduling if the travellers so chose. There are other air carriers, to which I would very strongly commend the same action. But, I have to advise the Member that an equal or often a greater amount of money has been spent by Intourist travel packages which the Soviets have not either wanted to reschedule or refund. They have indicated in some cases they will give equivalent travel time or travel to places in areas not affected by the disaster.

PETRO-CANADA

PRIVATIZATION INQUIRY

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Chairman of the Standing Committee for Energy, Mines and Resources. Most Canadians agree that the Government must ensure that we attain self-sufficiency and that at least 50 per cent of the oil and gas industry be Canadian-owned. Since many Canadians do not believe that the Government should be in the downstream retail gas station business, has the committee started the question of partial privatization of Petro-Canada, and if not, when does it plan to?

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, the Standing Committee on Energy, Mines and Resources has not and is not planning to study the privatization of Petro-Canada. On May 15, the company will be appearing before the standing committee with its annual report.

As the Hon. Member for Don Valley East knows, some 18 months ago the Board of Directors of Petro-Canada appointed a special committee to look into ways and means of possible privatization of the company, and I know questions will be raised on this issue.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS—REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. Last Thursday the Supreme Court of Canada rendered two unfortunate very restrictive judgments in which the Court substantially curtailed the constitutional rights of the official language minorities in Canada. In the circumstances, is the Government ready to propose a constitutional amendment which would restore those rights lost by the judgments so that Canadians will be free to deal with their Governments in their own official language?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, there were no rights lost by Canadians as a result of these decisions. The Court was interpreting the constitutional Charter that we now have that was adopted in 1982.

The policy of the Government, of course, goes beyond what the Court found to be the minimum requirement with respect to the issuance of summonses. We are working with the provinces in attempting to enter into a timetable with each of them for adopting procedures so that trials can be held in both official languages in criminal matters right across the country. We have taken action where our predecessor Government failed to act.

Mr. Gauthier: Nonsense. We passed the legislation, and you know it, dummy.

Mr. Crosbie: And in the—

Mr. Gauthier: Bill C-42—sit down.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please.

Mr. Crosbie: You have lost the Government. You should be asking questions, you turkey.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Penner: That is the Minister of Justice speaking. Aren't we proud?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE AGENDA

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the Minister that most Canadians perceive that rights were lost in those judgments. Let me ask the Minister again whether he will at least put on the agenda for the next federal-provincial conference the subject of a constitutional amendment, not ordinary laws, but a constitutional amendment to protect those long traditionally held rights that were perceived lost? They could then be entrenched in the Constitution and people could deal with Governments and courts in their own official language?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, this Government will be acting where our predecessors failed to act and will be bringing before this House new policy and new legislation to back up the minimum guarantees that are contained in the Constitution.

Some months ago I discussed with the provinces and had on the agenda with the provinces the question of ensuring that people who wish to use both official languages can be heard in both official languages across the country. We are acting on that as well, where our predecessors did nothing but yaw, as they are doing now in the opposition.

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—REQUEST FOR REFUNDS FOR TRAVELLERS

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare, and which follows up on questions put by my friend from Kenora—Rainy River. British Airways, which flys to Warsaw, told me this morning that it is giving full refunds to its travellers. Air Canada is not. Would the Minister please explain why there is that difference and how does this square with his statement on Friday in the House when he said: "We will take whatever steps we can to protect Canadian travellers"?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, it squares very fully with the statement I made on Friday. It was a question of health and that is the responsibility I have as Minister. That is the reason for the statement on Friday.

I think the Hon. Member has to appreciate that from our perspective as Government we would sincerely hope that companies would follow the example of British Airways and Lufthansa, of granting refunds for air fare. I am sure when the Minister of Transport returns to this House I will be discussing this issue with him, as well as others, to try to effect the same kind of response. I think the Member has to know it is a Crown corporation looking at its policies—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE—TRAVELLERS' INSURANCE

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, given that I also checked with Lloyd's of London and Voyageur Travel Insurance Limited to confirm that they are not going to pay on their policies with respect to health insurance—they do not recognize it as a risk—and given that Air Canada won't give refunds, why does the Government not do something for those travellers? Why does the Government not insure them for this risk?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I do not think suggestions like that are very helpful in a situation like this.

Mr. Waddell: Why not? You are telling them not to go there.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Is the Hon. Member suggesting that the Minister of Health for Canada, when there is a radiation problem, whether in Warsaw or wherever, is supposed to tell Canadians not to go? That is ridiculous.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

TRANSFER PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES—QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITIONS

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State (Finance).

With respect to provincial transfer payments, does her Department intend to give preferential treatment to Quebec?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, all provinces are treated the same way by this Government—equitably. Quebec will not be given preferential treatment now or in the future. I should point out that the Conference Board announced yesterday that the Province of Quebec should experience economic growth this year, thanks to the policies of this Government.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—APPLICATION OF CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, regarding the alleged conflict of interest charges and the Minister of DRIE, we have heard over the past week a description in this Chamber of what appears to be a cosy coterie or club, if you will, involving a Cabinet Minister, his relatives and friends. That is what appears to be the case, Government funded.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Baker: The Deputy Prime Minister has failed miserably to erase those doubts. Isn't it time that the Deputy Speaker allows this Minister to answer for himself on these charges?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, quite apart from the extensive added dimension which the Hon. Member has given to the whole question by way of preamble, most of this Question Period has been taken up with the responses of the Minister concerned.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Not on the conflict of interest, as Members have pointed out, Mr. Speaker. The Deputy Prime Minister falls back by saying that we have the right to lay a charge. If we have, as the Deputy Prime Minister claims, the right to lay a charge, does he not agree that we also have a duty to hear what the Minister has to say before laying a charge? Why is he muzzling the Minister on this subject?

• (1450)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it should be quite obvious to any sane individual who has been watching these proceedings today that, far from muzzling the Minister, he has been paramount in responding to questions today.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Boudria: You know that's not true.

Mr. Nielsen: In my responsibility with respect to the Code of Conduct I answered those questions very fully all last week and will continue to discharge that responsibility.

Mr. Nunziata: It's his responsibility to adhere to the guidelines.

HOUSING

FUNDING OF PROGRAMS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Labour who is responsible for housing. By February of 1985 the Minister had made commitments to producers of non-profit, co-operative, rural, native and rehabilitation housing, which commitments were essential to produce that housing that year. Why has the Minister already wasted four months of the planning and building season this year and not yet authorized the funding of any of those programs which he promised in this House last December?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the answer is apparent. Due to the change in delivery and cost sharing, effective in 1986, operating agreements with the provincial housing corporations have to be negotiated. I believe that there are now seven signed globally. There is at least one signed as an operating agreement and we hope to have the other operating agreements with our provincial partners signed in the very near future.

EXTENSION OF 1985 PROGRAMS—INTERIM FUNDING

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Acting on precedent, the Minister could have either extended 1985 programs or provided interim funding for projects which were ready to go. Does he really intend to delay all those housing starts until it is impossible to build that housing this year?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker.

TERRORISM

PENALTIES FOR ACTS OF TERRORISM

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. In light of the many concerns raised recently with respect to terrorism, would the Minister of Justice advise the House if he is prepared to increase the penalties for terrorism? In particular, is he prepared to consider introducing the death penalty for acts of terrorism committed in Canada?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am always happy to accept representations from Hon. Members. The question of capital punishment will be dealt with in due course when this House is seized of it. We all support whatever effective measures can be taken to ensure that terrorist acts do not occur or recur in this country. However, the question with regard to the death penalty must wait until our debate on the subject of capital punishment.

IMMIGRATION

PERFORMANCE APPRAISALS—QUOTA ENUMERATION INQUIRY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. In a recent interview with the Kitchener-Waterloo Record the Minister stated that her Department does not use enforcement quotas in appraising the performance of immigration officials. However, I have two internal departmental documents dated March 13 and April 9 which show clearly that officials are being judged by the number of people they send back.

Given that these documents confirm the use of enforcement quotas, will the Minister finally admit that they do exist in her Department? What immediate measures will she take to remove such repulsive tactics?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, would the Hon. Member please bring forward any specific and concrete examples if he has any? Allegations in this regard have repeatedly been denied by the Minister of Employment and Immmigration and myself. We have indicated that numerical indicators are used only to quantify and indicate what is happening with the various cases we deal with. This has been said before and I repeat it today.

REQUEST FOR SPECIAL INQUIRY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, whether you call these "numerical indicators" or "statistics", they are quotas and the memos are from his own Deputy Minister and the director of immigration for the Ontario region. Rather than denying the existence of those quotas, will the Minister not establish a special inquiry into this affair so that officers will not be systematically encouraged to intimidate people and send them back illegally?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is entitled to his interpretation. However, I repeat it is important for the Government to know how many admissions, deportations, refugees, and visitors there are. These statistics are used in the process of planning and organizing. It is, however, the Hon. Member's right to persist in his interpretation.

QUEBEC HYUNDAI PLANT—RENEGOTIATION OF AGREEMENT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. There are some who would say that the additional jobs which Hyundai is going to create will be at the expense of presently existing jobs if sourcing is not done in Canada. We can understand why a $300 million deal would be abandoned in favour of some benefits. Would the Minister table any new agreement he has so that the people of Canada, and particularly those in the automotive industry, can see what benefits will obtain as a result of the sacrifice of a $300 million agreement?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I do not understand why there is a suggestion of a sacrifice of a $300 million agreement. It is such a pity that, after having won a Toyota plant, a Honda plant, and an American Motors plant for the Province of Ontario, the Opposition objects to the Hyundai plant, the first plant to go into the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Broadbent: Come off it.

SOURCING REQUIREMENTS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, we would like to get some additional documentation from the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. We would like documentation which says that domestic automakers, parts manufacturers, toolers, and capital equipment manufacturers for the automobile industry are happy about having the Japanese and South Koreans come in without any conditions such as those required by the domestic manufacturers under the Auto Pact. Let us see documentation of the enthusiasm of the domestic automakers for what is being done to their disfavour.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, if we judge the Hon. Member's knowledge from his question, we see that he is totally out of touch. The fact is that the automotive manufacturers that are establishing the plants in Canada, which I have been referring to, have all indicated their wish to attain Auto pact status. I have indicated earlier that contractual relationships are worked out by our departmental officials. There has not been an agreement entered into by the Government which has not had the full support of my Department.

Mr. Boudria: Let's see it. Table the agreement.

TRADE

CANADA-U.S. NEGOTIATIONS—REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL OF VIDEO TAPES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of International Trade. Will he agree to withdraw the approximately 400 video tapes which were produced by his Department and our chief trade negotiator on the Government's position on free trade? These tapes exclude two provinces of Canada from a map which purports to represent the whole country. Will he agree to recall those tapes immediately?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is quite correct. There was indeed an error in the computer map. I have instructed the company which produced the tape to produce a corrected version. Each Member of this House and the Senate will receive a corrected version very shortly.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Cancel my copy.

Mr. Broadbent: Save the expense.

COST OF PRODUCING VIDEO TAPES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister of International Trade tell Members of the House of Commons what the cost to the taxpayers of Canada was for this ill-fated first attempt at portraying the Government's vision of the country to Members of Parliament and Canadians? I await an apology and an estimate of the cost of this faux pas.

• (1500)

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I have already made the cost of the kit public and I can assure the Hon. Member that correction of the mistake will be at no cost whatsoever to the federal Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

WAYS AND MEANS

INCOME TAX ACT

Hon. Barbara McDougall (for the Minister of Finance) moved that a Ways and Means motion to amend the Income Tax Act, laid upon the Table on Wednesday, March 26, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mr. Murphy (p. 12683).

Mr. George Minaker (Winnipeg—St. James): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak in the debate on Bill C-96. Regardless of which political party one is a member of in this House, we all strongly support post-secondary education and quality health care services. Yet the opposition is trying to lead the Canadian public to believe that great cuts are being made in Established Programs Financing. This is not correct. As a matter of fact, there will be continued growth in that financing over the next five years. The average annual increase will be some 5 per cent, and some $90 billion will be transferred to the provinces over the next five years. That will be $25 billion more than was transferred in the previous five years. Presently, inflation is 4 per cent. It is our objective as a Government to maintain or lower that rate. We can then see the provinces receiving a percentage increase that is greater than inflation.

Let me just give you an idea of the impact that this will have on the provinces. The Province of Manitoba will receive the following amounts over the next five years under Established Programs Financing. In 1984, Manitoba received $618 million. In 1985-86, it will receive $664.9 million, an increase of approximately 10 per cent. In 1986-87, it is estimated that Manitoba will receive $704.8 million. There is no cut-back; the amounts are increasing at a very reasonable rate.

When we have a debate concerning funds transferred to the provinces, the Opposition forgets that around 1967 there was an agreement between the federal and the provincial Governments to transfer tax points to the provinces. The provinces are still receiving those tax points. Yet the provinces, certainly the Province of Manitoba, do not acknowledge that figure. This year it will total some $202 million for Manitoba alone.

I had the opportunity to sit in the Manitoba Legislature for eight and a half years. I know what it is like to sit on the opposite side of the table. I can appreciate how the present Manitoba Government feels about this. However, one thing has always been clear. Whether Members of the present Manitoba Government were in opposition or in Government, they always declared that provincial Governments cannot control inflation or high interest rates. They say it is the federal Government which causes high interest rates and inflation. Therefore, what has this federal Government tried to achieve in its first 18 months in office? It has tried to stop inflation. It has tried to lower interest rates. It has succeeded. We are trying to restrain Government spending and control the deficit. Given that, the approach we are taking with the provinces is a fair approach. We have said that we will continue to increase transfer payments at a rate of 5 per cent a year. This is higher than the proposed growth of other federal expenditures. At the same time we are cutting back the deficit. Federal transfer payments are the third largest federal Government expenditure. Next to our debt service charges, it is the fastest growing expenditure. Therefore, I ask the provinces, particularly the Province of Manitoba, to give consideration to cutting back its deficit.

The Province of Manitoba receives about $1.3 billion from the federal Government annually. That Government's revenue this year will total about $3.1 billion. Therefore, about $42 out of every $100 collected by the Province of Manitoba comes from the federal Government. Even then, the provincial Government has a revenue shortfall of something like $550 million. Certainly the province has some responsibility for restraining its expenditures.

In its budget Estimates, the province shows $59.4 million for post-secondary education and training, $156.3 million for university grants, and $7.7 million for capital grants. That totals $223.4 million. In the same fiscal year, the federal Government will transfer to that province $65.1 million under the EPF tax transfer and $111.6 million under the EPF cash transfer. Then there is the associated equalization transfer payment of $13.6 million. That is a total of $190.3 million. Yet the province's Estimates show it is only going to spend $223.4 million. That obviously means that our share exceeds by far the 50 per cent which was the original plan.

I think we are being fair. It is always tough to try to put your house in order, but I think the fact that we are giving out more money for this purpose than for any of the other federal expenditures, and exceeding the rate of inflation this year and in the coming years, show that we are being fair and practical in this approach.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, the Bill that we are debating, Bill C-96, is a major piece of legislation which is going to have enormous impact in the regions of this country. I say this because, as Hon. Members know, when this Bill passes, as it surely will despite the objections of the opposition parties, it is going to mean in the next six years that there will be a cut-back of more than $8 billion to the provinces of this country.

The share of that cut-back in my own Province of Ontario over the next six years will amount to $3 billion. I am almost certain there would be Hon. Members who would say, "The Province of Ontario is one of the wealthiest provinces of this country. Can't they look after their own responsibilities?", as my hon. friend from the great Province of Manitoba who just spoke indicated, his province can look after its own responsibilities. I want to remind Hon. Members that the Province of Ontario has a vast hinterland with huge costs. I am talking about northern Ontario, which is 60 or 70 per cent of the land mass. The costs to the Government at Queen's Park are enormous. Premier David Peterson has made it very clear in speaking at First Ministers' Conferences that this sizeable cutback is going to cause serious dislocation and problems in the Province of Ontario.

My hon. friend who just spoke indicated that the reason for Bill C-96 is that we must get our fiscal house in Ottawa in order. We have to do something about the deficit. I do not disagree with him for a moment. Although neither Canadians nor Members of Parliament want to talk about it, it is the single most serious problem in the country right now. It is a crisis.

I sometimes think that what this honourable House really needs is a Member with the stature of Winston Churchill who would warn about the seriousness of the deficit as Churchill warned about the rise of Fascism in Germany, and few listened.

I want to turn to what the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said about Bill C-96 with respect to the deficit. He justified Bill C-96, these huge cuts to the provinces, by saying the following:

—the impact of a runaway federal deficit was far greater than the problem of shifting the deficit to the provincial level.

I want to argue that I think we have to be alarmed and concerned about the deficit. I believe there should be a national program. We should enlist every single Canadian in the cause of reducing our federal deficit. Bill C-96 is not an anti-deficit Bill. All we are doing with Bill C-96 is passing our problem on to the provinces, provinces that cannot afford those additional financial burdens, the poor provinces of this country. Even the well-to-do provinces, as I indicated, are having a good deal of difficulty. With Bill C-96, instead of a financial transfer, what we are doing is transferring, at least partially, the debt of this country.

When this issue was debated in this House on other occasions, such as when we had the 6-and 5-program brought in by the last Liberal administration, there were some good arguments put forward that the provinces should not have to participate by having their transfer payments for post-secondary education cut back. One of the opposition Members in the Conservative Party at that time made an argument, which I think deserves to be repeated. I know the gentleman well because he now chairs the Aboriginal Affairs Committee, of which I am a member. I am talking about the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger). He said the following:

We do not solve the problem of budgetary deficits—by fighting with one another as to who is going to spend the dollars in order to provide the service.

That is what we are doing. The way in which we are doing it ought to disturb every single Member in this House because we are doing it by unilateral declaration. When were the provinces called in together to say, "Look, let's work on this together. We have got a serious problem. You get your electorate and we'll get ours and we'll have a national deficit reduction program in this country". This has not been negotiated. This is a unilateral declaration by the party opposite that stated, during the election campaign that there had been too much confrontation with the provinces. What we really needed in Canada was a reaffirmation of co-operative federalism.

Let me ask my hon. friends, is this co-operative federalism when you just announce to the provinces that there is going to be a $8 billion cut in services to post-secondary education and health in the next six years? Not at all.

Premier David Peterson said at the conference about this announcement, "You don't call it a cut, what you call it is a breach of faith. It is breaking a promise". Let me remind you that another province, namely, New Brunswick, which is under a Conservative Government, reacted by saying, "It is unreasonable for the federal Government to think that the promises that have been made to the provinces can be forgotten. It is unreasonable to think the provinces, which have been taking difficult measures themselves to deal with their own financial situation, can also be expected to absorb part of the problem at the federal level. That was the argument of my hon. friend from Manitoba who preceded me. He said the Province of Manitoba ought to be able to take on part of the federal problem.

If that is what we want the provinces to do, then let us do it in a reasonable and fair way. Let us enlist their support in this endeavour and not do it by unilateral declaration.

Let me trace quickly what the results will be of Bill C-96 when it passes in this House. One possibility would be that the provinces, wanting to maintain at least the level of health care and secondary education, will say, "We have no choice but to increase taxes". If that is the case, then what we are debating here today is a tax increase Bill. In the last 18 months we have had enough of those.

Maybe the provinces will decide—and I would agree with them—that we do not need more tax increases in this country because they are counter-productive for the economy. They simply put the brakes on the economy which we are trying to encourage to grow. They may say, "We will increase our deficit". If they increase their deficits, then how can we call this an anti-deficit measure? Maybe they will say, "We will have to rearrange our priorities". If they do that, will they be forced to reduce the number of hospital beds? If they do that, is Bill C-96 not an anti-health measure? If they restrict the number of students who are allowed to attend schools and colleges, then Bill C-96 is an anti-education measure.

I ask Hon. Members in my concluding paragraph of thought: for goodness' sake, let us reconsider Bill C-96. It is not a carefully though out Bill. It is not an appropriate Bill for these times. Let us take at least another six months and reconsider what we are doing. I ask the Hon. Members if they would join with the parties on this side and approve of the six-month delay in passing Bill C-96. That would be the best action we could take. I am sure that more careful thought will result in a measure that will serve the students and the health care system of this country in a much more acceptable way.

• (1520)

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I was dismayed to hear the comments of my colleague from Manitoba who argued that Manitobans and the Manitoba Government should tighten their belts and pay for the cut-backs being implemented by the federal Government. He implied that Manitobans should swallow these cut-backs and reduce their spending.

I want to take a few moments to examine the size of the cut-backs in transfer payments for education and health care, particularly as they affect Manitoba. The Hon. Member from the Conservative Party argued that they were not, in fact, real cut-backs.

There are plans in existence dealing with the level of expenditure that the federal Government makes to the provinces in regard to health and education costs. I will use Manitoba as an illustration. According to the legislation before the House now, those planned expenditures for health and education will be reduced for Manitoba by $13.9 million for the year 1986-87. There will be a further reduction of $29 million in 1987-88, which will grow to $45.6 million in 1988-89. In 1989-90 that reduction will grow to $63.9 million and to $83.4 million in 1990-91. The total reduction in the transfer payments from the federal Government to the Province of Manitoba for health and education is $235.8 million.

Some people may think that Manitoba is a wealthy province and can easily absorb a cut of $235.8 million in planned transfer payments from the federal Government. I remind the House that Manitoba is very dependent on federal transfer payments since more than one-third of Manitoba's revenue comes from the federal Government, largely in the form of transfer payments. Furthermore, about half of all Manitoba expenditures are in the fields of health and education. Therefore, any cut in federal transfer payments will have a very real negative impact in Manitoba.

Let us consider what a cut of $235.8 million means to Manitoba. It represents an annual cut-back of $1,060 for a family of four. It represents a reduction of $265 for every Manitoban in the federal contribution to that province's services. Since the Government came to office, it has increased taxes for ordinary Canadians by some $2,000 per family. In the last Budget alone there was a tax increase of $1,000. While it has increased our taxes, the Government is cutting its contribution to Manitoba by $1,000 per family for health and education.

These cuts represent more than the current total expenditure on universities and community colleges in Manitoba. I ask Members of Parliament, particularly those from Manitoba, how can Manitoba absorb such a blow as a reduction in transfer payments for health and education that amounts to more than that province's total expenditure on universities and community colleges?

Another way to consider the magnitude of these cut-backs in expenditures is to consider that the shortfall in funding equals the 1983-84 budget of all hospitals in Manitoba, with the exception of the St. Boniface Hospital and Health Sciences Centre. These cut-backs total more than the combined salaries of all doctors or all nursing home and pharmacare costs in Manitoba in 1983-84.

The purpose of these illustrations is to demonstrate that the cut-backs in planned expenditures are significant and will hurt Manitoba by forcing a reduction in education and health services.

Let me give a further illustration about medicare to show how the Government is headed in the wrong direction. The percentage of GNP which Canadians devote to health care in this country is lower than that in the United States. The difference between the two countries is that we have a public health care system as opposed to a private health care system in the United States. We must do all we can to preserve and improve our health care system. If we revert to a private health care system, our health care costs will be more than are presently forecast in Canada.

What will the Government do as a result of these cuts in planned expenditures?

Mr. Young: Exactly what the Liberals did.

Mr. Keeper: As my colleague says, the Government is doing what the Liberals did. Furthermore, the Conservatives are reducing the percentage of the federal Government share in health care.

Rather than cutting its investment in health care, the Government should be investing in long-term health care by finding new ways of delivering health care and improving medicare in this country so that we can reduce the costs in the long term. However, we cannot take the long-term view without being willing to invest in the short term. By cutting now we rob ourselves of the opportunity to re-tool the medicare system and improve it so that it can be more cost-effective than it is today.

I call upon the Government to reconsider its program of cuts to planned expenditures for health care and for post-secondary education.

[Translation]

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I want to take part in the debate on Bill C-96 this afternoon and join all those who have spoken to oppose the way this Government is treating the Canadian provinces.

Bill C-96 concerns the joint financing of established programs by the federal Government and the provinces to pay the costs of post-secondary education, hospitalization and medicare. We all know that the Canadian Government uses a system of redistribution to give money back to the have-not provinces, thanks to the taxes collected from all Canadian provinces. Through this equalization system, the Canadian Government uses the collective wealth of the country and redistributes it equitably amongst the have-not provinces.

However, Bill C-96 under consideration will radically reduce the amounts paid by the Canadian Government to the provinces during the next six years. I have here a table which shows that, during the next six years, between 1986 and 1992, the federal Government will reduce its contribution for post-secondary education, hospitalization and medicare by about $8 billion, or $8,133 million to be exact.

Of course, such a consequence bears heavily on all Canadian provinces, but especially so on the Province of Quebec. Indeed, this will entail a dead loss of about $2 billion over the coming years for the taxpayers and the people of Quebec. Two billion dollars is an abstract figure that people cannot readily appreciate. Just to illustrate: this is equal to two thousand million dollars. Or again, for those who dream of winning $1 million at the lottery, it is in fact nearly $6 million a day that will be lost by for the Province of Quebec over the next six years.

Therefore, it is clear that those $2 billion mean a huge loss for the Quebec Government's coffers. And I cannot but wonder how we can now have this Tory Government reduce the payments that would normally be transferred to the Province of Quebec, without there being one single Conservative Member from Quebec to rise and defend the interests of Quebecers, to prevent such a measure from being passed by this Government.

Where are the Ministers from Quebec on this issue? In particular, where is the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse), who boasts about being a great nationalist, a great champion of the interests of Quebec? Where is he? What will he be doing to stop that kind of discriminatory move against Quebec? Where is the Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) who was so assertive when he sat in Opposition, but has become so silent since he is sitting on the Government side?

Where are those Ministers, the Secretary of State of Canada (Mr. Bouchard) and the Minister of State for International Relations, those two who supported the "Yes" option and promised to unswervingly defend Quebec's interests at the federal level? It seems to me they are so speechless, if not totally absent from this debate in which the interests of all Quebecers are at stake.

What I find especially disgusting about that measure, which of course will be approved because of the Government's overwhelming majority—since despite every effort by Opposition Members, the measure will inescapably pass when the Tory steamroller of that silent majority comes around to approve the Bill. But what I want to say before we are run over by the steam roller is that it is a unilateral measure against the interests of the provinces, because the Ottawa Government has never negotiated this cut, never having brought the provinces to the negotiating table to reach a decision which would be acceptable both to the provinces and the central Government. No, Mr. Speaker.

This is a unilateral decision of the Conservatives who have decided to reduce the amounts that are provided every year to the provinces. Yet, Hon. Members will remember that at the time the Conservatives were sitting on Opposition benches, they had promised never to treat the provinces in this way. They would insist that the word "unilateral" would be banished from the Conservative vocabulary. It is therefore very sad, when one considers what they are doing with Bill C-96, to realize that this is a unilateral measure which will severely affect the Quebec economy.

What is even more serious—and I want to emphasize this as I am about to run out of time—is that this Conservative Government is introducing this legislation at a time when we learn that it has betrayed the commitment it had made last year to the province of Quebec concerning Bill C-39 which it had introduced in the House to provide supplementary fiscal equalization payments, and I quote the comments made at the time by the Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall) on behalf of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), as reported in Hansard on April 18, 1985, and I quote:

> The equalization program now protects provinces against declines in payments from one year to the next in a way which varies with their capacity to raise revenues. The highest protection, the 95 per cent floor, is given to those provinces which are not as strong fiscally as others and ensures their payments will decline by no more than 5 per cent from one year to the next.

Well, we have just learned from the Quebec Minister of Finance, on the occasion of his Budget speech, that in fact the Conservative Canadian Government has not kept its promises. And it is not 95 per cent it has granted the Province of Quebec, but 92.8 per cent, which will mean a loss of $66 million for the year ending March 1986. Yet, the Minister of Finance himself, in reply to a question from one of my colleagues on this side of the House, had made the following statement on April 1, 1985, and I quote:

> I would like to respond to that question by saying that what we were trying to do was to provide a fair resolution to a difficult problem and one which was considerably more difficult for the Provinces of Quebec, Manitoba and Nova Scotia because they were going to suffer an absolute shortfall. In taking into account this principle of fairness, we decided that we should establish some rationale for dealing with the shortfall. That was, as I indicated in my remarks, to establish a 95 per cent floor for the three provinces——which will benefit.

Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the Conservative Government broke the promise it made in April 1985. Over the past fiscal year alone, the Conservative Government has made Quebec lose $66 million which the Quebec Minister of Finance will have to find elsewhere. And on top of everything, to put the icing on the cake, today we are faced with a Bill that will cause the Province of Quebec to incur a loss of $2 billion within the next six years.

This is shameful and scandalous, and I think the silence of our Conservative Members from Quebec on this issue is absolutely unconscionable. Where are they? Why are they silent? And how come there is not a single Minister from the Province of Quebec here in the House, at this very moment, to rise and defend the interests of the Province of Quebec and its people?

• (1540)

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have an opportunity to say a few words on Bill C-96 today. The title of this Bill is a rather lengthy one and it is one that, quite frankly, very few people understand or have knowledge of. The Bill is entitled an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977.

The Act to which the title of the Bill refers assists provinces in providing hospital insurance, medicare, extended health care and grants for post-secondary education. The Bill itself consists of some five pages. The effect of this Bill will be that each one of those pages will cost something like $1 billion in terms of the provinces' ability to finance the programs I have just mentioned. The effect of this Bill will be to chop in excess of $5 billion over the next four or five years from those programs.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) argued in support of his actions by saying that these measures are designed to moderate the growth rate of payments to the provinces. I suppose that is the newspeak of the late 1980s. In fact, these measures will reduce the ability of many provincial Governments to provide good quality medical care and post-secondary education. Canadians who live in Prince Edward Island or Newfoundland will be entitled to receive a lower quality of health care than those living in British Columbia or one of the better-off provinces. That is what this Bill means. It is a direct attack on medicare and post-secondary education.

I remember that not too many years ago, the then Liberal Government tried to do exactly the same thing. What the Conservative Government is doing today is a continuation of what the Liberal Government tried to do before it was defeated. I am quite sure you will be interested to know, Mr. Speaker, that when the Liberal Government introduced that legislation, the very Hon. Members who are now on the opposite side and are proposing to do exactly the same thing were highly critical of what the then Government was doing. On February 1, 1982, the now Minister of Finance said the following in the House of Commons:

> The Minister is prepared to cut spending in two very important areas. He is prepared to risk major cut-backs in medical care and post-secondary education.
> Rather than rush into this on a unilateral basis and force spending cuts and service cuts on the provinces, would the Minister consider entering into two or three national conferences on health and post-secondary education so that we can set out the national objectives of the various levels of Government in these two important areas before we cut spending, and before we cause closures of hospitals and cut-backs in post-secondary education?

The question that begs to be answered is, why did the Minister of Finance not do exactly what he felt the Liberal Government should have done before he brought in these measures?

The Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), the present Chairman of the Finance Committee, was equally critical in a speech he made in the House on March 22, 1982. On April 5, 1982, the now Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) had this to say:

> In fact, the Minister of Finance has been dragging us through the mill in the past few months and the provinces are, as it were, squirming in a financial strait-strait-jacket, because the federal Government is reducing its deficit by cutting funds to the provinces.

That is exactly what that gang over there is doing today. They are doing what they were so critical of when the Liberals tried to do it in 1982.

I could go on. The Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) and the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) were equally critical. The present Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) decried the cut-backs and predicted that the Atlantic provinces are singularly vulnerable to any federal Government belt-tightening in these areas. He said that on April 5, 1982.

You will be interested to hear, Mr. Speaker, that on February 7, 1984, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) said the following:

> Mr. Speaker, this is a deplorable piece of legislation because the principle of it is one of betrayal. The Bill betrays the provinces of Canada, the provincial governments of Canada and betrays the universities of Canada. It betrays post-secondary institutions of Canada. It betrays the young people of Canada and it illustrates rank hypocrisy in the actions of the Government.

I have yet to hear him say that of today's Government because he is a part of it. Yet it is equally hypocritical for this Government to do what it accused the previous Government of doing.

The words of the Hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) were dandy when she spoke in the House on April 5, 1984. She castigated the Government for its inhumane treatment of and attitude toward Canada's sick. She deplored the fact that young people would be faced with huge increases in tuition fees in order to receive a higher education. In fact, she went on at great length to the point that the Liberal Government of the day was left practically without any credit at all.

I could go on, but I am quite sure that those who are interested may go through those speeches themselves and try to figure out the difference between that gang over there and the Liberal Government that was rejected by the Canadian people. There ain't any difference. In fact, if anything, this Government is more hypocritical than the previous one because of the criticisms it levelled at the previous Government for doing exactly what it is doing today. In fact, the cuts this Government is proposing are even more severe than those made by the Liberal Government.

I could go on and on about the impact of those cuts, but the real impact will be on the future of medicare. As a party that fought for everyone's right to adequate health care, we deplore what the Government is doing. I want to address health care from another point of view, and that is, from the point of view of prevention.

I noticed that the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), in a speech he made last weekend to a conference, spoke about the need to bring in preventive health care programs for Canada's elderly. He waxed eloquent about preventive health care. He seemed to be sincere in what he was saying. The Minister of National Health and Welfare should stand in the House, be honest and criticize the Government for what it is doing to the programs under his Department. He should fight on behalf of the people of Canada and say that they have a right to adequate, good health care services, whether they live in Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Ontario, the prairie provinces, or indeed British Columbia. We have not heard a peep from him on the health care programs or on where we are going in the future development of health care.

If the Government gets away with what it is trying to do today, there will not be any health care about which to worry in the future because it will have effectively destroyed the entire medicare system in Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Charles Hamelin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to the legislation before the House this afternoon. As we heard since this morning and last Friday, the Opposition has been giving the impression that the Members from Quebec are a bunch of spineless nobodies who could not care less about the interests of Quebec, and there were others who claimed that this legislation was going to deal a mortal blow to the finances of the Government of Quebec. We have been accused of the most heinous motives with respect to education and health care. We have supposedly become a bunch of sadists who are chortling with glee at the cutbacks in health care programs.

An Hon. Member: You are right.

Mr. Hamelin: I see some Members of the Opposition who are making petty politics out of this issue and who seem to think they will hoodwink Canadians and have them believe we are inconsistent, quite stupid and devoid of social conscience. They do not shy from attacking our Quebec Ministers by saying that they are not extremely quiet about this.

Well, Mr. Speaker, the truth is quite different. The truth is quite different because Quebec is also part of Canada; under the Civil Code provisions one is free to accept or reject a bankrupt inheritance, but there is no such option in politics. We have been saddled with the Liberal inheritance, our inheritance from all Canadian Liberals, and that is what we have to administer.

As a province Quebec must also accept its inheritance, and we were left with a deficit running into billions of dollars.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, here is what editorialist Michel Roy wrote in La Presse of March 11, 1985, and I quote:

> There is no doubt that the equalization system set up under federal legislation on fiscal agreements is being severely tried this year. When the current agreements (1982-87) were negotiated in 1981—the central Government did everything it could to lighten the heavy burden of transfers to the provinces.

At the time—1981-82—the Liberals were in the driver's seat and they could see the balloon swelling, about to blow up any minute.

Michel Roy went on to say:

> Because it was increasing at an amazing rate while compounding the deadlock of the federal deficit which now reaches the $35 billion mark, the decision was made to set a ceiling on the costs of established programs and to change the equalization formula—which profits six provinces—to the extent that the latter lost their guaranteed fiscal revenues which until then was their insurance that they would never in any year get an amount lower than the previous year's.
> Since that new provision met with violent protests—

Of course, each province was interested in getting as much as possible from the federal Government

> —Ottawa had agreed to extend to March 31st, 1985, the fiscal revenue guarantee. This means the provinces have known for three years that they would not get for fiscal year 1985-86 the amounts they had been expecting.
> That decision was not taken by Mr. Mulroney. And it is no surprise to Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, I believe the Opposition is playing petty politics with the Bill. Faced with such an inflation in the cost of social programs, the runaway increase of all transfer payments to the provinces, we took the opposite course from that followed by the Liberal Opposition when they were in power—we decided to restore some sort of order and to limit to 5 per cent the runaway increase of those costs, so that the provinces themselves would strive for a better management of their expenditures, make an in-depth review of their projects, and their programs. In so doing we invited them to duplicate this Government's collective effort to put to better use our expenditures and fiscal revenues. As you know, in all cases the Government is financing those programs often on a 50 per cent basis, but it has nothing to say about how the funds that are transferred to the provinces and to Quebec are spent. One does not need to have great divining powers to find out that it often happens that the provinces have used those funds for all sorts of purposes and for their miscellaneous expenditures. Nonetheless, as the central Government we have almost nothing to say.

Moreover, contrary to what the Opposition is now suggesting, we are actually reducing the runaway transfer costs. In absolute terms, they will not lose a penny. On the contrary, during the years to come, under those programs, the provinces will get additional funds of $25 billion.

Of course, we set a ceiling on the increase, we are asking the provinces to strive seriously for a rationalization of their expenditures. As a Quebecer and as a Canadian, as Members of the Quebec caucus, we have been following that exercise and the consideration of the Bill. We could have allowed those costs to become inflated as the Liberals did. I think that on the whole, the Tory caucus agrees that such a step, far from axing those programs will allow a slower and more reasonable increase.

Mr. Speaker, this Government believes that this Bill is to the advantage both of the Government and of Canadian men and women of this and future generations, and we hope, because of this legislation, to be better able in coming months and years to meet their needs because we shall have at our disposal more substantial sources of financing and a reasonable budget which will take into our actual capacity to pay as a nation. Mr. Speaker, this is what this Bill proposes, it proposes common sense, logic and reason.

I am sure that Canadians and Quebecers will not be fooled by the political games which are being played in this place to suggest that this Government is ignoring their concerns. That is not true. We do address their concerns and we shall continue to do so rationally, intelligently and with determination.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway)—North Atlantic Treaty Organization—Provision of fighter aircraft to Turkey—Greek Cypriots' fears; the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson)—Air Safety—Arctic airports program—Request for reinstatement; and the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood (Ms. McDonald)—Social Security—Preoccupation of women concerning social programs. (b) National Action Committee recommendation.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke—Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mr. Murphy (p. 12683).

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it was interesting to hear the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) because he said that the Opposition was engaging in petty politics in that it was upset about Bill C-96. Let us examine what the Member for Charlevois considers to be petty politics. Let us bear in mind that the Member's riding is located adjacent to the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) and in between the Prime Minister's riding and Quebec City. Obviously being geographically close to the Prime Minister one could assume, given the importance of back-benchers in that administration, that this Member has the Prime Minister's ear and the Prime Minister has his ear. Indeed, he speaks straight from the horse's mouth, as it were, on behalf of the Prime Minister when he says that the Opposition's complaints about Bill C-96 are petty.

Let us see what petty matters the Opposition is complaining about. It is complaining about a cut in funds to the Province of Quebec in 1986-87 of $82.3 billion, a cut in 1987-88 of $174.9 million for education and health, another cut in 1988-89 of $277.2 million, a cut in 1989-90 of $389.2 million, a cut in 1990-91 of $512 million, and a cut in 1991-92 of $647.6 million, for a total petty cut to the Province of Quebec of $2,083.6 million. The Member for Charlevois, whose riding is geographically located next to the Prime Minister's and in between Quebec City thinks that that cut is petty. He has been listening to the Prime Minister. What are they saying in Quebec City?

The Minister of Finance for the Province of Quebec, who is in Quebec City and on the Member's other side and to whom the Member should sometimes listen, says that the measure is unfair to the provinces. You know what it is, Mr. Speaker? Let us call the federal Government the head of the household. This kind of financial measure, this kind of passing the deficit on to the provinces, is the equivalent of the head of the household buying himself a new suit, a new pair of shoes and showing his neighbours and friends how prosperous he is by wearing his new suit and shiny shoes, trying to convince his neighbours that he is prosperous because he dresses so well and has his finances in order. Meanwhile, other members of the family are pretty shabbily clothed, are ill fed and are doing without sufficient shelter. It is predatory prosperity that the Government is practising. The Government is saying to the people of Canada that because it has some magical mythical policy to reduce the deficit, it has passed $8 billion worth of deficit on to Canada's 10 provinces.

The federal Government, with its new suit on, says, "Look at that. We have our financial house in order", but the provinces, in so far as education and health is concerned, will be more shabbily dressed than ever. As a matter of fact, when you examine what is now happening in some of our post-secondary educational institutions and hospitals, let us say it is not an exaggeration to suggest that some of our provinces in those two fields will be naked, not just shabbily dressed.

I rise today to support this motion to apply a six-month hoist to Bill C-96. I have just come from a conversation in the last few minutes with a gentleman from the Newfoundland Legislature who is concerned about education in Newfoundland. He told me that in Memorial University in Newfoundland the average wage of faculty members is $8,000 below the wage paid in other Atlantic institutions. He told me that Memorial University has become a raiding institution for other colleges, not colleges that promise fantastic bonuses or additional perks but colleges that are simply offering a decent wage. He told me that 62 people this week are being laid off at Memorial University, that the Memorial extension program, which is setting up extension programs around our rather large province of Newfoundland and Labrador to bring the services of that university to people no matter where they live, is being cut. He told me that 30 people have been laid off in the medical institution in the last few months and that the Established Programs Financing as outlined in Bill C-96 will deliver a death-like blow to an institution that is already on its knees.

I have picked up Bill C-96 and have found out what it promises the Province of Newfoundland, a province that has the lowest per capita income in Canada, a province that has the highest per capita debt in the country. What do I see, Mr. Speaker? I see that $187.7 million is to be chopped in transfer payments to a province where the university is already disintegrating before our eyes and where health care and the days of getting reasonably good health care are nothing more than a fond memory.

That is not what Canada is all about. That is not co-operative federalism. That is not in the words of the Prime Minister, a brand new day for Canada. That is cowardice, Mr. Speaker. This Government is so infected with its own rhetoric and so committed to fulfilling its own propaganda that rather than get its own house in order, cut back its own programs, admit that the world is not as simple as ABC to fix as the Conservatives suggest, the Government is cutting back $8 billion to the provinces, $2 billion to the Province of Quebec, which cut the Hon. Member for Charlevoix calls petty.

Parliamentarians should always remind themselves as they sit in this Chamber, sometimes rather empty with an echo coming back at you, that what we say and do here is not just for the benefit of parliamentarians in the Chamber, not just for the benefit of the few who come to watch from the galleries, but ultimately what we say and, more important, what we do here will be measured by the people of Canada. The eyes of the people of Canada are on us now. They are telling us that any time we walk away from the young people, any time we say that the human potential, that is this nation, can be measured purely in dollars and cents in a corrupt attempt to reduce the deficit, we have failed in our responsibility.

The true measure of any country is the way we treat our senior citizens and the way we treat our citizens. When we say with respect to our senior citizens that health care which they need and have come to depend upon in their old age may no longer be there, and when we say to our young people that they are a resource we cannot afford to invest in, we have failed in our responsibility.

I urge all Members to vote to suspend Bill C-96 for a period of six months so that the Government opposite may realize that a breach of faith with our citizens is more than a petty complaint.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I could not help thinking as I listened to my good friend and colleague who just sat down how strange it is to be in politics. One cannot help but wonder at the changes which take place with the changes of position in the House of Commons. I am sure that my good friend and colleague has not personally changed his view. He probably castigated the previous Liberal administration as severely as he has castigated the Conservative administration when the Liberal Government was instituting the very thing with which we are faced today. I say sincerely that I do not doubt for a moment that he would be one of the few voices in the Liberal caucus, together with his seat-mate, who would have risen to say how inappropriate it was to reduce the level of increase in the transfer payments to the provinces. I find it a dilemma when daily I hear my friends in the Liberal Party criticizing their friends in the Conservative Party for the very things which they themselves were about to do or had already started to do before they lost the last election. I suppose I will get used to it in time, but I do confess that it is difficult.

Nevertheless, I do agree with the comments that were made. The points which were made are absolutely correct. The inappropriateness of the Government's action is clear to anyone who cares to take a moment or two to try to analyse the impact of the actions proposed. Along with a number of other things, it establishes in my mind what is wrong with the Government. It is not able to set its priorities properly. It does not seem capable of fully understanding the impact of its actions. The shift in the weight of transfer payments is as ill-conceived, inadequately analysed, and improperly explained as is the Government's move toward free trade. When added to all of the other actions taken by the Government, it amounts to a failure by the Government to come to grips with the reality that is Canada.

Many years ago this country made a commitment to the maintenance of a standard of health and education which would be applicable regardless of where one lived within the broad expanse of Canada. The country made a decision years ago that the have areas of the land would be prepared to share with those which had not, or had less. This kind of action undermines the very essence of that understanding. That is what is wrong with what is happening. It goes to the very core of the co-operative federalism which is the historic birthright of Canadians.

It is impossible to provide an adequate level of health care or an adequate level of post-secondary education without the federal Government, with its vastly greater taxing powers, contributing proportionately to its capacity. That will not happen and will, therefore, result in the deterioration of the health care systems and post-secondary education systems which exist across the country. It is easy to say that either the provinces will take up the slack or individuals will be asked to pay some form of user-fee, which seems to be becoming the watchword for everything the Conservative Government does.

It is easy to say that, but when you ask people anywhere in Canada whether they will be able to provide for their children the monies necessary to allow them to continue with their education to the post-secondary level, the answer is inevitably that they are not able to do that any more. They say that their disposable income has been shrunk considerably by the federal Government, along with other Governments, taxing them to the point where they are unable to provide their families with that opportunity which is the basis for the greatness which Canada was in fact achieving. That happens to every family. I really wonder what the outcome of this action will be.

David Peterson, the Premier of Ontario, who is not exactly a soul mate of mine, in responding to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) at the First Ministers' Conference in November, said:

> We are also dismayed by the federal Government's plans to cut Established Program Funding transfer payments for post-secondary education and health. These cuts will amount to about $6 billion over the next five years. These cuts, which were announced without consultation, speeded up by a year without discussion, will weaken our country in the very areas where we must marshal our greatest strength—

In the fiscal year 1986-87 the Province of Ontario will receive $114 million less than it would have otherwise received. In the fiscal year 1987-88 it will receive $243 million less than it would otherwise have received. In 1988-89 it will receive $387.6 million less than it would otherwise have received. In 1989-90 it will receive $546.6 million less than it would otherwise have received. In 1990-91, at the end of the agreement, it will receive $722.7 million less than it would have otherwise received, for a total loss to the Province of Ontario of $2,014.1 million.

Given that post-secondary education and health are already under-funded, where will we get the money to maintain the standards which now exist, which in fact are even lower than the standards we had previously? We do not have sufficient funds to provide the opportunity for those who are in need of health care to go to a hospital and be made well, or for those young people upon whose brains the country will be built to continue their education in order to make Canada a stronger place. The Government had better re-think and re-establish its priorities. Right now it is destroying the co-operative federalism on which the country was built.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few words to the debate on Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977. We are presently speaking on a motion for a six-month hoist. I certainly agree that this Bill should be given a six-month hoist and brought back to the House with major changes because it is going to cause a lot of problems for the people of the country.

As the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) so eloquently put it, this country has had federal and provincial arrangements and collective agreements for many, many years. We have to maintain the right of all Canadians to equal access to quality health care and education no matter where they live. This Bill will cut $8 billion from the provinces by the year 1992. That money will have to come from the provincial Treasuries. Where are they going to get it? They get it from the same source as the federal Government here in Ottawa, namely, the taxpayer. In education, for example, if the provinces choose not to rely entirely on increased taxes to cover this shortfall, they could use another form of tax by increasing tuition fees. We already have many students, certainly in Atlantic Canada, who are having terrible difficulty in meeting the tuition fees they have to pay now. There are areas of this country, including my own province, where we have very high unemployment and very little opportunity for young people to find summer jobs in order to help finance their education. There are also economic circumstances in many places which work against the parents of those students being able to help financially. I am sure that any farmer in P.E.I. over this last year or so would have great difficulty in finding extra money to help his son or daughter to go to university. They, too, are in a serious financial bind.

We have heard it said in this debate today that this $8 billion cut-back is a transfer of the tax burden and deficit to the provinces. That, I submit, is the case. While the federal Government may be able to look good by reducing its deficit, it does not give relief to the ordinary citizen of this country because he or she is going to have to bear the burden of provincial taxation. These cuts will mean an accumulated loss, if you will, of $2.929 million from 1986 to 1992 for the Province of Ontario.

For my own Province of Prince Edward Island it will mean $1.6 million less for the year 1986-1987, $3.4 million for the year 1987-1988, $5.4 million for 1988-1989, $7.6 million for 1989-1990, $10 million for 1990-1991, and $12.7 million for 1991-1992. That is an accumulated loss, if you will, of $40.8 million. That represents well over $330 for every man, woman and child living in my province. Call it what you like, it is still a form of taxation because they are going to have to come up with that money which, in most cases, they just do not have. Someone is going to suffer.

What can the provinces do if they decide not to increase taxes? Should they cut the number of hospital beds? In my province there is a great need for an increase in health care, not a cut. What about education? Should the provinces close universities? My province has only one university, the University of Prince Edward Island. I do not think it would be a very wise decision for the Government to cut funding and close that university, especially at a time when the new veterinary college will be opening in the fall. Where is the money coming from for that? The educational system in my province is already financially strapped. Tuition fees are too high. University professors are working for less than the national average salary for their position. In these circumstances it is very difficult to find areas to make cuts in the so-called fat we hear so much of these days. Over the last number of years the Commission for Higher Education in Atlantic Canada has cut that fat to the bare bone, almost to the point where our educational system in Atlantic Canada is suffering. It is impossible to find more dollars there.

What about health care for our senior citizens? Of course, health care costs are increasing drastically. Yet how we treat our elderly is a measure of the kind of country we are. This Bill certainly flies in the face of what I have always thought Canada was all about; a place where we provide not only equal opportunity for education, but equal opportunity for quality health care to the best of our ability, no matter where you live. Obviously you cannot have everywhere the kind of hospital facilities that we have in, say, downtown Toronto. However, that is not to say we should not provide quality health care for our citizens. No matter whether they live in the north, or the extremities of the east or west, no matter whether they live anywhere in Ontario and Quebec, they should have equal opportunity to quality health care. However, when we look at provinces like Quebec and Ontario, we find a tremendous burden is going to be placed on some of our larger provinces. There will be cuts in service or tax increases.

Why is the Government doing this? It says it has to control the deficit. The Government brought in Bills which were debated and passed by this House to support the banks when they were in financial difficulty. We have supported the agricultural industry in the west. Certainly it needs the help, and certainly more money is needed to help farmers all across this country.

Let us not forget our young people. They are the future of our country, the ones who will be carrying on in the future. They are the men and women who will represent us in this astute Parliament and will be performing the functions of government. We should give them the opportunity to do the very best job possible. We should never cut back in areas of education or health.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have another chance to speak on this Bill and the amendment regarding the six-month hoist. I want to say to the government Members that, should they accept the amendment, we would be only too happy for them to bring in a new Bill which would take into account what people across Canada are saying about the wrongness of the reduced increases in expenditures needed for health care and post-secondary education in this country.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) quoted at length Conservative Members presently in the Government and in the Cabinet. They railed against the Liberals from 1977 to 1984, except for a brief time in 1979, for what the Liberals were doing regarding funding for health care and post-secondary education. I think the Conservatives at that time were right. Then he had to sit and suffer while listening to Liberals making the same speech as the Tories did since 1977. I have been here a little longer than he has and have had to suffer through that as well.

I want to disagree with my colleague, because after quoting the Conservatives now in the government he concluded that "there ain't no difference between the Liberals and the Conservatives". Well, I disagree with him. There is one difference, and that is that one is in and one is out.

As Tommy Douglas said on more than one occasion, they take money from the rich and votes from the poor and then promise to protect them from each other. Nothing has changed between the Liberals and the Tories since the days of the "dirty thirties" when the Liberal Finance Minister said, "What do you think, money grows on gooseberry bushes?" They talked exactly the same way in the seventies and the eighties.

Something of which I am very proud is that my province, during the past four decades, led Canada and all of North America in health care, in the way we treat our sick and our old, and what we provide for our young by way of advanced education.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) just made the point that there is something wrong with the priorities of this Government and the previous one. He is dead on. Saskatchewan will lose $227.4 million between now and 1990-91. That is not a lot compared to Ontario, Quebec or even B.C. That is as much or more than one of those fighter planes. I was reminded of that by my colleague from Hamilton Mountain. The priority is always there on a fighter plane we neither need nor can use, instead of giving priority to those who are sick and need the fullest opportunity for secondary education.

This is the time to be expanding health care, educational facilities and opportunities, not reducing them. We readily agree that there has to be efficient spending, administration and delivery of federal funds through the provinces for the purposes of health care and post-secondary education, a better distribution of medical practitioners, which should mean additional costs to be shared equally by the federal Government with the provinces. There should be specialists in outlying areas of our provinces and our territories who should be paid additional money.

There should be the latest technology available in some of our outlying areas to allow the best medical practitioners to treat people as equally, in terms of medical practice, as they would in downtown Toronto or downtown Regina. That means higher cost, and I have yet to run into any taxpayer in Canada of any political stripe who is not willing and prepared to pay his or her fair and equitable share of taxes to do that very thing.

We should provide opportunities for people to pursue secondary education and quit becoming a nation of exploited hamburger slingers, gas pump jockeys, bellhops, sky caps and taxi drivers. In fact, I ran into a taxi driver last week with a masters degree. They are all exploited for the benefit of what is called free and open market forces. Their talents are wasted. The priorities of this Government are banks, before farmers and home owners. The priority of this Government is its paranoia and hysteria about deficits, before farmers, fishermen, and, more seriously, before the poor, the old, the sick and those who try to pursue excellence in education.

An Hon. Member spoke last Friday and said that, "We can only provide what we can afford to pay". He proceeded to go on and on about our debt. If there is any one thing we can afford to pay for it is health care and it is secondary education. There has never been any argument about that. It took years to accomplish it. After all those decades of fighting we finally arrived at a 50/50 partnership between the national Government, the provinces and the Territories. The onus is on the federal Government to say to the provinces, "We will share with you 50/50 improvements and expansion in health care and post-secondary education". We will monitor them to ensure that those funds are actually delivered for those purposes alone. That is fair ball.

I want to close by quoting one of my favourite political heroes and mentors. Mr. Douglas, at our convention in Regina in 1983, during one of his most famous speeches, said, after all these years of fighting and gains: "Don't let them take it away". I believe he was being relatively non-partisan.

We, along with many others in this country, will fight tooth and nail, and will take every avenue open to us under the law and under parliamentary procedure, to see that the Government will not take it away. We will go to whatever lengths we must, under the law and parliamentary procedure, to persuade the Government not to continue doing what the Liberals began.

The people of Canada are willing to pay and are willing to share with one another, from coast to coast, in what we need, what we support and what we must do over the next number of years to keep our nation in the forefront and show others how we can be a decent and civilized society for everyone in our country.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I regret having only 10 minutes to talk about this very important betrayal by the federal Government of its traditional responsibilities to the provinces. That betrayal is particularly unseemly for a Government that campaigned on the promise that there would be new and good relations between the central Government and the provinces—changes for the better once the so-called days of confrontation were put behind them.

In speaking to this budget Bill, I want to focus on an even more significant question. It is the important promises that were made during the election campaign that the new Conservative Government would save the Canadian taxpayers billions of dollars by terminating the waste and extravagance of the former Trudeau Government. After campaigning on the promise that it would be possible to reduce the cost of Government by billions of dollars, without cutting important programs, let us consider where the billions of dollars are being cut from federal government waste and extravagance.

The first point to be made about the billions of dollars being cut is that they are a measure of proof that the Government has not found the billions of dollars in waste and extravagance. Surely even a Conservative Government, with a philosophy that there should be less Government and that the provinces should be allowed to function themselves and finance programs in their own areas of responsibility, would not cut these post-secondary and health care programs if it could have kept its promise to cut the waste and extravagance that it had identified for the Canadian people.

The Government has cut the Established Programs Financing, which is the national Government's way of supporting post-secondary education and health care. I have a chart to which some of my colleagues have referred. It shows that if this Bill goes through, there will be a cut across the country of $317.4 million in 1986-87 in money that would otherwise be given to the provinces for those two very important purposes. In 1987-88, the cut-back will amount to $676.8 million, slightly over $1 billion in 1988-89, and $1.5 billion in 1989-90. In 1990-91, the cut for that year alone is slightly over $2 billion, and in 1991-92, six years from now, the cut will be $2.5 billion if this Bill is passed. The total for that entire period is slightly over $8 billion.

While the Budget has succeeded in saving the federal Government slightly over $8 billion, that saving has not come from cutting waste and extravagance or tightening the federal Government's belt in its areas of discretionary spending. That savings was not achieved by cutting back the size of the Public Service or locating the waste and extravagance about which the Government campaigned and which it tried to pin on the Trudeau Government. It comes as a result of asking the provinces to tighten their belts and deprive Canadians across Canada of support for two of the most important social programs—post-secondary education and health care.

I want to look at the situation in my Province of Ontario. The proposed cut for 1986-87 would be $114 million; nearly $250 million in 1987-88; almost $400 million in 1988-89; over $500 million in 1989-90; nearly $750 million for 1990-91; and $916 million in 1991-92. That is a total of almost $3 billion over that six-year period.

The federal Government and the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) have been asked to acknowledge at least these figures which come from their own documents. I suppose they are hoping that the Canadian people will not listen to what these figures suggest so that the Government will not have to defend the facts contained herein. When asked if these figures are true, the junior Minister of Finance has repeatedly refused to face up to them but simply stated that each year the Government will be paying more to the provinces than the previous year.

The Government cannot deny the fact that if this Bill is passed there will be a reduction by the amounts I have cited as compared to what the provinces would get if this Bill does not pass.

I suggest that the Government has underestimated the Canadian people. They are not so stupid as to believe that simply because the amounts to be paid to the provinces will increase a little every year, they are not being cut back by the amounts we have suggested from the Government's figures. The provinces are being asked to tighten their belts by somewhat over $8 billion over a six-year period.

The federal Government has been a partner in these two programs since their creation. I recall in 1967 how much the federal Government pushed to bring all the provinces on board in order to establish medicare. It is true that medicare is within provincial jurisdiction, but the federal Government backed that program. In effect, we told the provinces that if they passed that legislation we would support these programs. The purpose of the legislation was to support these programs.

The federal Government promised Canadians that it would cut back the cost of Government, but instead of cutting back on the cost of the federal Government it is cutting back and asking for belt-tightening on behalf of provincial Governments.

I want to ask the Government a number of questions about health care. Should the provincial Government of my province, Ontario, respond to the federal Government's reduced support by cutting the number of hospital beds? Should it cut the number of emergency departments in hospitals? Should it cut out health care for senior citizens? Should it cut out the tremendous support which has been given to cancer research? Should hospitals be closed? Should we force our senior citizens or the handicapped in Ontario and elsewhere in the country to pay user-fees? With this great leadership which it is showing in cutting back expenditures, how does the Government expect the provinces to respond to the cut-backs in health care?

I know that I have but a minute left. Yet I have more questions. I think the Government owes something to Canadians if it is withdrawing support and no longer wants to be an equal partner in university and post-secondary education. How does the Government expect the provinces to respond to this series of enormous cuts? Should universities be closed? Should research at universities be terminated? Should we close our professional, medical, dental, business and architecture schools? Should we close computer and high technology departments at universities? And what about agriculture and research programs at universities? Should we increase tuition fees?

What really revolts us is when we hear the federal Government responding to such questions with a new discovery. It has discovered waste and extravagance in these programs. In order to get elected the Government convinced the public that it would cut waste and extravagance in the federal Government. Now that the Government is in place and finds that there is not waste and extravagance, it proposes to cut funding of health care and post-secondary education. Members of the Government say that these areas can be cut easily because there is a great deal of waste and extravagance in them. That allegation is just a lot of nonsense.

I urge Members of the House, even Conservative Members, to vote against this nefarious piece of legislation.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, like my colleague, the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan), I feel obligated—not pleased, but obligated—to participate in the debate this afternoon on Bill C-96. This Bill is basically legislation to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act.

As Hon. Members have pointed out before me, the thrust of this important piece of legislation is simply to cut back on two crucial and national areas of importance, that is, education and health. Basically, there is a feeling within Canada that the Government is tranferring its responsibility with respect to what it says and preaches in terms of deficit reduction to the provinces.

What will this mean in the Province of Ontario? What will it mean to the people of Ontario? This year it will mean a reduction of some $114 million. Following the statistics and numbers through preceding years, it will result in a loss of some $2.929 billion—almost $3 billion—in direct losses alone between the years 1986 and 1992 in the Province of Ontario. The Premier of Ontario, Mr. David Peterson, said:

> You don't call it a cut. You could call it a breach of faith—You have not solved the National problem . . . You are only transferring that National problem to us.

The Treasurer of Ontario, Mr. Robert Nixon, said:

> There was uniform opposition to Ottawa's plan . . . Nobody thought it was a good idea.

I could go on and quote various provincial Ministers and Premiers who are basically and philosophically opposed to this move. However, I will not.

As a federal Member of Parliament I think this piece of legislation and the cuts we are seeing in the areas of health and education really assist in defining what it means to be a Conservative in this Government and in this country. It really defines, on philosophical grounds, where the Government is coming from and where it wishes to go. I think we can measure how progressive and compassionate a society is when we measure how it treats its sick, elderly and its future resources, namely, youth.

In talking about cut-backs let me say that there are a great many Canadians who hope that their Governments will be prudent in terms of spending their tax dollars. In the end, our primary responsibility here in this Chamber is to ensure that the monies collected from Canadians are properly channelled and used in a fiscally responsible manner. However, when one talks to average Canadians, as I have done in my own constituency and across the country, one finds that two areas in which they are not prepared to sacrifice are the very areas in which the Government proposes to cut back. There is health on the one hand and education on the other. In dealing with these two subjects we see an indication of how the Government is treating its seniors, its sick and its disabled on the one hand and, on the other, how it treats its young people vis-à-vis their education.

We have heard in the Chamber speech after speech stating that medicare is a tribute to its great traditions. We have heard about how important it is to support technological training and to educate our young people. It is not important for every Canadian to come out of school with a BA, an MA or a PhD from one of the local universities, but it is important that there be no stigma attached to the individual who wishes to pursue academic excellence vis-à-vis college and come out with a trade of which he or she can be proud.

We are talking about crucial elements here today. In Ontario, we will not have $3 billion at our disposal to ensure that the level of medical health care enjoyed in our province throughout the years will be maintained. In Ontario, we will have $3 billion less to secure better education and, therefore, a better future for our young citizens. They may be young today but, God willing, tomorrow they will be our leaders, whether it be in the business community, the social service community or in the politcal community. When we talk about robbing billions and billions of dollars from our provincial Governments, we are talking about a serious, fundamental matter which goes to the core of what our country is all about.

If the Government were to say that it is cutting back because it is supposed to cut back, then obviously that would be a constitutional issue. Citizens would at least be reassured that those monies would be channelled in those directions in the end. When we have citizens who will not be able to enjoy those funds in terms of health care or education then they are not pleased. This is why we are rising in our places today to demonstrate and articulate these concerns. We are doing so in order to make the Government aware of these aspirations in the eleventh hour.

We should not consider this piece of legislation in isolation. I think it puts forward a continuity with respect to programs and policies which demonstrate just where the interests of the Government lie. It is prepared to bail out the banks, no questions asked. It is prepared to come to the House and say to members of the Opposition: "You sign a blank cheque. Don't worry about it. We know how to deal with it". Yet in the same breath it comes before the House and tries to deindex the pensions of senior citizens. The Government is prepared to give a capital gains bonanza of $500,000, yet it is prepared to deindex baby bonuses. It is prepared to ask those who earn $200,000 annually to pay a cumulative tax of only 2 per cent in five years while asking those who earn $15,000 annually to face a 36 per cent increase in taxes by 1990.

After illustrating those individual cases and analysing the philosophical bent that characterizes these policy thrusts, it comes as no surprise that the Government is asking for, and will obtain because of its majority, cuts to health care and post-secondary education that will have a tremendous impact. In speech after speech, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has talked about today's youth, tomorrow's leaders, today's ill and tomorrow's old. If there is any sincerity and integrity in those words, those press releases and those policy statements, then the Government will withdraw Bill C-96 because the legislation is immoral. It lacks integrity and it lacks the vision and compassion necessary to protect Canadians through health care and post-secondary education services. Canadians know where the Government is going. It is important, however, that the Government learn where Canadians are going to go in 1988.

[Translation]

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, when we consider Bill C-96 before the House today, which has as one of its avowed objectives to reduce the deficit, we cannot ignore certain other factors that are also part and parcel of the Government's effort to reduce the deficit. Today is May 5, just five days after the deadline for Canadian taxpayers to file their income tax returns with the federal Government. You yourself may have noticed, Mr.Speaker, as have most Canadian citizens, that this year we are paying more income tax.

In fact, in his last two Budgets, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and with him the entire Conservative Government, managed to take some $12.5 billion extra out of our pockets.

This is part of their attack on the deficit, but what really bothers me is how they go about it, because if we take the case of low-income Canadians, we realize that they are the ones who are getting the worst deal. A family with an annual income of $15,000 will be paying 23 per cent more in income tax to the federal Government as a result of these two last Budgets. However, a taxpayer who has the honour and the privilege of having an annual income of around $100,000, will pay only 1 per cent more income tax. This means that the Conservative Government's measures to reduce the deficit are putting the greatest burden on those who are already being squeezed and giving a better chance to those who are already well-off.

This Government, which in its frenzy to reduce the deficit is bearing down most heavily on low-income Canadians, is doing the same thing at the provincial level, and that is where Bill C-96 comes in, because here we see the provinces that are least well-off getting the worst deal.

Bill C-96, which amends the agreements on federal contributions for post-secondary education and health care will make it possible for the federal Government to reduce substantially the amounts it transfers to the provinces, which means a reduction of about $8 billion over a six-year period. This is not exactly peanuts, Mr. Speaker. For instance, my own province, the province of Quebec, will lose a little over $2 billion over that same period.

In the case of Ontario it is almost $3 billion. Mr. Speaker, the Atlantic region is experiencing hardships and has the highest unemployment level in Canada, yet it will have to cope with cutbacks in excess of $700 million. People in the Atlantic region are not stupid. Think of the unmistakable message the residents of Prince Edward Island have just delivered to the Conservative Party. It was turfed out, thrown out of office in the province, and I am sure Bill C-96 of the federal Government had something to do with this latest decision made by the people of Prince Edward Island. As to western Canada, well that region will lose close to $2 billion over the next six months.

So, Mr. Speaker, the provinces unanimously condemned and denounced these unfair cutbacks, particularly because they were made without real consultation, as the provinces point out. I do not really expect the Government to take my word for it. I am going to quote the Quebec Minister of Finance, the province I represent here in the House. Mr. Speaker, this was published in the Journal de Montréal of May 2, barely three days ago:

> Last night Quebec Finance Minister Gérard D. Lévesque accused the Canadian Government of unilaterally—

—unilaterally. It proves what I just said, there was no real consultation. As he was saying:

> —of unilaterally changing the provincial fiscal transfer mechanisms.

And I quote the minister directly:

> It is like a vice closing progressively on the public finances of Quebec—"another step toward a federal withdrawal from the financing of essential services—

This is how a provincial Finance Minister has reacted to this Bill, and he was the first to say that this Bill was imposed unilaterally. Mr. Speaker, it is to this that we object the most, because this measure is not only hard, but it is also being imposed on the provinces without their consent.

How will the provinces react to such substantial cutbacks in their finances? I have the impression that their only option will be to reduce their services.

How can this be done in the case of hospital services? As we know, certain provinces have been looking at user-fees for some time, and several of them will probably have to charge user-fees to make up for the shortfall of $8 billion during the next six years, and these additional costs will be charged to people whose taxes have just been substantially increased by $12.5 billion over two years, as I said earlier. If the provinces do not charge user-fees, what will they do? In some cases, they will certainly postpone the purchase of new equipment, such as modern X-ray machines or other things they may need.

Elsewhere, the number of beds available in hospitals may have to be reduced because of the cutbacks forced on the hospitals by the provinces when they transfer the costs imposed on them by the federal Government, or else it might be the line-ups in the emergency rooms which will grow longer. Of course, emergency room line-ups are already quite long enough without them growing any longer, at least in my own province. For my part, I maintain that the cutbacks of $2 billion which Quebec will have to absord within a few years can only cause further deterioration of hospital services in our province.

Moreover, what I find strange is that this remedy is being administered by a political party which was saying just the opposite not so long ago. You must recall, Mr. Speaker, the famous Sherbrooke caucus held shortly before the 1984 federal elections. That was already a very well known caucus meeting. For instance, it was the caucus meeting during which the Conservative Party promised to maintain indexation of Old Age Security pensions. Let me recall what came afterwards, when the Minister of Finance came up with proposals to do the exact opposite, proposals that were aimed at deindexing Old Age Security pensions. And we know that senior citizens all across Canada were forced to rise and organize demonstrations right up to Parliament Hill, asking the Conservative Party and the present Prime Minister to honour their commitment.

Well, concerning financial support to hospital services, let me refer for instance to one of the commitments made in Sherbrooke by the Conservative Members' caucus. In addition to maintaining Old Age Security pensions, they were committed to honouring the federal obligation—this is how they called it, the obligation—to support provincial health care services and to provide extra funds. Not a word was said about cuts at that point. They talked about increasing the payments that would be transferred to the provinces.

How hard it does seem to the Conservative Party to be true to their word once they have promised something!

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let me make a few comments—I know I have some time left—on another area where cuts will hurt very badly. I am referring to post-secondary education. I must comment on that, because in my constituency I have three universities: McGill University, Concordia University and the Université du Québec à Montréal. There is no need then to talk about the number of representations I received against Bill C-96. At a point in time where we speak of the importance of education in a technological society, the urgent need to improve our competitive position, especially in the face of free trade and negotiations with the United States, how does the Government expect to reach its goals if it cuts down on the funds intended for college and university education? It makes no sense, Mr. Speaker. That is not the place where to make cuts, at a time when students have difficulty finding summer jobs to pay for their education, at a point where parents have already their available income reduced by increased taxes, because they will then be forcing universities to increase tuition fees. Thousands of students in my constituency are especially concerned about that. They ask me to point out to Parliament that it is not the proper time to increase school fees because many of them with slender means will thus be unable to attend university.

If I had more time at my disposal, Mr. Speaker, I could carry on, but since I have only a few minutes left, I should like to explain to Canadians through you why I will be unable to vote for Bill C-96.

• (1710)

[English]

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to be able to rise to state why I believe the House must oppose Bill C-96. Let us recognize that the cut-backs in question, the cut-backs to be created by the Bill, will have considerable impact upon all provinces. We are talking about cut-backs which by 1991-92 will amount to some $8 billion. We are talking about cut-backs which will amount over the entire period to $187.7 million for Newfoundland, $40.8 million for Prince Edward Island, $282.6 million for Nova Scotia, $228.8 for New Brunswick, $340.4 million for Manitoba, $332.5 million for Saskatchewan, $773.1 million for Alberta, and $934.3 million for British Columbia and for Quebec, a cut of over $2 billion while for the same period, the cut for Ontario would reach almost $3 billion.

[English]

The cut for the Province of Ontario alone will amount to almost $3 billion. What we are talking about here is a transfer by the federal Government of its deficit to the provinces. We are also talking about how the Government has acted unilaterally, without the consent of the provinces, and has failed to respect the tradition of federal-provincial agreements.

When the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Conservative Party were campaigning for office, they said that they would bring into effect, if they became the Government, a new era of federal-provincial consultation, a new era of harmony between the provinces and the federal Government.

An Hon. Member: They delivered.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I heard someone say: "They delivered". They delivered chaos, concern, and fear. If there was any harmony, it was harmony on the part of the provincial Premiers and the provincial Governments which unanimously agreed that the federal Government betrayed them and let them down. Let us have the facts. For example, Richard Hatfield, Premier of New Brunswick said:

[Translation]

We will have no other choice but to increase extra billing for health services.

[English]

John Baxter, New Brunswick Finance Minister, said the following:

It is unreasonable for the federal Government to think that provinces which have taken difficult measures to deal with their own financial situation can also be expected to absorb part of the problem at the federal level.

Mr. Keer, Nova Scotia Finance Minister, had the following to say when he was referring to a federal-provincial meeting:

Every province in there made it clear that there's probably nothing more important to deliver to Canadians than health and education.

He added:

By cutting health and education spending, the federal Government is running the risk of creating two levels of health care and education in the country.

We are talking here about people who are friends of the Government. If that is what they are saying, we can imagine what the leaders of provincial Governments who are skeptical about the Government have in fact been saying on the same issue. For example, Robert Nixon, Ontario Treasurer, described the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) as intransigent. In referring to all provincial Finance Ministers, he said that "there was uniform opposition to Ottawa's plan and that nobody thought it was a good idea". Next I will quote the Minister of Finance for the Province of Quebec.

[Translation]

The Minister of Finance for Quebec, Mr. Gérard-D. Lévesque, has reminded Ottawa that the provinces generally had reacted with great discipline and moderation as far as the control of expenditures were concerned.

In his recent Budget, a few days ago. Mr. Lévesque said that as a result of broken promises, of unfulfilled commitments by the Conservative Government which had promised Quebec a sum of $248 million, he had to introduce a sterner budget which would have been unnecessary if that Tory Government had kept its promise.

[English]

As a result of the cuts totalling $8 billion by 1991-92, the provinces will be forced to increase their taxes, to increase their deficits, or to rethink their priorities and cut back their services accordingly, or to increase fees paid by individual Canadians. Whatever the method adopted, the taxpayer will bear the cost of the cut-backs without there being any benefit accruing to the public.

The Government, in asking the House to approve a cut-back or a reduction of some $8 billion in transfer payments to the provinces by 1991-92, is saying to the provinces in the area of health care: "We the Conservative Government want you to cut the number of hospital beds and emergency departments". Through this Bill the Conservative Government is saying that it wants them to cut health care for senior citizens and programs of medical research. If we look at the area of education, through this piece of bad legislation the Conservative Government is telling the provinces to close universities, to cut university research, to close professional schools, and to close computer and high technology departments in universities and community colleges. This Conservative Government through this Bill is telling the provinces to close agricultural research programs and to increase tuition fees generally in our post-secondary institutions. This is the wrong message that the Conservative Government is giving to the provinces through this legislation.

It contradicts totally the promises the Conservatives made during the last election campaign. I know it is not news any more to cite another broken Conservative election promise. You can say: "What's new about that? What is different about that?" It is important to recognize that in breaking this promise to the provinces and the Canadian people, the Government is telling the provinces to cut needed services to individual and lower-income Canadians.

At a meeting held in Sherbrooke on July 26, 1984, the Conservative Party promised to:

—respect the federal obligation to fund provincial health care through Established Programs Financing, and make additional funds available to the provinces on a cost-shared basis for the establishment or enrichment of programs deemed most likely to improve the general level and limit long-term costs. This determination to be made following a national conference of health Ministers and health care professionals.

It is obvious through this legislation that the Conservative Government has not kept that promise. The Conservative Party committed itself to increase R and D expenditures to 2.5 per cent of GNP as compared to 1.17 per cent in 1981. The Conservative Party said:

Our research and development commitment is fundamental to our over-all programs for economic and social development. We are committed to doubling Canada's R and D budget to 2.5 per cent of GNP.

The Conservative Government has already broken that promise through cut-backs as a result of the last two Budgets. The Government is underscoring the way it broke that promise through cut-backs in support for universities as a result of this bad piece of legislation.

Again I say, what is new about another broken Conservative promise? There have been so many already, but this is one of the most serious. Through this legislation Conservatives are hitting health care, something fundamental to this country. They are also hitting education, something fundamental to this country. They are imposing permanent damage on the country and the people. This bad Bill must be defeated, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise to deal with this Bill, not with much pleasure, but in order to put on the official record of our debates in the House some opinions and views that I would like to elaborate on.

Because the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) who has spoken before me has provided a fairly complete overview of the facts, I shall refrain from repeating the arguments he has put forward, namely, that the Government has failed to consult the provinces before making its decision, that under the circumstances it is acting not only arbitrarily, but also with a complete lack of sensitivity for the greatest needs of today, namely, education and health care.

I wish to indicate simply that I support the views of my colleague, that we will vote against this Bill and that, when the time comes, we will stand up against this initiative aimed at considerably reducing the amounts of money which the provinces expected and were entitled to receive.

Mr. Speaker, the Government proposes to reduce the growth rate of its contribution to Established Programs Financing. The total reduction in cash transfers and fiscal percentage points could amount to about $8.133 billion for Canada as a whole.

For my own province of Ontario, it will be almost $3 billion, more precisely $2.929 billion. We cannot help wondering where the provincial Governments will find the money to finance their essential programs in the areas of health and education. In fact, as a result of these cutbacks, the provinces will either have to raise their taxes or increase their deficit, and give us the same lame excuse this Government has given us, namely that they have to do it to reduce the deficit. Oh, the Government is doing it, if that is what it wants, but it is doing it at the expense of the provinces. It is doing it by tranferring the federal deficit to the provinces.

I think the whole procedure is less than fair and certainly does not meet with the approval of the general public.

Mr. Speaker, as my hon. colleague from Windsor West (Mr. Gray) said earlier, this Government has acted without consulting the provinces and without their consent. It has failed to respect the tradition of federal-provincial arrangements, arrangements this Government had sworn to strengthen and abide by, while promising practically continuous consultation.

Mr. Speaker, we have here a striking example of a government that, as I said earlier, is insensitive to the needs of the provinces and has no scruples about breaking its word and then saying it is for the good of Canadians. This is a deficit that is going to be reduced to a federal deficit, as someone said earlier.

Mr. Speaker, in the course of debate I heard several Members of the New Democratic Party say that the Liberals did the same thing during the 6-and 5-period, and that we had cut payments for post-secondary education and education financing. It is true that during the 6-and 5-period, we cut financing for post-secondary education. And Hon. Members are aware that this represents about 27 or 28 per cent of total transfer payments to the provinces for health care and education, in other words, Established Programs Financing.

Mr. Speaker, the remaining 71 per cent relate to health programs. We should not forget that the 6-and-5 program was for only two years, whereas the thrust of Bill C-96 which is now under consideration will make the cutbacks permanent. It will have a very negative and severe impact on the future of our health and education services. We know that the number of college and university students has risen rather sharply this year. We know that the demand for hospital beds in Canada is on the increase. This week I wrote a letter in support of a request made by the Élisabeth-Bruyère health centre, a letter addressed to Sister Gilberte Paquette and dated April 29, not so long ago, in which I told her I had learned of her request with great interest. Mr. Speaker, it is a request for 70 additional nursing home beds. One thing we can readily appreciate in that respect is that we do not have French nursing care services here in Ottawa, and I would suggest this is an altogether normal request from a well known health centre like Élisabeth-Bruyère. But what is happening, Mr. Speaker, is that because of these reduced payments to the provinces, particularly health services payments, the Élisabeth-Bruyère health centre is probably in a precarious position where it will not be getting the funds required to provide these 70 beds and serve people who urgently need financial assistance.

Mr. Speaker, under the old formula, the federal contribution for each province was equal to a yearly per capita amount indexed each year to the per capita Gross National Product multiplied by the population of the province. This is how we can evaluate the impact of Established Programs Financing.

The new legislation provides that this per capita amount will be indexed to the per capita GNP minus 2 p. 100.

This, Mr. Speaker, is where we do not agree with the Government, and we have said so many times, because it is unfair to do such a thing without consulting the provinces and without hearing the views of those concerned to find out the needs of the provinces and the users of these services.

Mr. Speaker, God knows that the Conservatives promised during the electoral campaign to keep to the Established Programs Financing Agreements, but this is just one of many broken promises. Whether we are speaking about pension indexing, Established Programs Financing or Government programs, everything has been left in suspense and it is impossible to know where we are going. This is a Government of indecision. This Government prefers to act alone. This Government acts before it consults. We have a Government which objects to certain things which I, at least, find essential in health care, because by objecting to a reasonable growth in Established Programs Financing, the Government is also objecting to an increase in the number of hospital beds, to improved post-secondary education and to reasonable and continuing access to these programs.

Mr. Speaker, as I said at the beginning, this Government is simply transferring its deficit to the provinces and the only reason it has given to justify this cutback is that all Canadians and all provinces must make an effort to reduce the federal deficit.

Mr. Speaker, as I have already said, and I shall close with this comment, the Government has acted unilaterally without the consent of the provinces and has not respected the tradition of federal-provincial agreements. We shall be voting against this Bill, Mr. Speaker, and we will resume this discussion in committee or when the Bill is in committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Murphy:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be not now read a second time but that it be read a second time six months hence."

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Murphy), which was negatived on the following division:

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION—PROVISION OF FIGHTER AIRCRAFT TO TURKEY—GREEK CYPRIOTS' FEARS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, as you well know, Canadians of Greek origin are extremely concerned about the fact that the Canadian Government intends to transfer CF-104 fighter aircraft to Turkey. It is bad enough from the perspective of Canadians of Greek origin that their former homeland was dominated and occupied for some 350 years by Turkey. It is bad enough that a few years ago the Defence Minister of Turkey quite openly indicated that Turkey claimed the Greek Aegean island as its own. It is bad enough that in 1974 some 40,000 Turkish troops invaded Cyprus and drove the Greek-Cypriot community into the southern part of the island. Since that time, thousands of Greek-Cypriots have been missing and unaccounted for.

As well, it is bad enough that Amnesty International continually condemns the activities of Turkey. It is bad enough that Turkey, as one of the NATO allies, has refused to take part in NATO exercises when Greece is involved. All of these things are bad enough.

On top of that, Canadians of Greek origin have invested their tax dollars in CF-104 fighter aircraft. This situation is somewhat akin to one which could have developed in 1939 if the Canadian Government of the time had decided to transfer military equipment to the Government of Nazi Germany on the verge of the German invasion of Europe. When one considers all of those things, I think it is understandable that Canadians of Greek origin are modestly upset, to say the least.

The Minister of National Defence (Mr. Nielsen) has quite properly explained and pointed out that in 1976, all of the NATO countries, including Canada, Greece and Turkey, came to an agreement whereby surplus military equipment was to be transferred free of cost to Greece, to Turkey or to any other NATO ally if it was so requested. The Minister of National Defence explained as well that when Canada decided to replace its CF-104 fighter aircraft with new CF-18 aircraft, Canada offered its old fighter aircraft to all of its NATO allies and particularly to Turkey and Greece. The Minister pointed out as well that Turkey made a request to have those aircraft transferred, but Greece did not. He stated that later, Canada informed all of its allies of Turkey's claim to these aircraft and at that time, Greece made no response.

In 1982, after the offer had been made, Turkey had accepted it and Greece had not responded, the then Minister of National Defence under the former Liberal Government, the Hon. Gilles Lamontagne, made a commitment in principle to transfer the CF-104 aircraft to Turkey. Later, that commitment in principle was confirmed by another former Liberal Minister of National Defence, the Hon. Jean-Jacques Blais. Then in July 1982, for the very first time Greece requested the Canadian Government to transfer CF-104 aircraft and spare parts to it as well as to Turkey.

It was said by the present Minister of National Defence that we made a commitment to Greece at that time that we would transfer an equal amount of military equipment to Greece as was being transferred to Turkey and on the same terms as we were transferring it to Turkey. Those terms were that the equipment could not be used against another NATO ally and that it would be transferred in an "as-is" condition. There would not be any money spent to upgrade the equipment or improve it or do anything at all to make sure that it was in better condition when it was transferred than it was when it was being used by our own forces. On April 25 of this year, the Ottawa Citizen reported that the Department of National Defence was now combing its inventories for spare parts and for air frames for CF-104 aircraft to give to Greece in order to fulfil its commitment.

I would like to know tonight from the Parliamentary Secretary first to what extent we have now transferred CF-104 aircraft to Turkey and how many more remain untransferred to date. I would like to know from the Parliamentary Secretary whether any Canadian taxpayers' money was spent on upgrading those aircraft when they were transferred to Turkey. I would also like to know whether there is any intention of spending any other Canadian taxpayers' dollars on upgrading those aircraft transferred to Turkey. I would like to know how much in the way of military equipment we have transferred so far to Greece in order to fulfil our commitment to Greece. As well, I would like to know exactly what kinds and how much additional military equipment we intend to transfer to Greece in order to fulfil our commitment to Greece subsequent to our commitment to Turkey.

Finally, I want to know from the Parliamentary Secretary if Canada has made a decision on whether or not we will be building a CANDU nuclear reactor for Turkey, whether or not the project will be proceeded with and, if it is, whether we intend to do something similar for Greece. I am looking forward to the answers of the Parliamentary Secretary tonight.

Mr. Bud Bradley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, the interest of the Hon. Member in this matter is appreciated. I welcome the opportunity to clarify some of the background for him. However, the Hon. Member has introduced a series of additional questions which I find extremely interesting and extremely detailed. I am sure he is aware that I would not have that information at my fingertips at the moment. They do not quite relate to the question at point, but I will refer those matters to the Minister and see what information we can get for him.

I think the Hon. Member is familiar with the policy of NATO countries with regard to military equipment which is being replaced, that is, it is offered to all alliance members. However, in the last few years NATO has placed greater emphasis upon supplying military assistance to Greece, Portugal, and Turkey. All requests are considered. As the Hon. Member knows, this was the process Canada followed once it became known that the CF-104 Starfighters would be phased out of service and replaced by our new CF-18s. In response to our offer of these CF-104 Starfighters, Turkey inquired and ultimately requested aircraft and spare parts. This request was considered, and the Government agreed to it.

The Hon. Member is aware of how important the southern flank of NATO is to the alliance, and I am sure he will recall the Minister's response in the House that these aircraft were offered under the condition that they be used by Turkey to bolster its NATO role in that very important area.

To respond more directly to the Hon. Member's concern about the transfer of aircraft to an important ally, I should like to repeat part of what the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Andre) said on December 17 in the House:

—these aircraft will be based in the southeastern part of Turkey, that is, near the Turkey-Iran border, and that they will be nowhere near the Turkey-Greece border of Cyprus.

I hope that helps the Hon. Member. As I pointed out, I will take note of the new questions which he raised this evening and try to obtain responses.

Adjournment Debate

AIR SAFETY—ARCTIC AIRPORTS PROGRAM—REQUEST FOR REINSTATEMENT

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, on April 25, I asked a question of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) concerning the reinstatement of the Arctic airports program. The Minister's reply was sympathetic because it reflected the personal concern which I know him to have with regard to the matter. However, it was not a committal. I can understand that too because I know the financial constraints under which the Minister operates.

I should like to take this opportunity to argue again in favour of the reinstatement of the Arctic airports program. First I should like to quote from report No. 83-W30065 of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board which dealt with a fatality that took place at Paulatuk in the winter of 1983. The Canadian Aviation Safety Board has seen, as a result of investigating several aircraft accidents in the North with fatalities, that there is an underlying contributory cause. It found as follows:

The Board notes that many northern landing strips are rudimentary and have been developed with only local resources. In a 1978 Memorandum of Understanding between several federal Government Departments and the Governments of the Territories, standards for the identification and upgrading of northern aviation facilities were prescribed. The MOU expired in March 1983, at which time there were a number of facilities which had been identified as qualifying for upgrading or replacement, but for which implementation of the project had not been completed.

The report goes on:

The CASB is concerned that the inadequacy of aviation facilities at many Arctic community aerodromes may be compromising aviation safety in northern operations. Therefore, the Board is reviewing the circumstances from recent occurrences at such aerodromes with a view to possibly making formal recommendations regarding the requirement to re-identify substandard facilities and to develop a program to upgrade or replace any safety deficient facilities.

I would certainly encourage the Board to do just that. Just about everyone in the North is united that the program be completed because they share a common danger. They have to fly into these places. All three federally represented political Parties are in agreement. It does not matter whether it is the association of municipalities, the Chamber of Commerce or native organizations, they too are all of one mind. Several motions have been passed in the Legislative Assembly of the Northwest Territories urging both the territorial and federal Governments to get their act together and reinstate this program.

The program was very successful during the period it was in operation. It was deeply appreciated by the people in various communities that now have good basic standard airstrips. You could think of places like Aklavik, Fort McPherson, Fort Norman and Fort Liard. It should be noted that some of these locations are on the road network, but there are other places sadly lacking in facilities and in need of proper upgrading.

Fort Franklin had a recent fatality and has been waiting for some time to get a proper airstrip. It is a community serviced exclusively by air. There is no road there at all. The airports at Rae Lakes and at Lac La Matre are in very poor shape. Something has to be done pretty quickly or we will have a Fort Franklin type disaster in the near future. Fort Good Hope is another example of a strip that needs to be upgraded.

My pitch today, Mr. Speaker, is that we get together, the federal Government, its various Departments—it might be Indian Affairs and Northern Development, Transport, Defence, anybody who is involved—and the territorial government. Let us have a concerted effort to finish the job that got cut off in mid stream in 1983. This would be a worthwhile use of public funds and do much to increase aviation safety in the part of Canada that I have the honour to represent.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I want you to know that we are very impressed by your versatility and clean-shavedness. In response to the Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), I would like to say that we are all struck by his familiarity with the difficulties historically experienced by people who attempt to travel in the North. They constantly face dangers in attempting to go from place to place. Many of us who come from more densely populated areas, such as southwestern Ontario where my riding is, do not realize how many difficulties are faced by people in our northern communities. He has brought that concern forward very clearly.

As the Member mentioned, the program which finished in 1983 expended between $65 million and $70 million up until that time. That program resulted in the completion of eight airports in Yukon and 30 airports in the Northwest Territories, which was a very major effort. Having done that, in March of 1983 nine communities remained isolated in terms of the criteria that were used to establish those other airports. That is not to say, however, that all funding had been stopped. Indeed, $10.6 million in additional funds have been spent through the operating and maintenance resources to upgrade facilities in many of those places. There has, therefore, been a significant contribution since September of 1984 in spite of the original program being terminated at the end of 1983.

I will very quickly mention several other initiatives that have been undertaken which I think have contributed to safe air travel in the north. One of them is the weather improvement program which was funded by Transport Canada and continued to improve the quality of weather service in northern Canada. It is largely completed now and under that program, which will cost approximately $11 million, there is a CBC program dedicated to aviation weather broadcast each weekday morning. That may be one of the few non-biased CBC reports we get each day. As well, satellite weather photos are now available at Yellowknife, White Horse, Resolute Bay, Inuvik, and Frobisher Bay on a regular basis. In addition, Transport Canada, in conjunction with the Atmospheric Environment Service, is promoting the research and development of automatic weather reporting devices.

The program which the Member has asked to have reinstituted is now being reconsidered by the Minister, who is actively discussing it with his Cabinet colleagues. I am sure that he will be interested in the specific proposal suggested by the Member.

SOCIAL SECURITY—PREOCCUPATION OF WOMEN CONCERNING SOCIAL PROGRAMS. (B) NATIONAL ACTION COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the question which I want to pursue at this time is with regard to the review of social programs which the Conservative Government has undertaken, and particularly women's concerns with these programs. I am concerned about whether or not the review will be open, whether women's organizations will be consulted, and whether the review will include the possibility of improvement in the social programs rather than just cut-backs.

The response I received from the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) was not very encouraging on this score. He made no mention as to the possibility of improvement in the social programs. One worries that "review" is simply a euphemism for "anticipated cut-backs". He certainly was in favour of openness. He said that the request for specific funding for women's organizations to take part in this review process would be given respectful consideration. However, he did not say anything stronger than that.

Since those remarks were made, other things have happened. Women's organizations have had a tougher time getting funding at all. In fact, major organizations have not received funding for this year, let alone extra funding to hire staff to prepare briefs and analyses in order to take part in the review process. We must worry about this participation. Women's organizations are getting some feedback from the Department which indicates that the review process will not be an open one, and they are extremely concerned about that.

I want to spend a few minutes specifically discussing funding for women's organizations. The idea that these organizations should have to present an application to the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) in order to lobby is something many organizations are very concerned about. There is no recognition of the fact that volunteer organizations are performing a vital role for Canada and they need and are entitled to this funding.

Volunteers do an enormous amount of work. Sometimes they are given far too much work to do and they need more, better and predictable funding. It might be too tempting for the Government to simply cut off the funding of these organizations. In the short run, it would be correct that these organizations would be quieter. They would not have the money to lobby. Ultimately, however, I think they would find ways to fight back.

We need better ways of funding these organizations. We have to recognize it as a matter of right and not use the state as an agency which receives applications and decides which organization will get money or not. The people should make this decision. This could be done as people fill out their tax returns. A special amount could be allocated to taxpayers, indeed to homemakers who are not taxpayers because we would certainly want all adult citizens included, so they can allocate a certain amount of their tax money to the voluntary sector to support the organizations they believe represent their interests. That would be a far better way of handling this, and we certainly want to see the amounts improved as well.

On the issue of social programs themselves, women's organizations and women in general have been strong advocates of a good social security system and universality. We should not be surprised by this because women are even more dependent than men for support on our universal programs at different times of their lives. By and large, women look after the health of the family. Women pick up the pieces when other members of the family have problems. The law of the jungle operates since it is women who have to tend to the wounded. They are much more sensitive to the need for well functioning health care, family allowance, child support and pension programs. Of course, women are much less likely to get private pensions and are therefore much more dependent on public pensions. In this respect, women are much less ideological and more practical than men. If the private sector is not doing the job, they are quite prepared to turn to the Government to see it done. They want action. In the matter of child care, the private sector has been abysmally lacking in the provision of adequate, quality, affordable child care. Women's organizations then turn to Government for action. They want their tax dollars devoted to this important matter of raising children adequately to see that they grow up well. Even in a time of restraint, they are very practical. They say this is a high priority for us and we want to see some action.

Social programs in Canada are not generous by international standards. Canada is ninth out of 12 among OECD countries in its support of social programs. A little less on pensions, I am sorry to say; but average in health and education, and above average on unemployment insurance. This is not because we are more generous in our benefits, but because we have so much unemployment. There has been an erosion in these programs. The family allowance used to pay more in real terms. The old age pension has been allowed to erode. Of course, unemployment insurance has been cut back. Women want to stop this erosion and see that the social security system meets current needs. This situation has developed because other priorities have been allowed to take over, things such as the funding of corporate giveaways.

Actual expenditures on universal social programs are not nearly as great as people think. For 1986-87, family allowance payments are estimated at $2.53 billion. Old age pensions cost $9.51 billion. Medicare costs $6.8 billion. The Government contribution to umemployment insurance is $2.68 billion. As well, the old age pension and family allowance are also taxed back. We are talking here about expenditures of $107 billion. Corporate give-aways are in the order of $30 billion to $50 billions.

The interest paid to Canadians who have enough money to loan to the Government on our public debt is in the order of $27 billion. The social programs are not taking up as much money as people think. It is a very serious mistake of the Government to suggest that we have to look to cut-backs in the social programs instead of other areas of expenditure. The social programs are vital for Canada and we should be looking in other areas to save money. We should improve the social programs which provide a safety net for Canadians that is very badly needed.

Mrs. Monique Landry (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank my colleague the Hon. Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) for her interest in the social programs specifically directed at women.

I would like to take this opportunity to define the principles on which the Government has based its review of social expenditures and the related fiscal provisions announced in the 1986 Budget. As the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) announced in his speech, all the measures that will be taken will serve to maintain the universality of social programs, will result in additional resources being directed at the people who need them most, and also will give individuals the opportunity to become self-sufficient; at the same time, the after-tax benefits going to the most affluent who need them least will be reduced.

This review can be described as the next stage in the social program reform initiated by the Government under the double criteria of social responsibility and financial responsibility. Ever since these criteria were announced, the Government of which I am a Member has continued as it had done since the beginning of its mandate to consult the various groups, governments, provinces, and all the other organizations interested in the dossier.

Now, since coming to power, we have initiated a whole series of changes to social measures directed at several groups, including women. For the benefit of my honourable colleague, I should like to mention the spouse's allowance which is now granted to all widows and widowers between 60 and 64 years of age, as well as the very important measure which has modified family allowances, again to direct our resources to the most needy families. On the other hand, the principle of universality has always been preserved. Those two measures are especially aimed at women, as we know.

The Government is also proud of the steps it has taken to improve pensions for Canadian women. Women in the labour force will benefit from Government proposals to extend pension plan portability and thereby make them more accessible. Moreover, in order to correct existing discrepancies in the current pension system, of which contributors' spouses are the main victims, and these are mostly women as we know, the Government has taken a number of steps towards pension reform.

For instance, the surviving spouse's pensions will no longer be terminated following a remarriage.

In pension plans, those benefits will have to be guaranteed to surviving spouses of those plan members who were in retirement at time of death.

The total value of pension earned by the contributor who dies before retirement will have to be rolled over into a frozen registered retirement savings plan in the name of the surviving spouse.

Mr. Speaker, several other provisions concerning pension plans have been enacted, and generally those who benefit are all women. Those are but a few of our initiatives to help promote social justice and the economic well-being of Canadian women.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that my time is almost up, but I would quite simply like to suggest while concluding that, in my view, the best kind of income security is still job creation, and this Government, in our job-creation programs, has given tremendous help to Canadian women in a most clear and precise way. I therefore feel that we may be proud of our achievements. This Government will go on, in consultation of course with all interested groups.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Redway): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

HOUSE OF COMMONS

TABLING OF ORDER IN COUNCIL RESPECTING ACTING MINISTERS

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 67(2), I have the honour of laying on the Table in both official languages Order in Council P.C.1986-1084, naming the list of Ministers authorized to act on behalf of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in his absence and the list of Acting Ministers.

Mr. Deans: In their absence.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: In their absence. Unanimous consent of the House is generally obtained to have this list published as an appendix to Hansard and I would ask for that unanimous consent in the usual manner.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the suggestion. Is there unanimous consent for the tabling of that document?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it might be possible to see the list before we give consent to have the list appended.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, may I address that? This is a matter of determining the Acting Ministers—

Mr. Deans: Why didn't you send it over?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I would have done so but I just received it myself at the very last moment. There are not too many changes so it will not be a matter of any difficulty for the Hon. Member. There are only very minor variations.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, would it be possible then for the Chair to read the list that we are going to be asked to authorize?

Mr. Speaker: Could I suggest that we hold the item for a moment, that copies be distributed and that we revert to Tabling of Documents after Statements by Ministers?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, on the understanding that we will defer Tabling of Documents, we will now move to Statements by Ministers.

EXTERNAL AID

FAMINE IN AFRICA—STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I hardly need remind the House of the terrible famine that struck the African continent last year and continues to affect certain regions.

[English]

On that occasion, Canadians as a people really mobilized in coming to the assistance of those hit by this terrible blow. Their response took many forms. There was the remarkable job done by the news media, which made the public aware of the problem. The results of a survey released Friday indicate that 61 per cent of Canadians learned about the situation via television.

There was the work done by Canadian voluntary agencies, which tiredlessly expended time and effort under the umbrella organization called Africa Emergency Aid. Finally, there were donations from hundreds of thousands of Canadians of all ages, from all walks of life and all regions of Canada. As a Member and a Minister, I was particularly aware of the consensus in Parliament on the extraordinary measures the Government felt it must take and indeed did take. I am of course referring to the work done by the Canadian Emergency Co-ordinator African Famine, the Hon. David MacDonald. I want to pay tribute to his enthusiasm and energy and to his amazing talent for focussing the goodwill of so many people. I am also thinking of the contribution made by the Canadian International Development Agency.

Time and time again, when travelling in Africa, I listened to some very moving statements by Ministers, senior officials and even average citizens of Third World countries about the projects implemented by our development agency. I remember with considerable emotion that on the very day the BBC broadcast the first pictures of the famine, a ship sailed into the port of Assab in Ethiopia, carrying 36,000 tonnes of wheat sent through CIDA on behalf of Canada. I also think of the Members of this House who participated in a number of fact-finding missions to Africa and whose advice proved immensely useful.

Mr. Speaker, at a seminar we organized last year on the African crisis, we asked ourselves the question: What is going to happen once the TV cameras have left? That is the question I intend to answer today.

First of all, to remove any impression of condescending to the countries in question, I want to make it quite clear before the House that it is up to the Africans first of all to save and develop Africa. And since the last meeting of Heads of State of the OAU held last summer, we know they have the imagination and the determination to do so. The priority program for Africa's economic recovery which they designed is remarkable in its relevance. The African States have made it clear that their first priority will be agricultural development and continuing the struggle against drought and desertification. They have also confirmed their decision to implement policies for setting farm prices that will promote agricultural development and the well-being of their farmers.

Following this demonstration of firm purpose by our African partners, I wish to announce today in the House the launching of Africa 2000. The Government will thus designate all the measures it will take to meet the needs of the countries of the African continent over the next fifteen years and to provide them with the tools they require to achieve their recovery.

Africa 2000 is a 15-year commitment that the budgetary framework, put in place by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) last February, allows the Government to take in support of the development of the African continent.

The sum of $150 million has been released from CIDA's current budget and will be allocated solely to this operation during the next five years. This is in addition to the already impressive funding we have allocated to our aid and co-operation projects on the same continent. In the year 1986-87 alone, this will mean more than $900 million in transfers of money, goods and services by Canada for the benefit of Africa.

Africa 2000 will have three main themes: partnership between the Government and the Canadian private sector; the reorientation of our development policies; and finally, international consultation and co-operation.

By partnership I mean the Government's determination to work together with all individuals, groups and agencies in our society that are willing to become involved and do their share. This theme has been a favorite topic of mine over the last two years. I am convinced that to increase the effectiveness of our programs, we must have an association with the private sector. I am thinking here of voluntary agencies, municipalities, artists, schools, unions, twinning organizations and private businesses.

[English]

The voluntary agencies which took part in the Africa Emergency Aid Committee met recently in Ottawa on April 27 and April 28. They informed the Government that they wished to continue working together on projects of recovery and development in Africa, and they elected a committee to determine the ways in which their co-operative effort might function. In view of this, I wish to confirm that the Government will provide them with $75 million over the next five years to support their activities, within the $150 million allocation that I just announced.

This fund will be based on the Government's matching of public donations as suggested on several occasions by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manly). I also agree wholeheartedly with their request for an early warning system, details of which I will be describing very shortly. Finally, I intend to give them responsibility for managing a program through which they can continue to increase the Canadian public's awareness of the situation in Africa. I am counting on the NGOs. I hope they will be our primary partner in operation Africa 2000.

In an operation of this size, I think there is also a place for commercial enterprises that know Africa because they work there. At the end of next week, my Parliamentary Secretary, the Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salaberry (Mr. Hudon) will issue a formal invitation in Quebec City to Canadian businesses, asking them to become actively involved in operation Africa 2000. They will be our second partners.

Finally, a new administrative unit will be set up within CIDA's Special Programs Branch. Its mandate will be to communicate with and assist groups and individuals wishing to make a contribution by taking part in Africa 2000.

As to the media, I think they should continue to play their essential role by informing the Canadian public of what is happening in Africa.

As far as our policies are concerned, my objective is to ensure that by the end of 1987, we will contribute to the creation of over 2000 small projects directed at meeting the basic needs of African populations.

Canada enthusiastically accepts to make agriculture, reforestation and food security its top priorities among the development projects which it will carry out on that continent.

Such an approach must of necessity involve African women. They make up 80 per cent of the labour force employed in the agricultural sector on that continent. To that effect, I will announce next June a program I feel very strongly about aimed at bringing African women into the mainstream of development.

Also, I intend to set up an advisory group which, on the strength of the expertise of resource people from all areas of activities and all regions of Canada, will advise the Government generally on its policies towards Africa.

Finally, Africa 2000 will be an exercise in international consultation. Next May 27-31, will be held in New York City an extraordinary session of the United Nations to deal with the situation in Africa. This session will give us an opportunity to consult our African partners, the other supporting countries and the various multilateral aid agencies. Preparations for this conference are making good progress and active consultations are already taking place. To be both significant and useful, Canada's contribution must be part of a general action plan directed at the deep roots of the economic crisis in Africa. Out of respect for this indispensable consultation process, I will say no more for the time being.

Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members of this House will recognize in operation Africa 2000 the immediate implementation of several recommendations made to us by Hon. David MacDonald. But still more significant, I ask you to see in this first series of measures which I make public today and those which I shall announce in New York City our Government's response to the assistance request it has received from African countries who are determined to assume fully their responsibility for their own development.

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): First, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Minister for providing us with a copy of her statement a few hours earlier than has been the recent or past practice in this House. Her Cabinet colleagues should follow her example, for at least this gave us an opportunity to read her statement and consult the many documents made available to us so as to prepare an appropriate response to her remarks.

There is no need to recall the terrible situation which has been faithfully depicted by the media.

In these circumstances perhaps it would be fitting to commend both Canadian and international media for focusing world-wide attention on the situation and urging the various nations to put pressure on their respective Governments. Regardless of the political regimes under which they live, I think most people were appalled at this plight and decided something had to be done.

Perhaps I might remind the House that, in his own way, former Canadian Minister of Agriculture Eugene Whelan had tried to warn Canadians about future events in Africa. As usual his remarks fell on deaf ears and not a single world organization gave second thoughts to the significance of the advice offered by our former colleague, Mr. Whelan.

As the Minister did on a number of occasions, we must pay homage to Canadians for reacting so generously to the tragic African drought.

Mr. Speaker, we must also praise our volunteer organizations from coast to coast. There are quite a few, of course, but I thought I would single out some of them as an example of what we Canadians can do whenever we want to work together.

Among others, Adopt a Village; The King's College, Halifax; the Steel Worker Humanity Fund; the Caisse populaire du Québec and the Caisse populaire Desjardins; the CBC. I also have in mind some regional TV stations, more particularly ETV Maritime; the Canadian Jewish Congress; the Save the Children Fund; Canadian Universities Service Overseas; the World Concern Canada Association; the Léger Foundation; Development and Peace.

I have given only a few examples, but I hope that the agencies which I did not mention will consider themselves included since the entire list is contained in the report of the Hon. David MacDonald entitled "No More Famine: Decade for Africa".

The Minister says that she is launching a new program called Africa 2000, and that she was asked not for a ten-year, but for a fifteen-year commitment. I wish to congratulate her because, as I have told her privately, it is a good thing to get politics out of the issues of foreign aid and mutual assistance.

The Minister tells us that she is giving us a specific commitment for the next five years. She is scheduled to appear before the Committee on External Affairs next Thursday. It is not a surprise. I can tell her in advance what kind of questions we would like to ask her. We accept that she has announced an allocation of $160 million in her budget to be spent within the next five years, and she believes, with justification, that the voluntary organizations will come forward with half this amount.

I remember what our colleagues who accepted the invitation of the Hon. David MacDonald told the caucus. I am thinking for instance about the trips to Ethiopia and other parts of Africa made by our colleagues for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) and Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador (Mr. Rompkey). These trips were made on two different occasions, and our colleagues gave to the caucus, on whose behalf I am speaking today, a complete report on the terrible tragedy which was still going on, and they also warned us that, when the time came to do what we are doing today, we should not close our eyes on this problem even though we can now feel international world opinion turn to other matters such as terrorism and radioactive fall-out in the Soviet Union.

I therefore want to take this opportunity, Madam Minister and Mr. Speaker, to point out that famine has not disappeared and that we must continue to show a lot of vigilance in these matters.

We know that the Minister has been asked to appoint a special coordinator. She is not replying today, but this is one of the questions that I shall ask her on Thursday. Will she consider following the recommendation which has been supported by all voluntary groups and which was analyzed by Mr. Michel Roy in a remarkable article published in the newspaper La Presse of Saturday, April 26, where we also find articles by Gilles Toupin and Jooneed Khan, and where Mr. Roy says that the Minister must expect some resistance because, while these proposals to help French and English speaking Africa are well received in Canada, there is also a lot of resistance at the higher echelons of the establishment at CIDA and External Affairs.

I have no final opinion to give the Minister as yet. Instead, I would like to wait for the meeting Thursday to see if this would not be the best way to continue the efforts that the Canadian public wants the Government to make to continue in this direction and to improve coordination.

Through my own experience, I can tell the Minister that she will meet a lot of resistance. There is also the Parliamentary Committee chaired by the Hon. Member who changed places yesterday, but who used to sit at the back of the House, the Hon. Member for Guelph (Mr. Winegard), which wants to make a complete study. That is in the Committee's plans for the future. What remains to do is to determine the budget. This represents a major problem since there are only some $2 million available and this would require a budget of $8 million, but I know that the Hon. Member for Guelph, who chairs the Parliamentary Committee on External Affairs and International Trade wants to make a one year study on all foreign aid programs, and I think that this is a good idea.

I would therefore like to tell the Minister not to reject out of hand any proposals which might be made at the conclusion of the study. However, I congratulate her for having responded immediately to the report of the Hon. David MacDonald. I think that it would be appropriate at this time to pay hommage to this man whose moral conscience is so well known to everyone in this House. Those who have come to know him, Mr. Speaker, know that he is a dedicated man, conscious of world problems. He is conscious of development problems, and those who had the wisdom to appoint him as coordinator will have cause to congratulate themselves today, because he has accomplished the extraordinary task of coordinating all those organizations, the public, the media and of course the various levels of Government, federal, provincial and municipal.

He took on a seemingly impossible job. He succeeded because of his talent, and I feel certain that all our voluntary organizations will want us to pay tribute to him today.

Much is expected, Madam Minister, Mr. Speaker, from your working session with the United Nations. You were referring to that conference that will be held at the end of May. There is no need for me to speak on that today. I know the Minister has very definite ideas and I encourage her to proceed in that direction. She has new ideas. I encourage her to even shake up the institutions and the Department she is representing, so that they will follow the direction she wants to impart. I know she is very sensitive to the issue of African women. Well, we will keep very close to the Minister and see how she manages. We will support her if needs be and blame anyone for not helping her with her projects. But I know that when she comes back from New York, we will have an opportunity to question her in committee. I am pointing this out ahead of time to the Chairman of the Committee on External Affairs and International Trade. I am not the External Affairs critic, nor the associate critic—I hate the word critic—but I am my Party's critic for External Relations and CIDA.

I therefore hope that when the Minister comes back from New York, she will make herself available to the Standing Committee so that we may have an exchange with her. I also wish that the Minister will tell us Thursday, when she comes before the Committee, what she intends to do about all the other proposals. I noted briefly, late last night and this morning, that the Hon. David MacDonald has made 15 recommendations. The Minister has laid emphasis on about seven, eight or nine. I know she has her ideas concerning the others. This morning is not the right time, but I would like her to take notice that Thursday I will probably start questioning her by asking her whether she will be responding to the other recommendations made by the Hon. David MacDonald.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it is also my view that when we look at the estimates or when we come back to the study on international development which my colleague for Guelph wants to undertake, we should summon the coordinator, even though his task has ended for the time being, and try to determine whether we should not have some new direction.

I for one support a new direction for CIDA, a new voice for that body, but this is not something that has to be done today. In due course we will do it; we intend to have a discussion with the Minister, and her officials, and reach decisions that hopefully will be acceptable to all Members in this House.

I would therefore like to conclude by thanking once again the Minister for responding within a reasonable time frame to the comments made by the Hon. David MacDonald in his report. I say to her: This is a step in the right direction. There are still many unsettled questions, but in my view we should not make this a partisan issue. It is a matter of approach. The Minister's approach may be different from ours. During discussions in committee, we will see where we agree and where we disagree. However, with the ultimate goal of helping our brothers and sisters in Africa, I feel we should not be partisan about this.

There is so much to be said. I know that my time has now expired, but there is a lot to say about the coordination that has to exist between Governments in Africa and contributing Governments, the encouragement that should be given to the Organization for African Unity so they will realize that together we can do miracles, but that divided there is very little we can do about those huge drought and hunger problems . . . because this in fact is the great problem of the 20th and the 21st centuries, Mr. Speaker. Probably the great problem will not be nuclear power, but hunger in the world, and I know that we and the Minister want to address that now.

• (1130)

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, like the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), I wish to thank the Minister for her courtesy in providing advance copies of her statement so that we were able to prepare reasonable responses. I would also like to thank her for her attempts over the last several months to involve Members of Parliament from all Parties in on-the-spot trips to see what is happening in Africa. As one who participated in a trip to Ethiopia at the end of the emergency aid program, I want to express my appreciation for that opportunity to see things first-hand.

I want to thank the Minister for her statement which indicates some very welcome steps to provide a continued Canadian response to the long-term problems of development in Africa. Over the last one and one-half years our aid program in Africa has been operating in a crisis situation. The immediate crisis has passed, but the long-term problems remain. We must now move into a long-term strategy.

In responding to the immediate crisis Canadians were greatly helped by the person whom the Government chose as the emergency co-ordinator. David MacDonald and his staff worked effectively with African Government officials as well as with Canadian NGOs to deliver Canadian assistance. Even more important, Mr. Speaker, through some very difficult situations David MacDonald was able to maintain the confidence of the Canadian people in the way in which our aid program was being administered. Canadians were prepared to give generously to African relief programs and they did give generously. However, they did not want to give foolishly in a manner which would simply prop up repressive military Governments or look after the needs of a local elite.

The situation in many African countries is very complex in such areas as economic development, relations with neighbouring countries, and relations with national minorities within their own boundaries. There are often liberation movements which are fighting against a central Government. The issue of human and political rights is very complex in many African countries. It is sometimes easy for us to stand in judgment in those situations. We would be very naive if we imagined for a moment that our aid could be kept Simon-pure in the face of all these problems.

While recognizing that there were problems and that we were not operating in a perfect world, we had confidence that David MacDonald was co-ordinating our aid effort in the best interests of the African people. We thank him for that and we thank the Government for appointing him. In spite of great logistical difficulties with transportation and distribution, we knew that our help was reaching the people who really needed it.

Questions remain about people who badly needed help but did not get it because of internal strife or because of inefficient local administration. These situations must still cause great concern to Canadians and people throughout the world who are concerned about the mass starvation which is taking place in some countries of Africa. These concerns do not invalidate the importance and value of our aid and the efficiency with which it reached people who needed it. We must now move from emergency aid to long-term development assistance. I think this calls for a more critical stance on the part of all concerned, including the Government through CIDA. I think it will call for a more critical stance on the part of all Members of Parliament as we look at the way in which our long-term aid is going to be administered.

I would like to recognize some of the positive elements in the Minister's statement. First, she recognized the right and responsibility of Africans and African states to establish their own priorities for recovery. This is not just a pro forma statement that the Minister made. It must be the absolute beginning for any intelligent participation by Canada in a development partnership with the continent of Africa. They have to establish their priorities. They have recognized that they have the primary responsibility. It is up to us to support them in those priorities and that responsibility.

Second, I want to congratulate the Minister for the recognition of the need for a long-term development program and for a financial commitment over the next five years. Third, I think it is very important to recognize that her statement talks about a continuing partnership between the Canadian Government and other sectors in designing and delivering development programs and in promoting public awareness of the situation in Africa.

The emergency aid program of the last 18 months showed that non-governmental organizations now have the capability to play a much more active role in administering development assistance. Non-governmental organizations can be particularly effective in monitoring assistance programs in sensitive areas where the local Governments have poor human rights records. NGOs have great potential for the establishment of locally based grass roots development. The 2,000 projects which the Minister spoke of taking place over the next several years will mean a lot of locally based grass roots developments which I think are particularly suited to the capabilities of NGOs.

As the Minister indicated, I support the program to match funds donated by individuals and organizations. This gives Canadians a chance to be directly involved in determining where their support should go. At the same time we should be aware that NGO-delivered assistance cannot be a complete substitute for bilateral assistance, Government to Government. It would then have the effect of undermining the credibility of national Governments. If development assistance should not be used to prop up national Governments, neither should it be used to undermine them. It is important that the use of NGOs be kept in some balance. They should not detract from the right of African states to determine their own development priorities and strategies.

The Minister referred to the general priorities of agriculture, reforestation, and food security. These have been identified by the African states themselves and I think this is something with which we all agree. We look forward to the Minister's announcement of a program designed to integrate women into development programs more than has been in the case in the past. Canada might have a better record than most other nations in this regard, but we have a long way to go before we have accorded women their proper place in development strategy and programs.

In a number of areas the Minister's statement fell short of the recommendations made by David MacDonald in his final report. For example, the statement did not mention Canada's action to ease the staggering $170 billion debt of African countries. Their debt service ratio is expected to be more than 27 per cent of their exports in 1985. Neither does the statement mention any Canadian policies for trade liberalization with African countries. She did indicate that intensive consultations are already under way with African states, other donor countries, and multilateral agencies on a comprehensive plan to come out of the special UN session on Africa at the end of this month. I hope Canada will be announcing at that session some real assistance regarding easement of debt and trade conditions. For Canada to be of real assistance to Africa at this session it has to take a leadership role on those two questions.

The Minister said nothing about MacDonald's recommendation that all African aid programs should be integrated and that there should be greater interdepartmental co-ordination, particularly regarding aid, trade, and finance. Perhaps this is not the occasion for such comprehensive policy announcements, but certainly these recommendations should be taken seriously by the Government and not simply filed on a shelf. I hope we will hear more from the Minister on what her intentions are regarding those recommendations.

Above all else, the Minister's statement has to be criticized for bringing such a modest contribution to a major world problem. David MacDonald said that if we want to prevent mass starvation from happening again, it will require a sense of purpose and a staying power far beyond anything demanded by the famine. On a yearly basis we will be contributing much less than we did in 1984-85. None of this will be new money; it will simply be taken from CIDA's regular budget. In September, 1984, speaking to the 39th Session of the UN General Assembly, right after he had been appointed as Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Minister said:

> Our new Government intends to maintain Canada's commitment to reaching .7 per cent of the GNP by 1990 in official development assistance. Despite serious economic problems at home, we shall not turn our backs on the world's disadvantaged peoples.

Unfortunately, we have turned our back on the world's disadvantaged peoples because we will not reach that goal by 1990. We will reach it only some time in the 21st century. The needs of Africa, the needs of our world, are great. We should not be cutting back our development assistance program, given those needs. The Minister's announcement has to be seen in the framework of that unfortunate budgetary cut-back.

I want to close with a very brief image I have of Ethiopia when I visited there. We saw an orphanage with some 1,000 children gathered under three tents where they were receiving a rudimentary education. Some of them reached out to us. To me that is a symbol of reaching out for help, reaching for life, reaching out to the developed world for our help to develop so that they can be in control of their lives when they grow up. Food would not be given to them as some kind of charity. They could be proud and complete human beings in a country and continent able to look after their own needs. As far as the Minister's statement leads us to take some first steps towards that goal, I commend her. I urge her to continue to work to develop a program which will reach the goal of .7 per cent of our GNP for development assistance much earlier than the next century.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand that there has been agreement that we would revert at this time to tabling of documents.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I recognize the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) on tabling of documents. Point of order?

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, before the document is tabled I want to draw the first page to your attention. I have absolutely no objection to either of the appendices, Schedule A or Schedule B. However, I wonder whether it is appropriate for what appears on the face page of the document to appear in this form. Paragraph one says:

> that in the absence from the National Capital Region of the Prime Minister or in the event of his being unable to perform the functions of his office
> (a) the Deputy Prime Minister, the Honourable Erik Nielsen, or
> (b) in the absence from the National Capital Region of the Deputy Prime Minister—or in the event of his being unable to perform the functions of the office of the Prime Minister, the next Minister named in order of priority in the list of Ministers set out in Schedule A—

In order to conform with the responsibilities of each cabinet Minister, I wonder whether it would not be more accurate to say in both documents that the designation concurring the Hon. Erik Nielsen for parliamentary purposes be the position that he holds, that of Minister of National Defence. What it should say is:

> (a) the Minister of National Defence, the Honourable Erik Nielsen, or
> (b) in the absence from the National Capital Region of the Minister of National Defence, the Honourable Erik Nielsen or in the event of his being unable to perform the functions of the office—

The reason I raise that is because the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) is a cabinet Minister by virtue of his being Minister of National Defence. There is no such function as Deputy Prime Minister within our parliamentary system. That is the reason, when the Cabinet was first struck in 1984, that the Hon. Erik Nielsen was designated as the President of the Privy Council. He could then hold Cabinet rank and perform the function of Acting Prime Minister in the absence of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Since that is the case, I suggest that this document is flawed and therefore cannot be appended in its present form. It should be amended in order properly to establish the designation of the Ministers named in order of precedence for the purpose of acting in the absence of the Prime Minister. For example, Schedule A is absolutely correct because it sets out the persons who are to act for the Prime Minister in his absence or in the event of his being unable to perform the functions of his office. Schedule B sets out Ministers by Ministry, which Minister performs which function, and who will act in a given Minister's place. I therefore suggest that pages 1, 2 and 3 be altered to conform with the proper designations of the various Ministers and the functions they perform.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great interest for the second day in a row to the presentation by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain. I know that he was not present on the occasions when my colleague, the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence, was sworn into his portfolio. I was there. I heard him being sworn in by the representative of the Governor General. Whether the Hon. Member likes it or not, the Minister of National Defence is Deputy Prime Minister and was sworn into that particular responsibility in Cabinet.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We have two matters to deal with. First I would like to remind the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) that as far as the Chair is concerned the document has, in fact, been tabled. The second matter is whether it should be an appendix to Hansard, and for that I need unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent to have the document appended to Hansard?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PRESENTATION OF FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Patrick Crofton (Esquimalt—Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the first report of the Standing Committee on National Defence, in both official languages. If the House gives it consent I intend to move concurrence in this report later this day.

Motions

CONCURRENCE IN FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Patrick Crofton (Esquimalt—Saanich): Mr. Speaker, if the House gives it consent, I move, seconded by Mr. Lewis, that the first report of the Standing Committee on National Defence presented to the House earlier this day be concurred in.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, if it has been an agreement concerning the travel of the committee, then I agree.

Motion agreed to.

MONTREAL

DESIGNATION OF EASTERN SECTOR AS ZONE 4

On the Order: Private Members' Business

January 13, 1986—Mr. Malépart—That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of intervening in the matter of the industrial decline of the eastern sector of Montreal by designating the said area (Zone 4), and by granting contracts to Versatile-Vickers, Bombardier, C.S.W. and other endangered industries.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): If we could stay with motions, Mr. Speaker, I have two items I would like to deal with. The first is with respect to Private Members' Business today. There have been discussions with the other Parties and I think you would find there is unanimous consent for the following draft order to be put to the House:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, the item listed as number one on the Order of Precedence of Private Members' Business in today's Order Paper and Notices shall be placed at the bottom of the said Order of Precedence for the next sitting day; and

Provided that the House shall continue with the business before it at five o'clock p.m. this day until the ordinary daily hour of adjournment.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, this is the third occasion that this House has had to deal with an incident of this nature where we cannot proceed with Private Members' hour. Before giving my consent I want to make sure the House understands we are not creating any precedent by accepting that motion today. I want a statement from the Government that there are no precedents being set. Second, I know, and the Government knows, we are working on a more acceptable permanent solution. I take it the Government would admit today that there are no precedents being set and that we are proceeding in our goal of reaching an amiable and acceptable formula for replacement of that hour, which is a Private Members' hour, not Government time. I want to make sure it is understood that it is the only hour of the day where Private Members of this House have time to discuss Bills and motions of their liking.

Mr. Lewis: If I may, Mr. Speaker, this is, in fact, the third time that we have presented this draft motion to the House. In doing so we have tried to protect the position in the Order Paper of one member from the New Democratic Party and two members from the Liberal Party. We are simply offering this forward as a mechanism to protect the position of those Private Members on the first occasion that their Bills or motions have come up for debate.

I would say to the House that the House Leaders are discussing this. I see the House Leader for the New Democratic Party in the House, and I think he would confirm we are discussing an acceptable way to assist the business of the House so business will go forward and the Private Members' position will be protected. Those conversations are ongoing and we hope to have a solution to present to the House very soon.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Lewis) have the unanimous consent of the House to move his motion?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I do want to just say a word in support of the Parliamentary Secretary, the Government House Leader. The problem has arisen as a result of the change in the rules whereby Members did not have sufficient notice to prepare themselves for the piece of business that they had proposed to be dealt with under Private Members' Business.

We have, for the better part of the last ten days, been looking at options that would allow us to protect a Member's right to utilize the slot allocated to him or her, but recognizing that a Member will, from time to time, as parliamentary business will dictate or constituency business will dictate, find it impossible to be here at that particular hour on that day.

What we are looking at is giving each Member the option of deferring their day once during the course of the entire proceedings. That would mean they would stand down their opportunity to debate on that day and would carry that day through the entire process until the next time it comes up.

In all fairness, the only option to doing that is that that Member's item will be dropped from the list entirely. I make that point as clearly as I can that, if we cannot agree to this procedure today, which will I think be the last time we have to do it ad hoc, it will result in that Member's business being dropped entirely from the Private Members' roster. The end result of that will be that until ten such items have dropped, that on each of the days on which that piece of business would be called it will revert to Government Orders, which means we would lose the opportunity to have a Private Members' debate.

I would ask my colleagues on this one occasion to give the unanimous consent required in order to proceed, as was suggested, and I can assure all Members of the House that we will work today and tomorrow to try to have a House order that we believe will be satisfactory to the best interests of all of the Private Members.

Mr. Gauthier: In refusing to approve this third incident unanimously I did so by asking the Government at the beginning of my remarks to make a statement that, indeed, we were not creating a precedent. That is my only point. I do not want to discuss the draft order, or anything else pertaining to negotiations at hand. I am just asking the Government to understand that Private Members' Hour is Private Members' Hour and should remain as such. I am asking for the Government's concurrence with my objective that we tell Members that there is no precedent here and that the Government will not use that hour for its business by pushing around any Members supporting its Party. That can be done at this time.

If the Speaker allowed me, I could go on and on and speak for half an hour on the dangers which we may face in the House because of the new rules and their application.

If the Government will give me the undertaking that it understands there are no precedents being set at this time—even though it is the third time, as the Parliamentary Secretary said—I would agree to give unanimous consent. Otherwise, it will be no.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I will not take up too much time. First, I believe the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) has pointed out that I thought we were having discussions with the House Leader of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Vanier's (Mr. Gauthier) Party to find a solution to this matter that was satisfactory to all Parties.

I had cleared this proposal and this way of operating with his House Leader. It is not a question of attempting to do something unilaterally.

Second, I do not want to usurp the role of the Chair, but I think it is a fair statement—and the Hon. Member will know and acknowledge this because he is a very keen student of parliamentary procedure—of the practices and rulings of the Chair in the history of this Chamber that anything done in the House by unanimous consent is not deemed to be a precedent.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Lewis) have the unanimous consent of the House to introduce his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

AGRICULTURE—GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS—MULTICULTURALISM—OFFICIAL LANGUAGES—CHANGES IN PERSONNEL

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have a further housekeeping motion which has been discussed with both opposition Parties. I think you will find that there is unanimous consent to the following draft order:

That, notwithstanding any Standing Order or Special Order of this House, the list of permanent members of the several Standing Committees adopted on Thursday, March 13, 1986, be altered as follows:

1. substitute Mr. Boudria for Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe) on the Standing Committee on Agriculture;

2. substitute Mr. Keeper for Mr. Deans on the Standing Committee on Government Operations;

3. substitute Mr. Lesick for Mr. Della Noce on the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism; and

4. Substitute Mr. Gauthier for Mr. Boudria on the Standing Joint Committee on Official Languages;

And that a message be sent to the Senate to acquaint their Honours thereof.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council have the unamimous consent of the House to introduce his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will revert to introduction of Bills.

Order Paper Question

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following question will be answered today: No. 544.

[Text]

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS—REGULATIONS FOR PARCEL SHIPMENTS

Question No. 544—Mr. Greenaway:

Are there written regulations to which employees of the Department of External Affairs must adhere when (a) sending parcels from the Department by Canada Post or by courier service (b) receiving parcels at the Department from Canada Post, courier service and/or diplomatic bag and, if so, what were the regulations (i) prior to (ii) since, September 1, 1985?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): (a) Yes. (b) Yes.

(i) and (ii) The regulations described herewith are not specific to parcels but cover the handling of all categories of mail (letters, parcels, etc.) received or despatched through Canada Post, private courier or diplomatic facilities. These regulations were implemented prior to September 1, 1985, and are still valid.

The regulations for part (a) can be found in (i) Section 11 entitled "Parcel Post (International)" of the Canada Postal Guide Part I, (ii) Chapter 2, Section 2.6 entitled "Transmission of Classified Information" found in the Departmental Manual of Security Instructions, and (iii) in guidelines and instructions included in an Administrative Notice circulated once a year to all divisions in the Department.

Regulations relevant to part (b) can be found in (i) Section 5.2.1 entitled "Mail Opening Desk" of the departmental Manual of Procedures which reads "Except for mail marked "Personal" "To be Opened by Addressee Only", "Confidential—Personnel Information", which is forwarded unopened to the addressees, all other mail is opened in the departmental mail room, sorted and delivered to the records unit serving the division and in (ii) guidelines and instructions included in administrative notice circulated once a year to all divisions in the Department.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Monday, May 5, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, An Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words about the general principles involved in Established Programs Financing before I speak in favour of the Bill that is before us. It is a question that has disturbed me for some time.

As a federal Member and a Member of a provincial or territorial Legislature, I had the opportunity to attend interprovincial and federal-provincial meetings of Ministers responsible for health and social services. Over the years the federal Government has invaded several areas that, under the Constitution of Canada, are directly within provincial jurisdiction and reponsibility. These include health, education, and social services.

At some point in time the federal Government offered the provinces a deal that they could not refuse, by offering to pay half of the costs providing that the provinces rendered these services. No province could refuse that type of suggestion.

The federal Government has been unable to keep the funds flowing since these generous offers were made and very often it was the provinces that were left holding the bag when the funds dried up. This happened on several occasions under several Governments.

Very often it is the provinces that actually provide these services and pay for such things as social security, and the building and maintenance of hospitals. I have a certain amount of sympathy with the position in which the provinces find themselves and I understand why they are hesitant about getting into these deals in the first place.

In addition, the federal Government has moved in and taken up tax room in order to pay for its share of the funding. This means that there is not enough room left for a province to levy the taxes to get its share.

I was pleased when a Bill, similar to this, was introduced in 1977 by a Liberal Government of the day. That Government had to tighten its belt because it found itself in the same position as we are in today. One of the steps it took was to transfer tax points from the federal Government to the provincial Governments. At the same time as it was cutting down on certain transfer payments to the provinces, it gave the provinces an ability to raise more money with this transfer of tax points. I thought that was a good idea.

Let me deal with Bill C-96. It is always difficult to stand up in the House of Commons or anywhere else and defend cuts in health services, although it is not really a cut but a reduction in the amount of expenditures that would have been incurred.

Mr. Manly: It is a cut. You were right the first time.

Mr. Nickerson: It is the same with respect to education. However, we must face the facts. We are fully aware of the financial state of the Government of Canada, with the deficit we inherited from the previous Government. It is absolutely necessary that we get the finances of Canada under control. Therefore, we must take our responsibilities as a Government very seriously.

It is forced upon us to alter schemes such as the EPF. A structural imbalance had been built into the system and, if we were to continue under the existing formula, the deficit would become increasingly larger. Since we could not sustain that in the long run, the Government has had to take this initiative in order to regain control.

As I stressed before, transfer payments to the provinces for health services and education will continue to rise. There is no doubt about that. It is not a cut, as one of my colleagues from the New Democratic Party shouted out a little while ago. In fact these transfer payments will increase, and will continue to increase under the new formula.

Mr. Mayer: Substantially.

Mr. Nickerson: Substantially so, although perhaps not as substantially as they would have under the old untenable system. We have to look at the federal Government's ability to pay vis-à-vis the ability to pay of the provincial Governments.

If one takes a look at the accounts of the federal or the provincial Governments, one will see that, because of the huge debt upon which we must pay interest as a federal Government, our ability to finance new expenditures is very much reduced as a result of what we have inherited. The huge deficit will continue for some time. We do not think we will really get it under control or stabilized until about 1992 under the projections of the Minister of Finance. But if we take the provinces as a group, we will find that their deficits are much less in proportion. They are running much closer to a balanced Budget. Therefore, their ability to take up some of the slack which might have been left is much greater than that of the federal Government at this time.

I want to argue in favour of the formula. I admit it is rather a complex formula in the Bill. It deals with two groups of GNP increases. I must say that I find it rather difficult to interpret. However, when we look at the results of the formula we see that under the circumstances it is as fair as it can possibly be. Probably more important, it is sustainable over many, many years. We do not have to make further changes. We will not have to do as the Liberals did and bring in a new Bill every year to change the formula once again. It is sustainable. Both the federal and provincial Governments will be able to plan for years ahead knowing what these transfer payments are going to be. It certainly is my intention, and the intention of my colleagues, to vote in favour of this necessary legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to comment briefly on what was said by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson). I think he should have continued his speech in the same vein as he started, since at first he pointed out that he agreed with the formula negotiated in 1976 and adopted in the 1977-82 fiscal arrangements, because the formula included transfers of tax points for all provinces. He seemed to like that approach.

However, if we go all the way down the line, and I wish we did, the federal Government would no longer have to make any transfer payments because by that time the provinces would have enough tax points to be able to finance the activities under their jurisdiction.

I therefore fail to see how anyone can agree with the formula for transferring tax points and at the same time support Bill C-96, which is a cut back because it makes cuts in a formula that was established on the basis of both tax points and transfer payments. If we only had tax points, it would be impossible for the federal Government to cut tax points already transferred. So I don't really understand the logic of what he was saying.

I would also like to point out that as far as new legislation to amend the formula is concerned, I suppose he was referring to Bills adopted by the Governments that preceded the Conservatives. All I can say is that Bill C-96 is changing the rules in the middle of the game. The fiscal arrangements on transfer payments were supposed to expire on March 31, 1987, and now this Bill changes the rules halfway through the game, which means that the provinces' budgeting for financing post-secondary education and health care programs has just been wiped out by a unilateral decision by the Government.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I am going to vote against adopting this Bill on second reading, and I would even go so far as to say that the House should refuse to consider this Bill in its present form.

In fact all these cutbacks under Bill C-96 will severely test the financial stability of most Canadian provinces. One may claim that payments will continue to increase, Mr. Speaker, but the formula had been established and the provinces have prepared their estimates on the basis of the gross National Product growth. But henceforth it will be geared to the GNP less 2 per cent, which means that between now and 1991-92 the accumulated losses of the provinces will reach $8 billion and they will have to learn to live with the deficit which will be passed on to them by the federal Government.

Since 1976-77, Mr. Speaker, transfers to the provinces have been expressed as a percentage of the Gross National Product. On the basis of the GNP, these transfer payments have been stable. Ever since 1976 the transfer payments have remained stable and ranged from 5 to 5.75 per cent of the Gross National Product as a whole. Therefore the rising deficit as a ratio of the Gross National product cannot be traced back to these transfer payments, but rather to expenditures other than debt servicing which have gone up between 12 and 15 per cent in relation to the Gross National Product. In other words, if any adjustment has to be made it should not involve transfer payments to the provinces.

Second, why is the Government in such a hurry? In his November 1984 economic statement the Minister had indicated there would be no changes in transfer payments until the end of the financial agreements. Now he steers a new course, he is reneging on his commitment. Why re-open the 1982-87 agreements before their expiry date, in the middle of the game as hockey fans like to say? It amounts to betraying the provinces and leaving them to hold the deficit bag. Perhaps the Minister of Finance wants to say he has solved his deficit problem and pat himself on the back, but in fact he will quite simply have transferred his problem to the provinces. This is reminescent of Pontius Pilate's approach—to wash one's hands off the whole thing and let others worry about the problem.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, even the Nielsen Report refers to this issue in the study on health. I have here the English version of the Nielsen Report and I quote from page 13:

[English]

However, based on this review, the study team concludes that there are no compelling program reasons to reduce transfer payments. Thus, the announced intent of the federal Government to reduce the amount of transfer payments by $6 billion over the next five years is seen strictly as a necessary fiscal measure. The team fears, however, that this action by the federal government could substantially reduce its role in Canada's health care system. The percentage of federal government contributions to provincial health programs is currently at approximately 40 per cent. The team found no evidence that would indicate that our health system is significantly "overfunded" or "underfunded"—rather a balance overall appears to have been achieved at the present time.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, even the Nielsen Report indicated that there was no need for cuts, adding that there were no evidence that health programs were either overfinanced or underfinanced.

There was, therefore, according to the Nielsen Report, a certain balance. On this basis, the federal Government's decision to reduce its transfer payments to provinces will mean, in the final analysis, that the provinces will have to assume the deficit.

For some provinces, Bill C-96 will come on top of a previous legislation known as Bill C-39. Quebec will be more affected than other provinces due to the decision made last year concerning the equalization formula.

Last year, Mr. Speaker, when she introduced Bill C-39 the Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall) stated, and I quote: "The highest protection, the 95 per cent floor, is given to those provinces which are not as strong fiscally as others and ensures that payments will decline by no more than 5 per cent from one year to the next. What the Government is doing in this Bill is giving Manitoba, Quebec and Nova Scotia the benefit of this 95 per cent floor for the purpose of making a lump sum payment which will assist them in the remaining two years of the current program."

That is what the Minister said in the House to reassure Hon. Members that Quebec would not receive less than 95 per cent of the equalization payments it had received the previous year.

The Hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) had said something similar on April 2, and I quote from page 3627 of the official record of the Debates:

> I said that we would be equitable in applying a 95 per cent floor to the three provinces which would not be receiving the same amount of equalization in the current fiscal year.

Mr. Speaker, we had received firm commitments from two Ministers; yet, failing again to keep its word, the Government has refused to give to the province of Quebec what the Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall) had promised here in the House, thereby forcing the Quebec Minister of Finance to raise taxes only to foot the bill which the Conservative Government has turned over to him.

In reply to a question directed to her in the House on Friday, May 2, the Minister of State (Finance) stated: "I think the statement made last night by the Minister of Finance for Quebec reflects some misunderstanding of the formula which was arrived at last year. All the provinces are treated equally and Quebec received half the equalization payments. But because the Quebec economy is doing so much better—"

Mr. Speaker, such a statement from a Minister of this Conservative Government is quite revealing of how poorly she understands the way in which the equalization formula should apply. And I just cannot understand how it is that no Conservative Member representing Quebec has exerted pressures on the Government to force it to fullfill its commitment and explain to the Minister what the equalization formula really means.

The equalization formula to share our country's wealth is a contractual agreement and it is even included in the preambule of our Constitution. I am not asking any special favours for a province, but I simply want the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) to keep the solemn commitment they both made before all the Members of this House when trying to convince them to accept Bill C-39.

Mr. Speaker, this decision of the Minister of Finance and the Minister of State for Finance represents a betrayal for Quebec and I hope that the Conservative Members will use all their weight in caucus to call these two ministers to order and ensure that they keep their promise.

Mr. Speaker, this situation is so serious that, before resuming my seat, I would like to move the following motion:

> That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:
> "This House refuse to continue the consideration of this Bill, the purpose of which is to unilaterally reduce federal payments to the provinces for post-secondary education and health services which are essential."

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Kempling): We will reserve judgment on this and advise the Hon. Member later. Debate.

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I understand that you want to reserve judgment on this motion. When are we going to receive a judgment on it? I do not know how many speakers—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Kempling): The Chair will rule on this very shortly.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few points about Bill C-96, points which I think relate to Government policy more than anything else. First, the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) made a case for getting rid of the deficit by taking away or reducing two of the main economic factors in Canada, the need for a well educated and a healthy population. He suggested that by reducing the amount of money expended on health and education we could be rid of the deficit. That is kind of a negative approach.

There is no doubt that the policy of the Government as expressed in this particular Bill and in the Nielsen task force report is fairly specific. First, it is to eliminate any program that costs anything, or to pass that cost on to another Government. That is exactly what the Government is going to do. In this particular case the Government has decided to pass the costs of health care and of education either to the provincial Governments or to the students who are seeking education. If the Government does not do one of those two things, it will do a third thing. It will redefine the Government's responsibilities in order to bring the costs down to the absolute minimum.

If one were to study the parts of the Nielsen task force report which have already been put into policy, one would find that those three basic approaches are followed. The Government either eliminates a program, it passes the program on to someone else to pay for or it redefines the Government's responsibilities so that the program will not cost so much.

Second, the Government has proclaimed itself an open Government and has said that it is going to be consultative. In this particular case, perhaps the definition of consultation has been changed. The provincial Governments keep telling us that the actions taken by the federal Government in this particular case were unilateral. The federal Government proclaimed that it took this action only after consulting with the provincial Governments. The provincial Governments suggest that no agreement was reached and that they were told at the end of the federal-provincial conference that this action was going to be taken. They did not agree, and simply informing the provinces does not seem to be the kind of consultation which was expected. There was no discussion, no recognition of the effects of this action, and no allowance for other actions which the provincial Governments might take rather than this action.

Third, the Government says that there will be no great disparities or inequities caused by this particular legislation. Nothing could be further from the truth. The Government knows that the impact of the cut in the rate of growth is that the amount of money that is available for health and post-secondary education will be reduced. The Government seems to refuse to recognize that the provinces will have to make up those costs which continue to increase.

The provincial Governments will have to find a source of income to replace the income which is being withheld by the federal Government. The provinces that have the money will probably not be affected greatly, but there are have-not provinces in Canada. There are provinces which do not have new sources of money and have a very difficult time remaining in a balanced position. In fact, in the last few years, some of the provinces have even gone into deficit positions. They will be affected and there will be inequalities in health care and education in those provinces.

We will be moving away from one of the great decisions that Canada has taken, and that is that everyone must have an equal opportunity. Every person who lives in Canada should have an equal opportunity to receive quality education. Sometimes we wondered about the Liberal Government's commitment to equality but the Conservative Government does not leave us to wonder at all. There is no doubt in anyone's mind that it has an elitist philosophy when it comes to education. It feels that not the most intelligent but the richest should be given the opportunity for quality education.

The Conservatives claim to believe that health care should be available and accessible to everyone. The key is whether they actually believe that it should be available to everyone. Obviously they do not believe it. Government Members are suggesting that it should be available to everyone who has the ability to pay. Also they say that no one should worry about health care not being available and that the access will be the same. However, access to quality health care is already deteriorating, and a reduction in the amount of money available each year will have the effect of further reducing quality health care in some provinces. Many areas will not receive the kinds of health service which they received in the past.

The Government has had a continuing tendency to forget that it made promises. In the 1984 election campaign, members of the Progressive Conservative Party stated that they were committed to sustaining the then current federal financial commitment according to the formula set out in the 1977 agreement. Also they stated that they believed that the financing of post-secondary education was an important priority for both levels of Government. That was a concise and clear statement made by Conservative Party Members before the 1984 election, yet we see action on the part of the Government to back off from that promise, to forget that it was ever made, and to reduce the money which will be paid for post-secondary education. Government Members will say that they are only paying out less, but they promised to accept the 1977 formula which had a larger increase than the one they are allowing this year.

Health is one of those sacred trusts. It is amazing how the phrase "sacred trust" has become almost synonymous with broken promises. I will not spend a great deal of time on this matter because it has been well documented that the Government promised to allow a continuation of quality health care. However, it should be recognized that the promise of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) of no reduction until 1987 was made after the election, to the provincial Governments and provincial Ministers at a federal-provincial conference. He promised to continue the funding. The suggestion of a reduction seemed innocuous at the time because it was so far into the future. Instead, he brought forward legislation which will mean that it will start to occur in 1986. The Government also suggested that it would do this in order to cut the deficit.

As I suggested earlier, we are being treated with an insight on how the Conservative Government thinks. It intends to cut the deficit on the backs of low-income and middle-income Canadians, on the backs of the "have-not" provinces, and at the expense of quality education and health care.

Let us look at what the Government has done to the tax structure. The taxes for high-income earners have been reduced, whereas the taxes for low-income earners have been increased. Now we see the same philosophy being applied to education. If education and health care require increases, no funds will be available for that purpose.

The Government needs to look at this piece of legislation again and bring it back in a form which would allow Canadians to continue to receive the kind of quality education and health care to which they are accustomed.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Before you make your ruling, Sir, in respect of the proposed amendment of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), I should like to submit the following. As I understand his amendment, the effect would be to negate entirely the main second reading motion. It does not amend the motion in respect of content, intent, or time. Therefore, my contention would be that the course of action the Hon. Member and his colleagues should take would be to vote against the main motion. For the various reasons cited, his amendment would be out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Kempling): I am about to rule on this matter. I was awaiting the return of the Hon. Member. The amendment is in order; it is a reasoned amendment.

At this point in time I will rule on the amendment of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), seconded by the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano). As I said at the outset, the amendment is in order and it is a reasoned amendment. The amendment is to leave out all the words after the word "that" and to substitute therefor that this House refuses to continue study of the Bill, the principle of which consists of a unilateral reduction of the payments by the federal Government to the provinces for post-secondary education and health services which are essential.

I ask for the indulgence of Hon. Members. The amendment was put to the Chair in French, and I am not quite that competent in French. Therefore, it is not an official translation, but the French version will apply, and that is the sense of the amendment.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) has been going across the country to speak with and listen to university students, professors, and administrators. He is profoundly concerned about post-secondary education. As the Leader of the Liberal Party, he has been alerting the country to the need for a national approach to post-secondary education. He is insisting that we need to find a way in which to get the provinces and the federal Government to co-operate and to ensure that the moneys transferred by the federal Government to the provinces indeed are spent on education, unlike what happened, for example, in the Province of British Columbia where a large amount of the funds was diverted to other purposes than post-secondary education.

My leader wants to ensure that federal incentives to the provinces are arranged for research and development and that the promised targets for research and development are reached. He also wants to ensure that attention is given to strengthening centres of excellence, that business and school co-operation is encouraged, and that we increase our effectiveness in spending. That is the program of the Leader of the Official Opposition. That is what the Government is not doing for us. It is not offering leadership. It is simply cutting back on its promises and even on its agreements, as the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) so eloquently and so excellently pointed out.

Bill C-96 is a bad Bill. Simply put, the Tories in Ottawa have decided unilaterally to reduce or cut the expected and promised transfer payments by the Ottawa Government to the provinces for health and for education. They did not ask the provinces; they told the provinces. They did this despite the protestations of the provinces. This is a very serious matter, Mr. Speaker. Leadership is needed at a time like this. The crisis taking place in post-secondary education is a major one.

If we look at the reports and the observations of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, we find this:

> Enrolment pressures have continued to mount in the past year. Even though the total 18-24 age group from which university enrolments are traditionally drawn is declining, the proportion of this group undertaking university studies continues to grow.

Even though numbers are decreasing in the population, the number of young people in that age group seeking a university education is increasing. The statement goes on:

> Across Canada, in 1985-86, full-time university enrolments increased by 1.5 per cent and part-time enrolments by 2.7 per cent. The percentage increase would no doubt have been higher if some universities had not been compelled to impose over-all limits on enrolments.
> The list of difficulties facing universities grows. The unacceptably high faculty-student ratios, the outdated research equipment in some of our laboratories, the continuing concern relative to the brain drain of some of brightest and best researchers, the aging of our professoriate, the weakened library collections and the physical plants in disrepair have all been well documented. The universities do not seek sympathy or futher analysis. They seek and expect solutions.

Solutions require leadership. The problem unfortunately is that the Government is not giving leadership on how to deal with the question of post-secondary education and research. Rather it is simply dealing with budgets and unilaterally announcing a cut in the expected transfer payments that were supposed to have been made this year, thus breaking agreements with the provinces and cutting funds for future years. That is not leadership, Mr. Speaker. It is a betrayal of promises and it is a lack of responsibility at a time when a grave crisis faces the nation.

As this applies to general financing, it also applies and strikes universities in the area of research, which is such an important part of the life of universities. The Government not only through this Bill is assailing the foundation of the future of the universities and colleages but it is also, through other actions, complementing this, not providing the kind of leadership promised in the area of research.

Speaking on behalf of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, the President of the Manitoba University, Arnold Naimark, noted that the latest move by the federal Government relating to guaranteed funding for the three granting councils responsible for most of the research in Canada will mean they will end up with less money in real terms than at present. This is an absolutely staggering result of the latest decision of the Conservative Government, this time in the realm of research. In the words of Mr. Naimark himself:

[Translation]

"We have examined the announcement of the Federal Government and it is obvious that the guaranteed support of the Federal Government to council activities will not be increased during the next five years. Even with an inflation rate of 4 per cent, in 1990-91, the purchasing power of the councils' budgets will in fact be 18 per cent lower than it is now."

[English]

With the decimation of our post-secondary universities on the one hand, and of the money they need for research on the other hand, which is not in this Bill, we have a double assault on our post-secondary educational system. This is devastating because we all know the future of Canada's economy depends upon a very healthy and growing post-secondary educational system.

Mr. Don Savage, General Secretary of the Canadian Association of University Teachers, said that if we are to progress economically as a nation we will need more not fewer university graduates in science, engineering, and business management. If we are to survive in a competitive and frequently hostile world, we will have to know the cultures, history, politics and languages of our friends, our competitors, and our enemies. If we are to make any mark in the history of the world, all of this effort must be suffused with the ideals of our civilization, its history, its philosophy, and its literature. Our political leaders, said Mr. Savage, seem incapable of finding a way to fund the universities we need. That is an assessment which I am afraid is appearing to be all too true when we look at Bill C-96.

We certainly hope the Government will rethink its position on this, go back and fulfil the promises it made to the electorate on the matter of maintaining the level of at least the 1977 funding formula. We hope the Government will look at the promises to and agreement it made for this past year with the provinces, and at least fulfil them. It would be wise for the Government to do these things.

Everyone knows colleges and universities are in deep trouble right across the country. For that matter, since this Bill also deals with the medical situation as well as transfers to the provinces for the post-secondary educational fields, the Government should stop starving hospitals and medical centres. The Government must stop passing the buck to the provinces. It must give leadership and keep the promises it made in the last election.

I appeal to the Government and to the Members of Parliament who belong to the Government caucus, to drop Bill C-96 or vastly modify it and keep their pledge to the future of our country. Stop selling us out. Do not let us and our young people become slaves of other nations, hewers of wood and drawers of water, because we have failed to give to our young people the knowledge and the skills and the research to do the job. Give us the educational system we need.

If the Government will renegotiate and discuss with the provinces what can be done to work out co-operatively the future of post-secondary education, that will be a greater contribution by far than by merely passing Bills that cut back on the Government's own problems of the deficit here in Ottawa. Let us work out in dialogue with the provinces how we might co-operatively work together to guarantee a future for your young people. Let us not, together with the provinces, pass the buck on to the young people. Let us be brave and take on the responsibility of working together.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to make some comments regarding Bill C-96, a Bill which has to be identified as a Bill of betrayal to the young people of Canada, to the universities and colleges, vocational schools and educational institutes of Canada. It is a betrayal of the health care system and the people of Canada.

I recall a number of occasions when members of the Government opposite and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said that the Government was going to commit itself to improving the health care and post-secondary educational systems of Canada. Bill C-96 cuts back on increases which should be going to our post-secondary education institutions and to health care across the country. Regardless of how you cut it, that is what this Bill is all about. Due to this Bill, in the next five years $6 billion which would normally have gone to the provinces for health care and post-secondary education will not be going to them.

In this fiscal year alone $318.9 million which should have been transferred to the provinces for post-secondary education will not be transferred. That is what the Department of Finance has told us and I thank it for laying out, in a very clear fashion, what the cut-backs will mean to the provinces. Next year that amount will escalate to $680 million. The following year over $1 billion will not be transferred to the provinces. Over the next five years about $6 billion will not be transferred to the provinces.

I do not know what kind of sign that gives the people of Canada. I do not know what kind of signal members of the Government are sending out to Canadians. The signal I receive is that the Government believes it is spending too much on colleges, universities, and institutes and is, therefore, going to cut back on its spending. The Government says that it cannot afford such expenditures. If the truth were to be known, Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is a Member in the House of Commons who would not say that the most important natural resource in our country is our people, especially the young people who wish to be trained and educated to take their rightful role in our society in this and future decades. That, however, will not be the result of this particular Bill. Things will not improve.

I was in my constituency on the weekend. The headline in the local newspaper in Kamloops, British Columbia, read: "Major Cuts from College Funding". The article indicates that there will be a cut of $500,000 to Caribou College in Kamloops, British Columbia. Over the last four years that college has experienced a 16 per cent increase in enrolment. Yet it had its base budget cut by 11 per cent over that same period. It has more students but less money. The news this year is that a further $.5 million will be cut from its budget.

Materials used in education and health care lead the inflationary syndrome. Their cost tends to increase faster than the general rate of inflation. When the ravages of inflation are taken into consideration, the cuts to education and health care are even greater than the figures indicate.

There is something peculiar happening in the country as a result of this legislation. When this Bill was introduced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) not long ago, it was done so with no real consultation about what impact it would have on the people in the provinces of Canada. It was unilaterally announced that the Government would be cutting back on post-secondary education. When the Prime Minister spoke of a new co-operative federalism, a new approach to doing business with the provinces, and a new openness of Government, we did not anticipate that it meant unilateral decisions which would have a very negative impact on the people of Canada, particularly in terms of the ability of provinces to provide health care and post-secondary education.

This is round two of this process. Not long ago when the Liberals were governing Canada they introduced cut-backs in post-secondary education as part of their six and five program. At the time we felt that that was an inappropriate move. My colleagues in the New Democratic Party, to the last individual, stood up and said that that was not the kind of action a country should be taking if it hoped to remain competitive and play its rightful role as a western industrialized nation. However, that is what the Liberals decided to do.

At that time the present Minister of Finance stood up in the House and spoke out against that. I do not have sufficient time to quote him, but he spoke vociferously against that action. The present chairman of the finance committee, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), almost had a heart attack. We thought he would not make it through his 20-minute speech because he was so worked up about what this would do to the young people of Canada. The present Minister of Public Works (Mr. La Salle) stood up in his flashy and flamboyant way. We thought he was going to cross the aisle and start punching the then Minister of Finance for suggesting that the 6-and 5-program should apply to post-secondary education. The Hon. Members for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) and Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) spoke against the legislation.

The present Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) from Newfoundland said:

> Mr. Speaker, this is a deplorable piece of legislation because the principle of it is one of betrayal. The Bill betrays the provinces of Canada, the provincial Governments of Canada and betrays the universities of Canada. It betrays post-secondary institutions of Canada. It betrays the young people of Canada and illustrates rank hypocrisy in the actions of the Government.

He is now doing exactly the same thing. Then he went on about the hypocrisy and betrayal of it all. Now the tables are reversed except that the Government is not proposing a program to last for only two years; this is to be permanent. It will continue year after year. We say that it will cost us $6 billion over the next five years. We can extend that and say that it will cost us $8 billion over the next eight years, and so on.

The Government is saying that it does not plan to provide equal opportunities for the young people of Canada relative to other countries. Most western industrialized nations are investing heavily in post-secondary education and research and development. They are training their young people and retraining their workers. They are providing for education in universities and colleges to lead to reseach and development for the production of a variety of products and commodities. Canada stands alone in saying that it will not be providing those increases like everyone else. Canada will not be participating in educating its people as are the other countries with which we compete.

I do not know why the House is not filled with Members of Parliament from British Columbia standing in their places saying that they will not accept this. The Province of British Columbia stands alone in that it fails to pass along the entire amount of money it receives from the federal Government for post-secondary education. A report issued last year indicates that post-secondary education in British Columbia is not financed on a shared basis by the provincial and federal Governments. It is funded by the federal Government exclusively. That provincial Government provides virtually none of its own money for post-secondary education. It is simply not correct to believe that the provincial Government will make up the difference now that the federal Government is cutting back on funding to British Columbia. The track record indicates very clearly that if the shortfall is made up it will be done so by the students through tuition fees.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, this Bill must be stopped. It cannot be allowed to continue. I hope that Members opposite will look at this reasoned amendment and vote in support of it.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, this morning I attended a meeting of a committee of which Your Honour is also a member, the Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations. We were examining a very important series of recommendations which we hope to table in this House before the end of May. They dealt with the Green Paper which the Government presented called Competition and Security. Our discussions over the last couple of days focused on the ways and means by which Canada can become a competitive nation in the very tough and turbulent world of international trade. As we went over the submissions we received from across Canada during the past several months, there was one constant and consistent theme. That theme was that the fundamental strength of Canada as a world trader in the future will be based on the brainpower and knowledge of its citizens. Our future will depend upon our capacity to think, innovate and develop new products.

It is therefore ironic that I am here debating a Bill which runs totally counter to that theme. It contradicts, refutes and negates that theme. It will have the effect of totally eroding the skils of Canadians. It will lower our ability to be creative and innovative. It reduces our potential to develop the brains, abilities and skills of Canadians in our universities and other institutions of higher learning. How can the Government operate on two tracks going in opposite directions? Members of the Government stand here day after day talking about their commitment to economic development. They say we must become one of the great international traders. At the same time they are pulling the rug out from underneath the ability of Canadians to supply that trading competition.

I visited the universities in my riding over the past several weeks to talk to students, faculty and administrators about present conditions in our universities. Their maintenance budgets, which go towards keeping the halls clean and maintaining equipment at acceptable standards, have not been increased for four or five years. The research budgets, which go towards providing new equipment and books, the hiring of research assistants and many other things, have been cut back virtually to zero. The university in my riding is one of the major universities in the country. In the past it has provided an incredible number of skilled people who have occupied important positions throughout Canada. We are now short-changing that university.

As a country we have always believed that one of the major commitments we should make is that of broadening educational opportunities. Higher education should not be available just for the children of upper middle-class or upper-class families. The real strength of Canada has been that we have widened the availability of higher education to make it available to the working class of people, the poor and minority groups. Yet this university has had to put a freeze on the number of student positions. It has had to develop a system of pre-selection, and the high quality courses that are in demand are increasingly limited to fewer and fewer students. The students least able to compete for those positions are those from a disadvantaged background.

The fear expressed to me by some university personnel is that we are creating a class system in our institutions of higher learning. We are closing the door of opportunity for minority groups and the children of disadvantaged families. There are no longer the resources available to give them the start they need. Is that something that we as a country want to accomplish? That may fit in with the Tory philosophy. That may be the attitude of the Conservative Party. I recall a statement by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) about a year ago that the philosophy of his Budget was to make sure that the rich got richer, or words to that effect.

Ms. McDougall: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: We are creating the conditions for that to happen by denying the opportunity for higher learning to a broad base of Canadians. That is the end result of this Bill. Never mind talking about transfers to the provinces and inequities in those areas. We are, in real terms, closing the door, closing off opportunity. We are destroying the capacity of this country to utilize fully the skills and abilities of its citizens. That is the end result of this legislation. That is the charge that must be made. The Government is deliberately and consciously fighting against years of progress, which allowed this country to broaden opportunity, because it has a different philosophy and approach. This is no accident. It is not happening because of a Minister's mistake, although God knows there are enough of those. It is being done as a conscious matter of policy by this Government.

All of this is increasingly compounded by the same kind of closing down of opportunities for quality health care. When you increase your defence budget by 40 per cent over the next five years and your health care budget by only 10 per cent, which will not even begin to cover inflationary increases, then obviously something has to suffer. The hospitals in my city are cutting back on their outreach programs which are there to provide preventive care and deal specifically with many of the lifestyle health problems faced by people in our lower-income areas. They deal with our native communities and problems in the inner city core areas. They are losing their ability to try new programs which will reach out to the disadvantaged. They will be unable to experiment with the kind of preventive programs which will enable us eventually to save money on health care because they prevent people from becoming sick.

Those are the human consequences of this legislation. That is the end result of this stupid, callous and uncaring act by this Government. It is saying once again to large number of Canadians that Government does not have a responsibility to meet their needs. Government does not have the obligation to share the wealth of this country in an equitable way. It is saying that it will increasingly restrict privileges and opportunities to a smaller and smaller class of Canadians. That is the human result of this legislation and that is why it must be opposed.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak once more on this legislation. I hope I will have other opportunities to speak on it, because the longer we keep discussing it, the longer we will prevent the new situation from setting in. It is important to delay this legislation because it really is destructive of Canadian policy.

Mr. Speaker, the impact of the legislation now before us is to reduce transfer payments from the federal Government to provincial Governments for post-secondary education and health services. A few Conservative Members have risen in this debate, expressing the view that this Government is not reducing health and post-secondary education payments to provinces.

But the fact is this Government has reduced expenditures. Let me take for instance Manitoba, where planned expenditures in those areas will be reduced by $235 million over the period to 1990. Mr. Speaker, that is a large amount of money, and that cut has significant implications for the Province of Manitoba.

In order to illustrate that reduction, I will now give more readily understandable examples. For a four person family in Manitoba, the reduction will amount to more than $1,000 over a full year. The reduction of federal expenditures on health services and education will reduce federal support by $1,000 a year for each Manitoba family. As another example, let me say this reduction will be greater than the overall Manitoba expenditures on universities and community colleges. Mr. Speaker, that is a truly significant reduction.

Many Conservatives have told us how important it was to reduce the deficit, how important it was to have control over public expenditures, and nobody disagrees with that on this side of the House. But how should we go about reducing the deficit? When the Conservatives were fighting to get elected, they said they would reduce the deficit by cutting down on squandering. Mr. Speaker, that was a good approach. But why is the Government not following that approach now, that it is in power?

Mr. Speaker, this is a matter of priorities. Why reduce education and health expenditures while increasing those on armaments, national defence? It is important that we have armed forces, but why increase defence expenditures when we reduce education and health support?

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a look at this Government's approach and its implications in the area of health care. It is true that health costs are increasing considerably. But how can we solve the problem while serving ordinary people? That is the question.

And, of course, the Conservatives' approach is to cut down on expenditures now. The problem with that is we are going to miss the opportunity to invest in new ways of delivering health services which in the long run could reduce health costs.

Mr. Speaker, it is important in my view for ordinary people to remember that our health system is more efficient and less expensive than the American one. With the public Medicare system we have here in this country, the cost of health care takes a smaller part of the GNP than in the United States, and with better results. In this country, families do not risk losing all their savings when one of their members is ill. But in the United States, a family can be ruined because of one serious illness.

Mr. Speaker, the public health system in this country is more efficient than if it were run by the private sector, and it is endangered by these Government reductions. By cutting down federal assistance to health care we are running the risk of destroying the system in the long run. The approach we advocate would be to invest in health care so as to be able to provide still more effective programs and, with time, costs would go down.

Mr. Speaker, we have to come to grips with real problems in the health sector because costs are rising, which can only mean less money available for post-secondary education. This country needs a sound post-secondary education system because our economy is heavily dependent on well educated people . . . one more minute, Mr. Speaker!

To sum up, Mr. Speaker, all I am saying is that reducing education and health expenditures is a short-term approach, and we must look much farther into the future if we want to serve ordinary Canadians and lead our country to prosperity. We must be concerned about the quality and efficiency of services. This will save us money in the long run.

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to say a few words in connection with Bill C-96, which is an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977. I have listened very carefully this morning to the comments of the Opposition indicating, as they have done time and time again, that this legislation is aimed at reducing the contribution the federal Government is making to both post-secondary school education and to health care services in this country.

I think it is important for the people of this country, and the Opposition, for that matter, to put this in its proper perspective. We are well aware that this legislation, far from decreasing the total quantum amount of money that will flow to the provinces, will in fact increase the quantity of money that will be going to the provinces this year, next year and in the years to come. In fact, as a result of this legislation the transfer payments in relation to post-secondary school education and health care will continue to grow at a rate of about 5 per cent annually. If inflation continues to be in the vicinity of 4 per cent as it has for the last two years, that will mean that the transfer payments in connection with health and post-secondary education will increase at an even greater rate than inflation.

That is not to suggest for one minute that this legislation is only increasing the quantity. Hon. Members have quite rightly pointed out that the formula that was in place previously is being altered and modified and, as a result of that modification, there will be a downward adjustment in the total amount of money that would have flowed, might have flowed, could have flowed to the provincial Government.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Should have flowed.

Mr. Redway: The amount that has already flowed to the provinces is not being reduced. In fact, as Hon. Members are well aware, that amount is even being increased. It is estimated that at the rate provided by this formula, the total amount will increase by more than $90 billion by the year 1990-91. There is no question about a decrease in payments; in fact there is an increase in payments. That is quite clear.

If post-secondary educational establishments and the health care systems do not cut their cloth according to inflation, there will be a requirement to provide them with more money from somewhere. Obviously, it will not come from the federal Government, so it will have to come from somewhere else. Perhaps it will come from the provincial Governments which, according to the Constitution, have the primary responsibility for these expenditures. They always have and always will have that jurisdiction as long as the Constitution remains as it is.

The provinces have guarded that right very carefully and very jealously over many years.

I can understand the concern of the provincial Governments that in the future they may not get as much money from the federal Government for these purposes as they had hoped. However, I am sure that when the provincial Governments search their souls they will understand what we are doing. In the last 10 to 20 years, provincial Governments have been using this same approach with boards of education, municipalities and all those to whom they pay transfer payments. In fact, as a former municipal politician, I am well aware that long before the federal Government started to consider the possibility of not giving the provincial Government quite as much as it expected in future years, the provincial Governments were cutting back on the amounts not only that they had promised to municipalities and school boards in the past but actually reducing the amount. I recall that in my municipality in 1970, some 80 per cent of the total cost of educating children was paid for out of provincial transfer payments. Now it is down to less than 40 per cent.

The provincial Governments know what is happening. They have been taking similar action for many years and they know what it is like to shift expenses and costs to a lower level of Government.

Of course, the concern is not with the provincial Governments but with the taxpayers themselves. The taxpayers of this country pay taxes to municipal Governments, school boards, provincial Governments and the federal Government. Everyone in this Chamber and throughout the country must pay taxes, and we know what it is like to have to shoulder that burden of paying for all those things that make up the vast number of taxes which we must pay.

The problem we are facing is that the expenditures that Governments have undertaken in this country are out of whack with the amount of revenue that is flowing in. Somehow, we must get that under control. The impression I am getting is that citizens are getting tired and fed up with paying increased taxes and are looking for some sort of cut-back on expenditures.

Where will we cut back on those expenditures? The New Democratic Party Member from Winnipeg who just spoke said that we were going to cut back on waste and expenditures. That is quite true. That is what we have been doing. However, every time we look to cut back on an expenditure that we believe might be wasteful—

Mr. Keeper: Health?

Mr. Redway: We find an objection from the Hon. Members.

Mr. Keeper: Is medicare a waste?

Mr. Redway: When the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), in his November 1984 Economic Statement, set out a number of reductions in areas of expenditure that the Government felt was wasteful, we heard objections from the Opposition. I am not suggesting for a minute that health or post-secondary education are wasteful expenditures. The Hon. Member also knows that we are not decreasing the amount of money going to those areas, although it may not be the amount that the provinces thought we might spend. However, I am suggesting it is quite clear that every time the Government suggests a reduction in wasteful expenditures there are objections from the Opposition, whether it is the New Democratic Party or the Official Opposition. There is not one expenditure that they believe is wasteful. That is why we are facing the difficult problem of how we will cut our cloth, balance the budgets and pay for the expenditures undertaken by all levels of Government.

I believe that the people of this country have come to the limit of their tether as far as increases in taxes are concerned and, therefore, we are rapidly approaching the time when not only the Government but the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party will have to look carefully at which Government expenditures we will have to cut. That is the tale that will be told in the future.

We have heard many platitudes and many wonderful statements from the Opposition, but we have not had any concrete statements as to what they would cut. It is time for them to put up or shut up.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Lapierre (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in this debate, although I am also disappointed to have to speak to such a sad topic.

Mr. Speaker, I listened to the previous speaker going on about how difficult it was for the federal Government to make ends meet and hurry in trying to pass the buck to the provinces which, he said, perhaps they were not doing enough and perhaps should seek other sources of income, and he kept saying that the Government of Canada had to reduce its deficit. In other words, through this Bill and the speeches of Government Members, they would have us believe that by using payments for the provinces, the provinces are the ones who will suffer in the final instance, but what they forget is who will really be affected by the cutbacks we are discussing today.

This Government, after making a formal commitment that neither post-secondary education nor health care would be tempered with, this Government had the nerve to present this Bill and make cutbacks amounting to nearly $6 billion between now and 1990-91, and if we take 1986 to 1992, we are talking about more than $8 billion in these two sectors.

Mr. Speaker, I think that we Quebecers should be particularly concerned about finding out what effect this will have on our province. In fact, since the Quebec Minister of Finance brought down his budget and told us that the Government would have to forego $66 million in equalization payments for the year ending on March 31, and that it would lose another $82 million over the current year, in addition to this cutback which represents $82.3 million in 1986-87 for Quebec, $174.9 million in 1987-88 for Quebec, and so forth—I think we can say that this amounts to an unilateral attack on a province and on all provinces, but if we look at ours in particular, we see two groups that have very few lines of defence. I am referring to two basically important groups, namely, the students who are our future, and the sick, who unfortunately cannot avoid being sick.

Mr. Speaker, these are major cutbacks because the Government looked only at the figures without thinking about the consequences of its action. What will these cutbacks mean for the universities? It will mean a proportionately reduced access for the poorer members of our society and an automatic increase in tuition fees, which will also have an impact on access. I trust that this was not done for philosophical reasons by this Government, but the result will be that the rich will have greater access to post-secondary education and that nothing will be done to reduce social disparities. Mr. Speaker, our universities have been strongly affected these last few years by a whole series of cutbacks.

The Government says that it has to cutback the fat of programs, but I can tell the Government Members that there is no fat to cut back in our universities. The didactic equipment of our universities is getting older and the faculties can no longer afford to replace it. In all scientific fields, such as engineering, our faculties have enormous difficulty in providing technological training at the same rate as technology progresses because their budget no longer allows them to purchase new equipment.

The same thing is happening in the hospitals. You would have to be insensitive to believe that the hospitals have too much money. If we look at the situation in Quebec, we find that many hospitals now have substantial deficits. It is certainly not by cutting back the transfers in these two areas that we can provide more equality and improve health services or education. These are certainly two areas where the Governments should make some improvements. It is obvious that the amounts allocated to health care are reduced once more, those affected will be the aged. It is obvious that pathological research will be affected. Yet, this Government had made a commitment to increase research and development and provide more money in the priority health care areas. What has happened to those nice promises?

As concerns post-secondary education, the Government did not consult the provinces or anyone else, but decided to make savage cutbacks while saying: It is essential to increase occupational training and to ensure that our young people will be better trained for tomorrow's jobs. Where will they get this training, Mr. Speaker? Will they have to go to private schools in the United States? This is one thing that worries me in this debate.

I can hear the Conservatives laugh. They have defective memories. They should remember all the speeches they made at the time of the 6 and 5 program. And yet, the 6 and 5 per cent program, the purpose of which was to reduce inflation, was an unqualified success. Sitting on the other side of the House at the time, I could hear Members of the Conservative Party getting incensed and calling it treason. What are they doing now? What they called treason two years ago they call now financial responsibility. What a change in attitude! What a change in vocabulary!

I hope therefore that the debate on the amendment which my colleague the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) has moved to Bill C-96 will provide an opportunity for the Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall), among others, to recognize her mistake and realize frankly that the action taken by the Government and by herself has been premature, that their decision was unilateral and that it will have desastrous consequences on both the health care and secondary education areas which they had promised to improve.

One need only consider the proportion of the Gross National Product which the various Governments allocate to Canadian universities and colleges to realize that it went down from 1.35 per cent in 1977-78 to 1.24 per cent in 1984-85. This proportion will keep going down because of the Bill before us. In a changing society like ours where education becomes the stumbling block of the whole system, I feel that by deciding to sacrifice this sector, the Government is demonstrating its very short-sightedness. Mr. Speaker, the same applies to health care. We know that Canadians are demanding improved health care, but the Government again is showing its insensibility.

CURRENCY

MINTING OF NEW DOLLAR COIN BLANKS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, we have another example of the Government's bankrupt and pork-barrel policies on regional development and increased employment opportunities. On March 25 at a news conference announcing the new $1-coin, the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. La Salle) stated that Inco in Sudbury would produce the nickel blanks, Sherritt Gordon would do the finishing and the Royal Mint in Winnipeg would do the stamping.

The Minister now says that while Inco Ltd. will receive a sole-source contract for the nickel to be used in the production of the new $1-coin, the actual blanks will be both produced and finished by Sherritt Gordon. Consequently, Sudbury will not share equally in the production of that new $1-coin as expressed earlier.

The Minister stated that Inco could in future years bid on the production of the blanks. If it can do so in the future, why not now? Why the unilateral decision to give the initial and largest run to Sherritt Gordon without tender? I submit that the action represents a double-cross to the community of Sudbury and the Minister should reverse his decision immediately.

FISHERIES

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF FISHERMEN'S REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of the Government the presence in Ottawa of representatives of fishermen's groups from across Canada. They form the first ever national fishermen's lobby group in Canadian history. They are here because they fear what the Government might do, and particularly what the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) intends to do regarding changes to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The fishermen fear that political and economic forces beyond their control have moved to throw the UI system back into the dark ages. They are here with specific proposals for job-creation schemes and they have requested a meeting with the Minister of Employment and Immigration so that they can speak to her directly.

Fishermen on both coasts form a vital part of this nation's economy. Economic survival is a constant worry for every fisherman in this country. Most recent figures indicate that almost all fishermen in Canada depend on unemployment insurance to survive through the winter months. In July 1985, 1,093 fishermen were collecting benefits, but in February, 1986, 29,847 were in need of benefits. They want the Government to realize that fishermen oppose any move to strip away their eligibility for unemployment insurance.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY

FUTURE OUTLOOK

Mr. Gilbert Chartrand (Verdun—Saint-Paul): Mr. Speaker, smokers are being subjected to a systematic persecution which disregards the personal freedoms which have always been the hallmark of our country. For example, we learned recently that Air Canada officials have jumped on the bandwagon and will ban smoking on some of their scheduled flights. The fact that our national carrier has so meekly yielded under pressure is a great disappointment to me.

Non-smokers advocacy groups are entitled to their opinion, but they should give more consideration to tobacco growers and people who work in that industry.

Most of the 750 workers of Imperial Tobacco in Montreal are residents of my constituency of Verdun—Saint-Paul. I met with these workers, they need their jobs to support their families, and they are increasingly worried about their future. One has to wonder whether the pressure groups against smokers have alternatives to propose, or whether they could not care less about the consequences of their campaign.

FORTHCOMING ALBERTA GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, Canadians and certainly those living in Alberta are largely free-enterprising people. While most Albertans abhor socialism, some NDPers could be elected through the back door in the Alberta election if the free enterprisers spread their votes among three or four free-enterprise candidates instead of supporting a PC candidate who, with Premier Don Getty, a great free enterpriser in his own right, will govern under free-enterprise policies.

After all, it was free enterprise that gave the people of this country one of the highest standards of living in the world. It was not socialism. It was free enterprise that developed our agriculture, oil and gas, lumber, communications and transportation systems in Canada. It was not the socialists. A new PC Government in Alberta, by working with the PC Government in Ottawa, can bring Canada into a new era of prosperity. Viva free enterprise. Viva the PC Party. Viva a better, greater and nobler Alberta and Canada!

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

IMPACT OF FREE TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, what impact will the freer trade negotiations with the United States have on the environment? So far the Government has not dealt with that question. Now that negotiations are under way, it is urgent that the potential environmental impacts of freer trade be assessed.

For instance, under a freer trade agreement there could be increased pressure from Canadian companies, and particularly from U.S. multinationals, to reduce the cost of environmental protection and resource management programs. In addition, wherever Government-industry agreements have been reached on subsidies or tax incentives for pollution abatement or resource enhancement, challenges could be likely under a freer trade agreement. This could seriously hinder federal and provincial initiatives on controlling point sources of pollution, hazardous waste management, reforestation, fisheries management, waste water treatment, air quality, et cetera.

It is still not too late to prepare an environmental impact assessment of freer trade, and I urge the Government to do so.

SOVIET NUCLEAR REACTOR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE—LACK OF INFORMATION SUPPLIED BY U.S.S.R. AUTHORITIES

Mr. John Reimer (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, ever since the initial news of the nuclear accident at Chernobyl was pried out of reluctant Soviet authorities by Sweden and Finland, the western world's repeated requests for an exact account of the disaster, detailed information concerning the well-being of the affected population, and a comprehensive, internationally verifiable investigation of the whole event have all met with the usual Soviet benign silence.

Such complacency with regard to the health and welfare of the Soviet people, such lack of sensitivity toward anxious relatives and friends, and such complete disregard for world health and co-operation are blatant violations of the Helsinki Accord and strain the boundaries of common, human decency.

On behalf of the residents of Kitchener, especially those of eastern European descent, I urge the Canadian Government to continue its initiatives begun at Tokyo and to press the Soviet Union to disclose fully the nature and extent of this accident to its own people, to the peoples of eastern Europe, and to the rest of the world—

PORTS

NEWSPAPER ARTICLE AND EDITORIAL ON PORT OF CHURCHILL

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, in The Globe and Mail this morning, which is self-proclaimed as Canada's national newspaper, there was an editorial attacking our northern Port of Churchill. This followed and presumably drew its information from an equally one-sided article in yesterday's edition of The Globe and Mail.

The article quoted Thomas Van Dusen, the anti-Churchill press spokesman of the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski), other groups which have historically opposed Churchill, and Nielsen task force members who are in open competition with the Port of Churchill, a fact which is not mentioned in the article.

The question of Churchill's value to the western economy will never be answered seriously on that basis. Mr. Van Dusen, in his effort to downgrade the Port, did not assist in accurate and informed public debate. He is quoted as saying: "We're stuck with Churchill". Hopefully the people of Churchill and the Minister of Transport are not stuck with Mr. Van Dusen.

INDUSTRY

EXPANSION OF DE HAVILLAND AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION FOLLOWING PRIVATIZATION

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Mr. Speaker, throughout the many weeks of debate in the House over the sale of de Havilland to Boeing, the outcry from the opposition benches gave the impression that the days were numbered for the aviation plant. From this hue and cry many were led to believe that once the sale took place the writing was on the wall and the demise of the plant was an indisputable fact. Yet it was recently announced by Richard Albrecht, Chairman of Boeing Canada Limited, that plans for expansion are under way.

Boeing announced that it will expand the Dash-8 commuter aircraft line and will infuse $25 million into new equipment and installations. In addition, the go-ahead has been given for a detailed design of the stretch Dash-8. The company is also scouting up buyers for the submarine hunting Dash-8. The order book for the Dash-8 holds orders for more than 100 aircraft.

Does this sound like the dying gasp of a company about to go belly up? I would answer with a resounding no. The sale of de Havilland has infused new life into the company. As long as the aviation plant continues to expand and grow, not only are current jobs protected but new ones will result.

GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Since we have assumed power, Mr. Speaker, the economic health of Canada has been continuously improving.

Statistics Canada, the Conference Board, the Bank of Canada, the Economic Council, as well as several other agencies, associations and organizations are foreseeing a sustained growth and a promising future under a Conservative Government.

But they are not the only ones to realize the effectiveness of our policies and the validity of our initiatives in the economic, agricultural, cultural and social areas.

During a Liberal meeting held last week in Yukon, the Hon. Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner) stated, and I quote: "There is going to be a stable and constant growth, such as we are enjoying now, for a very long period of time."

Mr. Speaker, I congragulate the Hon. Member for Cochrane—Superior for his honesty and I invite his colleagues to follow suit and admit quite candidly—

RAILWAYS

CAUSE OF DERAILMENTS—REDUCTION IN MAINTENANCE CREWS

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, a Canadian Transport Commission report shows that most derailments in Canada are track and equipment related. Despite this fact, CN and CP continue to reduce the number of employees who are responsible for roadway and equipment maintenance. The report notes as well that both railways have been reducing managerial and supervisory staff less rapidly than the workforce as a whole.

There is a great deal wrong with Canada's railway systems. Obviously one problem is that we have too many paper pushers and not enough rail employees looking after roadbeds, tracks and rolling stock. Railroaders in my riding have been telling me that for years.

At last, Sir, the Canadian Transport Commission has caught up with common knowledge.

CANADA-UNITED STATES TRADE NEGOTIATIONS—OPPORTUNITIES FOR CANADIAN FARMERS

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, last weekend two self-proclaimed agricultural experts, Mel Hurtig, an Edmonton book publisher, and Marion Dewar, the former NDP Mayor of Ottawa, visited Winnipeg to warn prairie farmers about the alleged evils of freer trade. Curiously, many Liberals and New Democrats, today's doom and gloom reactionaries, are so afraid of change that they do not want even to consider how we might benefit from greater access to an export market ten times the size of our own.

On a more positive note, the research firm of Deloitte, Haskins and Sells in work done for the Prairie Wheat Pools have concluded that a freer trade agreement would mean an extra $60 million a year in revenue for prairie farmers. Without such an agreement, they comment, prairie farmers may well lose some of their existing markets due to growing American protectionism.

Given such a choice, prairie farmers will readily opt for freer trade talks despite what doomsayers like Mel Hurtig and Marion Dewar have to say.

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT INITIATIVES

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, when it comes to Government statements on agriculture it is becoming increasingly difficult to tell the grain from the chaff.

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) is fond of listing hundreds of initiatives which he claims the Government has introduced in the past year and a half. Most farmers in Canada are hard pressed to name but a few of those initiatives which are of any real benefit and for which the Government can claim any real credit.

When the Minister and his Government have an opportunity to show by their actions that they do care about the plight of Canadian farmers, the Minister usually reverts to reciting the same old litany. Words, are a very poor substitute for action when it comes to assisting our farmers through some very difficult times.

On the issue of free trade, the Minister of Agriculture has been unsuccessful in his lobby with the trade Minister in gaining for agriculture a full voice on the free trade advisory council. The Minister seems to agree that farmer's interests are best served by being included with the food processing and beverage industry in Canada. That body is often—

PRIVATIZATION OF CROWN CORPORATIONS BY MANITOBA NDP GOVERNMENT

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk—Interlake): Mr. Speaker, over the course of the last year or so the Government has been criticized on a number of occasions by members of the NDP for having confidence in Canadian entrepreneurs and we have been criticized for returning Crown corporations to the private sector when they no longer served a public purpose.

The NDP is now silent on this matter. Why? Their siblings in Manitoba have seen the light, Mr. Speaker. Manitoba socialists are turning to the free enterprise system. The newly elected Manitoba Government has seen the wisdom of turning to Conservative policies and it has now started a privatization program of its own.

After years and years of mismanagement and drain on the public purse, the Manitoba Government has decided to sell Flyer Industries. The NDP has finally seen the logic of leaving the management and operation of businesses to business people. Now, if the NDP can only get its financing right.

SOCIAL SECURITY—POSITION OF LIBERAL PARTY

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, recently the Liberal Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner) addressed universality and the serious problem of the national debt. He was abandoned by his caucus colleages.

I would like to remind his colleagues that several other prominent Liberals of days gone by have echoed similar concerns. Marc Lalonde once stated:

> There are no free lunches. We can't plan on the basis that there's a growing federal pie from which everybody can get an increased share.

The Hon. Member for St. Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) said:

> Social programs have to be married to the economic requirements of the country so people use those programs to help themselves.

John Munro went so far as to say:

> The Government is wasting millions of dollars by sending monthly pension cheques to wealthy senior citizens and baby bonuses to families who do not need the money. Such funds should be redirected to help the most needy.

These are wise words. It is a pity that the Liberals did not heed them while in power. Now they are trying to stifle the lone voice of realism. Shame!

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

MAGNA CORPORATION FUNDS—REQUEST THAT MINISTER APPEAR BEFORE COMMITTEE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Yesterday we learned that the Korean company, Hyundai, had received a $300 million break. At the same time the Minister's company received a $3 million loan from a bank associated with Hyundai. We now know that Magna International has received grants totalling over $62 million and that the Minister's company has received a $2.6 million interest-free loan.

Surely the Minister must understand how this chain of circumstances fundamentally questions his credibility as a Minister. Under these dubious circumstances will he not voluntarily agree to appear before the Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure and put the matters of Hyundai and Magna before it in order that he can be properly examined by a committee of his peers?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in his question the Hon. Member referred to various transactions including certain fundings for Magna International. I am rather surprised that he did not make it clear that on August 27, 1984, just before the last election, his Government signed a memorandum of understanding with Magna anticipating the types of funding which he now criticizes me for simply implementing on behalf of the Government of Canada.

Mr. Garneau: Big deal.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, we are fully aware of the agreement which was signed by the previous Government. That is an even more important reason why he should not have allowed the dealings of his company to be associated with a company which was receiving grants from the Government of Canada. He should have known better.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST THAT MINISTER PROVIDE COMMITTEE WITH DOCUMENTS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Will the Minister now voluntarily agree to appear before that committee and, as a minimum, provide that committee with the proper documents and information so that it can make its decision on Thursday with the proper information which the Government has obviously had in its possession but, up until now, has refused to reveal to the public?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member has not forgotten, and I know that Hon. Members of the House will find it most interesting to learn, that under the previous Government from 1982 to 1984 the aggregate contribution of various types to Magna totalled approximately $30 million. The sharing ratio was 50 per cent on the projects concerned. The present Government gave approximately $18.1 million at an average sharing ratio of approximately 18 per cent. The fact is that Magna got much less beneficial deals from the present Government than from the former Government.

Mr. Broadbent: That's beside the point.

ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S WIFE

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, does the Minister not understand the difference between a Government giving an industrial grant to a company and the spouse of a Cabinet Minister negotiating a loan with a company which is receiving a benefit from that company? If he does not understand that difference, it is the best reason of all for the Minister to resign.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, that last intervention by the Hon. Member was not a question. It was a statement which has been answered by myself on behalf of the Government time and time again last week and this week. The answer remains the same.

LIMITS OF COMMITMENT BY HYUNDAI

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I also have a question for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion about the Hyundai assembly plant in Quebec. First, I would like to say that, on this side of the House, we are happy that Hyundai has decided to invest in Quebec and to create jobs. However, what we do not understand is how and why the Minister could release Hyundai from the legal obligation to purchase for about $300 million a year in Canada. Why did the Minister give up on the 10,000 to 15,000 jobs which could have been created in Quebec and elsewhere in Canada if he had not released Hyundai from this legal obligation?

• (1420)

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member takes some satisfaction at least from the fact that a plant is being built by Hyundai in the Province of Quebec. Perhaps he is unaware of the fact that in the negotiations leading up to Hyundai agreeing to build the plant in Quebec we indicated we would modify the export/import ratios on condition that a plant was built in Canada. This would be more fully spelled out in a memorandum of understanding. In short, the Hon. Member is overlooking the fact that as an integral part of achieving Hyundai's investment in Canada, which ended up in Quebec, we agreed to modify the export/import ratio they had previously agreed to.

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF AGREEMENTS

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. President, if this new agreement with Hyundai is as good, especially for Quebec, as the Minister indicated yesterday, would he be willing to table in this House both agreements, the old one and the new one signed with Hyundai, so that Canadians and Quebecers can judge for themselves whether the new agreement is an improvement over the old one as the Minister has indicated, or if it is worse because its effectiveness has been amputated as I believe?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to the old agreement and the new agreement. Judging from questions yesterday and today, members of the Official Opposition clearly do not understand the so-called old agreement.

Mr. Crosbie: They never have.

Mr. Stevens: Perhaps they have been unfortunately misled by various newspaper stories, but they have been bandying the figure of $300 million about as the amount of exports, which my Department tells me has absolutely no foundation whatsoever. In short, there is misrepresentation when there is some suggestion that the old agreement would have produced $300 million worth of exports. That is simply not true.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister and follows up on new news of decisions reached by his Department which have benefited Magna Corporation. He has said that he was unaware of the nature of the unusual loan his wife managed to negotiate until the public became aware of it last week. He now knows the nature of that loan to his wife, the connection with the Magna Corporation, and he is continuing to make decisions which benefit that company to the tune of millions of dollars. Does he not think that he should clear the air, so that the Government is viewed as one of integrity, and submit his resignation from his portfolio now?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is clearly a matter falling within my responsibility in the absence of the Prime Minister.

Mr. Ouellet: Then resign.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Bye, bye, Erik.

Mr. Nielsen: The Member is making statements concerning the responsibility of the Prime Minister to ensure compliance with the Code of Conduct by public office holders. It is the same kind of question that was asked repeatedly for four days last week, yesterday and today. The responsibility for compliance—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

• (1425)

RESPONSIBILITIES OF MINISTERS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I will direct the question then to the Deputy Prime Minister since he decided to answer this. In the Prime Minister's letter about the conflicts of interest he said the following:

I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of the activities of their spouses.

I want to ask the Deputy Prime Minister, considering that the Prime Minister said that in a letter to all the Ministers, and we now know the present Minister under question is making decisions amounting to millions of dollars a year which benefit a company that has a special deal with his wife, does he not think that Minister should not now resign?

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there is no difference between that question and the questions that were asked throughout four days last week. The response is still the same. In October, 1984, the Minister had divested himself of all of his assets, and by trust indenture placed them in a blind trust. That is a matter of public record which the hon. gentleman can discover for himself simply by speaking with the ADRG. Compliance has been had with the code of conduct.

ETHICS—POSSIBLE RESIGNATION OF MINISTER

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is this: Does the Minister agree that this matter affects the integrity not only of this Government, but also of the Canadian Parliament?

If such is the case, does the Deputy Prime Minister agree that the Minister should resign immediately?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): No, I do not agree that the Minister should resign.

MINISTER'S ROLE IN DISCUSSIONS CONCERNING HYUNDAI COMPANY

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Industry Minister indicated he was not aware of the connection between the Hanil Bank, Hyundai, and his own personal business interests. He now knows the blind trust now has 20-20 vision. In view of the knowledge he now has can the Minister, at the very least, give us his assurance that he will not participate in any discussions or decisions affecting Hyundai?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Deputy Prime Minister has indicated, my assets have been placed in a blind trust, and I feel that there is absolutely no reason why I cannot carry on in my present role. I would add that the Hyundai deal, some of the attributes of which I indicated earlier today and yesterday, I think has been a fine deal, a job-creation deal for Quebec and for all of Canada.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER NOT PARTICIPATE IN FUTURE DECISIONS CONCERNING HYUNDAI COMPANY

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is refusing to remove himself from any further allegations of conflict of interest. Now that the blind trust is no longer blind, will he give this House his assurance that he will not participate in any future decisions that might affect Hyundai in order to avoid any further allegations of a conflict of interest? Will he do that?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Given the nature of the questioning we have been hearing for six days, four last week and two this week, I am not encouraged whatsoever to believe that anyone in this Government will be free from allegations made by that Hon. Member and the rest of them.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO VICE-PRESIDENT OF HYUNDAI COMPANY

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Yesterday he said that he had no knowledge of any ultimatum made by Hyundai that they could not or would not build in Quebec and also live up to their commitment to a $300 million purchase agreement. Norman Gibbons, Vice-President of Hyundai, said that the decision to waive the $300 million buy Canadian clause was made by the Minister personally, and that Hyundai would not have been able to build in Canada and also meet such a commitment. Can the Minister explain the apparent conflict?

• (1430)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member can well understand, I cannot speak for the representative of the Hyundai motor car company to whom he refers. All I can tell him is that our Department informs us that the $300 million figure, that the Hon. Member and others are bandying around, has absolutely no foundation. The number of cars that were imported last year would not have risen under the new agreement or the old agreement to anything like a $300 million export figure going from Canada. It is a pure fantasy.

Mr. Broadbent: What is the figure?

MINISTER'S ACTIONS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, did the Minister personally waive the commitment that was undertaken by Hyundai to purchase in Canada to the extent of whatever amount he cares to attribute to it? If so, did he do this with the knowledge that Hyundai would not be prepared to build either in Quebec or Newmarket with that agreement in place?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, again, with all due respect to the Hon. Member, he has missed the point.

Mr. Deans: It is not that I make the point, it is that you answer it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Let him answer.

Mr. Stevens: The point is that Hyundai—

Mr. Deans: Did you know?

Mr. Stevens: —in an over-all—

Mr. Deans: Did you make the decision?

Mr. Stevens: —in an over-all—

Mr. Deans: I do not have to listen to that garbage.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Deans: Answer the question.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain will come to order.

An Hon. Member: Give him a chance.

Mr. Deans: He knows what the question is.

Mr. Crosbie: Why don't you resign now, Ian?

Mr. Deans: The question is simple. Did he make the decision or did he not?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Crosbie: Shirley Carr pulled the chain again.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain and the Minister of Justice will come to order now.

Mr. Nunziata: Name him.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell.

THE CABINET

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and relates to the code of behaviour concerning conflicts of interest.

In light of the points raised in the House today, what does the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion intend to do to abide by code directive No. 16 which applies to Ministers and prescribes "—avoidance of—activities or situations that place public office holders in a real or potential conflict of interest . . . "?

Now then, what specific measure does the Minister intend to take, other than those he has taken so far and which have proven to be unsatisfactory?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there is no difference between that question and the others that have been asked throughout six days now. It is the responsibility of the Prime Minister to ensure that the code of conduct is complied with by each and every Minister of the Crown. In the case of the Minister concerned, I have reassured the House time and time again that that compliance has been had and the public records in the ADRG's office will display that, if the Hon. Member takes the trouble to examine them.

BENEFIT SECTION REQUIREMENT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question concerns Section 35 of the code. Even if the Minister did not know before, now that we have told him and he knows that he benefited from a company doing business with his Department, has he or does he intend to file a declaration under the benefit Section 35 of the code which compels him to file when he has received a benefit from a company doing business with his Government? Has he done so, does he intend to do so and, if not, why not?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the short answer to that is, I have received no such benefit.

CODE OF ETHICS—ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S WIFE

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for ethical standards in the Government. It involves a situation where a spouse is involved in a conflict of interest situation, in direct contravention of the September 9 letter from the Prime Minister. Setting aside the letter of the law, will the Minister comment on the basic question of ethics? Does he feel that it is appropriate for the wife of a Cabinet Minister to solicit funds on behalf of the Minister's company, from someone who she knows does business with her husband the Minister's Department?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is not my responsibility to hold seminars for the hon. gentleman on the question of ethics.

An Hon. Member: Just answer questions.

Mr. Rodriguez: Just to stonewall.

Mr. Nielsen: The answer is that Ministers of the Crown are required to comply with the code of conduct with respect to public office holders. I am satisfied, and have so informed the Prime Minister, that the Minister concerned has complied with that code of ethics. The hon. gentleman should have discovered that himself if he examined the records, which I am sure he has done by now.

PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER TO MINISTERS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, a seminar is to deal with a theoretical question. It is a responsibility of a practising politician to deal with real issues.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Cassidy: Is it appropriate for this position to have been taken, with a spouse doing business like that?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question dealing with ministerial responsibility?

Mr. Cassidy: Is the Acting Prime Minister stating that the September 9 letter from the Prime Minister to the Ministers which says that they have an individual responsibility to avoid conflict of interests involving their spouses or their dependent children, is in fact a dead letter? Is that the position of the Government?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Not at all, Sir.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER APPEAR BEFORE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I want to inform the Minister, as did one of my colleagues, that on Thursday a parliamentary committee will consider the question of the Minister's conduct, the conflict of interest rules and alleged favouritism. Is he prepared to agree to appear voluntarily before that committee to clear the air?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member would want to have the correct facts on the record and not leave any misunderstanding with respect to the situation. As I understand it, there has been a proposal put forward with respect to the business and agenda of that particular committee, but no decision has been made and the matter is under advisement. If there is anyone on that committee who the Hon. Member knows, he may be able to put his own point of view through that member on the committee.

COMMITTEE DECISION INQUIRY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister give his assurance that the decision will be made by the members of the committee and not imposed upon them by the Government, particularly by the Acting Prime Minister, and that if members of the committee want the appearance of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion he will be free to come? I ask him again whether he will come in that situation?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Axworthy: He refuses.

Mr. Nunziata: Stonewall.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: He asked me whether or not the Government imposes its will on its Members. Members in this Party, unlike the Liberal Party where there is always the heavy yoke of Government intervention, are allowed to make up their own minds on all the issues.

Mr. Althouse: Why don't you allow them to speak for themselves, then?

AGREEMENT WITH HYUNDAI COMPANY—MINISTER'S ROLE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. It follows the question asked by my colleague from Hamilton Mountain. I want to put my question to the Minister directly. Did the Minister personally make the decision to exempt Hyundai from its FIRA commitments and did he do so with knowledge of the threat made by the officials from Hyundai that, otherwise, they would close the factory in his own constituency?

• (1440)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, to perhaps give Hon. Members an indication of how bizarre the opposition questioning is becoming, when the Hon. Member refers to closing a factory in my constituency, the fact is that when the MOU was entered into, that factory was not even built, the ground was not even broken.

MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, a senior official from Hyundai said Monday: "If Stevens had not dropped the Canadian purchase commitment the company would have had to abandon either the parts plants in Stevens' riding—"

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a question.

Mr. Langdon: I ask the Minister directly, did the Minister have knowledge of this decision, did he make it personally with respect to the FIRA commitment, and did he do so with knowledge of such threats as these from Hyundai?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think it is unfortunate—

Mr. Broadbent: That's right, yes.

Mr. Stevens: —when a sizeable international firm, in this case an automotive manufacturing concern, decides to invest in Canada and it is so maligned in this House of Commons—

Mr. Broadbent: Maligned? It's you. We're not criticizing it, we're criticizing you. Did you hear the question?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stevens: —by Opposition Members.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: Why don't you resign.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

RAILWAYS

B.C. RAIL DERAILMENT ACCIDENT IN WEST VANCOUVER—REQUEST FOR INQUIRY

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. In light of the seriousness of an incident which occurred yesterday morning when 10 rail cars of a B.C. Rail freight train derailed in the backyards of a residential area of West Vancouver, British Columbia, causing an estimated half a million dollars damage to municipal and residential property, with the derailment stopping one car short of cars carrying LPG products, will the Minister order an inquiry into this accident? What assurances can the Minister give to the residents along this densely populated rail line that their lives and property are adequately protected?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member is aware that B.C. Rail is a railway which comes under provincial, not federal jurisdiction. Notwithstanding that fact, our CANUTEC people have been advised of the issue and we are monitoring it very closely. Any investigation or corrective measures which may or may not be taken come under the responsibility and jurisdiction of the provincial Government.

ENERGY

PETROLEUM AND GAS REVENUE TAX—REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FOR SMALL OIL PRODUCERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. The Government refuses to listen to the needs of the energy industry. Even the Acting Prime Minister must realize that most small oil producers were not paying the petroleum and gas revenue tax in the first place. Why would the Government give an exemption from this tax which does practically nothing to help these people? When is the Government going to do something concrete to help the small oil producers?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, finally we have a sane question in this House.

Mr. Speaker: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Too bad it's wasted on you.

Mr. McDermid: I could answer the Hon. Member this way. With the dismantling of the National Energy Program most small producers have money today that they would not have had under the old program. That is the first thing, and I think it is very important. Second, the Hon. Member stands up and continues to cry help, but never gives us one iota of a suggestion as to how the Government can help. We took action last week. It was received positively in the oil patch. We are continuing to work with our provincial counterparts in helping this very necessary agency.

PETRO-CANADA—REQUEST FOR INCREASE IN PRICE TO PRODUCERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Government did nothing for the small producer. The one thing it can do for the small producer is to tell Petro-Canada to pay them a fair price for their product.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacLellan: When is it going to do that?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): They are sucking and blowing at the same time, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. Copps: You are sucking and blowing at the same time.

Mr. Rodriguez: You are an expert.

Mr. McDermid: One time they are asking—

Mr. Speaker: Order. That is not necessary. Just an answer, please.

Mr. McDermid: One time they are asking us to lower the prices to the consumers, and then they are asking to raise the price to the producers. They cannot have it both ways.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): That's too complicated for you.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

CHALLENGE '86

HIRING OF STUDENTS BY MAGNA INTERNATIONAL

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Apparently the Minister thinks that Canada needs auto parts more than children, otherwise why did her Challenge '86 Program cut back, compared to last year, 20 student day-care appointments in the riding of Spadina and divert the money for the hiring of 15 students for telephone marketing summer employment for Magna International which has no operation in Spadina or even in Metro-Toronto?

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Yes, Mr. Speaker, we have done our best this year to ask the private sector to get very much involved and create jobs for young students—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): You picked up the wrong script.

Mrs. Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot): —jobs where they will learn the skills they will need after graduation.

Mr. Axworthy: Where did you get your loan?

Mrs. Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot): As well, the public sector and all communities are getting their fair share and an awful lot of jobs will be created—

Mr. Broadbent: That's the wrong page.

Mrs. Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot): —there as well through Challenge '86.

DAY-CARE WORK EXPERIENCE

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister knows well that these students, most of them women, in order to be eligible to study early childhood education, must have hands on experience in day-care work. Why does the Minister deny that experience to more than half of them, compared to last year, in order to give it to telephonists?

Hon. Andrée Champagne (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, the figures quoted by the Member are not really true.

Mr. Deans: Woops! Absolutely true.

Mrs. Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot): Forty-eight per cent of the applications which have been approved right now have come from the private sector and account for 39 per cent of the moneys which have been allocated. Fifty-two per cent of those applications which were approved come from the municipalities and the public sector and account for 61 per cent of the money allocated. As the Hon. Member can see, the community and public sector are very well served.

Miss MacDonald: Hear, hear!

REFUGEES

REFUGEE STATUS—POSSIBLE ABUSE BY TERRORISTS

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Under Canadian immigration laws an individual claiming refugee status is entitled to full access to the refugee determination process. Under this process it is a possible that a terrorist or unconvicted criminal who declares himself a refugee would get exactly the same treatment as an individual from the East Bloc who is claiming political asylum. Are there presently any measures underway which would prevent abuse of our immigration system, thus saving the Government the long, costly process of trying to deport a terrorist?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to assure the Hon. Member that the Immigration Act does provide powers to arrest and detain any known terrorist. As the Hon. Member will know, we have in place a security mechanism to detect any terrorists who may be seeking to enter the country. They would not in any way receive the same treatment as a bona fide refugee. They would be detained and after due process be deported.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

USE OF OFFICIAL LANGUAGE OF CHOICE—SUPREME COURT DECISION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Justice. The Supreme Court of Canada has ruled that any citizen may plead in English or French before federal courts. It has also stated that the federal State may use the official language of its choice in court action against the accused.

In practice, will the Government of Canada adopt a policy whereby the federal Government will use the official language of the citizen, both in criminal proceedings and in other spheres under federal jurisdiction? Yes or no?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, there will be amendments to the relevant legislation proposed to this House before this year is out dealing with these matters. I can assure the hon. gentleman that we will make clear what the rules are and that the use of both official languages will be treated equally in federal courts. Certainly it is our policy that all documents and summonses issued by federal courts, or wherever we have authority, will be in both official languages.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT THE GOVERNMENT MODIFY THE LAW—FEDERAL PROSECUTORS TO USE OFFICIAL LANGUAGE OF ACCUSED

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): I thank the Minister for his answer. Will the federal Government, that is the federal State, be compelled to take court action against an individual in the language of this individual? If we really want an effective statute, will the federal Government introduce a constitutional or other amendment requiring federal Government counsel to use the language of the accused?

• (1450)

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I can only assure the hon. gentleman that the present Government of Canada has done everything it can to improve bilingual services in the courts, including opening language training to both provincial and federal judges. We are meeting with the provinces, and at our insistence they have each agree to work out a schedule with us so that criminal trials can take place in both official languages across the country. All of this is a great deal more progress than was made by our predecessor.

CURRENCY

PRODUCTION OF BLANKS FOR NEW DOLLAR COIN

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Supply and Services. On March 25, the Minister announced that Canada will have a $1-coin. At that time he also indicated that Inco would produce the nickel blanks for the coin and Sherritt Gordon would put the bronze plating on the coin. There seems to be some confusion now about whether or not Inco will get the order for the blanks.

Mr. Speaker: Question, please.

Mr. Rodriguez: Can the Minister clear up the confusion right now by confirming that Inco will in fact produce the nickel blanks and Sherritt Gordon will put the bronze plating on the coin?

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I do not know where the confusion arises. We agreed to adopt the all-Party recommendation that the mining and smelting of the nickel be done in Canada. Inco is going to produce the nickel. It is up to Sherritt Gordon to decide who it wants to do its work. That decision rests with that company.

ROLE OF INCO

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister clearly indicate to the House whether or not Inco will be given the order to produce the nickel blanks on which Sherritt Gordon will then put the bronze plating? Will the Minister answer that specific question and not confuse it with nickel smelting—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, production of the coins has been given by contract to Sherritt Gordon and whatever arrangements it wishes to make with Inco is within its jurisdiction.

Mr. Rodriguez: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADA-U.S. EXTRADITION TREATY—EXCLUSION OF COMPUTER CRIMES

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. The current extradition treaty between Canada and the United States does not take into account crimes involving computers. Can the Minister tell the House if he intends to add this important and growing area of criminal activity to the treaty list, or will he abandon all together the list of specific crimes that currently exists and replace it with more general criteria?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member puts her finger on one of the inadequacies in our laws, that is that the extradition treaties and legislation are of great antiquity and go back to the early years of this century. We in the Department are working with the U.S. and are trying to reach a modern, up-to-date treaty that will cover extradition and such crimes as the Hon. Member has mentioned.

By the way, I would like to let the Hon. Member know that 44 per cent of all our judicial appointments have been either bilingual or Francophone.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CURRENCY

PRODUCTION OF NEW DOLLAR COIN—ROLE OF INCO

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Supply and Services. Is the Minister aware that the Ottawa Bureau of the Sudbury Star has on tape the word he gave at the press conference on March 25 at which time he promised that the blanking work would go to the International Nickel Company? Is the Minister prepared to live up to the word he gave at that press conference on March 25?

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, I do not have a verbatim recollection of what was said at the press conference but to clarify, if I said something that has misled someone, as I have said in response to my friend who just crossed the floor only for a moment—

An Hon. Member: Thank God.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McInnes: —the smelting and mining of the nickel will be done in Canada. Sherritt Gordon has a contract to produce the blanks. It can involve Inco in any phase of the operation it wishes. That is up to Sherritt Gordon.

OPPORTUNITY TO BID ON WORK

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, can the Minister explain to the House why it is that the International Nickel Company is not being allowed the same opportunity to bid on the blanking work as Sherritt Gordon, which is from the Province of Alberta, has been given?

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, we received an all-Party recommendation from the House and we followed it absolutely.

LABOUR RELATIONS

CANADA PLACE PROJECT EDMONTON—APPLICATION OF FAIR-WAGE GUIDELINES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour and pertains to the $200 million Canada Place project in downtown Edmonton. Why has the Minister not had his Department ensure that the federal fair-wage guidelines that should be associated with this project were followed in order to enable the construction workers to receive a fair wage and have reasonable working conditions?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, strictly because the building to which the Hon. Member has referred is being built by Trizec, a private corporation, and not by the federal Government.

CIRCUMVENTION OF FAIR-WAGE GUIDELINES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister would explain why the big sign out in front of the project says: "Public Works Canada, the site of Canada Place". Would the Minister not admit that using this construction technique is simply a way around letting construction workers in that province receive a fair, decent wage?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): No, Mr. Speaker, I would not.

IMMIGRATION

PERFORMANCE EVALUATION OF EMPLOYEES—USE OF NUMERICAL INDICATORS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in response to the use of enforcement quotas in appraising the performance of Immigration officials, the Minister said the following:

> Numerical indicators are used only for statistics and in the process of planning and organizing.

If that is so, why did his Deputy Minister state the following in a memo dated March 13:

> Numerical indicators may be relevant in evaluating the productivity of employees.

Does he not realize that a conflict exists? When will an inquiry be struck to eliminate such practices?

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will know that a study was held and that this is but one of a number of factors in the overall appraisal.

NATURE OF INQUIRY

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, then the Minister was misleading the House yesterday because he clearly stated in the House that some practices are not—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. Just a question.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I return to the premise of my question. If an inquiry has been struck, can the Minister tell us when it was and what kind of an inquiry it was because such declarations made by a Deputy Minister run in the face of what this Minister told the House yesterday.

Hon. Walter McLean (Minister of State (Immigration)): Speaker, I repeat, every manager uses numeric ongoing data in order to keep statistics and records and their operations. This is the situation in this case.

Point of Order—Mr. Deans

LOSS OF DEVCO CONTRACT IN CAPE BRETON

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. His Department, through Devco, allowed the offshore fabricators to lose a contract for Cape Breton. Can the Minister explain how we are going to promote jobs in the Cape Breton region if he is going to let those contracts go offshore?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the contract to which the Hon. Member is referring is one for which Devco solicited various bids, including a bid from those in Cape Breton. After due consideration and the weighing of various bids, it was found that the Cape Breton bid was substantially higher than the other bids.

We have left that entirely to the management and board of DEVCO. Any decision they have made has been purely on commercial grounds after giving due consideration to what they regard as preferential treatment for any Cape Breton bidders.

RESPONSES TO QUESTIONS—DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY—MR. SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Yesterday the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) raised a point of order concerning the propriety of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) answering questions in the event that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is present in the House at the same time. He made the point that while the Deputy Prime Minister becomes the Acting Prime Minister during the Prime Minister's absence, he cannot be considered the Acting Prime Minister when the Prime Minister himself is present in the House.

The Prime Minister answers for the Government as a whole and is entitled to answer any question he chooses to answer relating to any ministerial portfolio and any matter of policy. He is equally entitled to delegate this responsibility to the Deputy Prime Minister, a responsibility the latter would normally exercise as Acting Prime Minister during the absence of the Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister may also delegate specific matters to the Deputy Prime Minister. As we know, the Deputy Prime Minister has the current responsibility of dealing with matters relating to conflict of interest and the guidelines by which Ministers are bound. It would therefore seem logical that the Deputy Prime Minister should continue to answer questions concerning conflict of interest, even if the Prime Minister were in the Chamber, unless the Prime Minister chose to deal with such questions himself. In this case he would be answering not as Acting Prime Minister; he would be answering, like any other Minister, for a matter falling within his assigned responsibilities.

In the final analysis, Ministers are under no obligation to answer questions at all, and the distribution of responsibility in answering them is a matter for the Government to decide. Any Minister may answer any question regarding a matter over which he or she has ministerial responsibility, although the Chair would ask Ministers to consider indicating to the House the ministerial capacity in which they are replying when that is not self-evident, in the way, for example, that the Deputy Prime Minister so explained his assigned responsibility for conflict of interest matters.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mr. Garneau (p. 12980).

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I see the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) seeking the floor. Since the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) has finished, his remarks, I must recognize the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp).

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise in the debate on the Bill dealing with federal contributions to the financing of post-secondary education and health care in Canada. It is particularly a privilege to take part in the debate because of the great importance of federal contributions in developing our health care and our post-secondary educational systems over the years. Those contributions were of enormous importance in the 1960s and 1970s, but very unfortunately they have declined in the last years. This has had the effect of creating uncertainty in post-secondary education and also in particular in our health care system.

I have only a few minutes this afternoon in which to take part in the debate by expressing my concerns.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The noise in the Chamber is not fair to the Hon. Member; it is simply not fair to the Hon. Member who has the floor.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): I have only a few minutes this afternoon to comment upon the proposals which the Government has put before us regarding contributions over the next years toward health care and post-secondary education. I want to take those minutes to comment particularly on the effect of declining rates of increase on our universities and colleges because it is there that the crisis in education, research, and the development of the country is most clearly to be appreciated. Our universities and colleges are important in achieving the kind of economy and society which we will require in the last years of the 20th century. Therefore, the proposals of the Government deserve very severe examination. We need to press the Government to reconsider its proposals and to open up the matter of financing for health care and post-secondary education as it deserves to be opened up.

Against this background of general observations, let us take a look in some detail at what has happened during the past 20 years in the development of support from the federal Government for post-secondary education. In fact, we could go back 20 years to a federal-provincial conference which was held in 1966. That conference arrived at understandings among the provinces and the federal Government for support by the federal Government toward post-secondary education. Under those arrangements the federal Government advanced 50 per cent of provincial contributions to post-secondary education to the provinces for those purposes. As a result universities expanded during the late 1960s and early 1970s. Particularly in the Province of Ontario universities finished their construction and were prepared to take in students. Enrolment in universities and colleges grew rapidly, and the support of the federal Government for these purposes was sufficient to meet the need. Through the mid-1970s the arrangements on shared cost financing of post-secondary education had been well developed under arrangements dating back to 1967.

All of these facts have been well surveyed by Mr. Al Johnson who is now a professor at the University of Toronto. The current issue of Policy Options has taken a look at the situation in universities. Mr. Johnson considered what took place from 1966 -67 through to 1977. He commented upon the efficacy and upon the usefulness of the system. Then he went on to say the following:

> This is what renders utterly incomprehensible, to me, the decision of the Trudeau Government, ten years later, to abandon the post-secondary education financing arrangements,

That one sentence expresses the astonishment of someone who has given close attention to the matter and conducted a study on post-secondary education for the last Government. He pointed out that the consequence of the established programs financing Bill, to which we are now considering some changes, had the effect of removing the shared cost arrangements between Ottawa and the provincial Governments. As a consequence, when Ottawa transferred funds to the provincial Governments, the provincial Governments were under no obligation to advance those moneys to the universities. They could use them, strings untied, for any purpose at all. As a result, provincial Governments have put less and less provincial money into universities and colleges. They have allowed more and more of the burden to be borne by the federal Government through these contributions because there was no check on them or no obligation at all, although one would think there would have been an obligation of honour.

I should like to refer to the eventual result in the worst cases. British Columbia poses a startling and stark example of how it could be abused. B.C. universities received less from their provincial Government than the federal Government had advanced to the Province of British Columbia for post-secondary education. In fact, the Province of British Columbia was making money on established programs financing.

The result has been that Canadian universities and colleges have not received the funds they needed in order to carry on their programs. When the federal Government cut back on its contributions in the 6-and 5-period, it exacerbated the problems which had been created by the arrangements of 1977. When the funds universities needed were growing by only 2.5 per cent in real terms while the number of students enrolling in universities grew by 27 per cent and the students enrolling in colleges grew by 36 per cent, a new Government came into office and contemplated the situation. What we were looking for from a new Government was for it to say that, for whatever reason, the Trudeau Government made a fundamental mistake with the 1977 Act. We needed to throw out the 1977 Act and try to return to the arrangements of 1967 and ensure that federal contributions matched provincial contributions so that the university and college system of the country would again be financed on the basis it should.

In an era when free trade is the issue before us all, the quality of the Canadian workforce, the techniques in our factories, the levels of production and the sophistication of the production we want to achieve are important issues. From the economic perspective, the importance of universities and colleges to advance our basic research capability is paramount. I say that not because I want to ignore the other areas of social and cultural importance that universities and colleges also support—because as a professor in an arts faculty I would hardly be ignorant of those things—but to emphasize the enormous economic importance of a strong post-secondary education system.

What has the Government given us? Instead of fundamental reform, it has rejected the EPF arrangements and rejected the development of a system in which federal contributions would encourage growing provincial contributions and adequate support of post-secondary education. We see changes being made in the spirit of six and five. We see the federal Government reducing the rate at which contributions to post-secondary education were expected to grow. We see provincial Governments being told that there will be less money than they expected and that the universities and colleges will have to do what they will.

In this context we see another failure of policy. Mr. Johnson says in his article that it was not that there was any plan here for a different way of doing things and it was not that Governments were saying: "Let's shift the burden to students." That is an action, though, which the Government conceivably might want to take. It might want to think that families and young people should be able to come up with the resources to support their own education, but it is not something my colleagues and I would favour at all. We would want to go in the opposite direction. We would want to see assistance to students expanded and the amount of tuition and other costs students have to bear for their education reduced. It is not that there is any such plan made explicit. There is nothing here except one instance of a Government's desperate desire to reduce its expenditures. It is one more desire to hold the lid on things without any serious recognition of what the consequences are going to be for the country.

I see that my time is almost up, but I want to express most serious alarm about the consequences for Canadian universities of the established programs financing and call upon the Government to abandon these arrangements, take up the report of Mr. Al Johnson and arrive at the kinds of arrangements that will give us the capacity in teaching and research which the country needs so desperately.

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak today in the debate on Bill C-96 to amend the 1977 legislation on federal-provincial fiscal arrangements and, more specifically, the contributions granted by the federal Government to the provinces for secondary education and health care.

My hon. colleague, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), has proposed an amendment to the Bill, urging the House to refuse further consideration of a Bill whose principle consists in unilaterally reducing federal payments to the provinces for post-secondary education and essential health services. I want to say that I give my unqualified support to this amendment by my hon. colleague from Laval-des-Rapides, because I think it is absolutely intolerable that the Government, after promising it would treat the provinces with civility, would never act unilaterally, and would ensure that any decision by the federal Government would be taken after prior consultation with the provinces . . . Well it is obvious that Bill C-96, the Bill before the House today, is a complete reversal of what the Conservative Government promised. Once again, this Government has failed to keep its word. Once again, the Conservative Government has failed to meet its commitment to the provinces of Canada. I fail to understand why there are no Ministers or Members from Quebec to protest this absolutely unconscionable decision on the part of the Canadian Government.

Indeed, according to the figures which we were provided with, the province of Quebec will lose some $2 billion over the next few years because of that decision reached by the Tory Government. Gilles Lesage, Legislative Assembly Reporter for —whom nobody would ever suspect of dark secessionist designs, is urging his federal counterpart to respect his commitments on equalization payments and to negotiate in good faith on fiscal arrangements, instead of transferring part of his deficit to the provinces, without the latter having their say.

Le Devoir, wrote the following on May 3rd, after the Budget brought down by the Quebec Finance Minister, and I quote:

The kind and gentle Gérad D.—

He is the Quebec Finance Minister.

Mr. Garneau: Right on!

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Lesage goes on to say, and I quote:

He is calling for fairness, justice, respect for the Constitution and regard for one's own word. Nothing less.

Mr. Speaker, such comments by the Quebec Finance Minister concerning this Conservative Government are clearly very serious. And nobody can claim that this is another of those famous federal-provincial bickerings that implied hostility between a Liberal federal Government committed to serving Canadian interests and a separatist Quebec Government committed to serving the interests of Quebec independence. One could understand at the time that there were not only opposing views but basically conflicting goals that necessarily led to confrontation between the provincial and federal levels, to public quarrels between those two Governments because there was no way they could agree on anything.

But now, Mr. Speaker, the situation is altogether different. We have here in Ottawa a Conservative Government which of course is respectful of provincial jurisdictions and which is committed to doing nothing without negotiating with the provinces, and in Quebec on the other hand we have a Liberal Government which is respectful of Canadian unity and which is only asking that this Government live up to its commitments. Indeed, columnist Gilles Lesage writes, and I quote:

So, Quebec is in favour of a Federal withdrawal from certain areas.

The Quebec Government fully understands that, under certain circumstances, the Government of Canada may wish to withdraw from certain areas. I quote:

But it cannot accept such a withdrawal without negotiations with the provinces and, more importantly, without a compensation in terms of fiscal transfers. It (the Quebec Government) wishes therefore a global negotiation of the major programs involved.

If Ottawa can no longer assume its responsibilities regarding some transfer programs, it should withdraw from these areas in return for a compensation in terms of additional tax points. The negotiations would determine the extent of the fiscal field to be allocated to the provinces which desire to assume fully their constitutional responsibilities.

Finally, the Quebec Government considers that a formal agreement between the two levels of Government would be the only way to confer on the fiscal arrangements a more permanent, stable, and less arbitrary character than the current arrangements.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious from reading this article that the present Conservative Government is not willing to proceed clearly, objectively, even honestly in its negotiations with the provinces.

During discussions with the provinces, the previous Federal Government had considered the possibility of transferring tax points. As we know, this has been done in the past. Tax points have been transferred to the provinces in order for them to better assume their responsibilities.

I suggest the present Conservative Government has assumed an unspeakable attitude, and that my colleague the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) had every reason to move a motion calling on the House not to accept this Bill at this time. Why? Because this Bill will affect all provinces and cause them to lose billions of dollars over the next few years because of a unilateral decision of this Conservative Government.

Second, because the Government is merely transferring its own deficit to the provinces, which is entirely unacceptable in the present situation.

Third, because the Government has acted unilaterally, without the consent of the provinces and above all has failed to respect the tradition of federal-provincial arrangements. And also because during the last election campaign, the Conservatives promised to observe current arrangements for transfer payments to the provinces, especially for post-secondary education and health care services, because as we all know, there are some areas where costs have increased considerably and the provinces have to foot a much larger bill.

Today, it is utterly irresponsible on the part of the Canadian Government to withdraw from its commitments. It is leaving it up to the provinces to cope with an aging population which means more expenditures and health care, and it is letting the provinces foot the whole bill for post-secondary education, a sector that is extremely important to a country that wants to hold its own internationally and that must have a well-educated and above all specialized population in order to meet international competition today.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I maintain that if this Bill is approved by the Government, it will be a disgrace for all those Conservative backbenchers who are shirking their duty, who are not defending the interests of their voters, and especially for that bunch of Conservative yes-men from Quebec who go along with anything the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) wants to do, in this case, deprive the province of Quebec, over the next few years, of $2 billion Quebec would need to adequately fund education and especially health care programs.

[English]

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, the effect of Bill C-96 is to reduce transfer payments to the provinces for the funding of health and post-secondary education. This legislation should, of course, be condemned. I hear one of the Government Members saying that it is all going to increase. That is an argument the Liberals could have made. They, of course, exhibit their own inconsistencies of argument.

It is not really enough to condemn this legislation. We should be censoring the Government, not only for policies inconsistent with the role and necessity of post-secondary education in the country, but for a variety of policies and policy failures which seem to be designed to place the university and college system at a level equal to that of a fourth or fifth-rate nation.

There are those who would want to address the issue of the funding of health care and the effects this legislation will have on the hospitals, patients, and healthcare workers of the country. However, I think it is time to focus on the terrible inconsistency between what the Government says it stands for and what this legislation reflects. I have heard many speakers refer to the fact that the Government claims to be committed to having Canada enter into the late 20th century competition in science and technology, compete effectively in international markets, and use secondary manufacturing and research and development to ensure that our resources benefit us commensurate with their value, which can be enhanced by the entry into the equation of human creativity and so on. This morning we heard of the concern of the Science Council about the failure to anticipate what the result will be of the failure to develop a sound science and research policy for the free trade negotiations and what could be the free trade fact of the future.

Perhaps it is time to reflect on what the universities and colleges of our country mean to us. There is no doubt that universities provide a place where basic research occurs and knowledge is expanded in a fashion which will materially affect our future economic growth, although we sometimes infer from the positions which the Government takes that it is not completely cognizant of the relationship between basic science and industrial development and the fact that one cannot contrive basic research in order to accord with whatever notion one has of economic development and the growth of technological industries. Although the role is significant, it is significant in a way which politicians sometimes cannot quite understand.

I think it is time to emphasize the fact that it is not only technological and hard science research which occurs in universities. The university is a place where knowledge is expanded and new knowledge is discovered. This new knowledge contributes to the civilization, humanization, and economic development of our country. As well, we must emphasize that the university is a place where young people learn and teaching occurs. Leadership develops there, as do the people who are going to continue to contribute to Canada as a civilized place to live. It is also a place where opportunity can be gained by so many of our people who were not born with a silver spoon in their mouths. It is a place where people can break through the fences which have stopped them from making their mark in our society, a mark which in the past was determined by family background, class or whatever. It is in a sense a place of equalization of opportunity for so many people. Yet we have had a series of Governments which have failed to acknowledge the important role which post-secondary education should play in the development of policy.

A number of events have been affecting the university system. There have been a number of reports, including a royal commission in Nova Scotia, a commission in Ontario, as well as the Al Johnson Report and the Macdonald Report. There has been a great deal of formal focusing on concerns in the universities. There has been some expression on the part of the university community about the failure of the federal and provincial Governments to arrive at an agreement for a system of funding universities and colleges in a way that addresses the very severe circumstances in which they are struggling. These circumstances have been a repeated topic of debate, so Government Members should be perfectly aware of the crisis in the university system.

The crisis takes a number of forms of expression. The most important is the increasing number of recommendations appearing in all these reports concerning substitutions for funding not being provided by the federal and provincial Governments. A recurring theme among many of these reports is the statement that universities can no longer continue to place the emphasis on accessibility which characterized the previous two decades. The argument seems to be that this has been done at the expense of the very best in our society, meaning those who in the past have had easy access to university by virtue of wealth or family position. We have reports which say that fewer young people should go to university. We have reports which say quite explicitly that the trend towards equalization of opportunity, which has characterized the last two decades, should be turned around. Perhaps we should have fewer of the poor, fewer mothers, fewer disabled and fewer minority members attending university because that compromises the ability of universities to do research.

There has been another suggestion, that if we need to fund university research, then let's hook up the universities to industry. Let's make grants conditional upon an equivalent contribution by industry. The universities should be more pragmatic, connected more to the economic process in the surrounding communities. However, what we will then find is that basic research, which is so essential to universities, is going to be sacrificed. More important, the university and college system will be steered in the direction of priorities established by business people and corporations which would like the universities and colleges to be their handmaidens. The results are clear. It would mean less emphasis on teaching. If the university fails to teach, then it fails to fulfil its mission.

I could go on citing the effects of no policy or bad policy or inconsistent policy, and my colleagues would have me continue as well. However, I see you crossing your hands, Mr. Speaker, and as a consequence I shall concede the floor to the next speaker.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, it gives me a great deal of pleasure to rise to speak once again on this Bill. In particular, it gives me the opportunity to ask the Government to correct an error in judgment. The Ministers concerned should go back to their provincial counterparts, the Ministers of Education and Ministers of Health and Welfare, and get the proper input so that we can avoid the drastic effects which are possible as a result of this Bill.

Like every other elected Member of this House, whether Minister, Parliamentary Secretary, back-bencher or, as my hon. friend from committee would say, private Member, I have a fundamental duty and responsibility to respond to the needs of my constituents. With that in mind, it is kind of sad that I have had to defend the needs of my constituents on so many occasions over the last few weeks. I have had to stand up and ask for an employment equity Bill which will allow the targeted groups, such as visible minorities, women and the handicapped, real access to real jobs. I have had to stand up and talk about the competition Bill and the real fear of people in my riding, indeed across the country, about the concentration of power and the fact that there is a sense of powerlessness in addressing those concerns. And here I am again, speaking, as I did the other day, on a Bill which addresses itself to equalization payments.

I do not believe there is anyone in this House who does not have a real sense of compassion and concern for the health of our society and its communities. We are concerned about education, particularly the education of young people. I, for one, am also concerned about the education of women, particularly those who are coming back into the workforce. This Bill can have very negative effects on the lives and future potential of many of those people. When you cut funding for education and health care, you are damaging the quality of life in this country, a quality of life of which Canadians have been very proud.

As Members of Parliament, our pathway to this House has been people. Our success here is determined by how we are able to meet the needs and concerns of the people in our society. I think it would be very wise for the Government to reconsider its plans, readdress its programs, and focus its agenda by discussing these issues with its provincial counterparts. I can say in retrospect from my seat here in the Parliament of Canada, along with all of my colleagues, that it is my responsibility to react to and to formulate the laws of this land. I see and I appreciate even more the partnership role one finds within the volunteer sector and this parliamentary wing of our society.

Those of us who ignore the groups which come to speak to us, the volunteers who give freely of their time, effort, energy, concern and consideration, do so at our peril. The volunteer sector fulfils a very vital and key need in our institutions, particularly in our health care institutions. They cannot do the whole job. The volunteers bring caring, sharing, thoughtful consideration, concern and interest with respect to the programs that we have put into place. They are less rigid, less formal and can respond to the needs of the citizens. Because of the bureaucratic nature of our institutions, schools and hospitals, we must keep in mind what is being said to us. We are very vulnerable in the kinds of cuts we may make. If you allow this Bill to go back for consultation the institutions in the provinces are in a better position to start to consider where they may tighten their belts without adversely impacting on either the education or the health structures in the provinces.

We cannot just tell the Canadians to pay their taxes, we must decrease the deficit. You also have to consider the quality of life and where you are going to make up for what you consider to be the key factor in all your deliberations and all the policy positions, that is, the reduction of the deficit. The deficit should be reduced, and I hope that you and I together can find effective and efficient ways to reduce it, but not on the backs on our youth, their potential for education and their future, and not on the backs of the sick and the elderly. Hospitals are already overcrowded, and there is a need for excellence in these services and for the development of new and ongoing programs to meet increasing needs.

This is a society that is undergoing stress. There is tremendous need for mental care. There is tremendous need for facing up to what happens when people lose jobs and lose their sense of self-worth. We will pay more in terms of cost of service to ourselves if we are not wise, careful and capable in the decision as to where we will cut.

As reported at page 12888 of Hansard, I asked the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall) what she felt and how she responded to the concerns that were expressed in the Quebec Budget. Her answer was the following:

—the Minister of Finance for Quebec reflects some misunderstanding of the formula which was arrived at last year.

I think this indicates a lack of consideration and concern, and indicates even more strongly the need to go back and consult with the provinces.

There was an article in The Gazette referring to a questin of mine, and although it does not attribute the question to me, I did ask it. "Quebec surtax not Ottawa's fault: McDougall". The article, covered by CP, says:

Quebec has misunderstood the formula for calculating federal aid for the provinces if it believes Ottawa is to blame for a multi-million-dollar provincial surtax imposed Thursday, junior Finance Minister Barbara McDougall says. McDougall told the Commons that Quebec received fully half of a special equalization payment granted to several of the poorest provinces last year, but because the Quebec economy is doing better than forecast 'the payment does not work out quite the way it did' at first glance. McDougall did not elaborate on how the misunderstanding might have occurred but reiterated that while the growth of the payment has been slowed they will continue to grow faster than the rate of inflation.

Quebec Finance Minister Gérard D. Lévesque announced a $152 million surtax on companies, municipalities and provincial Crown Corporations in the budget he presented Thursday.

He said the surtax was designed to make up for a $148 million shortfall in payments to Quebec from Ottawa intended for health care and post-secondary education and as part of Quebec's equalization payments.

The article goes on to point out that Robert Bourassa said the following:

—Ottawa is discriminating against the province by denying it $66 million it is owed in health and higher-education payments.

Liberal MPs have also demanded in recent weeks that federal Finance Minister Michael Wilson honour a commitment that equalization payments to Quebec not drop by more than 5 per cent a year.

I suggest that this article should be read carefully. The payments to Quebec should return to the 95 per cent floor. If this Government thinks they should be 92.8 per cent, then I would point out strongly that this is one more demonstration of lack of understanding, lack of good faith, and, as might well be the case, lack of goodwill.

I heartily approve the move by my colleague to delay this Bill until it goes back for rediscussion of its implication for the provinces.

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet)—Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation—Rural and Native Housing Program; the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano)—Unemployment Insurance (a) Date of Decision to Apply Regulation with Regard to Early Retirees; (b) Inquiry How Minister can Pretend to Have Informed Beneficiaries in Advance; the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell)—Young Offenders Act—Introduction of amendments—Minister's position.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mr. Garneau (p. 12980).

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, yesterday when I spoke on the amendment to this Bill I mentioned that this was not a time to be reducing the total amount of expenditures for health care and post-secondary education. I think all Members would agree that whatever funds the federal Government provides for health care and post-secondary education, the federal authority, in order to carry out its responsibilities, must make sure that those funds are spent well and efficiently from an administrative point of view for the delivery of health and educational services by the provinces.

We say there is probably a greater need for the federal Government to examine more closely, through agreed upon audit procedures, how well the provinces are distributing those funds, whether or not they are being distributed for purposes that they were intended, and if they are not, whether funds are withheld. That is perfectly legitimate. So a province such as British Columbia, as my colleague who spoke earlier mentioned, cannot, so to speak, abscond with funds meant for universities and then put them into something else. In other words, their funds are conditional on their being spent for what they were meant to be spent on, and that they are administered efficiently.

When you consider the economic conditions of Canada's population over the last few years and the way they are likely to be for the next two or three years, this is the worst time of all to reduce the amount that we should be contributing in both health care and post-secondary education. Today, we are experiencing a depression. In previous depressions we were always asked where we would get the money. Tommy Douglas quoted a Minister of Finance at that time who asked a young person whether he thought money grows on gooseberry bushes. When the war started in September, 1939, Tommy said that they found the bush. There was lots of money at that time.

In times of economic depression, when Governments are having difficulty in obtaining funds, that is the worst and least valid kind of argument to make. Governments can arrange financing much easier than individuals, universities or hospitals.

The most positive aspect of it is that the nation as a whole shares in the cost, whether it is through current tax revenues or borrowed funds which are repaid by future tax revenues.

Today, tens of thousands of people are lining up at food banks—a euphemistic name for soup kitchens—in scores of cities throughout the country. Furthermore, a higher proportion of our population is elderly and in need of health care. Therefore, this is the worst time for the Government to be reneging on a fifty-fifty agreement. This is the worst time and these are the worst areas in which to hold down or reduce expenditures in the name of deficit reduction. In fact, any self-respecting Government would not even consider these as programs to hold down or reduce expenditures. In light of today's conditions, the Government should be expanding those facilities.

Even during the "hungry thirties", a Conservative and Liberal Government brought in better care for tubercular and cancer patients when there was little or no money available because that was the best time to bring in those kinds of programs.

The federal Government should tell the provinces that it will continue its 50/50 sharing, including sharing the cost if the provinces wish to improve or expand their health care systems or university programs, as long as they are in accordance with the agreement and respect the conditions under which the money is provided.

Provinces should be able to provide financial and equipment incentives to the medical profession so that there is a better distribution of doctors in our smaller cities and remote areas. Their respective medical care plans should provide extra money, housing and medical equipment to those doctors as an incentive to go to the remote and the small cities in order that there will be a more equitable distribution of doctors in this country.

I recently saw a television program describing the latest equipment that technology has developed. This equipment, whether it is a kidney dialysis machine or heart transplant equipment, costs hundreds of thousands of dollars. There must be a fifty-fifty cost sharing for the provision of that equipment not only in big city hospitals but throughout the country.

Let me deal with ambulance services. I have a close friend who worked in the ambulance industry. He told me that it is safer and quicker to take a taxi to the hospital if one is suffering from a heart attack. He described a situation where the most experienced paramedic would drive the ambulance while the new recruit would look after the patient in the back. Ambulance services should not be subject to the profit considerations of a private owner. They should be owned and operated by hospitals, the municipalities or the provincial Department of Health. Those services should be completely under the authority of the health care department of the province or municipality. We should spend millions of dollars on paramedic training. There is a distinct shortage of paramedics in this country, for which there is no excuse.

Also, as Canadian nurses have informed us, many hospitals are understaffed. There is no reason why any federal or provincial Government cannot provide adequate nursing and a proper distribution of those nurses. That cost must be shared 50/50. Let us consider home care. Millions of dollars could be saved if people were looked after in their homes rather than occupying hospital beds. There is a great need for chronic care beds for people who are not ill enough to remain in a hospital bed but are too ill to be at home. There are waiting lists as long as your arm for chronic care beds in every city of this country. The federal Government should be willing to share the cost if the provinces and territories increase the number of chronic care beds.

Midwifery is another area in which child birth, under the supervision of the medical and nursing profession, can take place in the home or hospital without the necessity of a physician being in full-time attendance. This may be opposed by some in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, but that is too bad.

Holland provides marvellous home care, chronic care and midwifery systems in conjunction with its medical practitioners. Countries such as Holland have led the way in these areas.

This is no time for the Government to be chiselling the amount of money it contributes. I do not know of any taxpayers who object to their tax money being spent for these purposes. I believe they would even accept an increase, as long as those taxes were fairly applied. I do not believe any Canadian wants to see those services restricted or cut back. Instead, they want a well managed and efficiently run health care system with well trained practitioners and enough equipment so that there will be equal opportunity for treatment for all Canadians, no matter where they live.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I notice that Conservative Members are not standing up to defend Bill C-96. Is it any wonder that they are not defending an otherwise indefensible piece of regressive legislation?

This legislation illustrates the Government's problem with respect to integrity and credibility. During the last election campaign, the Conservative Party made well over 300 promises. One of the major promises it made was that it would not reduce federal transfer payments to the provinces but in fact would increase those payments. That was a promise made in Sherbrooke, Quebec, on July 26, 1984.

The Conservative caucus promised that they would respect the federal obligation to fund provincial health care through established programs financing and make additional funds available to the provinces on a cost shared basis for the Established Programs Financing Act and make additional funds available to the provinces on a cost shared basis for the establishment or enrichment of programs deemed most likely to improve the general level of health and limit long-term costs. That was the promise, and what has the Government decided to do with respect to that particular promise? It has decided not only to break that promise but to breach a previous commitment made by the Liberal administration to provide an adequate level of funding to the provinces for health care and post-secondary education. There was an agreement in place with the provinces. They fully expected to receive a specific amount of money from the federal Government in order to fund health care and post-secondary education. This Government has decided unilaterally to breach that particular agreement. It has decided to transfer to the provinces over the course of the next six years $8 billion less than what the provincial Governments expected to receive under the previous commitment.

What happened to the promise of consultation? What happened to the promise made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) after the last national election campaign that the country had embarked upon a new era of national reconciliation? You will recall those words, Mr. Speaker. I ask, where is the new era of national reconciliation? Because not one single, solitary provincial Government has agreed to the specific measures contained in Bill C-96. In fact, the provincial Governments have roundly condemned the federal Government for breaching the previous commitment and threatening the very foundation of Confederation by withdrawing over $8 billion, which would otherwise have been transferred to the provinces over the next six years.

David Peterson, the Premier of Ontario, pointed out to the Prime Minister at the First Ministers' Conference that what the Government was intending to do was to transfer the national problem, the national deficit, to the provincial Governments. Mr. Nixon, the Ontario Treasurer, pointed out that there was a uniform opposition to Ottawa's plan. Nobody thought it was a good idea. Mr. Gérard Lévesque, the Quebec Finance Minister, said it was not fair to the provinces because they had been counting on the amounts agreed to in the accords.

Notwithstanding the universal opposition of the provincial Premiers and Ministers of Finance, the Government decided to cut $8 billion.

The Government has decided to cut just under $3 billion in provincial transfer payments over the next six years to the Province of Ontario. I note that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) is in the Chamber today. I would like to point out to him, if he is not already aware of it, that in his home Province of Newfoundland there will be a reduction of $188 million. Where was the Minister of Justice when that particular decision was made? Was he consulted? Did the Minister of Justice, the Minister responsible for Newfoundland, stand up in Cabinet for the people of his home province? Of course he did not. He was afraid. The Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister said: "Sorry, notwithstanding your protestations, we are still going to cut $188 million in federal transfer payments to the Province of Newfoundland over the next six years".

What impact will that cut have on the province of the Minister of Justice? The Conservative provincial Government of Newfoundland will be faced with some very difficult decisions. No doubt that provincial Government, along with other provincial Governments, will have to cut back in the area of health care and education. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that we in Canada are blessed with the best health care system and post-secondary education in the world. As a result of the actions of the Government, that particular level of health care and post-secondary education is being threatened. It is unfair, regressive and, as I indicated earlier, it is a threat to the very basic roots of Confederation.

There are tough decisions which have to be made by the provincial Governments. The provincial Government of Ontario will be without $3 billion in federal transfer payments over the next six years. The Government knows that the only way the province could remedy that particular situation is either to raise taxes or to cut services. There is not much of a choice when the federal Government decides to withdraw $3 billion from the economy of the Province of Ontario. It is not fair that that particular Government has either to raise taxes or to reduce expenditures. If the province does decide to reduce expenditures, there will have to be cuts in health care and post-secondary education. The high level of health care we have learned to appreciate will be seriously affected. Provincial Governments will have to close hospitals, cut the number of hospital beds and cut back on such things as cancer research. The universities will have to cut back on the number of courses which are taught and cut back on staff. They will have to increase tuition fees. They might even have to consider charging other forms of user fees in order to make up the shortfall.

Why is the federal Government doing what it is doing? It is obvious that it is absolutely paranoid about the federal deficit. We on this side of the House are concerned about the deficit. We believe that Governments should be fiscally responsible and that we should not spend money without consideration of our national debt. However, if the goal is to reduce the deficit, surely it must be done on a fair basis. It must not be done on the backs of the disadvantaged. Surely it should not be done in a way that would threaten the quality of health care and post-secondary education.

Rather than recognize the serious implications of the measures it is about to take in Bill C-96, the Government is prepared, in order to reduce the deficit and to satisfy its friends on Bay Street and wealthy corporations, to have the average Canadian suffer and simply to push the deficit on to the laps of the provincial Governments. It is patently unfair. Certainly the provincial Governments and all other interest groups will take the opportunity to appear before the committee when this particular Bill is referred to committee. I hope that the Minister of Justice will appear to defend the federal Government on this particular piece of legislation. The people of Newfoundland will be out close to $200 million over the next six years as a result of the broken promise of this particular federal Government. I hope that the Minister will at least have the courage of his convictions and will stand up and explain that to the people of his province.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to make a few remarks about Bill C-96, a most unfortunate Bill which will reduce the growth rate of the federal per capita transfers to the provinces for health care and post-secondary education. These transfers are an important federal contribution which help provinces meet their constitutional responsibility for the areas of health and post-secondary education, which make sure that people all across Canada have access to more or less the same standards of health care and post-secondary education, and which use the ability of the federal Government to raise revenue through taxes, an ability which is greater than that of the provinces, to make sure that the provinces are able to provide adequate services.

Over the next five years, Bill C-96 will see some $5 billion cut from the ability of the provinces to spend on health and post-secondary education. This amount is cumulative. It begins with a relatively minor amount and then builds up each year until it will total $5 billion by 1991. It is slowly but surely undermining a system that has been built up by previous generations. The effects of Bill C-96 will not be felt too much at first but will be devastating in its final impact.

Perhaps I could use British Columbia as an example. In 1986-87, the current fiscal year, British Columbia stands to lose some $36.8 million as a result of this Bill. Next year that figure will be $77.4 million, the year after $123.7 million, then $173.8 million, and in 1990-91, the figure will be $230 million for a total of $641.8 million over the next five years.

If we had listened to and believed what Conservative Members said when they were in opposition or when they were campaigning during the last federal election, we would be in a state of shock because of the Bill before us. I am sure some Canadians must be in a state of shock, particularly those who were naive enough to have listened to what Conservative Members were saying without listening to what the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) said between the lines.

The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) had this to say regarding Bill C-12, the Liberal Government's six and five program:

> First and foremost, Bill C-12 is still a tax grab by the Government. In the 1983-84 fiscal year the Government is able to reduce its projected transfers to the provinces for post-secondary education by almost $120 million and next year that reduction will amount to $260 million. That is the kind of tax grab the Government is getting into with this Bill.

The Minister, when she was in opposition, was concerned about a tax grab of $260 million under the 6-and 5-program. Now we are talking about a tax grab of some $5 billion, and she is applauding it.

During the 1984 election campaign, members of the Progressive Conservative Party stated the following:

> We are committed to sustaining the current federal financial commitment, according to the formula set out in the 1977 Agreement... We believe that financing of post-secondary education is an important priority for both levels of governments.

That commitment was made during the election campaign. Where is that commitment today? Just like so many other commitments Conservative Members made, it is forgotten in their blind fixation on reducing the deficit.

Mr. Benjamin: Should have got that in writing.

Mr. Manly: It was in writing but it did not seem to help.

Mr. Benjamin: They didn't sign it.

Mr. Manly: What we need in writing is the resignations of some of those Ministers over there.

The effect of this Bill will be a two-tiered health care system. Dr. Bill Vail of the Canadian Medical Association, in response to the tabling of this Bill, said the following:

> We will have one quality of health care in the rich provinces and second or third rate services in the poor provinces. The dream of Canadians of having access to reasonably comparable health services, no matter where they live or travel, appears to have been abandoned by the Government of Canada.

Dr. Vail went on to point out that the provinces that are going to be particularly affected by this are Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and, to some extent, Quebec and Manitoba. Where are the members of the Conservative Party from those provinces? Why are they not speaking up against this Bill which will have such a disastrous effect on health care in their provinces?

The Canadian Association of University Teachers pointed out that cuts to post-secondary education are going to mean a $1.7 billion shortfall over the next five years. What will be the results of this $1.7 billion shortfall? It will mean that there will be restricted enrolment. There will be increased fees, and that will mean that the children of rich parents will be able to get into universities from which the children of middle-income, working-class parents will be excluded. Children from communities that are far away from university centres will not have access to education because they will not be able to pay the additional tuition costs as well as the higher costs for room and board.

The $1.7 billion shortfall will result in lower standards of teaching and in less research taking place in colleges and universities. In short, the shortfall will result in second-rate universities and second-rate graduates. The result of second-rate graduates will be a second-rate country as a result of this second-rate Government's legislation. Where is the pursuit of excellence about which Conservative Members spoke when they were running for office?

Time after time, we on this side of the House have spoken of the Tory fixation on the deficit. We agree that the deficit is something that has to be looked at with concern, but how are Tory Members dealing with it? They are dealing with it by cutting back in ways that will harm our country's future. Our Party has made a number of suggestions as to how the deficit should be approached, including a system of fair taxes in which everyone pays their fair share, the elimination of waste and the creation of jobs. We should put people back to work instead of cutting back on essential services like health care and post-secondary education.

Those of us who come from British Columbia saw the results of this kind of idiotic cut-back mentality in the last four years. Cut-backs have created a deliberate depression in British Columbia. I would like to remind Hon. Members from all sides of the House that British Columbia is the only province in Canada in which the employment rate has not yet recovered to pre-recession levels. There are 50,000 fewer people working in British Columbia today than in 1981. That is a direct result of the kind of cut-backs that the Province of British Columbia has been implementing over the last four years, the kind of cut-backs that we are seeing implemented by the present Conservative Government.

It is interesting to note that Premier Bill Bennett of British Columbia was the one Premier who did not oppose Bill C-96. He did not oppose these cuts when they were announced because he felt that they were right in line. In fact, he boasted that because British Columbia had cut the percentage of its Budget that was devoted to health care and post-secondary education, the federal contributions as a percentage of those expenditures would actually increase.

In 1979-1980, British Columbia spent 36 per cent of its budget on health and post-secondary education. Five years later, that figure had been reduced to 34.7 per cent. British Columbia is now spending a smaller percentage of its budget on these essential parts of life than it was previously. British Columbia began its program by laying off 2,000 workers, by closing 1,200 hospital beds, by laying off 10 per cent of community college instructors, and by cutting whole departments in universities.

I urge members of the Conservative Party to look at what happened to the economy of British Columbia over the last four years. They should ask themselves whether they want to see that pattern repeated in the rest of Canada. If they look at it, I am sure they will want to change their minds about Bill C-96. I am sure they will want to ditch the Bill and bring in a piece of legislation which will restore adequate financing to our universities and health care system.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I hesitated for a moment because I hoped that one of my two favourite Ministers who are present in the House today might choose to rise and say a few words on Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977. I would have liked to hear what the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) might have had to say about the Bill. However, I draw to the attention of the House, and I hope to other Canadians in the gallery and elsewhere in the country, that I have never heard before in the history of Canada about a budgetary measure which has not been defended by a Minister of the Crown during its whole progress through the House.

Bill C-96 was introduced by the Government. It is a budget Bill. However, not one Minister has risen to try to defend it or to try to put forward the Government's case with regard to a measure to which we take so much objection. We in the Liberal Party have tried—and I know the NDP has tried as well—to use every way we can to slow the Bill down in order to bring to the attention of Canadians what is being done here.

I have had the opportunity to speak on another amendment, and I am glad to speak to the amendment of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) which asks that the House declines to proceed with a Bill, the principle of which is to reduce unilaterally payments by the federal Government to the provinces for vital health care and post-secondary education services.

No Minister of the Crown wants to speak on the Bill, because they like to travel around the country—and in particular I refer to the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall)—telling Canadians that they are increasing payments to the provinces for health care and post-secondary education.

Mr. Redway: They are.

Mr. Lanthier: They are.

Mr. Kaplan: Indeed, some back-benchers have piped up that they are. Let us settle that now. It is true that payments will increase, but if the Bill were withdrawn, the payments would increase by much more than they will increase as a result of it. The Bill reduces the increases to a face-saving, camouflage amount in each year. I challenge any Member, listening to me and making the remark that they are increasing, to deny that the Bill reduces the amounts which would otherwise be paid in each Canadian province over the next six years.

I do not want to make only a general statement about it. I know I only have 10 minutes under the new rules, but I want to put forward the exact figures which we were able to calculate from the material put forward by the Government. They say that payments will increase, but the fact is that payments will be cut compared with what they would be if the Bill could be stopped. That is why I ask people such as the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway), who is paying such close attention to what I have to say, to vote with the Opposition to prevent this nefarious measure from going forward.

I should like to refer to my Province of Ontario. If this Bill were stopped, we would be able to save for the people of Ontario in these two programs $114 million in 1986-87; $250 million in 1987-88, $400 million in 1988-89, $500 million in 1989-90, $750 million in 1990-91, and $916 million in the final year of this six-year period, 1991-92. How can Ontario Conservative Members stand up and vote for a repressive measure about which Ministers will not even talk? As I said before, for the first time in history no Minister has taken the trouble to try to defend a budget Bill which is taking away $3 billion from the health care and post-secondary education programs of Ontario. I urge Ontario Conservative Members not to take away this money from their fellow Ontarians and not to take away billions from the other provinces. I am only talking about my own province, and I see that a Conservative Member from Ontario is listening to what I have to say. However, I could make the same plea, as my colleagues have done, to Conservative Members from other provinces. Bill C-96 does not increase payments to the provinces. It takes away payments from the provinces.

I should like to talk about the programs from which the Conservatives are taking away. It is interesting to note that the health care support and the post-secondary education support of the federal Government have a very special background. We have put money into health care from the national Treasury, from federal taxpayers, not in the way in which we supported other initiatives of the province in which we believed. It was special. When the program was set up, the federal Government encouraged the provinces to do it. The provinces were against medicare. The Province of Ontario did not want Canadians to have a medicare program—it was a Conservative Government back in the mid-1960s. In fact, when medicare was set up, it refused to enter the program for several years. It stood back and refused to be part of it. We have medicare in Canada, even though it is within provincial jurisdiction, because of a special responsibility which the national Government assumed to support it. All these years we have supported it generously.

What have the Conservatives done without making any announcement about it? Certainly they did not campaign on it. In fact, they said that they would cut the deficit by removing Government waste from the activities of the federal Government. That is where the billions in savings were to come from. They indicated that there was so much waste and extravagance that good programs could be continued. Now the cards are on the table. Ontario and other taxpayers are getting it in the neck.

Instead of finding all the alleged waste and extravagance which they were to cut, they are cutting one of our most important programs—the national health care program, which would not have been in place if the federal Government had not promised to stand behind it, and if Liberal Governments had not stood behind it for many years. Today we see it being cut back, and health care programs have never needed support more than they do now. Senior citizens are increasing as a percentage of the population. They, more than the rest of us, rely on health care programs, and they voted for the Conservative Government. They are the ones who are getting it in the neck. Before turning to the post-secondary education betrayal, about which I also want to make a comment, let me ask the following questions about health care.

How do they expect the provinces to cope with it? They are saying that the health care program is riddled with waste and extravagance and that provincial Governments can cut back on health care and save money without reducing services to people. They were misrepresenting the situation, perhaps unintentionally, when they talked about the big savings in waste and extravagance in the federal household. They are misrepresenting the situation also when they talk about waste and extravagance at the provincial level. I know where the savings will come from at the provincial level. What choice do the provinces have? Ontario is the best off. Will hospital beds be cut? Will emergency departments be cut? Will health care for senior citizens be cut? Will medical research for cancer be cut? Will hospitals be closed? Will user fees have to be introduced by provincial Governments or hours of service by hospitals? What is the answer in Ottawa when serious questions are asked? "You can find the money. We couldn't cut waste and extravagance in Ottawa but you in the hospitals across the province in the health care centres, in doctors' offices, can cut waste and extravagance".

That will not wash, Mr. Speaker. I hope Ontario Members at least will do the decent thing. If no Minister is prepared to stand up and defend these horrible cuts, why should the backbenchers defend them?

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of any Government Minister rising to defend Bill C-96, it falls to me to attack the Bill and to do so along the lines that have been so ably expounded by my colleagues.

It is a sad day when Opposition Members are left to carry on the entire debate on Bill C-96. Bill C-96 should offer an opportunity for the Government to expound the way in which it is handling its election promises. What is the Government here for if not to put those promises into effect? It appears that the silence on the Government side is very well justified. Perhaps it is the best way for the Government to react. In Bill C-96 we have one of the clearest examples of a Government that has retreated so far from its election commitments as to be in a position now, notwithstanding my hon. friend to my left, of being turned around 180 degrees away from the position it took before the election of September 4, 1984.

Let me quote from the PC campaign handbook. In doing so I know Members opposite will understand that I only do it to bring attention to their own words. I am not doing it in spirit of meanness or gloating that the Conservatives are not living up to their commitments. I am doing this to inspire in them the noble sentiments of remorse that they are not living up to their commitments they collectively and, I am sure, individually made at the time.

An Hon. Member: Let us hear some good news.

Mr. Parry: We would have heard something good had the Government kept its word and lived up to its commitment.

It says here:

P.C. Position

We would return to the 1977 funding formula—

And then, somewhat of a crocodile tear given today's circumstances, it goes on:

—though we cannot compensate the provinces for their 6 and 5 funding losses.

Let us analyse the statement "We would return to the 1977 funding formula". Far from returning to it, the Government is dancing in the ruins of the 1977 funding formula. Having seen the Liberals beat it to the ground, the Conservatives are now busily engaged in trampling the debris. Next is the statement, "though we cannot compensate the provinces for their 6 and 5 funding losses". Far from compensating the provinces for those losses, the Progressive Conservative Government is subtracting further from the six and five losses over the 1977 funding formula.

That brings me to the whole specious and totally insupportable argument used by the Government in putting forth the cuts it is proposing. What it has said is that the growth of transfers in the Established Programs Financing Act will be reduced by 2 per cent. On the other hand we see the Conservatives' true colours in the 1985 Budget in transfers to provincial Governments. Under the heading of Total Expenditure Reductions and Cost Recovery, it shows a reduction of $2 billion. This brings into question the whole philosophical and economic principle of what is a dollar. The only legitimate measure for a dollar is not the simple numerical index, it is what the dollar will buy. Purchasing power is the only measure of a currency's worth. That is a principle which, if my hon. friend would dare to get up again to speak on this Bill, he would be only too happy to endorse and embrace.

The only measure of currency is its purchasing power. For the Progressive Conservative Government to say that there is no cut-back is false. It is at best misleading and at worst it is gratuitously deceptive.

There will be an increase in the nominal dollars transferred, but what the provinces will be able to buy with the dollars transferred will be 2 per cent less. It will be 2 per cent less next year, 2 per cent less than that the following year, and 2 per cent less than that in the following year. Savings to the federal Treasury will mount up, but the value of what is being transferred to the provinces for the legitimate, praiseworthy and fundamental operations of health care and education will be reduced.

Not only have the Progressive Conservatives broken their election promises, the effect is worse with Bill C-96 than the cuts imposed by the Liberals in this area of EPF.

The Government's action has been taken unilaterally. It was not taken in consultation with the provinces. No province came to Ottawa and volunteered to assist the federal Government in its deficit. Perhaps it would have been a good idea if that had happened.

Mr. Redway: Right on.

Mr. Parry: These cut-backs were not negotiated with the provinces, but imposed unilaterally. It is well to juxtapose that action with the way in which the Government rushed into the bank bail-out. The Government, after all, did not look for provincial participation in that bank bail-out, but it is putting the whole burden of the cut-backs in the establishing programs financing on to the provinces. It is essentially a transfer of the deficit to the provinces, which will have some very unfortunate consequences.

My hon. friend mentions the role of the provinces in transferring burdens to municipalities.

Mr. Redway: Right on.

Mr. Parry: I believe he was in municipal Government at the very time the province was carrying out similar cuts. If the Member did not speak out at that time against those unilateral cuts on the part of the province, then he was letting down his electors at the municipal level, however well he would be serving them at the federal level.

The federal Government is projecting a nominal GNP growth between now and 1990 at around 7 per cent, and the increase in the health and post-secondary education transfers will be 5 per cent. That means the provinces have to bear the difference.

I would like to quote some wise words on what happens when this sort of cut is made. They are as follows:

> First and foremost, Bill C-12 is still a tax grab by the Government. In the 1983-84 fiscal year the Government is able to reduce its projected transfers to the provinces for post-secondary education by almost $120 million and next year that reduction will amount to $260 million. That is the kind of tax grab the Government is getting into with this Bill.

Mr. Redway: Who said that?

Mr. Parry: My colleague asks who said that. I have to reveal with no great pleasure that it was the present Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) in addressing Bill C-12 brought in by the Liberal Government. I am sure that were she here, she would rise to explain how Tory cuts are different from Liberal cuts, because there is not only a substantial and highly attentive audience in this House for that sort of explanation, but I am sure most of the people of Canada would like to know the difference between Tory cuts and Liberal cuts. We know what the effect will be. We know that with these measures the federal share of health and post-secondary education financing will drop from a high in 1979-80 of 49.9 per cent, which is just a hair below the fifty-fifty split which was originally envisaged for established program financing, to, in 1990, a period of only 11 years, 36 per cent, which is slightly more than one-third.

• (1640)

The federal Government is washing its hands of responsibility to the people of Canada for the provision of health care and post-secondary education by the provinces. It is loading the responsibility on that level of Government which, as all Members of the House know, is well over-burdened with that sort of responsibility now. I believe that is shameful and I wish more members on the Government side would rise and say why they are prepared to support this type of measure.

[Translation]

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to contribute to this debate dealing with the transfers to provinces. As a matter of fact, I have here an article published in the Journal de Montréal newspaper with the following headline:

"Lévesque blames Ottawa for acting unilaterally"

This article appeared not in 1982, but on May 2, 1986, the day after the Quebec Government tabled its Budget.

Mr. Speaker, the new Quebec Government has been forced to impose additional taxes on businessmen in that province and increase the contributions to medicare to compensate for the $148 million it will not get from the Federal Government in 1986 and 1987. Honourable Members need only go back in time a year and a half to remember the statements made during the election campaign, when Conservative candidates were promising a new era of reconciliation. They insisted there would be cooperation between the Federal Government and the provinces. They said they were sick and tired of confrontation. Only a year and a half after promising that there would no longer be any confrontation, we are still reading such headlines as "Lévesque blames Ottawa for acting unilaterally".

Mr. Speaker, I should like to remind the House of what the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said on March 23, 1982, in his capacity as Finance critic for the Official Opposition, and I quote:

"The only sign it shows of cutting spending is by shifting the burden of the established programs funding on to the provincial Governments." " The provinces", said Mr. Wilson, "are now moving into a deficit position, a position which will make it more difficult for them to finance this shift in spending. That is not cooperative federalism. That is predatory federalism, and it will not and cannot work in this country".

That is what he said on March 23, 1982.

What has happened after... Now in March 1986, four years later, what change has he made, Mr. Speaker? For the Minister of Finance to say no... Not only has he failed to keep the stand he had taken in 1982, but he does not abide by what he said in the House, not such a long time ago, when he was guaranteeing at least 95 per cent of these payments. Now, he has decided to cut entirely, or part of it, including $148 million for Quebec, which is very serious, and the new Quebec Government has been forced to impose an additional tax on businessmen in that province to compensate for the $148 million it will not get from the Federal Government.

Mr. Speaker, we have figures here which show the impact Bill C-96 will have on the province of Quebec: a loss of $82.3 million for 1986-87; a loss of $174.9 million for 1987-88; a loss of $277.2 million for 1988-89; a loss of $389.2 million for 1989-90; a loss of $512.4 million for 1990-91 and a loss of $687.6 million for 1991-92, a total loss of over $2 billion. This is entirely unacceptable, Mr. Speaker.

How can anyone make such drastic cuts! Of course it is very easy for the federal Government since its deficit-reducing operation is done at the expense of the provinces. It reduces the federal debt, then tells the provinces to increase their deficit or slash expenditures for health care, education. The focus is on research these days because we want to help young people go into business and spur economic activities. Yet the Government intends to cut back to the extent that universities will be directly affected, so much so that they will be forced to eliminate the very research programs we need so badly to give young Canadians an opportunity to build a career and look forward to a promising future right here in this country.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, the Conservatives have shown that their promises are worthless. We need only recall what happened barely a few months ago, the Matane deal between the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Quebec Minister of Energy. There again, broken promises, treachery, broken words! What about the Quebec Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Speaker, who is so outraged that he wrote a letter to all the Members from Quebec, and especially to the Conservative Members, asking them if they had enough backbone to rise and protest against the fact that the federal Government once again was penalizing Quebec farmers operating in the potato industry! The last time, Mr. Speaker, it was in the Quebec Budget, and here is a quote from Le Journal de Montréal. In a report by Normand Girard, the now Quebec Minister of Finances is quoted as saying: "In the same declaration of war, the Quebec Minister of Finance stated that fiscal arrangements between governments should come under the umbrella of a formal agreement between the two levels of government, to give them a more permanent, were stable and less arbitrary nature than the current arrangements". What is the federal Government doing, Mr. Speaker? It moves overnight, unilaterally, failing to consult with anyone to cooperate or actually to ask the provinces whether they could live with those kinds of cuts. Is there a way to settle that? Of course, everyone is aware that we have a deficit at the federal level, but the provinces also have their deficits, Mr. Speaker. And the same taxpayers are footing bills, whether they come from Quebec or Ottawa. Why then did they promise a new era of consultation, of reconciliation? There would be no more confrontation, we would all march together for the good of the country. But today, Mr. Speaker, they find it easier to simply forget all their promises, such as the indexation of old age security pensions, unemployment insurance, the footwear and textile import quotas, and I could go on and on and on, Mr. Speaker. They forgot everything. They came here, they made a horrible about-face which certainly will be remembered by Canadians. And then they will get out as fast as they came in!

[English]

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, this is not the first opportunity I have had to speak on this legislation. However, I think there are many more things which have to be said with regard to it. The few members of the Conservative Party who have spoken have tried to paint a picture of New Democrats and Liberals taking their turns speaking against this legislation in the House of Commons because they are afraid to attack the deficit. That is not true. We are as concerned about the deficit as is any other group of Canadians. We in the New Democratic caucus have suggested ways of reducing the deficit to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and his Liberal predecessors. Most of the ideas which we put forward were based on a fair regime of taxation. More than once we have talked in the House about the need to reduce tax expenditures. We have talked about the need for a fairer system of taxation to ensure that the cleaning lady working for the Bank of Commerce is not paying a higher rate of taxation than is the Bank of Commerce itself. We have spoken about all of those things. We spoke about the bail-out of the oil companies and of Dome. We talked about the need to bring the whole financial system of the country under control, whether taxation or Government expenditures.

• (1650)

What the Conservative Members of Parliament have said is not true. It is not just Liberals and New Democrats who say that this legislation is bad. It is groups from all across the country. We have heard my colleague quote the Canadian university students. We have heard Members speaking on behalf of the Canadian Association of University Teachers. We have heard speakers on behalf of nurses, doctors and the Canadian Health Association. All those groups and individuals are concerned about this legislation. There are others who are also concerned. The provincial Premiers, Ministers of Finance, Ministers of Health and Ministers of Education are concerned. It is not just the NDP Premier of Manitoba, or the Liberal Premiers. The Conservative Premiers, especially those in the have-not provinces, are concerned.

Mr. Manly: Everyone but the Social Credit.

Mr. Murphy: That is the exception. I must admit I have not received a response from the Social Credit Premier. Let me quote from a letter from the Minister of Finance of the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador, dated April 22, 1986. He makes it very clear that he is responding on behalf of his Premier. He says:

> As no doubt you are aware, there has been extensive discussion of the matters covered by Bill C-96 at the official and ministerial level between the Federal and all Provincial orders of Government. These discussions included vigorous protests by the latter over the Federal intention to alter current EPF funding arrangements prior to May 1987.

That is the Conservative Minister of Finance of our easternmost province. That is the province the Tories tried to give away when they were drawing their map last week. This letter was written just before that, perhaps that explains why the map was drawn that way.

In any event, he said they are against this legislation. As we know, the present legislation had one more year to go. It should have covered the period from April 1, 1986, to the end of March, 1987. Despite the fact that promises were made that this money would be given to the provinces, the federal Government has decided to take the money back. As I indicated earlier, this is money based on which the provinces have already made commitments. They did not know that the federal Minister of Finance was going to change the law and reduce the amounts they would receive. As a result, they entered into negotiations with their hospitals, community colleges, universities, and the people who work at those institutions. They made commitments based on what the law of the land was and the fact that the federal Conservatives had not indicated their intention of changing that legislation.

I see the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) is in the House. It is unfortunate that he did not have an opportunity to hear the words of the Minister of Finance of his province. It is interesting that the provincial Minister is saying that the federal Minister of Justice is wrong, that he is not representing the interests of his province. If memory serves me well, I believe the Minister of Justice was, at one time in his probably too long political career, the Minister of Finance of that very province.

Mr. Crosbie: I was the father of medicare in Newfoundland.

Mr. Murphy: Yes. I think it was your grandfather who almost took the province into bankruptcy, if I remember correctly. Perhaps the family is trying to get back to its old traditions. Perhaps one of the reasons the Minister of Justice is not representing his province is that he wishes to see it go bankrupt again.

To be fair to the Minister, that has not always been his position. There was a time when he would get up in this House and talk about the need to make sure there was adequate funding for Memorial University. There was a time when he was concerned about the ability of the provinces to provide adequate medical service, especially in his own province. As he always does, he spoke with much eloquence about the need for the federal Government to recognize that responsibility. As soon as I find the page I intend to quote that Hon. Member because I think what he said then is so appropriate. I am sure that if he were let loose from his chain, he would be quite willing to get up and say it again. On February 7, 1984, just over two years ago, as reported at page 1139 of Hansard, the Hon. Member for St. John's West said this:

> The Province of Newfoundland, already strapped, already with a current account deficit, already with the highest per capita debt in Canada, is not going to be assisted by this Government.

He was referring to the then Liberal Government. He also said:

> This Government is going to grind Newfoundland further down, if it can do it.

Those were the quiet, unassuming words of the Minister of Justice at a time when the federal Liberal Government was introducing legislation which would restrict the growth of funding for post-secondary education.

Mr. Manly: He has been muzzled.

Mr. Murphy: It is interesting that that Minister, now muzzled, now demure, is not saying a thing when this Conservative Government is reducing funding for his home province even further. If the Liberals were grinding Newfoundland into the ground, where the heck are the Conservatives grinding Newfoundland to? What is below the ground? Are you grinding them into hell? Is that what you are saying?

We have quoted the Minister of Finance, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) when they were in opposition. They stood up and said that what the Liberals were doing was atrocious and should not be done. It was unilateral action which would hurt the health care system of this country. It would hurt young people, people in hospitals and nursing homes. That is what they said then, and they called for co-operative federalism. They said the provinces should be listened to. They would have used the letters I received from the Minister of Finance of the home province of the Minister of Justice and said they were sincere.

I know I am running out of time and I cannot quote any more Conservative cabinet Ministers. However, let me tell you that the people of their home provinces will remember what type of hypocrites they were collectively.

[Translation]

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, it gives me pleasure to contribute to the debate on this important Bill to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act of 1977. This Bill would reduce payments by 2 per cent beginning in 1986, which means that, during the next five years, the Conservative Government would take away $8 billion from the provinces. This would be for the next five years.

Before the September 1984 elections, this Government made over 300 promises, including a commitment not to change the federal transfers to the provinces.

• (1700)

Mr. Speaker, since the beginning of this debate, I have seen no Minister or Government Member defend the provinces. I can see the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) looking at me, and I would like to tell him once more that he should at least have the heart or the courage to defend the provinces. However, I see that, like many others, he does not have the courage to speak and to keep the promises made in 1984.

Mr. Speaker, I see that there are two Members from Quebec in this House, but they have not had the heart to rise until now. However, I hope that they will now.

I also see the Hon. Member for Lotbinière (Mr. Tremblay), who now takes it upon himself to make interjections. He has just woken up after sleeping in his seat for about an hour. It is time for you to defend your province!

Mr. Speaker, the Members for Quebec who are pretending—and I did say "pretending"—to defend our beautiful province have until 6 o'clock to act with courage and to show that, even though their leader, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), does not keep his promises, they are people of honour who have heart and who can defend Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, we saw what impact this decrease will have on the evening of the provincial Budget. We saw the impact of this $2 billion cutback when the Quebec Government was forced to impose a surtax on business benefits for the year 1986-87.

Such a surtax should bring in some $152 million during the current year, or an amount equal to the losses incurred as a result of the cuts made by this Tory Government, the so-called Government which is supposed to do everything, conclude agreements with the provinces without cutting anything—however they were the first to deny it and break their promises.

Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I wanted to try and encourage the Members from Quebec to rise and take part in the debate. However, I feel that this Bill is very important—and again I invite the Hon. Member for Lotbinière (Mr. Tremblay) who is busy gossiping over there to say a few words on behalf of the provinces and more especially on behalf of his own riding.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, it would perhaps be advisable to point out also to the Hon. Member that the reduction will affect post-secondary education, health costs, dental costs, etc.

An Hon. Member: Louder again!

Mr. Rossi: The Hon. Member will have every opportunity until 6 o'clock to speak. But you are as dumb as an oyster. You do not have the guts to stand up and defend the provinces.

Before I conclude, Mr. Speaker, I would say to the Hon. Member for Lotbinière, to the Quebec Members and also to all Government Members: There was a September 4, 1984, but there will be a September 4,1988. It is fast coming and you will see what will happen then.

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I also welcome this opportunity to take part in this debate—

Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please! Order, please! Order! Could we hear the Hon. Member for Richmond—Wolfe (Mr. Tardif), please?

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I also welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate on Bill C-96, which, as we have seen in the last few months, is just another unfair and extremely discriminatory measure.

Mr. Speaker, the title of the Bill is as follows: An Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977.

Mr. Speaker, this Bill is supposed to amend certain arrangement. I think we should remember the language used by this Government during the last election campaign. It was supposed to be the team that would bring harmony, communication and a climate of goodwill to its dealings with the taxpayers and the provinces. And now we have Bill C-96 amending certain agreements or arrangements that had been concluded between the parties concerned, that is, between the provinces and the federal Government.

Once again, we have here, at least in my humble opinion, a striking example of how this Government, which has now been in power for a year and a half, unilaterally attacks groups that are in no position to defend themselves. The injustice of it all is simply shocking—to decide unilaterally to recover millions of dollars, and oblige the provinces to use their own taxation powers to compensate for foregone revenue so they can continue to provide health care services and finance post-secondary education.

This is not the only case where the provinces were taken by surprise, where in fact they were held hostages in a situation which is altogether unacceptable. Who can forget the promises of this Government — and my colleagues have already mentioned this — to provide direct assistance to pork producers, not to mention the sheep industry. Seeing the Hon. Member for Lotbinière (Mr. Tremblay) reminds me of the Government promise to carry out a major project in his riding, but unfortunately he has not said a word about it since his election, and I am referring to the proposed phyto-protection laboratory in Victoriaville. There again they cut off $12 million without batting an eye.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Mind your own business!

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Another thing to keep in mind is what happened in the case of the sugar beet industry—

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Mind your own business! You can't even look after your own riding.

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, referring to stabilization—

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): What a foul mouth!

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): You should be as aggressive in the House of Commons as you were with your association president! It might do wonders for the economy of your riding!

Mr. Speaker, I have here a table which shows in mathematical and monetary terms the impact this—

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Dirty mouth! Brush your moustache and learn how to articulate!

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): —legislative measure would have in the Province of Quebec. I might point out that in 1986-87—

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): Sit down, foul mouth!

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Because of the distance between the Hon. Member from Lotbinière (Mr. Tremblay) and me, Mr. Speaker, I feel quite secure. He could not reach me with his fist. But I realize that if I were closer, he might probably blow his top as he did once before.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Could we agree to return to the debate on Bill C-96? I should appreciate if Hon. Members on both sides ... The Hon. Member for Richmond-Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) has the floor.

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us will make sure that in 1986-87, Quebec—

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): You do not know what you are talking about, Tardif!

Mr. Tardif (Richmond-Wolfe): —will lose $82.3 million. If it continues like this, by 1991-92, the Quebec Government, already faced with a difficult situation due to a major deficit, and in great need of its equalization payments to insure often essential and vital services, stands to lose as much as $2.083 billion. And that is the measure which the Hon. Member for Lotbinière (Mr. Tremblay) and his Quebec colleagues are willing to support, by keeping absolutely quiet, because they do not have enough courage to denounce it.

• (1710)

Mr. Speaker, there is also—

It would have been a lot wiser to speak out with your voice rather than with your fists, Sir. It would have been much more profitable for your political career!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, could you advise my honourable friend that he should mind what he says. I remind him that he is not in his office riding where once he could punch on the nose the chairman of his own county association.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I call both Hon. Members to order. Could we please let the Hon. Member for Richmond—Wolfe (Mr. Tardif) continue?

Mr. Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to bring to the attention of the House a statement made by the Quebec Minister of Agriculture, in which he stated that the Conservative group of Members who are representing, or have a mandate to represent, the interests of Quebec, had an obligation to react to the latest decision providing help to the Maritime potato growers while those in Quebec were totally ignored. Again, this is a shameful injustice which, unfortunately, not a single Member from Quebec raised or defended—

Mr. Speaker, in the budget brought down by the provincial Government last week, taxation measures had to be introduced unexpectedly to compensate for what the Province of Quebec would lose on equalization payments.

Mr. Speaker, it is my view that this measure, like many others, is a very clear example and a most obvious proof that this Goverment is much more concerned, much more ready to help multinational corporations, large banks, big corporations than small and average taxpayers. The legislation now before us, Bill C-96, is concrete evidence of this Tory Government's propensity to launch an attack on those who unfortunately have no alternative but to live with those cuts.

We have now before us, Mr. Speaker, an amendment which in the circumstances seems very reasonable to me. It reads:

"This House refuses to continue the consideration of this Bill, the purpose of which is to unilaterally reduce federal payments to the provinces for post-secondary education and health services which are essential.

This does not seem to be an unreasonable suggestion, but I regret to say that we are alone with the New Democratic Party in raising the issues. And we are being faced with a shameless, shocking stonewalling by those whose role should be to defend and represent the interests of their respective provinces.

The proposal as it now stands is to effect a colossal $8 billion cut, and we have a flock of Members who, although they are a large number, let everything go by without any reaction, representation, or comment whatsoever. Besides, as indicated earlier by my colleagues, not a single Minister had the courage and fortitude to rise and attempt in any way to defend the provinces which, in the circumstances, are being led to an extremely significant impoverishment.

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte Marie): Mr. Speaker, the people who are listening to us are probably disappointed and even discouraged at the attitude of the Conservatives. Mr. Speaker, this Bill is very important, not only for our institutions and for our provinces, but also for the people in each of our constituencies. The purpose of this Bill is to reduce the amounts allocated to two extremely important sectors of which most people have benefited in the past, namely health care and education.

Mr. Speaker, egoistically, like the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) himself, and without telling the truth, this Government has decided unilaterally to reduce payments to the provinces for health care and education.

Mr. Speaker, who is now being held hostage by a Government which, a while ago, introduced legislation to help people with deposits of over $60,000 in certain banks? After this, we might well ask: What does being a Conservative mean? Who do the Conservatives represent? They represent the wealthy, Mr. Speaker. Once more, we have a Bill which clearly shows the attitude, the incompetence, the ignorance, the carelessness of the Conservatives because no Conservative from Quebec has risen to speak. In 1979, when the Liberals, with the help of the New Democratic Party, defeated the Conservative Government, six Members of Parliament from Quebec, six Members of the Social Credit, did what the Conservatives are now doing and refused to stand up. At the following elections, they were defeated and rejected so that there is no longer a single Social Credit Member in this House, Mr. Speaker.

I have just come back from a tour of Quebec in Trois-Rivières, Saint-Hyacinthe, Quebec City—

An Hon. Member: There were not forty of you.

Mr. Malépart: I see that they are beginning to wake up, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member for Lotbinière—

An Hon. Member: He will be back.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, if Jean-Guy Dubois, the excellent Member for Lotbinière, were here, he would have risen to defend the people of Quebec. He would not have left to give his President a bloody nose; he would have remained in this House to defend the population. This is what he would have done.

An Hon. Member: More.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, let us see what impact this Bill will have if the Conservatives from all regions of Canada do not wake up. Our senior citizens will have to pay for the care they receive in hospitals or they will be refused admission to hospital because the provinces will not have enough funds to provide adequate services. Our young people are being abandoned and they do not have jobs because of the incompetence of this Government. Our youth will be even more disappointed now as the costs of post-secondary education will increase.

Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member who has just shouted could rise and speak to defend the interests of his constituents . . . Mr. Speaker, that is what those people cannot do.

Mr. Tremblay (Lotbinière): You have been away.

Mr. Malépart: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Lotbinière says I was away on a trip. I was on a trip in the Quebec City area, in your region, Mr. Speaker, in the riding of Saint-Hyacinthe and in Trois-Rivières, to defend the interests of early retirees whose unemployment insurance benefits were savagely cut by your Government, Mr. Speaker. I was paying my own way on this trip, to defend the people of Lotbinière who don't have a Member to defend them here in the House.

An Hon. Member: Resign!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, we have the people of Quebec City and Mrs. Lalande who defends the rights of people in need, who asked me to rise in the House to defend them because there is no Member, not even a Minister in Quebec City to defend their rights—

Mr. Speaker, this is all very distressing. I remember newly elected Conservative Members saying that first day: It is our turn now. And I am sure some of them got elected for the sake of the patronage jobs they could hand out. I am sure that was their primary motive. Some even wrote a nice letter to their constituents saying that if they wanted their name on a contract they would have to do this and they would have to do that. But they never mentioned Bill C-96. They never said they would be cutting the indexation of Old Age Security pensions or levying a tax on drugs, Mr. Speaker. They were interested in patronage. They beat the other guys and now they were top dog.

An Hon. Member: Shame!

Mr. Malépart: But when the interests of the province of Quebec are at stake . . . We see that the Minister of Finance, Mr. Lévesque and Mr. Bourassa have levied a special tax on businesses because the federal Government cut $66 million from its equalization payments to the province.

As in every other case, Mr. Speaker, our beloved Prime Minister who is visiting Tokyo—our national master of ceremonies—said, with his hand on his heart: I promise you will not lose a cent. But in the future, the people . . . He did the same thing to the elderly. Remember what Mrs. Denis told him: Charlie Brown, you lied to us! He said the same thing to any number of people, and the provincial Governments have just been given a taste of the same thing.

The people listening to us today and Hon. Members in the House know perfectly well that it doesn't mean much when our beloved Prime Minister puts his hand on his heart.

An Hon. Member: He doesn't have one!

An Hon. Member: He has no heart!

Mr. Malépart: As my hon. colleague said, he doesn't have one, Mr. Speaker. He puts his hand on his jacket.

Mr. Speaker, I wish a Conservative Member would stand up and tell us why he does not want to debate this Bill. Would it be that he does not agree with the Bill, that he is against it, that he thinks it is a shame that Quebecers are penalized once again, particularly since the Government recently had to find some money to help western Canada? It is as though Quebec were not even on the map. What is the use of defending the province? What are the Conservative Members doing here? I can remember that the former Member for Champlain did not hesitate to speak up. As everyone remembers, Mr. Jean-Guy Dubois was a staunch defender of farmers and Quebecers.

An Hon. Member: He will be back!

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, why is it that not a single Conservative Member and Minister . . . True enough, the Ministers from Quebec get $40,000 more and ride in limousines, but their only job is to attend official ribbon-cutting ceremonies. Ribbon-cutting is the only responsibility left to the Minister of State (Youth) (Mrs. Champagne). She gets $40,000 and a limousine to do that, Mr. Speaker, but what we are talking about is very important.

Our colleague from Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) has introduced an important amendment. Hon. Members ought to be able to stand up and convince their colleagues, at least those who are from Quebec. I can understand the Members from western Canada because they had all kinds of goodies, Mr. Speaker. But their Quebec colleagues never did get anything. There was Hyundai, but it was the Minister's wife who reaped all the benefits. Quebec lost everything. We ended up with nothing. And when I see . . . Mr. Speaker, you are signalling there are two. Not two, but 58! When the Member for Duvernay came on the scene he said he would make the oil multinationals toe the line. Gas prices went up. Do you know what he did? He bought . . . He changed business and bought a Mr. Muffler franchise. And he muffled the 58 Quebec Members—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Let us get back to Bill C-96.

Mr. Malépart: Indeed, Mr. Speaker, they have been fitted with mufflers, they are unable to speak to Bill C-96. I would like to know why they cannot talk about it. Is it because they agree with the Bill? They are ashamed of their convictions and do not dare say so? Or would it be that they are against the Bill but are afraid of their leader? They are afraid of the Prime Minister or of the Deputy Prime Minister? Stand up on your own two feet! Show some guts! Quebecers are not afraid of anything! Be brave. Stand up, you are either for or against the Bill.

I saw a program where the Hon. Member for Blainville—Deux Montagnes (Mrs. Landry) was heard to say: We the women of the Conservative Party will be there to make decisions, not to have a good time. Mr. Speaker, she did not stand up once to defend her interests. While we are debating, she reads and nods. She should have the courage to rise and speak up.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude by reminding my Quebec Conservative colleagues and friends that in 1979 there were six Quebec Members in the corner over there, six Créditistes Members who did not have enough courage to speak up one way or another. They remained glued to their seats. The electors simply turfed them out. That is what is coming, I hope that is what will happen to you.

• (1720)

[English]

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we are currently debating a motion that this House declines to proceed with a Bill, the princple of which is to reduce unilaterally payments by the federal Government to the provinces for vital health care and post-secondary education services.

There are a number of things which are very much wrong with this Bill. I do not think we can stress too often one of the most serious failures of the Bill, that is, through this Bill the Government is proceeding unilaterally to cut some $8 billion out of moneys which would otherwise go to the provinces for worth-while programs such as health care and post-secondary education. The Government may argue that this measure was already announced, or at least foreshadowed in its May, 1985 Budget, but that is not really the case. The Budget Speech did refer to a reduction of the federal EPF contributions, but made no mention of the date on which it would take effect. If one refers to Table 2.1 of the fiscal plan and Table 2, Chapter 5, of the Budget Papers published in May, 1985, one would find there no indication of a reduction for the fiscal year 1986-87. This shows that the Government was probably planning at that time to introduce changes at the end of the normal five-year term, that is, on April 1, 1987.

The Government waited until the Annual First Ministers' Conference, which was held on November 28 and 29, 1985, in Halifax, to make the formal announcement of specific changes and of the date on which they would take effect.

Why did the Government change its mind between the May 1985 Budget and the November 1985 Halifax Conference and decide to move the date ahead? To understand that move by the Government, we have to recall that this period coincides with the Government's decision to reimburse the uninsured depositors of the two failed banks, as a result of which the Government, I suggest, realized that it would not be able to achieve the deficit reduction objective it had set for itself. After bungling the bail-out of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank, the Government had to find the money somewhere to make up for its poor handling of that banking situation. It can therefore be argued that the depositors of the bankrupt banks were reimbursed, at least in part, by funds which would otherwise have been used to enhance the quality of our educational system and our health care services.

Finally, it should be noted that the February 1986 Budget pretty well ignored this new measure despite the fact that it is to take effect, if the House makes the mistake of approving it, on April 1, 1986.

Let me again stress, as has already been stressed in this debate, that the only reason offered by the Government to justify this cut-back is the effort which all Canadians and all provinces must make, so the Government claims, to reduce the federal deficit. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has acknowledged that he is transferring part of his deficit to the provinces, but he has argued that this transfer is a problem of lesser importance than that of the deficit. In other words, this heartless Government is cutting health care for seniors and for middle and lower-income Canadians and making it impossible for tens of thousands of middle and low-income young people to go to university. That does not matter so long as the Government can reduce the deficit. How cruel, how misguided and how wrong! Certainly, if one is concerned about the deficit, economic growth and the greater revenues which come from that, and having a more efficient, productive and healthy population, that is a better way of tackling the deficit, if it must be tackled at all, than by cutting $8 billion from moneys the federal Government had promised to the provinces. That was money which was going to be spent, and which would have been spent, to improve post-secondary education and health care, if not just to maintain existing standards for millions and millions of Canadians in every province.

The record is clear. Beginning with this Bill, the Government has acted unilaterally, without consent of the provinces, and has failed to respect the tradition of federal-provincial agreements. The EPF Program is administered under a federal Act and we have to admit that technically speaking, it can be changed by the federal Parliament unilaterally without the formal consent of the provinces. However, the tradition has been to renegotiate, and I stress the word "renegotiate", these fiscal arrangements every five years.

This Act was amended for the first time in 1982 and the provincial Governments expected to be able to renegotiate shortly the new arrangements that would take effect as of April 1, 1987. The Conservative Government has thus failed to respect the long-standing tradition and has unilaterally announced amendments that would take effect a year ahead of the normal date of expiry of the agreement. No wonder that, when the federal Government announced its intentions at the federal-provincial conference, the representatives of the provinces unanimously rejected the federal proposal.

The premiers rejected the proposal, whether they were members of the Conservative Party or of other Parties. They rose to say that what the federal Government was doing was wrong. It was adding to the burden of the provinces the effort of the federal Government to cut the deficit. It was adding to the burden of the provinces the desires of the federal Government ahead of the responsibilities of the provinces to their populations; in effect, the same populations about which the federal Government should be concerned when it comes to maintaining and improving standards of health care and post-secondary education.

Once again, let us look at what the provinces will have to do as a result of the cuts in transfers of funds required by the provinces, cuts totalling $8 billion by 1991-92. What are the alternatives the provinces have? As a result of these cuts, the provinces will be forced to increase taxes as one alternative. Another alternative is to increase deficits and another would be to rethink priorities and cut back on services accordingly.

The Conservative Government might well be forcing provinces to reduce the number of hospital beds. The Conservative Government, through this legislation, might well be forcing the provinces to restrict the number of students who are admitted to universities and colleges across the country. The Conservative Government, through this legislation, might well be forcing the provinces to increase fees paid by consumers of provincial services. This might cause provinces to increase or institute hospital user fees and might force provinces to increase or institute tuition fees at universities and other post-secondary education institutions. Whatever method is adopted by the provinces, it is the individual taxpayer who will bear the cost of the cut-backs, and that without any benefit whatsoever accruing to the individual Canadian and his or her family.

It is very clear why we moved this motion. When we look at the evidence, we find that the Conservative Government broke its promise to consult with the provinces before doing anything like this. It broke its promise to develop and implement a new kind of harmony with the provinces. Instead, it has caused dismay and shock, even on the part of Conservative provincial Governments. The provincial Governments have rejected this legislation unanimously. They have sent us a signal and we have to follow through with it by adopting this motion and then defeating this Bill.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I think we are entitled at least once during the afternoon to hear a truthful rendition of the actual facts and not the pious mouthings of the criminals opposite who have returned to the scene of their crime. Why does this Bill have to be proposed to the House? By the way, the only thing this Bill does is reduce the rate of growth in transfers from the Government of Canada to the Governments of the provinces over the next five years. It does not reduce the amount of money the provinces will receive for health care and post-secondary education.

Why is this Bill necessary? It is necessary because of the hon. gentlemen opposite. Here I am referring to Members of the Official Opposition, not Members of the New Democratic Party who never had any responsibility for governing this country, thank God. Therefore, I cannot address these comments to them. Members of the Official Opposition opposite formed a Government for 20 years and got the country so far in the red that the present administration has to do something to retrieve the financial Niagara of debt that was left behind.

The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), in all his previous—

Mr. Rossi: We finally flushed you out, John.

Mr. Crosbie: I never realized that he had a tongue until he went into Opposition. The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte Marie (Mr. Malépart) was like a blushing bride for all his previous years in this institution. There was never a sound from him. All he did was nod his head and say yes whenever the Government proposed anything.

Mr. Rossi: We finally flushed you out. We finally did it. That's what we wanted.

Mr. Crosbie: We see now the alternative there is to the present Government. When looking at the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte Marie and the Hon. Member for Bourassa, we can see what kind of Government they would give this country.

The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) was a Finance Minister in Quebec and at least he knows something of which he speaks. He was out in the private sector for a number of years and knows how badly his cohorts served this country. He realizes the need for this piece of legislation. This is Liberal legislation, legislation caused by the Liberal Government that preceded us. This is Trudeau legislation. This is Turner legislation because he sat by and allowed the hon. gentleman to do this when he was in power. This is Chrétien legislation. This is Gauthier legislation.

Mr. Gauthier: Thanks, John.

Mr. Crosbie: This is legislation caused and inspired by Gauthier. Attorney General Scott of Ontario does not know who Gauthier is, but I have been trying to tell him who Gauthier is. Gauthier is a Member—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Could the Minister please make a speech?

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) on a point of order.

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Hon. Member who has the floor to speak to Bill C-96. It seems to me it is important enough.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) has the floor.

Mr. Crosbie: The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte Marie mentioned Mr. Muffler. I hope to God he goes to Mr. Muffler before he speaks here again in order to get himself muffled down a bit.

Mr. Rossi: What province are you from? Your Minister doesn't seem to know. You're not on the map.

Mr. Crosbie: If the hon. gentleman had had a chance to be appointed to the Livestock Feed Board, he would have been gone before the last election as well.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: The only reason that those two hon. gentlemen are still here is that they did not get to the trough of the Livestock Feed Board. They ran out of places too late for you guys.

This is Liberal legislation caused by the Liberal Party and its stewardship. Do you realize, Mr. Speaker, that when Liberal Members left office, they left us with a deficit of $34.5 billion? That is why this legislation is being introduced.

If we can introduce a note of sanity here for the first time this afternoon, this is a federation of 10 provinces, two territories and a federal Government. The provinces are very proud. They want to exercise their jurisdiction, and health services and education are both matters totally within the jurisdiction of the provinces. If we attempted to amend the BNA Act to remove any of that, they would howl like banshees. They would howl like weird will-o'-the-wisps, like the Hon. Member for Montréal—Sainte-Marie. They would howl like Mr. Muffler himself, if we attempted to take away any of their jurisdiction over health and education. They have the jurisdiction, yet it is the Government of Canada which is being abused here today by that great advocate of provincial rights, the Liberal Party of Canada, about the fact that we are slowing down the rate of transfers to the provinces. Presumably—

• (1740)

Mr. Rossi: What was that you said?

Mr. Crosbie: When the Hon. Member from la grosse bouche goes back to his district in the Province of Quebec, will he advocate to them that we remove jurisdiction for health from the province or that we remove jurisdiction for education from the province? No, la grosse bouche will not open his grosse bouche when he gets back to Quebec.

Mr. Rossi: En français.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): If you had only done that during the leadership, you would be Prime Minister.

Mr. Crosbie: Had I shown this facility—

Mr. Rossi: You would be the Leader, John.

Mr. Crosbie: I am only getting started. I am going to be here for a long time yet. Laurier had the 20th Century. I have the 21st.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Hon. gentlemen opposite do not realize that 23 per cent of the money which the Government of Canada is spending this year is going to pay interest on the Liberal debt. That 23 per cent is gone.

Some Hon. Members: Shame, shame!

Mr. Crosbie: We cannot use it to improve health services, education or roads.

Mr. Nunziata: What about bank bail-outs?

Mr. Rossi: Are you talking about the interest for Stevens?

Mr. Crosbie: What about an operation on the honourable tongues opposite? In Newfoundland we have a dish called cod tongue. There are the cods and there are the tongues; they are both opposite. They have everything in the Liberal caucus. As I said, 23 per cent of all the money we spend this year goes in interest on the Liberal debt. That is why we had to propose this legislation to the House. That is why the House should pass it. That is why those hon. gentlemen should vote for it. They caused it. They left us in a position where 23 per cent of the $110 billion we are spending this year is on interest to bond holders, rather than being in a position to use it to improve educational facilities, hospital facilities, and other services in the country. They have done that dirty work, and they should now vote to pay for the dirty work.

Mr. Rossi: We finally got you going, John.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: More, more!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Minister is doing so much damage to his cause, his Party and his Government that the Official Opposition would gladly give unanimous consent to allow him to speak until six o'clock.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Thank you.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there in fact unanimous consent to allow the Minister to continue for a minute?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Minister to contine for five more minutes?

An Hon. Member: For 15 minutes.

Mr. Rossi: Your friends are on this side, John.

Mr. Crosbie: I have consent to carry on.

Mr. Nunziata: Let the clown carry on.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Very well, the Hon. Minister of Justice has unanimous consent to continue for a few minutes.

Mr. Crosbie: I will restrict myself to two or three minutes, Mr. Speaker. It is noticeable that the unofficial Opposition opposite, the New Democratic Party, has not said much this afternoon. That is because its chain has not yet been jerked by Shirley Carr. She has not indicated to the members of that Party what position they should take in this matter. I was down in Windsor a week ago and I told them the story of Bob White and the three dwarfs—the Hon. Members from Windsor, the Hon. House Leader of the Liberal Party—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Minister, but I doubt if this is relevant to Bill C-96.

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker, I will leave the subject of Bob White and the three dwarfs—the Hon. Members from Windsor who are up every day here and the other distaff Member, the House Leader of the Official Opposition. I will leave that and simply say that since the CLC has not instructed New Democratic Members of Parliament on what position to take on this matter, they have had precious little to say. We hope that the message will get through to them by tomorrow and that they will be able to participate in the debate.

I do not know who has pulled your chain, Herb, but you are looking as though you are suffering a lot of pain at the moment. I believe the Hon. House Leader regrets the fact that I was given the chance to introduce Bob White and the three dwarfs to the House. I do not want to take unfair advantage of the hon. gentleman because I do not think he can survive to six o'clock if I continue. I thank the House for the three extra moments I was given. I thank the House Leader opposite for the opportunity to point out to the House some of the problems which he is experiencing in his stewardship. Anyone who is a House Leader of a group which looks as though it has just broke out of the Montreal zoo has to be commiserated with.

An Hon. Member: That is why you do not do well in Montreal, John.

Mr. Crosbie: Or the Toronto zoo.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On debate, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young).

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Crosbie: Shirley Carr.

Mr. Young: Shirley Carr sends her regards.

Mr. Crosbie: On a point of order, I have something here I want to show to the House. It shows the great tit, the blue tit, the coal tit, the marsh tit, and the crested tit. Which are you?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Young: "Mr. Speaker, this is a deplorable piece of legislation because the principle of it is one of betrayal. The Bill betrays the provinces of Canada, the provincial Governments of Canada and betrays the universities of Canada. It betrays post-secondary institutions of Canada. It betrays the young people of Canada and it illustrates rank hypocrisy in the actions of the Government".

Mr. Murphy: Who said that?

Mr. Young: "The House is discussing a Bill to reduce federal contributions to post-secondary education—for the fiscal year ending next March and to reduce the federal contribution to post-secondary education by $260 million in the next fiscal year starting April 1, 1984. Is that not rank hypocrisy? Is it not an illustration of the rottenness and internal self-contradiction of the people now administering the affairs of Canada? ... That is the rankest hypocrisy ... Whom does it affect the most? Whom is this the most crippling blow to? It is the most crippling blow to the Atlantic provinces and, in particular to the Province of Newfoundland. It is a blow to those provinces which are financially strapped, and the four Atlantic provinces are among the most financially strapped of any of the provinces of Canada. This is a vicious blow to those provinces just when they need federal financial assistance, and more of it, to help their post-secondary education system. Just when they have fantastic highs of youth unemployment and unemployment generally, this Government reduces what they are to receive, using the fiction that it has to apply a six and five program to contracts which it entered into with the provinces in 1977. The Government has turned its back on its commitment and asks us to pass this legislation".

Mr. Redway: You have your back to me.

Mr. Young: I am sorry about that. "What is the effect on Newfoundland? In the year which is ending now, Newfoundland will receive $2.7 million less than it would have received for post-secondary education. I believe in the year 1984-85, next year, when Newfoundland will be more in need of educational and training services than ever, there will be a reduction, I believe of $6.1 million. The Province of Newfoundland, already strapped, already with a current account deficit, already with the highest per capita debt in Canada, is not going to be assisted by this Government. This Government is going to grind Newfoundland further down, if it can do it". I could not have said it better. The words I have just repeated were those of the present Minister of Justice, the Hon. Member for St. John's West (Mr. Crosbie), in the House, as reported in the Debates for February 7, 1984 when the Liberal gang attempted to do exactly what the Tory gang is attempting to do today. There is not much difference between both of them.

I should like to refer to a letter from the Minister of Finance for the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador who wrote to the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) on April 22, 1986 in which he commented on the legislation presently before the House. He said:

Dear Mr. Murphy,

Premier Peckford has asked me to reply to your letter of April 9th concerning Bill C-96.

As no doubt you are aware, there has been extensive discussions of the matters covered by Bill C-96 at the official and ministerial level between the Federal and all Provincial orders of Government. These discussions included vigorous protests by the latter over the Federal intention to alter current EPF funding arrangements prior to May 1987.

No doubt you are also aware that discussions are continuing concerning an amendment to the Federal/Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977 which would put in place a further five-year arrangement for the period 1987 to 1992. These discussions have not yet concluded. The Government of Newfoundland and Labrador regards this larger amendment of very great importance for the continued co-operation between both orders of Government for the joint funding of our Education and Health systems. For this reason we will persist in making presentations to the federal Government detailing the particular problems and needs of our Province in those regards.

I trust I have given you the information which you are seeking.

I thought it was important that the House be made aware of such a letter. The impact this will have on Newfoundland and other Atlantic provinces, as well as other provinces across Canada, will be devastating on the ability of medicare to provide adequate service to the people of Canada. It will be devastating to a lot of young people, one of our greatest natural resources, in being able to afford higher education because of what the Government is doing to the transfer of funds for post-secondary education financing.

It is rank hypocrisy, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member for St. John's West properly and adequately described this measure in 1984 when he talked about what the Liberals were doing and what the present Government is now doing.

By the end of 1991, just to illustrate the total impact this measure will have on the provinces, Newfoundland is to lose $128 million; Prince Edward Island is to lose $27.5 million; Nova Scotia $195 million; New Brunswick is to lose $156.8 million; Quebec is to lose $1,435.4 million; Ontario, my own province, is to lose $2,014 million.

Mr. Redway: $400 million more than last year.

Mr. Young: I am glad to hear my friend, the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) mention that because in the Newspeak of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and Conservative Members of the Government, they have tried to defend what the Government is doing. They said all they are trying to do is to moderate the transfer of money from the federal treasury to the provincial treasury.

They can use all the moderation they want in the language they use to describe what they are trying to do, but the fact is there will be a reduction of $5 billion from the federal Treasury to the provincial governments over the next five years for health care delivery and post-secondary education purposes.

The Minister of Finance, when he was the Finance critic for the Official Opposition, called them cuts when the Liberals attempted to use the same type of newspeak terminology to excuse themselves from what they were doing. A $5 billion cut over five years is a cut. By any other name it is a cut, a cut of $5 billion—

Mr. Redway: It is $90 billion more.

Mr. Young: —that will not be used for educational purposes for the young people, and it will not be used to provide good medical services to all Canadians on an equal basis, regardless of where they live. If you happen to live in Newfoundland and Labrador, you will be entitled to a lesser degree of medical services than you would be in a better off province. That is what the measure means. It is a cut of $5 billion.

Mr. Redway: It is $90 billion more.

Mr. Young: As I said before, the Minister of Finance properly described this when he was in Opposition as sheer hypocrisy. I see that my time is up. I thank Hon. Members for listening.

[Translation]

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I have prepared a few notes for another speech on Bill C-96, but considering the little time I have left and especially the outrageous comments we heard by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), I would prefer to raise some of the points he made in his speech.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, you may have noticed, as all other Members of this House may have done, that when the Minister of Justice rose to speak just now, he happened to be the very first Government Member and the first Minister to speak to this subject before the House.

The Bill was introduced in the House by the Parliamentary Secretary. I was there. I remember clearly it was the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Communications, the Hon. Member for Hamilton—Wentworth (Mr. Scott). There wasn't a single Minister who had the guts to rise in the House and introduce a Bill as sordid as this one. And now, after several days of debate, we see the Minister of Justice rise in the House and take ten minutes or so to make an outrageous speech, livened up with jokes that would be more appropriate in a zoo than in the serious debate we are having today.

The Minister started by explaining why the Bill was proposed in the House in the first place. According to him, it was to make up for the mistakes of the previous Government which had accumulated deficit after deficit. Well, my opinion is slightly different, and I would say that the Government has added to the deficit by introducing measures to suit its friends.

Mr. Speaker, the Government's decision to give people in a position to make capital gains in this country a lifetime exemption of up to $500,000 will cost Canadian taxpayers, both rich and poor, something like $4.5 billion between now and 1990. And I don't want to hear the excuse that payments to the provinces are only being cut back in an attempt to reduce a deficit that was accumulated by the previous Government, because I would say to the Government: Today, you give handouts to your friends, and you ask the little man, the average taxpayer and low-income Canadians to foot the bill.

Let us talk about the rescue operations for the two banks that went belly up in western Canada. When the Government came to the House begging for billions, it was to bail out people with deposits in excess of $60,000, not ordinary people who were already covered under deposit insurance.

An Hon. Member: Ordinary Canadians.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, the debt is shifted over to the provinces for payment, and this is one way of compensating for the gifts given by the Government to its friends, high income people. I could go on and on about this. I do not have much time left but before resuming my seat, Mr. Speaker, I can tell you that the changes to the national energy policy — we all know this — will bring billions of dollars in profits to the multinationals whose first consideration is not to look after the needs of Canadians. Such are the real objectives of the Government across the aisle. It expects the provinces and individual Canadians who can hardly make ends meet to pay for its lavish gifts to its friends. That is the truth! When he spoke that is the truth the Minister of Justice should have told instead of clowning around.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Nickerson): The Hon. Member will have six minutes available to him when the debate on this matter recommences.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

CANADA MORTGAGE AND HOUSING CORPORATION—RURAL AND NATIVE HOUSING PROGRAM

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to comment further on the Rural and Native Housing Program operated by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. This program was designed to ensure adequate housing for low income people living in rural areas and small communities. The federal Government funds 75 per cent of the project and the province contributes the remaining 25 per cent. The program was established under Section 40 of the National Housing Act over 10 years ago. In Ontario, rural and native housing projects are administered through centrally located CMHC offices. It was a good idea which lacked consultation. That is why I rose in the House earlier to ask the Miniser responsible for CMHC a question, and it is why I rise now. My colleagues here and my constituents know only too well that this program has not been working properly and that serious revisions in the delivery and supervision of this program are needed.

The problem began with the centrally located administration of this program. The central office had little, if any, previous contact with the various communities in which rural and native housing projects were placed. An occasional visit was all that the client and the community received. The community was not involved in the selection process for either the client or property, but they were the ones who had to live with the situation. Decisions were made by people outside of the community.

That insensitivity is now going to stop. The Minister assured me, following my representation to him and my later questioning in the House of Commons, that CMHC has placed increased emphasis on involving municipalities in the Rural and Native Housing Program delivery schedule. CMHC personnel will now meet with municipal councils prior to introducing a rural and native housing project into each municipality. The client selection process and the number and type of units which CMHC would like to deliver in the municipality will be discussed. Such meetings will increase the municipal council's knowledge of the program and, hopefully, answer any questions council members may have. To continue a good exchange of information, CMHC managers will meet at least once a year with local councils to discuss any problems which may have developed during that year.

One of my constituents put the problem very well as follows:

> I am not opposed to government assistance to low income earners. Low income earners struggling to make ends meet and renovating old homes, trying to make them liveable, should undoubtedly have Government assistance. Proper policing could make this an excellent Government program.

Once a Rural and Native Housing Project is in the area, it seems that enforcing of the guidelines of the program is left to the honour system. That may be fine in a perfect society but, unfortunately, we do not live in a perfect society. People could take advantage of this program and the hardworking Canadian taxpayers who provide their own shelter for their families would be at a disadvantage. Fortunately, with increased municipal consultation, the administration of the rural and native housing program will be enhanced.

Guidelines and the intent of the Rural and Native Housing Program must be followed. It is vital that the people involved, the client and the participating community, know the boundaries within which it operates. This is a good program and it would be unfortunate if it were cancelled because of abuse.

Another problem was raised by a constituent who is concerned about what we are teaching our children. I quote as follows:

> The newest and best house in the area is given to an unwed mother of one. She has never worked . . . What will we tell our daughters? "Don't get married. Have a baby and the Government will keep you and give you a new modern home better than a husband could provide".

The Rural and Native Housing Program started off as an attempt to encourage people, to give them incentive and initiative and an opportunity to take pride in their home. These noble ideals fall by the wayside when the program is abused. Where is the incentive to work toward owning your own home when the Government will buy one, and sometimess a well-above-average home for the area, for only 25 per cent of your income? There is concern that we are showing our citizens that work is not always rewarded. The average Canadian who works hard to afford a down payment and then scrimps and saves to meet monthly mortgage payments, often at very high interest rates, becomes very discouraged.

I am not suggesting the program be cancelled. No one, myself included, feels that the Government should not help those in need. The Rural and Native Housing Program is designed to assist low-income earners in need. Last year in my riding, approximately 40 per cent of the RNH clients were fully employed low-income earners. That is exactly the kind of people who deserve assistance in purchasing a home. However, it is important to ensure that our social programs are not abused. After 10 years of this program, it was time for a review so that changes for the better can be made. I would like to see increased emphasis on helping people renovate their homes. Another possibility is to have the rent-to-own principle become a higher priority. It would give people a chance to prove they can be responsible and have a healthy respect for their property. Shelter is an important factor in the quality of life Canadians have come to expect. It is vital to remember that it is a privilege to live in a fine house, not a right.

I would like to thank the Minister for listening to my concerns and those of my constituents and for improving this Rural and Native Housing Program.

Mr. Joe Price (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister responsible for CMHC, I would like to respond further to the matter raised by the Hon. Member on March 6 of this year and again today. It concerns the consultation and participation by Members of Parliament and municipal and local representatives in the delivery of the Rural and Native Housing Program.

The Minister appreciates the Hon. Member raising this matter. He also appreciates the opportunity to comment on this program. The Minister was already aware of some of the concerns expressed. He had already instructed CMHC officials to thoroughly review the matter. On his behalf, I am pleased to say that several important initiatives will be undertaken by CMHC to address the concerns expressed. Some of those concerns were mentioned by the Hon. Member.

CMHC will place increased emphasis on involving the municipalities in the Rural and Native Housing Program delivery schedule. Before introducing units into a municipality, CMHC will consult with the municipal council to thoroughly explain the program's objectives, the client selection process, and the number and type of units it proposes to deliver in the muncipality. This will increase the council's knowledge and support of the program and answer any questions the council may have. As well, where the program is already in place, CMHC officials will meet periodically with the local council to discuss any problems which may have occurred.

CMHC will also be looking at additional rental units and the acquisition of suitable existing houses rather than new construction. As well, CMHC is undertaking increased client counselling to ensure that clients are aware of their responsibilities with respect to property maintenance.

Under the agreement signed with the Province of Ontario on February 28, 1986, CMHC will continue to deliver this program this year. On behalf of the Minister, I can assure the Hon. Member that there was extensive consultation with several interested native and non-native groups prior to implementing the new program directions. The opportunity for continued consultation is always available and welcome.

I thank you for the opportunity to respond to this issue, and I thank the Hon. Member for raising it.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—DATE OF DECISION TO APPLY REGULATIONS WITH REGARD TO EARLY RETIREES—ENQUIRY HOW MINISTER CAN PRETEND TO HAVE INFORMED THE BENEFICIARIES IN ADVANCE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, on April 17 I put a question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) concerning the date of the decision to apply regulations with regard to early retirees. The Minister gave me the usual answer we have been hearing for months, namely that the decision had been made in November 1984.

• (1810)

Mr. Speaker, in my question I referred to a letter from the Minister of Employment and Immigration, dated November 26, 1985, several months before the effective date, one month and several days, to be exact, a letter in answer to a letter from the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent), the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Revenue at the time. In the penultimate paragraph, the Minister said, and I quote:

> I would also like to mention that the regulations as such have yet to receive final approval by the Government. Consequently, the specific details of their application have yet to be determined. I am therefore not in a position to answer your question about applications that will already be in effect on January 5, 1986, and those filed after that date.

There, Mr. Speaker, you have the crux of the matter. It is true in principle that those measures were announced in the economic statement made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in November 1984. After that, we waited until January 1986 to implement the regulations, but we never told the people, those who are supposed to go on advanced retirement, whether those regulations would be implemented retroactively.

I was on the Quebec tour with my colleague for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) and, at each meeting we attended people were not opposing the Government's decision to impose such regulations. What people were against was retroactivity. It would seem that a number of companies were in touch with the Department, some even contacted a few MP's. There were very clear responses. The Minister herself, in her letter of November 26, did not know at that time whether it would be applied retroactively or not.

There would seem to be 40,000 people, at least 13,000 of them in Quebec, who were affected by those regulations. Those people would never have gone on early retirement, they would never have accepted their company's offer had they known that one or two months later their unemployment insurance benefits would be stopped. There lies the whole question.

Again, it is clear . . . I have here a copy of a telegram dated December 30, 1985, from the Director of Benefit programs to Manpower and Unemployment Insurance Centre Offices, and I quote: "The new regulations on pension income have been adopted and will come into force on January 5, 1986, as anticipated. A stuffer advising claimants of the changes made by the new regulations will be inserted in mailings starting from December 29, 1985. Further instructions to follow".

That was on December 30. I checked with the Unemployment Insurance Office in my constituency on December 30, no information was available as to whether that was retroactive or not.

We have been putting the question for months to the Minister, asking that those regulations be rescinded, unless they are not retroactive. The answer is that everything is before the Forget Commission. By golly, if you want something to be studied, let it be studied. And once a report is submitted, a response, then you should act. And I agree as to the substance of the case, that if benefits were to be paid to someone going on early retirement or not, this is a question that should be considered, and I am anxiously awaiting the Forget Commission's report.

However, while this principle is being considered, it is unfair to withdraw benefits from people who were not aware of what would happen when they took an early retirement, and it is very obvious from the letters of the companies and the statements of those involved that they were not aware of the situation. The Minister herself did not know on November 26 whether this rule would apply retroactively or not. From what we have heard when we were there, this system is penalizing people who cannot afford it and who will lose $200 or $300 a week while still having to pay unemployment insurance contributions. They will certainly not be able to live on their early retirement pension. They will have to go back on the labour market and to pay unemployment insurance contributions even though they can never collect.

I think that this decision is unfair and that the Canadian workers, and especially these people, did not deserve such a treatment. To my knowledge, it is the first time that such a rule is applied retroactively. In addition, when the notice of application of this rule was sent out on December 30, 1985, no instructions were provided.

Mr. Speaker, this shows that, maybe not voluntarily, but perhaps because she was badly advised, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) made a mistake, and the right thing for her to do would be to make an announcement and withdraw this rule, at least for those who applied before December 5 or during the fall of 1985. It is clear that these people were not aware of this rule in the fall of 1985 because they would never have taken the chance of seeing their unemployment insurance benefits withdrawn two weeks or one month later.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary will be able to announce that the Minister has come back to reason and withdrawn this rule.

Mr. Joe Price (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) has already stated on many occasions, changes to the pension income were announced on November 8, 1984, by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his Economic Statement.

As the House is aware, Cabinet decided on December 20, 1984, to postpone the implementation of the changes on earnings on separation to March 31, 1985, with some exemptions, and to postpone the implementation for pension income to January, 1986, without giving any other exemptions.

The amendments to the regulations dealing with pension income were approved by the Governor General in Council on December 20, 1985, and those amendments were in line with the Cabinet decision, which was to apply the new rule to all claimants in receipt of a pension income without exception.

All Canadians were informed of the coming changes through public statements and a press release. Those who were already UI recipients received a notice in late December, 1985, and early January, 1986, informing them of the changes and asking them to report their pension income on their bi-weekly reports as of January 5, 1986.

It must be noted that according to Privy Council Office rules, the content of a regulation cannot be divulged between the Department of Justice clearance and the approval by the Governor General in Council.

When the Hon. Member originally asked the question on April 17, the Minister indicated that she had referred this particular matter to the Forget Commission for consideration, that she is awaiting the results of that review and will respond in kind.

YOUNG OFFENDERS ACT—INTRODUCTION OF AMENDMENTS—MINISTER'S POSITION.

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, on a number of occasions I have risen in the House to share with the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty) and other colleagues my concerns and the concerns of the residents of Don Valley East about the Young Offenders Act.

Let me first state that I am totally supportive of the basic principles and philosophy of this progressive Act. The four principles that underline this legislation are: one, that young people are responsible for their actions; two, that young people enjoy rights protected under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms; three, that society has a right to be protected from criminal behaviour; and finally, that young people have special needs because they are at various stages of development and maturity.

I know I am not alone in welcoming this modern piece of legislation. I think it does not speak very well of the fact that our laws have not changed for some 60 years in this regard. This Act, as you know, Mr. Speaker, replaces the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

On November 28, 1985, I asked the Solicitor General when we could expect amendments to the Young Offenders Act to address those areas where problems have arisen in actual practice. I am very pleased that such amendments were tabled in the House on April 30, 1986. There are several areas of particular concern which have emerged over the two years since the Young Offenders Act was proclaimed in April of 1984. One such area is that the authorities have found it difficult under the Act to deal effectively with young offenders who have violated parole conditions or other dispositions of the court. The proposed amendment will streamline the process to allow for quick police action in such cases.

Another area identified by police officials as causing undue difficulty is the procedures concerning pre-trial detention. I have spoken on several occasions with Inspector Jim Clarke, the head of the Youth Bureau of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Department. The procedures requiring the separate detention of those over 12 and those under 12, although necessary, are too inflexible. One case he cited involved two brothers, one over 12 and one under 12, who could not be sent home in the same police cruiser because of the procedural requirement. It is my understanding that the amendment, while adhering to the important principle that adults and young people should be kept separate in detention and custody, will allow police more flexibility in dealing with young offenders in cases such as the one I previously mentioned.

Professionals who have been working with the Young Offenders Act have found that the prohibition of publication of information concerning a young offender has, in some circumstances, created an unreasonable risk to the public. For example, when a dangerous young offender escapes custody and is at large, publication of information can be vital in warning the public and in aiding the police to apprehend the offender.

Much public attention was focused on the maximum sentence of three years which could be imposed on someone tried and convicted under the Young Offenders Act, especially after a court decision in a Scarborough murder case in which a 14 year old was convicted of three murders and sentenced to the maximum of three years. Cases involving young people who are involved in particularly violent crimes can be tried in adult courts if the Crown Attorney so chooses. The amendments proposed by the Solicitor General allow for courts to impose consecutive sentences for new crimes.

The retention of records relating to young offenders also became an issue during the two years since the proclamation of the Young Offenders Act. In a celebrated case in Orangeville, records and psychiatric assessments of a young man found not guilty of murder by reason of insanity could not be released to the hospital to which he had been sent. The amendment to allow more flexibility in maintenance and destruction of records is well taken.

Law enforcement professionals have also had some problems with how to deal with offenders under the age of 12. This problem was brought home to me by one of my constituents, Mrs. McCullough, whose cottage in the Port Parry area was broken into and vandalized by two young girls aged 10 and 12. Mrs. McCullough is concerned, and I share her concern, that these young girls may not be deterred from repeating their crime. Our home was broken into a few years ago and we were told it was broken into by young people under the age of 12. I feel we must keep in mind the number one objective with respect to youngsters under 12, and that is that they be rehabilitated. I believe that is an important aspect of this Act.

Individuals who counsel or encourage children under the age of 12 to commit crimes are committing a serious offence against the children and society and I am pleased that the Criminal Code will be amended to allow for criminal prosecution of such people. The Young Offenders Act does not deal with children under 12 years. Last November, the Ontario Legislature enacted the Child and Family Services Act which deals with children under 12 years and the legal system. Let us hope that this legislation will help those children who come into conflict with the law to change their ways before criminal activity becomes a habit. I must point out that Ontario, regrettably, was the last province to bring in such legislation, even though it was told that federal legislation would come in in 1984.

In summary, I have followed the Young Offenders Act with great interest since I was elected to the House. I have attended consultation meetings with law enforcement professionals such as Metropolian Toronto Police Chief Marks, Inspector Clarke of the Youth Bureau and representatives of the various social agencies such as the John Howard Society. I was pleased to be present when the Solicitor General announced the amendments to the Young Offenders Act in Toronto on April 30, 1986.

From these experiences and from discussions I have had with my constituents and others about the Young Offenders Act, I believe it is a good Act and a real improvement. While there have been some initial problems, these amendments should help resolve them. We just need a little bit more time and experience for everyone to appreciate the full value and thrust of the legislation. I commend the Solicitor General for acting so quickly on these much needed changes.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, in response to the question put by the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell), I would like to make a few brief comments at this time on behalf of the Solicitor General (Mr. Beatty), reserving a fuller explanation of the proposed changes to the Young Offenders Act for second reading stage and study by the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs.

Shortly after the Solicitor General was sworn into office, he promised to amend this Act. The improvements contained in Bill C-106 respond to the concerns identified during national consultations undertaken by the Minister with concerned citizens, juvenile justice professionals and provincial administrators. A federal-provincial meeting of Ministers responsible for juvenile justice held in Vancouver on February 11, 1986, also resulted in an endorsement of the proposals. During these consultations, the Solicitor General found widespread support for the principles of the Act, despite some concern about a few of its provisions.

The proposed changes would allow for the publication of the identity of dangerous young offenders. No longer will they be able to hide their identity from the public at large. The changes will allow for consecutive sentences totalling more than three years where a young person commits a subsequent offence while still subject to an earlier sentence. They will ensure that the police have adequate access to records for continuing investigations, will create minimum standards regarding the use of records and will ensure that records are kept in cases of acquittal by reason of insanity. These measures will address current problems in the Act's records maintenance and destruction provisions, problems that have interfered with effective administration of justice and law enforcement.

The proposed changes will permit the efficient and effective enforcement of probation orders and other non-custodial sentences. There is now no provision under the Act empowering police to intervene quickly and make an arrrest when a young offender fails to comply with the conditions of a probation order. This limit has caused difficulties for correctional agencies and courts as well as police. The proposed changes will modify the provisions of current law on the testimony of children and on detention prior to sentencing. They will clarify that any adult or young person involving children in criminal behaviour is subject to prosecution. This is an important aspect of the Bill, Mr. Speaker. They will resolve several technical, administrative and procedural problems. It is my hope that this Bill will receive rapid passage through Parliament with the support of all Parties.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Nickerson): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6:29 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

SUPREME COURT JUDGMENTS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, last Thursday the Supreme Court of Canada rendered two judgments which substantially reduced the constitutional language rights of French and English-speaking Canadians. The court ruled that Section 133 of the Constitution, 1867 gave the state—that is, cities, provinces, and the federal Government—the right to choose the language of a summons or proceeding before a federal and Quebec court, not the citizen who is called to answer before the court. This is a regrettable and illogical judgment. Surely the rights entrenched in Section 133, which allow the use of French or English before the courts, are to benefit individuals, not the state.

As a result of these judgments, a constitutional amendment is required to clarify and restore those rights. I urge the Government to respond positively to this request.

MULTICULTURALISM

UKRAINIAN-CANADIAN DEVELOPMENT COMMITTEE FUNDING

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Jelinek) thinks that his office has been spoon-feeding ethnocultural organizations which do not contribute to Canada. He declares that from now on grants will be given only to those organizations which are an investment in Canada. The Minister's view of these organizations as weak children unable to feed themselves has aroused resentment in many communities.

Members of the Ukrainian Canadian Development Committee in Edmonton have examined their financial statements and have discovered that federal multicultural funds made up about 1 per cent of their resources. The Ukrainian Canadian Development Committee is only one of many groups which have received very limited funding from Multiculturalism Canada and have been forced to depend on other sources, particularly their own members. These organizations have invested far more of their own resources into the enhancement of a multicultural Canada than the Ministry of State for Multiculturalism has ever provided them. Their efforts deserve commendation rather than the criticism—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

EDUCATION

CANADIAN AMBASSADOR TO UNITED NATIONS—REPRESENTATIONS CONCERNING SCHOOL CURRICULA

Mr. John Reimer (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, Canada's long-cherished role as an international peacekeeper has been eloquently enhanced by the indefatigable and insightful efforts of our present Ambassador to the United Nations, Mr. Stephen Lewis. Consequently, it was with surprise and consternation that I learned of the Ambassador's recent appeal to Canadian educators that so-called "peace activism" be made an indispensable component of high school curricula.

As a former teacher of Canadian history and a school board trustee, I am convinced that a conscientious and objective presentation of premise and fact best equips Canadian young people for analysis and debate, thereby allowing well-informed decision-making on a wide range of crucial issues, including international peacemaking. This is in stark contrast to the Ambassador's call for a "peace-activist" curricula. This myopic approach risks a pedagogy, whose method prejudges the issues and leads to conclusions which verge on uninformed propaganda. Therefore, I urge the ambassador to channel his undoubted capabilities in a manner which better reflect his appointment as Canada's representative—

EXTERNAL AID

SUPPORT FOR AFRICA 2000 PROGRAM

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, when the Minister for External Relations (Mrs. Vézina) announced Operation Africa 2000 in the House yesterday we were all pleased to see that the thrust of the Government's initiative focuses on partnership. For those of us who have lived and worked in Africa we recognize that the Minister has paid the highest tribute to the NGO community in naming them partners in development.

[Translation]

Africa 2000 reflects the lasting commitment of Canadian men and women to promote development in that country. The Government's food and agricultural programs for the next 15 years are long-term priorities.

[English]

Canada's continued leadership with the African Drought Assistance Program and other developmental issues in Africa will form an integral part of the upcoming May special session at the United Nations on Africa. We thank all Canadians for their continued support.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADA-KOREAN RELATIONS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, just what is the relationship between this Conservative Government and the Korean Government? How intimate is the relationship between the Industry Minister, the Korean Government, Hyundai and the Hanil Bank? Canadians have a right to know, and it is about time that this Government came clean. The public interest demands it.

Why do so many Conservative Members of Parliament have such a special relationship with the South Korean Government? Why did five Conservative MPs surreptitiously sneak out of Canada to visit Korea at the expense of the Korean Government? What personal interest do they have in Korea?

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Order, please. The Member knows he is now making a comment about Members and that that is out of order.

Mr. Nunziata: I am stating the facts.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan).

PROSTITUTION

CALL FOR INTRODUCTION OF NEW LEGISLATION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word about the Government's legislation against street prostitution. I think all Canadians agree that there ought to be laws to prevent street prostitution, but when the Opposition objected to the laws the Government brought in it was because they were harsh, unfair and they treated prostitutes and their clients as if they were not human beings within Canadian society. Court decisions are now showing that they are human beings and that they must be treated as such.

I want to call upon the Government to rethink those harsh laws to which we objected so strongly, to read the Fraser Report, to bring forward legislation that will work and that will effectively remove street prostitution without treating prostitutes and their jobs like sub-humans.

YOUTH

SUMMER JOBS—GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Mr. Gilles Bernier (Beauce): On March 23, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) made these discreditable remarks about the Challenge '86 program:

> Let us not make use of youth summer job creation programs designed to improve their employment opportunities by enabling them to work in a field related to their chosen career.

This was the Hon. Member's way of belittling young people anxious to find summer jobs as clerks, waiters and waitresses, drug store employees, and so on.

Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate to hear a Member of the Opposition discredit the kind of jobs young people can find, knowing as we do the efforts they have made to get summer employment. The Government does not share the views expressed by the NDP Member. We consider that all jobs are rewarding, and we are not in office to depreciate any kind of employment.

We have achieved concrete results in Beauce because the private sector, in co-operation with the Government, has taken a positive approach and created jobs for as many young people as possible. We commend them and wish them happy holidays!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please, the 60 seconds have expired.

COMMUNICATIONS

CTV MASTERS OF DECEPTION PROGRAM—COMMENDATION

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to compliment CTV on a program it aired last Sunday night entitled Masters of Deception which exposed the large extent to which the Soviet Union has gone to spread disinformation around the world.

• (1410)

Two things are important in terms of Canada. The World Peace Council is a major funding agency for the so-called peace demonstrations around the world. Many well-meaning Canadians, who think they are working for peace when they join the peace councils and march for peace in organizations funded by the World Peace Council, are actually not working for peace as we understand it, but only as the Soviets understand it.

Second, that program made it evidently clear that those who work for peace in an independent way in the Soviet Union do not share the freedom of demonstration which we enjoy in Canada. I want to compliment CTV for the work it has done and to encourage it to do it again.

TRADE

CANADA-U.S. NEGOTIATIONS—IMPACT ON TECHNOLOGICAL INDUSTRY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, we have heard much about the need for a level playing field in the trade negotiations and, with it, condemnation of the social, equalization, and other subsidies in Canada that the Americans will challenge. Another side of the coin has been cited by the Science Council.

What concessions will our Government demand and what mechanisms will be in place to equalize the playing field for Canadian technology-based industries so that they can compete with their American counterparts? What greater subsidies do we provide than the massive competitive advantage given to the U.S. high-tech industries by inherently preferential, if not incestuous, defence department expenditures for procurement and research and development? Will Canada insist on excluding much of our high technology industry from free trade negotiations, or will we, in our haste to benefit from the engine of U.S. economic prosperity, be driven to submissive acceptance of U.S. military policy so that we can share its profitable secrets?

DECLINE IN INTEREST RATES—GROWTH IN BUSINESS INVESTMENTS

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, the Government's program of economic renewal has helped cause lower interest rates and increased business investments. These factors helped stimulate almost 600,000 new jobs in the past 18 months. One-year mortgage rates have dropped to 9.75 per cent, the lowest rate in eight years. This trend of lower borrowing costs will materially assist home buyers, small business owners, and all consumers who borrow.

New business investment continues to grow. I attended a sod-turning ceremony last week in my riding of Don Valley East. Ikea, the furniture people from Sweden, are building a new store which will open in 1987. It will be Ikea's seventy-sixth store in the world. It will cover 220,000 square meters, over five acres, making it their largest store in North America. Most important, between 150 and 200 new jobs will be created in Don Valley East.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

ANNUAL REPORT—EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Public Service Commission presented its annual report which contains some startling statistics. The report offers little hope that women will be given a better shake in the federal Public Service. Women hold fewer than one-quarter of the thousands of Public Works jobs and only 32 per cent of the over 30,000 civilian positions in National Defence. In the Departments of Transport and the Environment women hold 20 per cent and 27 per cent respectively.

I can go on. Women hold under 8 per cent of the well-paid senior civil service management and executive jobs while they are still the majority in those ghetto jobs, that is, clerical support staff, where they hold 82.7 per cent of the jobs. Furthermore, women only account for 4.8 per cent of those paid $60,000 and over.

The Tories promised fair representation in Government for women but there has been little improvement. When will there be action? Just prior to the next election in the form of token nominations? Certainly not through applying their famous, yet toothless, employment equity Bill, C-62.

ENERGY

DEREGULATION OF CRUDE OIL PRICES—EFFECT ON PRIMARY PRODUCERS

Mr. Pat Binns (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, it is high time that Canada's oil companies dropped the price of bulk fuel to primary producers. Farmers, fishermen, woodlot owners and others who buy in bulk are not benefiting from the Government's policy of deregulating crude oil prices so that the benefits can be passed on to users.

In my Province of Prince Edward Island all fuel comes in the same tankers, is stored in the same tanks, and is delivered in the same trucks. While prices have dropped at the gas pumps for consumers, the same benefits have not been passed on to primary producers who must buy in bulk. This is a disgrace.

I have written to oil company presidents protesting this injustice and I urge affected producers to do the same. If they want to call me at the House of Commons, I will be happy to provide names and addresses so that they, as well, can join in the protest of this injustice.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Yesterday, in response to a question from my colleague from Glengarry—Prescott—Russell relating to the Minister having benefited from a conflict of interest, he stated categorically that he received no such benefit. My questions to him are these. Does he deny that he received a benefit from a $3 million loan from a Korean bank associated with the Hyundai company? Does he deny that he received a net benefit of $314,000, representing a one year interest-free loan of $2.6 million? Does he deny that he received a benefit from those two sources?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition could modify that question to one dealing with ministerial responsibility.

Some Hon. Members: It is.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): This not only relates to—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate the seriousness with which the Right Hon. Member takes the matter but I do ask him to bring it into the context of ministerial responsibility.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, this not only relates to the conflict of interest guidelines but also to the way this Minister is administering his portfolio, subject to outside benefits and conflict of interest. It goes right to his responsibility as a Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He said in this House he had received no benefit so he is open to questions. I want to put these questions to him because he has opened it up.

[Translation]

Yesterday, the Minister said he had received no such benefit. How does he know he received no benefit if all his assets were in a blind trust? Who told him? Is he or is he not aware of the negotiations conducted by his wife to protect his assets? How did he know there was no such benefit?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The Right Hon. Member knows that the Chair can only permit questions regarding ministerial responsibility. I am sure he can find a way to put a ministerial question.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, these questions relate to companies doing business with the Minister's Department. They relate to the way he is discharging his obligations. I want to say to you, Sir, having had an opportunity of getting around the country, particularly western Canada, over the last week—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The right hon. gentleman is an experienced parliamentarian. He knows the dilemma the Chair is in when questions are put which relate to personal matters. I ask him one more time to put the question in the context of ministerial responsibility, please.

MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITIES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, what I am asking, and I have to do it through the Deputy Prime Minister in the absence of the Prime Minister, is why will he not let the Minister stand up and clear his name? Canadians are saying that this whole deal smells of corruption.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That it is a cover-up. I ask the Deputy Prime Minister why will he not let his Minister speak or else cut him loose from the Government?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister was answering questions fully yesterday and the day before. The right hon. gentleman was not here to hear the answers. I am certainly not preventing the Minister from standing up. He has been the star of the show for two days in a row.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He is the star all right.

REQUEST FOR DETAILS—ALLEGED BENEFITS TO MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion himself. Yesterday in the House, in answer to my question about the conflict of interest guidelines, he said that he did not receive, either directly or indirectly, any benefit in excess of $200. Now if the company that had dealings with his Department,—I emphasize "his Department", Mr. Speaker, in order to clarify the connection with this question,—if this company "provided" him, interest-free, with the sum of more than a quarter of a million dollars, what is this supposed to be if it isn't a benefit in excess of $200? It is not exactly peanuts!

• (1420)

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member I would invite him to read, once again, the question he put to me yesterday and then the answer that I gave.

ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S WIFE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question yesterday was very clear. Assuming the Minister did not know of this loan, assuming we believe that, would he deem it appropriate in the future to let his wife negotiate an interest free loan for companies doing business with his Department?

Mr. Speaker: Order. Next question. Order, please. The Hon. Members know the rules about which questions are in order and which are not. Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a question to the Minister, not about government policy but about his ministerial responsibility?

Mr. Boudria: Supplementary now, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, my question is directed again to the Minister concerning his Department. Does he feel it is appropriate that his wife should negotiate such a deal when his Department is involved in granting to the same business that his—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please. The question is to the Minister about his ministerial responsibilities.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, seemingly we have to accept your definition of ministerial responsibility. I will direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. Considering the Minister in question said yesterday he did not get a direct benefit from a company doing business with his Department—my question goes to the heart of the conflict of interest issue here—does the Deputy Prime Minister agree that the Minister did get a benefit from the loan negotiated by his wife?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, let us put into sharp accurate focus the question and answer yesterday, which will be found at page 12996 of Hansard. The Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell asked the following question:

> Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question concerns Section 35 of the code. Even if the Minister did not know before, now that we have told him and he knows that he benefited from a company doing business with his Department, has he or does he intend to file a declaration under the benefit Section 35 of the Code which compels him to file when he has received a benefit from a company doing business with his Government? Has he done so, does he intend to do so and, if not, why not?

That, Sir, was the question. The answer by the Minister is the following:

> Mr. Speaker, the short answer to that is, I have received no such benefit.

An Hon. Member: We can read. Let him answer.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

An Hon. Member: Who are you trying to protect?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East will withdraw that comment which the Speaker just heard her make.

Ms. Copps: Could you tell me what I am to withdraw?

Mr. Speaker: Only to say, "I withdraw the comment".

Ms. Copps: I am not sure what the comment is you are asking me to withdraw?

Mr. Speaker: The suggestion that the Chair is trying to protect anybody that the Hon. Member just made. The Hon. Member will withdraw that.

Ms. Copps: I did not suggest that the Chair was to protect anyone, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is withdrawing that implication and I accept that.

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that the Deputy Prime Minister is avoiding the most serious questions that go to the root of ministerial responsibility. I want him to answer my question this time. Does he agree that the Minister received a direct benefit as a consequence of the loan negotiated by his wife? If the answer is yes, would he not agree that this is a conflict of interest and the Minister should leave his job?

• (1425)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I answered as I did because the Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell and the Leader of the New Democratic Party distorted the question that was answered yesterday by rephrasing it.

Mr. Broadbent: I am asking a different question.

Mr. Nielsen: The Minister said yesterday that he complied not only with Section 35 of the Code but with the entire Code, which I have been saying for a week now.

Oral Questions

REQUEST FOR AMENDMENT TO GUIDELINES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding what he has just said, and setting aside what I regard to be the inadequacy of his answers, I have a further supplementary question. Considering that the previous Conservative Government of the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead had much more stringent guidelines that were more carefully spelled out, would the Minister agree that if they had been in force we would not be in the mess we are now in? If he agrees with that, why does the Government not bring in those guidelines and toughen them up so we can get on with the business of this country that the people of Canada want?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I cannot agree that the previous guidelines were more stringent and tougher because the existing guidelines—more accurately, the Code of Conduct—that were tabled on September 9, 1985, are more strict and more stringent. Furthermore, the Prime Minister wrote to the hon. gentleman with respect to his input concerning that Code of Conduct—

Mr. Broadbent: He got my proposal.

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member has yet to reply to that letter of September, 1985.

Mr. Cassidy: That is not true.

Mr. Nielsen: If he or any other Member have—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Nielsen: —ideas with respect to improvement, of course they will be considered.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

PRIVATIZATION OF CANADAIR—MINISTER'S ROLE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the real victim of the Minister's action is public confidence in Government. My question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. It concerns public confidence in the Government in relation to Magna's bid for Canadair. If Magna's bid for Canadair is accepted it will be perceived as a pay-off; if Magna's bid for Canadair is not accepted it will be perceived as being a result of the close relationship between Magna and—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am sure the Hon. Member has a question.

Mr. Nunziata: Does the Acting Prime Minister not realize that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is unable to carry on his public duty in a manner that is perceived by the public as being fair, objective and above board?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman very cleverly smuggles in two or three empty hypotheses preceding his question, when he reaches into the future to ask what if something happens.

An Hon. Member: That is the issue. No confidence in the Government.

Mr. Nielsen: I explained last week and again this week the process that is in place for privatization. There are four very distinct steps and we are not even through the first one.

PERFORMANCE OF MINISTERIAL DUTIES

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the industry Minister is drowning in conflict and he knows it. He is showing utter contempt for the anti-corruption guidelines.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Just a supplementary question.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, there has to be some integrity to conflict of interest guidelines. My supplementary question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. How can the Minister of Industry carry on his official public duty, having full knowledge of the personal benefits he has received from Hyundai and Magna corporations?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister responded to that kind of question yesterday. I have no problem with my integrity, unlike the hon. gentleman. The Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion does not have any problem with his integrity. The only problem which exists is this constant leap-frogging distortion in which the Hon. Member and his colleagues in the opposition are engaging.

• (1430)

ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S SPOUSE—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is properly directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion in view of the Prime Minister's letter of last September 9 which stated that Ministers have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those which might arise out of the activities of their spouses. What steps did the Minister take to avoid conflicts of interest involving his spouse last year, and what steps has he taken to eliminate the conflict of interest involving his wife since it became public knowledge last week?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Once again, Mr. Speaker, I can simply assure the Hon. Member, and all Hon. Members of the House, that I have applied the Code of Conduct fully. The blind trust is established and that, as I understand it, is the full purport of the Prime Minister's letter to which the Hon. Member referred.

PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that the Code of Conduct is augmented and supplemented by the letter from the Prime Minister on September 9 last year? In that letter he is enjoined under his individual responsibility to avoid conflict of interest such as the conflict of interest which 25 million Canadians know exist in the case of the loan which his wife arranged with Magna, or through the intervention of Magna's chairman. What steps did the Minister take to avoid that conflict of interest by his spouse, and what action has he taken now since it became public knowledge that that conflict of interest exists?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is a repeat of the questions which were put repeatedly last week and this week and it is answered—

Mr. de Jong: Cover up.

Mr. Nielsen: It is not a cover-up at all.

An Hon. Member: Sure it is.

Mr. de Jong: Absolutely.

Mr. Nielsen: It is answered—

Mr. de Jong: No answer.

Mr. Riis: No answer.

Mr. Nielsen: They don't like the answer, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Riis: Nixon lives on in this Chamber.

Mr. Nielsen: —but the answer is that the requirement is for the Minister to comply with the Code of Conduct. That is the responsibility of the ADRG who administers—

Mr. Orlikow: He has no authority.

Mr. Nielsen: —the Code. That compliance has been had.

Mr. Gauthier: How do you know?

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. Member knows that because he has been in touch with the office of the ADRG himself.

CODE OF CONDUCT—CO-OWNER OF FARM

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In his capacity as Minister he was required to sign a Code to which he put his signature on March 26, 1986 which states:

> I own a 50 per cent interest in Kings Lynn Farms, Township of King, Regional Municipality of York. While I am subject to the Code, the management of the farm is entirely the responsibility of the co-owner.

Can the Minister tell us who the co-owner is?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member realizes, I think, that she is asking a question to the Minister in a personal capacity, not about his responsibilities as a Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Can the Hon. Member find a ministerial question, please.

Ms. Copps: I am asking about how the Minister has complied in his capacity as a Minister of the Crown. It is only a Minister of the Crown who is required to sign the Code. I believe in that respect it is a perfectly legitimate and applicable question and I would seek an answer from the Government—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Ms. Copps: —with respect to the Minister's own responsibility as the Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Member have a supplementary question about the Minister's responsibility?

REQUEST FOR REMOVAL OF MINISTER FROM OFFICE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Is it not true that the co-owner of the Kings Lynn Farms in fact happens to be one and the same Noreen Stevens, the wife of the Minister? In light of the fact that Mrs. Stevens has her finger in more than one business or subsidiary of York Centre, do you not think it's about time to remove the Minister and to make sure that this cloud which is hanging over the whole Mulroney Government is lifted?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is an expression of an opinion by the Hon. Member. But she is entitled to hold that opinion. I do not.

Mr. Andre: My wife owns half of my house, too.

Mr. Nielsen: In my responsibility to ensure compliance with the Code of Conduct, I am satisfied that that compliance has been had.

LOAN NEGOTIATED BY MINISTER'S WIFE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It is quite straightforward. In his opinion, did the Minister, or will the Minister, receive any benefit from the loan which was negotiated by his wife?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): My answer to that question, Mr. Speaker, is equally straightforward. The Minister is required, as are all Ministers of the Crown, to comply—

Mr. McCurdy: Come on. Yes or no?

Mr. Nielsen: —with the Code of Conduct by a public office holder.

Mr. de Jong: Is that what you consider a straight answer?

Mr. Orlikow: Answer the question. What are you afraid of?

Mr. Nielsen: It is my responsibility to satisfy myself that it has been discharged. I have taken the necessary steps and compliance has been had.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary question.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, can I assume that the Minister's answer, since he deigns not to answer directly, is, yes, the Minister did in fact, and will receive, benefit from the loan negotiated by his wife?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): My responsibility, Sir, is to ensure compliance with the Code—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Orlikow: Coward.

Mr. Nielsen: —with respect to ministerial compliance.

Mr. Broadbent: Is it the fifth amendment, Erik?

Mr. Riis: Who believes you?

Mr. de Jong: What a sham.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Erik, it's time for you to go, too.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

An Hon. Member: You're going to sink with Sinc.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

RESPONSIBILITY OF ACTING PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. This is about his own competence to ensure compliance with the ministerial responsibility Code. The Acting Prime Minister has a record of standing up and defending the indefensible—

Mr. Crosbie: Order.

Mr. Kaplan: —then backing down and changing his mind.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You premise your questions wrongly.

Mr. Kaplan: —the former Minister of National Defence, the former Solicitor General, the former Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and himself on the question of wiretapping the Liberal Caucus. So I want to ask him how he can be expected to be taken seriously in his responsibility—

Mr. Crosbie: Order.

Mr. Kaplan: —to make judgments of other Ministers about the applicability of this Code?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, all I can do in response to that question is to observe that we have sunk to new lows in the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We sure have. Yes, we have.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Crosbie: Turner's back worse than ever. It's a disgrace. Go back to the hog farm.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

ENFORCEMENT OF CODE OF CONDUCT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): I want to direct my supplementary question to the Acting Prime Minister. With that kind of track record, should not the responsibility of presiding over the enforcement of that Code be given to some other Minister?

An Hon. Member: Yes.

Mr. Andre: How can you allow that kind of question from that kind of slimy—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Scumball.

Mr. Kaplan: It's a fact. It's on the record.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Next question.

ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S WIFE—COMPLIANCE WITH CODE OF CONDUCT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, we have asked the question of the Minister and the Acting Prime Minister which goes to the root of the question of whether the Minister's wife and therefore, the Minister, received benefit from this loan transaction. If the Acting Prime Minister is not going to answer and if the Minister is not going to answer, who is it who will respond to that simple, straightforward question?

An Hon. Member: We have to know.

An Hon. Member: Ask his wife.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have anwered that question.

Mr. Broadbent: No, you've avoided it.

Mr. Nielsen: The Minister has answered a similar question yesterday.

Mr. Broadbent: No, you haven't answered it.

Mr. Nielsen: My responsibility is to ensure compliance with the Code. I have said that often enough.

Mr. de Jong: You haven't exercised your responsibility.

Mr. Nielsen: I have also said that I am satisfied that compliance has been had. If the Hon. Member is not prepared to accept that, there is nothing I can do to help him.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, the public has a right to know, I believe, an answer to this very simple question, that is, did the Minister through his wife, receive benefit as a result of this loan transaction? The Deputy Prime Minister refuses to answer the question. The Minister himself refuses to answer the question. To whom can we go with this question to obtain a straightforward and simple response?

• (1440)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the assertion in the question of the hon. gentleman is absolutely false. I have continued to answer questions now for seven days in a row on this matter, as has the Minister concerned, as recently as yesterday.

Mr. Broadbent: You're taking the fifth amendment now!

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

HYUNDAI COMPANY—MINISTER'S ROLE WITHIN CABINET

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Deputy Prime Minister. In a previous Question Period the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion indicated that the decision to absolve Hyundai of its obligation to purchase billions of dollars worth of Canadian goods was made by Cabinet. In presenting his recommendations to Cabinet did that Minister declare his conflict of interest? Did he declare to Cabinet that he was the recipient of a loan which was held by a bank in which Hyundai was a major shareholder? Upon receipt of that information what action did the Prime Minister take in order to absolve that Minister of his responsibilities because of that conflict of interest?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman has come to a conclusion which I do not share. Quite apart from that, he knows, or should know better than to ask me questions with respect to what goes on or what does not go on in Cabinet meetings since traditionally that has not been discussed on the floor of the House.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER DIVEST HIMSELF OF RESPONSIBILITIES RELATING TO HYUNDAI DECISIONS

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in this very crucial case which will cost the country billions of dollars worth of goods, did the Minister declare the fact that he had a basic conflict because he was in receipt of a loan? Knowing now that he was in receipt of a loan—having that knowledge at the present time—is the Deputy Prime Minister now prepared to ask this Minister to absent himself from any responsibilities in making decisions as they relate to Hyundai which are clearly a conflict of interest?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman mixes up, as is his usual fashion, and as seems to be the habit of Members opposite, false premises with questions studded with accusations. I do not share his convictions.

Mr. Orlikow: You wouldn't admit it if you did share them.

Mr. Nielsen: I am satisfied that the answers of the Minister yesterday with respect to the so-called hundreds of millions of dollars of loss to Canada gave adequate explanation. The Hon. Member may choose not to believe that those figures are inaccurate—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Orlikow: Time to quit, Erik!

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—APPLICATION TO MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. The public has the right to know what is going on with regard to the conflict of interest guidelines. Will the Minister answer this question directly? Did the Minister receive some benefit from the loan negotiated by his wife with Magna International?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the public has a right to know that Ministers of the Crown have complied with the Code.

Mr. Nunziata: How do we know? Give us the facts.

Mr. Nielsen: There is a public record which is kept in the office of the Assistant Deputy Registrar General. I could ask the hon. gentleman whether or not he has visited the office of the Assistant Deputy Registrar General in order to look at the public records which are available to him. Has he done that?

Oral Questions

REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE THE MINISTER DID NOT RECEIVE ANY BENEFITS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, we know the understanding that the Deputy Prime Minister has of the guidelines and so on, but the public must know whether or not the conflict of interest guidelines have been breached. That is something which is not decided by the Registrar. Will the Minister assure us that the guidelines were not breached and that there were no benefits to this Minister as a result of the loan as it was negotiated?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is quite obvious that the Hon. Member is asking questions without even having taken the trouble to visit the office of the ADRG to look at the public record. If he had done so he would have found that the Minister had fully complied with the Code, as he is required to do.

HOUSING

INTRODUCTION OF RENTAL HOUSING ACT BY PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation. On Monday, May 5, the Peterson Government of Ontario introduced a Draconian piece of legislation—the Rental Housing Act—which effectively blocks tenants of the former Cadillac Fairview apartment buildings from purchasing their own units. In view of the federal Government's interest in the buildings vis-à-vis the CDIC, will the Minister tell the House what action the federal Government is prepared to take in order to protect taxpayers and to assist tenants in their struggle for self-determination of their future and their homes?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his very important question. It is the first one today.

The Hon. Member must know that the responsibility rests with the Province of Ontario and the municipality. I can inform the Hon. Member that CMHC's policy as it pertains to social housing which is being sold is that tenants are given the right of first refusal. The Ontario Government has made a decision which is within its jurisdiction. I am very sorry, but there is nothing that the federal Government or—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PROPOSED SALE OF CANADAIR—ROLE OF MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. The Minister knows that in the next number of months one of his prime responsibilities will be with respect to the Government's decision to proceed with the sale of Canadair. He knows that Magna has submitted one of a number of bids which have been made for the company. As well, as Minister he knows—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order!

Mr. Tobin: —neither the business community nor the public at large believe the Minister can be objective in managing this sale—

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Tobin: I wish to ask the Minister this. Does he not agree that if a senior official of York Centre, his own company, says he deserves a slap on the wrist, it is not surprising that the public of Canada believes he deserves a kick out of Cabinet?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I take it that the thrust of that—if we can call it a question—was, what is the process with respect to the privatization of Canadair? As I indicated to the House earlier, we have received five proposals which are now being analysed by Warburgs, Merrill Lynch and Burns Fry. In turn, they will be making recommendations to the officers of CDIC, who in turn will make a recommendation to the divestiture committee of CDIC, and then to the Board of CDIC, which will then make a recommendation to myself. From myself that recommendation will go to the privatization task force of Cabinet and, ultimately, the entire Cabinet will decide on what deal, if any, will be made with regard to Canadair.

INQUIRY OF MINISTER

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the real question is, what is the process by which this Minister, after a couple of weeks of heavy grilling in the House, comes to his senses, rediscovers his sense of decency and respect for public institutions—

Some Hon. Members: Order, order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Tobin: Does the hon. gentleman intend to tender his resignation and restore dignity to Parliament and to his post? That is the real question.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that the comments in his preamble are out of order.

Mr. Tobin: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Crosbie: Sit down, Tobin!

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—LOAN NEGOTIATED BY MINISTER'S WIFE

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Deputy Prime Minister. For a week we have been attempting to get an answer from the Minister. Up until today the Deputy Prime Minister has been answering, whether we like it or not. I wish to ask the Deputy Prime Minister this question. Whether the Minister gets a direct benefit from the loan obtained by his wife goes to the very root of the conflict of interest principle. I want the Minister to answer these questions. Will he tell us whether he agrees that the Minister is deriving a benefit? If that is so, should the Minister not leave his post? Will he answer those questions now, yes or no?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman might not be happy with the division of responsibilities and my responsibility as Acting Prime Minister to respond in the House with respect to the administration of the Code of Conduct and the Minister's responsibility for the Department which he heads. However, those are the facts of life. I do not share with the Hon. Member the accusations which he makes in the form of his questions. I am required, and have done so, to ensure that compliance is had with the Code of Conduct, to which all Ministers must comply.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, once again, that was no answer to the question. I say to the Minister with great seriousness, in the parliamentary system of government there is no place for the fifth amendment, which is a moral cop-out on the part of this Minister. That is what it is.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1450)

Mr. Broadbent: I will try it this way. Is the Minister now telling the House that on a question which goes to the root of the principle of conflict of interest, namely, whether the Minister obtains the benefit which goes to his wife, the Minister who claims responsibility for dealing with those issues would not have the courage and the integrity to answer the question? Is that what he is saying?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman can try it whichever way he pleases. He and all Members who have been asking questions on this matter for seven days have been trying to have me say what they would like me to say. I am not going to say what they would like me to say. I am going to discharge my responsibilities by telling them that I am entrusted with ensuring that the Code is complied with, and that that Minister has complied with the Code.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

DOMESTIC PRICE OF WHEAT—EFFECT ON PROCESSORS

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board. The prospect of domestic wheat price increases is concerning the processors of many flour-based products in that they may become non-competitive with imports from the United States. What action is the Government considering to safeguard the viability of Canadian food processors who are already paying six cents per pound more than their American competitors?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has raised a question of concern to all of us in the industry. As he will know, the parliamentary committee is investigating ways by which we can accomplish an increase in the domestic price of wheat, and at the same time ensure that there is fairness to processors, manufacturers, consumers, and farmers who are facing some very serious price competition. Before any decision is made, we want to ensure that all those considerations are being taken into account. At any rate, no decision will be made or no price increase will come into effect before the first of August.

THE ADMINISTRATION

ETHICS—GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister.

Today, in an article by Paul-André Comeau appearing in the newspaper Le Devoir, I read, and I quote:

> The federal Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion should have the courage to hand in his resignation to the leader of the Government.

Doesn't the Deputy Prime Minister agree it is immoral to defend his Minister's stand and that the people of Quebec can no longer trust this Minister with the Canadair dossier and the Matane paper mill project?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, not at all. I am really surprised that the hon. gentleman, coming from the Province of Quebec, would have condemnatory words to say about a Minister who, for the first time in 16 years, signed a $1 billion ERDA agreement with his own province.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

POSSIBLE RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary.

I would like to remind the Deputy Prime Minister that two Quebecers did have had the courage of their convictions: Mr. Masse and Mrs. Blais-Grenier had the courage to resign and to leave their jobs.

Is the Deputy Prime Minister prepared to ask the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to resign his portfolio, since the attitude of the Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister reflects on the reputation of all Members of this House?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that the hon. gentleman would accuse the former Minister of State of resigning by reason of some impropriety, because that is simply not the truth. In respect of the Minister of Communications, the facts are of record. He acted quite properly, and he is back with us, I am sure much to the pleasure of the hon. gentleman.

FISHERIES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I would like to switch for a moment to some other fishy business. My question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. As she knows, major trade unions representing fishermen and shore workers on both the East and West Coasts are here in the Gallery today for the first time in history—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: My mother-in-law is here too, but I wouldn't want to say it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows full well that any reference to the presence of anyone in the Gallery is out of order. The Hon. Member for Saskatoon East.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will come back in a minute to the Hon. Member for Skeena.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Yes, I will.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is a difficult enough day without all the noise. I will come back to the Hon. Member, but he knows that that reference was improper. The Hon. Member for Saskatoon East.

TRADE

NEGOTIATIONS WITH OECD COUNTRIES ON AGRICULTURAL ISSUE

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. In the past few days we saw the Prime Minister focus a great deal of international attention on the plight of western Canadian farmers in light of increasing and harmful American and European farm subsidies. When is the OECD expected to commence its study on the international agricultural issue, and what other measures will be taken by the Minister's officials with OECD countries to resolve the issue?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I advise the Hon. Member that work has already been started by the OECD. A report will be prepared and ready for the next OECD ministerial meeting. In the meantime, I and my colleagues, the Minister of Finance, the Secretary of State for External Affairs and other relevant Ministers, will be discussing the issue at every opportunity with members of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Skeena. Just a question, please.

FISHERIES

COVERAGE OF FISHERMEN UNDER UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister of Employment and Immigration prepared to allay the fears of fishermen on both the East and West Coasts of Canada and to assure them and their communities that they will continue to be fully covered by the Unemployment Insurance Act? Does the Minister, and her Government, agree that fishermen are workers in fact and must be covered by the Unemployment Insurance Act?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity of meeting with these individuals yesterday, of exchanging views with them, and of receiving their representations. I must say that I understand their fears and concerns. I trust that I was able to allay them in some measure.

Some Hon. Members: Not at all.

Miss MacDonald: I also wish to state that at the conclusion of the meeting, they thanked me for the opportunity of having had the discussion.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I would like to get to the nub of it. Will the Minister rise in her place and agree that fishermen are workers in fact and that they should be covered by the Unemployment Insurance Act?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, there seems to be some confusion in the Hon. Member's mind. Fishermen are covered by the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Mr. Fulton: Are they workers, and are they to stay covered?

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT INVESTMENTS IN QUEBEC—ROLE OF MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. A few minutes ago he reproached the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie by indicating, in a way, that he should not ask questions related to investments in Quebec. Did the Deputy Prime Minister seriously mean to imply that investments made by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion in Quebec should deny the Opposition the right to pose questions to him on the integrity of that Minister?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not mean at all to stop the liberal flow of questions directed to me in my capacity as Deputy Prime Minister, as Minister of National Defence or, at the moment, as Acting Prime Minister.

REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE REFERRAL

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in light of what transpired again today, why does the Deputy Prime Minister consistently reject the notion of sending this whole matter to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, this is a curious question which keeps getting raised. I think Hon. Members know that my distinguished colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, will defend his Estimates tonight. He is going to be available to answer questions on departmental responsibilities. If the Hon. Member doesn't know that, he doesn't know anything.

POINTS OF ORDER

RESPONSES TO QUESTIONS—MINISTERIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to raise a point of order about your rulings during Question Period about ministerial responsibility. I respectfully submit that the questions which you did not allow to be placed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) were clearly phrased and intended to refer to the Minister's handling of his responsibilities concerning his Department and his administration of that Department. Second, even if the questions related to the compliance of the Minister with the conflict of interest guidelines, I submit that they were still matters of the responsibility of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), in the letter which has been cited often in this House, says:

> I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interests, including those that might arise out of activities of their spouses.

It may be that the Prime Minister has delegated to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) the job of administering the process of the application of the conflict of interest guidelines, but the Prime Minister has said very clearly that the responsibility for complying with those guidelines is on the shoulder of each and every Minister.

Surely if the Prime Minister of Canada says in writing what he considers to be the responsibilities of his Ministers, then I submit with the utmost respect that it should be good enough for you, Sir.

If you accept what the Prime Minister of Canada has said, and it is clear that questions can be validly directed to Ministers about how they comply with those guidelines, I want to bring my remarks on this point to a conclusion by bringing to your attention what I think is a very important precedent.

In February, 1983 questions were directed in this House to the Hon. Marc Lalonde when he was Minister of Finance. These questions related to a matter which, as the then Opposition alleged, involved conflict of interest, which we submit was in that case unfounded—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: You have blown your case.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): —but that matter arose when the Hon. Marc Lalonde was Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, the portfolio he held prior to being Minister of Finance. These questions to Mr. Lalonde were not only allowed by the Speaker but were answered by Mr. Lalonde. Among those asking questions was the then Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley), and that individual is still in this House as the Hon. Member for Don Valley West.

I respectfully submit to you, Sir—and I now speak to you in your capacity as Speaker of this House—that if it was acceptable to your predecessor that a question asked by the Member from Don Valley West concerning a matter of conflict of interest involving a Minister not in the capacity he held when the questions were addressed but in his preceding capacity was in order, I say that there is now an unassailable precedent.

I say with the utmost respect that you should apply this precedent to questions being posed at this time in this House to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion involving his compliance with the Prime Minister's conflict of interest guidelines, which the Prime Minister himself said is a matter of individual ministerial responsibility. I ask you to apply this precedent in your undoubted role as the protector of the interests of all sides of this House and, in particular, the Official Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) on the same point of order.

Order, please. Could I appeal to the House on behalf of the Hon. Member for Don Valley West (Mr. Bosley) who would like to hear the rest of this matter, please.

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleague in asking that you reconsider over the next days the questions that were posed today and on other days that were put to the Minister to determine whether or not those questions are proper and can be put to the Minister. We are dealing with the Minister's capacity to perform duties assigned to him as a Minister for a particular portfolio. Those questions were directed with regard to whether the Minister is able to perform those duties properly. In addition, certain matters have occurred outside.

I want to suggest, for example, that in looking at the question you take into account a number of matters. To begin with, I ask you to get and read the open letter to Members of Parliament and Senators sent by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) dated September 9, 1985. On page 3 it says:

> I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of activities of their spouses or dependent children or the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependant children.

I also draw to your attention, Sir, in the guidelines themselves at page 3, Item 7 under the heading Principles, which reads:

> 7. Every public office holder shall conform to the following principles:
> (a) Public office holders shall perform their official duties and so arrange their private affairs in such a manner that public confidence and trust in the integrity, objectivity and impartiality of Government are conserved and enhanced—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What has that got to do with this?

Mr. Deans: I contend that questions with regard to whether or not an individual Minister has lived up to both the requirements within the letter and the requirements within the guidelines can and ought to be addressed to the Minister himself or herself and no other Minister regardless of how competent they may think they are. I contend that the Minister can answer individual questions relating to matters that do touch upon his or her capacity to administer his or her Department properly. In this instance, given that there is a close relationship between events that occurred as a result of an action taken by the spouse of the Minister and the Minister's ability to perform his duties as set down by law, questions with regard to the action of that spouse, as they touch upon the Minister's responsibilities, are appropriate and can be put to the Minister.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, what we have just witnessed is, I guess, a reflection of the frustration of the Opposition with the ineffectual way in which the Opposition has been making unfair accusations without foundation against a Member of this House.

An Hon. Member: Read the newspaper.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Let us simply put this into perspective.

I listened with great care to the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) when he brought out the so-called precedent concerning the much remembered Coalgate issue. With all deference to my hon. friend, that is a completely different and unrelated set of circumstances. I remember it very clearly. I know that the questions put by people who had something to question about at that time were directed to Mr. Lalonde in his capacity as Minister of Finance. He responded in that capacity with respect to the administration of his Department.

• (1510)

The opposition Members are trying to have it both ways. They are the first to rise in the House if a Minister, who does not have responsibility for departmental concerns, attempts to answer questions, because they allege a person is a reasonable representative, or if a Minister from the Province of Saskatchewan, for example, tries to answer a question with regard to the Province of Quebec. The rules are quite clear, Mr. Speaker. You are following precedents which have been established by Speakers through time immemorial in this place, that is, if a Minister has ministerial responsibility for a Department he can and should respond to questions.

The fact that there is a Code of Conduct for all Ministers does not give any particular responsibility to all Ministers. In this case, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) carries out the responsibility of monitoring the situation on behalf of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Questions with respect to compliance or otherwise with conflict of interest guidelines or the code of conduct are not a matter of ministerial responsibility. I am sorry to disappoint the Hon. Member opposite, but that is the fact. Yesterday and the day before he complained because the Acting Prime Minister was answering questions. He was trying to constrain the Acting Prime Minister from answering on behalf of the Government. Today he says the rules have all changed, and now they want Ministers to answer with respect to issues which do not fall under their departmental responsibility or the mandate of the position they hold.

With the greatest of deference, Sir, the precedent which has been put forward by the Hon. Member for Windsor West is totally irrelevant and has no bearing on this particular situation. On a number of occasions you have set out the rules with regard to Question Period. The Acting Prime Minister is responding with respect to policy and conflict of interest. There is no complaint whatsoever. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) has answered every question put to him with respect to departmental responsibility. He makes himself available in the course of Estimates before committees of the House. The proposition put forward is without foundation or precedent.

Mr. Penner: I rise on the point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: On the same point of order? I think the Chair has heard the arguments. I will hear the Hon. Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner) very briefly.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I have been looking carefully for some direction in Beauchesne's in the form of a ruling which would support the contention that a Minister may not be asked about his compliance or otherwise with a Code of Conduct to which he has individually agreed to adhere. I fail to find anywhere in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition that such questions are inadmissible. Citation 359 on page 132 says:

> A question must be within the administrative competence of the Government.

It then deals specifically with the Minister within the Government and says:

> The Minister to whom the question is directed is responsible to the House for his present Ministry—

Sir, we link competency and responsibility for that Ministry. I find it inconceivable to imagine how you can have competency when you have failed to live up to the responsibilities which are outlined in a Code of Conduct. Competency and adherence to the code of conduct are directly linked.

The Hon. House Leader has argued as well that we cannot put questions to Ministers which are outside of their direct responsibility. Again, Beauchesne's is very clear on what kind of areas lie outside. Nowhere does it mention that the Code of Ethics is excluded. Citation 361 on page 133 reads:

> A question may not be asked of a Minister in another capacity, such as being responsible for a province, or part of a province, or as spokesman for a racial or religious group.

It does not say "his or her responsibility for the Code of Conduct".

Without citing particular instances, but rather speaking in generalities, it is clear in my memory that whenever a Minister of the Crown was, at some point in his career, in personal difficulty with respect to ethics, it was never suggested by the Chair that that Minister could not be cross-examined. There are all sorts of examples in the Journals—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Penner: —where a Minister was cross-examined by members of the Opposition.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! Order, please. This is now veering into comment on the Chair, with respect. I accept and welcome the arguments which have been made on the procedural question. I will be glad to hear the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate (Mr. Baker) very briefly in one second. As I heard them, to my hearing, the questions which were put by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), were put to the Minister about his personal affairs. That is why I ruled them out of order. I would be glad to check that with the "blues".

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I want to make it very clear to your Honour that in my latter remarks I was not, in any way, reflecting upon the Chair. I was saying that Speakers had allowed those questions. It was no reflection on you, Sir. I was simply saying that there are many, many precedents in the House where a Minister was cross-examined regarding his or her personal conduct. The questions were not necessarily directly related to his or her portfolio. I was not, therefore, in saying that, reflecting upon you. I was simply quoting historical precedents in the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate.

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, in bringing down your decision on this point of order I believe that probably the most important thing to be kept in mind is that we all recognize that the House of Commons has, over the years, for one reason or another, lost its control over what we define as law-making. The major duty of the House of Commons today is a surveillance function of the Government of Canada, that is, holding the Government accountable. I fear that unless there is a division in the ruling that you give, and not a decision based on a general principle which, granted, appears to have become accepted, your primary concern should be that the House of Commons still be able to fulfil perhaps the only role that it has left, and that is, its proper surveillance of the Government of Canada on behalf of the people of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps I could share with the House a brief note from the Clerk which reads: "I assume you will reserve". Yes, I intend to. I do want to reiterate to the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) that my reasoning on the first set of questions was that, as far as I could tell, there was no mention in the body of the questions as to how they related to the conflict of interest issue. That was my reason in that case.

For the last few days the Chair has tried to grant as broad a latitude as it could within the practices of the House. The Chair has been quite concerned about where to draw the line. I will be happy to look at the arguments and return to the House. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) on a separate point of order.

QUESTIONS PUT TO COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There is a very important rule in this House. I would like to draw your attention to Standing Order 66(3). As I understand it, it provides that any Member who asks a question during Question Period and, for whatever reason, thinks the answer is incomplete or unsatisfactory, is able to send notice to the Clerk and participate in an Adjournment Debate. Section 66(3) outlines that the Member has up to seven minutes in which to speak and that a Minister of the Crown or a Parliamentary Secretary has up to three minutes in which to speak.

With great respect, Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring it to your attention that last Monday I asked the Chairman of the Standing Committee on Energy, Mines and Resources a question and wanted to pursue it through the Adjournment Debate. I sent a note to the Clerk at the Table. I was later advised that this process was not available on a question asked of a chairman of a standing committee.

With great respect, given my extensive experience of 20 months in this House, I ask that you consider this question. It may have been a drafting oversight. If not, could we perhaps avail ourselves of the reason for what appears to be an omission?

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I think the second part of the point of order by the Hon. Member, as I understood it, about being able to have what we call a "Late Show" on his question, is a point worthy of consideration. If the rules as interpreted by you, Sir, in your judgment, are too narrow—and I hope you will not find that—I will be happy to consult with my colleagues about possible changes. However, if he was suggesting in the first part of his point of order that there is something questionable or improper about raising points of order concerning Question Period, I respectfully submit that whatever the rules say about Question Period, there are innumerable precedents concerning points of order being raised, listened to by the Speaker, and accepted. I just want to put that on the record.

Mr. Speaker: I do not think the Hon. Member was suggesting that. The matter has been brought to my attention. I am afraid the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) is going to be slightly disappointed because I am ready to say something.

The Chair looked at this matter when it was brought to my attention by the Table Officers at the request of the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell). I have examined the rule quite carefully. It seems to me that the rule was drafted in the context of questions to and answers by Ministers or Parliamentary Secretaries. The whole issue of a change which would allow questions to the chairman of a standing committee or whatever is not contemplated in the rule. I conclude that from the part of the rule which indicates that a Minister of the Crown or a Parliamentary Secretary speaking on behalf of a Minister, if he or she wishes to do so, may speak in reply for not more than three minutes.

I have to find that because I have to rule that the chairman of the committee may not reply. The reason for this is that the chairman of the committee is not mentioned here as having a right to reply. Therefore, if the House follows me, I have to rule that the first seven minutes of the "Late Show" cannot be, under the rules as they are written, granted in that situation. In other words, the right to comment carries with it the right to reply. The rule says that. If I have to rule that no reply is proper, then I have to rule that the commencement is improper. I do not think I have any other choice, given the rule.

Therefore, I suggest that if Members wish the rules changed, they will have to proceed that way. House Leaders may wish to advise me that they want me to interpret the standing order in some other way, but that is the way the Chair interprets it for now. If the Hon. Member for Windsor West and the Parliamentary Secretary are asking me to say that without making a final decision, I am happy to do so and then to discuss it further.

On another point of order, the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata).

REASON REQUESTED FOR DISALLOWANCE OF S.O. 21 STATEMENT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, while I was making a statement pursuant to Standing Order 21 today, Your Honour prematurely cut me off. I would like to ask Your Honour to explain why I was not permitted to make a full statement pursuant to Standing Order 21.

Mr. Speaker: For the reasons I indicated at the time. In my view the statement was out of order.

Mr. Nunziata: May I ask why the statement was out of order?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member may wish to consult the rules. I think it will be clear.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, if I may—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: If I may?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: On the same point?

Mr. Speaker: What is the Member's point?

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I was making a statement of fact about a relationship—

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Member now wish to raise a point of order saying that the Chair was wrong?

Mr. Nunziata: Yes, the Chair was wrong, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that such a comment is against the rules.

Mr. Nunziata: It is not fair not to allow me to make my statement.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nunziata: It is pretty unfair.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the Hon. Member now commenting on the Chair again?

Mr. Benjamin: He is just trying to figure a way around the rule.

Mr. Speaker: If he is commenting on the Chair, I will require him to withdraw it. If he is not, if he did not mean it that way, I am perfectly happy to go no further.

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS—ELEVENTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the eleventh report of the Standing Committee on Public Accounts. The report deals with the administration of the Law Reform Commission. Members of the committee recognize the important role of the Law Reform Commission in improving and modernizing Canadian law, but this report addresses a number of concerns relating to the management of the Commission. The commission has not updated or revised its original research program since its inception in 1972. It has not kept the Minister of Justice and Parliament fully informed of changes to its work plan. In the view of the Public Accounts Committee, greater attention should be given to project management practices in order to avoid costly delays as is the case with the criminal law review project.

ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES—SECOND REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the second report of the Standing Committee on Energy, Mines and Resources concerning Order in Council appointments tabled pursuant to Standing Order 103(1) and referred pursuant to Standing Order 67(5).

The committee has considered and is in agreement with the following appointments and nominations: Mr. Kenneth Morton Bridge to the British Columbia-Yukon-Northwest Territories Boundary Commission; Mr. Andrew Boyd Gilmour, as temporary member of the National Energy Board; and Mr. de Montigny Marchand, Mr. P. REQUEST FOR REPEAL OF CHANGES TO UI REGULATIONS

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from residents of the Municipality of Saint-Hyacinthe, the City of Saint-Hyacinthe, and other Quebec municipalities. The petitioners maintain that recent unemployment insurance changes have put Canadian early retirees in a very precarious financial situation, that the changes were decreed without any debate in the House of Commons, and that most Canadians affected by these changes were not given sufficient notice before opting for early retirement.

Wherefore the petitioners humbly call upon Parliament to repeal forthwith these changes to the unemployment insurance regulations. And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following question will be answered today: No. 261.

[Text]

DALY BUILDING

Question No. 261—Mr. Gauthier:

1. Has the Department of Public Works in any way disposed of its title to the Daly building and/or the Daly building site and (a) if so (i) by what means (ii) on what date (iii) to whom (b) if not, is any date projected for such disposal and, if so (i) by what means (ii) on what date (iii) to whom?

2. Is there any demolition and/or redevelopment schedule for the Daly building and/or the site and, if so (a) what demolition or redevelopment (b) on what dates (c) under what owner or lessee?

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of Public Works): 1. (a) and (b) The Daly building property is still owned by Public Works Canada. However, Treasury Board has approved the transfer of the property to the National Capital Commission. The Department of Justice will be requested to legally close the transaction.

2. NCC is looking for adaptive re-use of the building and has conducted a prequalification call which attracted 14 submissions. Six of these developers were then prequalified.

(a) NCC is now proceeding to Stage II of the proposal call, involving a request for financial proposals for the property. NCC considers that sufficient interest has been demonstrated to make retention of the existing structure possible.

(b) It is anticipated that financial proposals will be received by August, 1986, and that the necessary municipal and federal approvals will then be sought for a projected construction start of Fall, 1988.

(c) The selection of the lessee will depend on the outcome of the proposal call process.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Tuesday, May 6, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mr. Garneau (p.12980).

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of Bill C-96 is to cut back the federal financial transfers to provinces for education and health, in particular, to cut back transfers from the federal Government to the provinces for post-secondary education, medicare and hospitalization.

As my colleagues have said before me, this Bill C-96 is completely unacceptable to the Liberal Party. In the next few minutes I have I will explain why.

Yesterday, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) speaking in this debate said that the Bill was necessary because of the large deficit left by the previous Liberal Government. It is true that the deficit is high and must be dealt with, but it was not caused by programs for education and health. These programs have been in place for many years now, as have unemployment insurance, family allowance, medicare and hospitalization programs. In fact, some of them have been in place for 20 years. They did not cause a deficit.

The serious deficit we have now started in 1981 with the recession, not because of new programs, assistance to education, hospitalization and medication, but because of the recession when world-wide conditions, which affected not only Canada, but the entire western world and beyond, resulted in a situation where you had many people put out of work, and consequently not paying taxes. There were many companies which went under due to the situation and did not pay taxes as a result, so less revenue came in to the Government. There was a lot more revenue going out in the form of unemployment insurance, bail-outs and assistance to people in trouble. That is what caused the deficit. It was not the fault of the programs to assist education and health.

During the election campaign of 1984, Conservative Party Members continually referred to the deficit and said how bad it was. As a matter of fact, they even said at the time that it was worse than it actually was. Despite the fact they said it was bad during the campaign, they made 328 promises, most of which entailed the spending of money, including a promise to respect social programs, which they said for them was a sacred trust.

What did they say with respect to transfers to provinces for education and health care? I will quote from a document which they drafted at Sherbrooke on July 26, 1984, in which they promised the following:

> To respect the federal obligation to finance health care in the provinces through the Established Programs Financing Program and to provide additional funds to the provinces, on a parity basis, to create or enhance those programs which would be identified by a national conference of health ministers and health professionals as the ones most likely to improve the general health of Canadians and to limit the costs of the system in the long run.

During the election campaign they railed against the deficit and said how bad it was, but still made the promise I just read, which promise they are now breaking by presenting this Bill to the House of Commons to cut back on transfers to the provinces for education and health.

Finally, they attack the deficit by going after education and health, when at the same time in their recent Budgets they provided for a $500,000 tax exemption for capital gains, which will amount to a cost to the Government of $4.5 billion between this date and 1990. The Government is doing that for the big rollers. The Government provided for a bail-out to banks that have failed in this country due to mismanagement, not only in the banks but at the Government level, which will cost $1 billion. There were special benefits to large oil companies which cost the Treasury a lot of money. As soon as the Conservatives were elected they increased the size and salaries of Ministers' staff. For the first time in Canadian history the Government provided an office for the wife of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), Mila Mulroney, one which is much nicer than any of those that we have, all at public expense.

Mr. McDermid: Have you seen it?

Mr. Allmand: Have you?

Mr. McDermid: Yes.

Mr. Allmand: Why is it there? It is better than the office I had, I will tell you. It is an unwarranted expense when you are cutting back on education and health, and you know it.

The Government recently provided new offices in Vancouver for Ministers travelling about the country, while it is cutting back on education and health. I ask you, what kind of equity is that? What kind of balance is that? Here we have education and health, two of the key, essential programs for Canadians, which are essential not simply for Canadians but for all of us, because education is an investment in the economic growth of the country. It is an investment and cannot be considered simply as a transfer payment. It is an investment in the knowledge, the know-how and the capability of Canadians to produce for this country an efficient, modern nation. Second, it is an investment in the health of Canadians, which is also important for the productivity and well-being of the country.

Here we are cutting back on two essential items while we are spending with respect to the big banks, the oil companies, the capital gains taxes and so on.

The real purpose of this Bill is to transfer the federal Government's deficit to the provinces. Many of the provincial Ministers have said that. I will quote two of the provincial Ministers who are Conservatives. John Baxter, the New Brunswick Minister of Finance said:

> It is unreasonable for the federal Government to think that provinces which have taken difficult measures to deal with their own financial situation can also be expected to absorb part of the problem at the federal level.

Richard Hatfield, the Premier of New Brunswick, said the following:

> I shall have no choice but to increase user-fees for health services.

Robert Nixon, the Treasurer for Ontario, said:

> There was uniform opposition to Ottawa's plan, (referring to all the provincial Finance Ministers). Nobody thought it was a good idea.

This is the situation: a transfer of the federal debt to the provinces that cannot afford the burden, in particular with respect to education and health care. These agreements with the provinces with respect to education and health care were renegotiated in 1982, and the agreement was to last for five years until 1987. What did this Government do? It unilaterally, in a premature way, changed the agreement by way of this Bill.

In law they have the right to do that, but there has been a tradition that these five-year agreements are negotiated with the provinces, and they stand for the five-year period until renegotiated at the end of the term for a new agreement of five years to follow afterwards. That was not done in this case. We have a unilateral move by the Government to change the rules of the game in the middle of the agreement. Furthermore, these changes were not in the last federal Budget handed down by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson).

My time is up, but I want to say that this is bad legislation and should be rejected by the House of Commons.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the recent amendment, which is before the House, an amendment to Bill C-96. Of course, one cannot help but comment on Bill C-96. When the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) brought down his Budget we saw all kinds of obvious tax increases, including increases in the federal sales tax. We know what these taxes have done to ordinary Canadians throughout the country. However, there is another hidden tax for which the Tory Government is responsible. It is a tax that will be transferred to the provinces, so that they will have to increase the taxes on their citizens in order to keep up and improve the level of medicare and post-secondary education.

This unilateral action of the federal Government will have serious ramifications for all Canadians.

There is no place in Canada that will be hurt more than Atlantic Canada. I want to examine how these cuts in the established programs financing—the transfer payments to the provinces—will affect Atlantic Canada in regard to post-secondary education and health care. These two areas should not only have been left untouched, they should have been improved. Yet the Government's action will have a severe impact on Atlantic Canada, which is a region that suffers the highest unemployment in this country. It is a region that does not have the same opportunities as central Canada for economic expansion.

We know the history of that region only too well. When the unemployment statistics come out every month we hope that there is some relief in sight for Atlantic Canada.

Let us examine how Newfoundland will be affected by the cuts in transfer payments envisaged in Bill C-96. In 1986-87, there will be $7 million less; there will be $16 million less in 1987-88; $24 million less in 1988-89; $35 million less in 1989-90; and $46 million less in 1990-91. This means that there will be a total of $128 million less for the Province of Newfoundland.

Premier Peckford of Newfoundland, a fellow Conservative of the Government, stated at the Halifax First Ministers' Conference on November 28 and November 29, 1985:

> It (the EPF cut-backs) will mean $130 million less than we thought we could expect over four or five years. And there is, Mr. Chairman, a myth going about this country that somehow some of the provinces have not managed their finances very good.

He went on to say:

> —I think we are the only jurisdiction in Canada, if not the world, that imposed upon everybody that got a dollar from the public purse, zero per cent increase in year one, zero per cent increase in year two for teachers, nurses, hospital workers, clerks, secretaries. Everybody is under zero, zero in a pretty, pretty disadvantaged province with the lowest incomes and all the rest of it . . . We, Mr. Prime Minister, froze the Budgets of all the hospitals in the St. John's region for three years at 1984 levels—

A Conservative Premier was describing the effects of this on Newfoundland.

I notice that there are some Conservative Members from Newfoundland in the House. I hope they will join in the debate on this issue and explain their position to their constituents in Newfoundland. Let us take hospitals, for example. St. Claire Mercy Hospital in St. John's has launched a $3 million fund raising campaign. The campaign chairman, Ian Reid, said on December 19, 1985:

> With fiscal restraints imposed by the provincial Government over the past four years, both the quality and quantity of hospital services for Newfoundland will inevitably slip backwards unless remedial action is taken.

That will be the effect of Bill C-96. It will exacerbate the situation experienced by the St. Claire Mercy Hospital in St. John's.

An article in the Evening Telegram on January 17, 1986, states:

> Following the federal announcement that EPF contributions would be cut, Newfoundland issued a Green Paper outlining the impact of these cuts on health care. Despite severe restraint over the last five years the province still spends a quarter of its Budget on health care.

Newfoundland will have to find those funds elsewhere. It cannot afford these cut-backs. Why are the victims of economic deprivation being punished? Why is the Government going to punish Newfoundland? The Government, which was supported so well by the people of Newfoundland in 1984, is biting the hand that feeds it. The people of Newfoundland should keep that in mind, come the next federal election.

Newfoundland's two biggest hospitals, both of which are located in St. John's, each have a waiting list of more than 1,000 for elective and minor surgery and for the treatment of acute illnesses. Ralph Moore, the director of one of the hospitals, the Health Services Centre, said that cuts in federal spending hurt the health system in Newfoundland more than in most provinces. I suggest that we can apply the effects of the cut-backs on the health care system in Newfoundland to all of the Atlantic region.

I believe the Government has forgotten the words of Emmett Hall, one of the architects of the medicare system in this country. During a speech which he gave in Manitoba recently he said: "I think the defence of medicare requires the same priority as the defence of the nation." He said that in many senses, the two are very alike and should be treated that way. I believe it is true that the defence of the medicare system in Canada is similar to the defence of the nation. I think the federal Conservative Government has forgotten that.

Let us turn to the effects of Bill C-96 on post-secondary education in Newfoundland. I quote as follows from an article in the Evening Telegram on August 24, 1985:

> Memorial University is experiencing both budget restraint and rising enrolment. The result may be limitations on enrolment this year. Last year it dealt with the problem by having classes until 10 pm. Despite these financial problems the university actually received a 6.5 per cent increase this year—well above most provincial programs.

Leslie Harris, President of Memorial University of Newfoundland, said that the federal Government's plan to reduce transfer payments is an "Extremely short-sighted approach to reduce the deficit."

Another article in the Evening Telegram on December 19, 1985 states:

> Memorial University has withheld $2 million from faculty and staff pensions to permit it to balance its books to the end of the year.

As a result of the multiplier effect of these cut-backs, Memorial University had to resort to the pension fund of the faculty.

We see the same Draconian impact on each of the Atlantic provinces as a result of Bill C-96. Why does the Tory Government not go to its friends in order to reduce the deficit? Why are all the taxes in various tax schemes forgone and left untouched? The Government cuts the deficit on the backs of ordinary Canadians while giving a lifetime capital gains tax exemption of $500,000. If the Government wants to cut the deficit, it should look to those people who live off the hog in this country and do not pay their fair share of taxes.

The Government should attack unemployment in this country if it is sincere about cutting the deficit. I have said many times in the past that if the Government could reduce unemployment by 1 per cent a year, it could reduce the deficit by $2 billion. Yet the Government does not have a concentrated plan to reduce unemployment in this country. It only knows how to cut the deficit on the backs of working Canadians. It is shameful that the Government has chosen the least defensive people in Atlantic Canada and put the boots to them through Bill C-96.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I am also interested in joining in this debate because I believe these transfer payment cut-backs affect every Canadian who must take advantage of our national health scheme. It also touches every single Canadian who aspires to a post-secondary education. Something which has made us unique as a country is the fact that notwithstanding other countries such as the United States which has developed a private sector health care plan, we have adopted a national health scheme which has permitted every single Canadian man and woman to take advantage of the services of health care when he or she needs it at little or no cost to the recipient. We know at the moment that the primary users of our health care system tend to be our elderly, in particular, our elderly women who live below the poverty line. What the Government is doing with its cut-backs, without any consultation with the provinces, without any of the promised discussion which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) heralded when he came to office with his huge majority, is imposing a responsibility on the provinces to cut back in areas of post-secondary education and health.

We have already seen the results of the pressure put upon provincial Governments by the federal Government as the result of these cut-backs. Essentially, what the Government is doing is transferring its deficit to the provinces. Notwithstanding the comments made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) when he said: "We are going to come to grips with the deficit. We are the bottom line. The buck stops here", we know that is absolutely not the case because the Minister of Finance, without talking to a single province, in private discussions which we know he taped and then forgot to tell the Province of Manitoba he was taping, made a unilateral decision, along with his Government, to cut the very life-blood of our post-secondary education and health care programs.

In the Province of Ontario, because of that same pressure with respect to its health care system, negotiations are currently going on between the provincial Government of Ontario and the Ontario Medical Association. We hear and read in the newspapers that the OMA is calling on its friends in the federal Government to move in on the question of the ban on extra billing, even though we know that Hon. Members of that same federal Government, when they were in opposition, supported an all-party request for a ban on extra billing. The Hon. Member for Brampton—Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) is shaking his head. The Hon. Member for Brampton—Georgetown, if he wishes to say otherwise, should set the record straight. It is my belief and understanding, and the record will show, that the Canada Health Act was supported unanimously by all three Parties.

The Conservative Government's commitment to health care is simply not what it pretends to be. A case in point is the Province of British Columbia. Over the last number of months we have seen the Province of British Columbia ignore the question of accessibility with respect to the Canada Health Act by limiting the number of persons who can practise in that province through the Government administered plan. What that does indirectly is to say to the people of British Columbia who live in small towns and isolated communities: "You will not have access to the same kind of first-class quality medical care as will other Canadians".

Unfortunately, we have not heard a peep from the Minster of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) on this very important issue. He has remained strangely silent. We hear the Minister defending cut-backs in family allowances and reductions in the amounts which will be made available to families for the protection of their children, but he says nothing when it comes to the erosion of the Canada Health Act, which is occurring not only in British Columbia, through actions taken by the provincial Government of British Columbia, but also right here in this Chamber with this particularly insidious piece of legislation.

Anyone who understands the bottom line will know that the direct result of this particular measure will be to force provincial Governments to increase their own taxes, reduce services or introduce user-fees for our health care system. Heaven knows, in the area of post-secondary education, our provinces are already strapped when it comes to trying to deliver the kind of universally accessible publicly funded post-secondary education which has been a hallmark of this country. I think Canada has a kind of unique and available system for every Canadian. Unforunately, with this particular amendment, we will see in the very near future the day when only the rich can afford to go to university and only the wealthy can afford to send their children to college.

That was the way it was when my parents were growing up. They did not have the money to go to university and to pursue post-secondary education. By the time I had grown up and entered the system, that had changed. We had embraced a system where post-secondary education was available on the basis of skill and merit and not on the basis of family finances. With this particular cut-back, we will see a return to the old days when only the privileged could send their children to university and give them post-secondary education, when only the wealthy could go to the good schools. That is not the way of life which has typified Canada. If there is one thing which has made us different from our American counterparts, it is our recognition of our collective responsibility for health care and education. I think the two cornerstones of any Government are those which protect our young through access to education and information and which protect our old through a fully funded, universally accessible health care system. With this particular measure we see that access being eroded.

[Translation]

For instance, we know there is going to be a financial crisis in many provinces. If we consider the impact this will have on the province of Quebec, over a period of four years the province will have a deficit of $1.493 billion, while the province of Ontario will suffer cuts totalling over $2 billion. Mr. Speaker, in the province of Ontario, these cuts over a four-year period will have a direct impact on post-secondary education and health care services.

[English]

It was interesting to note, as the Government passes off its responsibility for the deficit to the provinces with this particular measure, the announcement of the new Public Service salaries on the news last night. The Government more than doubled the salaries paid to people who are earning over $70,000 per year. I understand from comments which were made on the television program that those salaries were paid specifically to political assistants as opposed to general Public Service employees.

The Government has the money to pay Michael Deaver. Even before his contract ended in Washington, the Canadian Government had made a "buddy-buddy" deal with Mr. Deaver through the auspices of Fred Doucet—some might say it was through the auspices of his brother or other relatives. Mr. Deaver was paid by the Canadian Government in a way which is casting doubt and a cloud of suspicion on the Canadian Government for involving itself in the hiring of an official who had just left the White House. The hiring of Mr. Deaver in the United States appears to be in violation of its conflict of interest guidelines. We know that if he had been a Canadian Government official, it would have been in conflict of our conflict of interest guidelines. However, the Prime Minister and the Government have taken the position that they will not even appear before the American committee hearings which are reviewing this conflict of interest. They have already paid him. They found the money to pay him quickly and without any public notice. At the same time they cannot find the money for our provinces with respect to health care and post-secondary education.

Unfortunately, that seems to be a theme of the Conservative Government. It wants to do things under the table, through the back-door, without coming clean with the public as to the exact cost benefit analysis to each and every Canadian. I would like to know why Michael Deaver is being protected by the Canadian Government in this particularly insidious hiring in which we see he was paid up even before his contract had been signed. If the pay is there for him, why is it not there for the provinces through transfer payments?

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I started to speak the other day on this matter and, of course, 10 minutes does not afford one a long time to make the arguments I think have to be made.

Mr. McDermid: It is never enough time for you.

Mr. Deans: My colleague says it is never enough time. He is probably right. I find it very difficult to understand the reasoning of the Government.

I had an opportunity last evening to listen to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie) as he spoke in a very entertaining way, I might say, about the Government's position vis-à-vis the cut-backs which are occurring as a result of this piece of legislation. I have always held that the country will be measured by its capacity to provide an adequate level of health care and a fair opportunity for education. With these two items, the basis of a good and reasonable lifestyle for the majority of our citizens has been created.

• (1600)

I admit that there are other factors which come into play. If it was the intention of the Government to ensure fair and equal access to health care, as was determined many years ago, then the action now being taken by the Government flies in the face of that commitment. If it is the position of the federal Government that its role in more equitably distributing opportunities for fair and equal access to health care is to be diminished, then I think it should say so. If the Government believes it is reasonable either to transfer more of the burden of cost to the provinces, or to transfer more of the burden of cost to individuals and families, then I think we have a basic and fundamental disagreement here in the House of Commons.

As I listen to the arguments infrequently put forward by government Members and their supporters with regard to why this is a useful piece of legislation, I cannot help but feel that the Government has not yet come to grips with the reality of the situation. If we are to transfer more of the burden from the federal to the provincial levels of Government, that will inevitably mean that most provinces where there is not an adequate tax base today will have to reduce the level of health care facilities, and, therefore, the level of health care they deliver to their citizens. I would have thought, and I say to those Ministers who are present—both of them—that, given that they come from regions of the country which fall into the category of needing a more fair distribution of the national wealth, the argument I am now making would have been put forward by them. I would not be surprised if it was put forward, which may well have happened in the secrecy of a cabinet meeting. Of course, that is something we do not know. However, it is something which is not being advanced here in the House of Commons.

I wish to say to the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) that one of the problems which will now flow from the decision being taken by the Government is that families in the less-advantaged provinces, which even in this day and age still do not have the same degree of access to health care which families in the more affluent areas have, will have even less access. They will not even be able to enjoy the somewhat more limited access which they had previously enjoyed. Frankly, I do not think that is in the best interests of co-operative federalism. I do not happen to believe it is consistent with the nature of the country. I feel that the Government should take this piece of legislation—well, I could tell it what to do with it—but it should at least rethink it before it does anything with it.

I say this because there is a serious problem emerging. I suggest that the problem I identify in health care will be felt equally in the area of post-secondary education. The Minister knows that the families of fishermen have enough trouble now scraping together the necessary dollars to allow their offspring to go to a university or college of their choice in order to improve the quality of life beyond that which their forefathers enjoyed. I think that is fair to say. I do not think I would get any disagreement on that point. It is something which is equally true of the families of loggers and of miners. In fact, it is now becoming true for those families who reside in the built-up areas of the country. By reducing the level of increase in transfer payments, thereby reducing the amount of money available to the provinces, and thereby reducing the amount of money available for post-secondary education, tuition fees will have to rise. If tuition fees rise I know, as do all Members, that in terms of income, many marginal families which were scraping together the money to allow their children to go on to what they hoped would be a better quality of life through a better education will no longer be able to afford to do that. I suggest to the Government that the rest of Canada is prepared to assume the necessary responsibility for ensuring that that will not be the consequence of the action the Government is taking. It need not and should not be the consequence of the new direction of this Government.

I would like to put forward Ontario as an example. The Province of Ontario is economically diverse. As everyone knows, some areas are more affluent than others. Some areas of the province have easy access to health care and education while others have less easy access. In some cases, access is very difficult to achieve. Children in areas where access is less easy, or where economic deprivation exists, and who by virtue of support programs offered through a variety of different means, but which are no longer being offered because of the economic downturn which has taken place in many of these areas, will be doomed to a life not at all unlike the life which their parents decided was not adequate for them because they had already had to live it. They will not be able to improve their lot. They will not be able to provide Canada with the benefits of a more highly-educated society.

Over the next five years the Province of Ontario will lose $2.014 billion as a result of the proposed cuts. Where will the province go to find $2.014 billion? How many hospital beds will have to be eliminated, and in what communities? How many places in universities will have to be cut as a result of the loss of this revenue? How many youngsters will not be able to continue with their education because they will not be able to attend institutions as a result of fee increases which will inevitably take place? How many people will knock on hospital doors with illnesses which require hospitalization, only to be turned away because the hospital will not be able to provide the level of service which it had been providing previously? I might add that this is a level of service which has been diminishing systematically over the last five or six years.

In closing, I say that I am puzzled by the way the Government has set its priorities. I am concerned that the Government does not recognize that the taxpayers at the federal level are, indeed, the taxpayers at the provincial level. They are one and the same. EPF is intended to distribute more equitably the tax base in such a way as to guarantee basic services in areas of greatest need. That is what we were all committed to when we decided to become a country. That is what we in the Parliament of Canada have been committed to over the many years Parliament has been operating. That is what we in this party remain committed to. That is what I thought the Conservative Party was committed to when it sat in opposition.

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to take part in this debate for the second time and to support the amendment of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), which reads as follows:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

"this House refuse to continue the consideration of this Bill, the purpose of which is to unilaterally reduce federal payments to the provinces for post-secondary education and health services which are essential."

I stress the same points which the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) stressed. While health care is very important, and while the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain suggested that it may be affected by the over-all cut-backs, it seems to me that the most serious effect will be on young people. That is why I consider the Bill to be so important. It strikes at something very fundamental in Canadian society, that is, the situation in which young people find themselves. The Senate report has just described them as being in danger of becoming a lost generation. They are at the divide between the technological society and the information society. They are caught in a time warp. They are caught in a squeeze. They are caught in a transition from one society to another. They are in jeopardy. They are in danger. They are a generation which is struggling to find their place in the sun in future and to discover how they will live up to the expectations which their parents had for them, as the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain said.

It is all very well to talk about free trade. It is all very well to talk about industrial restructuring. It is all very well to talk about capital investment. It is all very well to talk about the creation of jobs, as did the Government during the election campaign. It is all very well to give priority to those matters and to come up with a strategy to achieve those objectives. However, unless we give young Canadians the wherewithal to take advantage of the opportunities created, all of that is useless and beside the point.

Again I have to say that what we have is a generation which is in danger of being a lost generation, as the Senate described it. It is no more evident than in my own province where 50 per cent of eligible young people are unemployed and have dim prospects for employment. It is probably the highest percentage in the whole country, and I suggest that it is a national tragedy. That is the kind of thing about which I am talking, and it is at a time when they need training and education. The great hope is that somehow jobs will be created in that province by the development of the offshore, for example. Even if they are—and I hope they are—how do our people take advantage of those opportunities unless they have the training which is needed? That is what we were depending upon, and that is where we are losing out as a result of Bill C-96. Over the next five years the Province of Newfoundland will receive $187 million less than it had anticipated. This is in a province which is already strapped for financial resources.

How can the Province of Newfoundland find the money to do the things which need to be done? The Hon. Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner) addressed that issue yesterday, and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain alluded to it again today. If we say to the Province of Newfoundland that it has to find $187 million more this year within its own resources because it is not coming from the Government of Canada, what can it do? Can it raise taxes above the highest rate in the country? The sales tax in Newfoundland is 12 per cent, the highest anywhere in Canada. The income tax is as high as it can possibly be, on people who can least afford to bear the burden. Should Newfoundland raise taxes? Should it cut back services? As the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain asked, should it reduce the number of hospital beds? Should it reduce highway services? Should it reduce welfare and other services? Where will the reduction be? Where will provinces like Newfoundland find resources if those resources are not forthcoming from the Government of Canada?

Never mind that a tradition, if not a legal agreement, was abrogated; never mind that argument. Legally, the Government of Canada can do what it is doing, but traditionally it has not done that. Traditionally in the fifth year of an agreement there would be a renegotiation. We heard about the new civility and the new co-operation. However, at the end of a five-year agreement, the Province of Newfoundland is being told unilaterally that it must be prepared to receive $187 million less than it had anticipated and less than what was agreed to. That is what the Government of Canada is saying to Newfoundland and to the young people of Newfoundland. I suggest that that is the real tragedy about the Bill before us today.

Everyone from whom we have heard suggests that there is a crisis now in post-secondary education. The universities have less funds available to them to cope with the number of students who want an education. There is a crisis in research. No developed country in the world economy today will be able to compete in the world market-place unless it keeps up on the leading edge of technology. This is why research is important. Part of that $187 million that Newfoundland would have received this year from the Government of Canada would have gone into paying for professors, classrooms, facilities and courses to teach students not only at university but at the trades college, the fisheries college and all other post-secondary institutions. Also part of it would have gone toward the necessary research which needs to be done if small companies, for example, are to take part in the offshore. Nordco, Secore, and all such organizations were built on research funds which came from the Government of Canada. This is where they got their wherewithal from; this is what allowed them to survive.

One small company in Newfoundland has developed a safety suit for the offshore. The reason it was able to do so was that it had the necessary funding to develop a marketable and useful product, a product which is not only supplying the offshore with a very important function but is supporting a small business in St. John's. That is a direct result of transfers. That is a direct result of established programs financing in the research field. If we do not keep up with research in that province and across the country, we will be unable to compete because we will not be on the leading edge of technology.

In conclusion, the real tragedy is that the Bill hits at the most vulnerable and the most important group in society today as we go into the new age of international competition—the young people who are in danger of becoming a lost generation. For goodness' sake, the Government should pay attention to what people are saying and to the call of young people and reverse this trend. If we must make someone pay, let us not place the burden upon the backs of our young people.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, if Bill C-96 were enacted, it would permit the federal Government of Canada to reduce the federal share of the costs of health services and post-secondary education programs which have been established and improved over recent years. Universal hospital insurance, universal medical insurance, and post-secondary education funding for our universities and community colleges were developed because the then federal Government indicated to the provinces that those services should be improved and brought up to a much higher standard. Also the then Government indicated that it would pay 50 per cent if the provinces agreed. In the case of some of the have-not provinces, it would pay even more than 50 per cent. That was the policy followed and the principle used for many years. That policy continued until the then Liberal Government, using the same arguments we are now hearing from the present Conservative Government, using the 6-and 5-guidelines, cut the amount of spending to the provinces. The then Liberal Government brought in legislation changing the formula giving the provinces under the Established Programs Financing legislation block funds so that the provinces did not have to commit the money they got from the federal Government to health programs or post-secondary education.

The Government is facing a deficit. It says it has to reduce the deficit. It is going to reduce the deficit partly by cutting payments made to the provinces for post-secondary education and health care. The Government knows that the provinces, particularly the have-not provinces, the Province of Newfoundland which has a Conservative Government, the Province of Nova Scotia, which has a Conservative Government, the Province of New Brunswick, which has a Conservative Government, the Province of Prince Edward Island, which had a Conservative Government until a few weeks ago, and the Province of Manitoba, which has a New Democratic Government, are already stretched to the limit and already have been told by the bond-holders that they cannot run bigger deficits than they already have.

What can the provinces do if this Bill passes and the Government begins to pay a smaller share of the cost of funding health care and post-secondary education programs? The provinces can cut back on the standard of services. As my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) pointed out a few moments ago, they can cut the number of hospital beds. They can tell the universities to admit fewer students or to have bigger classes. They can impose user-fees. That is one of the tenets of this Conservative Government: make people pay for the services they get even if they cannot afford them, or increase taxes, choices that are almost impossible.

We have to ask ourselves, are we spending too much money for these programs? In 1982, Canada ranked seventh among the 12 countries belonging to the OECD in the proportion of the GDP allocated to public health expenditures. In the expenditure for higher education, we also placed fairly low on the scale in comparison with the other countries in the OECD. What about the field of scientific research and development? We know that Canada does not rank in the middle; we are second from the bottom. Only Italy devotes a smaller percentage of its Gross National Product to scientific research and development than Canada. I am talking about all the countries belonging to the OECD and Japan.

What this Bill proposes is to reduce funding for these programs over what Ottawa paid before, and we are saying to the people of Canada that we will not continue to have the high standards we had before.

Let me make it clear that when we take this position, a position which has also been taken by the Conservative Premiers of the provinces to which I have referred, we are not saying this from a very narrow, political, partisan point of view. Let me put on the record the views expressed by a very eminent Conservative, at least he was known as a Conservative before he was appointed to the bench by a Conservative Prime Minister, Mr. Diefenbaker. Here in part is what Mr. Justice Emmett Hall said in a speech which he gave in Winnipeg on April 3, 1986. He is talking about the state of medicare in Canada today. He said:

> The long and short of it is that while we have come a very long way, we are short of the vision on full, comprehensive, accessible, portable coverage in Canada, and we are short on a national strategy of how to get there. In fact, we may be going in the opposite direction.

What this Bill says is, yes, we are going to go in a direction which Mr. Justice Emmett Hall said is the wrong direction. He continued:

> But changes are projected, changes that are being called "Expenditure Reduction."—
> In simple terms, the federal Government intends to cut spending by $2 billion per year by 1990-91. Over that period, $5.6 billion will not be spent and will instead be withdrawn from planned funding levels.

Then he quoted an organization with which I do not often agree. He quoted from a statement made by the Canadian Medical Association, which reads:

> The CMA is especially concerned about the effect of reduced federal funding on poorer provinces like Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and to a lesser extent, Manitoba and Quebec.

I notice a Minister from the Province of Nova Scotia sitting in the House at the moment. I would encourage him to rise in his seat when I have finished my comments and tell members of the House in what way Mr. Justice Emmett Hall was wrong, if he really believes that Mr. Justice Hall was wrong.

It is very clear that Mr. Justice Hall sees a profound crisis for the provinces in financing cost-shared programs, programs that were begun at the initiative of the federal Government. What does Mr. Justice Hall see for the future of medicare under these conditions? Let us remember that Mr. Justice Hall was asked by the former Conservative Government, headed by Mr. Clark, to study the subject again. He has been the person who led the way in limiting costs to Canadians through extra billing by doctors. Here is what he said:

> While federal increases are scheduled, but at a lesser ration, this means that the provinces will have to find the revenues to bridge the projected gap and there is serious doubt that the provinces can bridge this gap particularly in the hospital and institutional field.
> So, what will happen if the provinces or most of them cannot fill this gap? It is obvious that in the provincially-owned hospitals, there will be a lowering of standards and an inability to keep up with the state of the art in this field—
> With privatization will come drastically increased costs particularly in the hospital field.

He points out that Canada now allocates about 8.4 per cent of the GNP to all forms of health care while in the United States, which does not have our system but where privatization flourishes, 10.9 per cent of GNP is spent for vastly inferior coverage. This is what we have to look forward to after this Bill is passed when the Government implements the provisions of this Bill, Mr. Speaker. We will have lower standards of medical care, less progress in new treatments, privatization of private hospitals and drastically higher costs for private health care. It is the nightmare which the doctors all say they want to avoid and which is now present with the National Health Service in Great Britain. There are two classes of treatment in Great Britain, private affluence for those who can afford it and public squalor for those who cannot.

How can we abandon the services that have meant so much to Canadians? The Government will be hearing from the provinces and the public in the next few months as the cuts become operative.

The Government knows that no service is untouchable; not old age pensions, not higher education with access for all, not medicare, and not even generic drugs, a perfectly useful cost-efficient program which embodies all the competitive forces Conservatives swear they are for. The Government can undertake this policy, but it will reap what it sows. We in the New Democratic Party will anticipate the public's verdict with confidence because we know that the public will not accept the kinds of programs and cut-backs which the Conservative Government proposes to implement.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on this amendment. Many of my New Democratic Party colleagues have already spoken. This afternoon you heard from the Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) and the Member from Hamilton, and you just heard from the Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), my good friend and one of the senior members of the House. In my view, they have set forth a formidable case against this Bill.

I just want to address a few words, through you, Mr. Speaker, to British Columbians. We are presently celebrating Expo in British Columbia. The whole town, if not the whole province, with some notable exceptions, is partying because of Expo. I was there last week. It was quite a dazzling occasion with Charles and Diana coming to our province. There are some very spectacular buildings there as, no doubt, Members of the House will see. In particular, the federal Government's Expo building is truly spectacular. It is one of the great buildings of the world. It is a spectacular setting in British Columbia, and it is a party. However, I rise to remind my fellow British Columbians not to forget the reality that after the party is over, we must face the rebuilding our province for the 1990s in order to have lasting prosperity and long-term enjoyment instead of a short-term party.

My riding is less than a kilometre from Expo 86. Last week I learned from a study that 30 per cent of the people in my riding are unemployed. I say this with respect to my friend, the Member for Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador (Mr. Rompkey), whose riding has traditionally had high levels of unemployment. There is 30 per cent unemployment in the centre of Vancouver at the time of Expo. Under-employment was also studied and it was found that another 20 per cent are under-employed. Therefore, 50 per cent of the labour force in my riding is either under-employed or unemployed. That is a staggering figure. I will make that study available to Members who are interested. It was done by a group with the proper means and it has been verified. I will speak more about that study later.

What relevance does this have to this Bill? The relevance is that in order to achieve economic recovery in my riding, the rest of British Columbia, and in all of Canada, we need a healthy and educated population. This Bill will result in cut-backs in health care and education in the provinces. There are 19 Conservative Members of Parliament, eight New Democrats, and one Liberal from the Province of British Columbia. I ask the people of British Columbia to go to those Members of Parliament and tell them that they do not want any federal cut-backs which will lead to restraint in education and health.

The people of British Columbia experienced restraint when Bill Bennett, the Premier of British Columbia, brought in some savage restraints after the last election. Those savage restraint measures hurt education and other fields, but particularly education. In British Columbia, for the first time, middle-class kids, who can afford to go to university, cannot get into a university. That is a new situation. There is also the situation of other young people having to incur immense debts because their student grants have been cut back. They must incur immense debt in order to go to university, which debt will be with them for a long time.

We have had experience with cut-backs in education in British Columbia. We know what it is like and we know what will happen in the future if, through this Bill, less money is made available to the provinces to invest in our young people through education and health, which investment would enable us to continue the party which Expo started. That is what will give us enjoyment and prosperity in the future. That would be the proper investment to make. We oppose this Bill because it will have the opposite effect of what we consider is needed in British Columbia. It will incur cut-backs in education when we should be increasing funding for education because it, in my view, is the investment to make in Canada's future.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Garneau:

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "that" and substituting the following therefor:

"this House refuse to continue the consideration of this Bill the purpose of which is to unilaterally reduce federal payments to the provinces for post-secondary education and health services which are essential."

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Garneau), which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the amendment defeated.

Is the House ready for the next question?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been discussions between the parties on the possibility of dealing with two Bills of a technical nature with respect to arbitration in the name of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). There may be a disposition to move to Bill C-107 and Bill C-108 with the idea that each party would put up one speaker. We might be able to deal with these two Bills at all stages, thereby allowing them to go to the other place.

I should explain that this legislation is required for Expo 86 by May 12. We have been trying to accommodate the time-tables of all parties involved.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Liberal Party, we are prepared to deal with these two Bills now. The Government delayed bringing them forward and has now reached a deadline. We are very sympathetic with the objectives of this legislation and we are prepared to co-operate.

Mr. Deans: We are also quite prepared to deal with the two Bills now. I wish it to be clear that each of the opposition Parties will have 15 minutes in order to put their views on the record and one speaker each.

Mr. Speaker: I suggest that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn) put forward a motion to adjourn debate on Bill C-96.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I so move the adjournment of the debate, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I was ready to participate in debate on Bill C-96, as were a number of my colleagues. It seems that by agreement we are now moving to some other matter. I suggest that the debate be adjourned so that those of us who wish to speak on Bill C-96 can leave. If the matters are disposed of before six o'clock, I suggest that the House adjourn at that time.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, Members of the House know that if there is any possibility of my missing a speech of the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), I would hate to have that happen. I agree to his proposition so that I can hear him tomorrow morning.

Mr. Gauthier: I rise on a point or order, Mr. Speaker. Before we proceed to these other matters, will the Government House Leader tell us what we will be dealing with tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We intend to carry on with Bill C-96, Mr. Speaker.

On the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn, the debate was adjourned.

UNITED NATIONS FOREIGN ARBITRAL AWARDS CONVENTION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-107, an Act to implement the United Nations Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in my brief remarks I will touch on Bill C-107, which is an Act to implement the United Nations Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, and Bill C-108, which is an Act relating to commercial arbitration.

The UN Convention to which Canada wishes to accede was originally agreed upon on June 2, 1958. I am pleased that with the co-operation of the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party, we are able to proceed with these two Bills today. We have been working toward acceding to the UN Convention in Canada and have been enacting legislation which will apply the commercial arbitration procedures to the federal area of jurisdiction for some months now, in co-operation with the Province of British Columbia, which is especially interested in this matter. It is interested because it wishes to establish a commercial arbitration centre in Vancouver. As a matter of fact, on Monday I will be in British Columbia to attend a conference on arbitration sponsored by the Province. Its new arbitration centre will be officially opened at that time. The people of British Columbia hope that its commercial arbitration centre will be the leading place for commercial arbitration in the Pacific Rim. We wish to assist the Province in this objective. Of course, it will vastly enhance the achievement of that objective if Canada accedes to this UN Convention. In any event, it will be to the benefit of the commercial community in Canada. It will be a great boost to those who engage in international trade and export trade to have Canada accede to this Convention.

We have the agreement of all 10 provinces and both territories, which have all agreed that Canada should accede to the Convention. They have all agreed to pass the necessary legislation this spring. As Hon. Members know, there are elections to be held in several provinces, which could delay the matter somewhat. However, all provinces are onside and will join us in passing uniform Bills which will relate to commercial arbitration. British Columbia has already passed such legislation. The matter is now before the legislatures of a number of other provinces and the rest have committed themselves to passing such legislation this spring, or certainly this year.

I will not elaborate any further on the matter. This is a matter of private international law. It is a step which Canada should have taken some considerable time ago. I am pleased to be in the position to move that the House adopt both of these Bills. I believe it is agreed that we pass them through all stages today. I will then be able to pass the news on to the Province and to those who attend this meeting next week in British Columbia that the federal Government has agreed to the legislation. I have no doubt that the Senate will move quickly on the matter.

I thank my colleagues in the Opposition for their co-operation in this endeavour.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, Members of the House know of the great respect I have for the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). It is not only because of that respect that I am pleased to be able to support these Bills and their quick passage. It is also because of their importance.

The Province of British Columbia has been looking forward to such legislation for some time. In fact, it has assumed for such a long time that it would be forthcoming that it set May 12 as the day on which it will establish an international arbitration centre as part of its Expo festivities. Therefore we are showing unusual co-operation in that we do not want to take the time to refer the matters to legislative committees and to call private sector witnesses who could, no doubt, assist us in improving the legislation. We are willing to dispense with those procedures in order to meet the deadline which will soon be upon us. It is certainly an important event for British Columbia and for Canada.

Those of us who were involved in commercial litigation in private life know how expensive and time-consuming it can be. We also know that when commercial litigation occurs, it is the consumer who has to pay in the end. Many years ago there was an initiative to which Canada is finally joining to try to provide for less formal and less costly ways of resolving commercial disputes. Commercial private arbitration tribunals are the method.

While Canada sat back, this system developed in many other countries. A system for reciprocal enforcement of arbitration awards also developed. Canada sat back for a number of reasons. The easiest one to understand is with respect to the divided responsibility in this area. The federal Government is responsible for international affairs while the provinces are responsible for the resolution of private disputes within their jurisdictions.

With that kind of divided legislative responsibility, the issue rode on for years and years. I am sure I am not the only Member of Parliament who received delegations in their offices over the years wanting to encourage Canada to take an initiative which would lead to this regime being established, to the establishment of the international agreement and, after reciprocal legislation was passed by the provinces, to the establishment of this way of efficiently and consensually resolving disputes among commercial litigants.

I want to say a word about the activities of the former Government in this area. I know that efforts were made by the former Government—and this is available for corroboration with provincial Governments—to move this dossier forward. In the regrettable state of relations between the federal and provincial Governments, it was very difficult to move matters like this one forward. It is regrettable that the kind of partisan rivalry, if I may put it that way, which existed between the two levels of Government over the last few years prevented many good measures from moving forward. This was one.

Be that as it may, the new Government, the Conservative Government, took the proper initiative and carried forward the file with far more success than that enjoyed by the former Government, of which I was a part. It was able to enlist provincial support. With the deadline of May 12 ahead of it, it managed to produce a climate in which this legislation could be brought forward.

As I said, I regret that the Government waited until the last minute, but I do not think we should make the City of Vancouver and the Province of British Columbia suffer for that. Therefore, on behalf of my party I waive all requirements which would allow us close detailed scrutiny of the legislation, the opportunity to improve it, and the opportunity to bring it to the attention of the country so that Canadians would be aware of the important step being taken today and of what lies behind it. I am pleased, on behalf of my Party, to offer our support of this legislation and of this method of expediting its passage.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am particularly pleased as a British Columbian Member of Parliament to rise today in this very exceptional procedure to indicate my support for the legislation currently before the House. Of course the legislation will enable Canada to implement the 1958 United Nations Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards. The effect of this would be that foreign arbitral awards could be enforced in Canada for the first time. As well, the new legislation would provide specific statutory authority to federal Departments and Crown corporations to enter into arbitration agreements.

I have had an opportunity to discuss the provisions of this legislation with departmental officials. I raised two or three specific areas of concern, but I am satisfied that these concerns have been addressed in the legislation currently before the House. Certainly there is no question that arbitration is a much more effective and less costly way of resolving commercial disputes than litigation. At the present time in Canada there is no federal legislation governing the conduct of international commercial arbitration in Canada.

Another concern is that at the present time there is confusion regarding the authority of federal Departments and Crown corporations to enter into arbitration agreements. This new legislation would remedy this by specifically granting statutory authority to federal Departments and Crown corporations to enter into arbitration agreements.

I want to emphasize particularly the fact that the first international commercial arbitration centre to be established in Canada is to be established in my Province of British Columbia. Hopefully the Province of British Columbia will be attracting significant professional and service work. Certainly at a time of very, very high levels of unemployment we can only hope that the establishment of this international commercial arbitration centre will result in more jobs and more economic activity. As well, the legislation should assist in improving our trade relationships, particularly in the Pacific Rim and also in other countries. Many of the disputes which currently involve Asian, North American and European countries are presently being resolved in the United States or in Europe. For the first time there will be an opportunity to resolve these disputes in Canada.

I want to note that Canada is the last industrialized nation to accede to this convention. The United Nations adopted the convention in 1958, and it is almost 30 years overdue that Canada adhered to it.

I raised two areas of concern with departmental officials. The first concern was the possibility of certain reservations to the convention. Many states have relied upon what is referred to as the reciprocity reservation. Indeed, the initial advice from departmental officials to provincial Governments was that the reciprocity convention or reservation should be relied upon. However, it now appears that having studied the matter the federal Government is of the opinion that this reciprocity reservation is not necessary. That was certainly one area which I discussed with the officials. We are prepared, on balance, to recognize that the legislation should go forward without it.

The other area of concern which I raised was the fact that one of the parties to the convention was South Africa. I would hope that as a matter of public policy Canada would not in any way be prepared to co-operate with or recognize arbitral awards which flowed from South African business dealings. I would hope that as a matter of public policy that would be the decision taken by the Government. I am told that it is impossible to write that formally into the legislation now before the House, but I urge the Government to implement it as a matter of public policy.

In closing, I would note that I look forward to the next Government in the Province of British Columbia, a Government led by Premier Bob Skelly, being in a position to attract business activity to this new B.C. international commercial arbitration centre which we all desire.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Crosbie, seconded by Mr. Hnatyshyn, moves that Bill C-107, an Act to implement the United Nations Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards, be read the second time and referred to Committee of the Whole. COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

STRIKING—THIRTY-FOURTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the thirty-fourth report of the striking committee.

NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE—FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Bruce Halliday (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present in both official languages the fifth report of the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare entitled "AIDS in Canada". Pursuant to Standing Order 99(2), the Committee requests a government response to its recommendations.

This report is based on the evidence heard by the committee from expert witnesses, both in Government and the private sector who are working to combat the epidemic of AIDS in this country. The other members of the committee and I feel that implementing the recommendations contained in this report can do a great deal to improve public understanding of the disease. As well, these recommendations offer suggestions to increase the facilities required by the medical community and ensure the adequate and compassionate care required by those suffering from the disease.

PETITIONS

REINSTATEMENT OF KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions to submit. The first one comes from the City of Toronto, Weston, Brampton, Bramalea, Mississaga and Etobicoke. A number of citizens have signed these petitions praying and calling upon the House of Commons to reinstate full funding for the Katimavik program for the benefit of our youth.

[Translation]

The following petition is from several communities in the Province of Quebec, including Sainte-Foy and Quebec City. Petitioners are asking for reinstatement of the Katimavik program and for reconsideration of the decison to terminate the program.

The next petition is also from the Province of Quebec, from Chicoutimi, where petitioners are also asking for reconsideration of the decision to terminate the Katimavik program.

Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition from Lac-Etchemin, in which petitioners humbly ask Parliament and the Government to reconsider the decision to terminate the Katimavik program.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I have another petition, also from Lac-Etchemin, in which petitioners ask for reconsideration of the decison to terminate the Katimavik program.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 459 and 481.

[Text]

COSTS OF CANCER TREATMENT

Question No. 459—Mr. Corbett:

How much money does the Government estimate it spends annually on tobacco-related cancer treatment?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Only an indirect estimate is available, based on 1982 figures.

In that year, approximately 34 per cent of smoking related deaths in Canada were due to cancer. Total hospitalization and physicians' services expenditures related to smoking that year are estimated by Health and Welfare officials to have been about $1.5 billion. Using the mortality figures as an estimator of the physician and hospital costs due to smoking related cancer, slightly over half a billion dollars was spent by governments on smoking related cancer treatment in 1982, with costs shared approximately equally between federal and provincial levels of government.

DEATHS ATTRIBUTED TO TOBACCO-RELATED DISEASES

Question No. 481 (revised)—Ms. McDonald:

Since World War II, how many deaths in Canada were attributed to tobacco related diseases?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): The U.S. Surgeon General's reports on smoking and health are based on critical reviews of world-wide scientific literature by assembled experts. The Surgeon General estimates that 30 per cent of coronary heart deaths, 30 per cent of all cancer deaths and 80 to 90 per cent of deaths from chronic obstructive lung disease (emphysema) are caused by smoking. Applied to Canadian death statistics, these estimates indicate that about 1.3 million Canadians have died since 1946, from coronary heart disease (about 850,000 deaths), cancer (about 340,000 deaths) and chronic obstructive lung disease (about 100,000 deaths) caused by smoking. Smoking also causes many deaths due to birth-related disorders, peripheral artery disease, peptic ulcers, and fires. Similar risk estimates for these conditions are not readily available.

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The question enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary has been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS AND FEDERAL POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION AND HEALTH CONTRIBUTIONS ACT, 1977

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Wednesday, May 7, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to point out to the House that this Bill appeared on the Notice Paper on February 12, 1986. It was debated on Friday, April 25; Monday, April 28; Friday, May 2; Monday, May 5; Tuesday, May 6; and Wednesday, May 7, at length. There has been a great deal of debate from Parties on all sides. In view of that, I now move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell):

That the question be now put.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) on debate.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I can understand the impatience of the Parliamentary Secretary since he has not spoken substantively to this Bill. We have yet to hear Ministers from that side speaking to this most important piece of legislation which calls for federal-provincial co-operation with regard to transfer payments for education and health. We have heard one bouffon over there, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie), speak on this subject, but no other. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has not spoken, nor has the Minister of State for Finance (Mrs. McDougall). Yet, the Government wants to gag debate by the Opposition. It wants to put the question now. We are not yet ready to have the question put. We want to debate the issue because it is an important issue for Canadians which deals with two subject matters, education and health.

Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, is indeed far-reaching and of such importance that we on this side of the House have tried during the debate to bring to the attention of the Canadian public some of the serious, far-ranging, and permanent impacts which will result from the arrangements which the Government is proposing to put forth.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, all provinces will be affected by these cutbacks. The federal Government will save $319 million in 1986-87; $2.1 billion in 1990-91 and from 1986-87 to 1990-91, it will save nearly $6 billion. Six billion dollars which the provinces will not get for justified spending on education and health care.

For the information of Canadians who are listening, I would like to break down these figures by province. In Newfoundland, in 1986-87: $7.3 million less; in 1987-88: $15.5 million less; in 1988-89: $24.8 million less; in 1989-90: $35 million; in 1990-91: $46 million; in 1991-92: $58.9 million, which by 1992 adds up to a total of $187 million, and this for a province with a high unemployment rate, where young people are discouraged because they cannot find jobs. And the Government wants to cut back spending on education, which accounts for about 27 or 28 per cent of total federal transfer payments to the provinces! The remaining percentage, 70 or 75 per cent, goes to health services. I will get back to this later.

Mr. Speaker, the story goes on. Prince Edward Island, in 1986-87: $1.6 million; in 1987-88: $3.4 million; in 1988-89: $5.4 million; in 1989-90: $7.6 million; in 1990-91: $10 million and finally, in 1991-92: $12.7 million, adding up to a total of $40.8 million. Our smallest province, the one that needs help most, is going to lose $40 million in revenue over the next six years.

Mr. Speaker, I could on and talk about Nova Scotia, which will be losing $282.6 million. New Brunswick: $228.8 million. Quebec: $2,083.6 billion. Ontario, my own province: $2,929.9 billion, nearly 3 billion dollars. Manitoba: $340.4 over six years. Saskatchewan: $332.5 million over six years. Alberta: $773.1 million and British Columbia: $934.3 million over six years, adding up to a total of $8,133.8 billion lost in two vital areas under their jurisdiction, namely education and health care, areas which the federal Government has for years been helping to finance by redistributing the financial burden, since everybody in Canada is helping to pay for those who have less, and it was this program of transfers to the provinces, in cash payments or tax points, that helped to restore a form of equity and justice to this country, by providing a system that gave Canadians access to education and health care on a universal, fair and equitable basis.

Mr. Speaker, in today's mail I found a press release from the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) concerning a three-pronged study he commissioned: first, access to post-secondary education in Canada; second, the 1983-84 national survey on post-secondary students to examine such issues as interprovincial mobility, the specific characteristics of full- and part-time students, interest in Canadian studies and access to education in one's chosen official language, and on and on; and third, the 1984 national survey on 1982 graduates which made it possible to collect statistics on graduate students' experiences during their first two years on the labour market, etc.

Mr. Speaker, a glance at this document indicates that the study of the Secretary of State was made public last May 2, and I urge Hon. Members to read it because it is rather thought-provoking. Here are some of the issues reviewed. I cannot list them all because my time is limited, but I think it does raise important questions: policies concerning foreign students; the expansion of TV educational programs; the impact of new communication technologies on better access to education; the opinions and positions of teachers' and students' associations and Governments with respect to accessibility. Accessibility is the key word because we want Canadians to be better educated and prepared to assume their rightful role in the economy. Therefore, a collective willingness and a common movement are required to help finance post-secondary institutions.

So now we have this heartless Government which does not want to share any responsibility for education and which has been axing right and left in the appropriations earmarked for the provinces. As if this were not enough, the Government now wants to gag the Opposition and put a procedural end to the debate because it has grown tired of listening to speeches on issues like education and health care.

Well, Mr. Speaker, we intend to go on speaking at length to these issues because we have documents which we feel should be made public. We have lots of things to say, Mr. Speaker, and I am sure you understand this is not a delaying tactic or a filibuster on our part. We are interested in this matter and it is only natural that we would want to debate it in the House. Indeed, this is where the work must be done.

Mr. Speaker—

[English]

I would like to talk about the effect of this legislation. The Government says we are preoccupied with the deficit; we are. In its papers the Government is saying it is trying to reduce the deficit. One way is by cutting federal-provincial agreements, thereby transferring the deficit to the provinces. We all know the Government acted unilaterally, without the consent of the provinces, and has failed to respect the tradition of federal-provincial agreements. We thought the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said during the campaign that he would have continuous ongoing consultations with the provinces in federal-provincial conferences. Yet on the most important issue, that dealing with transfer payments for education and health, he did not. The Government did not have the sense, the heart, or even the decency to go to the provinces and say, "You expected this money but we are sorry, we are going to have to cut the deficit and we have to ask you to bear the load". This is contrary to government claims and also contrary to government promises.

Nevertheless, during the last election the Conservatives promised to respect the EPF agreements on health care and increase R and D budgets. We know what has happened. They have no intention and have shown absolutely no initiative toward increasing R and D budgets. They sure as heck have not kept their promise on the transfer payments and EPF agreements.

All provinces are opposed to these cut-backs. Several groups, including the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, which is not known to be a very strong supporter of the Liberals, have opposed these cut-backs on the basis that they are unjust. The Conservatives opposed similar cuts in 1982 on the 6-and 5-program. The Minister of Justice said the other day that that was Gauthier legislation. He has no memory. I voted against the 6-and 5-program because it affected the pensions of public servants in my riding. He calls that Gauthier legislation. He does not know what he is talking about. Of course, he does not usually read his documents anyway so I do not take too much exception to it. I see you are—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the Hon. Member's time has expired. I have given him a few extra seconds.

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy—Royal): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity of speaking on Bill C-96. I listened with a great deal of interest to the comments by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), and it is absolutely ludicrous for a Member on that side of the House, representing the Party he represents, to talk about consultation with the provinces. The history of his Party is well-known. It was a history of confrontation rather than consultation. To suggest that this Government has not consulted with provincial Ministers of Health and Education is not only wrong, it is blatantly ridiculous. This Government has established a history of consultation with the provinces virtually unheard of over the past 23 years. It would be wrong for this House to be left with the distasteful opinions that that Hon. Member attempts to leave.

The fact of the matter is that this country has been burdened with a totally unacceptable deficit. We are in this situation now because of deficits we inherited from previous Governments represented by the kind of Member who just spoke. The deficit must be addressed. As distasteful as some of these programs are, we must assume our responsibility as legislators and move forward to improve the situation for the benefit of all Canadians. Instead of listening to destructive criticism, why can we not ask for and expect constructive criticism for a change? I ask: How do we go about improving the system? Unfortunately, time does not allow me or any other Member to cover the entire waterfront regarding the ramifications and implications of this Bill. I will have to restrict my remarks to the health care sector.

There is no question that over the next few years health care costs in this country are going to increase substantially and significantly. Today more than 6 per cent of the population over the age of 65 are in nursing homes or health care centres for the physically or mentally infirm. We expect that by the year 2000 that number will have doubled. All nursing homes have waiting lists and the system is overloaded. Hospital beds are filled with geriatric care patients to the detriment of people who are waiting to be admitted for surgery or other problems and ailments. Those beds should be made available to the system—

Ms. Mitchell: How are you solving the problem by cutting back the money?

Mr. Corbett: Perhaps the Hon. Member would like an opportunity later on to get up and speak. In the meantime she might be a little bit less destructive and listen to some constructive criticism for a change.

The problem is that we are not utilizing available funding in the proper fashion. We have not been doing so for some number of years. We have to better utilize the available funds.

There is a philosophy promulgated by Members opposite that anything done by the private sector in the health delivery system is bad. It is morally wrong and people would suffer from such an intrusion by the private sector. I for one have no quarrel with the fact that the Government must be there to set standards, policies and procedures. It must ensure that they are strictly and acceptably adhered to. However, we have to put all these things in perspective.

There are several jurisdictions, particularly in the U.S., where the private sector does contribute very constructively to the health care system. I for one believe that nursing care for an aging population is one area where the private sector could very effectively operate. Nursing homes are predictable. The needs of residents are predictable. Costing in that segment of health care is predictable. Staffing is generally stable and constant. The private sector is well-suited to the nursing home field, and in certain jurisdictions nursing homes thrive and their resident care is number one. Government funding for any such facility has to be a major factor, of course. So it should be. Less than 10 per cent of the people now in nursing homes are paying their own way. Government pays by far the largest share.

In the free world it is the private sector which is recognized as being the most capable and suitable instrument to manage enterprise. When given the opportunity to work, free enterprise does. That is not to say that Government does not or should not have the responsibility for input to a system where substantial amounts of public funds are being used. Management should recognize that the responsibility of Government to the taxpayer must be adhered to, that the Government has the right to act on behalf of taxpayers. On the other hand, Government should recognize the capabilities and effectiveness of private management and its ability to manage. I have no doubt that a proper relationship between Government and business in the health care sector of this nation could save the taxpayers of this nation literally millions of dollars annually with absolutely no sacrifice in the standard of care for residents. My suggestion is to improve productivity by reducing labour costs. We can realistically address constructive facilities. We can reduce our debt burdens and administrative costs both in the private sector, the delivery system, and in the government bureaucracy.

• (1130)

The key to improving our system and utilizing our dollars more effectively in the health care delivery system is improved management. The result, in my opinion, would be of mutual benefit to all, including the residents of the nursing care sector, the Government, and the taxpayer.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am saddened to have to rise and make a last comment on a Bill that is being introduced by the Progressive Conservative Government of Canada to cut back on the educational funding of Canadians, to cut back on the amount of money going into health care for Canadians; and let there be no mistake about it, that is exactly what Bill C-96 is going to do.

It says we can no longer afford to train and educate our young people, and our people generally. It says we can no longer afford to give the kind of medical care that people have become accustomed to and require in our country.

When you hear Hon. Members opposite saying the Government has a better idea and it wants to privatize health care, you must realize that when you form a business you do it for one reason only, and that is to make a profit. That is what business is all about, to make money and to make a profit. Any country that is going to make a profit on the backs of the aged and those in need of health care has a sick society and a sick Government. When privatizing nursing homes and hospitals, bottom line is to make money. I challenge any of the members of the Conservative Party to stand up and say that is not the bottom line, to make profits and maximize profits. When your motivation is to maximize profits on the backs of people who are having health problems, or the elderly of our society requiring care, that is something I do not find in a decent civilized society.

The Hon. Member across the way is yelling at me that we should nationalize the hospitals. Hospitals are public institutions that should not be in the business to make money. I stand by this position that if any Member thinks the purpose of our hospitals is to make money for entrepreneurs he or she has his or her priorities in the wrong place.

Mr. Corbett: Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that I have given him a few extra minutes. I would like to hear the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I am having a very difficult time trying to hear his speech.

Mr. Riis: I appreciate the intervention. I believe it was the Hon. Member who was criticizing some of the other Members for attempting to interrupt him. He was saying they should have the good sense to hear some wise and eloquent phrases. I won't use that statement, Mr. Speaker, but I do have some very strong concerns about what is going on in this House today.

One of the reasons I am particularly concerned is that I happen to represent a constituency in the Province of British Columbia. It is a province where the Government there is anti-intellectual, anti-education, anti-training, anti-university, anti-college, anti-school. The clear evidence of that statement is the fact that over a few years ago there was the opinion in our country that the federal and provincial Governments would equally share in funding of our universities, colleges, and technical institutes—50/50 sharing.

But when you look at the Province of British Columbia today and ask who it is that provides 100 per cent of university and college funding, it is the federal Government of Canada. The Province of British Columbia does not put a single red cent into post-secondary education any longer. It has turned its back on post-secondary education. It has gone against the agreement into which it entered many years ago under which it would pay 50/50.

Is there a single Hon. Member from the Conservative, Liberal or New Democratic Parties who stand up and say that the Province of British Columbia, does not put a single red cent of its own money into post-secondary education, is doing the right and the honourable thing? No. We have a province on the West Coast that is anti-education, where we have seen devastating cuts to our educational system from pre-school right up into post-graduate studies at the universities. In the last few days the announcement has gone out to every college in the Province of British Columbia saying that, after years and years of cuts and cuts and cuts, "this year you have got to cut some more".

Caribou College in the community of Kamloops has just received a notice that it must cut a half a million dollars out of a budget where there is bone sticking through now. There is no fat or meat left, and now it is going to have to hack off part of the bone as well. That is why some of us, from British Columbia particularly, are concerned about what Bill C-96 is doing because it is saying it is going to cut back the federal contribution. The Province of British Columbia is not paying anything and now the federal Government is going to cut back what it would have been expected to pay for post-secondary education.

This year the Province of British Columbia will receive from the federal Government $36 million less than it would under the normal formula. Next year that goes up to $75 million less. In the next five years, this year and for other years, the Province of British Columbia is going to lose $642 million in transfer payments to education and to health care. Across the country generally $5.608 billion will not be spent by the federal Government on health care and post-secondary education.

A Member from central British Columbia has particular concerns because, when you look at the OECD countries, all the western industrialized countries are putting more and more effort into post-secondary education, scientific training, and on the job training. There is one country that is not participating in that same investment enthusiasm in post-secondary education, and that is Canada. Canadians are getting the short end of the stick compared to all of the other OECD countries. Take a look at the provinces and territories across Canada and you will notice there is one province that is putting less than any other into post-secondary education, whose percentage of the provincial budget is decreasing when it comes to post-secondary education and health care, and that is the West Coast Province of British Columbia. People in British Columbia are getting the short end of the stick because they are Canadians, and they are getting the short end of the stick in Canada because they are British Columbians.

When you consider the people who do not live in the lower mainland of British Columbia, they are getting even a shorter stick. For a young or an older person today to go and study at a university, a vocational institute or a technical institute, you have to pay $6,000 to $7,000 a year.

Considering the high levels of unemployment and the difficult times that so many British Columbia families are facing these days, there are literally hundreds and thousands of families now that can no longer afford to send members to study at universities, institutes, technical and vocational schools in the Province of British Columbia.

If you are from the central part of British Columbia you are getting the short end of the stick in B.C. If you are from B.C. you are getting the short end of the stick in Canada. If you are in Canada you are getting the short end of the stick compared with all the OECD countries.

What does that tell us about this country? What does it tell us about what we can expect in the future when West Germany, Japan, and even some of the major parts of the United States are investing heavily in what they see as their most important natural resource? Some parts of our Government think our most important national resources are codfish, coal, copper, or wheat. The most important natural resource, as we all know, is the people of Canada.

The Japanese, the Swiss, and Scandinavian countries figured that out long ago. Canadians, as far as our Government is concerned today, have not figured that out. The anti-intellectual and anti-education people in British Columbia do not even come close. The Government is short changing our youth in terms of the future and their ability to take their rightful place in the 21st century. In our information oriented society in which the economy is becoming increasingly competitive, we must have well-trained and well-educated people. We must spend more money on scientific research and development for future production, but the Government is not keeping up with our competitors in this area.

The Government's answer is to move this motion which effectively brings in closure on this Bill. It has closed off debate because it has heard enough criticism from members of the Opposition. I believe that this is probably the most important debate we have had or will have in the months to come in terms of the future of the country, but the Government's answer is to close off the debate because the heat has been turned up too high.

We in the Opposition say it is wrong for the Government to impose Bill C-96 that will take $5.608 billion from post-secondary education and health care. We do not want this legislation to proceed but the Government will no longer take the heat and will simply cut off debate and jam this legislation through. We say that this Bill is bad news for the future of Canada and Canadians.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to speak on what is essentially a closure motion by the Government. This motion to close debate on second reading of such an important Bill is totally irresponsible. This Bill touches the very fabric of our nation at a time when provincial Governments are facing tremendous responsibilities in dealing with a recession, especially in the outlying areas of our country.

It disturbs me that the Government has the gall to propose a cut-back of $8 billion in post-secondary education and health contributions for the next four years. It signifies the extreme lack of awareness of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Cabinet generally about the realities in our country.

In Ontario alone there will be cut-backs in funding for post-secondary education and health care at a time when the Ontario Government is considering the possibility of doing away with OHIP premiums in favour of a fairer general tax levy by which premiums would be based on the ability to pay rather than a flat rate.

It is hard to believe that the Government would impose such a Draconian measure on the provinces when much of our country is facing serious economic recession. When the Minister looks at the national gross figures for the years 1983 through 1985, he believes that the economy of the entire country is growing at the same rate as that in the "Golden Horseshoe" around Toronto. I suggest that the Minister should visit the Maritimes to see the impact of the Government's cut-backs on services and transfer payments, combined with new fees for ferry services.

Recently the people of Prince Edward Island spoke eloquently about the impact of the Government's $8 billion cut-backs in transfer payments to the provinces. The Minister should go to northern Ontario to see the impact of the Government's policies on those resource areas of our country, including the forestry sector and the mining sector.

The impact of the Government's energy policy on Sault Ste. Marie, for example, is that we face lay-offs of some 800 people in the tube mill alone. We are just completing a new $375 million tube mill but the Government's policy on energy is not only making the feasibility of that plant very questionable, the existing plant is being shut down.

Let us consider the over-all situation in the country. I just returned from the agricultural special task force hearings in western Canada where we were discussing the impact of the U.S. Farm Bill. That U.S. Farm Bill will have a greater impact on Canadian agriculture than any other piece of legislation that the U.S. Congress has passed. However, when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) went to Washington to meet with the President a few months ago, not once, in that glossy agenda of items to be discussed with the President, was the U.S. Farm Bill mentioned. That legislation will be in effect for the next three years.

The western provinces are looking for financial help from the Government as a result of the recession brought on by its agricultural and energy policies. Yet the Government is cutting back $8 billion from assistance for post-secondary education and health care during the next four years.

Since you come from Alberta, Mr. Speaker, you know that Alberta had a very positive economic situation only a couple of years ago. That province is now facing a $2 billion deficit and must deal with an additional cut-back in health care and post-secondary education contributions. Surely the Government should recognize the reality in this country rather than rely on the view of the Minister of Finance whose gaze might go a little bit north of Bloor Street but not to northern Ontario, parts of Quebec, the Maritimes, and certainly not to western Canada.

The Government has imposed cuts in several areas. Last week we saw the Prime Minister put on one of the greatest shows in history when he seemed to be helping agriculture. He implied that the Government was raising the domestic price of wheat from $6 to $11 in order to assist the farmers. In fact, all he did was increase the price range. There is yet to be a decision on whether that will be done, how it will be done, and what its impact will be.

The Prime Minister appeared to be freezing freight rates, but that suggestion was exploded even before the press conference finished. The people in the press gallery knew that all the Government had done was recalculate the volume of wheat that is to be shipped this year from 31 million tonnes down to 28 million tonnes so that there was no need for an increase in the portion that farmers paid in freight rates. Everyone knows that it was a charade.

The Prime Minister also announced that he would remove the 2.5 per cent excise tax on farm fuels, a tax that should never have been imposed last September. This morning, at a committee hearing, I suggested to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) that this tax should be removed retroactively to last September because the crisis began last year. It was absolutely criminal for the Government to impose an excise tax on farm fuels at a time when agriculture was facing its greatest stress. Rather than eliminating that tax as of May 1, the Prime Minister should have apologized to the farmers of this country for imposing it last September, and made the deductibility and rebate provisions retroactive to that time. We are talking about at least $75 million in revenues which the agricultural industry can ill afford to pay.

Certainly, the Draconian measures which are being used by the Government in Bill C-96 are simply to bully this through the House. To add another $8 billion of costs on to the provincial Governments at this time, many of them in the outlying and resource-based areas, is not a fair, equitable, or even-handed way to operate.

The other aspect of this Bill is that its impact will be felt by all sectors of the economy. At a time when 600,000 or 700,000 young people are unemployed we should not be taking away $8 billion from the provinces.

The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) has already stonewalled $400 million of the money she was supposed to spend on direct training and upgrading programs last year. The Government is moving even more in a heavy-handed way by removing this desperately needed $8 billion of funding from the provincial Governments over the next four years, using Bill C-96. I hope the Government will reconsider and take this Bill off the Order Paper. It certainly is not in the best interests of our country.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have just returned to the House after spending quite a period of time with the Child Care Task Force which has been travelling across Canada. We have heard over and over again about the really sad situation young children face unless there is some very immediate action to provide better care so they will be better prepared for the future. I returned today to find out that we are debating major cuts in post-secondary education and health services which will be devastating for this generation of our youth.

This Bill is just appalling. It is inhuman from the point of view of our human resources and what it is going to do to our young people. It is also very short-sighted from an economic point of view. It attacks young people who right now do not have access to post-secondary education which they need desperately. This Bill will make the situation even worse. It attacks women. It will be predominantly women who will lose jobs and health services. It is particularly young women who may now be on welfare, who are raising children, who will not have a chance to get into training opportunities in order to become independent and make a better life for themselves and their children. It attacks elderly people who, as one member of the Conservative Party just said, will be relying very heavily in years to come on our health services.

I find it hard even to speak because this approach is so disappointing. The Government can find billions of dollars to increase defence spending, yet it has to cut back on the very essential services for our population. One wonders what is happening to us in Canada. It is extremely disappointing. I just hope that people across the country will be aware of what this Bill means. As my colleague said, the total cuts will mean over $5,608 million will be taken out of health services and education by 1990. That is just in federal cuts. We must add to that the provincial cuts. British Columbia will lose $642 million. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that this will have a tremendous negative impact on young people and our elderly in British Columbia.

At the same time that we are cutting back on health care and post-secondary education, over the next five years the Conservative Government of Canada will increase defence expenditures by 41 per cent. How in good conscience can we have those kinds of priorities? How short-sighted it is from an economic as well as from a social point of view.

I would like to speak about the situation in British Columbia as it pertains to young people. Twenty-one per cent of our young people in British Columbia are unemployed. These are the people who will be denied even more access to college, university or other training programs. There are over 63,000 young people between the ages of 15 years and 24 years who will not have any access to jobs. To get jobs, of course, most of them need further training. Now they will not have access to the training.

The federal Government certainly should be increasing opportunities for young people. Not only is this needed in what we hope would be an educated and modern society, but it is essential to our future economic and social health. In the long run, investment in the younger generation will save the Government the cost of unemployment insurance and 50 per cent of the cost of welfare. Most of these young people are on welfare. The Government would get an income from taxes. An investment in young people for training and educational opportunities now would pay off in the long run.

I would like to point to the leadership being shown by Bob Skelly, the Leader of the New Democratic Party in British Columbia. Last week a Private Members' Bill was introduced in Victoria, and I think a similar one should be introduced in this House, which would guarantee every young person in British Columbia a choice of full-time education, training, or steady employment. These 63,000 young people would have a choice about their future as a result of this Bill. If we do not do this, we will have a wasted generation. The costs of this program would be $150 million per year.

We are putting billions and billions of dollars into Expo and we cannot find $150 million a year to put into job training and educational opportunities for young people. To maintain these young people on welfare or unemployment insurance, to have them live on very low casual wage levels, will cost a great deal and will mean a whole dependent generation which would remain dependent on society. I implore the Government to think about what it is doing with this Bill. It is cutting back on the very essential investment in young people. It is not just an expenditure. It is a real investment. We are already paying, and we will pay much more if we do not open up opportunities for our youth.

Our generation had access to education and opportunities for jobs. We simply must look at this generation of young people in a much more positive way. We cannot afford to have them without jobs, without training, and without a future. The task force heard from young women who became pregnant as teenagers and are raising children. It happened to them largely because they had no hope. What is going to happen to their children? There is no future for them, and we are adding another burden with this Bill.

With respect to the health care situation, the Member of the Conservative Party who spoke last talked about reforming health care. I agree completely that we must reform health care. We could get much better value for our health care dollar. However, I agree with my colleague that we certainly should not go the American route of privatizing our health care and having health care for profit so that people do not have a base of essential health care services. What we should be doing is not only maintaining and increasing our investment in health, and it is an investment in people, we should also change our priorities. We should be looking at the fact that our health system is a physician dominated system and that far too much money is going into very expensive high technology, heart transplants, and so on.

We are completely forgetting the general population in communities which need a floor of preventive health care. What we should be doing is investing more in para-professional types of services. Our nurses should be doing much more, something which we have provided for in our health legislation but which has not been taken up. We should have more community clinics with more people from the communities involved in the supplying of services. We should have more home care for seniors in order to avoid expensive institutional care. We should be doing much more to help young families, particularly young families with pre-schoolers, to promote health. These are the areas into which we should be putting money. We should not be cutting back on the federal contribution; we should be increasing it. We should be encouraging and promoting a far different type of health service.

We also need to look at services in remote areas in a different way. Surely the federal Government has a special responsibility to the people in the Territories and in our northern areas, particularly people in native communities. We need midwifery in some of the northern communities, something which Inuit women have said they want. Yet we are not doing a thing about it. We are cutting back on expenses.

We need more university extension programs so that people in remote areas can have access to education. This is an area in which there are cut-backs in every province. I can tell Hon. Members that this is what we have been hearing repeatedly on the task force of which I am a member. Colleges are having to close down when they should be offering extension programs in rural areas. Surely a measure such as that would make great economic sense, as well as being absolutely essential if we are to have an educated population.

With regard to hospital care I have in front of me an article from the Vancouver Sun from July of last year. It states that British Columbia started restraint in health care four years ago with 2,000 lay-offs, and most of those laid off were women, and 1,200 bed closures. Since then health care has deteriorated. Some mothers in premature labour were sent to Calgary because there was no room in the special care nursery at Children's Hospital. The Bill before us will worsen that situation.

I can tell Hon. Members that in British Columbia what is happening to the people, those with young families, as well as the elderly, is simply abhorrent. This Bill will simply add to their burden. It is completely short-sighted. It should be withdrawn. We should not have to deal with it any further. It makes me so angry I can hardly continue.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I am a little disappointed to be speaking on Bill C-96 today and, in particular, on the motion moved by the Government which, in effect, will bring the guillotine down on further debate with respect to the cut-backs in EPF to the provinces. I say that I am disappointed because I do not think that Canadians and the provincial Governments have had ample opportunity to discuss and think through this Bill in order to make their positions known to the federal Government.

I just finished signing 632 congratulatory messages which I will be sending out to grade 12 graduates in my riding. These are students who are graduating from high school and who will be entering universities. These students will find it extremely difficult to do that because now the tax burden will be shifted from the federal Treasury to the provincial Treasury. In Prince Edward Island we have a very limited tax base. We live in a province which has high levels of sales tax and other forms of tax measures. Like Newfoundland we find ourselves with increasingly higher sales taxes which are to the point of being detrimental to spurring on the economies of our provinces.

On top of the university costs, which will have to be increased through higher tuition fees or other forms of revenue raising measures, most of these 632 students will find it difficult to find employment this summer in order to further their efforts to obtain a better education. I know that many of them will come to see me in my office. They will go to the manpower centres only to be told that there are not many jobs available. One in three might be successful in finding a job.

In P.E.I. we have gone through one of the most difficult years in many years in agriculture. Farmers who would normally be able to sell their products at a decent price—certainly potatoes—are dumping them this year in their fields. Of course I should mention that we were the recipients of a $6 million fund which was set up by Ottawa. It was certainly appreciated. It was set up as a diversification program. Unfortunately, it was too little too late. If the same amount of money had been given to the province last November or December when the federal and provincial Departments of Agriculture knew full well that there was an over supply of potatoes in the world, then that diversification program would probably have meant better prices for the remainder of the crops.

I would like now to consider the effects Bill C-96 will have on Prince Edward Island between this fiscal year and fiscal year 1992. We see that there will be a shortfall of some $40.8 million in revenue. This year $1.6 million less will go to the Province of P.E.I. In 1987-88 the figures will rise to $3.4 million; in 1988-89 it will be $5.4 million; in 1989-90 it will be $7.6 million. It will be $10 million in 1990-91, and $12.7 million in 1991-92. Most of the Atlantic provinces cannot afford such reductions. They just do not have the tax bases to make up the difference.

Earlier today I was looking at an article which was published in the Telegraph-Journal. It is dated December 26, 1985, and quotes the New Brunswick Finance Minister John Baxter. He is quoted as saying that it will be difficult convincing New Brunswickers to accept further restraint measures in light of the federal Government's lack of restraint. I think herein lies the crux of the matter. It is very difficult to get people from Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland to agree to deficit-cutting in the areas of health care and education when they look at some of the measures the Government has taken. I refer to the bail-out of the Canadian Commerical Bank and the Northland Bank to the tune of $1 billion.

It is difficult for these people to understand why the federal Government should be asking the provinces to share more of the load. Prince Edward Islanders see other forms of taxation, particularly back-door taxation, in the form of increased user fees for ferry rates, inspection fees on potatoes which were imposed for the first time, and increases in national park fees. When they look at a Cabinet which is the largest the country has ever seen, with 40 cabinet Ministers, they ask themselves why this is happening. Measures which have been put in place for retired Armed Forces personnel and public servants, whereby they are not eligible to draw UI benefits because pension is now to be declared as income, remove an awful lot of revenue from the province. This diminishes the spending ability of people and has a terrible reflection right across the board. That can be coupled with the lack of job creation in the province.

The Government claims that private enterprise will be the engine of growth. That may well be so in certain areas of the country but in most of Atlantic Canada we find that private enterprise consists of companies with between one and five employees. We do not have large plants with 1,000 or 2,000 employees. Private enterprise cannot take up the slack in job creation.

I realize that my time is running out. I would have liked to have spoken longer on this Bill because it will have a tremendous detrimental effect on my province and on Atlantic Canada. I would hope that the Government would make provision for Atlantic Canada so that those provinces may have good quality health care and education just like the better-off provinces.

A new veterinary college is just about to be opened in Charlottetown and I wonder what effect this cut will have on that. The Maritime Council of Higher Education has already pared its budget down to the bare bones. In fact it has been doing so over the last five years. When I was a member of the provincial Legislature of Prince Edward Island a number of years ago, that council was making cuts at that time. The provincial Government was also trying to curb expenditures. There is simply no room for any further cuts in the education system.

There is a growing aging population in Prince Edward Island which will require more and more facilities. Once again the federal Government is cutting back on health care to make its deficit position look better. Really all it is doing is transferring the tax burden to the taxpayers of the provinces. Whether one pays a tax to the federal Government or to a provincial Government does not really matter much. However, the head of the family, the head of this great confederation of ours, must be the federal Government, and the federal Government should take its responsibility seriously. It should ensure that all Canadians have equal opportunity no matter where in this land they happen to live.

The same kind of health care should be available whether one lives in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, northern Alberta, northern New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland or Labrador. I do not think it is reasonable to expect to have open-heart surgery in small hospitals. That is not what I mean, but I do mean that the basic principles of health care should be maintained and should be available to all individuals no matter where they live.

Those are the few words I wished to say. I know my time is up. I am very upset that the Government would move a motion to cut off debate on this most important subject, a subject that will affect all Canadians no matter where they live.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a few moments to put some of my thoughts regarding Bill C-96 on the record. We have spent the last week or two debating the various effects of systematically reducing the growth of funds to the provinces required for the two most important services in Canada, health care and post-secondary education. These two services are the impetus for growth in the economy. Only if we have a healthy and well-educated population will we be able to survive under conditions of depression. Only then may we take advantage of every opportunity to grow. When the Government decides to reduce the amount of money that it is willing to spend on health care and education, it is reducing the ability of the economy to grow.

The Government keeps telling us that it is increasing the funding, and to some extent that is true. It is true unless one looks at it very closely. How long can a system survive if, every time the costs increase by $1, the amount of money received to pay for them only increases by 50 cents? Eventually the services will have to be cut back. It becomes a sleazy way of reducing the quality of education and health care because, when cuts are made, the quality of the services is the first to be affected.

I would like to spend most of the time I have which is only a few minutes, on the effects of these cuts on health care. The health care programs of many provinces are already approaching a crisis because of lack of money. We need to look at the size of the reduction that is contemplated by this Bill. In very simple terms, the Government intends to cut $2 billion per year by 1990-91. Over that period, $5.6 billion will be withdrawn from the funding levels for health care. As was pointed out by a representative from Newfoundland, this means either poorer service, higher fees, higher provincial taxes, increased premiums, or all of the above.

In this Bill the Government is following its philosophy as shown by many of its other actions. The Government's approach is either to eliminate a service, redefine the responsibility of the federal Government so that the service will not cost so much, or pass the costs on to someone else, whether it be the provincial Government, the student, or the person receiving health care.

Organizations like the Canadian Medical Association have made strong protests against the reduction of funding for health care. In fact that association suggests that the basic problem underlying the fight that is going on right now in Ontario between doctors and the Government regarding overbilling can be traced to the fact that the Government does not have enough money to provide the kind of health services that are required.

The costs of health care have risen over the last few years and continue to rise. The greatest increases have been connected to hospitals. Some 70 per cent of the total cost of medicare programs today can be directly attributed to increases in institutional care, including hospitalization. It is recognized and accepted by most people that the costs will increase at the rate of about 4 per cent or 5 per cent above inflation. These costs are inceasing for various specific reasons. For example, the cost of liability insurance has risen a great deal during the last few years. That cost will have to be picked up by the health care field.

An Hon. Member who spoke earlier suggested that we might look at privatization. It is well known that privatization in the health care field increases the cost, particularly in the hospital field. Canada, which now has a public system, allocates about 8.4 per cent of the Gross National Product to all forms of health care. In the United States, where privatization flourishes and is the basis of many health care structures, the amount of money going to health care is 10 per cent of the GNP, for vastly inferior coverage. Privatization will not save us money in a global sense. It will cost us more money, a difference of several percentage points.

• (1220)

In the United States the Blue Cross Shield plan is offered for $1,840 per year. It has a $100 deductible, and only 80 per cent of physicians' and psychiatrists' fees is covered. There is no coverage for physical therapy, routine physicals, or baby care. There is no coverage for treatment of any illnesses that might have been latent prior to coverage. Diseases such as cancer and heart disease, which are usually attributed to lifestyle, or stress on the job, cannot be covered by this insurance, and these diseases are among the most costly to treat.

Members who have travelled abroad know that if you do get sick abroad you come home singing the praises of Canada's health care. While the American health care might be excellent, fees for it are so high that 30 million Americans—and 30 million is the population of Canada—do not have any health insurance whatsoever, and that system spends 10 per cent of its Gross National Product on health care. For 30 million people it is cash on the barrel head if they want medical care, and if you visit the States and get sick, it is cash on the barrel head for you, too.

Surprisingly, the Nielsen task force takes an opposite view to that of the Government. It suggests that we should be very careful of any policy of profit on health administration. The task force reviewed the cuts already made between 1982 and 1986 which totalled $6 billion for health care and higher education. It identified the declining role of the federal Government, showing a 40 per cent share loss in the 1985-86 period. The Nielsen task force projects that expenditure requirements for the next few years will increase by 4 per cent and 5 per cent above inflation, and 1 per cent to 2 per cent above the growth of the GNP. We are not keeping up with inflation yet costs will increase by 4 per cent. A reduction of 2 per cent below the growth of the economy is to take place, putting us 6 per cent below the actual increases in costs, reducing the quality of services in health care and education.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I regret that I must advise that the Hon. Member's time has expired.

[Translation]

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the Bill now under consideration is to reduce the federal Government's post-secondary education contributions by 2 per cent as of April 1, 1986. The Conservative Government wants to withhold over $8 billion from the provinces over the next five years. As indicated in the Quebec Government Budget tabled last week, this cut-back will cost more than $2 billion to Quebec alone. As a result the province had no choice but to slap a surtax on corporate profits to offset this shortfall.

[English]

This Bill, as I said in my comments last week, represents what is really a total abdication of federal responsibilities in the area of post-secondary education. The Conservative Government is washing its hands of post-secondary education in Canada. To understand this situation, you have to go back to 1977 when the Government, after negotiations with the provinces, introduced the system of unconditional grants which still exists to this day. These unconditional grants have led to a crisis today in higher education about which this Government has nothing to say. The federal Government at that time committed itself to yearly increases in transfers to the provinces regardless of what the provinces did to support universities and colleges. These grants were unconditional. In other words, there was no requirement on the provinces that the money which the federal Government gave to them for education and health had to be actually spent on education and health. We know that many of the provinces spent this money in other areas, on roads or other provincial priorities. While federal transfers have increased over the course of the last seven to eight years, the money that actually gets to the colleges and universities has gone down. It has not kept pace with inflation.

As a matter of fact, funding for universities and colleges has gone up by only 2.5 per cent in real terms since 1977-78, yet the number of students attending universities and colleges has gone up 27 per cent in the case of universities and 36 per cent in the case of colleges. With funding stable and enrolment increasing dramatically, it is no wonder that the quality of teaching has gone down. There are more students per teacher, there is a shortage of equipment, and universities cannot hire the best faculty. Our country as a whole is suffering.

The previous Government appointed a commission headed by Al Johnson to study this whole question. Mr. Johnson recommended that federal transfers for post-secondary education be increased at the same rate at which the provinces increase their operating grants to universities and colleges. He wanted to introduce an incentive to ensure that the provinces would increase their contributions as the federal Government increased its contributions. The provinces did not support this recommendation. The Conservative Government's answer is to cut spending. The Government's rationale may be that since the provinces have been using the money given to them for education for other purposes, if it cuts the transfer payments the provinces will be forced to spend the funds on education rather than on the other, less important things which they have been spending them on in the past. By simply cutting funding, the Conservative Government has nothing to say about post-secondary education in Canada.

This is made very evident in the report tabled by the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) last month in which he refers to Canada's educational goals. He refers to the fact that constitutional responsibility for education lies with the provincial Governments. He says that it is to the provincial Governments that one should turn first for a statement of goals and objectives related to the public support of post-secondary education. Who does one turn to for the federal goals? What does the federal Government have to say about the quality of post-secondary education? What do members of the Conservative Party have to say about the problem with post-secondary education? What solutions do they have?

The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) is here. This is one of his responsibilities. What does he have to say about it? What does the Member for London East (Mr. Jepson) who is sitting here to my right, have to say about it? The Conservative Party is saying that it will provide the money for whatever the provinces want to do, but the federal Government will have nothing to say about national goals. What about a federal co-ordinating role? What about strategic research done in the universities? Does the Minister of State for Science and Technology feel that the federal Government has something to say about areas of strategic research? What about strategic manpower? He talks about that in his speeches. What about speaking up on this particular Bill? Why cut the debate as the Government is trying to do?

Why are government Members not participating in this debate today? What is the matter with Conservative Members? Are they all a bunch of sheep? They are saying that they ask no questions when they give the money to the provinces. There is no national interest in higher education. They just hand the money over and forget about the problems of our universities.

What does the federal Government expect from our universities? Whom do we ask? Do we ask the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or the Minister of State for Science and Technology? Does the Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) or the Member for Brampton—Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) have anything to say about this? What does the federal Government expect when it turns over money for post-secondary education? Does the federal Government have any goals? Why not simply give the provinces the tax points? Why should we act as a tax collector for the provinces? The federal Government is saying that it has no policies or ideas. Therefore, just give the provinces the tax points.

Mr. Benjamin: It won't work. They'll chisel on it.

Mr. Berger: They are being chiseled on it now and have nothing to say about it. Should the federal Government convene a meeting to discuss these subjects? Should it get the private sector involved?

In my speech last week I quoted from a recent submission made by the President of Northern Telecom. Northern Telecom happens to be our only multinational in the telecommunications industry. David Vice, the President of Northern Telecom, said that instead of a "dynamic, well-supported system of education, with recognizable centres of excellence" in this country we have "crumbling structures, inordinately high student-faculty ratios and poorly-equipped laboratories". He said:

> The emergence in Canada of distinguished research and teaching centres—comparable to Harvard, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, or Stanford—seems next to impossible.

He called for a reordering of priorities. He called upon the Prime Minister to spend more money on education and less on other areas. He called upon the Government to convene a national conference on the crisis in higher education and to work to develop a national policy.

The Government has no national policy. It is washing its hands and is saying that it has nothing to say about the crisis in higher education. It does not recognize the call from people like David Vice of Northern Telecom. What in heaven's name is the federal position? The answer is very clear from the silence from the Tory benches. There is no position. We cut our deficit, we cut loose, and the hell with what goes on in our universities. That is what the Conservative Party has to say. That is what it is telling students, young people, and university faculties and administrators.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I want to deal first with some remarks made earlier today by the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal (Mr. Corbett).

Mr. Nickerson: It was a great speech.

Mr. Benjamin: I hear it called "a great speech". I wish the predecessor of the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal, the Hon. Gordon Fairweather, were in the House. He would not hold still for this for one moment. He is presently the head of the Human Rights Commission in Canada, an excellent appointment. He was in the forefront of the Conservative Party for years with regard to federal funding for health services and post-secondary education. It is a bit ironic that the present Member would make a speech about the deficit and the private sector in health care.

I would like to quote another very famous Canadian who is also a Conservative, the Hon. Mr. Justice Emmett Hall. In a speech he made in Winnipeg on April 3 he said:

> With privatization will come drastically increased costs particularly in the hospital field. Canada now allocates 8.4 per cent of the GNP to all forms of health care. In the United States where privatization flourishes, it is 10.9 per cent for vastly inferior coverage.

He gives an example. In the United States a recent Blue Cross-Blue Shield individual plan was offered for $1,840 per year. The coverage details included $100 deductible, 80 per cent of physician fees and 50 per cent of psychiatrist fees covered, no coverage for physical therapy, routine physical examinations, or baby care. Most absurd of all, there was no coverage for treatment of any illness which was present but latent prior to the effect of the insurance. What about cancer and heart disease? They are often present, latent for years. They are among the most costly to treat. That is your privatization, your private sector health care.

There are countless examples of Canadians who travelled and became seriously ill in another country, particularly the United States, who were faced with bills of tens of thousands of dollars. After their province had paid the fees and bills which it would have paid had they become sick at home, they are still faced with the additional cost of tens of thousands of dollars. The Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal advocates that kind of nonsense.

Let me appeal to the Conservatives about things which seem to satisfy them. They talk about the bottom line, the crassest kind of term. That seems to be what the Conservatives, with their so-called sound business principles and practices, are impressed by. Let me then appeal to them on the basis of free enterprise and sound business practices. Perhaps that will convince them. Expenditures by the federal Government on health care and secondary education are not an expense, they are an investment which provides a good return for all levels of Government. It is an investment in our people from which the nation receives a tremendous return.

Keeping people healthy is not only civilized and humane, which may not appeal too strongly to the Conservatives, but, and this should impress my hon. friends opposite, it keeps them working and producing for the benefit of the nation as well as of themselves. There is less absenteeism and the workforce produces efficiently. They are healthy and remain so because of federal and provincial expenditures. If we keep them healthy and working, they pay taxes on their earnings. The more they work, the more income they have, the more taxes they pay to all levels of Government. Therefore, expenditures by the national treasury on health care and post-secondary education are self-liquidating. Governments at all levels recover more than they pay out because of an efficient, healthy, highly productive workforce whose health has been well protected. Those who are better educated and trained through our education system earn higher incomes and pay more taxes. That should satisfy my Conservative friends who rely on sound business principles.

Battles won do not necessarily stay won. It took decades to achieve a high standard of reasonable, equitable and equally distributed health care and secondary education. Yet it is gradually being lost, stifled, whittled away, and in the name of what? In the name of deficit reduction. Let me quote Mr. Justice Emmett Hall again from the same speech:

> In the search for services heretofore regarded as essential, some of which may have to be reduced or abandoned, no one in his right mind would see health care as anywhere but at the top of any essential list ranking there with education, national defence, justice, transportation and the like.
> So, let us compare what is proposed as between two essential services—health care and national defence.
> As of now, the expenditures on health and higher education on the one hand and on defence on the other, are very similar. Health and education cash expenditures were $8.6 billion in 1984-85, while defence—was $8.9 billion.
> For the coming five-year period, the federal expenditure for health and higher education will grow only 14 per cent while that on defence will expand by a whopping 41 per cent. Why not treat these two essentials alike for they are in a sense twins, two components of one national objective. National defence, as it is known today, is to protect against external invasion or harm to the citizens of Canada.
> Health care is the internal protection for the same citizens of Canada.
> One is as important and vital as the other. It is why Prime Minister Mulroney has rightly called health care a "sacred trust", so why not treat health and national defence alike. They can both be called "sacred trusts".

He closed by saying:

> The defence of medicare requires the same priority as the defence of the nation—as I have said, the two are very alike. Let's treat them that way.
> This is the message to carry to Ottawa.

I am only too proud to provide that message from Mr. Justice Emmett Hall for the benefit of my friends sitting opposite. The test of any decent and civilized society is how well and thoroughly it treats its old, sick, and young. Canada was well on its way to being a world leader in passing that test. We are now well on the way to ranking 12th, 14th or 15th among industrialized nations in how well we treat our old, sick and young. There are nations less well off than we are which are doing it, and we should be ashamed of ourselves for even considering this kind of legislation. I hope my friends opposite will have a change of heart over the next few days.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, it is very unwise for the Government to attempt to choke off this debate on a matter of great importance. We in the Opposition, although so few compared to the vast majority which the Government commands in this House—

Mr. Berger: Silent majority.

Mr. Caccia: —which is silent, regret very much that the Government would resort to such mean measures to muzzle Parliament. I will put to you graphically why we are so upset about this latest move. I would like to begin with your province, Mr. Speaker. The impact of this Bill on Alberta between now and 1992 will be such as to reduce the revenue of your provincial Government by $773.1 million. That money would go to Alberta for health and education if this Bill is not passed. The net effect on the Province of Newfoundland is a reduction of $187.7 million. For Prince Edward Island it is $40.8 million; Nova Scotia, $282.6 million; New Brunswick, $228.8 million; for Quebec, more than $2 billion. For Ontario the net effect will be a reduction in revenue of $2.9 billion; for Manitoba, a reduction of $340.4 million; Saskatchewan, $332.5 million. There is a total of reduced revenues for universities and health care between now and 1992 of some $8 billion.

• (1250)

I can understand why the Tory back-benchers are so silent. Surely they feel uneasy about this and they do not want to defend this Bill. Rather than having to be forced to speak on this measure which they should defend, they would rather choke the Bill. This is what is happening here this morning and that is why we are so upset. We are not the only ones to be upset.

In February of this year The Telegraph Journal had an article entitled "N. B. Medical Body "Tried" To Thwart Medicare Cuts". Le Droit in March stated that 300 students are denouncing the cuts. The Toronto Star had a title in February of this year: "Funding Cuts Seen As Crisis For Our Universities". The Telegraph Journal in January of this year had an editorial entitled, "A Danger To Our Health". The Toronto Star in January of this year produced an article entitled "Political Leadership Is Needed To Save Canada's Universities". The Telegraph Journal in January had an editorial entitled "The Quality Of Our Life". Le Devoir in December of 1985 had an article in which the Minister of Finance of Quebec was raising the urgency of the situation flowing from this proposal. Le Droit in December of last year discussed the anticipated university crisis as a result of this measure. The report from Halifax in November, 1985, discussed the fact that Ontario leads the attack on funding cuts and accused the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) of breaking a promise.

The media has picked up the message and the substance of Bill C-96. It is important to realize what its long-term impact will be. It means the indexation of the per capita amounts that will be transferred to each province in relation to the population in each of the provinces at a rate equal to the growth of the Gross National Product less two percentage points.

Where does this notion of a reduction of two percentage points come from? Is it out of thin air? Is there a rationale for it? Why should there be a reduction in the first place? Surely if there is a growth in GNP this growth ought to be reflected and transferred to the provinces. This is what, in essence, Confederation is all about.

Why does the so-called Progressive Conservative Government come up with this notion that the provinces should be deprived by a 2 per cent growth in the GNP? I do not understand that. I would like to hear a Tory back-bencher explain that to us.

There is a feeling here that the quality of our universities, according to the Government, is too high, and the quality of our health services is too high. Based on what students and practitioners in medicine tell me, I would rather see a transfer formula that would be the equivalent of the Gross National Product, plus 2 per cent, instead of minus 2 per cent, in order to prevent the crisis that is being anticipated and referred to in the articles and editorials from which I quoted.

It is a serious set-back for the provinces to know that in each of the coming years there will be a reduction of revenue which, for the totality of the country, will amount in this fiscal year, 1986-87, to a reduction in revenue of $317 million. In Alberta it will mean today, election today, $29 million less from Ottawa. Next year it will be $676 million less coming from Ottawa to the universities and health services across the country.

In 1988-89 it will be $1 billion less coming from Ottawa on education and health. In 1989-90 it will be $1.5 billion. You can see how the curve is gradually increasing. In 1990 to 1991 the reduction touches $2 billion less from Ottawa to the provinces, and in the case of Alberta, $191 million less.

In the 1991-92 fiscal year the amount will be reduced by $2.5 billion. As I mentioned to you earlier, the totality of the reduction in the federal contributions to all the provinces, under this particular program touched upon by Bill C-96, between now and 1992 will mean a loss of revenue to the provinces of $8.133 billion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret the Hon. Member's time has expired.

Mr. Caccia: May I call it one o'clock?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I am afraid I must either recognize another speaker or put the question.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, since it is virtually one o'clock, may I call it one o'clock and complete my remarks after Question Period?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it so agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being one o'clock p.m., I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 12.58 p.m. the House took recess.

MINES AND MINING

ONTARIO HYDRO CONTRACT WITH ELLIOT LAKE MINE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I want to bring to the attention of the House of Commons the announcement of the Ontario Hydro and Rio Algom Mines to change the Elliot Lake uranium contracts so that the delivery dates of uranium take place after 1993. This decision will result in the loss of 200 jobs at the end of this year. It is a very serious blow for Elliot Lake.

Ontario Hydro and Rio Algom must reconsider this decision in view of the loss of jobs. Is this cut-back in jobs really necessary? Could this plan be phased over a longer period of time to avoid the lay-offs? Is Ontario Hydro and Rio Algom ready to provide any early retirement program?

The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) must provide funds needed for manpower adjustment assistance. The Government must abandon its policy of treating early retirement and severance pay programs as regular income for UIC purposes.

I call on the Minister to change this policy, as have the United Steel Workers of America and many Members of the House.

FORESTRY

COMPARISON OF PRACTICES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA AND FINLAND

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, during National Forest Week, it is useful to compare the reforestation practices of British Columbia and Finland since they both harvest similar areas and on similar terrain. The Finns rely far less on the natural regeneration of forest lands and plant 250 per cent more seedlings than British Columbia and practise intensive silvaculture techniques over 30 times the area covered in British Columbia in spite of harvesting 80 per cent of the British Columbia area. Finland fertilizes 100,000 hectares while British Columbia fertilizes 6,000 hectares. Finland thins and rehabilitates 300,000 hectares while British Columbia thins 20,000. Finland drains low lying forest lands while British Columbia does none. Finland seeds 25,000 hectares; British Columbia seeds none. In 1984, Finland treated 800,000 hectares while British Columbia treated less than 200,000 hectares.

While these poor reforestation practices certainly jeopardize the industry's long term future, even in the short run they may be problematic if the United States forest industry considers these poor practices to be an indirect subsidy to our forest producers.

EXTERNAL TRADE

FREE TRADE—EMPLOYMENT

Mr. Michel Champagne (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, our opposition colleagues are wont to stir up a storm in a teacup, or to make a mountain of a molehill.

For several weeks now they have been resorting to every imaginable tactic to spread fear and panic among the people, uttering nonsense to the effect that expanded trade with our southern neighbours will lead to fewer jobs for Canadian men and women.

Since when do increased production and export trade spell more unemployment? On the contrary, Mr. Speaker, all Canadian workers know full well that companies will hire more workers if production is on the rise, and of course that creates jobs.

Therefore I urge my opposition colleagues to be more discriminate in their statements and base their arguments on intellectually sounder premises.

PROSTITUTION

BRITISH COLUMBIA SUPREME COURT DECISION UPHOLDING LEGISLATION

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, the recent British Columbia Supreme Court ruling upholding the federal prostitution law is a victory for Parliament, the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and law-abiding citizens everywhere.

In his decision, Justice McKay correctly wrote that it is Parliament that must give life to the Charter and not the courts. It is here in this chamber where laws protecting society are made and it is here where Charter implications must be decided. The very foundation of our system of democracy rests on the principle that elected representatives must have the right to make and enforce legislation. We simply cannot exist in a system where laws, duly passed by Parliament, are ruled out in the courts.

Bill C-49 was passed by Parliament. It is effective; it is working; and it is supported by Canadians. That is the only assurance that I need.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

ALLEGED DECLARATION OF MINISTER

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, once again, the Hon. Member for Saint-Jean, the Minister of State (Small Businesses) (Mr. Bissonnette), demonstrated his incompetence this afternoon on the radio during the program La Filière, a program aimed at Quebec listeners, when he misled Canadians and Quebecers and said, in referring to last night's incident, that the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) had no business being at the Committee on Regional Industrial Expansion. Mr. Speaker, on the same program I informed listeners, after that stupid statement, that it was the right and the duty of every Member to be present and to stand up for his rights in committee.

Finally, the Minister stated that people were very satisfied, and once again, I say he is blind, and I suggest he consult this morning's papers to see what the polls have to say.

LUMBER EXPORTS TO U.S.—THREAT FROM TARIFFS

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, this week we celebrate National Forest Week. It is an occasion for all Canadians to realize the importance of this natural renewable resource. One out of 10 Canadian jobs is related to the forest industry. In British Columbia, forestry is our lifeblood. We cannot allow our lifeblood industry to fall prey to protectionist measures in the United States.

The current threat of a 35 per cent U.S. tariff on red cedar shakes and shingles would be devastating to the B.C. economy and particularly to the Mission-Port Moody area. U.S. President Ronald Reagan must surely understand that the imposition of this tariff would not only destroy an important Canadian export industry, it would derail our vital trade negotiations. Let us celebrate our forests and our future during National Forest Week by working towards freer trade in the forestry sector.

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, this week is National Forest Week and my Party, the New Democrats, call upon the Government to start recognizing the importance of forestry to our economy and to our way of life. Forestry is the largest contributor to our country's trade balance. One out of every 10 jobs is dependent on a healthy viable woodland. The Government of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) still refuses, however, to make good on its 1984 promise to create a full federal Ministry of Forests. Such a ministry, when combined with a Forest Industries Act, would consolidate the present hodge-podge of programs buried inefficiently among a dozen Departments and set a course for real job opportunities. The Prime Minister and his Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) could have taken this initiative at the National Forest Congress last month. Instead we got a $4 million advertising campaign to inform the Canadian public about our forests. The Canadian public is past being informed about the depletion of our forest base and now want action. Four million dollars could plant and grow 9.5 million seedlings. Less than five cents out of every dollar taken in by Government is returned to grow and tend our forests. We need action, not propaganda.

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

TRIBUTE TO WORLD WAR II CANADIAN DEAD

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, today marks the 41st anniversary of the end of the Second World War. On May 8, 1945, for those nations who fought the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis, world peace was finally within sight. Canadian troops in Europe began preparing for the return home to families and friends and to the lives they had left behind. Of the 570,000 troops who served overseas, 45,000 would never return. Their devotion to Canada and their commitment to freedom is not forgotten.

The contribution made by Canadians and Newfoundlanders to the allied in Europe will never be forgotten. It was a contribution characterized by loyalty and courage. As we reflect upon the devotion of our Canadian troops in the past to this country and its freedoms, we must ask ourselves what we are doing today not only to honour their memory but to fulfil our commitment to maintaining world peace.

Forty-one years ago Canadian men and women looked ahead to a world free from conflict and war. Today we must be realistic. It is not a perfect world and we can only do justice to the memory of those who fought and those who gave their lives for peace—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

PORT ALBERNI—FOREST CAPITAL OF CANADA—GIFT OF WHITE SPRUCE SEEDS

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni): Mr. Speaker, the best kept secret in Canada is the importance of our forest industry to our national economy. This week we are letting a lot of people in on the secret because this week is National Forest Week in Canada. I am proud that the city of Port Alberni in my riding was chosen as the forest capital of Canada for 1986 by the Canadian Forestry Association. Earlier this week, the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) and I participated in the opening ceremonies of Forest Week in Port Alberni. To mark the occasion today we are providing the Members of this House, the Senate and the Parliamentary Press Gallery with superior white spruce seeds. They are available this afternoon in the lobby of the House of Commons.

• (1410)

I know I speak for the citizens of Port Alberni, Canada's forest capital, when I express the hope that National Forest Week will create a tidal wave of support for our number one industry. Our forests are our future.

ROYAL CANADIAN MINT

LITERATURE—OMISSION OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, last week I informed the House that the government video-tape which excluded Prince Edward Island from the world map and gave Newfoundland to the United States was inexcusable. My anger continues. The Royal Canadian Mint recently advertised the 1988 Calgary Olympic Winter Games coins. Subscribers were instructed to add appropriate amounts of provincial sales tax. The ad listed sales tax rates for only eight provinces. Prince Edward Island, Alberta, Yukon and the Northwest Territories were left out. I can understand omitting Alberta since it does not have sales tax; and perhaps our northern sisters share the same tax break. Where is P.E.I.? We have sales tax. Why are we not listed?

It is quite obvious that the Government really has wiped P.E.I. off the map. Not only do we see this in the ads, we see it in the Government's hopeless and inadequate policies and programs.

I stand in my place today to offer the Conservative Government a crash course in Atlantic geography. Interested Members may contact my office, room 423 in the Confederation Building, 996-4714.

THE ECONOMY

REDUCTION IN INTEREST RATES—CONSEQUENCES

Mr. Pierre H. Cadieux (Vaudreuil): Mr. Speaker, this morning we heard that for the first time in more than 14 years, one of our major financial institutions is offering short-term mortgages at rates below 9 per cent. What a change from the exorbitant, 20-per-cent, plus rates that existed when the Liberals were in power!

In addition, Mr. Speaker, the Bank of Canada announced just a few minutes ago that the bank rate dropped by 0.25 points and is now at 8.72 per cent.

For the consumer who has to renew a five-year $50,000 mortgage, the steady reduction in interest rates since we came to power has meant a monthly savings of nearly $125. That is economic leadership, and we are going to continue in the same vein by creating more jobs, by attracting new businesses and by promoting economic growth in every sector and every region in Canada.

LUMBER EXPORTS TO JAPAN—AMENDMENT TO JAPANESE BUILDING CODE

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, one of the most important achievements of our Prime Minister's visit to Japan this week was the promotion of exports of Canadian forest products, particularly from British Columbia. For over a decade Canada has made representations to Japanese authorities and the Japanese construction industry to promote the acceptance of 2-by-4 timber frame housing construction in Japan.

Seizing the opportunity during his private meeting with Prime Minister Nakasone, our Prime Minister expressed a strong, personal interest in this issue. As a result Nakasone stated his intention to amend Japanese building codes in the near future to allow more timber frame housing in Japan. Such a change will be a significant boon to B.C.'s forest industry. It is one more example of how our Prime Minister's efforts are bringing real benefits to the economy of British Columbia.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Speaker: Before going to Question Period I think I must rule now on the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray). I am doing it now in order to make Question Period as long as possible. I listened very carefully to all the arguments which were made and I thank the Hon. Members who participated for the clarity and frankness with which they expressed their views.

I should say it this way. Questions to a Minister must involve ministerial responsibility in some way. It follows that questions which are purely personal ones on their face are out of order. Sometimes the borderline between what is ministerial and what is personal is not totally self-evident. Therefore, when I have heard what I believe to be borderline questions I have given the benefit of the doubt to members of the Opposition in order not to restrict unduly their right to ask questions. However, I must be fair to all Members. Therefore, I cannot allow questions which stray too far over the borderline. On review, the questions as they were put yesterday still seem to me to be not clearly expressive of the ministerial matters which they were attempting to raise. Therefore, I had to rule them out of order.

I will now deal with the second matter raised with regard to who may answer questions. Questions with regard to conflict of interest matters when directed to the Minister concerned have sometimes been answered by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), since the possible oversight of the conflict of interest code is a responsibility which he says has been delegated to him. Of course, the Chair will allow a question to be put to a certain Minister; but it cannot insist that that Minister rather than another should answer it.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ADMINISTRATION

APPROVAL OF GRANTS BY MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and relates to his ministerial responsibility. I believe Canadians know that the Minister must answer in respect of how he discharges that responsibility. The Minister cannot delegate to another Minister his reputation, his integrity or his responsibility. Therefore, why did the Minister approve millions of dollars in grants and incentives for a company when the son of the man who gave him a $2.6-million loan is an executive and shareholder of that very company?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Ouellet: Sit down.

Mr. Nielsen: No, I will not sit down because it is my responsibility to respond to questions with respect to conflict of interest. The right hon. gentleman, as a former Prime Minister of this country and one who has much experience in the House of Commons, should look to the conduct of some members of his own caucus as was displayed nationally on television last night. For the sake of this institution itself, he should speak with those people about the common standards of behaviour and decency expected of anyone, let alone—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Ouellet: Ask him to withdraw!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think all Members know that comment about other Members is out of order.

Mr. Ouellet: Ask him to withdraw. Withdraw—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. For the same reason, I cut off a statement made yesterday by one Hon. Member without asking him to withdraw his comments. All I am doing is pointing out to the Hon. Minister that those comments were out of order.

TIMING OF PRIME MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS SURROUNDING MATTERS INVOLVING MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, that is a pretty weak defence.

In that case, I want to direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. Canadians have had enough of these blatant attempts to hide the truth. Obviously, the Prime Minister asked the Minister 10 days ago for all the facts sarrounding the case now before the House.

My question is as follows: For how long has the Prime Minister of Canada been aware of the facts surrounding the case of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, and does the Deputy Prime Minister, acting on behalf of the Prime Minister, intend to provide the House with the parameters of this enquiry?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am responding as Acting Prime Minister and one who is responsible for ensuring compliance with the Code of Conduct. I have told the Right Hon. Member, his caucus Members and those of the New Democratic Party over 10 days that the Minister has met the very strict and demanding requirements—ments—

Mr. Ouellet: That's not true and you know it.

Mr. Nielsen: —of the Code of Conduct.

Mr. Ouellet: This is not true and you know this.

Mr. Nielsen: The Hon. former Minister knows that what he just said is unparliamentary. He charges me by saying that it is not true and I know it. That is something, Sir, that must be withdrawn.

Mr. Ouellet: Not at all.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I heard the Hon. Member say that it is not true and it is his privilege to say that as a heckle. That is all I heard.

• (1420)

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ANSWERS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): However you interpret the rules, Sir, we abide by them, but this Minister owes us answers. The Prime Minister owes us answers and so does the Deputy Prime Minister. I ask him once more how long has the Prime Minister known of the facts, as they are revealed day by day, of a conflict of interest, and perhaps beyond, surrounding the affairs of this Minister? When will the Deputy Prime Minister allow the Minister to face the music, stand up in this House of Commons and explain to the country what happened? When is the Deputy Prime Minister going to allow that to happen?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, he has been doing that—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ouellet: What a farce.

An Hon. Member: Cover-up.

Mr. Nielsen: —and for two hours last night before the standing committee—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: —answering questions.

Mr. Orlikow: Not so.

An Hon. Member: Whitewash.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. Could we try to do this today, please, without all the noise?

Mr. Nielsen: And doing so very adequately, it has been reported to me, without commenting on the committee evidence. But I can tell the right hon. gentleman that one of the difficulties is the nature of the accusations coming from Members opposite in his Party—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Absolutely fundamental.

Mr. Nielsen: —and from the New Democratic Party, some of which, such as the one made by the Hon. Member for Prince Albert yesterday, constituted an offence against the laws of the land. If the Member believes that Magna is guilty or should be the subject of a complaint for breaking the laws of Canada, then surely he has a responsibility—

Mr. Orlikow: Answer the question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is long.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): This is the highest court right here.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Oral Questions

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

GRANTS TO MAGNA INTERNATIONAL

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Last night we learned that Magna International received unpublished grants for its operations in Markham, Ontario. We also learned that Peter Czapka, son of Tony Czapka runs two of those Magna plants. Would the Minister explain to the House how he can continue to perform his duties as Minister of the Crown when these obvious links between his private holdings and those of his public responsibilities have now been exposed?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has referred to certain transactions occurring, I believe he said, in Markham. He perhaps hasn't consulted with his leader. Certainly as Prime Minister the leader would have known those were Liberal transactions in the Memorandum of Understanding signed on August 27 and specifically referred in Annex One to that agreement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Didn't have the guts to answer.

Mr. Ouellet: No guts and no conscience.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

ABSENCE OF PRESS RELEASES

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. In view of the fact he was the Minister who approved that, would he explain in the House, because Members on this side do not want to use the term cover-up, why no news releases were issued with regard to those grants? Does the Minister have something to hide from the Canadian people? Why does he not come clean and tell us the whole story, the complete story?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Member should be enquiring of his leader or possibly Ed Lumley. Ed Lumley signed the Memorandum of Understanding on August 27, 1984. It contemplated $50 million worth of transactions with Magna International, including the three Markham deals. They are itemized. For example, there is deal No. 207, 834 for hinges, the Multimatic deal. In truth they should answer to the House why no press relcase was issued with respect to the original memorandum of understanding.

• (1425)

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

TIMING OF GRANTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister. The difference is that neither Mr. Lumley nor his wife got an interest-free loan and that is what this is all about.

Mr. Gauthier: That's the difference. You can't tell the difference, Stevens.

Mr. Broadbent: Would the Minister agree that Mr. Czapka, who is a shareholder in Magna and a consultant to Magna, whose son, we have now learned, is a senior officer in two Magna corporations, had a personal interest in making a $2.6 million loan to the Minister's wife precisely at the time that the Minister was making up his mind about giving Magna Corporation a big grant?

Some Hon. Members: Answer, answer.

Mr. Orlikow: Let's get the truth.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member was, of course, at the committee last night. I will explain once again that the Memorandum of Understanding was signed on August 27, 1984. It itemized various transactions which they anticipated entering into with Magna Intenational. The transaction that was referred to in this morning's paper is one of those transactions which was subsequently implemented. It is as simple as that.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, knowing that, the Minister should either have made no decision favouring that company, or should have taken steps to make sure that his wife did not get a highly advantageous loan from the company. That is what the Minister should have done.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

THE ADMINISTRATION

LOAN MADE TO MINISTER'S WIFE—ROLE OF ANTON CZAPKA

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this goes to the very root of what conflict of interest is all about. Is it not the case that Mr. Czapka had a personal interest in making this very advantageous loan to the Minister's wife precisely at the time that the Minister was making his decision?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order!

Mr. Broadbent: If he did have, is that not a conflict of interest that the Minister should have avoided?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Orlikow: Velcro lips himself.

Mr. Gauthier: The velcro kid.

Mr. Orlikow: Come on, give us the whitewash.

Mr. Penner: You need a new lawyer, Sinc.

Mr. Rodriguez: Your nose is growing, Erik.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Minister wishes to answer.

Mr. Nielsen: Mr. Speaker, in response to that highly personal question—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Come off it. You're the expert.

Mr. Nielsen: —insofar as it affects the conflict of interest which the Hon. Member alleges, the Minister has complied completely with the very exacting requirements of the Code of Conduct which applies to public office holders.

Mr. Ouellet: No, no.

Some Hon. Members: Not so.

Mr. Nielsen: I have been saying that for 10 days in this House and, if necessary, I will be saying it for the next 10, 20, or 30 days.

Mr. Riis: You have paint all over your suit, Erik.

MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister will not deal directly with the question, I will ask a question of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Stevens: How can I be more direct?

Mr. Broadbent: The Memorandum of Understanding which was entered into by a previous Government required the final approval of the present Minister. The Deputy Prime Minister is assuming moral responsibility in these matters. Would he not agree that a Minister, in considering a decision of this kind, ought not to make a decision that is clearly advantageous to a company which is directly involved in making a $2.6 million loan to his wife?

• (1430)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): We have been over that ground, Mr. Speaker. However, speaking of moral obligations, the Leader of the NDP should examine the morality, under the guise of immunity, of one of the members of his caucus alleging a criminal offence against Magna yesterday without benefit of any evidence to back it up.

REQUEST FOR MORE COMPLETE ANSWERS

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Yesterday, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Davenport, put a question to the Government concerning the Opposition's right to put questions to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion about conflicts of interest. The Government House Leader gave the House the impression that we would be given an opportunity last night, before a committee where the Minister was to defend his Department's budget.

I therefore want to ask the Deputy Prime Minister how long this Government intends to refuse to give direct answers to questions about conflicts of interest. How long is it going to keep hiding the truth, as it did last night, before the Committee, whatever the Deputy Prime Minister may have claimed earlier?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): I have continuously answered questions with respect to conflict of interest, as it is my responsibility to do so. I can tell the Hon. Member one thing; never in my almost 30 years here have I leaped over chairs in an attempt to harass a witness appearing before one of our standing committees.

[Translation]

CONFORMITY TO GUIDELINES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, the only answer the Deputy Prime Minister gave on the subject of conflicts of interest was a single sentence, namely that the Minister had conformed to the guidelines. He never explained—and that's what I would like to know—how he could claim the Minister conformed to the guidelines when the rules released by the Prime Minister make the Minister responsible for the acts of his wife and children. Explain how you can claim the Minister conformed to the guidelines. Don't just say that he conformed, tell us how he did, according to you.

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): The Hon. Member may choose not to believe what I have been telling the House; that is his option. However, I have spoken personally with the ADRG and the Minister. I have had occasion to study, word-by-word, the Code and compliance requirements. I am assured by the ADRG that there has been compliance. I am satisfied there has been compliance. I so reported to the Prime Minister, and I still maintain in the circumstances presented, distorted and twisted here, that there has been compliance with the Code of Conduct for public office holders.

APPROVAL OF GRANTS TO MAGNA CORPORATION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. It has been confirmed that the Minister personally approved some $13.9 million in grants to the Magna Corporation from February 7 to June 20, 1985. It has also been confirmed that during this same period the Minister's wife was personally arranging with a close associate of Magna Corporation for a loan on very advantageous terms to her and the Minister of $2.6 million. Is there anything wrong with that transaction in the Minister's view with reference to the Code of Conduct on conflict of interest? If not, then is there not something wrong with the Code of Conduct of this Government which permits such a transaction to take place?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, if the hon. gentleman's question had terminated at its first part, it would have been the Minister's responsibility to respond. The Hon. Member having gone on deeply into the question of conflict of interest, it is my responsibility to respond.

I have told him repeatedly that there has been full compliance with the Code of Conduct. If the hon. gentleman wishes the first part of his question to be answered without cluttering it up with allegations of conflict of interest, I am sure the Minister would be very happy to oblige.

MINISTER'S APPROVAL OF GRANTS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Minister personally approved some $13.9 million worth of grants to Magna Corporation between February and June of 1985. At the same time his wife was personally negotiating with a close associate of Magna Corporation for a $2.6 million loan for her and her husband on advantageous terms. Was there anything wrong with those transactions?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: —again what the hon. gentleman is doing by way of camouflage is addressing a question relating to conflict of interest. However, he has added another dimension, one more unfounded, unwarranted allegation.

Mr. Cassidy: You said the Minister would answer and you would not let him answer.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

CONFORMITY TO SECTION 16 OF CODE OF CONDUCT—GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and concerns the administration of his department.

In the light of recent revelations according to which Mr. Peter Czapka—son of the Anton Czapka who lent $2.6 million to one of the Minister's companies—received a grant from the Minister, could the Minister inform the House whether he abides by his statement that there was no breach of Section 16 of the Code of Conduct concerning conflicts of interest and whether he maintains there has not been even the semblance of a conflict of interest in this case?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Member was not listening when I answered a very similar question from his Leader earlier.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): You did not answer my question at all.

Mr. Stevens: The transaction he is referring to is an integral part of the Memorandum of Understanding signed on August 27, 1984 by the previous Government under the name of Ed Lumley. The implementation of those transactions, which totalled some $9 million, was simply the processing our Department carried on with.

PROVISION OF GUIDELINES—REQUEST FOR DISMISSAL OF MINISTER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Is it not time that he invoked Section 38 of the Code of Conduct which says that when it is breached by a public office holder he is to be punished and that punishment can include termination? When is the Deputy Prime Minister going to terminate the services of his colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, as prescribed in the Code?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I say again that the Minister is in full compliance with all of the provisions of the Code of Conduct. The Hon. Member may choose not to believe that. He has his own political reasons for doing so. However, he cannot get around the fact that there has been full compliance.

LOAN NEGOTIATED BY MINISTER'S WIFE

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Would he tell the House whether he believes he will derive any benefit from the loan negotiated by his wife?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order! That is—

An Hon. Member: You know better than that.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Can I ask the Hon. Member to phrase that question in the context of ministerial responsibility?

Mr. Deans: In the context of ministerial responsibility, does he think he will get any benefit from the loan his wife negotiated?

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Crosbie: It's time for you to resign, Deans.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I explained at the very beginning of Question Period why I cannot allow that question. Does the Hon. Member have another question?

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, let me ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he believes that his Minister will not derive any benefit from the loan negotiated with a company with which he does business and provides financial support?

Mr. Crosbie: That is nonsense.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): That question is utterly ridiculous. The Hon. Member might as well ask me, if he had a swimming pool in his backyard, whether I would benefit from accepting his invitation to go with him for a dip.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Marchi: But you can't swim, like your former boss.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

An Hon. Member: Where are you going, Ian?

Mr. Broadbent: He's going to think that one through.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

An Hon. Member: He is going home to "sink".

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

GRANTS TO MAGNA INTERNATIONAL CORPORATION—PRESS RELEASES

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. His officials have confirmed that press releases are issued whenever government grants are made. I am sure the Minister recognizes that he made the final decision with respect to the three grants totalling $4 million to Magna Corporation. Did he instruct his staff not to issue press releases with respect to those three specific grants to Magna?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once again the Hon. Member is clearly misinformed. The fact is, as far as our Department is concerned, press releases are issued with respect to certain transactions and not issued with respect to other transactions. For example, the Memorandum of Understanding that contemplated a $50-million series of transactions involving Magna did not have a press release under the former Government. The process for approving transactions—and I hope the Hon. Member understands this, it certainly has been mentioned to him before—is not solely at my discretion. We have an Economic Development Board that is made up of five Ministers and they pass on the applications.

MINISTER'S ROLE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, maybe it is because we have suspicious minds on this side of the House, but it seems awfully strange that press releases are not issued when three grants are made to Magna. I would like to put the question to the Minister again. Did the Minister instruct his staff not to issue press releases with respect to the three grants to Magna totalling $4 million? If so, why did he so instruct his staff?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am still waiting for an explanation from some member of the Loyal Opposition why, when the Liberal Memorandum of Understanding was entered into there was no press release? Let me assure the Hon. Member that I have never given instructions to our department with respect to any transaction to issue a press release or not to issue a press release.

EXTERNAL AID

STUDY OF ASSISTANCE FOR WOMEN IN UNDERDEVELOPED COUNTRIES

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is on a much different subject and is directed to the Minister for External Relations. I understand that a Canadian study concerning assistance to women and development in underdeveloped countries in relation to health clinics, education for women and training opportunities has been underway for some time. Would the Minister tell the House when the report will be available?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for her question. I may remind her that the subject is being examined and that a response is expected shortly on this matter.

Tuesday, I announced, in connection with Africa 2000, that I would be tabling a policy on the integration of women in the development process, and I have a very special and personal interest in this question.

THE ADMINISTRATION

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—INVESTIGATION INQUIRY

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Was the Deputy Prime Minister aware at the time that he investigated the potential conflict of interest of the Minister responsible for regional industrial expansion that the son of the man who made the $2.6 million interest-free loan for one year to the wife of the Minister had also received grants or loans from the Minister's Department?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): The Hon. Member uses incorrect terminology when he uses the term "investigation". That is not my responsibility. My responsibility is to ensure that there has been compliance with the Code of Conduct governing public office holders. Those records are public in the office of the ADRG, and are there for him to examine if he should wish to take the trouble to do so. If he examines the records, and asks the ADRG, he will be told that there has been compliance by the Minister.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is again to the Deputy Prime Minister. Maybe I will use the right terminology and he will answer the question. Was he or was he not aware at the time that, in fact, the Minister's Department had made loans to the son of the man who had made a loan to the Minister's wife?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): I can answer that simply by saying that I read the newspapers, as does the hon. gentleman. My responsibility is, as I have described it, to see that the compliance that is required of the Minister has been had, and I am satisfied as to that. That is my responsibility.

CANADA DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

ROLE OF BURNS FRY IN SHARE OFFERING

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Will the Minister tell the House how and why he chose Burns Fry as the lead firm in the public offering of 23 million shares of the Canada Development Corporation announced last May?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, as I explained to the Hon. Member last night in the CDC issue, there were 41 investment houses included in the distribution, including Wood Gundy, Dominion Securities, McLeod Young, Levesque, Richardson Greenshields, Pemberton, Geoffrion, some 30-odd companies. It is set out publicly in the tombstone ad that appeared in the papers at the time.

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister appointed Burns Fry as the lead in this particular share offering. Given the ongoing investigation, confirmed yesterday by the Ontario Securities Commission, into all aspects of the CDC transaction, the interlocking directorships between a certain representative of the Burns Fry organization and Magna, and the Minister's complicated business dealings, does he not believe that he should resign his position?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, in response to the Hon. Member let me assure her that the appointment of not only Burns Fry, but the other 40 dealers that were involved in the distribution of the CDC stock was done by the CDIC board. It was Mr. Paul Marshall, the president of that company, that presided over the general distribution. We have one more piece of evidence that the Bay Street informant the Hon. Member is relying on is filling her with wrong information.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CIA FUNDED BRAINWASHING EXPERIMENTS—COOPER REPORT

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice and it concerns the appalling report by George Cooper on the CIA brainwashing experiments on Canadian citizens. Will the Minister explain why Cooper was not asked by him to contact either the victims of these experiments, the individual who was responsible for the book which disclosed the experiments, or the lawyer for the victims? Will the Minister, in these circumstances, not agree that the unbelievable conclusions of this whitewashing report are fatally flawed as a result?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I suppose for the first time the Government of Canada has taken this matter seriously, a matter which has been ongoing now for 20 or 30 years. Last year I arranged for an independent inquiry to be made of all government sources as to what the Government's involvement was in this particular matter that relates to the late 1950s and early 1960s. That inquiry has been concluded. We have made the report public, which includes the conclusions and opinions of our independent investigator. Nothing is being held back. The report is certainly not a whitewash. It is a complete exposure of anything the Government or any agency of the Government had to do with this matter. It is the first time to my knowledge that this has ever been done. The hon. gentleman opposite should be welcoming that as a new departure in Canadian Government matters.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Robinson: Certainly the aging victims of this are not welcoming that kind of whitewash.

REQUEST FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE FOR LITIGANTS IN U.S. COURTS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. In view of the Minister's public offer yesterday to assist the plaintiffs in their United States legal action against the CIA, will the Minister agree to intervene in the American courts on behalf of these Canadian citizens and further assist the plaintiffs financially with their legal costs?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, if the plaintiffs—I do not believe the Hon. Member represents the plaintiffs—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He represents them here in Parliament, John.

Mr. Crosbie: If the plaintiffs have a submission in that respect, then it will be considered. We have helped and will continue to help the plaintiffs in their case against the CIA, for the simple reason that the CIA wrongfully involved themselves in financing research in Canada without either the consent or knowledge of the Government of Canada, and because they did it in a surreptitious and non-public manner, hiding behind a so-called charitable front. For that reason we are prepared and have assisted and will continue to assist the plaintiffs.

Mr. Cooper's report deals with the Government's position and whether the Government has any legal liability or any moral responsibility in connection with its own research grants.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Crosbie: He came to certain conclusions which we accept at the present time.

PETRO-CANADA

PRICE CHARGED FOR GASOLINE

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In view of the fact that it has been repeatedly stated in the House that Petro-Canada is a follower, not a leader in the market-place, why is Petro-Canada, in several communities, reportedly leading the way now that the price trend seems to be going upward?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, there are two reasons for fluctuations in gasoline prices; one is the cost of crude and the other is the marketing that goes on in certain areas. Right now we are seeing price wars going on in the market areas and prices are going up and down. There is a chance that Petro-Canada's price may be higher in one area and lower in another, but it is the market wars that is causing these price fluctuations today.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Yesterday in the House he claimed that the present conflict of interest guidelines are stricter than the guidelines under the former Tory Government. Yet, under those guidelines, the families of cabinet Ministers had to put all of their business interests into a blind trust or sell them. How can he claim what he claimed in the House yesterday?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, he wants an opinion. I stand by what I said. We were not referring to the 1979 guidelines. The Code that was tabled in September, 1985, was stricter than the Code of the previous administration which he supported when he was sitting on this side of the House.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, in the Prime Minister's letter to all Members of Parliament he gives the Deputy Prime Minister credit for recommendations and says on page 4:

> Obviously, from time to time, circumstances may arise that call for an impartial person to conduct an investigation as to fact.

Therefore, my supplementary question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Is it not time to adopt his own recommendation and start that investigation so that we can get on in the House with the important business of this nation?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, if I had any difficulties in discharging my responsibility with respect to the Code of Conduct I would consider his advice to me. However, I have no difficulty in coming to the conclusion that there was full, complete compliance with the Code of Conduct by the Minister.

CANADA-U.S. TRADE NEGOTIATIONS—REQUEST THAT FARMERS BE REPRESENTED ON ADVISORY COUNCIL

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): My question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. The Minister for International Trade has shown a poor understanding of agriculture by lumping agriculture with the food and beverage processing industries on the Free Trade Advisory Council. The Minister of Agriculture will know that the interests of farmers are often diametrically opposed to those of the food processing industry. Does the Minister consider the interests of farmers of so little importance that they do not need a separate seat on the Free Trade Advisory Council?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, there is no question in my mind that the Minister of International Trade and the Secretary of State for External Affairs have full knowledge and understanding of the importance and, indeed, the complexity in relation to the bilateral trade issue between Canada and the United States. Indeed, if the Hon. Member wants to be a little more patient, I think he will see that there is a complete understanding, because in the very near future the names of the membership of that sectorial committee will be made public. There will be some interesting revelations and information at the time that list becomes public, which I would expect to be within the next 10 days or two weeks.

Mr. Hovdebo: What agriculture needs is a separate member.

REQUEST THAT THE MINISTER DEMAND REPRESENTATION FOR PRODUCERS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister give us some assurance that he will demand full representation for agricultural producers on the Free Trade Advisory Council?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I just asked the Hon. Member to be a little more patient. I am perfectly satisfied that the representations that he has made, to this point at least, have been taken completely into consideration by the Minister for International Trade.

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

PROFITS OF WHEAT MILLERS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary. In light of recent reports that Canadian wheat millers are receiving profits of some 7.6 per cent of sales while American wheat millers only receive 1.9 per cent profit of sales, what action is the Minister taking to protect Canadian consumers in light of the recently announced increase in wheat prices and in light of the fact that in the last five years profits have gone up while wheat prices have fallen?

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to advise the House on behalf of the Minister that a committee is currently studying this issue. It is chaired by our colleague, the Hon. Member for Crowfoot.

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

APPLICATIONS FOR GRANTS BY MAGNA INTERNATIONAL OR SUBSIDIARIES

M. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Could the Minister confirm to the House that his department has other applications for grants that were filed by Magna and its subsidiaries, mainly Multimatic Inc.?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I will take that as a representation. I will check as to whether there are any applications.

I would emphasize once again, though, that there may well be applications pending, coming out of the Memorandum of Understanding to which I referred, that was signed by Mr. Lumley. I emphasize that if one listens to the Opposition, they are saying in effect that it is okay as long as it is a Liberal Government that is dealing with this company, but a Conservative Government—

Mr. Broadbent: You don't understand the issue.

Mr. Stevens: —should not be dealing with them. Why they continually malign companies such as Magna International and Hyundai, I just don't understand.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is the problem.

Mr. Broadbent: You don't understand.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is the real problem.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER REFRAIN FROM MAKING DECISIONS ON GRANTS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that in a case like this, the Minister doesn't know whether his company has filed further applications for grants. Could the Minister give the House the assurance, considering our information that there have been further applications for grants, that he will not be the one to decide whether or not these companies are eligible for the grants?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I thought I made that clear. I said that I heard the Hon. Member and would take his question as a representation and would check. However, the normal process in our Department is that these applications proceed without any reference to me or any other Minister until a recommendation is in hand. It then comes to our economic development board which is made up of five Ministers and dealt with either on a positive or negative basis.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is three o'clock.

POINT OF ORDER

REQUEST THAT MINISTER TABLE DOCUMENT CITED

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I will defer asking the business question until after a House Leaders' meeting which will take place later this afternoon. However, during the Question Period, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion appeared to be quoting from or citing a document under the jurisdiction of the Government. I would like to ask him to follow the usual practice and table that document.

• (1500)

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think what the Hon. Member was referring to were notes I had of certain transactions.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): The Minister held up a document—

Mr. Benjamin: A Memorandum of Agreement.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): —and it would appear that he referred to it as the "Memorandum of Understanding", according to my recollection. He pointed to a table in it. I think he should live up to the long-standing traditions of this House and table the document in question.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member may not be satisfied with the clear answer given by the Minister, but when the Minister says they are notes, they are notes, and that is too bad for the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, in response to the point of order, I have no objection, if they want to see my notes. There are my notes.

Mr. Crosbie: Give Herb the notes.

Mr. Speaker: Do I take it—

Mr. Crosbie: Feed the rat-pack the notes and see what difference it makes. They wouldn't understand them anyway.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: They understand jumping over tables and grappling around.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Do I take it the Hon. Minister is tabling the document he just held up? Do I take it the Hon. Minister wishes to table the piece of paper he just held up?

An Hon. Member: Table it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: For God's sake, come on.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): You have too damn many lawyers.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. You are not being helpful. The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), please. Is the Hon. Minister indicating to the Chair that he intends to table what he was holding up 30 seconds ago?

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to tabling the note I was holding up—

Mr. Ouellet: That's not what you were holding in your hand.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stevens: —as you have said.

Mr. Ouellet: That's not what he was holding. He was holding a different document.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps Hon. Members will come to order.

Mr. Ouellet: I think that tells a lot about you.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) will sit down, please. The Hon. Member will sit down, please.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Point of Order—Mr. Gray (Windsor West)

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) will come to order and stay in order. The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we may want to check the transcript of Hansard, but my recollection is that during the Question Period, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) was talking about a Memorandum of Understanding and purporting to quote from that memorandum.

Mr. Benjamin: That's right.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): —and I may be mistaken but he appeared to be holding up a document which consisted of more than one page.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Foster: Right on.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Several pages.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Benjamin: Probably a note from his wife.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows the Chair has just heard the Hon. Minister say that he was using notes. I think the Hon. Member knows the practice of the Chair is to accept the word of all Hon. Members in these matters.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think that is the end of that point of order.

An Hon. Member: Why?

Mr. Speaker: Because the Chair has heard the Minister and he has to accept the word of any Hon. Member. I have to accept his word.

Mr. Prud'homme: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, I am not going to hear it, sorry. Order, please. I have heard three or four representations on this point of order. I have indicated what my view is. That is the end of that.

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, we have a right to be heard in the House.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) will come to order and stay in order. That is the last warning. Order, please. The Hon. Member for Bourassa will come to order now.

Point of Order—Mr. Prud'homme

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: On the same point of order—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Bourassa is going to leave the Chair no choice. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on a separate point of order.

[Translation]

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, we all watch television—

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the Hon. Member has another point of order, he is most welcome to raise it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I do not know how many times we are going to go through this. If the Hon. Member has another point of order—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please. The Hon. Member for Bourassa will come to order now. The Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) will come to order now.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Listen to him.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques will come to order. The Chair has heard the point of order at length. I think the Chair has given that point of order fair treatment.

Mr. Benjamin: You don't know what his point of order is.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

REQUEST THAT MR. SPEAKER REVIEW ELECTRONIC HANSARD

Mr. Prud'homme: I have a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) is claiming a point of order. What is his separate and distinct point of order?

Mr. Prud'homme: Well, Mr. Speaker, you may decide if it is separate after you hear the point.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): For long we had the practice of checking the "blues" because we did not have television. May I submit that Your Honour may like to watch the debate of this afternoon on television and see if the point raised earlier was a bona fide or frivolous point.

An Hon. Member: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Frivolous.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis knows that the Hon. Member for Windsor West raised a point of order which I heard three times. The Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) said in this House not very long ago that he was using notes. The Hon. Member also knows that the Chair always takes the word of an Hon. Member, and that is the end of that.

Mr. Ouellet: Unfortunately, yes.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ouellet: Tell him to resign. Come on. Shame for Parliament. He is a disgrace to this House.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): That was not the same document.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members will come to order.

Mr. de Jong: Where is John Diefenbaker now that we need him?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS AND FEDERAL POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION AND HEALTH CONTRIBUTIONS ACT, 1977

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the motion of Mr. Lewis (p. 13066).

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, when we adjourned for the luncheon recess I was just about to begin my remarks on the motion before the House, which is that the question be now put on Bill C-96, a Bill to change the formula for the Established Programs Financing Act. That is the formula we have used in Canada for a good long time to provide equal accessibility to health care and post-secondary education. It was originally put into law as an attempt by the federal Government to take some responsibility for financing what clearly was and is a provincial responsibility in the areas of post-secondary education, the financing of the vocational colleges and universities, as well as the health care system.

What is at issue here today is the fact that the Government is not doing what it said it would do during the election campaign. I want to remind the House that in the Progressive Conservative Handbook which outlined the programs of the various parties there was a whole host of issues. The Progressive Conservative candidates and the public were told, with regard to established programs financing of post-secondary education, that the Progressive Conservatives' position would be, and I quote:

> We would return to the 1977 funding formula though we cannot compensate the provinces for their 6-and 5-funding losses. We will institute regular consultation with the provinces as set out in the original agreement to reach a consensus on national goals in post-secondary education.

Those are two promises in this regard, both of which have been ignored. It goes without saying that there were no consultations. This is not a matter which requires a great deal of discussion. The fact is that there were no consultations.

What is even more important is that the trust was broken. The Conservatives placed a great deal of emphasis on this trust during the election campaign. Members of the Party said that they should be trusted with respect to universal programs since they are sacred. They said: "Trust us on EPF. This is something which we will live by. We will keep the funding levels at the 1977 level". And what did they do?

Let us look at the 1977 level. This was a period of time under the Liberals. The levels had begun to fall away from the 50/50 financing proposal, but the federal Government was still carrying 48.7 per cent of the cost of financing post-secondary education and health care. It was almost 50 per cent but not quite. The next year the level rose to 49.6 per cent—again, it almost made the 50 per cent level. The following year the formula took us to 49.9 per cent, and thereafter we began to have trouble. By the time 1982-83 rolled around the federal Government was carrying only 42.6 per cent of EPF. As Hon. Members will recall, at that time we were entering into the 6-and 5-program cut-backs instituted by the Liberals. At the present time, 1985-86, the level is 43 per cent. Next year it will be 41 per cent. In the year 1987-88, as a result of the proposal which is before us, the federal Government's share will be 40 per cent. By the time we reach 1990-91, it is proposed that rather than paying 50 per cent of the cost the federal Government will pay only 36 per cent.

I realize that Members on the government benches have made speeches saying that there will not be cuts. However, the principle that EPF will be on a 50/50 basis has been totally undermined. The percentage that the federal Government will carry will be only 36 per cent instead of the 50 per cent which was promised and guaranteed in the last election campaign. What we see here is a Government which treats its promises lightly. It is a Government which plays with words and experiments. It performs the type of experiments I recall being talked about when I was a young boy in my home community.

In our community there was a fairly stingy preacher. As the story goes, he decided that his mule was eating a great deal of his income, since the preacher had to pay for the feed. He decided that the mule only ate out of habit and did not really need to eat all that feed. So he began to wean the mule off the feed. He finally got the mule down to the point where it had survived two or three days without having anything to eat. Then the mule died. That is sort of what the Conservatives are doing with EPF. They are weaning the provinces off post-secondary education funding. So far the programs have not died; but that will be the ultimate conclusion. Unfortunately, the preacher in my story reached the same type of conclusion we have been hearing from government Members. He said that there was nothing wrong with his experiment. He said that he had proved the point that mules could, indeed, live without any food, only the mule had died before the experiment could be proven a complete success. A woman in his church who had less faith in science said that all he had really proved was that some preachers can be very stupid. I think that is all the Government has proved by its approach to EPF.

The amounts of money with which the Government is playing are of such fundamental importance to the maintenance of the country that I am not sure Canada can survive without them as it has survived up until this point. What is more important than trying to maintain services on an equitable basis right across the country? This is one reason why we have a federal Government. Its job has been perceived by all Canadians to be that of providing transportation services where needed to the outports and to the small communities on the Prairies. It has been perceived that a function of the Government is keeping educational opportunities open for the poor children who live in our outports and those prairie communities which I have mentioned. It has been a long, hard struggle, but in the last 25 or 30 years we have achieved that type of understanding with respect to health care. The understanding is that no matter where one lives and no matter what economic circumstances one finds oneself in one has access to health care on the same basis as do people in Toronto or in Montreal. It does not matter whether one is in an isolated community or has very little money. If one is sick, breaks a leg or needs an operation, health care is available. The Government is putting that understanding in jeopardy.

Let me stress that it is not saving the taxpayers any money as a result of this measure. If it succeeds in this endeavour, it succeeds in reducing the accessibility to these services of these people about whom I have just spoken. If the provinces are to keep levels of care at their current levels, then the same taxpayers will have to put in the money simply as provincial taxes as opposed to federal taxes. Overall, in terms of the macro-economics of the country, it makes no difference. However, the federal Government is in a position to place funds across the country so that Newfoundlanders have similar access to service as do Ontarians and as do people in Saskatchewan and so on.

I have talked about percentages which will change. Some people may have difficulty in handling percentages. I think all of us can understand what it means to try to finance a similar program and to move from 50/50 financing down to less than one-third financing, with close to two-thirds having to be borne by the local Governments and the provinces.

I would now like to give Hon. Members an idea of what the extra cost will mean in terms of some of the provinces. I wish to point out that for the Province of Saskatchewan, my province, the change to the formula, this new understanding, this breaking of the trust with Canadians which the Government established going into the election, will mean that over the next five years the residents of Saskatchewan will have to raise an additional $227 million to pay for EPF and to finance their universities and hospital services. In terms of the whole country, the extra charges being shifted to the provinces amount to $5.6 billion, which will take us to the end of the current decade. This is an extremely unfortunate situation in which we find ourselves, particularly in light of the expectations most people had and in light of the type of expenditure programs the Government has chosen to provide in other areas. For example, we know that defence expenditures have been about the same as EPF expenditures over the last few years. By the end of this decade defence funding will increase by 41 per cent while EPF will increase by only 14 per cent in real terms. It seems that the defence of the country is at stake here, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Mr. Murphy: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I move that the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) be now heard.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It really does not matter if the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides or the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) wishes to speak. The Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I too rise on a point of order. Whom do you recognize?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I move that the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides be recognized.

• (1520)

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I find it very strange when we see before us the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) recognized by the Chair, after which a Member of the NDP rose to ask that another Member now be heard. The Chair recognized that Hon. Member and then another Liberal Member rose and changed his mind.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I do not apologize to my friend, the Minister. You now have a motion before you and it should be disposed of.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) raises a point of order. I watched the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) and the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) rise at the same time. I will be glad to recognize either one of them. I see no reason for—

Mr. Prud'homme: Well, there is a motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would say to the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis that people are watching. This is not a place for games.

Mr. Prud'homme: A point of order, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member will have the chance to make a point of order. I will recognize the Hon. Member. I am just saying to the Hon. Member that because the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) raised a point of order, I recognized the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides. After that, he wanted to hear from the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence, and I said that that was fine. They both rose at the same time. I see no problem with recognizing either one of the Members. Will the Hon. Member please explain to me what it is that he wants to know?

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Table Officers will also explain to you what is going on. You recognized the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides, and the Hon. Member for Churchill said that the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides should not be recognized at this time but that you should recognize the Hon. Member for Eglington—Lawrence. You know the rules, Mr. Speaker. I do not need to explain them to the Chair.

Mr. McKnight: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I would suggest that if you check the "blues", you will find that when you recognized the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), and the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) moved that the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) be heard, before the motion was seconded by anyone in the Chamber, you, Sir, then recognized the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence. Unless Hon. Members have some ulterior motive for their actions, you, with your respect for the House, have—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will recognize the motion put by the Hon. Member for Churchill if he will get a seconder and present the motion in writing.

The Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), seconded by the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), moves:

That the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) be now heard.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour, please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed, please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Murphy), which was agreed to on the following division:

After the taking of the vote:

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, it is the intention of the Official Opposition not to participate in this vote because it involves two of our very distinguished Members.

Mr. Speaker: On that basis I declare the motion carried.

Order, please. On a point of order on the vote, the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prudhomme).

Mr. Prud'homme: I did not vote, as you may see, but I want to register the fact that I am present in the House of Commons.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I want to indicate to you, Sir, that I abstained from voting out of the lingering, but diminishing, respect for the institution of Parliament.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make it clear to the House that I was present but abstained from voting, since the question was on deciding which of the two colleagues who belong to the same political party as I do was supposed to speak.

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I was also present and that I abstained from voting because two of our colleagues were involved.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I also would like to point out that I was present, but considering the competence of both Liberal colleagues, it was impossible for me to decide. If it had been a Liberal against a Conservative, that would have been easy.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I also abstained from voting, for reasons similar to those mentioned by my colleagues.

[English]

Mr. Langdon: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. If I had known that the question in front of us was the quality of either of two Liberal speakers—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Before I give the floor to the Hon. Member for Eglington—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille), let me say that I am in receipt of a notice of question of privilege from the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall).

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise a question of privilege concerning the document that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) read from during Question Period versus the paper that he proposed to table. I had an opportunity to view firsthand, subsequent to Question Period, the video of the House of Commons which shows very—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am in a technical difficulty. The Hon. Member will understand. I would appreciate it if he would give me the proper notice of the question, which has to be done in writing an hour in advance of raising it in the House.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, I will certainly accept your ruling, but I wanted to bring it to your attention as soon as possible subsequent to the Question Period. If you deem it not to be appropriate at this time perhaps I could raise it tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows that our practices are that questions of privilege arising out of Question Period are properly raised at three o'clock, or twelve o'clock, and if they are not raised then, the only other practice is for notice to be given in writing to the Chair.

• (1610)

Order, please. The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, it was not possible to raise the question of privilege at three o'clock because it was necessary to view the official video tape of the House of Commons proceedings. My colleague will follow your instructions, but I just wanted to explain why this was not done directly at three o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair will have to deal with the question of privilege according to the correct procedure, that it be sent to the Chair and the Chair will deal with it in the normal way.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier)—Federal-Provincial Relations—Establishment of French educational television network in Ontario. (b) Inquiry when funding will be made available; the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez)—Unemployment Insurance—Calculation of pensions as income. (b) Possible Forget Commission recommendation; the Hon. Member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid)—Canada Post Corporation—Closure of St. Lawrence Seaway post office.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. May I ask the business question now, since we have had the House Leaders meeting to which I referred earlier today. Would the House give its agreement to that, because I am sure the announcement will not take too long?

Mr. Speaker: For the sake of form, I will ask for the consent of the House to revert to the House business question.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. House Leader of the Official Opposition has asked the usual business question. The Hon. President of the Privy Council.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Prud'homme: Give us the menu.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: In Saskatchewan we pronounce it "meenu". The discussion to which the Hon. House Leader of the Official Opposition referred has taken place. It is my intention to continue with Bill C-96, the matter we are discussing now on the floor of the House of Commons. Bill C-92 will follow, and the third Bill in the sequence that I have discussed with the House Leaders is the amendment to the Income Tax Act with respect to scientific and research tax legislation.

We are also in the process of discussing other items of legislation and the amount of debate that would be required to deal with those items. As we monitor the progress of the legislation I have mentioned, I will continue to keep in touch with opposition House Leaders so they can advise their Parties and I will also announce to the House any change in the business that may be appropriate.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the motion of Mr. Lewis (p. 13066).

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the will of the House that I be allowed to speak at this time. I am pleased that the New Democratic Party and the Progressive Conservative Party gave me permission to speak at this time. I hope they will listen and understand that it is of great importance to the entire academic community, including teachers, administrators, students and researchers—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I hope that Hon. Members will carry on their conversations in their respective lobbies and allow the distinguished Member for Eglinton—Lawrence (Mr. de Corneille) to say a few words.

Mr. de Corneille: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was saying that students, which number nearly a million Canadians, those in administrative positions and in the teaching faculties of unviversities and colleges, and researchers, all of whom total some 1.2 million Canadians in the field of post-secondary education, will be gravely affected by Bill C-96.

The Government has broken the promises it made to the Canadian people. The academic community, including students, teachers, professors and parents, asked what the Government would do in terms of the future of post-secondary education and whether it would maintain the agreement contained in the formula of 1977. The answer given by the Progressive Conservative Party was:

> We are committed to sustaining the current federal financial commitment, according to the formula set out in the 1977 Agreement.

When asked if the Conservative Party supported the continuation of that agreement, the Conservatives said in different words:

> Yes, we support fully the original 1977 funding formula and the legislation providing for that.

This legislation does not provide for that continuation, but for its destruction.

Unfortunately, the Party opposite has broken its promise to the electorate. It has broken its promise to the young people of this country in the future. Not only has the Government broken its promise in this legislation, it has also broken an agreement between the Canadian Government and the provinces. That was a solemn agreement on which the provinces counted to finance the health care and post-secondary institutions until March, 1987. The Government has broken that promise in mid-term and has cut off the increases which those provinces counted on to provide for medical care for Canadians and post-secondary education for our young people.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) originally stated that he would keep this promise. However, it is interesting to note that the Minister changed his mind after the banks collapsed in the West. He reversed his position and implemented this cut contained in Bill C-96. In other words, it appears to us, to the Canadian Association of University Teachers and to the academic community, that this Bill was introduced to help the Government pay nearly $1 billion as a result of its decision on the bank's collapse in 1986. For the sake of supporting those who were in need of replacing the funds they had invested—some of whom were multi-millionaires—the Government took money away from the young people and gave it to the banks in which those people had deposits.

While I am not opposed to the Government taking that action, it should not be done at the expense of the young people of this country.

The Government broke its promise to the Canadian people, then proceeded to break an agreement between the Government of Canada and the provinces of this country. This year it will cut back on the anticipated revenues that the provinces expected for medical care and post-secondary education pursuant to an agreement that was supposed to end on March 1, 1987. That is a tragic mistake and a black mark on the Government's relationship with the provinces.

Furthermore, the Government has decided to move a closure motion in order to push this Bill through. The Government is limiting debate even though it has an enormous majority in the House. The Opposition totals only 70 Members out of 228. With that kind of majority I find it surprising that the Conservatives still feel it necessary to use their power to crush and prevent the Opposition from debating this Bill.

• (1620)

The provinces are not happy with this Bill. Premier after premier has accused the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Government of reducing the growth of federal funds for health and education without consultation. That is a scandal. As if there were not enough scandals now, the Government must muzzle the Opposition and prevent it from representing the provinces. There are at least eight provincial Governments which have formally and informally expressed their distaste about what the Government is doing with respect to post-secondary education and medical care of the Canadian people through Bill C-96. The Government told the provinces it was going to cut their funding but did not discuss it with them. The Government just announced the cuts. It was done by fiat. We know now what happened to the promise of dialogue and consultation.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State of Canada (Mr. Scott) said on April 25, and I quote from Hansard at page 12668:

> No province will be affected any more or any less than any other province through this Bill.

What an outrageous remark, Mr. Speaker, when we know that some provinces are less well off economically than other provinces! How could anyone dare to say on behalf of the Provinces of Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Manitoba or Saskatchewan that they will be affected in just the same way as all other provinces? Terence Donahoe, the Minister of Human Resources Development and Training of Nova Scotia, a Tory provincial Government, is quoted in The Globe and Mail on January 28 as saying, and I quote:

—if Ottawa goes ahead with the reduction in grants it simply will emasculate the post-secondary education system. It is going to be chaos and chaotic. Regardless of whose numbers you are going to use, the system is simply going to fall apart.

Mr. Donahoe is a Minister in the Government of the Province of Nova Scotia and he is talking about the educational system of Nova Scotia. He is worried about one of the finest systems of education in Canada. These are not idle words. We should listen to the professors, the people who are running Dalhousie University and the people involved, whether it be students or faculty. We should listen to the CBC about the state of affairs at Dalhousie and we will understand why the Minister from Nova Scotia is talking not through his hat, but from his heart and knowledge as a Minister of the Crown of that province as to what will be the results of this Bill.

For the sake of the people of that province, if for no one else, I urge the Government to reconsider this Bill and not to try to muzzle us.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my remarks will be very brief. As I understand, the main argument of members of the Government is that the $5 billion cut from the Established Programs Financing Act over the next five years is not a cut at all but in fact an increase. For the life of me, I cannot understand how on earth they can call a $5 billion reduction in transfer payments for medicare and post-secondary education from the federal Government to the provinces as an increase. It does not only escape logic, it does not jibe with the promises made by the Progressive Conservative Party to the Canadian people during the 1984 election campaign. What the Progressive Conservative Party said in its Campaign Handbook with respect to established programs financing was, and I quote:

We would return to the 1977 funding formula though we cannot compensate the provinces for their 6-and 5-funding losses. We will institute regular consultation with the provinces as set out in the original agreement to reach a consensus on national goals in post-secondary education.

As we know now, Mr. Speaker, the Government did not consult with the provinces and certainly did not follow through on the promises it made during the election campaign, not only with respect to this program but with respect to a whole host of other programs.

I can only find one individual during this whole debate who has referred to the cuts as "cuts". The Hon. Member for the Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) quite forthrightly and honestly said, and I quote from Hansard of May 6, at page 12978:

It is always difficult to stand up in the House of Commons or anywhere else and defend cuts in health services,

So he is one member of the Government who recognizes that the Government is attacking the ability of the provinces to fulfil their commitments to medicare programs and post-secondary education. In the process, the Government will hurt an awful lot of Canadians who should have the right to equal access to medicare whether they live in Newfoundland, Labrador, British Columbia or anywhere else in the country. Rather than having one standard of health care services apply to all Canadians equally, Canadians will receive different health care services depending in which part of the country they live in and on the ability of their particular province to deliver that health care service. Exactly the same thing will happen to the youth of this country, many of whom will be denied access to higher education simply because they cannot afford it. That is contrary to every principle which has been discussed in our country for many years. Access to quality education and health care is basic to our form of democracy.

I know my colleague, the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall), has other pressing demands on his time, as we all do, so I will end my remarks to allow him to speak. To conclude I will simply say that what the Government is doing is the height of hypocrisy for which it will pay in the next election.

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate my colleague, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) who, as usual, has displayed a great deal of knowledge on the subject matter we are debating. What is more important, I agree wholeheartedly with the substance of his remarks. I must say that this is quite remarkable in view of some of the positions which have been taken by other members of his caucus.

Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, is very important. It is very important in the way in which the Government operates. It is important in the way in which the Government treats its various provinces and, in particular, the people who reside in those provinces.

I would like to ask the following question. Is this an open Government? The question has to be answered in the negative. In dealing with a piece of legislation as important as Bill C-96 one would have hoped that the Government would see fit not to invoke the provisions of closure but, perhaps, to allow a full and open debate on the effects this negative piece of legislation will have on the provinces. Unfortunately, that was not the choice of the Government. Its choice was to close debate by using the most Draconian measure Parliament has seen in many years, that is, closure.

I can see by your facial expression that you too, Mr. Speaker, are disappointed with the way in which members of the Government have conducted themselves with regard to the provisions of open government. Open government and stability are certainly not a part of this Government's actions in terms of Bill C-96.

The thrust of the Bill before us is to take away from the provinces monies earmarked for necessities. I refer to the necessities of health care and the necessities which our post-secondary institutions provide. The Government is attempting day by day to transfer the deficit of the nation to the provinces. It is not fair that the provinces are now being told that they have to change their budget allocations for, perhaps, the two most important sectors of our economy.

When the provincial Premiers met in Halifax at the last First Ministers' Conference they said it very clearly and unequivocally. They said that they did not want cut-backs in transfer payments to take place. Many of those First Ministers had already planned and allocated monies for their various budgets in terms of health care and education. However, the Government, which had campaigned on this bid of consultation, has once again shown its true colours in that there has been no consultation. That has been said time and time again, not only by the Premiers of Ontario and Quebec but by Premiers of the same political stripe as this Government. I refer Hon. Members to the Premier of New Brunswick and to the First Minister of the Province of Newfoundland. If these measures go through, then these provinces will experience even more difficult times than those which confront them today.

I think I can share with you, Mr. Speaker, just what these cut-backs will mean to my region of Canada. In 1986-87, the reduction to the Province of Newfoundland will amount to $7.3 million. For the Province of Prince Edward Island the figure is $1.6 million. For New Brunswick it is $9 million, and for my Province of Nova Scotia it is $11.1 million. These are substantial reductions in two areas which every Government since the beginning of Confederation, both provincial and federal, has deemed to be the most important areas involving everyday Canadians. However, the Government, supported and abetted by those Members of Parliament who refuse to take their Government on, are saying to the Provinces of Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick that the quality of health care the citizens of those provinces have grown to live with will now be worse—substantially worse.

I know there are Members in the Chamber who will say that my comment is one of a partisan nature. However, individual after individual, whether it be the representative from the provincial medical society of New Brunswick, or others, have come before our caucus and shared with us how these cut-backs will affect not only the medical society but the health care of the people of New Brunswick. In the outlying regions of the Province of New Brunswick individuals are without health care. They are without the opportunity which Canadians in every other province deem to be their right. They have been left without those services. We are now saying to them that we will cut them back even more. The situation in the Provinces of New Brunswick and Newfoundland is similar in that these cuts will be very substantial.

In 1987-88, the reduction for the Province of Newfoundland will amount to $15.5 million. For the Province of Prince Edward Island it will be $3.4 million, and $1.2 million for New Brunswick. For my Province of Nova Scotia it will be $23.6 million.

One must underline the importance of transfer payments. They were introduced not at the whim and prayer of some politician on the hustings at the time, but after major studies affecting all of Canada were debated in the House of Commons, in the provincial legislatures and by the public at large. These discussions were to the effect that there was a pressing need for services in education and health care to be equal across the country. They are no longer equal. In the Province of Nova Scotia any individual in post-secondary education today will tell us that he or she is being cut to the bone. To impose additional reductions on these people will make it virtually impossible for them. It will be asking them to row a boat without oars. The situation is becoming extremely difficult in the Atlantic provinces with our diverse and small population there. Nonetheless, it is a population which wants to be educated and wants to have the same opportunities as other regions of the country have. Whether or not we consider the urban centres of Toronto or Montreal, we want the same rights.

These cut-backs will hit the very fibre of the country, something which has been echoed by Premier Pawley of Manitoba. That is what he said at the First Ministers' Conference. He said that they cannot make any more cuts. I hope that, not because of political partisanship on the part of Members opposite or because they want to be politically blind to the realities of 1986, they will take it upon themselves either to visit post-secondary institutions or to view, as I have done firsthand, the various medical services which are not available to rural communities. I am certain that any reasonable man or woman after seeing firsthand what is actually out there will agree that Bill C-96 is discriminatory both in substance and in terms of the effects it will have on all regions of the country.

A former Prime Minister who made an analogy with regard to language and how important it was for Canada to adopt two official languages also said that if regional disparities are not stopped and reversed they are more likely than anything else to destroy the country.

• (1640)

Bill C-96 cuts back on funds going to the Province of Prince Edward Island. In view of the recent election results from that province, I am astounded that Conservative Members of Parliament have not realized that people there do not like the type of Government they are getting under the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

I will conclude by saying this, not for partisanship but for the real benefit of all Canadians wherever they may live: we ought to vote down the provisions of Bill C-96 because it is a Bill that is discriminatory, unfair and un-Canadian.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, it has taken two years longer than we expected to get to the world of George Orwell. It has taken until 1986, but we now have a Government which is trying to call black white and white black. We have a Government which is in fact severely, dangerously and at extreme human cost cutting back the amount of money the provinces expected to receive to pay for very basic human services. Yet this measure is being described by the Government, and particularly the Minister of Finance

(Mr. Wilson), as not being a cut but simply a reduction in the rate of growth. When a province has budgeted for certain increases, reduction in the rate of growth is in fact, in practice and in reality a cut to the amount expected and required to pay for the needs of the people of the province.

What I think is so particularly sad about the action taken by the Government with respect to the established programs financing is that it runs directly counter to what the Government said it intended to do when Conservative Members ran for election in 1984. According to the Conservative Campaign Handbook of 1984 in which, as usual, the Conservatives attacked the Liberals and New Democrats for their inadequacies, the Conservatives said very clearly that it was the PC position that they would return to the 1977 funding formula although they could not compensate the provinces for their funding losses under the 6-and 5-program. They also said that they would institute regular consultation with the provinces as set out in the original agreement to reach a consensus on national goals.

Those remarks referred to post-secondary education, just one of the set of programs with which Bill C-96 deals, but very clearly that makes the point that the Conservative Party promised to turn around the past attempt to squeeze the provinces and, instead, offer increases which would keep up with the increase in the Gross National Product and therefore provide the provinces with the financial mechanisms required to fill the crucial needs of the people in the fields of education and medical care and to fill the other basic needs for which federal financing provides.

What is the reality as opposed to the promises made by Conservative Members before they were elected? The reality is that Bill C-96, instead of bringing a return to fairness, predictability and consensus with the provinces, has brought an increase in the slash-and-cut technique for which the Conservatives blamed the Liberals prior to the 1984 election. Conservative Members were right to blame the Liberals for that kind of slash-and-burn technique. They are wrong now to adopt that technique and to put into effect what amounts to, first, a complete break from their own promises and, second, a reproduction of past Liberal mistakes.

In reality, as a result of this Bill, there will be a tremendous decrease in the funding available to the provinces to meet basic human needs. Under the old formula which is in existence at the moment, the provinces expected to receive roughly $97.7 billion in federal contributions between 1986 and 1991. The new formula which Bill C-96 will put into effect will provide roughly $92.1 billion. One does not have to be a mathematical whiz to see that a cut of more than $5 billion has been imposed on the provinces.

I say to the Conservative back-benchers who represent Ontario that they should be protesting against this Bill particularly strongly. The cuts under this Bill will hit Ontario in larger measure than any other province. According to our statistics, over five years, in excess of $2 billion will be cut back from the amount of money the Province of Ontario would have expected to receive from the federal Government in order to pay for basic post-secondary education costs and medical care.

We might ask ourselves why it is that the Province of Ontario faces a serious crisis in health care. This was shown by the protests of doctors and medical personnel which were heard yesterday in Toronto. Why is that crisis in health care being experienced? Why is a crisis in funding for post-secondary education being experienced? Students and university professors have spoken to our committee and other committees about that crisis. The answer is very clear. It is because of the slash-and-burn technique which Conservative Members are now putting into effect in the name of some kind of crazy deficit reduction which is occurring on the backs of the ordinary people of Canada. It is not fair, it is not just and it should not be permitted in a federal system. There should be a bond of faith in the federal system between the federal Government and the provinces that they are guaranteed a set amount of money on which they can count.

• (1650)

We have here a Bill which not only breaks promises to the people of Canada but also breaks faith with the whole federal system in which the Government claims to have such great faith and belief. It is, in short, Mr. Speaker, an example of how badly misguided this Conservative Government has become in the less than two years since it took office.

For myself I have to say that it is with great regret that I see Bill C-96 brought before this House of Commons for it represents the destruction of the faith people had in a change of Government and what that change might have brought about.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-96 has to do with what we call the established programs financing arrangements which are negotiated between the federal Government and the provinces of Canada. It is called EPF for short and it deals with health and post-secondary education. The reason we have EPF is very simple. It was decided a long time ago that what we wanted in this country was to have nationally acceptable standards in health care and education. What we are doing with Bill C-96 is changing an established programs funding into a destabilized programs funding. We are destabilizing the program. Instead of EPF it is DPF.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has offered a rationale for Bill C-96. It goes something like this. What we have at the present time is a runaway deficit. The impact of this runaway deficit is far greater than that of shifting it to the provinces. That is the Minister's argument. Let us consider that for a moment. I do not think we can disagree with the Minister of Finance that we do have a runaway deficit for that is hard to argue against. It is hard to say that the deficit is not a serious national problem. It is so serious that in the very near future, in the early 1990s, we may be spending 50 cents on every tax dollar collected just to pay the interest on the national debt. What happens when that figure reaches 75 per cent or 90 per cent? It is obvious that most Government departments would be irrelevant. They will no longer be required. Parliament itself will not have much of a function. We would probably need only one government Department and one government agency. We would need Taxation Canada to collect the money and transfer it to the Bank of Canada, which would disburse it to those people who were fortunate enough to own government bonds of one kind or another or treasury bills. That is what would be called the Government of Canada,.

The situation is serious and I have to agree with the Minister that the deficit is serious. What we need is a national program. We need all political Parties, all publicly-elected people from the municipal through the provincial and federal level, to co-operate to do something about our burgeoning national debt.

That brings me back to Bill C-96. Is it really the answer, as proposed by the Minister of Finance, simply to take a portion of the federal deficit and transfer it to the provinces? I find that very difficult to accept as a reasonable solution, but not all Hon. Members agree with me.

For example, yesterday or the day before the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—St. James (Mr. Minaker), who is a government supporter and a former member of the Manitoba Legislature, argued that the provinces have some responsibility for restraining their expenditures. I found that argument a bit puzzling. I am not aware, and I certainly stand to be corrected, of a single province that is not taking some action to restrain its own expenditures. I think there is a consciousness in all of the provincial capitals that they must do what they can do to control their own deficits.

The Member for Winnipeg—St. James went on to argue that with Bill C-96 we are not cutting back at all because there will still be increases. He argued that there will not be decreases, there will be increases, so really there are no cutbacks.

That is a fatuous argument. We know there is in place now an agreement between the provinces and the federal Government. I thought these agreements were binding, but apparently they can be broken arbitrarily. They can be broken unilaterally. That bothers me because the Party opposite now in power argued that that should not be done. More than that I am bothered because two aspects of our national life, post-secondary education and health, will certainly suffer as a result of Bill C-96.

I would like to ask Members on the government side whether they believe that post-secondary education in Canada is overfunded. Is post-secondary education receiving an unduly large share of the amount of financial resources that are available? I took a careful look at that matter, and discovered that from 1977 to 1985 there was a very large increase in the enrolment, 27 per cent in our universities, over that period of time. In the colleges, the increase was even more significant, that is, 36 per cent.

How much additional funds flowed from the federal Government during that period of time to offset the increases? Government support increased by only 2.5 per cent. I am talking here about an actual increase. We have to take into account inflation. You cannot add that in because it means that higher salaries to keep up with inflation and operating costs of universities and colleges have to match inflation. This was an actual increase over and above inflation of 2.5 per cent, but it does not square with the increased demands placed on our post-secondary institutions.

Mr. Ed Anderson, President of the Canadian Association of University Teachers, said:

> Proposed federal cuts to post-secondary education could place a university education beyond the reach of many students.

There is a basic problem with Bill C-96. It is unfair, it is arbitrary and, if I can conclude with just a short quote, let me say that I agree with The Telegraph Journal which wrote:

> It is essential that the deficit be reduced and it is essential that the burden of the deficit be spread fairly across Canada and all regions of Canada. What the federal Government is doing does not ensure such fairness in the sharing of the burden.

The Telegraph Journal wrote this with respect to Bill C-96.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being five o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT RESPECTING LEGAL COUNSEL FOR UNBORN CHILD

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. O'Neil Bill C-254, an Act to amend the Criminal Code (legal counsel for unborn child), be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Pat Binns (Cardigan): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on Bill C-254 which I consider to be a very important Bill in that it deals with the protection of the unborn child. I believe that if the proposed amendment to the Criminal Code were adopted we would see a strengthening of the protection of the unborn child.

As a Member, I have chosen to speak on this Bill because I think it is very important. It is a subject which evokes very strong feelings in most Canadians. I am sure that my rising to speak on the Bill will cause concern for some of my constituents who will disagree with my views. Nevertheless, I feel a responsibility to do all I can to protect innocent, helpless, human life. Human life is sacred because it comes from God and, therefore, I feel that as a legislator I must act to defend innocent human beings, including the unborn.

In my opinion, abortion is not an acceptable alternative to the inconvenience of pregnancy. However, if the life or health of a mother is threatened and an operation which cannot be avoided results in the death of an unborn child, that is acceptable as long as the intent of the operation was to maintain life rather than to kill.

I believe that free, strong countries cannot survive or prosper if Governments lack the moral courage to protect innocent, helpless people. For this reason I feel that our country should not only protect the unborn child, but that Canada should also attempt to set an example for other countries, which have liberalized their abortion laws and customs, to follow. Someone must stand up for the unborn since they cannot do so themselves. The responsibility to support life vigorously rests with this House.

I am told that in my own province many women travel to other provinces or the United States each month to obtain abortions. It is unfortunate that unwanted pregnancies occur in the first place, and I am among the first to support the need for more sex education programs which would prevent such things from happening. I also suggest that our churches should increase their activities with regard to family life and sex education. I see education as an alternative to continued criminalization of the abortion procedure and imposition of government sanctions. However, these appear to be necessary in the short run.

Some people would have us believe that most countries in the world have liberalized their abortion laws to the point where abortion on demand is permitted at the unconditional request of the woman. In fact, this is not the case. Only 10 countries in the world permit unconditional abortions. Some countries, including Ireland, the Philippines, and Portugal provide absolutely no exemption from absolute prohibition of abortion, even for the narrow purpose of saving the mother's life.

Some people would have us believe that most women believe that abortion is morally acceptable. However, a poll taken by Life magazine in 1983 indicates that 56 per cent of women polled believe it is morally wrong. It is also interesting to note the policy of the Canadian Medical Association. A policy document of that association indicates that the CMA is "opposed to abortion on demand or the use of the procedure as a method of birth control emphasizing the importance of counselling services, family planning facilities, and services and access to contraceptive information".

This matter has often been raised in the House in the past. Many present and former Members have had some very interesting things to say on the subject. I think it would be worthwhile for me to review some of the comments made in recent years. Mr. Bill Yurko, the former Member for Edmonton East, introduced two Private Members' Bills in the House dealing with the subject of abortion. On November 18, 1980, in the House of Commons he said:

> This is not a partisan issue. It is a moral issue of profound importance. It is an issue upon which each individual must reflect and make up his own mind.
> I have always lived by the philosophy that it is my duty to protect, enhance, improve, cherish and embrace human life in all its dimensions. I have always asked myself the fundamental question: what is human life?

He goes on to say:

> —in my estimation human life is a unique form of intelligence. At conception this intelligence is programmed and it evolves with the simple provision of an environment and a means of feeding. It is totally programmed, it is human life right after the moment of conception.

The Member for Kindersley—Lloydminster (Mr. McKnight), who is now the Minister of Labour, spoke in debate on Bill C-216 in the House of Commons on that same date. He said:

> Bill C-216 is simple and straightforward. Its intention is to erase the loophole which literally permits abortion on demand and to ensure that the unborn child receives the full protection of the law and to repeal the section of the Criminal Code which allows therapeutic abortion committees to be formed.

He went on to say:

> Although the issue of abortion is emotional, it is one upon which we cannot be silent. Since the abortion law was put in place 11 years ago, over 450,000 innocent children, human beings, have been killed.
> We cannot be shrill or strident; we must be rationale and have certain expections of the people of Canada. In each and every one of us there is the emotion to recognize humanity. Humanity has many definitions. The definition which I in my own mind and conscience accept is that of the human being, whether it be a human being outside the womb or a human being in the womb.

On January 19, 1981, the Hon. Member for Richmond—South Delta (Mr. Siddon), who is now the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, quoted some StatsCan statistics which indicated > —a further alarming increase in the use of abortion as a means of population control—

He noted that:

> —18 innocent children were sacrificed by abortion last year for every 100 live births, with 34 abortions to every 100 live births in my Province of British Columbia alone.

He went on to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour) and endorsed by many Members of the House:

> That this House stand in silence for two minutes, in memory of the 65,135 innocent Canadian human infants whose lives were taken away by abortion during the past year; and furthermore this House admits, to its shame, that these acts have been taken with the consent of the Government of Canada.

There was obviously a great deal of concern expressed there, Mr. Speaker. I would also like to quote a Member of this House for whom I have a great deal of respect. On October 17, 1983, the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) made a statement with regard to abortion. In speaking about Dr. Henry Morgentaler's abortion clinic he quoted a Toronto newspaper story which read in part: "Dr. Henry Morgentaler will defy the law and reopen his Toronto abortion clinic—". He said:

I can see nothing noble about this man breaking and defying the laws of Canada. Abortions to protect the life of the mother are legal today, but Dr. Morgentaler wants abortion on demand. He wants abortion to be a birth control measure, and he thinks freedom of choice should be extended to allow for the murder of another human being—yes, even an unborn child.

He went on to say:

World famous scientists like Professor A. W. Liley of Aukland, New Zealand, confirm that what is in the womb is "a person, a full human being that can cry, hiccup, dream, kick, suck a thumb, take "food", regulate fluid volume, have heart beats and fingerprints—a totally separate individual who stops his mother's periods and who decides when labour should begin".

Murder is murder, whether it occurs before birth or after birth. If we permit unborn and so-called unwanted babies to be killed, the next step may be to permit the killing of the crippled, the abnormal and the aged.

Many other Hon. Members have spoken on this issue in this House with much more authority and experience than I have. I certainly endorse the remarks and previous statements made by speakers in debate on this very important issue. I wish the Hon. Member success with his Bill because I think this is one of the most critical and important basic issues with which the House of Commons will be faced in future years.

• (1710)

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, it is indeed an honour to rise and speak on Bill C-254, an Act to amend the Criminal Code to provide legal counsel for the unborn child at meetings of therapeutic abortion committees.

A Bill such as this is fraught with difficulties, even, I venture to say, insurmountable difficulties. To begin with, I am very reluctant to support legislation which would force costs of a substantial nature upon the provinces. The Minister of Social Services for each province, who is responsible for the provision of counsel under this Bill, is I am sure endeavouring to restrain or reduce costs in his or her department at a time of fiscal restraint. The expense of providing highly-paid legal counsel would be prohibitive. Even if one were to deflect this with the notion that legal aid could provide counsel, it must be realized that legal aid is also paid for by the taxpayer. My understanding is that the federal Government, through the Department of Justice, shares the cost of providing criminal legal aid. Through the Department of National Health and Welfare it shares the cost of some civil legal aid as an item of need under the Canada Assistance Plan. I also note that provincial plans are under the jurisdiction of provincial Ministers of Justice, not Ministers of Social Services. No matter which plan offers legal aid, however, there is a fundamental threshold of eligibility, both financial and legal, and those standards are determined by the individual provinces.

How would one determine the eligibility of the fetus for legal aid? Do we simply provide legal aid across the board? Free counsel for all? If so, what about the provision of legal counsel for the individual carrying the fetus? It must be assumed that representation for the unborn will turn the committee into an adversarial arena, with mother and fetus in an adversarial relationship. As well, the rules of natural justice would seem to require that if the state provides free legal counsel to one party without regard to financial eligibility, it must do the same for the other party as well. In addition, I can see the argument arising that the father and other family members should also be allowed to intervene in these proceedings with counsel, as well as other interested parties such as social service agencies. If I were a doctor sitting on one of those committees I would most certainly wish to have counsel advise me as well. Who is going to pay for all this?

Apart from the matter of the expense of state intervention, there are other, equally serious ramifications involved in this proposed amendment. As currently set out in the Criminal Code of Canada, the therapeutic abortion committee is to be comprised of three medical doctors. If this proposed amendment were to pass, we would be asking medical practitioners to hear and determine points of law. They are not qualified to do that. In the parlance of administrative law we would be asking the medical profession to make judicial or quasi judicial decisions. Apart from the sheer improbabilty and impropriety of such a move, by turning the procedure into a judicial hearing the rules of natural justice will come into play. No longer will the committee consist of medical practitioners reaching a medical determination. The addition of counsel and legal argument and the rules of natural justice mean the incorporation of the right to notice, the right to a fair hearing, the right to be heard, and the inclusion of a plethora of case law or precedents which have been developed in this area over the years. I can envision a backlog of cases which, in all likelihood, could strike at the very fundamental right to be heard.

We must remember that time is of the essence in these matters. Delay due to preliminary motions or adjournments or other common legal procedures could strike at the very heart of the therapeutic abortion committee. Delays could result in a pregnancy going beyond the vital first trimester where a necessary abortion can be safely performed. As well, it would seem that further amendments might be required in order to place persons on the committee who are knowledgeable enough to deal with the inevitable legal arguments this proposed amendment invite. In short, the Bill proposes to change in a fundamental way the very nature of the committee as it is now set out in the Criminal Code.

We easily speak of rights in this day and age, but we must be careful to remember that rights laid down in legislation are absolute and lead to rules, regulations and bureaucracy, and can therefore lead to obstruction of the desired outcome. We cannot fiddle or tinker with the law and not expect that to lead often to greater complexity.

My final point of concern relates to the actual administration of this proposed scheme. What procedures will be put in place to effect representation for the unborn? Will there be a panel of lawyers available? How will they be selected? Given the wide difference of opinion in our society on the abortion issue, one can assume that a range of opinion is present within the legal profession. Will this work be available only to lawyers who are philosophically opposed to or supportive of abortion? Even if the bar maintains its neutrality in acting for the unborn regardless of personal opinion, how does counsel receive instructions? Will it somehow be deemed they are to oppose the abortion automatically? If counsel cannot receive instructions from the client, is it his or her opinion which will be put forward? If counsel must be opposed, what would happen in cases of a pregnancy resulting from rape or incest?

The argument over abortion will continue. There will never be unanimity of opinion. The current section of the Criminal Code is a result of long study and a solid compromise with which most Canadians appear to agree. While the issue will continue to be the subject of debate, and while I commend the Hon. Member for his effort and concern in this area, the proposed amendment is too flawed to be put forward at this time.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, when I looked at this Bill I was reminded of Shakespeare. Was it not he who wrote in one of his plays that "the first thing we do, we kill all the lawyers".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: There is lots of applause in this House for that. I must say that I do not agree totally with Shakespeare's sentiments or with the applause. I do not know if I am right now, but I was a member of the Bar of British Columbia and the Bar of the Northwest Territories. By "bar", of course, I do not mean what ordinary Canadians think of as a bar.

Ms. Mitchell: There are a number of those.

Mr. Waddell: There are a number of those involved as well. I mean the time honoured and well-respected legal profession. What do they call it, the second oldest profession? We barristers and solicitors know we are, if not the first, the second oldest profession, at least among solicitors. I will not mention the other solicitors out there.

Before I get into the content of this Bill I want to tell you a little story concerning lawyers. There was a cruise ship off the Bahamas last winter. There was a businessmen's convention in progress on board and there were two lawyers there. They were arguing about a legal point. The argument got so heated, rather like those of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) sometimes here in the House of Commons or in the committees, that the lawyers fell overboard into the shark-infested waters. Immediately a bunch of sharks came up, but they suddenly formed a line and the two lawyers were able to swim right back to the boat. The businessman said: "That was a miracle". One of the wives of the lawyers looked over and said: "No, that is not a miracle, that was just professional courtesy". It seems to me that this is what is often thought of lawyers. The reason I mentioned it in connection with this Bill is that this is a Bill that for the first time goes beyond birth to get that ancient profession once again involved. I wondered when I was a lawyer how fortunate I was because I could go beyond death on the other end. I could send my bill not to the poor client, who was already gone, but I could send it to his or her estate. I could collect from the estate, and it was all very nice. You could go beyond death.

They say you cannot take it with you, but lawyers can get it from you after you have gone by doing all the work, handling the estate. Each province has a Wills Act, death duties and probating wills. If you die without a will, you still have lawyers who have to put you through a process called dying intestate, without a will. You have to go to court, make an application, and you incur legal bills. What this Private Member's Bill, does, while it is well intentioned, is to involve lawyers now before birth. When the poor kid comes out, you could sort of, if I can put it that way, give it a lawyer's bill. So you are born, and what do you get? You get a lawyer's bill. What a way to face the earth.

I must say I have mixed opinions about that. I do not want to make fun of this. I personally would benefit from it, as would my colleagues, the barristers and solicitors of this country, who would be quite pleased to be able to submit a bill. It is quite possible that you could have, with this Bill, someone coming into the world owing money to a lawyer who appeared before an abortion committee. I know that is extending it a little, and I know the Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) would perhaps want me to be more serious in dealing with this.

Let me get away from lawyers and talk a little bit more about the Bill. The Hon. Member who last spoke, my colleague and friend from Maritime Canada, raised some interesting points. A good point he made was, how would counsel get instructions? They obviously do not get it from the fetus. They have to get it from somewhere. Do they oppose the abortion? Do they agree to the abortion? What if there is medical evidence to say the fetus, when born, will be born with Down's syndrome or with another handicapping disease, or will be born with permanent mental or brain damage? Those things can be discovered now. What if that is the situation? Does the lawyer take the position that, as counsel on behalf of the fetus, he is arguing that the fetus should be aborted? That is possible, I think, under this particular Bill. Perhaps some of the other Members will show me how this would not happen. I think that is what the Member who last spoke was getting at, by saying that, in spite of the intention of the Bill, there are a lot of questions that remain to be answered.

How does Legal Aid choose a lawyer? Presumably the lawyers are professionals and they would argue the matter properly. Even that is difficult. Who is your client? Is your client the family? The mother? The mother wants the abortion, presumably. Is your client one of these crazies like Joe Borowski, one of these kinds of people? Is that your client? Is your client like people who go around hitting people over the head in front of Doctor Morgentaler's clinic? Is that who you have to listen to?

Members of this House know how difficult the abortion issue is. Can you imagine some poor lawyer, in his first case, when he goes to the abortion committee having to go through a picket line of pro or anti-abortionists? It would be absurd. It is not hard to indicate some of the difficulties here.

The Member mentioned the possibility of a rape case or an incest case. This is another example where, if I were counsel in the case, I would probably want to argue the possibility of abortion. It raises some fundamental issues about taking instructions, what kind of instructions, and even theorizing what a handicapped fetus would want. There are arguments on many sides here.

The Member who last spoke also talked about the current law on therepeutic abortions and the doctors' committee. I do not know if he heard a person I very much enjoy listening to on the radio, Mr. Peter Gzowski of Morningside on CBC Radio, but he had the other day women doctors on the program who were talking about their patients, women who wanted abortions. They talked about the terrible delays these women were having with the present system. I know the Member who last spoke said the present system is acceptable. I do not believe it is acceptable. These doctors were recounting how their patients were suffering, and that what would have been a simple matter, in terms of a medical operation for an abortion, became much more complicated as the matter was delayed for a number of weeks. It made it harder for the operation, it made it more difficult medically. Irrespective of what you want to argue on the abortion matter, the evidence that they gave was irrefutable, there was a problem with the delay in getting an abortion.

Would this Bill, and the appointment of a counsel—and again I say we lawyers look for business anywhere we can get it—but to be honest, does this not raise a lot of problems in terms of the potential for even further delay? A lawyer needs time to consult, time to prepare a brief and so on. What would happen is that there would be no abortion. That is really what would happen.

Maybe the inarticulated major premise behind this is that they really do not want any abortions at all. It is not a Bill about legal counsel for the unborn child. Then we are back to the days of abortions in the back alleys. I think I have made my point, which is the difficulties of having counsel in such a situation. I cannot help noting that Shakespeare certainly would not approve of this because he wanted to get rid of the lawyers, and now this Bill would get them not only after death, but even before birth.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in this important debate on Bill C-254. Before commencing my remarks I would just like to clarify briefly the purpose of the legislation, at least on paper. The Bill requires that every fetus be represented by counsel at a meeting of the therapeutic abortion committee. In my view, Mr. Speaker, while one examines this Bill, and on the face of it it is an Act to amend the Criminal Code to provide for legal counsel for an unborn child, in fact, that is a sham and an illusion. The real purpose of this legislation is to implement the policy of the Hon. Member, which is to in fact get rid of all abortions in Canada under all circumstances.

In my view, by prolonging an already unworkable abortion procedure, this Bill indirectly seeks to make legal abortions virtually impossible to obtain in Canada. Because of its perspective, which is fundamentally opposed to freedom of choice, I am rising in opposition to this legislation.

I might say as well, just so that my position on this subject is clear for the record, that I have in fact tabled a Private Members' Bill, Bill C-238, which would remove the provisions of the Criminal Code dealing with abortion and allow this decision to be made by the woman in consultation with her doctor. Certainly, I believe I have an obligation in participating in this important debate to make it very clear where I stand on this question.

Existing Criminal Code provisions generally prohibit abortions unless they are performed in an approved hospital with a therapeutic abortion committee of at least three doctors which has certified that the woman's life or health is likely to be endangered by the continuation of the pregnancy. I note, however, that the establishment of therapeutic abortion committees is not mandatory. In fact, out of a total of 1,300 hospitals in Canada, only 250 have set up committees, and 20 per cent of those hospitals that have established committees do not in fact perform any abortions at all.

Although any decision which is made by a therapeutic abortion committee has very serious implications for the individual woman's future health and welfare, she is not, under Canadian law, entitled to be present at the committee hearing. Nor is she permitted to be represented by counsel at the hearing of the therapeutic abortion committee. The irony of this legislation is that if it were to be adopted, the foetus would have the right to legal representation, but the woman herself would be denied the right to legal representation. Surely the House cannot accept that kind of situation.

Present provisions of the Criminal Code governing abortions have been found to be in contempt of women by panelists in Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Edmonton and Halifax. These are panelists who are travelling across Canada and reviewing the laws from a woman's perspective. In addition, three juries have acquitted Dr. Henry Morgentaler of abortion-related charges.

Recent Gallup polls indicate that 72 per cent of Canadians call upon the Government to ensure access to safe therapeutic abortions. Recent British polls also indicate extensive public support for the fundamental principle of a woman's right to choose.

The Private Members' Bill of the Hon. Member for Cape Breton Highlands—Canso (Mr. O'Neil) ignores these findings and would further restrict and, in practical terms, totally deny the woman's freedom of choice. This is yet another example of the disregard by members of the Conservative caucus of the fundamental concerns of women and their attempt to impose the views of a vociferous and shrill minority on the majority of Canadians.

According to Dr. Nikki Colodny, who performs therapeutic abortions at the Morgentaler Clinic in Toronto, Canadian abortion laws themselves are criminal because they establish a medical delivery system of abortion services which is unnecessarily dangerous and institutionalizes unsafe medical practices. It is women who continue to suffer as a result of this unjust law. The Bill before the House now, by further limiting access to safe therapeutic abortions, simply sanctions unsafe medical practices.

Because of the lack of reasonable access to abortion under the present therapeutic abortion committee system, Canadian women are forced to wait an average of eight weeks between their first appointment and the performance of their abortion. As a result of these delays, Canada has the second highest rate of mid-trimester abortions of all the industrialized nations. By requiring that the fetus be represented by counsel at the therapeutic abortion committee hearing, as proposed by the Hon. Member's Bill, there would simply be further delays, and this would contribute to an even higher rate of mid-trimester abortions and further complications to the woman involved.

Let me point out that therapeutic abortion committees represent the only instance, outside of dealing with mentally incompetent individuals, where a person has three doctors who have never met her, and are not chosen by her, reviewing her private medical records and passing judgment on her health care needs. These doctors are also being asked to make a medical decision about women with whom they have no professional relationship whatsoever. By further complicating and prolonging the already unwieldy and unworkable therapeutic abortion committee process, the Bill before the House would legitimize a system which in effect treats women as somehow mentally incompetent and asks doctors to perform functions for which they have not been properly trained.

As a member of the Subcommittee on Equality Rights of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, I had the opportunity to hear extensive testimony from across Canada on the provisions of the Criminal Code dealing with abortion. In my view, the present Criminal Code provisions governing abortion are one of the most glaring examples of discrimination against women under Section 15 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The Code provisions discriminate against women by singling out a particular medical procedure for regulation, which, of course, happens to be carried out on women alone.

The Code provisions are also unequal in their geographic applications, due to discrepancies in hospital policies and procedures. For example, we heard that there were no therapeutic abortion committees in Prince Edward Island. Similarly, women in rural areas or communities in which no therapeutic abortion committees have been set up must travel to other parts of Canada or, in some cases, to the United States to obtain access to abortions. This Bill, which would further restrict a woman's right to choose, makes a mockery of sexual and economic equality in Canada.

The fact is that the purpose of this Bill is to make abortions illegal. In countries where abortions are illegal, women continue to need and obtain abortions. A further limitation on Canadian women's access to this procedure, therefore, is unlikely to result in a decrease in the number of abortions performed. It will only result in a decrease in the number of safe legal abortions. Any additional limitation on a woman's right to choose, such as that contained in the Bill before the House, would simply assist in recreating the pre-1969 scenario when abortions were completely illegal and women had to resort to back room abortionists. If further laws limiting women's access to abortion are passed in Canada, more and more Canadian women will suffer from the effect of these back room abortions or, indeed, self-induced abortions by desperate women.

I do not question the goal, which I am sure all Members of the House share, to try to reduce and limit the number of abortions performed in Canada. However, I do not believe that additional prohibitions in the Criminal Code will achieve this end. For this reason amongst others, I emphasize that the policy of the New Democratic Party calls for decriminalization of abortion and the repeal of these provisions from the Criminal Code.

If the Government and the Hon. Member were serious about limiting the number of abortions, they would support positive preventive schemes rather than unrealistic, unworkable, and punitive Criminal Code prohibitions. Constructive measures which could be taken include financial support for family planning and counselling agencies such as Planned Parenthood, conducting research into safer and more effective birth control, introduction of sex education into schools, provision of more information on birth control to young people generally and greater financial and related support services for poor families and single parents.

The Government and this Bill does nothing constructive in the area of family planning. We in the New Democratic Party support the objectives of the Planned Parenthood Federation of Canada in taking steps to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies. Certainly we will continue to resist legislation such as this which attacks the fundamental freedom of choice of Canadian women.

Mr. Michel Champagne (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to express my views on the Bill presented by the Hon. Member for Cape Breton Highlands—Canso (Mr. O'Neil). The purpose of the Bill before the House is to have every unborn child represented before the therapeutic abortion committee by State-appointed counsel who would be responsible for upholding the provisions of the Criminal Code. Such a measure would radically change the present system.

Mr. Speaker, I shall, if I may, elaborate somewhat on the question to make my colleagues aware of what is at stake. We are talking about abortion. We are talking about the right to life. We are talking about the right to keep a fetus from being brought to term, from completing its nine-month development and being born.

I would like to draw a parallel with ... You know, Mr. Speaker, between 40,000 and 45,000 people die of hunger every day, and most of these are children. Has anyone set up an international or national committee to help these children, to help all these people out of this terrible situation? Has anyone given them a better life than the one they know today? No, Mr. Speaker, because what usually happens is that we spend millions so the media can show us how awful the lives of these people are.

Mr. Speaker, I think we can draw this parallel, because abortion is a fairly complex question. It is a matter where the feelings of the mother come first, because after all, she is the one who bears the fetus, but we must also think of the fetus, because it is a being that has a right to live like any other entity—I don't think we can say: you don't have the right and you do—it is a matter on which Canadian men and women generally tend to let their emotions speak first, and this is quite normal because our emotions are a part of us.

The second reason—today, we would call it a social or economic reason.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I think we must look at the state of our society. Can we allow ... These are the moral questions—not whether we want to set up a committee or not—these are the moral questions our society is asking today.

Do we morally have the right to let a baby come into this world if he or she will be deprived of essential services and care right from birth? Do we morally have the right to let a child be born without parents to raise and educate him or her? Conversely, we might consider this alternative: Do we as civilized Canadian men and women have the right to let a human being die in a society such as ours, a society of plenty, an affluent society , an industrialized society, a society where most men and women own their house and enjoy material wealth? These are two basic questions, Mr. Speaker, questions of principle which transcend any legislation and go far beyond the mere legal purview of the Bill now before the House.

You know, Mr. Speaker, it is convenient to say: We will appoint a lawyer for this, and we will appoint a lawyer for that. Does the Bill provide counsel for the father? Does the Bill provide counsel for the mother? What right, what privilege does any lawyer enjoy to come to the defence of the foetus? What is the position of the foetus, if any? What about the position of the mother? As you know, Mr. Speaker, when an abortion is necessary it has to be done without undue delay, and we all know how very slowly the judicial system works.

I think it is important to consider the context, to realize how serious the matter is, and to keep in mind that the existing legislation has authorized therapeutic hospital abortion since 1969.

However, before seeking to improve the legislation as my colleague from Cape Breton Highlands—Canso (Mr. O'Neil) would do, or curtail rights as my colleague from Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) advocates, the basic question should be to ask ourselves how the existing Act is being enforced. We should sit down and consider how the Act is being interpreted. Over the past few years what has been the social evolution of the people who make the decisions, the people who sit on these committees? What criterion guides the people and physicians who sit on a committee responsible for saying yes or no to therapeutic abortions? Just what are their guidelines? The Criminal Code, as prescribed in the Act? Is priority given to health hazards threatening the expectant mother? Or is consideration given to the social environment and the way of life of the pregnant woman?

In my view, it is important, Mr. Speaker, that we stop and look at how complex such a legislation can be, that we stop and discuss and think about how important the life of a human being can be, even though he or she is still unborn, even though in many cases we do not yet know his or her sex, that we stop and think about how important the life of the mother, the life of the father, the social impact on that family are, if we want that everything proceed properly.

I was listening earlier to my colleague for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) who stated that according to a poll, 72 per cent of respondents—although the figure may be slightly less, I think it was 72 per cent, and please correct me if I am wrong—were for maintaining abortion.

Recently I made a survey in my own constituency. The question was quite simple. I asked: "Are you for or against abortion?" And on the bottom line I added: "Comments, if any." Mr. Speaker, I had over 3,000 answers. This is much more than a national survey, as you know, 3,000 answers. And of those 3,000 people, 80 per cent were against abortion. In the majority of cases, reasons were not even given for being against. In some cases, respondents suggested: If we were all in favour of abortion, you might not be there. We have no right to kill a human being. We have no right to put a price on someone's head for the sake of temporary principles, economic principles. Very few people wrote to say: "Mr. Champagne, we support abortion." Very few. Those men and women who wrote and gave me their reasons referred to the ones I indicated earlier—economic reasons, social reasons, that could be termed rational reasons to a certain extent.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it would be useful and interesting, before we decide to have such a legislation passed, before we overload a legislation which is already quite involved in itself since it already rules on the life or death of a human being, since it rules on what will be the future of a human being that cannot defend itself, I say it would be important in the first place to discuss the matter fully, rather than submit it to the House as a piece of legislation or simply enact it, to have the issue debated on its merits and discussed with those who are mainly involved.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I deeply regret that there are not many women Members in this House. Yet, if there are people who should have their say about this, who should be able to chose, who would be in the best position to give an opinion, I honestly believe that it is women, and if I am wrong, I hope that someone will correct me. Yet, when have we seen a panel of women who have been through abortion, women who are for, or against abortion, discuss and develop a policy and determine to what extent it should be applied?

On the contrary, Mr. Speaker, what is now being proposed is that a lawyer be brought in to judge the matter. But to judge what when we do not even know the priorities of the people involved? In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, this is carrying principles a bit too far. Instead, we should sit down and listen to people and really look closely at a social problem which is becoming increasingly serious. I think that we would then be able to develop regulations which would not be based simply on legal principles, but rather on human considerations. Indeed, in my opinion, the principle of abortion itself is a human issue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway has spoken.

Ms. Mitchell: I am from Vancouver East and I haven't spoken.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I am sorry, Vancouver East. On Friday, January 17, 1986, on the motion, at page 9915 of Hansard, I have the Hon. Member speaking.

Ms. Mitchell: I apologize, Mr. Speaker. I did not realize this was a Bill carried over from a previous time.

Mr. Geoff Scott (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to Bill C-254, an Act to amend the Criminal Code to provide for legal counsel for the unborn child at meetings of therapeutic abortion committees.

[Translation]

First, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) on his speech. I quite agree with him that this problem is extremely difficult for all of us in this House. It is a fundamental issue.

This Bill—

[English]

I would now like to say in English that I think that the proposed amendment is flawed in one sense. As the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) has said, it is flawed in the sense that we cannot bring such an important issue to the floor of the House of Commons in the form of an amendment which has to be voted upon on the spot without thorough consideration.

Mr. Speaker, from having been in the House for as many years as you have, and having watched the House of Commons for as many years as I have from upstairs on the third floor, I cannot think of two more difficult issues for Members of Parliament, regardless of political stripe, than the issues of capital punishment and abortion. With respect to the issue of capital punishment, I believe the commitment of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to deal with the matter and to allow a free vote on it at some time in the future.

If the matter of abortion ever comes to a vote, as a matter of personal conscience and so that there will be absolutely no question in the minds of my constituents or my colleagues with respect to where I stand on the issue, I oppose abortion. I believe that life begins at the moment of conception. It is my strongly-held view that nothing should interrupt that life short of a medical emergency. If a pregnancy should develop into an emergency which threatens the life of either the mother or the child, then I am not qualified to judge. I am not a doctor. Very few of us in the Chamber are medical practitioners. I think that these situations can only be left to qualified medical practitioners. In my view, then, and only then, does the subject of abortion become a matter of concern between a woman and her doctor. I do not think that any law should govern that type of life and death situation save for the Hippocratic oath. I want to place on the record that, in principle, I am against abortion.

That being said, we have problems with this Bill. As I have said, few subjects are as controversial as is the subject of abortion. Clearly, the deep-seated reasons for the controversy surrounding this issue stem from the often irreconcilable personal choices available in such important, varied areas as morality, religion, sexuality, politics, and family and social life. There is no doubt that we will see a whole spectrum of opinion about something as personal as the matter of abortion. The same is true with respect to the issue of life and death in terms of capital punishment.

Whatever opinion a person has about the current abortion legislation, it is important to know the legal grounds of the issue. Bill C-254 deals with that issue. The reform introduced by Parliament in 1969 rectified an unbearable situation for the medical profession. What exactly was this situation? In what way did the reform change the rules of the game? Is it true, as some believe, that the law-makers chose to liberalize abortion by making it available for all practical purposes on demand? These are the main questions which the Government and all Members of Parliament are desperately attempting to answer.

I would like to give some background on the need for reform. I do not want to go on for too long because I believe my friend, the Hon. Member for Nanaimo—Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg), would like to say a few words on this matter. However, I wish to say that there is a real need for reform. Whether a person is for or against the liberalization of the abortion law, there appears to be a consensus regarding the absolute necessity in certain cases of terminating a pregnancy. How in fact can one be opposed to the idea of destroying a foetus when, in the opinion of competent members of the medical profession, the pregnancy truly endangers the life of the mother and could even bring about her immediate death? There are no fewer people today than before 1969 who would prefer to save the life of the mother who may already have children for whom she is responsible than that of the unborn child.

In conclusion, I do not think that we as politicians really have the medical qualifications or the moral qualifications to decide whether or not an abortion should be performed, except for the general principle that some of us just do not like the principle of abortion. We want the foetus as a growing human being to live and to enjoy life. Therefore, I think it is up to the doctor, on the basis of the Hippocratic oath, to decide whether the life of the baby or the mother is in danger. It is only up to them and not up to Parliament. We will have to come to grips with this issue at some point in time. I just wish to place on the record where I stand on this issue.

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I too am honoured to rise this evening to speak on Bill C-254. I would like to thank my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton—Wentworth (Mr. Scott), for allowing me a few minutes. I do not know if I have many minutes in order to get my point across.

What I would like to say is that I agree with what my colleague from Hamilton—Wentworth has said. This is one of those issues that, no matter what we do, we will upset some people. As politicians, we often feel like referees in this business. When we blow the whistle, we upset half the crowd and please the other half. Normally, that breakdown is more like 80/20, or even 90/10, as opposed to 50/50.

I too oppose abortion. However, I also oppose this Bill for a variety of reasons. My colleague from British Columbia, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell), who is a member of the NDP, raised some interesting points on this matter when he talked about the lawyers. It is bad enough that politicians have to make these decisions, but when we consider the lawyers, as opposed to doctors, we really get into trouble. Somebody said that when the Constitution was being debated and after the completion of the debate that it would make a great many lawyers a great deal of money over a long period of time. I am afraid that that has turned out to be true. That is similar to this Bill.

How will these lawyers be selected? There is a wide range of opinion in the legal profession. Would this work only be available to lawyers philosophically opposed to abortion? I am also very reluctant to support legislation which would force costs of a substantial nature upon the provinces. The Minister of Social Services, the Minister responsible for the provision of counsel under this Bill, for each province is endeavouring, I am sure, to reduce costs within his or her own Department in these times of severe fiscal restraint.

Those are some of the problems I have with this Bill. I see that you are indicating my time has almost expired, Mr. Speaker.

I would like to conclude by stating that while the issue will continue to be the subject of debate, and while I commend the Hon. Member for his efforts and concern in this area, the proposed amendment is too flawed to be put forth at this time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), this item is dropped from the Order Paper.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS (A) ESTABLISHMENT OF FRENCH EDUCATIONAL TELEVISION NETWORK IN ONTARIO. (B) INQUIRY WHEN FUNDING WILL BE MADE AVAILABLE

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Last April 25, Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister responsible I asked the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) whether his Government was trying to get out of meeting its commitments concerning funding of a new French educational television network in Ontario.

The President of the Treasury Board assured me that he would discuss the matter with the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) and provide an explanation for any delay in implementing the agreement.

Here are some of the background facts, Mr. Speaker. As you may recall, in October 1984 the federal Minister of Communications and the Minister of Civic and Cultural Affairs of Ontario began discussions which led to the December 18, 1984 announcement about an agreement in principle with respect to French educational TV services in Ontario.

This agreement in principle, Mr. Speaker, the federal and provincial Governments were bound to earmark up to $3 million a year each over a five-year period for TV Ontario network equipment and operating expenditures.

These monies will serve to increase to 70 hours a week French language programming on the educational television network in Ontario through a satellite cable transmission system.

On June 18, 1985, the Federal Minister of Communications and the Ontario Minister of Citizenship and Culture, Mr. Nick Leluk, announced officially this time a $30 million-subsidy for the funding of this network. According to a press release dated June 18, 1985, the Government of Canada's contribution had been made possible through some Secretary of State programs and funds available from Telefilm Canada for the development of Canadian programming.

Today, over a year and a half later, we have an accumulation of press releases announcing a French language educational television network in Ontario, but no definite or signed agreement, and the province has yet to receive the promised federal contribution. Without this financial contribution from the Federal Government, the province just could not on its own ensure the survival of a French language television network in Ontario.

That is why, on April 25 last, I asked the Minister in this House whether his Government was trying to evade its obligation or whether they would sign the agreement shortly.

On May 1, a few days ago, I wrote to the Minister of Communications to ask him to provide me with a specific answer concerning the said agreement with his provincial counterpart.

Mr. Speaker, I have yet to receive a written reply from the Minister of Communications, but today, in the course of a few telephone calls we made, I was informed that this very morning in Toronto, there was a meeting of federal and provincial representatives for the purpose of negotiating conditions that would be acceptable to both parties.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the negotiations were successful and that this evening, the Parliamentary Secretary who will respond on behalf of the Minister will be able to announce the official signing of the agreement and what the conditions are.

Mr. Speaker, this agreement is particularly important since the survival of French language educational television in Ontario is at stake.

[English]

Mr. Girve Fretz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) raised an interesting question on April 25, 1986, in relation to the Government's financial contribution to the creation of a French-language educational TV network in Ontario. My colleague, the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), assured the Hon. Member that he would get a reply on these very important matters.

I am pleased to have the opportunity today to clarify commitments made by the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) on behalf of the Government of Canada to assist in the establishment by TV Ontario of a French language educational network. I trust that my response today will also serve to correct misleading stories which appeared in the press on this very important issue.

Discussions with the Province of Ontario which began in December 1984 led last year to a joint commitment to provide $30 million over five years for the creation of such a network and the production and broadcasting of French-language programming. The federal share, $3 million a year over five years, will be provided in equal amounts by the Department of the Secretary of State and Telefilm Canada, the agency administering the Broadcast Development Fund on behalf of the Minister of Communications Discussions with the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) have led to the allocation of $7.5 million over five years for both capital and production costs. I see the Member is smiling and agrees.

These funds are in addition to the existing commitment by the Secretary of State for educational programming by this network, which amount to some $1.6 million annually.

As for assistance by Telefilm Canada, the criteria governing eligibility for the Canadian Broadcast Program Development Fund were modified in March 1985 to allow access to the fund by independent producers for programming to be aired by provincial educational networks. As a result, assistance under the fund for both French language and English language programming has been available to TV Ontario for the past year.

Subsequently, and in addition to the initial understanding, it was agreed that the federal Government would endeavour to secure a commitment regarding the level of funding that could be made available by Telefilm.

The Minister of Communications has written to Telefilm Canada and is confident that if TV Ontario, in collaboration with independent producers, were to submit sufficient project proposals, the federal commitment would be met and $7.5 million in funding from Telefilm Canada would be made available over the next five years to enhance TV Ontario's broadcast programming.

At this point I would like to reiterate that the federal funding is in place and can be accessed by TV Ontario through the normal procedures governing the release of funds from both the Secretary of State and Telefilm programs. I might add that there is no signed federal-provincial agreement respecting these commitments other than joint public announcements made by the federal Communications Minister and the Ontario Citizenship and Culture Minister. The first of these consisted of an announcement of intent and was dated December 18, 1984.

On June 18, 1985 the federal Minister of Communications announced the sources of the federal contributions, the programs of the Secretary of State and Telefilm Canada. Federal funding is in place and our level of commitment to the project of establishing a French language educational network in the Province of Ontario has not wavered in any way.

Mr. Gauthier: Best answer I have had.

CANADA POST CORPORATION—CLOSURE OF ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY POST OFFICE

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, in response to a question put on April 15 last questioning the justification in the closing of the only marine post office servicing those seamen using the St. Lawrence Seaway, the Minister responsible pointed out that it was done to save money and that it, the Post Office, was looking for a convenient alternative.

There is no convenient alternative. Will the company offices of those shipping lines of ships working on haphazard schedules handle the mail? Will the company official or clerk open his doors or travel to the canal as that deckhand waits for word from his wife and family? Is this family communication to be reduced to emergency electronic ship to shore communications only? Mail service is not anything to write home about now, Mr. Speaker, but does Canada Post consider a postal box at a tourist oriented pop-shop with its short hours, short weeks and even shorter season good enough for some 10,000 persons formerly served by the marine post office?

The Lock 5 site was chosen in the first place because it was the most convenient location along the Seaway. It is on the Welland Canal section of that waterway where it is said that "ships do climb the mountain". It is where ships going either up or down the Seaway go through three levels of flight locks, giving the seaman some three-quarters of an hour to transact business or to make personal contact with spouse and family and time as well to pick up the mail, address a response and still get back on the ship. It is the most convenient location on the Seaway from which those plying the Seaway waters have been served for the past 20 years and from the Welland Canal administration office before that.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the closing of that Post Office will effect a savings. The amount is questionable, but if we can follow the logic of cutting service to save expense, I wonder where that logic would take us. Would the Post Office look at a remote village and say that delivery of mail will be stopped because it cannot be justified? Would the Post Office, for any reason stop mail delivery to a community of 10,000 persons without warning, without dialogue, and without justification?

If the Minister says that it is unfair to talk in terms of 10,000 persons, I will remind him that there are 5,000 seamen plying those lakes. Most of them have spouses and most of them have more than one business contact. It is the service to these people that is being cut off. I have had communications from mayors along the Welland Canal division, union leaders, businessmen and women, and seamen urging the restoration of postal service to this community of users.

I ask those responsible for the administration of the Post Office to not look for the easy way out by cutting service. They should look at the multibillion dollar operation which continues to operate at a loss across the land. I am sympathetic to the desire of the Government that we must save money, but to save it at the expense of service is an unfair and unjustifiable course of action. Forty-eight thousand dollars is a mere pittance compared to the amount spent by the Post Office. That amount could be found by finding a cost-efficient method of operating that coast-to-coast facility. Restore the service, Mr. Minister, and improve the efficiency of the operation.

Mr. Bill Domm (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and Canada Post): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member for St. Catharines (Mr. Reid) mentioned, in the past sailors had to pick up their mail at the Thorold Marine Sub Post Office located at Lock 5 along the Welland Canal. Canada Post has decided to give these sailors a more convenient and improved service. Canada Post's decision to close the Thorold Marine Sub Post Office was taken following consultations with representatives of shipping companies using the Canal facilities. These companies have long encouraged their employees, that is crew members aboard their ships, to have their mail addressed in care of their own particular companies.

Prior to the decision to close the Thorold Marine Sub Post Office, shipping company agents were already handling 80 per cent of the mail addressed to crew members on various ships. As early as last fall, ship owners indicated to Canada Post their willingness to utilize their internal mail distribution system and have their agents deliver not just 80 per cent, but 100 per cent of the mail addressed to employees working aboard these ships.

Shipping company agents, working in shifts, greet their ships at various points on a 24-hour basis. Shipping companies' own agents would know on which of their own ships their own employees are serving and thus be able to ensure that the mail reaches the crew member. It was after discussions with the various shipping companies that Canada Post determined it could provide a more convenient and improved service to these sailors by having their mail routed through the shipping companies' agents. These agents are located in most ports across the country. They provide these sailors with supplies and will now provide them with their mail. These sailors will now receive their mail at various points along their route through their companies' shipping agents. This will result in improved service for the sailors and save Canada Post $48,000 in the process, which will help the corporation cut its costs and help it to achieve its mandate set by Parliament to attain financial sufficiency.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

CHANGES TO PRE-RETIREMENT BENEFITS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Last week, Mr. Speaker, I went to the Quebec City area to meet with people who have been cheated by this Conservative Government, namely early retirees. I wish to advise all Hon. Members that these people will be here next week to demonstrate on Parliament Hill, and I urge my Conservative colleagues to express their views on this matter. When I was there they asked me: Mr. Malépart, could we also get interest-free loans as did the Minister's wife? It would certainly compensate for the revolting Government cutbacks concerning early retirees.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the Hon. Member for Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup (Mr. Plourde) who had the courage to rise to defend his electors and speak up against the decision of his Government.

HEALTH

RADIOACTIVE RAINFALL IN CANADA—RESULTS OF NUCLEAR ACCIDENT IN UKRAINE

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, Canadians have been warned not to drink rainwater anywhere in Canada after radioactive iodine was detected in Ottawa at six times the level acceptable for drinking water. Across Canada samples are being taken at only 28 sites and are not being reported on a daily basis as promised. The reliability of the actual site measurements are not being questioned, but many Canadians are concerned that there are so few test sites. For example, there are only samples being taken in Vancouver for the whole of British Columbia. B.C. was the first to be hit by the nuclear cloud from Chernobyl and, despite repeated efforts to get infomation, the federal Government has hidden behind a cloak of secrecy little different from that for which the Soviet Union has been so widely condemned.

What are the real levels of radioactive iodine, cesium, ruthenium 103 and other elements? What are the levels in milk, in fish held in rainwater fed ponds and in areas of heavy rainfall like the Queen Charlotte Islands? Surely the emergency response effort could have been more scientifically applied and more responsive to the real medical health concerns of all Canadians.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL

DENIAL OF PUBLIC ACCESS TO GROUNDS

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am in a state of shock again. The plain clothes security on Parliament Hill is armed and the RCMP guarding some foreign embassies in Ottawa are now armed with machine guns for the first time. This week the NCC, DPW and the RCMP decided to lock the gates of Rideau Hall, the home of our Governor General, for the first time. Access is still allowed by invitation only, but joggers and walkers, skaters and sports enthusiasts, tourists and local resident and all Canadians are now denied friendly access to this magnificent public parkland. We will soon have local developers bidding for the excess land for housing.

If we are going to lock up the Governor General we should probably cancel all of her road trips as well. There may be some nut cases in Libya, but we seem to have a fair share in our bureaucracy as well.

STATUS OF WOMEN

REAL WOMEN ORGANIZATION—CRITICISM BY GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, it is my view and that of many Canadians that, in fairness, the organization REAL Women should receive the same funding from the federal Government as do other womens' groups. However, certain individuals view REAL Women as a threat. According to the Montreal Gazette, Lyse Blanchard, Director of Women's Programs for the Secretary of State, calls REAL Women a "marginal, anti-democratic group". She goes on to say that she is "bothered" by REAL Women getting equal time with the Minister. This is not particularly helpful. In fact, it is clearly unacceptable. Is Ms. Blanchard speaking on behalf of the Government of Canada or is she simply rendering a personal opinion? The public cannot accept a senior government employee uttering such obviously prejudiced comments against an organization with whom she should be working. It is time that Ms. Lyse Blanchard be called to account.

IMMIGRATION

INCREASE IN LANDING FEES FOR IMMIGRANTS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, last year, in order to raise money, the Government increased the administrative fees charged to landed immigrants applying for Canadian citizenship. Before April, 1985, the fees were $15 for an adult and $8 for a child. As of last April they went to $40 per adult and $25 a child. For a family of two parents and three children, not earning a large income, this is a substantial amount. The costs appear to be creating an obstacle to people applying for citizenship because the number has dropped since the higher fees came into effect. Surely the Government did not intend to create a situation where citizenship was available only to those who can afford it. Newcomers to Canada already work hard to become Canadian citizens and it is not appropriate to put the goal of citizenship out of their reach for the sake of a few extra dollars. I hope the Government will reconsider this charge.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

LACK OF INFORMATION PROVIDED BY U.S.S.R.

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, the international community and the Abitibi region strongly denounce the ill-advised practices of the Soviet Union concerning environmental protection.

After the Chernobyl tragic nuclear accident in Ukraine, not only did Soviet authorities systematically refuse to provide information about the incident, but they even chose not to warn their neighbours. This carefree and irresponsible approach to history's worst nuclear accident attests to their utter lack of common sense, consideration and respect for the lives and health of tens of thousands of men, women and children in Abitibi.

How can we possibly give any currency to their Government's so-called overtures towards western nations when their leaders show so little consideration for their own citizens and neighbours!

AIR TRANSPORT

REPORTED OFFER BY WARDAIR TO PURCHASE PLANES FROM SOUTH AFRICA

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, Wardair has indicated it is prepared to buy planes from South Africa which have become redundant as Canada and other countries cut back on South Africa's airline routes. This will facilitate white South Africans in their attempts to liquidate fixed assets and move their funds out of South Africa. The final outcome will denude black South Africans of their country's wealth which has accrued largely due to their labour. Apart from the immediate need to make the voluntary code for business in South Africa mandatory, the Canadian Government must move to block domestic Canadian companies from taking part in the stripping of the fixed assets of South Africa, the people's assets.

THE ECONOMY

RESULTS OF GOVERNMENT POLICIES

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, over the past 19 months some 630,000 new jobs have been created. Unemployment is at the lowest level in four years. The CPI remains stable at 4 per cent. Consumer spending is up 14 per cent. Motor vehicle sales are up 15 per cent. Building permits are up 29 per cent. Housing starts are up 35 per cent, and manufacturing orders 11 per cent. The Bank of Canada lending rate has fallen from 12.38 per cent in September of 1984 to 8.72 per cent today. Mortgage rates are at their lowest level in eight years. In my Province of Saskatchewan, in spite of the collapse of world oil and grain prices, some 21,000 jobs have been created and unemployment, at 7.6 per cent, is down by almost 1 per cent. These figures confirm the correctness of the economic policy of this Government, one of responsible deficit reduction through lower interest rates, more jobs, private sector initiative and small business enterprise.

REDUCTION IN BANK RATE

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the central bank rate dropped to 8.72 per cent, a bigger drop than even the analysts expected. It is the lowest level since July of 1978. Translated into savings on a five year $50,000 mortgage, the average couple would save $124 a month or $7,500 over five years. This decline is tied to the growing strength of the Canadian dollar, and growing confidence by consumers in our economy. Both of these factors are a direct result of this Government's realistic economic recovery program that has been in place since the 1984 November economic statement. Five hundred and seventy four thousand new jobs have been created since the election. I know this is bad news for the doomers and gloomers to my right.

I might add that the April employment statistics reveal that the unemployment rate in Toronto has fallen to an incredible 5.3 per cent. While members of the Opposition leap over tables—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

Mr. Pennock: —to attack witnesses and threaten Ministers with—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Davenport.

NUCLEAR ENERGY

INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY—CALL FOR ADOPTION OF MANDATORY STANDARDS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the detection of Iodine 131 in rain water in Canada inevitably forces us to think of the Chernobyl disaster and the urgent necessity of regulating the activities of the 374 reactors operating in 26 nations.

Each nation producing nuclear energy has a responsibility towards neighbouring nations and the world community. Human health must be protected by way of international safety standards enforced by the International Atomic Energy Agency. This agency has safety codes, but not the power to implement them.

We in the Opposition urge the Government to move swiftly and take international action leading to the adoption of mandatory international safety standards and inspections by the 26 nations that operate 374 nuclear reactors today.

NDP GAINS IN ALBERTA GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, a lot of Albertans last night decided to sack the quarterback. I want to congratulate Ray Martin and the New Democrats who won 16 seats as the NDP continues to move across the west. I think a more pluralistic system will be good for Alberta in the long run.

I want to say eat your hearts out to Jamie Lamb and Jeffrey Simpson, and the other so-called commentators. I want to say a special thanks to the Member from Bow River (Mr. Taylor) whose address to this House last week inspired us to go out and increase our representation in Alberta by over 800 fold—even better than biblical terms. I find it very ironic that now in British Columbia they will be saying, "The socialist hordes are coming". From where? From Alberta, that is where.

SHARING BY ALL CANADIANS IN DEFICIT REDUCTION

Mr. Michel Champagne (Champlain): Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that Canada's dairy producers have up to now done more than their fair share in helping this Government reduce the deficit.

It has not always been easy, but the fact remains that they have acted responsibly towards the Canadian people, and we are proud of them.

However, the same cannot be said of dairy processors who, as far as the deficit is concerned, are about to pass the buck to the consumers of this country.

I cannot tolerate Canadian families having to pay more for their butter just because the processors say so.

Canadian consumers are doing their share to reduce the deficit, and I promise to be very vocal in my criticism of those who shirk their duty in this respect, including of course our dairy processors.

BANKS AND BANKING

CANADIAN PAYMENTS ASSOCIATION—SUCCESS OF SYSTEM

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, after careful consultation with the financial community Parliament, in December, 1980, passed the Canadian Payments Association Act, which gave to the new association the objectives of establishing and operating a national clearings and settlements system and of planning the evolution of the national payments system.

It is a pleasure to report that the association, which now has over 120 members, has seemingly proved a great success. Currently the annual volume of payments in the system approximates 1.7 billion items, representing a value of about $8.4 trillion. Other countries are studying our system in order to improve their own.

The Canadian Payments Association, its member institutions, and the bank—

THE LATE GASTON DEFFERRE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York-Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise in the House today to pay tribute to the memory of Gaston Defferre, former Minister of France and former mayor of Marseille, who died this week. I had the privilege of meeting him and working with him when he was his country's Minister of the Interior and I was Solicitor General of Canada. Canada has lost a good friend who had a very good relationship with our country and was very much interested in Canada.

To his family and his country, I express my sympathy and best wishes.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—APPOINTMENT OF CROWN CORPORATIONS

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It concerns the administration of the Government, with special reference to the conflict of interest guidelines. Will he explain to the House when he and the Prime Minister first learned that persons appointed by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to the most powerful Crown corporations in this country were first approached by the wife of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the President of York Centre—his former campaign manager—for special financial arrangements for the Minister's bankrupt company?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that sort of question has been answered repeatedly over the last two weeks. I am quite surprised that it would now come from the Hon. Member, who raised it again, particularly in view of the fact that the word out of Cape Breton is that, as a result of their questioning, there is beginning to be a loss of confidence in Cape Breton that those industries that are being attracted as a result of the policies of the Government might not get there. I suggest that the Hon. Member is doing a disservice to that area of his province by raising that kind of question.

Mr. Dingwall: I say to the Deputy Prime Minister that blackmail will not work in this case. I say it to him most sincerely.

REQUEST FOR RESIGNATION OF MINISTER

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, is the Deputy Prime Minister telling the House that he knew of these facts before today and has refused to disclose those to the House? If he knew those facts, or now knows that they are true, why does he not do the honourable thing and seek the resignation of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion today?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is the Hon. Member who is calling them facts, not I. He and his many colleagues have been calling items facts for several days now when they bear no resemblance to facts.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S ROLE

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, on February 24, 1986, the Minister said in regard to possible resignation of Ministers:

> —the only steps a Prime Minister can take to clear his Cabinet of the clear and present suspicion of trafficking in friendships and indulging the "old boy network" of past and present Ministers.

What more evidence does the Deputy Prime Minister need to sack the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion who is in an obvious conflict of interest?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not agree with that, nor do I recall having said any such thing on the date mentioned by the Hon. Member—February, 1986.

Mr. Dingwall: 1983.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PRIVATIZATION—UNDERWRITERS AND APPRAISERS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion as a result of the Diane Francis story in today's Toronto Star. Very serious revelations are contained in that article. I want to get to the heart of the question of conflict of interest and the question of honest Government. Does the Minister expect the Canadian people to believe that when he was making the billion dollar decisions about which underwriters should be used in the Government's privatization programs, and which firms should be used to do appraisals, he gave no consideration at all to the fact that some of those underwriters had agreed to help bail out his family business and that other of those underwriters refused to do so?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, most Members will recall that yesterday there were similar questions with respect to the CDC issue. At that time I pointed out that 41 investment dealers were involved with that issue. The story that I read this morning and to which the Hon. Member is referring is simply a matter of setting out that there are various brokerage firms, investment dealers, in Toronto that may or may not have been approached by the persons who are referred to in the story. However, I can tell the Hon. Member that the story is as much news to me as it presumably is to him.

Mr. Kaplan: The Minister says that he did not know what his wife was doing in approaching these underwriters. I wonder if the companies involved could possibly believe that.

• (1120)

ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S WIFE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Can the Acting Prime Minister allow a situation to continue where the whole business community of Canada is being victimized by a Minister whose wife and business associates are going around trying to shake them down?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Kaplan: How can the Government allow that kind of a situation to continue in this country?

An Hon. Member: It's unworthy.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, what is being victimized here by conduct such as displayed by the question of the Hon. Member and by the conduct of other Members of his caucus in committee and elsewhere, is this very institution. If the Hon. Member wonders about what was in the realm of knowledge of what he calls "the companies involved", why does he not ask them? He has heard the answer of the Minister.

Mr. Kaplan: You refuse to face the facts. It's right here.

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister. Here we are on Friday and we are learning through a whole unfolding of events just how deep this matter has become. I want to refer specifically to the loan made by Mr. Czapka to the Minister's wife. At the beginning of the week we learned Mr. Czapka was a shareholder, then we learned he was a consultant. Yesterday we learned that his son was directly involved in the company with financial connections to the Minister's Department—

Mr. Gormley: How about a relevant question?

Mr. Broadbent: —and finally yesterday afternoon we learned that he himself, the man who made the loan, is on the Government's gravy train getting a $980,000 grant. Does the Minister not at last see what the whole country understands, namely, the Minister is involved in a conflict of interest and should submit his resignation from that Department?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that question was answered in detail by myself yesterday. The Hon. Member is obviously not prepared to accept the assertion that the Minister has complied with the Code of Conduct for public office holders. That is his choice, that is his opinion, but it does not depart for a moment from the fact that compliance has been had, and that is a fact.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I would like to follow up on what I can only regard, coming from him, as the outrageous reply of the Acting Prime Minister.

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I want to refer to a quote from the Prime Minister last year at a time when he was discussing the guidelines. About the present situation the Minister has got himself into, the Prime Minister said with respect to the guidelines: "They must be honoured by all Ministers, not only in reality, but in appearances to the contrary that might emerge inadvertently or otherwise". He was talking about the appearance of a conflict of interest. He said "inadvertently or otherwise". Notwithstanding the Minister's claims about not knowing before about his wife's loan—he knows now—does the Acting Prime Minister not agree that he may have inadvertently got himself into this conflict of interest, which I think he has clearly done? The country sees he has done that. And if he agrees, why does he not ask for the Minister's resignation?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, what the hon. gentleman is doing is reaching a verdict on the basis of what he and his colleagues have been saying and what the newspapers have been saying.

Mr. Broadbent: It's logic.

Mr. Nielsen: It is not my idea of justice. I repeat to the Hon. Member that the public record discloses that there is a full compliance with, not the guidelines, the Code of Conduct governing public office holders. That is a matter of public record. I say it is a fact because there is clear evidence on the public record that the hon. gentleman, or any other Hon. Member, can have a look at if they take the trouble to do so.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my last question is directed to the Minister, himself.

Today, it is clear that the person who gave the Minister's wife a loan is getting some benefit from his department. Will the Minister finally understand the situation and hand in his resignation?

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, you will recall yesterday I indicated to the House that the transactions to which the Hon. Member is once again today referring were anticipated, indeed, set out in a Memorandum of Understanding signed on August 27, 1984, by my predecessor, the Hon. Ed Lumley, of the previous Government.

Mr. Broadbent: You made the decision.

• (1125)

Mr. Stevens: The departmental processing followed that.

Mr. Cassidy: Was the loan in the memorandum?

Mr. Stevens: Yesterday, I indicated that I was willing to table the notes to which I had referred. I was rather surprised at the almost hostility of the Opposition. Subsequently, I found out that, no, it is the Memorandum of Understanding that they want to see. As far as I am concerned, after having consulted with Magna International, we now have a letter in hand from Magna stating that it is willing for me to table the full Memorandum of Understanding.

Mr. Nunziata: That is your obligation! It's not up to Magna.

Mr. Stevens: They have asked that three items be deleted because of the confidential nature of them. However, they are content to show even those three items to the Leader of the Opposition—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stevens: —and to the Leader of the NDP—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stevens: —on the understanding that they will keep them confidential.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and concerns conflicts of interest. This morning, the President of Brascan and others were quoted in a newspaper article as saying that when the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion was giving major contracts and grants to businesses in Toronto, his wife and the Minister's campaign organizer were visiting the same companies to obtain loans in order to save the Minister's family business from bankruptcy.

Could the Deputy Prime Minister inform the House today whether he was aware of these dealings and, if so, when he was informed of the situation?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman says that he has learned—I think "we" was his term—from the mouth of the President of Brascan certain things. I suggest it might be more accurate to say that he has learned the items which he is putting to us from reading a story in The Toronto Star today.

Mr. Waddell: Quit stonewalling.

Mr. Nielsen: There is no stonewalling. Hon. Members heard the Minister offer—and they have yet to accept it—to table the entire Memorandum of Understanding subject to the three exceptions—

Mr. Nunziata: Confirm or deny the Star story!

Mr. Nielsen: —which he is prepared to discuss with the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic Party in their roles as Privy Councillors.

Surely members of the Opposition who have been questioning for almost two weeks on this matter would want to see the information upon which they are basing their questions.

[Translation]

TIMING OF ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S KNOWLEDGE

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister failed to answer the question. I asked him whether when he was making enquiries to check whether there was any conflict of interest, whether he was aware that when the Minister was giving contracts to major businesses, the Minister's wife and his campaign organizer were going to the same companies to obtain loans to save the family business from bankruptcy. At what time did the Deputy Prime Minister find out about this?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I say to the hon. gentleman that my responsibility as Acting Prime Minister, and as Deputy Prime Minister charged with that responsibility by the Prime Minister, is to ensure compliance with the code—

Mr. Garneau: That's not my question!

Mr. Lapierre: Would you answer the question?

Mr. Nielsen: —which is applicable to public office holders. I have done that.

Mr. Lapierre: Cover-up, cover-up!

Mr. Nielsen: There is that compliance and I have so stated for two weeks now.

DIRECTIVE ISSUED BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Acting Prime Minister. It concerns the directive given by the Prime Minister which states as follows:

—I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of activities of their spouses or dependent children or the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

Does the Deputy Prime Minister believe that that particular requirement was complied with in the case of Mrs. Stevens who went to people who do business with the ministry of which the Minister has control asking for financial assistance for the Minister's troubled company?

• (1130)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, had it not been for the last part, there would have been entirely no problem with responding very directly to the question. However, the Hon. Member smuggles in at the tail end of it another allegation that bears no resemblance to what I can see as being a factual situation.

The compliance that is required is the compliance by all Ministers of the Crown with the Code of Conduct. I am required to ensure that there has been that compliance, and I have done that. The Hon. Member does not choose to accept that.

ACTING PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question was simple and I smuggled nothing into it. Does the Deputy Prime Minister believe that the Minister took the actions that were appropriate, given that his wife has violated the Code of Conduct that the Prime Minister demands that all Ministers and their spouses live by?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, obviously the hon. gentleman is unwilling to accept the very open offer that was made by the Minister to table the document, the Memorandum of Understanding, upon which those opposite have been basing their questions for two weeks. They do not want to see the truth. They do not want to look at it.

Mr. Deans: I do want to see the truth.

Mr. Nielsen: If the Hon. Member wants to see it, he should ask the Minister to table the document and his leader—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said that he did not know that his wife and his campaign manager approached major Toronto brokerage firms to invest in his cash-starved company. Because he is an Hon. Member, we must believe him. However, now that he has full knowledge of the fact that his wife and campaign manager have in fact approached those major Toronto brokerage firms, how can he now deal objectively with the brokerage firms involved? Does he not agree that any future dealings he may have with those brokerage firms would lead one to believe that there is a conflict of interest?

Mr. Benjamin: Why don't you sit together and be done with it?

Mr. Nielsen: No need.

Mr. Rodriguez: The Bobbsey Twins.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I felt that I had answered a similar question which was raised yesterday by pointing out that the CDC issue was done through 41 different investment dealers in Canada.

Mr. Garneau: That's boloney and you know it.

Mr. Stevens: I would suggest to the Hon. Member—

Mr. Garneau: Who is your manager in your syndicate?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: We'll put you in the back again.

Mr. Garneau: He knows it's nonsense, what he says. I can't accept nonsense like that.

Mr. Kaplan: It's nonsense.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Surely the Hon. Member who asked the question is entitled to hear the answer.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to the Hon. Member and to other Hon. Members that they should not be quick to start repeating what some Bay Street informant has fed to a newspaper on the co-ordinated approach that has been going on between the Official Opposition and newspapers in Toronto.

Mr. Fulton: Conspiracy!

MINISTER'S DEALINGS WITH INVESTMENT FIRMS—ACTIVITIES OF MINISTER'S WIFE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, It is obvious that the Minister's wife and campaign manager have rendered him a lame duck Minister. I would like to put the question again. How can the Minister, with full knowledge of the fact that his wife approached, not 41 investment dealers, but three investment dealers in particular, now say that he can deal objectively and fairly with those three investment dealers knowing that his wife approached them and knowing that he appointed them or has given them Government contracts?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, having spent over two hours in committee with the Hon. Member, having answered repeated questions in the House and knowing of the Hon. Member's behaviour after the committee meeting, frankly, I do not think there is any way that any Member of the House could get the Hon. Member to understand the truth.

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT ON CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. I refer to a statement made in the House by the Prime Minister on June 6, 1985, as reported at page 5487 of Hansard, dealing with conflict of interest guidelines. At that time, the Prime Minister said the following:

—I would like to acknowledge that the guidelines are very much in effect and force, and that all Ministers are obliged to respect them in all ways, including appearance. We must seek to avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest.

Can the Deputy Prime Minister tell us when the Prime Minister changed the rules on conflict of interest? Was it before he went to Japan, on the way to Japan or while he was in Japan?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the simple answer to that question is September 9, 1985.

PUBLIC PERCEPTION—REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, would the Deputy Prime Minister not agree that in the minds of millions of Canadians there are serious doubts and there are appearances of conflict of interest? Would he therefore ask the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to step aside and set up a judicial inquiry into the possibilities of conflict of interest?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): I have answered that question several times, Mr. Speaker.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

REASON FOR NOT TABLING DOCUMENT

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In answer to yesterday's question from my colleague from Cape Breton—East Richmond, the Minister brandished a five-or-six-page document to defend his cause and, after requests from the Leader of the Official Opposition to table the document, the Minister agreed to table what he called notes, only parts of the document. Can the Minister explain why he did not tell the truth yesterday and table the complete document?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is quite out of order. The Hon. Member may ask a question about the documents if he likes but not in the way he has asked it, and he knows it.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: I will rephrase my question, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister explain why he did not table the whole document yesterday?

Mr. Lapierre: He has an accommodating conscience.

[English]

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I thought that I had indicated earlier my answer to that. Yesterday I had two documents in my hand. There was a Memorandum of Understanding and there were also my notes.

Mr. Axworthy: Why didn't you say that then?

Mr. Stevens: The notes to which I referred was where I got the number from that I put on the record yesterday. At the conclusion of Question Period, I offered to table the notes that I had. As I have indicated to the House, I have subsequently checked with Magna International which has a clause in its Memorandum of Understanding, incidentally signed by the previous Government, indicating that the memorandum is to be kept confidential and can only be released with its consent. Subject to the condition I indicated earlier, we now have the written consent from Magna to table even the Memorandum of Understanding to which I referred.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Short question.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Now that the Minister has just shown he misled the House yesterday, how can we believe him today as he tries to defend himself and his wife?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that I cannot allow the—I can allow the question but I must ask him to withdraw.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw what?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps I am hearing something else because I am listening to two things. However, would the Hon. Member simply put his question without the comment?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps I heard something that was not there. It would help the Chair if the Hon. Member would just put his question.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Can the Minister now explain whether he has any credibility left with respect to the other matter involving his wife, considering he misled the House yesterday?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will tell the hon. gentleman and his colleagues how they can believe the Minister. He wants to give them the information—

Mr. Garneau: That is not true, and you know it.

Mr. Nielsen: —and there is no one over there who is prepared to accept it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

HEALTH

RADIOACTIVE RAINFALL IN OTTAWA

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question concerns the radioactive rain which has been falling on Ottawa. I will direct it either to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare or to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment, if they are capable of answering. Could they indicate in the House exactly what are the dangers from the fact that the levels of radioactivity in the rain in the capital area have been six times the acceptable, safe level? How long is it likely to continue, and what precautions should Canadians take? I ask these questions so that Canadians will have some advice in the House of Commons rather than just indirect reports through the press or by telephone from Switzerland.

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to the Hon. Member that tests were made from May 1 to May 7 in Vancouver, Regina, Winnipeg and Thunder Bay, and that they showed no trace of radioactivity. It is true that there is some radioactivity in Ottawa. However, before the Department gives an opinion, the radioactive level would have to be 10,000 times higher than it is now. There is therefore no danger for the moment and we are continuing to make tests. We are monitoring the situation very closely.

[English]

LOCATION OF TESTING STATIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. The Hon. Member for Skeena pointed out in a statement earlier today that there was no testing station within 1,000 miles of portions of his riding. Because there was only one testing station in Vancouver, British Columbia, vast areas of the country are not covered by the tests to which the Minister has referred. Could the Government explain why there has not been initiated a regular program of testing to cover all regions of Canada, not just the capital cities and the national capital of the country?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to the Hon. Member that the present testing system reflects our needs. I maintain that the low radioactive level in Ottawa is no cause for concern. Perhaps it was just a cloud which passed over Ottawa so that the Opposition would ask us a question about it instead of the traditional questions about conflicts of interests!

FARM FUELS—REQUEST FOR CASH ADVANCE ON REBATE OF TAX ON BULK FUELS

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. The rebate of all federal taxes on farm fuels is most welcome. However, the interest burden pending reimbursement of the tax is causing some fuel dealers considerable concern. In light of the greatly increased amounts of money involved, could the Minister again examine the possibility of providing some kind of cash advance or cash flow to bulk fuel dealers, perhaps a system similar to the one in place in the Province of Alberta?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Member for raising the recent relief in this regard which was announced by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance on April 30. There is a matter of policy involved. I will take it as a matter of representation, consult with the Minister of Finance to see if there can be some further improvements, and advise the Hon. Member.

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST—POSITION OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my questions is for the Deputy Prime Minister. First, I would like to point out that the Code of Ethics on conflicts of interests in Canada is unique in that it has no legal authority. There is therefore something lacking in the code if we want to ensure compliance, and especially if we want the public to know that there is compliance. In my opinion, what is lacking is the requirement to provide full explanations. I would therefore like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister why it is that he himself, the Prime Minister and the Government as a whole can accept that the Minister still be reluctant to provide detailed and complete explanations since he stands accused by public opinion?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, here we are struck by the extraordinary spectacle of an offer by the Minister to provide information to the Opposition, for which it has been asking, and now they are running away from it like scared hares.

Mr. Axworthy: Just table the papers.

Mr. Nielsen: If the hon. gentleman in his supplementary question would simply indicate that he would like the Minister to table the Memorandum of Understanding on the conditions which he set out, he would be delighted to do that, and also to speak with the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic Party as Privy Councillors.

Mr. Nunziata: Every Canadian has the right to know.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister wants to table this memorandum, we shall gladly agree to it and consider it as a first step toward obtaining more complete and straightforward explanations.

I would therefore like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister if we shall have to be content much longer with his own statements that the Minister has complied with the guidelines. If so, these guidelines deserve nothing better than to be discarded because they are absolutely worthless.

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): No, I certainly do not agree with that, Sir. The Code of Conduct originated in 1963 as a result of the events of that day, and was carried on by successive Liberal Governments for very good reason.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE

WAGES OF FEMALE EMPLOYEES

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board who should be ashamed that the average earnings of female public servants are $8,000 less than the average earnings of male employees. Surely this is proof that Conservative employment equity is not working. What practical steps will the Minister take immediately to redress these pay inequities for women who work for Canada?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, that is a problem of which we are well aware. The wage gap between the sexes can only be eliminated by ensuring that employees in female dominated occupations receive equal pay for work of equal value. That is well under study at the moment by Treasury Board officials, and hopefully we will have something to announce in the near future.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR WOMEN

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I am astounded that this important issue is just under study. Since men now hold 92 per cent of the highest paid jobs in the Public Service, will the Minister immediately establish a mandatory enforcement mechanism to ensure equal opportunities for women in every federal Department and Crown corporation?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, it is not only a study, we have also acted. I took the initiative in March, 1985 to invite all Public Service bargaining agents to participate in a joint union-management initiative to recommend means of implementing these very important but very complex concepts to alleviate the situation.

REFUGEES

REFUGEE DETERMINATION—TIMING OF POLICY ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Some time ago the Minister said in the Chamber that the Minister of State for Immigration would be addressing the issue of refugee determination shortly. Could the Minister indicate today a more precise date as to when a policy will be announced?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, as a culmination of intensive consultation and study, including study by a parliamentary committee of the House, the Minister of State for Immigration will be announcing the new refugee determination policy during the week of May 19. I assure Hon. Members of the House that the new policy will adhere to our humanitarian traditions and respect our international obligations. What we have tried to do throughout is to seek a balance between fairness, efficiency and humanity.

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES—ACTIVITIES OF MINISTERS' SPOUSES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Earlier in the Question Period he was presented with the fact that the spouse of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion had approached a series of brokerage firms asking for financial assistance for the assets of the Minister and to his benefit. At that point he said that that was in perfect compliance with the standards of the Government and that it met all the requirements of the Government in terms of reporting and accountability. For the sake of all those who want to do business with the Government, is it now an acceptable practice and standard that spouses of Cabinet Ministers can go to prospective clients of the Government and ask them for financial assistance for personal benefit as a basis for doing business?

• (1150)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman has obviously come to a judgment on the basis of what he has read on the front page of The Toronto Star. It is equally obvious that he regards what is printed on the front page of The Toronto Star as undoubted fact. That is his choice and I can understand why he would make it. I choose not to believe everything I read on the front page of The Toronto Star as fact.

Mr. Nunziata: What are the facts? Do you know them?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): My supplementary question is addressed to the Deputy Prime Minister who is responsible for conflict of interest. Surely when very distinguished members of the Canadian business community say that these are facts, it should strike his sense of responsibility and moral sensibility that an investigation should be launched to determine whether these are true facts rather than, ipso facto, dismissing them and, thereby, casting a cloud over his Government and the whole operation of the country.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman has some experience in that area himself. The code has been complied with. He chooses not to believe that.

Mr. Lapierre: Cover-up.

Mr. Nielsen: He chooses to believe what he reads. I choose not to. I choose to be a good deal more careful and prudent than he obviously does when it comes to convicting, in my mind, any person in this House or anywhere else.

TRADE

LUMBER EXPORTS TO JAPAN—JAPANESE BUILDING CODE

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of International Trade. Once again the Prime Minister has apparently misstated the views of another person, that person being this time the Prime Minister of Japan.

Would the Minister of International Trade clarify the matter of whether the Government of Japan is going to review or amend its building codes in order to allow greater imports of Canadian two-by-fours?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is well aware that for many years Canada has been making very strenuous efforts to have the trade laws of Japan relaxed with respect to the entry of our lumber into that country. The Prime Minister, the greatest trader that Canada has, raised that question at the highest level. I am confident that as a result of those discussions trade relaxation will indeed follow.

JAPANESE GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. I am talking about the trade in blarney by the Prime Minister. Are the senior Japanese officials who were present at that meeting and the officials of the Embassy of Japan in Ottawa whom I contacted today correct in saying that the Government of Japan is only going to review the building code, that it is not going to amend it? Who is telling the truth, the Prime Minister of Japan or Canada's Prime Minister?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can only reply to the hon. gentleman that we should be very pleased indeed that our Prime Minister is taking our trade problems to the highest levels in Japan. He has discussed those, and I think we should be commending the Prime Minister for attending to the problems of this very troubled industry in Canada.

CODE OF CONDUCT—APPLICABLE TO MINISTERS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, in view of all that has gone down in this Chamber in the past two weeks, it would appear that the Deputy Prime Minister is saying that as long as a cabinet Minister conforms to the Code of Conduct he can receive a benefit. Does the Deputy Prime Minister believe that such permissive guidelines are adequate?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the main part of the allegations in the Member's question has been answered repeatedly in the House. With regard to improvements, nothing is perfect. The Prime Minister said that, in response to a question put to him at his last press conference before leaving for his Asian tour.

I remind the Hon. Member that his Leader, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, and the Leader of the New Democratic Party, have yet to respond to a letter sent to them on September 9.

Mr. Deans: We did respond.

Mr. Cassidy: That's not true. We did respond.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Mr. Deans: You know as well as I do that we sat down and sent it to committee, just as we were asked to do.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Baker: After that answer I now agree with what the Deputy Prime Minister said two days ago, that we have sunk to a new low in this Chamber. The word "sunk" is the past tense of the word "sink", and we all know who has been doing the sinking. I will, therefore, put my questions succinctly to the Deputy Prime Minister.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Does the Deputy Prime Minister know if the Minister of DRIE was quoted correctly in The Globe and Mail as saying:

It's not so much that I don't trust the private sector—

To administer his affairs:

—it is just that in my whole life I have never had anyone else manage my affairs and I don't want to lose control.

Does he know if the Minister still holds this opinion? If he does, does he not think that this Minister belongs in no Cabinet?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I was referring to the new low depths to which his caucus colleagues have sunk in their conduct in the committee where one of them was leaping over chairs to get at the Minister and the other one—

Mr. Gauthier: Don't give us that sanctimonious stuff. What a sanctimonious guy you are.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: Preaching to us, for God's sake.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

CANADIAN JOBS STRATEGY

ALLOCATION OF FUNDS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a question about conflict, only my question is about the conflict between need and deed and is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Last year hundreds of millions of dollars went unspent while thousands waited for jobs. No money has yet been allocated this year to the Canadian Jobs Strategy. When is the Minister going to get around to making the money available which is supposed to be putting people to work under the Canadian Jobs Strategy?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I thought the Hon. Member was going to mention that in the past month 52,000 new jobs have been created for young people across the country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: That has brought the unemployment rate for young people down to 15 per cent, the lowest rate since 1981.

Mr. Nunziata: Are you proud of that?

Miss MacDonald: The Challenge '86 program, which is already being funded to the tune of some $180 million, is now coming into effect. That, too, will help to lower the unemployment rate for young people. It will help to create jobs. That program is one of the many programs under the Canadian Jobs Strategy which is already in operation.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I, of course, did not mention the facts which the Minister mentioned because I knew she would mention them rather than answer the question.

TIME OF FUNDING

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I will repeat my question which has nothing to do with Challenge '86 but is with regard to the Canadian Jobs Strategy. Members on all sides of the House ask when money is going to be made available to the Canadian Jobs Strategy so that people will be put to work, or is this the Minister's way of bringing about the cuts in the Budget which she was allocated?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, just so the Hon. Member will know, Challenge '86 is part of the Canadian Jobs Strategy. I can assure him that moneys are available for various programs under the Canadian Jobs Stategy. Yesterday I had the privilege of being in Sault Ste. Marie with the Hon. Member from that area. I announced a program of some $6.5 million for the benefit of people who are unemployed in the Sault Ste. Marie area. That was the first project to be announced under the Community Futures Program of the Canadian Jobs Strategy.

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE INQUIRY

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

Since the disclosure about the loan made to a company run by his wife, many small and medium-sized businesses are wondering whether they could not also get five-year loans, with one year interest-free, and not to be refunded before 4 years. Could the Minister indicate to those companies where to apply for that kind of financial assistance?

[English]

Mr. Garneau: Call Erik.

• (1200)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): I think on a question of that nature, where I would need some sound financial advice, I would consult with the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am in receipt of—

Mr. Broadbent: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of a desire to raise a question of privilege from the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond. I have received notice of a point of order from the President of the Privy Council. Is this arising out of Question Period or not?

Mr. Broadbent: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Oshawa wishes to raise a point of order arising out of Question Period? I will deal with that first.

PROPOSED TABLING OF DOCUMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said earlier that he was prepared to make available a document he referred to yesterday. I am prepared to accept the conditions, as I understand them, that there are certain limited sections only, not directly involved with what has been debated here but which have something to do with commercial confidentiality, which would have to be kept confidential. The rest would not. Under those terms I would be glad to accept the Minister's offer and look at what he has.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): On behalf of the Official Opposition I say that the Minister can table the document if he wishes. We do not accept that it is sufficient information for this House and the Canadian public to launder the document to suit the Minister's purposes.

Mr. Stevens: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Minister will have his opportunity under Tabling of Documents. Is the Hon. Member raising a point of order out of Question Period? I must hear the question of privilege since I have been given notice.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): On this point of order, Mr. Speaker, I just want to make it absolutely clear that the Liberal Party will not accept the offer which has been accepted by the NDP.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Speak for yourself.

Mr. Gauthier: Just sit down.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I would like to get a clarification, Mr. Speaker. There are some constraints with respect to the tabling of documents. My colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, indicated he is prepared to table the document but make the exempted information available to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the NDP as members of the Privy Council. It is not a question of not making disclosure but the normal exclusion of certain limited parts of this document on the basis of commercial confidentiality. The Official Opposition House Leader (Mr. Gray (Windsor West)) will understand that, having served in Government. I just want to make sure I understand that that would not be a suitable arrangement under which the Minister tabled this document.

Mr. Speaker: I suspect that there needs to be more conversation about this among House Leaders.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I have to respond to the President of the Privy Council. I want to make our position clear.

Mr. Benjamin: That won't be easy.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): If the Minister wants to table the document he referred to during today's Question Period in the form to which he referred, he can do so. We are not stopping him. I am saying that, as far as we are concerned, we do not consider that ends the matter. If he says he will table it only if the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition as a Privy Councillor agrees to look at certain parts of it and keep them confidential, then certainly at the very least I will have to consult with my Leader, who is not here. However, I say let the Minister table his document and let this House and the Canadian people pass judgment on it right away. However, do not use the fact that we may not be willing to say the document is adequate as an excuse not to table the document in question today in the form he says he wants to table it.

Mr. Stevens: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), and then the Minister.

Mr. Gauthier: You have a question of privilege.

Mr. Deans: On a different point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I know I have a question of privilege. The Hon. Member raised a point of order arising out of Question Period and I think I have to resolve that matter before we can go to the question of privilege. The Minister wishes to speak to the point of order?

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Yes, Mr. Speaker. It arises out of the original comment made by the House Leader for the Official Opposition. He said there had been some laundering of the document overnight.

Mr. Gauthier: You said "notes" yesterday and not "document".

Mr. Stevens: I think it should be abundantly clear that the Memorandum of Understanding has a confidentiality clause in Clause 21. This is directly over Ed Lumley's signature. It says that, subject to the Access to Information Act, the Minister and Magna agreed to keep this MOU, including its annexes, confidential and not release it to third parties unless the prior consent of the other side is first obtained.

Mr. Axworthy: You used it yesterday.

Mr. Stevens: That is exactly what we did last night. Magna worked late into the night to make sure there was no other reason for not releasing the document. They have indicated that, with the exception of only three parts, they are prepared to have it tabled. That is what we are offering to do.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think, as Hon. Members, know there has not in fact been a point of order in all of this. There has been an attempt to negotiate on the floor. I think that should occur somewhere else.

I am in receipt of a notice of a question of privilege from the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall).

PRIVILEGE

STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, yesterday during Question Period I posed a question to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. In answer to my question he clearly read from a document. Later, according to established practices, the Minister was asked to table that document. Unfortunately, he said he had read only from a note and offered to table the note from which he said he read. After Question Period I had an opportunity, along with many of my colleagues, to view the official video tape, the electronic Hansard. We saw that the Minister was clearly reading from a document of several pages in length, not from the short note he showed us at three o'clock. My question of privilege is that the Minister perhaps—perhaps—through misunderstanding the document referred to in the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray), has misled the House. I think he should be called upon to correct his statement, table the proper document and, if he is not so prepared and he is viewed as having breached the privileges and practices of this House, I am prepared to move the appropriate motion.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member gave me proper notice of his question. He may know that it is not a question of privilege but a point of order he has raised. He has a view of the facts yesterday. The Hon. Minister gave me his view in the House yesterday that, on his word in the House, he was speaking from notes. As I indicated yesterday, the Chair accepts that the Hon. Member has a view of the facts and the Hon. Minister has given us his view of what the facts were. I, of course, accept his view.

Mr. Gauthier: He changed it overnight.

Mr. Prud'homme: Did you watch television?

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will know that the Speaker's obligation is to listen to the point of order raised in the House, and that is that.

POINT OF ORDER

STATEMENT BY ACTING PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order arising out of Question Period. Earlier in Question Period the Acting Prime Minister repeated something he has said on a number of occasions during the course of this week. He said the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) had written to the Leader of the New Democratic Party regarding the conflict of interest guidelines for Members and had no response. I want to put two matters clearly on the record. One, the Leader of the NDP did in fact file the views of this Party with the commission studying the conflict of interest issue.

They were made available to all Members, including the Prime Minister. More important, in the letter written to the Leader—

Mr. Speaker: The point of order?

Mr. Deans: The point of order is that the Acting Prime Minister has inadvertently misled the House.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Deans: It is a point of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It is a question of fact.

Mr. Deans: What is a question of fact?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are arguing a matter of fact.

Mr. Deans: I am not arguing facts.

• (1210)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Deans: I'm sorry, I demand the right to clear the record.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows, I think, that he is debating the fact.

Mr. Deans: I am not.

Mr. Speaker: He is saying he has a version of the facts, and he is saying another Member's version of the facts is wrong.

Mr. Deans: There is only one version of the facts.

Mr. Speaker: Anybody who has been around this Parliament as long as I have knows there is always more than one version of the facts.

Sir, with respect, I say—order, please.

Mr. Deans: I have about had it!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Deans: I have defended you at every turn.

Mr. Speaker: I know you have.

Mr. Deans: I am sick of it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain feels strongly that the facts have not been—order, please.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

MAGNA INTERNATIONAL INC.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I would like to table what I offered to table yesterday, which are the notes that I referred to during Question Period, and from which I read a number into the record concerning the Magna International contracted projects. In addition, as I indicated earlier, I would like to table the Memorandum of Understanding that was entered into on August 27, 1984, by Ed Lumley, on behalf of Her Majesty, and by Frank Stronach, on behalf of Magna International Inc. This Memorandum of Understanding, and perhaps I could read this into the record, is tabled on the understanding that there are four columns of figures on Annex 1 that have been deleted because it is felt they are, businesswise, quite sensitive. They show projections and sales, this type of thing. Annex Nos. 9 and 10 are also deleted. Those portions of the Memorandum of Understanding, Magna has told us in writing, will be made available to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and the Leader of the NDP Party (Mr. Broadbent) provided they sign, and I will read into the record, on the part of the Leader of the Opposition:

I, John Turner, P.C. hereby promise and agree personally, and in my capacity as a member of Her Majesty's Privy Council, to keep confidential and not disclose to any person the contents of the four (4) columns of figure on the—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Order, please.

The Hon. Minister may have something to say under statements, but at this point all he can do is table documents, with respect. Order, please.

Mr. Stevens: Mr. Speaker, I have tabled the two documents.

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Girve Fretz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table in both official languages the Government's response to five petitions.

PETITIONS

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT RECONSIDER CANCELLATION OF KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition signed by some thirty Canadians from around Saint-Hyacinthe, Quebec, asking the Government to reconsider its decision to terminate the Katimavik Program.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased to speak for a number of petitioners who humbly submit that the Katimavik Program was successful training the 20,000 young people who participated over the past ten years, and request that the Government support that initiative and reconsider its decision to terminate the program. Mr. Speaker, I have at least eight such petitions.

[English]

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Mr. Patrick Boyer (Etobicoke—Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to present another petition, this one signed by 110 residents of Etobicoke Lakeshore, and some 20 other municipalities around Ontario, from Ajax to Agincourt, Welland to Weston, Scarborough to Sarnia, and so on, in which the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to vote, at the earliest possible date, to reinstate capital punishment for first degree murder.

Pursuant to Standing Order 106 this petition has been certified correct both as to form and content.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT RECONSIDER CANCELLATION OF KATIMAVIK PROGRAM

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, I too have a number of petitions that I would like to present on behalf of citizens from Montreal, Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, Pierrefonds, Toronto and other areas in Canada who request that the Government reconsider its decision to terminate the youth program called Katimavik, and reinstate it.

[English]

DISARMAMENT

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from several hundred residents of Prince Edward Island who belong to the Island Women for Peace, and who urge the Government of Canada to diminish Canada's participation in the nuclear and conventional arms buildup, and, to that end, withdraw any proposed contract with Litton Systems Canada Limited to produce, in Prince Edward Island, the radar component for ADATS weaponry.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. Girve Fretz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Mines)): I ask that all questions be allowed to stand.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS AND FEDERAL POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION AND HEALTH CONTRIBUTIONS ACT, 1977

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Thursday, May 8, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health. Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and on the motion of Mr. Lewis (p. 13066).

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, the debate we are starting or rather resuming on Bill C-96 can hardly be said to be proceeding smoothly. I see the Conservative Members across the way making jokes.

I find it incredible that when we have a Bill that will have an impact on every Canadian province and will involve a total of $8 billion by the end of this decade, that not a single Minister who was involved in the decision-making process, not the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), not the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), not the Minister of State (Finance) (Mrs. McDougall), not the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), not the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), not a single Minister who was involved in making this decision or making this proposal to the Government, not a single Minister has had the courage to rise in the House to explain, not just to Hon. Members but to the Canadian people, what this Government was doing! Through Bill C-96, the Conservative Government, the Minister of State (Finance) and the Minister of Finance are taking $8 billion off the deficit and dumping it on the shoulders of the provincial Ministers of Finance. And then the Minister of Finance is going to tell us they have reduced the federal deficit. They reduced the deficit by passing it on to the provinces.

I think it is shocking that the Minister of Finance does not have the guts to come and explain, and that the Minister of State (Finance) who replaces him did not have the good judgment to come and explain to the House why the federal Government is going to cut back on health and post-secondary education programs and why the Government is going to cut transfer payments to the provinces by nearly $8 billion. Three billion for Ontario, two billion for Quebec, hundreds of millions for all the other provinces in Canada, provinces that cannot afford such cutbacks. And none of the Ministers responsible for financial affairs have had the courage to rise in the House to explain their position.

Mr. Speaker, I am not sure what kind of administration Hon. Members on the other side of the House are trying to set up, but there is growing evidence that all Conservative Cabinet Ministers have been gagged and ordered by the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister not to say anything. It is obvious in this case which closely resembles the matter under discussion in the House over the last couple of weeks. When well known businessmen such as those whose names have been reported in today's newspapers confirm before the media that indeed there were meetings between a Minister's wife and their companies, and that the Deputy Prime Minister stands up to say "I do not believe a word of it",we must conclude that the Government is putting up a smokescreen and does not want to come clean with the Canadian people. To top it off, in the case under consideration the Minister of State (Finance) refuses to explain the Government position. As we recall, the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) was in the Opposition in 1982 and, after months and months of negotiations to amend the equalization formula, he stated that it was not co-operative federalism, but predatory federalism. Why is he not in the House, or why can his colleague the junior Minister of Finance not be here to explain this glaring contradiction?

I have been listening to back-benchers expounding their principles. Sure enough, the Conservative Members told us yesterday that we must privatize hospitals, particularly homes for the elderly. Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Member ought to know that when the federal and provincial Governments changed the health care funding formula in 1976-77, the idea was to give more leeway to the provinces. I really do not see how anyone can argue that $8 billion will be taken away from the provinces because these activities have to be given back to the private sector. I quite agree that the private sector might have a role to play, but does the Hon. Member believe that only those who can afford to pay between $700 and $1,000 a month should be entitled to a space in a nursing home, a senior citizens residence or a hospital? If such is the Conservative philosophy and if the Member from Nova Scotia who spoke the other day was expressing the views of this Government, I would like a Minister to confirm that, from now on, the cutbacks of $8 billion, or $3 billion for Ontario and $2 billion for Quebec, mean that the Conservative Government wants the provinces to privatize hospital care. Is this the philosophy of the Conservative Government? Has the Hon. Member from Nova Scotia, whose province will lose hundreds of millions of dollars, consulted his Premier? Did he ask the Members of the Legislative Assembly of Nova Scotia whether they agree with privatization and with a reduction of their costs? Could they indeed reduce hospital costs?

For my part, I am shocked to see such an important financial bill, which goes to the very heart of our social programs about which the Prime Minister of Canada said during the 1984 electoral campaign:

• (1220)

[English]

"the social programs are a sacred trust not to be tampered with".

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, "not to be tampered with" . . . The provincial Ministers of Finance will have to shoulder this $8 billion cut in program funding. Is this consistent with the firm commitment the present Prime Minister had made during the election campaign, at a time when he was the Leader of the Opposition?

There are things which do not make sense. Over the past few days, Mr. Speaker, we have been trying to bring the Government to its sense and have it realize the absurdity of pushing through this $8 billion bill without any minister daring to come to the House to defend it. No Minister has risen in the House to deal with this Bill, and today, under threat of closure . . . It is not enough for the Government to use the weight of its 211-seat majority, it needs also use closure to stop this debate and make sure the Canadian people do not realize that they are about to be had.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the complete lack of courage demonstrated by the Minister of Finance and the Minister of State (Finance), in view of the fact that they have the gall, in spite of their 211-seat majority, to try and gag the 39-members strong Liberal Opposition—211 against 39—and that this Government is forced to use closure . . . I suggest the Government have gone far beyond the acceptable limits in our democratic system Mr. Speaker, and I move the immediate adjournment of the House to protest the Government's irresponsible attitude.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed to the motion please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Committee Report

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Garneau), which was negatived on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion defeated.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would just like to extend my apology to Your Honour for my earlier intemperate remarks.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for being, as always, an example of a parliamentarian.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I wish to have my vote registered as an abstention because I believe that this is a disgusting waste of parliamentary time and—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that a comment of that kind is entirely out of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. If you were to seek the consent of the House to revert to the tabling of committee reports, I have reason to believe, after consultation, that you would find such consent. I think the House would be so disposed.

Mr. Speaker: I take it there is an agreement to do this before calling it one o'clock.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MANAGEMENT AND MEMBERS' SERVICES

PRESENTATION OF SEVENTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to table the seventh report of the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services.

[English]

We voted the estimates of Mr. Speaker last Wednesday.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Editor's Note: See today's Votes and Proceedings.]

Mr. Gauthier: Let's have lunch.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) has made a suggestion which I am afraid I cannot accommodate today. It being after one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock today.

At 1.03 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and on the amendment of Mr. Lewis (p. 13066).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question? I will recognize the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy).

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) for finding a quorum this Friday afternoon. The Government has moved a motion that the question be now put. This means that I and other Members who are interested in speaking on this issue will not have the opportunity to do so.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Murphy: I can understand the response of the Government Members because in previous opportunities to speak on this Bill I have quoted the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), the Minister of Health and Welfare (Mr. Crombie), the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald), and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Crosbie). I can understand why Conservative back-benchers, and those on the front bench when they deem to show up in this place, are reluctant to hear the words of their own Cabinet Ministers. As you well know, Mr. Speaker, from your many—and some say too many—years in the House—I say that with all due respect, Mr. Speaker—what the Conservative Cabinet Ministers were saying when they were the opposition finance critic, health and welfare critic, employment critic, and justice critic, was the exact opposite of what they are doing at the present time in government.

We are presently debating a piece of legislation which will take money which would have gone to the provinces for medical services and the funding of post-secondary education. Some of the Government Members have said that that is not what the Bill will do. They say it will give more money to the provinces. That is certainly what some people would call newspeak. The present legislation is not due to expire until April of 1987. That legislation which was passed by this House in 1982 would have given each of the provinces more money for medicare and post-secondary education. The legislation with which we are now dealing will take that money from very essential programs which are necessary to create a sense of equality across the country.

The Ministers whom I quoted in earlier remarks said that this was unilateral action of a federal Government which was not concerned with consulting the provinces. In other words, while in opposition, the Conservatives said the Government should not pass such legislation because the Government had not consulted with the provinces. Post-secondary education and medical services are not paid for only by the federal Government but are paid for by the provinces and other agencies in conjunction with the federal Government.

In 1981 and 1982, Conservative after Conservative spoke in this House. Their theme was that we must keep co-operative federalism alive and that there should be no unilateral action by the federal Government. In 1982, the Liberals were not taking money away from the provinces. They were introducing legislation which would cover the period from 1982 to 1987. We objected to that legislation as did the Conservatives. However, it was a recognized responsibility of the federal Government of that day to introduce legislation which would cover federal contributions to post-secondary education and medicare for the next five-year period.

The federal Liberal Governments of that time failed to negotiate that with the provinces. They could not come to any agreement. They introduced a piece of legislation which they passed without the support of most of the provinces. They did that and were attacked time after time by the present Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Justice, the Minister of Employment and Immigration, and any number of other Members now sitting in Cabinet. The Tories condemned what they said was unilateral action. However, the Liberal Government was introducing legislation covering the next five year period. The present legislation has another year to run, until March 31, 1987. The legislation in front of us takes back money promised to the provinces under legislation which the Tories condemned as lacking in generosity and failing to recognize the rights of the provinces.

I have quoted the words Conservative MPs have used in the past in order to point out that they do not live up to what they said when in opposition. For that matter, they are even worse. One might say that they are stealing the money, if I can use that expression, from the provinces.

In addition to that, during the last election the Conservative Party said it would return to the 1977 funding formula which the Liberals had taken away. I do not know what the Conservative Whip was saying during the election but he knows that that was his Party's platform as shown on page 98 of its campaign handbook. I want him and other Members to know that they did not keep their election promise to the youth of this country. They did not restore the money taken away by the Liberals. No one in this House can get up and deny that.

Ms. Jewett: Where is Flora today?

Mr. Murphy: Where are any of the Ministers today?

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Murphy: I realize I do not have much time left because of time allocation, but let me say this. Mr. Justice Emmett Hall, a distinguished former member of the Conservative Party, spoke in Winnipeg on April 3. He made very clear what this legislation would do. It will hurt two groups in this society, the poor and the poorer provinces. He said that the provinces are going to have to incur more costs for medicare and that those provinces which do not have abundant resources will suffer more. He said it is obvious that there will be a lowering of standards and an inability to keep up with the state of the art in provincially owned hospitals. This from a man twice commissioned by the Government of Canada to look into medicare. He is not a New Democrat, he is a Conservative. He went across this country on this issue and is saying that this legislation will mean a reduction in the level of services.

Two weeks ago, speaking to The Financial Post conference on health, the Minister of National Health and Welfare was asked if these reductions will impact on affordability and accessibility. He replied that of course they will. He admitted that this legislation will reduce accessibility and affordability, and the people of this country should know that. When the legislation gets to committee I am sure we will make that case. We cannot beat the Tory numbers in this House, but I am sure the groups concerned can keep repeating these Tory promises—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret but the Hon. Member's time has expired.

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill, as other Hon. Members have said, is to cut back on federal Government transfers to the provinces for post-secondary education and health care. We in the Opposition, along with the people of Canada, must oppose this Bill with all our might. Most of the provinces are doing so even though some of them are run by Conservative Governments. The Conservative Party campaigned during the election on a promise to respect social programs and make them a sacred trust. It is strange that the Conservatives should pick on post-secondary education and health in dealing with the deficit. What they are really doing is transferring the deficit to the provinces.

Education and health, as you know, are the lifeblood of a modern technological state. I look upon money spent by Government on education as an investment, not simply as a transfer payment for welfare or social services. If we are to have a society able to meet competition from the U.S., Japan and the European Common Market, we must have the best trained and most competent people in industry. The only way we are going to do that is by having a first-class educational system at the primary, secondary and post-secondary level. This money which is being cut was not only for universities but also for community colleges, technical schools and others as well. It was to be used to train those people required in a modern technological society.

The other side of the coin here is the issue of health care. Again, if we are going to have a productive, competent nation, we need healthy people. We need people who are able to work without worrying about health problems, especially the financial aspect. I spoke to the amendment to this Bill put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Mmember for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). I put some arguments on the record against this Bill. I would now like to put on the record some of the things happening in this country outside Parliament, some of the opposition taking place, which I think is important. I do not want people to believe that it is just the Opposition in this place which is opposing the Bill. There is opposition everywhere in the country. I quote from an article from Le Devoir as follows:

[Translation]

—and in the newspaper Le Droit on March 14, 1986, and in the article entitled "Three Hundred Students condemn the Cutbacks", this was written:

Over 300 students from Ottawa and Carleton Universities demonstrated on Parliament Hill yesterday noon to condemn the cutbacks announced by the Conservative Government with respect to the financing of post-secondary education.

[English]

I now quote the following from the Saint John, New Brunswick Telegraph Journal of February 21:

• (1420)

The New Brunswick Medical Society has already done everything it can to fight Finance Minister Michael Wilson's proposal to trim federal support of provincial medicare, says society president Dr. Paige Emenau.

In anticipation of the legislation Wilson brought to the House of Commons last Friday, medical society officials met in Ottawa early this month and laid out their case to New Brunswick members of the federal Progressive Conservative caucus.

I have another example from the scientific community, and I quote from the Toronto Star on February 6 the following:

Funding cuts seen as crisis for our universities. Shrinking Government support for post-secondary education is causing a crisis for Canadian universities, spokesmen for the academic research community have warned.

And they say a federal-provincial conference is needed to resolve the issue before the damage becomes irreparable.

"Research is not a luxury, but a necessity", Bernard Shapiro, president of the Social Sciences Federation of Canada, told a news conference yesterday.

I have already referred to the medical profession and the scientific community. There are also quotes from the political leaders in our provinces. I have here an article from the Halifax Chronicle Herald of January 2. This is an article by Harvey Webber, who is a Sydney, Nova Scotia businessman, a lawyer and a founder of the Atlantic Canada Plus Association. He says the following:

Federal transfer funds allocated ostensibly for health care and post-secondary education alone total approximately $275 million in this province.

That is Nova Scotia. He continues:

The Atlantic Provinces must be quite clear that reduction of transfer payments for health and education could cost Nova Scotia alone $70 million a year.

As an Atlantic Canadian, I am alarmed. What are our provincial Governments doing to prevent a reduction in transfer payments? All of us throughout the Atlantic region should clearly express our concern and our alarm to our provincial representatives.

In Quebec—

[Translation]

—as stated in the newspaper Le Devoir dated December 18:

The Minister of Finance, Gérard-D. Lévesque, brought pressure to bear on the federal Government "in a general way" and not on specific issues, urging not to transfer its deficit over to the provinces—

The Quebec Minister insisted that he had exerted pressures on the Government in Ottawa so it would understand conditions in Quebec. Not only I did that, answered the Minister of Finance, but I added other considerations—

[English]

What is particularly sad in this situation is that we have a Government attempting to deal with the deficit, and that must be dealt with, with two very critical programs for Canadian people, namely, education and health care.

While the Government is cutting back in that area what is it doing at the same time? As it did in the last Budget it is giving a $500,000 tax exemption for people with capital gains, who are the wealthier people in our population. The Government has spent approximately $1 billion bailing out the two banks that failed recently and the creditors in those banks, even though the creditors were beyond the $60,000 limit for insurance purposes. The Government provided tax benefits to the large oil companies. These are very, very expensive programs. The Government is doing that at the same time as it is attempting to cut back on education and health care.

Let me point out for symbolic purposes, and I know it got some of my colleagues upset the other day, that when this Government came to office one of the first things it did was to increase the size of the Minister's offices. The Government raised the salaries of what used to be called executive assistants, made them chiefs of staff and gave them much higher salaries than are given to Members of Parliament. The Government established offices for Ministers recently in different parts of the country, and has announced one in Vancouver. I mentioned the establishment of an office for Mila Mulroney, the wife of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), which is completely unacceptable and had never been done in this country before. Here we have the wife of the Prime Minister proclaiming herself a real political animal. In other words, she admits that her work is principally political on behalf of the Conservative Party, and she is being paid through public funds for an office on Parliament Hill. That is a symbolic issue.

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: I rise on a point of order, Mr.Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Parliamentary Secretary on a point of order.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Speaker, I wonder what the outstanding conduct of the wife of the Prime Minister of Canada, the greatest among Canadian women, has to do with Bill C-96.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not think that is a point of order. The Hon. Member has exactly 30 seconds.

Mr. Allmand: I know it is not a point of order, but I am glad the Member raised it. It has a lot to do with this Bill because Bill C-96 cuts important funding to the provinces for education and health care, when at the same time the Government is spending money on such frills as offices for the wife of the Prime Minister, and that is unacceptable in this country. It is only an example of the profligacy of this Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret but the Hon. Member's time is expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, it is pretty obvious that we have almost finished consideration of Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977. We, that is, our small team of Opposition Members, since there are only 39 of us in this party and 30 in the other Opposition party. But nevertheless, the Government, with the biggest majority ever, 211, since Confederation, has decided to crush that Opposition by gagging it, by putting the previous question. This means that the Government will probably make it this afternoon, unless we get reinforcements. However, I think we are running out, because there are hardly any Opposition Members left who have not spoken to the Bill. But nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, this Government has resorted to a procedure that is certainly not acceptable in a true democracy, and 211 Members could at least have the patience to listen to what the Official Opposition—

Mr. Gauthier: And to learn!

Mr. Prud'homme: Not only to listen, but to learn, as my hon. friend from Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) pointed out.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pity, because I wish my colleagues and especially those from Quebec, would realize the kind of impact this Bill will have on my own province, the Province of Quebec.

I am told that at a reception someone heard a rather interesting comment by our Quebec Premier, Mr. Bourassa, who said not long ago, and I will allow myself the indiscretion of quoting him: "the 66 million I am about to lose are probably the DRIE Minister's $64 million that are going to another province... ", the reference being to the contracts the controversy is all about today.

Mr. Speaker, I am sorry they don't realize how important this Bill is. They are undermining the very sectors on which Canada has built its reputation: health care and education, areas in which I think we can say our country has made enormous progress in the years since the War.

We are envied by the world. We are envied by our much richer neighbours to the South, the United States, and that is saying a lot. We are envied not only by the rest of the world but by our most precious neighbours the United States. How many Americans who know about our system envy us? How many Americans who do not know about it would, if they did, urge their Government to have two of the best programs in the world. But if we cut back those expenditures without consultations, without consulting the provinces—because after all they are directly involved—how can we believe in good harmony between the Federal Government and the provinces?

This Government was elected, as I say, because the Canadian people thought the time had come for a change. But they were not expecting such cutbacks in those expenditures. The Government made a clear commitment. They even attacked us, as it was their right to do it, and I will always remember that debate in January 1984, if my memory serves me right. You were there, Mr. Speaker, and you delivered very serious attacks against the Government.

At that time, we were criticized both by the present Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) and very, very harshly by no other than the very able Chairman of the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn), who suggested then that there was a breach of contract. He added—of course he was in opposition at that time—that health care and education programs came under the jurisdiction of the provinces and that the latter should be consulted.

I attended that debate. It went on and on, and you were there, Mr. Speaker. I even remember at that time you were looking at me and you were nodding in approval when your colleagues blamed us for backtracking on promises, as we wanted to do at that time, because of things we wanted to have done, because of promises broken at that time.

In view of all those attacks by the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands (Miss MacDonald), the Hon. Member for Wetaskiwin (Mr. Schellenberger), Alberta, and the Hon. Member for Brandon—Souris (Mr. Clark) . . . I remember very well, as does my colleague and friend the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn), those attacks against our Government as democracy would have it. And what are they doing today, after having promised solemnly—I repeat, solemnly—in Sherbrooke never to do such a thing?

You know that, since yesterday, I have developed the habit of showing documents like that, because, having watched TV—I hope I will be allowed this remark as an aside—I cannot help thinking of what we have seen yesterday from the Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens); the document he was holding at 2 p.m. had become a single sheet at 3 p.m.. That is why I have some difficulty—

On the one hand, Mr. Speaker, the Government has broken the definite promise that was made in Sherbrooke during the election campaign not to make any cut in the expenditures. We now have a total reversal of the situation, considering all the speeches which had been made as recently as January 1984 by a multitude of Hon. Members who were sitting in the Opposition at the time.

I am somewhat ill at ease when, having examined the figures very closely, I realize the extent of the losses. I point this out to my Quebec colleagues in particular, because, after all, I am not an Ottawa Member in Quebec, I am a Quebec Member in Ottawa. Therefore I owe it to myself to represent the interests of my province when they are being threatened, as I have always done even when we were in office.

Mr. Speaker, my province stands to lose close to $2 billion for health care alone. The loss will also be considerable in the post-secondary education sector. Where will the Province of Quebec find the money to make up for the funds it was supposed to get from the federal Government? How can a province as poor as Newfoundland which will lose $187 million over the next few years . . . And Prince Edward Island, Mr. Speaker, the strength of Canada stems from mutual assistance between poorer and richer provinces, yesterday's richer provinces may very well be poorer tomorrow, just as yesterday's poorer provinces may be tomorrow's richer provinces. This is what mutual assistance in Canada is all about, Canadian understanding, the spirit of federal-provincial conferences. That small province will have to make do with $40 million less in the health and post-secondary education sector alone.

Nova Scotia will be deprived of $282 million. Your own province, Mr. Speaker, will receive $773 million less.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is the duty of Opposition Members to impress upon their colleagues from their own province the fact that such cutbacks will put the Government of Quebec in a very precarious situation, as they will the other provincial administrations. It is quite obvious. We know the Hon. Member for Brome—Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) said that we are faced with a difficult situation. She is right, but that does not justify her unloading the problem on others. There should be a co-operation between the two, since these agreements had been reached together, and I feel that it is together that they should be discussed and discussed again.

Mr. Speaker, I notice that you are signaling to me, and as always, I will obey the Chair. As I interpret your smile as a sort of permission, I will try to conclude in an intelligent way.

First of all, I find it regrettable that the Government should try to gag the Opposition on such an important and significant Bill. We will therefore look into it again in committee, and we will spend more time debating it at the third reading stage. I find regrettable that the Federal Government should ask others to shoulder the deficit without getting them together to address the issue. Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that tomorrow Canada will be less generous than it is today in the areas of health care and post-secondary education which are so very important for the future of young Canadians whom we must protect, because they are Canada's real wealth, and it is not by cutting post-secondary education funding that we will have this wealth and this country envied by all.

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, it gives me pleasure to speak on such an important matter for Quebec. In the presence of one, two, three, four, five, six, seven . . . They do not even know what I want to say, Mr. Speaker.

• (1430)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member has been here for close to two years.

Mr. Gauthier: More than that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): More than that. I have no intention of lecturing the Hon. Member, but I wish he would maintain decorum and not count the other Members in this Chamber. s'il vous plaît.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I was counting those to whom I want to speak. I do not want to address people who are not here, so I shall speak to the eight Quebec Members who are in the House. If the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) had not gotten excited—and I am addressing myself mostly to these people since they are supposed to defend Quebecers.

I am not blaming the other Quebec Members who are absent, but I am now addressing the Hon. Member for LaSalle—

Mr. Lanthier: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Speaker, we have an excellent representation of Quebec Members in this House today. We do not need the lessons of the Members opposite. I believe that it is out of order for the Hon. Member to refer to the presence of Members as he is now doing.

• (1440)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I appreciate what is happening. I know it is Friday afternoon, but, please, let us just get back to debate and enjoy each other here in this Chamber.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I was mentioning the Quebec Members who are present because I would like them to wake up. I have the feeling that I have succeeded in the case of the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier).

Mr. Speaker, what we would like is for the Hon. Member for Brome—Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) and the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne) to rise to defend the interests of Quebecers.

My colleague for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) has told us exactly how much money Quebec will be losing. This money would not go into the trust fund of the Government. It would be used to provide health care and post-secondary education for the people of Quebec. I think that it would be a good thing and that the population of Quebec would be proud and happy if the Hon. Member for LaSalle (Mr. Lanthier), the Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salaberry (Mr. Hudon), the Hon. Member for Champlain (Mr. Champagne), the Hon. Member for l'Assomption, the Hon. Member for Châteauguay (Mr. Lopez) and the Hon. Member for Brome—Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) were to rise and say: For my part, I agree with the fact that Federal Government is cutting back millions of dollars from its transfer payments to Quebec for health care. Or else, they should simply rise and say: Mr. Speaker, I do not agree with the Government that these amounts should be cut back.

Mr. Speaker, Conservative Members have said that this is because of the deficit. But when the Government tabled a $1 billion Bill in this House to rescue some one hundred individuals in Western Canada who had $60,000 deposits in a bank account, the Hon. Members whom I have just mentioned never stood up in the House to say: I am against this Bill, because we must reduce the deficit. On the contrary, they stood up and said: I support this Bill, Mr. Speaker, for we must save these institutions. We must save banking institutions; as for ordinary citizens, it is not serious. What we are trying to do here is not to save hospital buildings, but to save the people—including some of us, who knows—who might get seriously ill and be forced to seek health care in a hospital.

Mr. Speaker, health care standards . . . Yesterday, you saw on TV . . . In the province of Quebec, in Montreal, there were surgical operations for people suffering from heart conditions. The money made available by the Federal and Provincial Governments have raised the people's standards of living. Instead of clowning about, the Hon. Member for LaSalle should rise in the House to try and defend the interests of both the Government and his constituents.

Mr. Gauthier: So far, not a single Minister has done so.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, my colleague the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) who has spoken so elequently on this issue points out to me that not a single Minister has raised so far to deal with this issue.

Mr. Speaker, they all rise in defence of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens), but none of them are rising to defend the interests of Quebecers. This is absolutely shocking, Mr. Speaker. All the provincial governments expressed their disagreement, and the important thing here is that the credibility of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is at stake, because in Sherbrooke, Quebec, he promised he would not cut back transfer payments for health care and education, Mr. Speaker. And now he has failed to keep the promise he made in Quebec City.

Mr. Speaker, once again, I may remind the Conservative Members from Quebec who are here in the House, and I am not talking about those who are absent . . . I never saw the Hon. Member for Montmorency—Orleans (Mrs. Blouin) rise in the House.

I think it would be interesting to know what she has to say about this question, Mr. Speaker. Not only is the Government preventing its Members from speaking, it has gagged the Opposition.

The Members across the way are laughing. There are 211 of them. The Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salaberry (Mr. Hudon) is laughing, but I can tell you something, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Hudon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Parliamentary Secretary has the floor.

Mr. Hudon: Mr. Speaker, it really bothers me on this side of the House when I hear my hon. friend opposite. I have the impression that if he speaks long enough, he will end up saying something, and I would like to hear it.

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, you will agree that this was not very bright, but then people did not know them before they elected them. So he has just showed, and was not the first to do so . . . but I can predict that he will not be there come the next elections, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I hope the Hon. Member will get back to debate and talk about the Bill and not about attendance in the House, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Malépart: Mr. Speaker, I was indeed responding to the point of order, and you agreed with me that what he just did was stupid.

Mr. Speaker, coming back to the guillotine proposed by this Government to end the debate, we just saw the Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salaberry (Mr. Hudon) who just rose. It is easy to gag the House, but it is a shame for the Government to rise and speak. So he has nothing intelligent to say. But, Mr. Speaker, there are others here—and the fact that they are Conservatives has nothing to do with that take the Hon. Member for Chateauguay (Mr. Lopez)—he is a good Member, intelligent, and I would like to know what he thinks about that. Instead of going through such antics as did the Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salaberry, certainly he could enlighten us, and perhaps after hearing his explanations we might say: Of course, maybe it could do for a year, and next year we will negotiate, the Government was right in doing this or that.

But no. There are no discussions, although they brag about enhancing co-operation with the provinces. Mr. Speaker, all the provinces disagree with the measure. The Quebec Government has had to impose a special tax on firms and corporations to cover the $66 million gap in equalization payments being received from the federal Government. There was a meeting here at 2 p.m. this afternoon between Mr. Ciaccia and Mr. Sinclair Stevens concerning the Matane paper mill, because that project is not proceeding because of lack of federal funds as usual paid to the provinces.

Mr. Speaker, equalization involves payments from government to government, but it also implies payments from citizens to citizens. And with the arrangements that were reached in the areas of health care and post-secondary education the people of this country—the rich provinces at the expense of the poor provinces—would know when someone paid taxes to the federal Government, that there was some redistribution to help the less favoured in other provinces through post-secondary education or health care.

Mr. Speaker, you are indicating that my time has almost expired. Again I would like to give an opportunity to the Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salaberry. He uttered mere stupidities, but I feel he could contribute intelligently to the debate.

I am convinced that the Hon. Member for Châteauguay (Mr. Lopez) would have something brilliant to say as well as the Member for Charlesbourg (Mrs. Tardif), the Hon. Member for Brome—Missisquoi (Mrs. Bertrand) the Hon. Member for Montmorency—Orléans (M^{me} Blouin) whom we do not know. My colleague for l'Assomption, I think, is competent enough as far as the Gulf issue is concerned. Mr. Speaker, in concluding I invite those Members to defend the interests of Quebecers.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I always like to hear the Hon. Member speak on debate, but his time has expired.

• (1450)

Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on the motion of the Hon. Member for Simcoe North (Mr. Lewis):

That the question be now put.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 13(5), the recorded division stands deferred until 6 p.m. on Monday, May 12, 1986.

CANADA PETROLEUM RESOURCES ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that Bill C-92, an Act to regulate interests in petroleum in relation to frontier lands, to amend the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act and to repeal the Canada Oil and Gas Act, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Girve Fretz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Mines)): Mr. Speaker, I am proud to speak on the second reading of the Canada petroleum resources Bill in the House today. It is an important element of our broader economic strategy. The strategy was clearly laid out by the Government shortly after we took office. It was particularly faithful to the commitments we made to the people of Canada during the last election.

The strategy reflected our belief as a Party, and the commitment of our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), that fundamental change was necessary to the existing structure of federal economic policy. Soon after taking office, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) announced five economic priorities which would determine the Government's long-term approach to economic and fiscal management. They are: reduction of the federal deficit; removal of Government obstacles in the market-place; the strengthening of Canada's trade relationships; establishment of a new and a more practical investment policy; and the resolution of long-standing energy disputes with the provinces. These priorities reflected the genuine anxieties of Canadians about the way that the previous Government was mishandling the economy.

Under the former Government, unemployment and the deficit were on the rise while investment and investor confidence were on the decline. Our Government has moved quickly to make its economic priorities a reality, bringing new hope to Canadians. For the first time in years we have stopped the rate of growth in the deficit. There is real restraint in Government spending. This is a direct result of the Budget of the Minister of Finance.

As a Government we are deeply concerned with the fair and equitable treatment of Canadians from all regions, whether they are from Atlantic Canada, Ontario, Quebec or western Canada, and from all walks of life. I believe that the budget measures announced by the Minister of Finance treat seriously the problems facing our nation today. We can no longer afford to spend more than one-quarter—and I think the figure is close to one-third—of our national revenue on the financing charges for the debt. The Government is committed to paying down the national debt. As any family with a mortgage or any small-businessman who relies on credit will agree, the sooner we pay off our debt the sooner we will be able to put our revenue to productive use.

That is what our Budget will do. By the end of the decade the national debt will finally stop growing faster than the national economy for the first time since 1974-75. The money the Government must actually borrow in the market-place is projected to fall from $8.8 billion to $11 billion in 1990.

The Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) has begun the process of deregulation in that sector. This initiative will release the market forces that will provide Canadians with the best transportation system at the best possible price while not sacrificing safety.

The Foreign Investment Review Agency has been replaced by Investment Canada. It attracts, and does not repel, the foreign investment so needed for healthy economic growth in this great country.

The Government has begun to return certain Crown corporations to the private sector. Those which serve a genuine public interest as Crown corporations will be retained. But those which merely represent the excessive intrusion of the previous Government into the Canadian economy will be returned to the market-place.

Our energy policy, like our over-all economic strategy, is based on certain fundamental beliefs: that the petroleum industry must be freed of excessive taxation and government control so that it can adequately respond to the sometimes dramatic shifts in the world oil market; and that energy should unite the country and not divide it.

The introduction of the frontier policy statement on October 30 marked the end of the Liberal blueprint for disaster—the National Energy Program. The Progressive Conservative message, the message of fairness and of market responsiveness, has been heard. It has been heard and understood by Canadians in every region of the country.

The Government has delivered on its promise to use Canada's vast energy resources as a uniting force. The Atlantic Accord has made Newfoundland and Labrador an equal partner in the development of oil and gas resources off its coast. Just two months after signing the Atlantic Accord we signed the Western Accord with the Governments of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan. This accord stimulated $1 billion in investment. Under the accord, we deregulated oil prices.

Under the previous Government's policies the price was set at the whim of Government, regardless of what was happening in the market-place. Even if the pressure was for crude oil prices to drop, consumers would not have received any kind of price break unless the Government wanted them to receive one. Canadians remember that the National Energy Program increased gasoline prices by up to 94 per cent. The Western Accord has made it possible for consumers to enjoy the benefits of lower gasoline and oil prices. It also eliminated a list of taxes, removing both the financial and bureaucratic burden these placed on companies operating in Canada's oil and gas sector.

Last November 1, the Government delivered on another commitment by reaching an agreement on natural gas pricing and markets with the western producing provinces. If you could, Mr. Speaker, you would ask me: What were the results? I will tell you, Sir. Canada's natural gas industry is now free to compete both in Canada and in the United States. Consumers will benefit because the market-place will determine the price of natural gas, and competition will ensure that the prices are market responsive. Industrial users of natural gas can buy directly from producers or brokers, which will enhance their competitive position vis-à-vis American industries.

Companies are responding to the opportunity to make deals without the federal Government determining the bottom line. As Conservatives, we believe this is the way it should be, and Canadians are responding. In fact, contracts under the natural gas pricing and markets agreement are being signed all the time between western producers and industrial users.

We are all aware that crude oil prices have dropped and have dropped dramatically in the past several months. This will provide a direct economic stimulus to many regions of Canada. However, it is causing serious uncertainty in the oil and gas industry. Exploration and development plans are now under review and jobs are being threatened. It is important to understand that this negative impact will be felt not only in western Canada but in other regions of the country as well. Many suppliers in central Canada depend on orders from the oil and gas industry. People in Atlantic Canada and the North depend directly and indirectly on the industry for their jobs.

Canada's job-creation record since the Government took office has, I believe, been nothing short of phenomenal. Almost 600,000 jobs have been created since we took office. In absolute numbers, we have created more jobs in this nation of 25 million people than all the western European countries combined, countries with a population 16 times ours. That is the phenomenon.

The Government is not complacent about its job-creation record even though it is proud of it. It is concerned about the state of the industry and the impact on jobs right across the country. On April 30, the Prime Minister announced changes to the petroleum and gas revenue tax worth $175 million to the industry between now and the end of the tax in 1988.

I would like to cite the changes that were included. First, there was an increase in the small producer's tax credit from $.5 million to $2 million for the life of the PGRT. Second, there was a zero rate of PGRT for the Syncrude and Suncor oilsands plants to the end of 1986. These changes are targeted to small, active, independent producers who have created thousands of jobs in western Canada and are particularly hard hit by declining oil prices. The assistance will improve the industry's cash flow and will help to maintain short-term exploration activity in western Canada. The changes are consistent with previous tax relief announced in the Western Accord and with provincial royalty relief provided by the Government of Alberta.

The Government of Canada will continue to monitor the impact of world prices on the industry in close co-operation with the Governments of the producing provinces. The energy policies of the Government of Canada have freed the industry to meet the challenge of lower prices. These are tough times for the oil and gas industry but it must survive in a highly competitive domestic and international market. Can you imagine, Mr. Speaker, the state of the industry if it had to deal with the National Energy Program's excessive taxation and the suffocating regulations that were imposed on the industry? We would not have had an oil and gas industry. It would have been gone.

The Canadian petroleum resources Bill is entirely consistent with our approach to energy. It is market-responsive, and that is important. It is internationally competitive, and that is very important. It is free of excessive Government intervention, and that is something for which we fought. It is sensitive to regional interests.

We know that drilling for oil in Canada's far North and offshore carries a higher cost and a greater risk than drilling for oil in the conventional areas. The Canada petroleum resources Bill responds to the challenges that our frontier regions offer us. The Canada petroleum resources Bill will replace the existing Canada Oil and Gas Act with a simplified and fair set of rules designed to encourage exploration success in Canada's frontier regions.

I believe that the Canada petroleum resources Bill is an important legislative element of the Atlantic Accord, of a revised agreement which we are seeking with Nova Scotia, and of agreements that may be reached between the federal Government and other coastal provinces and territorial Governments. This Bill sets the rules that will guide Governments and the petroleum industry in the exploration and development of Canada's frontier and offshore resources.

At the exploration stage, the Government may issue rights in the form of an exploration licence. If a company's exploration effort is successful and results in the discovery of significant accumulations of oil or gas, the company then will have the right to a significant discovery licence. The significant discovery licence will then allow the operator to continue exploration in the area for an indefinite period of time. If the economics and technology justify commercial production, a production licence will be issued at that time. The production licence confers the exclusive right to produce oil and gas from that area for as long as it is capable of commercial production.

Under this Bill, the Government of Canada will introduce a simple, competitive bidding system for exploration rights to prospective lands based on a single criterion, one in which the best bid wins. This will ensure the maximum return to Canadians as resource owners. It will ensure fair treatment of the companies bidding for exploration rights.

Key factors in determining the criteria for bidding in the best-bid-wins process will be the geological prospects of the area and the policy objectives of the coastal province or northern territory. For highly prospective areas such as those close to existing commercial discoveries, a cash bonus may be most appropriate. Where an exploration program is less mature and the risk is greater, a form of work commitment bid may be more suitable in that case. Bid prerequisites may include commitments to Canadian and local benefits, work commitments and commitments to levels of Canadian participation. Companies will have to continue to satisfy environmental protection, safety and health requirements which are so important to our Government and our people.

The Canada petroleum resources Bill does not have a Crown share. We believe that this provision of the former legislation eroded investor confidence because it gave the Government of Canada power to confiscate property retroactively. This Government will not confiscate property. However, we are committed to 50 per cent Canadian ownership in frontier production projects, and we think this is important.

The Bill will require a company applying for development approval with respect to pre-1982 discovery to submit a plan showing how it will attain a 50 per cent Canadian-ownership rate by the time the production licence is issued. However, unlike the previous legislation, the provisions in this legislation are non-retroactive, are non-confiscatory and emphasize private-sector solutions to the problems.

The Bill respects the rights of companies regardless of nationality. Under the existing legislation, Petro-Canada enjoys special rights in the frontier lands. This is unfair. This Bill does not give preferential treatment to Petro-Canada. The Government has instructed Petro-Canada to operate in the market-place as do private sector companies. It will raise capital on money markets, and it will work to deliver the best possible return to its shareholders—the people of Canada.

To enhance the profitability of companies operating in the high cost and high risk frontier regions, where it is difficult to work and difficult to transport, the proposed legislation provides for the fiscal measures outlined in the frontier policy statement. The 10 per cent basic royalty and progressive incremental royalty will be eliminated. These will be replaced with a royalty which, before project pay-out, begins at the rate of 1 per cent of gross revenue and rises to 5 per cent in increments of 1 per cent every 18 months. Following pay-out of the initial investment, including a fair return on capital invested, the royalty will be 30 per cent of net cash flow.

These changes will limit the royalty burden during the early stages of production, but we believe they will ensure an equitable sharing of revenue between Government and industry after the investment has been recovered. The proposed regime is similar to the royalties levelled by Alberta on high-cost oil sands and enhanced oil recovery projects.

The Government will implement a 25 per cent investment royalty credit. It will be applicable to eligible costs of up to $5 million for new exploration wells. The credit will be applied against royalties otherwise payable within the region. This royalty credit will provide conventional onshore frontier exploration with incentives comparable to those available for similar activity in the western provinces. The royalty credit will be implemented in regulations following discussions with industry representatives.

In addition to the investment royalty credit, a new tax incentive for exploration will be introduced in separate legislation. This investment will help bridge the gap between the end of PIP and the start of frontier developments, which will create incentives for frontier investment. The 25 per cent exploration tax credit will apply to qualifying expenses of more than $5 million per well for wells drilled anywhere in Canada. To ensure that the credit assists companies not currently paying taxes, this provision will be refundable at a 40 per cent rate.

The Canada petroleum resources Bill introduces a balanced framework for the development of Canada's frontier lands. It is fair to provincial and territorial Governments and to all Canadians as resource owners. It is not only market responsive but it is internationally competitive and sensitive to the commercial concerns of companies operating in the high risk frontier regions of the country. It is not only all those things which I mentioned, but it is consistent with the policies the Government has introduced during the past 20 months of being in office.

Today Canada's oil and gas industry is facing an important challenge which perhaps it has never faced before. Crude oil prices are dropping dramatically, and there is a great deal of uncertainty in the industry about the impact of this. However, the Government has unleashed the industry's expertise, hard work and vision to meet today's challenges and to take advantage of tomorrow's opportunities. We cannot allow current market conditions to deter us from our commitment to energy security. We cannot become complacent in our search for new sources of supply; we just cannot afford to do it. We must be prepared for the eventual return to a market where prices will result in an adequate return on investment, which is so necessary. The projects we review today must be judged not by current prices but against pricing forecasts for the early 1990s.

The progressive energy policies introduced by the Government provide the flexibility necessary for Canada's petroleum industry to deal with short-term market challenges. Equally important, our energy policies provide incentives for the industry to continue exploration activities in order to take advantage of longer term opportunities. That is what Canadians elected us to do, and we believe we are delivering.

The Canada petroleum resources Bill is another piece of legislation developed as an integral part of the progressive energy policies which Canadians elected us to deliver.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Mines (Mr. Fretz), a Member of Parliament for whom I have a good deal of respect. However, I must say that I have very little respect for the energy policies of the Government.

The Government's new approach to energy is to let the private sector do it. When it comes to security of supply, the Government says that we should trust oil companies to go out and find new sources of oil and gas. When it comes to Canadianization, the Government says that we need more foreign investment and that Canada is open for business. When it comes to fairness to consumers, the Government sends a telex to oil companies asking them to lower oil prices, pretty please, and to give consumers a break. Canadians deserve much more than this from their Government, especially when it is dealing with our energy future.

The new frontier energy policy as stated in Bill C-92 provides a 25 per cent exploration tax credit. It is applicable to all wells in Canada with costs in excess of $5 million. For those companies which do not pay taxes, the tax credit will be refundable at the rate of 40 per cent. Under existing legislation there is a benefit of 80 per cent for Canadian companies in the energy sector which do not pay taxes. We are now in a position where Canadian companies which do not pay taxes will not obtain the 25 per cent exploration tax credit but will only receive the refundable 40 per cent of the 25 per cent, or 10 per cent. They will go from an 80 per cent benefit to a 10 per cent benefit.

The Government complained that the Liberal Government was discriminating against foreign companies and that it was giving Canadian companies an advantage. We in the Liberal Party do not apologize for giving Canadian companies an advantage, not in the least; certainly not Canadian companies which have steadfastly explored frontier areas and have taken advantage of the incentives provided by the Liberal Party when it was in Government. We are not apologizing for our interest in furthering frontier exploration by Canadian companies.

What will they now receive? There is a complete breakdown in the frontier areas; the industry is abandoning exploration. The only companies which are exploring at the present time are those with grandfathering rights under the Petroleum Incentives Program. There are very few of those. Even with the grandfathering provisions, which could have been fairly significant to the end of 1987, the Government decided it would retroactively cut back the drilling rights of some of the companies. The new exploration tax credit simply does not go far enough in encouraging exploration on the frontiers. Even before the world price of oil fell drastically and put all energy projects under review there was much doubt about the future of energy projects on the frontier. That is unfortunate because so many areas of the country depend on frontier exploration and so much of our energy future depends on it.

• (1520)

The Independent Petroleum Association of Canada has been asking for changes to the exploration tax credit. It feels strongly that smaller Canadian companies need help to get through the transition period which they must go through to adjust to the new regime which the Government is recommending in Bill C-92. Canadian companies are being put under the gun which will strangle the initiative given to companies on the frontier by the former Liberal Government. The Government is relying on the promises of the major oil companies to look after our energy future.

On March 29, 1985, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney) said: "Companies involved in the drilling ventures told me personally that the removal of the petroleum and gas revenue tax would be one of the greatest incentives to continue drilling on the Scotian shelf".

If you were to fly over the resource areas where the reserves of oil and gas exist off Nova Scotia, Mr. Speaker, you would see one or maybe two wells being drilled. If you checked the records of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, you would find that there were very few new wells scheduled to be drilled off the coast of Nova Scotia. Yet, on March 29, the Minister stated proudly that companies involved in the drilling ventures had told her personally that the removal of the petroleum and gas revenue tax would be one of the greatest incentives to continue drilling on the Scotian shelf. She added at that time that she had received assurances of the reinvestment of $800 million a year from those companies working in the Atlantic off-shore, and that the removal of five different taxes meant that they will "invest more money in the East Coast".

Why is Nova Scotia down to one or two rigs when there were nine in 1984? It is a national disgrace that the Government is jeopardizing and jettisoning a policy of frontier exploration which has kept the country in such good stead and has held so much promise for the future of our energy security of supply.

When the Minister made a statement introducing her policy entitled Canada's Energy Frontiers, which led to the introduction of Bill C-92, she talked about the existing legislation. She said that it robbed Canadians of opportunities and very seriously impaired the economic and energy potential of the country. There was a great deal of activity on the frontiers under the legislation brought forward by the Liberal Government. As I mentioned, nine rigs were drilling off Nova Scotia alone. Discoveries of resources were made off the coasts of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland and in the Beaufort. These were very promising discoveries which were brought about by the policies which this Government wants to jettison.

In her statement the Minister said that the Progressive Conservative Party has always supported the goals of the National Energy Program, the goals of opportunity, fairness and energy security. What opportunity is there for Canadian companies when the Minister takes away all the incentives they were given and gives them to the multinationals who, rather than drilling, will sit on the reserves of leases they have until the price of oil and gas goes up again? They are not interested in the security of supply or the energy future of the country. What fairness is there when the Minister retroactively takes away the drilling rights which Canadian companies had under their drilling plans filed with the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources and retroactively reduces the number of wells which they can drill? What energy security is there when the Minister takes away the incentive to drill in the off-shore and other frontier areas?

The Minister reneged on giving a loan guarantee for the Husky upgraders in Saskatchewan and Alberta. What kind of security of supply does that provide for? What kind of security of supply can there be when the Government does nothing to stabilize the energy sector in western Canada, the downturn of which is costing jobs for hundreds of western Canadians and many other Canadians as well? In the long-term that will damage the economy of this country which we have moulded and fostered for so many years.

The Minister said:

> In a very constructive reaction to the NEP policies of the previous Government the Progressive Conservative Party caucus released its energy policy principles at Prince Albert in July of 1984, and again in Halifax in August of that year.

She said that one of them was energy resource development as an engine for economic growth. We all heard about the Minister's statement with regard to the engine of our economic growth. She was going to create 100,000 to 300,000 jobs depending upon which day she was making the statement. We were heartened to hear that the Minister believed that she was going to do something for the energy sector in the country. What is the Minister now doing for the energy sector? She has completely backed away from the problems of the energy sector on the frontiers and in western Canada. She has completely forgotten about the commitments she made to Canadians with regard to the development of the energy sector. She made a complete mockery of the commitment to energy resource development as an engine for economic growth.

The second thing proposed by the P.C. Party at Prince Albert and Halifax was energy self-sufficiency. The Government literally abandoned the Husky up-grader. It completely backed away from the problems in western Canada and the dire needs with regard to the tar sands and heavy oil. It has allowed the producers to be gouged by the major oil companies. It has allowed major oil companies to pay producers $3 to $6 less for a barrel of oil than comparable producers get in the United States. Producers in this country are being paid the lowest price in the world for their product. What does this add to energy self-sufficiency?

Increased Canadian participation was the third principle enunciated in Prince Albert and Halifax. The Minister has decreased the incentive of companies in the off-shore not paying tax from 80 per cent to 10 per cent. The incentive of tax-paying Canadian companies has been decreased from 90 per cent to 25 per cent. That is not increasing, but decreasing Canadian participation. The first three principles enunciated in Prince Albert and Halifax have been completely jettisoned, trampled and spat upon.

What about the fourth one? It states that there will be fair treatment for energy producers and consumers. That may be the most ludicrous and hypocritical statement yet. Where is the fair treatment? I have already said that Canadian producers are getting the lowest price in the world for their product. This is encouraged by the Government through the policies of PetroCan. The Parliamentary Secretary said that the Government put a new policy in effect for PetroCan by encouraging it to make money. It is also encouraging the company to gouge the consumer. Canadians are paying a higher price for gasoline than Americans. That has been going on since January. We have been told that there is a flow-through period of 60 to 90 days. Try and tell that to someone who knows the truth. Try and tell that to someone in Alberta who sees the oil going through the refinery and out to the retailers.

This is a very sad situation because people trusted the Tories. That is why they voted them in on September 4, 1984, with such a large majority. They trusted them to do what they said they would, particularly on those four points. The Minister said that Canadians were presented with a choice on energy policy during the election. She said that they voted for a new approach and an end to the National Energy Program. They did not necessarily vote for an end to the NEP per se. They voted for change, yes, but they did not tell the Conservatives to come up with a policy, run an election campaign on that policy, and then completely ignore it once they became the Government.

The Minister said that the energy initiatives the Government has taken to date in the Atlantic and Western Accords, and the measures which were announced at the end of October, 1985, marked the end of the NEP and its replacement by a fair, non-discriminatory and constructive Conservative energy policy. I think we are getting down to the nub of this energy policy. It is built around one thing: the Minister and her Government wanted to do away with the NEP. They became apoplectic any time someone mentioned the National Energy Program. They did not care what they did. They did not care about the damage they inflicted on the producer or the consumer. All they wanted to do was to get rid of the NEP. Through the legislation they have put forward, they will get rid of the NEP. They will also get rid of a lot of things the Canadian people were pleased to have, things such as conservation and producer and consumer protection, things they now wish they had.

We talked about the Government's policies. There are no policies. The Western Accord was brought forward, but that was a position paper. No thought has been given to dealing with changing conditions. The Minister said that for the first time the Western Accord provides for revenue sharing on offshore oil and gas resources on the same basis as on land. There is a very big difference here because offshore resources are a lot more expensive to obtain. Certainly we have to maintain interest in land-based reserves.

The Minister says the accord is based upon the quality of Government and shared management while providing for the national interest and self-sufficiency. Try and tell that to the people of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. Newfoundland was told that this was a new day, this agreement is better than the one the province was offered by the former Liberal Government. The Government eliminated the terrible back-in provision because it favoured Canadian companies and individuals. We cannot allow that to continue. The Government was going to offer a royalty sharing provision. Where is the activity, the exploration and development? Where are the royalties? It is great to have a program which says we are going to get 50 per cent royalties, but if there is no follow through, no development, then 50 per cent of nothing is nothing. That is what the Provinces of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia are getting, nothing, zilch, zero.

What about the Province of Nova Scotia? That province is being punished for signing the agreement. John Buchanan, the Premier, wanted that agreement signed before the House adjourned at the end of June, 1984. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources never forgave him for not having faith in the Conservatives being elected in the ensuing federal election. So the people of his province are being punished. After the Western Accord was signed the Minister said she would sign a new agreement with Nova Scotia. She said, "Just give me a weekend to rest". That was over a year ago and she has been resting a long, long time.

It seems that the companies with deep pockets will be the ones who will produce on frontier lands, not Canadians. Canadians are being frozen out of the frontier by the policies of this Government. Those policies are destroying the principle of Canadianization on the frontier. On the one hand, the Government says Canadianization is an important principle, and on the other hand, Canadianization is being destroyed by these policies. The Government is saying one thing and doing another. The Tories said they increased Canadianization from 42 per cent to 47 per cent since they took over from the former Liberal Government. The Liberal Government increased Canadianization from 28 per cent to 42 per cent. The Tories said they increased it from 42 per cent to 47 per cent. How? By the sale of Gulf Canada to Olympia & York, and the sale of Gulf's downstream assets in Ontario and western Canada to PetroCan. When the former Liberal Government said it wanted to buy PetroFina to create a window on the marketplace for Canadian consumers, so that they could purchase gasoline from their own company, that is what they wanted and what they still want. Now we have not only a window, we have a greenhouse, which is eliminating competition at the refining end. The Government has created a monster in PetroCan. The company, because of the Government, has developed economic rabies; it has turned on the producers and consumers. It is gouging them by paying a low price for the product and charging consumers a price that is far too high for that product.

How has all this started? It started with the policies of this Government because it wants to issue shares of Petro-Canada to the private sector. It wants to piecemeal Petro-Canada, to sell shares to the private sector so Canadians will have to pay for Petro-Canada yet a third time. The first time was when we purchased the companies that now make up Petro-Canada; the second, by the inflated price at the pumps Canadians will be paying; and the third, we will be paying for it in the marketplace so that good brokerage fees will be given to the friends of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Government.

Canadians own Petro-Canada now. They do not have to buy it. They already own it. It is a travesty to make Canadians think that they are going to be better off with a private share placement of Petro-Canada. What is happening now? Where is our security of supply? Our Canadianization is gone. Our security of supply is going. Why is this happening? Where does it stand? I think it is very important to focus on this because some day we are going to look back on this legislation before the House, as we look back on Bill C-85 and we look back on all the policies of this Government, and we are going to condemn this Government from coast to coast for the policies that the Government is putting forward.

What are these policies? The Government is saying that Canada is open for business. With Investment Canada we now have the foreign companies welcome in Canada with practically no review whatsoever, to buy up Canadian companies. As the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) said, Canada is open for business, but Canada is not for sale. Canadian companies are not going to be given away piecemeal to foreign companies. How can this happen in the oil and gas industry? Because the majors have a lot of money. They have cut back their investment, they have cut back their exploration program, they have the money. All they have to do is to wait for the producers to go bankrupt and pick up the existing resource of oil and gas that these small companies have, for bankruptcy prices.

This is where we are going to lose our Canadian companies in the upstream, the resource sector. What is going to happen to our security of supply? The Husky upgrader is not important to this Government. The frontier development is not important to this Government. What is important to this Government? Making the big boys happy is what is important to this Government, not considering the people we brought into the energy field through production, not the consumer, but the movers and shakers with which the Government likes to be associated.

I think that this is a very, very unfortunate piece of legislation. The Government's energy policy is very unfortunate for all Canadians.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of pleasure that I rise to speak on this Bill. I must say that I have been energy critic for the New Democratic Party since 1980 and I have seen these policies come and go. I almost feel as if we had gone full circle.

I want to congratulate the Hon. Member for Erie (Mr. Fretz) on his speech. I did not agree with very much of it, but it was a very thorough speech. He put out his philosophy as he sees it. I want to congratulate the Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. Dingwall), who came after me on the Energy Committee. Without sounding patronizing may I say that he certainly knows what he is talking about in this area.

I want to deal seriously with one aspect that has never been dealt with in this House. I will come to it in a minute. Let me say generally that what this Bill does is to change the oil and gas regime, that is, the exploration and development on Canada's frontiers, that is mainly the East Coast and the Arctic. This Bill turns back the clock, with one or two exceptions. It turns the frontiers, quite frankly, back to the Yanks and to the American oil companies. It is turning and running in the face of American pressure to abandon the National Energy Program. The National Energy Program was successful in the frontiers, mainly because there were massive grants going to the frontiers. The program got Venture going off Nova Scotia, and Hibernia off Newfoundland, and it meant more discoveries in the Beaufort Sea for use of Canadians later on when we have the next energy crisis.

It got Canadian firms involved, both public and private, and it got private companies like Husky-Bow Valley and public companies like Petro-Canada into the frontiers in a much bigger way. It did this by nationalistic policies. It used the power of the state to make sure that Canada gets a fair share of their resources. After all, they are our resources. There was tremendous opposition from the United States Government and from the United States oil companies, and I am sad to say that they eventually have won. This Bill is one of the results of their intensive lobbying efforts.

Let me deal in some detail with the abolition of the Crown share, or the 25 per cent back-in provision which is held by the Government of Canada for all interests in frontier lands. It is a central part of this Bill. The new Bill eliminates the Crown share provision of the Canada Oil and Gas Act, which was an Act passed in 1981 in this House. That Act provided for a 25 per cent share for the federal Government in all interests held in the frontier lands.

Let us go back to see how the Government looked at the situation in 1980. If you put an exploration incentive in place, the federal Government has to pay a subsidy. An exploration incentive is a subsidy. The Government must consider whether you need subsidies in the frontier, and it appears that you do for oil companies to go out there. That is another topic, but apparently that is needed. Is it going to be a tax-based incentive, as it was before 1980, or will it be a grant-based incentive like the PIP program after 1980?

For example, Energy Minister Marc Lalonde was speaking in the House of Commons on January 20, 1981. He said that for years now the Canadian taxpayer has been paying the bulk of the oil and gas exploration expenditures made in the frontier regions. He said that some $4.5 billion to $5 billion has been spent to date. He felt it was fair to say that three-quarters of that, some $3 billion, has been footed by the Canadian taxpayer. He went on to say that more than 90 per cent of every exploration dollar has been covered by the Canadian taxpayer.

I draw to the attention of the House the testimony in the Legislative Committee on Bill C-85 in the committee minutes for February 6, 1986 at page 1:17. I cross-examine Mr. Carruthers and Mr. McDermid. You will see that from 1982 on, the following amounts were spent, and Mr. McDermid said the following:

> In 1982-83 there was $1.441 billion; in 1983-84 there was $1.5 billion; in 1984-85, $1.9 billion has been spent—approximately $4.8 billion to March 31, 1985.

Then I asked him about 1985 to 1986, and he said, $1.5 billion. I asked him for 1986 to the end of the program, and it appears it would be about $900 million during 1986 and possibly another $100 million as the program winds down in 1987. That is a total of $7.3 billion.

We are looking at spending since the 1960s, as Mr. Lalonde said, about $3 billion up to 1982, and about $7.3 billion after that. It is about $10 billion in the frontiers. Under a combination of PIP grants together with tax breaks, our research estimates that the taxpayers put up 93 cents of every dollar spent by a Canadian company and 72 cents spent by a foreign-owned company in Canada Lands. I once coined the phrase that a lot of oil companies drill, they drill in Ottawa, and they strike it rich sometimes. I wish the press would pay me royalties when they use that expression.

Therefore, no matter what kind of exploration incentive is put in place, that is one that is tax-based as before the National Energy Program, before 1982, or grant-based with the National Energy Program, the federal Government would be paying 90 to 100 per cent of the costs through forgoing tax revenue or direct grants. The problem with that was that there was no direct return for this public investment. Thus, the Government decided to take a 25 per cent interest in any oil and gas discovered on Canada Lands when those lands were to be developed in the development phase. There was even an historical precedent for this. For example, the regime prior to 1982 was governed by the 1961 Canada oil and gas land regulation, called COGL. Exploration permits were available under those regulations for a nominal sum, on a first come, first served basis, for a term of nine to twelve years and renewable on terms set by Ottawa. However, these were for exploration rights only. Any subsequent production arrangements under the COGL regulations were provided through negotiated leases. This was legislation under the Diefenbaker Conservative Government.

Let us compare this to the United States system where exploration rights were auctioned off for lots of money to the highest bidder, who got ownership of the rights and ownership of the subsequent production. In Canada, under the Canada oil and gas land regulations, when production started, Ottawa got at least 50 per cent of the acreage on a modified checker-board basis. The point is that the idea of a Crown share in the production phase is supported by this historical precedent.

There is also the Petro-Canada precedent in 1977. Under the renewal provisions of some COGL exploration permits which had expired and which had proven to be barren until then, Petro-Canada was allowed to back in at 25 per cent, which means to acquire 25 per cent working interest, without paying the exploration expenses. The partial result of this procedure was the great discovery of Hibernia off Newfoundland.

Another example is the Sable Island gas exploration in 1979. Petro-Canada's exploration partner, Mobil Oil, had pulled its rigs out of the area in search of more lucrative prospects elsewhere in the world. Petro-Canada farmed in and, after six dry holes, made a significant discovery of gas on the offshore of Nova Scotia. Therefore, in my view, a Government presence in the projects was of immense benefit to Canada. The civil servants thought of this at the time.

StatOil in Norway, their equivalent to Petro-Canada, inherits a minimum 50 per cent ownership in any new oil or gas concession. This equity interest can rise to 70 per cent, depending on production patterns. In addition, most of StatOil's share of exploration costs are picked up by the multinational oil companies.

When Bill C-48 in the previous Parliament went before committee, I called evidence from the StatOil company of Norway. They said that it should be noted that Norwegian petroleum exploration in the North Sea was essentially starting from scratch when Norway introduced its regulatory legislation. It was not necessary for them to take into account previous exploration and development as was the case in Canada Lands, for which the Canadian taxpayers had been footing the bill of some $3 billion, as I indicated.

What was the reaction to the 25 per cent Crown share, or back-in, that was given to Petro-Canada in the production phase? The foreign owned sector of the oil industry, the United States Government and the Tory Opposition angrily attacked it as unfair, discriminatory and a form of confiscation. That is exactly what the Minister stated in his speech today. Of course, it is not confiscation because the COGL permits that were issued and outstanding did not confer any production rights. Therefore, one cannot confiscate a right that was never conferred in the first place. While it is nonsense to suggest that it is confiscation, that is the philosophy behind this Bill.

Outstanding production leases were exempt from the Crown share by grandfathering provisions. Ottawa would also pay for its working interest in the next phase, which is 25 per cent of the development and production costs.

This provision is not confiscatory or retroactive. Therefore, why do the Conservatives want to abolish it? The Bill before the House today represents an historic retreat to the right wing, free enterprise ideologues of the Reagan administration. While the details may be complicated, the principle is simple: Does Canada want freedom to create our own policies in energy or any other area, or must we be dictated to the by United States?

Our foreign affairs critic and our trade critic are in the House. This is exactly what they have been talking about with respect to their areas of concern.

I believe that this issue can only be settled in one way, that is, in a general election. I believe that the broad aspects of this subject will be the major election issue in the next general election.

I should add a footnote that Marc Lalonde, despite his brave words, partly yielded to Mobil and the U.S. Government by amending Bill C-48 in committee to compensate the oil companies up to 1982 for 25 per cent of the Crown-carried interest on exploration agreements. Today, we are seeing a full retreat, which the Government trumpets as a triumph.

The issue has not quite ended because in 1983, Mr. Lalonde allowed the Nova Scotia Government to take 12.5 per cent interest in producing offshore fields through the Crown share. The agreement with Nova Scotia had a 42 year life span. Nova Scotia could have acquired the working interest in producing oil and gas fields until well into the next century. This is now wiped out by the energy policy of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Miss Carney). We should be considering whether Nova Scotia should be compensated. Should the loss of Nova Scotia's Crown interest be addressed by some other means, such as in the equalization formula?

The people of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, where there has been a drastic drop in offshore exploration, are looking for answers and are entitled to them. I suggest that the Crown share issue is not finished as far as Nova Scotia is concerned.

I only have three minutes left, Mr. Speaker. I do not know if the House will allow me another five minutes in order to finish.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Waddell: I invite other Members to deal with this Crown share issue later on in the debate. Some of my colleagues will deal with other aspects of the Bill. When we study this Bill in committee, we will want to examine the pacing of the development to see whether it is in Canada's best interest.

We will want to consider the interests of aboriginal inhabitants, and the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manly) will speak to that next week. The Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) will examine the many environmental concerns that will have to be addressed with respect to this Bill. I expect that the Hon. Member for Comox—Powell River (Mr. Skelly) will want to look at the notion of using a single bidding criterion.

In summary, the Government has embarked on a misguided effort to undo all the wicked provisions which it believes the previous administration applied under the National Energy Program. I suggest that the Government is discarding some valuable tools in the national energy policy. For example, it is eliminating the 25 per cent back in provision that guaranteed Canadian taxpayers a piece of the action in successful oil and gas discoveries in remote offshore locations, through Petro-Canada. Gone too are the powers of the federal Minister of Energy, Mines and Resouces to direct oil and gas activity to reflect national priorities, such as the need for secure supplies, as opposed to shareholders' priorities, which are the maximization of profits. Destined to fade away under this new five-year program are the Petroleum Incentives Program grants which have helped Canadian oil companies to compete with the giant multinationals and have spurred exploration activities in the costly Arctic and East Coast.

While these grants were costly, they were at least up front and visible. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources is replacing these grants with tax credits which will largely escape parliamentary scrutiny. They are precisely the kind of device that the Auditor General, Mr. Dye, complained about earlier this year. They also constitute a greater benefit to the big multinationals which pay more in taxes, than to the smaller Canadian oil and gas companies. However, we will deal with that in another Bill.

In conclusion, the greatest problem we face is that this Bill favours the big American oil companies. It is no wonder that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources is the "oilman of the year".

If we adopt this Bill and turn the clocks back to the days when our frontiers went to the large American multinational oil companies, when the next oil crisis occurs in 1990 we will not be prepared to develop our own Canadian resources. Once again we will have yielded a part of our precious independence to American pressure.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

PRODUCTION OF PAPERS

On the Order: Private Members' Business

September 11, 1985—Mr. Greenaway—That an humble Address be presented to Her Excellency praying that she will cause to be laid before this House copies of all correspondence, notes, minutes of meetings, telephone calls, studies and other communications during the years 1980, 1981 and 1982 between (a) the Regional Director General for British Columbia of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development or any of his officials and Mr. Noll Derriksan or Toussowasket Enterprises Limited (b) Mr. Noll Derriksan or Toussowasket Enterprises or any official or employee of Toussowasket Enterprises Limited and the Indian Economic Development Fund (c) the Regional Director General for British Columbia of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development or any of his officials and the Westbank Development Company or any official or employee of the Westbank Development Company (d) the Regional Director General for British Columbia of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development or his officials and Mr. Ron Derriksan or the Westbank Indian Bank regarding Mr. Noll Derriksan, Toussowasket Enterprises Limited or any official or employee of Toussowasket Enterprises Limited or the Mount Boucherie Trailer Park or any financial arrangements associated with the above (e) the Regional Director General for British Columbia of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and the Headquarters Economic Development Branch of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development regarding Mr. Noll Derriksan, Toussowasket Enterprises Limited or any official or employee of Toussowasket Enterprises Limited, the Mount Boucherie Trailer Park, Mr. Ron Derriksan, the Westbank Indian Band or the Westbank Development Company.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will hear the point of order of the Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour) first.

Mr. Gauthier: He is on debate.

Mr. Kilgour: Not on debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): He cannot get on debate yet.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I have just attempted to contact the Hon. Member for Cariboo—Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway). His office has indicated that he simply could not cancel appointments he had in Vancouver today. I understand the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen) would like to move the motion in his place if he has the unanimous consent of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the House give unanimous consent?

Mr. Gauthier: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Did you say no?

Mr. Gauthier: If I can be allowed to address the point, unanimous consent for someone else to move a motion has been refused before. I do not see how we could accede to that request today without reverting to what I would call previous anomalies in our treatment of various Hon. Members.

I would like to make the point that I think it is about time that the Table and the House itself come to terms with the difficulties at hand here in dealing with Private Members' Hour. I want to make just a few remarks and then I will sit down because I think the Speaker knows very well what the alternatives are.

This is the fourth time out of five hours we have had to forego because of the impossibility of an Hon. Member to be here, for very serious reasons. I am not questioning the reasons. It is because their schedules have been rather difficult to accommodate sometimes. The difficulty, of course, arises from the fact that Hon. Members' initiatives have been dated. There is, therefore, little flexibility in terms of accommodating other Hon. Members who may want to speak or to present other Bills or motions. I, therefore, cannot give my consent to someone else moving the motion in the name of the Hon. Member who is not here basically for the same reasons we invoked the last time, that is, it is a Private Members' Hour and without that particular Hon. Member being here, I think it would be unfair to that Hon. Member, given the situation, to proceed.

I do think it would be fair to all Hon. Members at this time if the House would take it upon itself to resolve this problem, that a House order be adopted and that we resolve the situation in favour of back-benchers and not in favour of the Government.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the Acting House Leader of the Liberal Party—

Mr. Gauthier: The Whip.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am sorry, you are acting as Whip. I apologize. The Hon. Member's colleague, the House Leader for the Official Opposition, on behalf of Members of the Liberal Party, as I understood it, along with the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans), has been discussing this matter and a number of options on behalf of Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party. I, along with my Parliamentary Secretary, participated in these discussions with a view to canvassing propositions which would be put forward to our respective caucuses in the interest of resolving the matter.

I thought we were making progress, but I take there is now not a disposition on the part of the Liberal Party to carry on with these discussions. If the House is going to rule with respect to this matter, so be it. I always remain available to try to resolve these matters by agreement. There are some important issues which I had understood we were going to try to resolve in these discussions with respect to these provisional rules to ensure improvements could take place. These discussions were going to take place in the House Leader's meetings.

I do not think we can do anything about it right now. I am not in a position to address the matter. I have strong views about the interpretation of the rules. I have been trying to negotiate something which would meet with the satisfaction of all Hon. Members. If there is no agreement, I think all we can do is have Your Honour rule as to what we should now do and what happens as far as the business of today is concerned.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I ask the House again, is there agreement?

Mr. Gauthier: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Cariboo—Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway) has notified the Chair that he is unable to be present today to move his motion. As Hon. Members are aware, notice of all the items of Private Members' Business in the order of precedence established by the draw has been published in the Notice Paper pursuant to Standing Order 39(1). Points of order were raised on April 24 and 25 as to the practice that would be followed in the event of an Hon. Member being unable to be present to move his motion on the day fixed according to the order of precedence.

At that time the Chair made an interim ruling, without prejudice to any other ruling which might be made subsequently, in order to allow consultation amongst interested parties. I understand that such consultations are as yet incomplete.

Once again, the Table requires instructions by which to prepare the Order Paper and Notices. Therefore, I will rule without prejudice in the same manner and to the same effect; first, since the House has not yet made clear its wishes as to disposition of Private Members' items not taken up, I am ordering that this item of business in the name of the Hon. Member for Cariboo-Chilcotin drop to the bottom of the order of precedence.

Second, Standing Order 39(2) provides for continuing with or reverting to the business before it prior to Private Members' Hour "in the event of it not being possible to provide the twenty-four hours' notice ... ". Since notice had been published, it is the view of the Chair that Standing Order 39(2) does not apply in this case.

Third, as there is no business before the House at this moment, it is the view of the Chair that the House should adjourn.

Before I move that the House do now adjourn, there is an additional procedural administrative problem related to Private Members' Business.

Hon. Members will be aware that the Government House Leader has designated next Monday, May 12, an allotted day. Pursuant to Standing Order 38, therefore, the hour for Private Members' Business will be suspended. Again, instructions must be given to the Table as to the place on the Order Paper and Notices of the item standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton). The Chair has considered moving back all items in the order of precedence any time an Order of the House causes the suspension of Private Members' Business. However, this would cause disruption to the planning for some 15 Members of Parliament, the debate on whose motion or Bill would be moved to another date.

Therefore, in order to keep changes in scheduling to a minimum and to interfere as little as possible in the notice as published in the Order Paper, the Chair is instructing that the item standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Skeena be dropped to the bottom of the order of precedence.

Again, this decision is without prejudice in the expectation that the House will pronounce itself upon this subject in the near future.

Therefore, there being no business before the House, I have no alternative but to adjourn the House until Monday next at eleven o'clock a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 4.09 p.m.

GOVERNMENT OF CANADA

RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Speaker: I am in receipt of a notice of request from the Hon. Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) who has asked me if he can make a brief personal statement. I have examined a number of the precedents in this area and therefore propose to recognize the Hon. Minister now.

Hon. Sinclair Stevens (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I rise to inform Members of the House that yesterday I wrote the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to ask that he call for an impartial person to conduct an investigation as to fact respecting allegations of conflict of interest which have recently been made in various newspapers, electronic media, and in the House of Commons. As you know, Mr. Speaker, I have complied with the provisions of the conflict of interest code for public office holders. Nonetheless, there seemed to remain sufficient confusion as to fact to warrant an impartial investigation.

In the circumstances, I believe it is in keeping with our parliamentary traditions and practices that I tender my resignation as Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion effective immediately. I can inform Hon. Members that I have so tendered my resignation to the Prime Minister.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. On a point of order, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, we will have an opportunity when you open the debate in a few minutes to comment on this. However, with your indulgence, I have a few things I would like to say at this stage in response to this ministerial statement.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The right hon. gentleman will know that the Chair is always in some difficulty on these matters. When I received the information this morning I checked the precedents regarding Ministers in previous Governments. They had been handled as matters of privilege. The right hon. gentleman is in the hands of the House if he is seeking the right to make a reply.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Without prejudice to whatever we might do on future occasions if this arises again, because of the coincidence of a debate beginning this morning on this issue we will waive whatever rights we may or may not have had in order to await that debate.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I make precisely the same point that the Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition just made. I am assuming we are proceeding with the debate and any other comments which I might have in mind to make about what the Minister has just informed the House will be made in that debate.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

NATIONAL NURSES WEEK

PROCLAMATION OF THE WEEK OF MAY 11, 1986

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, for over 300 years Canadians have been well served by competent and dedicated nurses. Nursing has been developing and growing as a profession in Canada since the time of Jeanne Mance, who is considered to be the first lay nurse in Canada, in the early years of the 17th century. Today nurses continue to distinguish themselves and their profession by their excellent record of achievement in the provision of high quality nursing care.

The contributions of nurses throughout the world in many and varied aspects of health care have been recognized internationally for many years with the declaration of May 12, Florence Nightingale's birthday, as International Nurses Day. In Canada, nurses have played an active and valuable role in the development of health care policies at all levels. Their commitment to the well-being of Canadians is well established and recognized.

The need for nurses in our health care system is such that they constitute over 50 per cent of Canada's health care professionals. Today there are over 180,000 nurses practising in Canada. Nursing is a profession which touches everyone. Nurses reach into the community to care for citizens ranging in age from the newborn to the aged during health and illness. Their presence is felt in the home, the community and the workplace as they provide health care for Canadians in schools, industry, community clinics, hospitals, nursing homes, and in all other types of health care institutions. In recognition of the many contributions of nurses to the health and well-being of citizens of this country, on behalf of all Canadians, I hereby proclaim the week of May 11, 1986, to be National Nurses Week in Canada.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to respond to the Minister's statement on the occasion of the proclamation of National Nurses Week in Canada. About 300 years ago Canada's first nurse and hospital administrator, Jeanne Mance, arrived in Montreal to establish the first hospital in Canada. It was her courage, determination, and caring which set the standard for nursing care in Canada. It is a standard that today's nurses meet and surpass. I need not remind this House of the tremendous contribution made by nurses to our society as health care professionals and care givers. The proclamation of National Nurses Week is a tangible recognition of their efforts and accomplishments.

I would like to remind the Minister, however, of the confusion arising because of the lateness of the 1986 proclamation decision, and I do not believe that is the fault of the Minister. It has been brought to my attention that there will be various provincial nurses' weeks celebrated across the country and, at this late date, it will be difficult to co-ordinate the different celebrations. It has been suggested by the National Federation of nurses' unions that in the future the federal Government make efforts to co-ordinate provincial activities with the nationally proclaimed week.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I am sure I am joined by all Canadians as well as my colleagues on this side of the House in thanking nurses across the country for their dedication and caring.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, today, May 12, Florence Nightingale's birthday, has been declared International Nurses' Day. Nursing in Canada dates back to the time of Jeanne Mance who brought competent lay nursing to Canada in the early 1600s. Today over 180,000 nursing professionals continue that tradition of care for Canadians 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year.

Canadian nurses know their profession and have faith in their ability to provide competent, caring health services, but are concerned about their practice settings when financial restraint and cut-backs in service occurs since, at the level of direct hands on care, all the fat has been trimmed from the bone. Further cut-backs will be dangerous to the health care system. Nurses have clearly expressed their opposition to the federal health care cut-backs outlined in Bill C-96 which amends the formula for federal-provincial fiscal arrangements. The result is that the federal Government's share of health care funding will gradually drop from 50 per cent to 36 per cent by 1990-91 and will be less than 43 per cent in this fiscal year. This decision was unilateral. No negotiations took place with the provinces or the affected health care professionals. Recognition of nurses on Nurses' Day is no recompense for the damage inflicted on nurses, health care workers, and all Canadians who may require such services.

All Canadians welcome International Nurses' Day with the hope that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) will return to a clear financial commitment to health care in Canada by withdrawing Bill C-96.

INTERPARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF CANADIAN SECTION OF CANADA-U.S. INTERPARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 101, I have the honour to present to the House, in both official languages, the report of the official parliamentary delegation of the Canadian section of the Canada-U.S. interparliamentary group which attended the meeting with the steel caucus of the U.S. House of Representatives in Washington, D.C., on April 28 and 29.

PETITIONS

USE OF PENSION INCOME IN CALCULATION OF UI BENEFITS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition today from a number of people from Kamloops, British Columbia, who are concerned about the decision made by the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) that after December 31, 1985, their pension benefits would be deducted from their unemployment insurance benefits, effectively eliminating the benefit to the worker of the pension package. They, therefore, call upon the Government to ensure that all retired employees keep their pension benefits and receive their unemployment insurance benefits without deduction of pension income.

DECOMMISSIONING OF LIGHTHOUSES

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition to the House from many people who live on the east coast of Vancouver Island and the central coast of B.C. They are complaining that the Government of Canada is removing lighthouse services which will eventually impair the ability to conduct search and rescue activities. It will make life on the coast of British Columbia more dangerous. They ask that the Government reinstate this service and, thereby, reinstate the safety of transportation on the coast of B.C.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—GOVERNMENT'S FAILURE TO PROVIDE INFORMATION—ALLEGED CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition) moved:

That this House condemns the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Government for failing to provide full and satisfactory information on the blatant conflict of interest situation involving that Minister.

He said: Mr. Speaker, we learned this morning that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) has offered his resignation to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). We also learned that he has asked the Prime Minister for what he terms an independent inquiry. In responding to that initial announcement we want to warn the Government and alert Your Honour that Parliament will not be stilled. We were blocked in two separate committees from getting to the root of this issue. We have been trying to elicit answers for two weeks during Question Period. A judicial inquiry may well be an attempt to take this matter away from the House of Commons. We are dealing with the comportment of a Minister and the public administration of the country. The Minister is responsible to the highest court of the land which is Parliament. We will not countenance a by-passing of parliamentary review and parliamentary accountability through an attempt to convert this from a matter of parliamentary and political responsibility to a judicial inquiry.

In the last two weeks we have seen a piece-by-piece revelation of a blatant conflict of interest. That conflict of interest has reached such proportions that it not only smells of corruption, but we believe it is corrupt. It is using public office for private gain. No matter what the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) may attempt to convince the country of through his stonewalling, it is a breach of the guidelines introduced by the Prime Minister outlining conduct for his Ministers.

I want to put on the record what the Prime Minister said on September 9, 1985, when he introduced the guidelines. He said:

It is a great principle of public administration—I could even say an "imperative"—that to function effectively the Government and the public service of a democracy must have the trust and confidence of the public they serve. In order to reinforce that trust, the Government must be able to provide competent management and, above all, be guided by the highest standards of conduct.

Those were the words of the Prime Minister of Canada at that time.

In an open letter to all Members of Parliament and Senators bearing the same date, the Prime Minister said:

The new Code leaves no doubt that the ultimate responsibility for the ethical standards of the federal Government rests with the Cabinet and, more particularly, with me.

He went on to say:

You will find no quasi-independent agencies in this Code that will allow the Government to shirk its responsibility by saying that the problem belongs to someone else.

I made that point earlier this morning. The Prime Minister cannot divest himself of his responsibility by shuffling it off to an independent inquiry.

In his letter to his Ministers of the same date the Prime Minister said:

I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of the activities of their spouses or dependent children on the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

I believe that those guidelines cover the issues specifically. In Ontario there is now a sharing of property during the time of a marriage. Anything that Mrs. Stevens was dealing with, her husband owned jointly. In any event, the shares are registered in a majority fashion in his own name.

We brought this motion before the House today because the recently revealed actitivies of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion constitute an obvious blatant and flagrant violation of the spirit and letter of the guidelines issued by the Prime Minister. Yet, the Deputy Prime Minister insisted on trying to bring the Minister's conduct within the ambit of those guidelines.

There will be those calling for the further strengthening and updating of the guidelines. However, apart from the guidelines, what we have here is unethical conduct. It is not possible to codify the whole range of human behaviour. We cannot codify and try to predict every possible conflict and every possible ambit of how a Minister may or may not react in the conduct of his public duty. We must rely on individual judgment, on the ethics of the position and on the understanding by Ministers that they cannot allow their private activities, gain or benefit to interfere with the impartial operation of their public office.

Time does not permit me to outline the whole range of facts that have come to the attention of Parliament. We know about the $2.6 million loan that was solicited successfully by Mrs. Stevens on behalf of her husband, through a company with which her husband was then dealing for tax incentives and grants from the federal treasury. Where was the benefit? An interest-free loan is an obvious benefit and amounted to some $314,000 at interest rates at the time the loan was sucessfully obtained. The very fact of obtaining the loan was a benefit because the Minister and his wife obviously were unsuccessful at getting credit elsewhere. They had already approached the brokerage houses and investment bankers on Bay Street in Toronto in an attempt to get a capital injection, but failed. Presumably, they approached the banks. Finally, they had to go to a company with whom the Minister was dealing to see whether they could get enough liquidity to keep the company going.

There is the earlier $3 million loan from the Korean bank of which 40 per cent of the shares are owned by the Hyundai motor car company which the Minister brought into this country. It is that company from which the Minister freed the requirement of Canadian content and the provision of jobs, all the usual guidelines and rules that are applied within the auto industry to ensure Canadian content. All of that was forgiven; all of that was waived. Was there consideration? We do not know because the Minister has not answered. I believe we can establish that there was clear benefit.

We now have to deal with the second issue of the so-called blind trust. The Minister, on the rare occasions that he spoke, and the Deputy Prime Minister said that the official in the Registrar General's Department assured them that the necessary documentation had been made and the affairs had been put in a blind trust. We asked that National Trust, apparently the blind trustee, be called before the appropriate committee of the House of Commons. The chairman and the Conservative majority on that committee refused to allow that to happen.

Where was the arm's length approach that would constitute a blind trust? The Minister's wife was actively dealing on his behalf for his property or their jointly held property. The Minister tries to maintain that he had no knowledge of that. It strains the belief of the Canadian people that a wife dealing in favour of their jointly held property would not have told her husband about a loan in the amount of $2.5 million that she successfully obtained in order to preserve the liquidity of their prime asset in life. No one believes it. No one believes that a husband and wife, in a matter so important to them, would not have talked about that at some time. Knowledge or no knowledge,I do not understand why she would have done it anyway. Surely her conduct is subject to some type of review, and I am sure we have not heard the end of that. She was actively dealing on the Minister's behalf. Together with the Minister's former campaign manager, who was also an officer of York Centre, the Minister's wife visited the investment houses on Bay Street. It is these same houses that were vying for the job of adviser to the Minister on the privatization of some Crown corporations, such as de Havilland, Canadair, CDC and Teleglobe. The very firms seeking that business are the firms that were visited by the Minister's wife. Did she say what the quid pro quo would be, or was it so implicit in their conversations that the investment houses knew they had to receive her into their offices and talk to her? I will not discuss names because we do not have the full facts.

This matter has not ended this morning. We will look into the interlocking directorships that give some companies an inside track with CDC. The decision as to who would advise and whose bid would be accepted is cozily decided by a group of men and women having close connections to the Minister. Some of them were even appointed by the Minister to the functions that allow them to make those choices and give that advice. It is self-dealing by insiders. It is rotten, and the people of Canada do not have to put up with it at all.

Let us examine the Deputy Prime Minister's defences, one by one. His first defence is that the Minister fulfilled the guidelines. I believe I have convinced Your Honour, having read the particular guidelines, that those were not satisfied. Certainly, in terms of the letter, they were not satisfied and certainly the ethical spirit of the guidelines were rudely, blatantly and ruthlessly contravened.

The Deputy Prime Minister says that the documentation was in order. He expects us to believe that the case has ended because an official in the Department of the Registrar General says that everything is in order. The problem was not with the documentation. The problem concerns the conduct. What did the Minister's wife do? What did the Minister know? Why were these dealings even contemplated?

I say once again that the guidelines are not a complete code of human behaviour because such a code is not possible. We are talking about ethical spirit and the judgment behind the conduct of the Minister's wife and the Minister.

The second line of defence by the Minister was that the deal with Magna Corporation was a Liberal deal. He maintained that all the grants for Magna were agreed to by an administration under my authority in August, 1984. We pointed out to the House in Question Period that that was a Memorandum of Understanding signed by the former Minister, Ed Lumley. It was an over-all umbrella agreement. According to the terms of that agreement, every specific grant and item had to be negotiated by a Minister in the future and had to be approved by the Cabinet in the future. The Minister who just tendered his resignation this morning is the one who was responsible for that. This will go down as the biggest and most deceitful red herring drawn across the trail of those in pursuit of honesty in the history of this country.

Why did the Minister not tell the House and the people of Canada that every cent of funding anticipated in the over-all agreement required his specific approval of each item? Why did he attempt such subterfuge and deceit in the House of Commons?

What is even more disgusting and shocking is the fact that the Minister did not tell the House that another Memorandum of Understanding was signed by him with Magna International on June 14, 1985, when he and the Prime Minister's Government was in office. It was announced in this press release, just one month after the $2.6 million loan was arranged by his wife, through a numbered company.

[Translation]

Why did the Minister not table this second memorandum as well? What is he trying to hide? Were there other memoranda we have not heard about? Were there other incidents? Question period after question period, will we have to sit here in the House, according to your very narrow interpretation of the Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker. Why did the Minister not make a statement before the House? Why didn't the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), before he left for China, make a statement on his investigation of his Minister's activities?

[English]

This is absolute subterfuge.

The third line of defence was that there was no proof. Yet, the facts have been overwhelming. The media has done excellent research on this matter. There has been no denial by the Minister, no explanation and no statement. Before he left, the Prime Minister said we had to allow the presumption of innocence, that a man was innocent until he was proved guilty.

• (1130)

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You find that offensive.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I do not find that offensive at all. That is quite in order in a criminal matter. This is not a criminal matter, yet—which has nothing to do with the matter of public administration. In public administration a Minister has the burden of proof, the duty to show that what he is doing is beyond reproach. The burden of proof is not on Parliament. It is not on the opposition, nor the media. The burden of proof is on the Minister—

An Hon. Member: And the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —to show that his conduct is absolutely beyond reproach. It is obvious that not only was there not proper conduct, there certainly was not an appearance of proper conduct. The Prime Minister just does not understand the full scope of the issues before us.

The Minister was rendered ineffective. Suspicion engulfs him. He has not spoken. The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) did not allow him to rise in this House, and I said to the Deputy Prime Minister in Parliament and on the streets that no Minister can delegate his reputation to a Deputy Prime Minister or even to a Prime Minister. No Minister can delegate his reputation for honesty, for integrity and good conduct. The initial mistake made by the Government and the Deputy Prime Minister was not to allow the Minister to rise. Obviously, there is plenty to hide and the Government is going to use the judicial inquiry as a method of trying to keep it away from the purview of Parliament.

The issue before you, Mr. Speaker, is not just a question of bad judgment. The Hon. Member for Vancouver South (Mr. Fraser) may have exercised bad judgment in the tuna matter but no one in his House ever questioned his honesty or integrity.

An Hon. Member: No?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Not his honesty nor his integrity. I still hold him in high regard. But this is not just a question of judgment, it is a question of ethics, honesty and comportment in the public affairs of this country.

I think I began speaking at 17 minutes after the hour, Mr. Speaker, and I get 20 minutes so I think I have another five minutes.

Mr. Speaker: Absolutely. I apologize. I had noted 11.16 a.m. The Hon. Member is absolutely right, he has another five minutes.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, this is not merely a question of bad judgment. This goes right to corruption. This is a mingling of the public and private interests. The question Parliament is entitled to ask, and the question Canadians are already asking, is why did the Prime Minister tolerate this for so long? He must have made an independent investigation of where the Minister stood and what were his dealings. If he did not, he was negligent. If he did make these investigations, did he expect he was going to be able to ride this out? Where does the Prime Minister stand? Did he not ask for an inquiry? This issue has contaminated his Government. It has brought his Government into disrepute. It is just another item in a series of events and ministerial conduct which shakes the people's confidence and trust in the Prime Minister and the Government he leads.

We do not know what went on in Korea or China over the weekend. Obviously the Prime Minister's commissars said to him: "Look. This is out of control. We want to clean this up before you come home. It has already pushed you off the front pages and we want you to come home as a hero". That is a joke. They want him to come home a hero from the Chinese and Japanese trip. The Prime Minister is on the Great Wall of China and his Deputy Prime Minister and his Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion are grovelling in the mud trying to defend the scandal here in Canada.

Mr. Gauthier: He is on the Wall and they are stonewalling.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Why did the Prime Minister react? It was not because he had a sudden attack of morality. He must have received the polls. He must have been on the phone to Allan Gregg who is more responsible and more powerful than any Minister on the front benches. He probably told him: "Get out of this thing before you come home". The Government tried to ride it out. It put the Deputy Prime Minister in charge and tried to ride it out. I am now convinced that unless a lack of proper conduct is discovered by the public or by Parliament, unethical as it may be, it will be tolerated by the Prime Minister. The morality of the matter is irrelevant. The polls are very relevant. The shedding of his image on his foreign trip is very relevant.

This issue here is the morality of Government and our confidence and trust in our democratic institutions. Freedom is a very fragile thing. Cynicism can eat away at it. Cynicism and lack of proper conduct in public office can erode it. That is what has been happening. The Prime Minister hopes to come home clean. He is contriving not to have to face the music when he steps into this Chamber in a few days. I do not believe it is going to work. Even the resignation of his Minister will not rescue the lost ethical standards of the Government.

The issue goes right to the heart of the Government and right to the Prime Minister himself. Why is this type of conduct tolerated? Why was the Minister not asked to resign immediately? Why did the Government try to ride it out? Why were the Ministers not forthcoming, particularly the Minister in question? Why was the Conservative majority on two committees of Parliament used to close down and clamp an investigation? The Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) is here. We support his reform. Why was the committee system not used for what it should be used?

I know Members of Parliament on the Government side cannot be feeling good this morning. This is not a good day for the country, nor is it a good day for Parliament. It is not a good day with respect to the way we run our affairs. However, despite it all, despite the largest majority in Canadian history, the truth is out. The Minister has resigned. It has been a great victory for Parliament.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, this is a very unfortunate debate to have to take place in the House of Commons now in May of 1986, or at any time. I want to say at the outset, having heard what the Minister said this morning, that in my judgment, rarely, if ever, has a Minister so failed to make a distinction between his private interests and his public responsibilities as in the case of this Minister. Rarely, in my judgment, has a resignation been more appropriate. This resignation, however, ought not to have happened today, but two weeks ago at the earliest. In that interim, I want to say now, the Minister violated not simply the guidelines in terms of the issue of appearances, but the substance of the guidelines, and I will come to that in a moment.

Before doing so, I want to say that the performance of the Government for the past two weeks has been totally lamentable. Whatever the Minister knew before April 29, he did know on April 29 that his wife had obtained a $2.6 million loan with no interest charged in the first year and with incredible terms after that. He knew that that loan was made with people intimately connected with his own Department and that he was doing continuing business as a Minister with the same individuals. Any Minister with a sense of responsibility ought to have on that very day submitted his resignation.

I also want to say that what we have heard in the interim is a stonewalling from the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen). Day after day the man who assumed responsibility for the guidelines, instead of ensuring that his Cabinet lived up to them and that the dignity of Parliament was respected, gave us stonewalling. We got more than that. It was suggested that Members of the Opposition who raised questions were not interested in jobs in Quebec. It was also suggested that we did not want new investment in Cape Breton Island. There were all types of spurious, erroneous, irrelevant and unjust arguments made by the Government in defence of its very unjust case. That is what Members of the Government were up to.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I also want to say that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), who is away, cannot be absolved of responsibility. I am assuming that he did not hear the news before the rest of us heard it. I will even assume that he did not hear of Mrs. Stevens' loan before Mr. Stevens himself heard of it. However, as Prime Minister, before his departure for Japan, Korea and China when he heard of the nature of the loan to the wife of this Minister who had ongoing responsibilities with people and individuals intimately involved in his personal financial affairs, a Prime Minister who has a sense of probity, ought to have said right at that moment: "Mr. Stevens, I need your resignation, and I need it now". That is what he ought to have done.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: The following is something which I wish to emphasize. If that had been done two weeks ago, then Mr. Stevens' credibility as a Minister might well have been preserved, and as has already been pointed out by the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner), if the Government had acted at the proper time, the credibility of Mr. Stevens down the road might have been preserved.

As has also been pointed out by the Leader of the Official Opposition, we on this side of the House have not said at all that there was any dishonesty involved or any criminal wrongdoing. We are not aware of any, nor have we suggested that there was any. What we are saying, and what we have been saying, is that there has been a conflict of interest. However, the Government's refusal to face up to its moral responsibilities has not only damaged Parliament, since that is also what is involved in all this, but it has perhaps damaged beyond repair the personal reputation of the Minister in terms of his being able to move back into another portfolio.

The case I wanted to make before we heard of the Minister's decision this morning is that the Government and the Minister have failed to meet the existing guidelines. The Minister has done so in a way which ought to have been obvious to anyone. It was something which was obvious to the people of Canada. Everywhere one travelled in the past two weeks it was not necessary to bring up the issue. I am sure this is something which members of the Government knew very well. Wherever one went people were saying: "What is going on? When is Mr. Stevens going to do the right thing?"

I wish to put a couple of points on the record since Members on both sides of the House know that this type of matter is extremely unpleasant. It is not something with which Members of Parliament like to deal. I am sure there may be one or two individuals in the House who enjoy this type of thing. I even see some smirks on the faces of Members opposite. However, I wish to say to the Government House Leader that some of us do not enjoy—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: What smirks?

Mr. Broadbent: I saw a smile, and the implication was that perhaps some people—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Take it easy.

Mr. Broadbent: I wish to say to the Minister that there are a great many people who would rather be discussing other matters than the matter of conflict of interest in the House of Commons. If the Government had done the right thing, we would not be discussing it now.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You're disgusting, that's what you are.

Mr. Broadbent: We will hear what the Minister has to say in a few minutes. I wish to say that the point we want to make on this matter has been a point embedded, in our view, in the parliamentary system since democracy evolved in parliamentary democracies, but more recently in different Governments. I wish to quote from the guidelines laid down by a previous Conservative Prime Minister, the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) when he headed the Government of Canada. In those guidelines he stated:

> Ministers must perform and appear to perform their official responsibilities and arrange their private affairs in a manner that will conserve and enhance public confidence and trust in Government and that will prevent conflicts of interest from arising.

That was the general principle enunciated by the former Prime Minister in terms of his guidelines.

I would now like to quote from the principles of the guidelines outlined by the Right Hon. Pierre Elliot Trudeau when he headed the Government in 1980. I quote from the then Government House Leader who stated:

> Ministers should also bear in mind their individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might conceivably arise or appear to arise out of dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

So although there was not a specific provision for spouses in the 1980 guidelines, as there was in the guidelines of the Clark Government, there was a very specific principle laid down to the effect that the financial activities of spouses were seen to be covered, even if the technical detail of a trust for spouses was not.

I now come to the task force set up by the former Government which was jointly chaired by Michael Starr and Mitchell Sharp. The point they make in their recommendations is: "These guidelines do not directly apply to spouses". This is what the Government ultimately accepted. They recommend:

> It goes without saying that Ministers must not transfer their assets to their spouses or dependent children with a view to avoiding the requirements of these guidelines. Ministers should also bear in mind their individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might conceivably arise or appear to arise out of dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

Finally, I wish to quote from the words of the Prime Minister himself as set out in the letter he sent to all Ministers accompanying the present set of guidelines. It was the Prime Minister himself who stated:

> However, I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of activities of their spouses or dependent children or the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

I wish to say that if the last point coming from the Prime Minister himself to his Ministers accompanying the set of guidelines had been acted upon by the present Minister, we would not be having this debate today.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we have had a blatant violation of all these principles by the Minister and others who are accountable to the House of Commons, and the arguments presented by the Government in support of Mr. Stevens since the beginning of this affair are deplorably weak.

These arguments are based exclusively on Mr. Stevens' statement that he had put his assets in a blind trust, at the appropriate time and in the appropriate manner.

The Minister carefully avoided answering charges that he failed to conform to other requirements drawn up by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney).

Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister had a responsibility to ask for the Minister's resignation before he left for Japan. Since then, I may point out that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) has shown incredible insensitivity. He has shirked his responsibilities. Whether the Minister was aware or not of the loan obtained by his wife at the time she obtained it, he should have resigned immediately. He should have resigned on the very day he heard about the loan—that is, on April 29—because he was personally implicated in decisions involving millions of dollars regarding businesses and individuals with close links to the person who obtained the loan, which is indeed the case, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Among others there are three different categories of facts which should have led one to have believed that the Minister was in a conflict of interest situation. First, there is his own appointments to the Board of Directors of the CDIC. These appointments include people intimately, personally, and financially associated with the Minister in the past. In terms of their own business interests and their new responsibilities, they now have, in our judgment, a direct conflict of interest.

Second, Mrs. Stevens, as we have learned in recent days, was continually active on behalf of the family business in attempting to make special deals, or to make particular deals with a number of brokerage houses in Toronto, the same brokerage houses which had been selected by the Minister to do work for his Department.

The third item is what I really want to talk about in terms of making my case. It is that we have had a violation, not simply of the appearance of the conflict of interest principle, but the reality of it rests with the $2.6 million loan which Noreen Stevens made on highly advantageous terms from Mr. Anton Czapka whose business connections with the Minister's Department remain very close to this day. One could make this argument at a number of levels. First, there is the appearance of wrongdoing. In 1974, the Minister himself said the following:

It's not enough to be technically correct—you have to appear not to be covering up.

One could make a very good case for the guidelines, to which I have already referred, having been violated in terms of appearance. But I wish to make what I think is the stronger case, that we are not simply talking about the appearance of the violation of the guidelines, we are talking about the reality. Why do I say that? I would ask Hon. Members of the House to follow along with me while I list what I think are self-evident truths and steps which ordinary Canadians would automatically assume to be proper consequences.

We know that the Minister's so-called blind trust originally included shares in York Centre, his own family business. When he originally set up the blind trust, the family business, by definition, went into that trust. We know that Mrs. Stevens received this $2.6 million loan interest-free for one year. In fact, she does not have to make another payment until the end of the second year.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): She can renegotiate it.

Mr. Broadbent: And she can renegotiate it. We know that she received this loan from one Anton Czapka in order to bail out the family company. We also know that Mr. Czapka and his son hold key positions with companies dealing directly with the Minister's Department.

Quite apart from whether or not the Minister's original company shares that were put into the blind trust are still there, something which we do not know, we do know that the Minister has a direct financial interest in his wife's financial well-being. There is no question about that in terms of one's normal understanding and in terms of family law in the Province of Ontario where they both reside.

We also know that the Minister and his wife want to keep their business. Particularly, they will have that in mind when the first payment comes due a year from now and when they may have an interest in renegotiating the terms of the loan.

Next, we know that it would be clearly in the best interests of the Minister to have Mr. Czapka in a good frame of mind when the renegotiation or the first payment comes up. We know that the Minister has to make decisions in his Department involving auto parts companies almost every week, decisions that could be quite directly beneficial to Mr. Czapka and could be very conducive to keeping Mr. Czapka in a positive frame of mind.

I want to make the next point because no one is talking about honesty here. We know that this kind of a position could distort an honest person's judgement. It could distort the judgement of an honest person who happens to be a Minister of the Crown. That is what a confict of interest is all about.

If we follow the sequence of steps, we know that the Minister, having a direct interest in the financial outcome of a series of decisions, is in a position of conflict of interest—not in appearance but in reality. Therefore, he ought to have resigned the day he heard of that loan. Instead, he was responsible for two weeks of parliamentary time that could have been used for other important matters.

I would like to conclude my comments by making some suggestions. First, I wish to give tribute to some of my colleagues who have brought the issue before two committees of the House and have joined with other opposition Members in a sincere effort to get the Committee on Privileges and Elections to look into this issue. They were denied that access by Conservative back-bench Members who sat on the committee.

I am now proposing, quite apart from the announcement made by the Minister earlier, that the suggestion made by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) that the Committee on Privileges and Elections now be given a mandate to have a fresh look at the conflict of interest guidelines ought to be pursued.

I would like to suggest that the committee also look at the guidelines of the former Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Those guidelines were tougher in 1979, particularly with reference to spouses. It seems to me that those of us who accept the equality argument that there ought to be equal division of assets between spouses, something which is long overdue in this country, have to accept the corollary of that, which is that a marriage is in part an economic unit and therefore any effective guidelines for Ministers must have detailed specific reference to their spouses.

I also suggest that the committee look at the need for tougher regulations pertinent to blind trusts. For example, if a Minister puts shares in a trust, he or she ought to assume that those shares are still there and that the Minister has a financial interest in what happens to them unless informed that they have been sold. That kind of requirement exists in the United States where there are tougher trust guidelines.

The final suggestion I make is that the suggestion of the Sharp-Starr task force that there ought to be a person independent of the Prime Minister responsible for enforcement of conflict of interest guidelines be looked at with a great deal of care by the committee. It seems to us to have a lot of merit.

In conclusion, this has been a messy, unpleasant business involving the resignation of a Minister of the Crown. I suppose the only good news that has come out of all this is that the Parliament of Canada does an effective job from time to time.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I cannot help but commence my remarks today with something on which I wish to touch later on. I think the speeches we have heard up to now were prepared in advance of the announcement made by my colleague, the Hon. former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. Unfortunately, in my humble estimation, the speeches did not reflect that and were made to be delivered in any event, still full of all the weaknesses and deficiencies with respect to this issue that prevailed in the Opposition approach during the course of this debate.

Some Hon. Members: Blame everybody else.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Hon. Members are saying that I blame everybody else. Unfortunately, I think that that is precisely what the Opposition has been doing over the course of the last two weeks.

In preparing for today's debate, I took time to reflect on the events of the past few days and the terms of the motion put by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) this morning. I doubt that any Member could participate in this debate without stopping to consider the importance of this institution and our role in it. Without wanting to over-simplify the matter or to run the risk of seeming trite, I believe that we have to remind ourselves from time to time of the central principles of public service and the public good which must govern our deliberations in this place.

The charges, innuendo and political manoeuvrings which have dominated the House and its committees in the past two weeks have added what I consider to be a particularly unedifying chapter to parliamentary history. In a sense this is understandable because the strategies employed have centred on short-term issues, the inevitable by-product of the political process.

The House of Commons is a place of strong feelings, focused issues, harsh critiques, and fleeting concerns. This means that all too often it becomes a cathedral of the here and now. Debate on significant issues becomes reduced to black and white assertions of dogma which serve neither to provide new insights nor to contribute to national reconciliation. However, I do not believe that this is an inescapable pattern. Moreover, I think the Canadian public has the right to expect better of us. Indeed, Canadians have a right not only to expect the very best of each of us but have a responsibility to accept nothing less.

Keeping those responsibilities in mind, the actions of Members in the past few days bear most lamentable testimony to the public trust vested in Parliament. It would be presumptuous of me to attempt to speak for all Members, but I believe my experiences since first coming to this place as a political assistant in the 1950s, and subsequently, have left me with a clear perspective on service in the House. A large part of my political experience was gained while in opposition. I understand what it means to have to spend one's day looking for issues which will capture media attention.

[Translation]

I understand it may be necessary to find topics that are easily condensed into 20-second items for the national news. I also realize it is easier to sell sensational news than substance. However, I am sure that in the final instance, the public will judge not only the Government's mistakes and achievements but also the Opposition's actions and its proposals for intelligent alternatives. This last item is essential if we are to maintain a healthy parliamentary system. Without debates on substance, Parliament will be useless.

[English]

Looking back to the sense of renewal, optimism, and national purpose which prevailed at the outset of the Diefenbaker mandate, and indeed that of subsequent administrations, I am struck with the sense of purpose and vision that each new administration brings to this place. That vision cannot be sustained for long in the face of obstructive and unrelenting negative opposition. When in this manner Parliament allows the transitory issues of the day to divert it from its original mandate, it fails all Canadians—

Mr. Nunziata: Look at yourself in the mirror.

Mr. Cassidy: Look in the mirror.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members listened attentively to the speeches of the first two Leaders. It seems to me that the same courtesy is appropriate.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I regret very much that the Opposition, on an issue which it brought to the House, refuses to allow members on the government side to be heard. It speaks of the message which I am trying to get across, and I think the Canadian people understand that very clearly.

Mr. Penner: Are they giving points for hypocrisy today?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I would have thought opposition Members might understand that there is sense in listening to debate. I disagree very strenuously with the Opposition positions that have been put forward. However, I displayed courtesy by listening to the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and to the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent). I did not spend my time sitting in the House caterwauling and trying to shout down their positions with which I disagree. That is something about which I might want to speak in the House of Commons, but Canadians do not want irresponsible opposition with Members standing and shouting down people who are trying to speak out in legitimate debates. I think Parliament has reached just such a crossroad. Over the course of the past few days the House has engaged—

Mr. Keeper: Why don't you speak to the issue?

Mr. Kempling: Why don't you shut your mouth, or I will come over and shut it for you.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Gauthier: Did you hear that? Physical threats now.

Mr. Marchi: Civility!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is entitled to make his speech without interjections on either side, please.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I think the Opposition has conducted this assault on the character and conduct of a Member of the House of Commons, a Member of the Ministry, without spelling out any specific charges—

Mr. Broadbent: Oh, come on!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —without providing any evidence of a breach of the established Code of Conduct, without outlining any specific recommendations for improvements to that Code, without concern for the rules of the House or its committees, and without concern for the long-term implications its actions hold for that Member of this institution.

The motion which we are now debating today serves as a perfect example of those tactics. It condemns without showing cause. It provides no suggested course of action. It does not permit the House to vote and thus reach a conclusion. It furthers the objectives of those who seek to wound through innuendo.

If I may, I should like to take a few moments to expand on each of these themes. The history of Parliament is not one of a tepid debating society. Quite the contrary, this institution has long been a place where the clash of passions, personalities, and ideas have led to vigorous debate and harsh criticism. There can be no doubt that this House, which was developed from the model of the Parliament at Westminster, has not had an entirely calm and passionless past. We all understand that the width of the centre aisle in the Mother of Parliaments was that of two sword lengths because at one time it prevented real bloodshed. Parliament has grown to be the central democratic institution of our nation by being the forum for the combat of the mind. It replaced the much less constructive forms of combat which preceded it. When we agree to join this combat, we must do so on the understanding that there are certain rules of conduct which govern it so that it is fair to all sides. Over the past hundreds of years these rules have been refined and improved upon to ensure that reasoned debate and argument takes place rather than open warfare, and that the Government of the day is properly held to account.

[Translation]

Many years ago, this House adopted the practice of refraining from attacks on the behaviour of a Member of this House without first establishing precise and detailed charges regarding the behaviour in question.

[English]

For two weeks now we have seen an anomalous situation develop where innuendo and supposition have formed the basis of just such an attack, yet no charge has been laid.

Mr. Broadbent: What were the innuendoes?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I think all Hon. Members would agree that there is value in adhering very closely to our practices, for it is this very body of practices which helps to keep this institution operating, particularly in times of stress.

I heard the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party ask about innuendoes. During his remarks he indicated that there was absolutely no allegation of wrongdoing. He complained that somehow there was some type of appearance of wrongdoing, but he did not suggest that there was any wrongdoing on the part of the Hon. Minister. He is now telling me that he is carrying on in this debate without laying any specific charges of wrongdoing.

Democracy is often a fragile and delicate flowering of what is best in the nation from which it springs. However, no democratic people ever have but one view of what ought to be done. We must therefore develop the means to arrive at compromises between conflicting interests. If we begin to tear down those practices which make democracy possible, then we risk serious consequences.

If the House reflects upon the last two weeks and considers the consequences of destroying, or at least conveniently ignoring long established practices, I think many Members will conclude, as have I, that this is not the appropriate way to proceed.

The motion before us for debate today does not tend to reasoned consideration. Like the many unsubstantiated allegations which have appeared in newspapers over the last two weeks, this motion is nothing but supposition based upon innuendo. This debate should have provided the ideal opportunity, yet the Opposition did not attempt to lay a charge or to seek an inquiry to determine the facts, nor indeed to make any constructive suggestion at all. We all know that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promulgated a Code of Conduct for public office holders on September 9, 1985. Moreover we also know that he wrote at the same time to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition asking for his suggestions and co-operation in extending that Code. The Prime Minister has yet to receive a reply to that letter.

I hold the view that standards of conduct must be generally agreed and supported in order to ensure that they are fairly applied to everyone. In the circumstances I believe that some statement of substantive position from the Leader of the Opposition on the matter of the Code of Conduct is long overdue.

I have listened with great interest to find out where the Leader of the Opposition stood with respect to the Code of Conduct. His position, if I may just put it in one sentence, is that there is no such thing as a Code of Conduct that is enforceable. I take it that is also the position of the Liberal Party.

Mr. Broadbent: You even make babies cry.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I take the support I am getting from the galleries as cries of support and a cry of condemnation for the Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I believe we are entitled to find out from the Leader of the Opposition where he stands on a code of ethics. He has been absolutely silent on his position—

An Hon. Member: It's better than yours anyway.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I do not say this in a condemnatory, way but there was an opportunity here which could have elevated the debate for the Leader of the Opposition in his first motion in this trimester and enabled him to set down some constructive suggestions on the resolution of a particular situation, but we have had nary a word. If the code is not to his satisfaction, let him make his position absolutely clear.

We live in a society that not only permits but encourages individuals to hold diverse views. We foster freedom of speech and association because we believe that the validity of various ideas and opinions must be tested in the crucible of the public forum. This willingness to accept the existence of conflicting and contradictory points of view is one of the primary strengths of our democratic system.

It is, however, imperative that we recognize that our willingness to entertain an infinite variety of opinions on a given subject does not translate into a willingness to allow an individual to conduct himself or herself in whatever manner he or she happens to feel is appropriate. In a very basic sense,, that is why we have developed a set of laws, a jurisprudence, to which individuals may refer to measure the appropriateness of their behaviour.

This view is encapsulated in the principle that the rule of law is preferable to the rule of man. But how to structure the law so as to achieve the legitimate ends of society while not unduly infringing upon the rights of the individual is a question with which we as legislators are forced to grapple every day. There is no formula that is, a priori, right or wrong. The final product, the law, will hopefully reflect the balance that we are trying to achieve. However, once that law is adopted we have, for better or for worse, provided a set of rules which establishes a standard of behaviour for everyone.

I have made these rather basic observations about the difference between subjective opinion and objective standards of conduct because this is a distinction that is critical to the matter under debate today. Subjective opinion, no matter whether or not it is well founded, should not and cannot take the place of codified objective standards of conduct.

On September 9, 1985, when the Prime Minister tabled the conflict of interest and post employment code for public office holders he established just such an objective standard of conduct. That Code provides in some detail a set of compliance measures. It requires that all Ministers of the Crown follow those measures and, in so doing, comply with the code.

[Translation]

To the best of my knowledge, every one of my Cabinet colleagues and myself have followed the very letter of the conflict of interest guidelines. That is how things should be and that is how they must be.

[English]

But, Mr. Speaker, I would ask you to reflect on just how fundamentally unfair it is to establish an objective set of rules and then to claim that in addition there is a further subjective set of standards which also apply. No one can be expected to meet those new standards for the simple reason that one can ever know for certain and in advance precisely what they are.

Notwithstanding the sound and fury generated by the Opposition in the past two weeks, there has been no suggestion that the Code has not been complied with. The Opposition chooses to make accusations of non-compliance with standards, such as they are, which are known only to them. Today's motion seeks to condemn the Government for "failing to provide full and satisfactory information on the blatant conflict of interest situation involving the Minister". Yet that motion, in itself, presumes what it seeks to condemn. It provides no basis for the allegation of conflict of interest. In fact, on a strict reading of the motion the question of whether there was a conflict of interest is not even open to debate. In this sense, the approach taken here is similar to that taken by the Opposition throughout this debate, pose a loaded question and then proceed to make the facts fit the premise.

The Opposition alleges failure to provide full and satisfactory information, yet provides no yardstick against which to measure the phrase "full and satisfactory". Are we to presume that this is to mean what the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) says it means or what the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) says it means or what the Press Gallery says it happens to mean? The approach taken is reminiscent to that taken in Lewis Carroll's—

Mr. Althouse: Charles Dickens, a Christmas Carol?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: —when he referred to Humpty-Dumpty. He said:

> When I use a word it means just what I choose it to mean—neither more nor less.

However, in the case before us, not only has the Leader of the Opposition established his own definitions for the words "full and satisfactory", but he refuses to tell us what they are.

The Opposition complains of non-compliance with its standards only after the conduct about which it complains had taken place. There is a principle at law, Mr. Speaker, that conduct cannot be sanctioned retroactively. Yet that is precisely what the Opposition is attempting to do in this case. You may agree or disagree with the provisions and appropriateness of the Code of Conduct, just as you may agree or disagree with any other codified standard of behaviour, but surely even if you disagree, it is unfair in the extreme to pillory someone for meeting those standards. In such circumstances, instead of attacking the individual, the Opposition's energy might better have been directed toward suggesting improvements to the Code. Regrettably, and to the Opposition's discredit, it has not yet seen fit to do so.

[Translation]

It is absolutely unfair to proceed the way they have been proceeding, because they gave their tacit consent to the Code. Now they think they can get some political mileage out of it, they have decided to add a new, imaginary chapter to the code.

Ministers are obliged to conform to the rules as they exist today. As for the imaginary rules of the Opposition parties, we have been waiting for them since February 9, 1985.

[English]

I might also say that if a charge is going to be advanced, one should always keep in mind that the reputations of public figures are hard won but easily lost. While the fact of parliamentary immunity makes it very easy to allege misconduct, such an allegation ought not to be made lightly.

I am sure that we are all aware of examples where the stigma of wrongful accusation endures long after it has been proven groundless. That is why it is appropriate that such charges be made only on substantive motions where the Member carrying the motion has the burden of proof and the House is provided with an opportunity to decide the question. The motion before us today has neither of those two fundamental prerequisites.

In reflecting upon the events of the last week, I have become concerned that this Parliament has been diverted from the essential issues facing the nation. Unfortunately, although this diversion has occurred, it will not result in a constructive outcome. That time could have been spent considering issues as varied as the Tokyo Summit, efforts to improve economic returns to farmers, the nuclear disaster at Chernobyl, the ongoing scourge of terrorism, or any number of other important issues. It might even have been spent considering what changes, if any, could be made to the conflict of interest code to improve its effectiveness. In doing so, we would have been fulfilling the role for which we were elected. We would have been dealing with the important issues of the day in the context of the fundamental directions charted for this Parliament, that is, national reconciliation, enhancement of social justice and economic renewal.

My colleague the Minister performed an honourable act today in tendering his resignation. I am disappointed that, under the circumstances, the speeches made by the Leaders of the two Opposition Parties did not recognize that fact and were not supportive of the Minister who has taken this very important step.

Mr. Deans: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member seeks to ask a question. The Chair had not called for questions on the first speech, therefore did not call it on the second speech, and therefore intends to move to the next speaker.

Mr. Deans: On a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans).

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, it is not the Chair's prerogative but, rather, a Member's prerogative to rise and indicate the desire to ask a question. If no Member rose and indicated that desire in the first two speeches, that should not in any way interfere with my right to ask a question.

Mr. Speaker: The point of order is on the Hon. Member's side and I agree with him. What the Chair is trying to point out is that the Chair normally calls the question and answer period and did not earlier. It therefore left the Chair in the position where it would have had to interrupt the Hon. Member's Leader to come back to a question and answer period. The Hon. Member is absolutely correct on the point of order, therefore, if he wishes to continue with his question?

Mr. Deans: Yes, quite frankly I want to ask a question. It is a simple question. Why is the Government House Leader now defending the conflict of interest position of the Minister when up until now it had been claimed to be the prerogative of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) to undertake that kind of action? Where is the Deputy Prime Minister now that we need to hear from him about what happened?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I find that to be a curious, indeed mischievous question. He knows that in these debates representatives from each Party have an opportunity to speak. He also knows that the Deputy Prime Minister is here during Question Period on a daily basis subject to questions placed by the House Leader for the NDP or anyone else in the House. The mere fact that a particular Member does or does not participate in a particular debate is hardly worthy of observation. I could have easily asked him the question: Why do we have to sit through his Leader's speech? Why didn't he speak for his Party?

Mr. Deans: My question is not as to his presence or absence, my question has to do with the fact that the Deputy Prime Minister indicated for two weeks that he and he alone was asked by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to be in charge of and answer to the conflict of interest issue. Now that we have something to deal with, questions which could be answered by the Deputy Prime Minister cannot be asked because he does not deign to show up for the debate.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Such a comment is of course out of order.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, to show the fact that the Hon. Member is not being responsible, he presumes what is going to transpire for the rest of the day. Does he now know who our speakers are? Does he have a list of who is going to speak in this debate? I would like to ask him if he would give me his speakers list, too; I would be very interested.

Mr. Deans: I'll be glad to.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) on a question, please.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, the opportunity to question the Government House Leader has now come open and I want to take advantage of it to try and get to the bottom of this question of unproven allegations. I do not have sworn statements which constitute evidence admissible in a courtroom. However, how can the Minister go on saying day after day that there are unproven allegations when statements have been made by responsible people in the community such as Anton Czapka and Trevor Eyton, statements which have not been challenged by the Government? There has been financial information about the companies involved. Surely these constitute adequate facts from the point of view of Parliament. How can the Minister say it is not proven that money was borrowed from a bank in Korea, or that it was borrowed through the assistance of Magna International or Brascan? What are the facts which require substantiation in order to put the onus on this Government of clearing the Minister's name? That is what I would like to know. What kind of proof is the Government looking for before it acts to enforce its own conflict of interest guidelines?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, through the words of the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) comes proof positive of precisely the point I was making. No one could have articulated the point better than he did just now. I said a lot of statements have been made with respect to what may or may not have transpired concerning dealings, not necessarily by the Minister. However, the fact is that I think the Hon. Member, as a former Solicitor General, understands the necessity of having an element of fairness. He would be the first one to defend that particular proposition. You cannot say on the one hand that there is compliance with the Code of Conduct, and then suggest there is something wrong, that there is a blatant conflict. The allegation in this motion is that there is a blatant conflict of interest, but there is no spelling out of exactly what that conflict of interest is. I can get up and say that the Hon. Member is incompetent. Does that make it a charge subject to debate in this House? Of course not. I would have to list why the Hon. Member is incompetent in the opinion of the House. Nothing of that sort is contained in this motion.

I simply say to the Hon. Member, in fairness, he understands that what is happening here is a repetition of a series of statements quite unrelated to the Code of Conduct; the suggestion is that somehow there are actions which may or may not have been taken. However, there has been no charge specifically that there has been a conflict of interest, and at no time has any Member of the House been prepared to make that charge.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, while in the lobby I thought I heard the Hon. Government House Leader say something to the effect that Parliament has been diverted for awhile from the essential matters facing the nation. Maybe I misheard him but, if that is the case, I would like to ask him what in his opinion is more essential to this nation's business than the integrity of the Government? We in the Opposition are the first ones to say that there are other areas of government activities which could have been probed during the last two weeks. Why has the Government waited so long to call for the inquiry we are getting today? It is two weeks too late. The House could have dealt with other matters in the meantime. It is my opinion that the Government simply waited until public opinion had been cranked up enough that it felt compelled to do something. What is more essential than the integrity of the Government?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I suppose that was the basis of the remarks I made. I listed the procedural ways in which these items can be discussed in Parliament. The way in which they can be discussed is not through what I would call this rather irresponsible motion we now have in front of us for debate. Allegations are being made without substance in fact. The Opposition continues to use that device throughout the debate. I think what the people of Canada want us to do is debate the important issues facing our country. I would think the Hon. Member will understand that if the Opposition decides, as they have, that this is all they want to talk about, with a general broad brush approach and without laying a charge, then that is a very unfortunate way in which to conduct the affairs of this House. There are ways in which the matter can be dealt with under the rules, and I listed those in my remarks. I hope the Hon. Member will read them.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, while the Government House Leader was speaking I was awaiting the defence the Government was going to make of the alleged conduct of his colleague. I thought that if there was anything one could say to contradict what is on the record, that would have been the time to make it. That would have been the moment to have given us facts we were not aware of, or the facts that would contradict those facts which are so clearly on the public record, facts that virtually every interested Canadian knows. I had expected to hear how the conflict of interest guidelines of the Government could be interpreted to exculpate the Minister, to permit him to do what it is that the record so clearly and without contradiction shows he has done.

• (1230)

Yet, we got nothing in the way of defence from the Government House Leader. Never has a Government stood up with so little to say on its own behalf on such a serious matter. We heard accusations that we in the Opposition are being disorderly, that we in the Opposition are, somehow or other, not using the tools at our disposal to make the claim that the Government's conflict of interest guidelines have been violated.

As the facts came out in the last two weeks, the Government had many, many opportunities to contradict them. An inquiry is being launched today. It may well be that there will be the odd fact brought forward by that inquiry. It may well be that the contradictions which may exist in some people's minds will be clarified. However, the essential facts are there.

When the Government House Leader was in the Opposition he once asked, in speaking about Mr. Trudeau's conflict of interest guidelines: "What does the Government want from us?" He asked if the Government wanted them to have coloured photographs of the Minister with his hand in the till. Events do not happen in such a way as to permit the Opposition to deliver coloured photographs of Ministers with their hands in the till. Nor do they happen in such a way as to allow us to get long, sworn statements of testimony to present to the Government for it to deal with.

Responsible people in Canadian society and responsible journalists have put facts on the record about what this Minister's wife did to try to bail out their troubled business, the York Centre Corporation. Every few days new statements have been made by responsible people. The Government has never chosen to deny these statements. Did the company get a loan from the Hanil Bank, a company which is related to Hyundai? The Government did not challenge that it did. That is right on the company's books. Did the company get a loan with the help of the president of Magna International from Anton Czapka, a former big shareholder and promoter of that company? The Government did not challenge the truth of that. It is true. Did the Minister's wife ask Trevor Eyton of Brascan, a member of the Canada Development Investment Corporation, to try to help her raise money to bail out the company? There was no challenge of those facts.

If those fundamental statements were not true, the Government surely should have stood up and denied them in the past two weeks. The Government's failure to deny them implicates the Government by its acceptance of them. Those are the facts and the Opposition is entitled to have answers based on those facts. The Government is not entitled to shoot them back in our face and say "bring us coloured photographs" or "bring us sworn affidavits". That is not our function and it would place an impossible burden on the working of Parliament.

What have we been getting from the Government in the way of defence of the behaviour of its Minister? We have gotten the most unbelievable series of cheap shots. The Government has asked whether we believe that women are chattels and whether we do not think that spouses of Ministers should be able to have their own lives. That is one of the cheap shots which was taken to try to deflect attention from the charges against the Minister. We were asked whether we were against investment in Quebec or Cape Breton. Those are the kinds of answers the Government gave when we raised our concerns.

Another defence was that the former Government made the Magna deal. The Government said that it should not be accused of conflict of interest because the former Liberal Government signed the Memorandum of Understanding. I categorize that as another cheap shot, not only because of the good arguments made by my Leader showing that the Memorandum of Agreement did not settle the terms on which the Magna loan would be based but because there was another Memorandum of Agreement signed by the present Government so that it could claim the credit for all of the subsequent arrangements made with Magna. The Government cannot have it both ways, and I consider that to be a cheap shot.

At the end of last week the Government accused the media of conspiring to prevent the actual facts from being known. If there is any responsibility for not bringing out facts in defence of the Government it falls upon the Government. Day after day, instead of bringing out facts in its defence, it has engaged in cheap shots. Another cheap shot taken by the Government House Leader today is that it is up to us to change the rules of conflict of interest, having been given the opportunity to do so. The present rules are sufficient for the purposes of what this Minister has done, which we consider to be a conflict of interest. The rules are clear and would work, but only if the Government would make them work. We cannot make them work, but I would like to explain how we tried.

Our House Leader asked in the House if, under the rules, we could call witnesses to the Bar of the House of Commons to ask them the questions which the Government was telling us we needed to ask. The Government, with a majority of Members, refused to allow us to use that rule. We tried to take the matter to two committees to try to get to the bottom of it. The Opposition did what it could to bring out the facts in the House in a way which would meet the phoney tests which the Government was setting before it would admit responsibility for defending the Minister. It did not work. The door was closed to us. Yet, day after day in Question Period, as we tried to get answers, we were told that it was up to us to lay a charge.

What about laying a charge, Mr. Speaker? Conflict of Interest is not a matter which falls under the Criminal Code, if that is what the Government meant when it spoke about laying a charge. The guidelines are not a matter of the criminal law. It is not up to the police to investigate them. They are not a matter on which one would swear an information. It is not an order in council. The conflict of interest guidelines are not derived from any delegated law-making powers which the Government has under any statute of Canada. The conflict of interest guidelines are not a matter of privilege. I do not believe that Members of the House can stand up and claim that their privileges are violated when the Government refuses to live up to and apply the conflict of interest guidelines.

Those guidelines are an administrative policy voluntarily accepted by the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney). He can change them, he can reinterpret them, or he can throw them in the garbage can, and that is exactly what has been done. The conflict of interest guidelines which he introduced with so much fanfare have been thrown into the garbage can by the Government and the Government has no intention of enforcing them.

When the conflict of interest guidelines were first introduced by the Government last September the Prime Minister made some very proud statements about the responsibilities which he and the Government would assume for their enforcement. They did not say that it would be up to the Opposition to lay charges, or that it would be up to the police, or that somehow or other coloured photographs would be needed before the Government would get serious about them. In his letter to his colleagues the Prime Minister said:

> In carrying out that responsibility the Government is directly responsible to Parliament and through Parliament to the Canadian people.
> You will find no quasi-independent agencies in this Code that will allow the Government to shirk its responsibility by saying that the problem belongs to someone else. Nor will you find anything which will relieve me and my colleagues of the necessity of exercising judgment.

• (1240)

That is what the Prime Minister said in September. However, in April, when all of these facts about the behaviour of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) and his wife were on the record, the Minister said in a press conference on April 30:

> All I can do is tell you that there are rules that Parliament has established, that the government established in regard to this kind of activity. We laid them out. I wrote to all Members of Parliament. I laid them out publicly and—

The Prime Minister adds:

> —the Deputy Registrar General is charged with their application.

I charge the Prime Minister with a total distortion and abandonment of the conflict of interest guidelines. They were his baby when he brought them out. We could look to him to enforce those guidelines. Suddenly, the Assistant Deputy Registrar General is charged with their application. What authority has he to patrol and enforce these guidelines? He can only ask the Minister if he is still in compliance with the guidelines and if his statement remains true.

The Assistant Deputy Registrar General asked that question.

Mr. Mantha: How do you know?

Mr. Kaplan: According to the Prime Minister and to those of us who asked him. Did he go beyond that to ask if the facts appearing in the newspapers were true? Did he ask the Minister if he had any explanation as to why his wife was doing these things? The Assistant Deputy Registrar General had no responsibility to do that, yet the Government tried to pin it on the Assistant Deputy Registrar General.

I want to examine one sentence of the Prime Minister's letter to his Ministers and use it as an illustration of how ineffective it is to put the responsibility on the form filed with the Assistant Deputy Registrar General. In the days when the Prime Minister wanted us to believe that there would be conflict of interest guidelines that would be enforced, he said:

> —I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of activities of their spouses or dependent children or the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

A Minister cannot simply file a form in order to comply with this. In such cases, a Minister must say something to his or her spouse and dependent children. Let us take a hypothetical example of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), whose wife is an active lawyer in a busy practice in Toronto. If the Prime Minister's statement is to be taken seriously, the Secretary of State would have to ask her not to act for foreign governments or for customers of CIDA, or for people who are coming to his Department for favours. He must state that the Prime Minister has asked him to try to prevent conflicts of interest in relation to the behaviour of his spouse. What else could that statement possibly mean?

Yet, in the matter we are discussing today, without any denial by the Government, a Minister's wife is approaching firms, through which billions of dollars worth of business may or may not be channelled in the distribution to the public of the shares of the Canada Development Corporation, to try to raise approximately $3 million for her husband's troubled business. What could be a clearer violation of that sentence in the guidelines than the behaviour which I just described?

If the Government had anything to say in its defence, surely the time to do it was when these allegations were made by responsible people in the media. Instead, Parliament was stifled and the Government adopted a cynical strategy—a media strategy—of saying as little as possible on the record.

I hold the Prime Minister accountable for that because he started it. As he was leaving the country he said that the Deputy Registrar General was responsible. Later in that interview he talked about the presumption of innocence, as if we were talking about the Criminal Code rather than conflict of interest guidelines which were his responsibility to administer. Those conflict of interest guidelines are not the responsibility of the Opposition or the Assistant Deputy Registrar General, but the responsibility of the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister had the nerve to say that there is a presumption of innocence.

The Prime Minister has a blind spot about morality which prevented him from taking the necessary steps at the beginning of this matter. The Prime Minister should have taken immediate action, as was the case in the situation of the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse), who stepped aside, either on his own or at the suggestion of the Government, until he was cleared of certain allegations. In this case, no effort was made to challenge allegations. The Government has lived with those allegations. I do not believe that an inquiry will change the fundamental facts which have been put to the Government frequently and not challenged. An inquiry will not change the obvious interpretations of the provisions of the conflict of interest guidelines which we say are violated by the behaviour of the Minister's wife.

I have dealt with the responsibility of the Prime Minister for letting this situation get out of hand. I also want to look at the responsibility of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) during the mandate of the Government. Time after time, he has defended the indefensible and then backed away from his position. For instance, he defended the former Minister of National Defence. He said that his behaviour was perfectly acceptable, that there was nothing wrong with his behaviour. The former Minister of National Defence then had to resign.

The Deputy Prime Minister said there was nothing wrong with the behaviour of the former Minister of Fisheries and challenged the Opposition to make a charge. He suddenly changed his tune and we saw the former Minister of Fisheries depart.

During the Hatfield matter, we repeatedly stated our belief that the former Solicitor General was wrong and had violated the conflict of interest guidelines by trying to help or give the appearance of trying to help a friend. He was defended by the Deputy Prime Minister until the day he had to leave that portfolio.

The Deputy Prime Minister claimed there was nothing wrong with the former Minister of the Environment's trip to Europe, and if Members wanted to make a charge they could do so. Suddenly, the former Minister of the Environment was gone.

The Deputy Prime Minister defended his own behaviour in bugging the Liberal caucus many years ago. He said there was nothing the matter with that and there were many good arguments in favour of it. He challenged Members to make a charge if they wish to do so. Suddenly, we received a form of apology, indicating that that type of behaviour is considered reprehensible by the Government and would not be repeated.

I do not believe that the Deputy Prime Minister can continue to perform that function. The Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence is discredited by the way he has acted as the Government's trustee of proper behaviour of Ministers. He cannot continue to perform that job with any credibility.

Let me conclude with a reflection that came to me over the weekend. I believe it is a realization that has come to all Members as they went to their ridings over the weekend. What do Canadians think about this behaviour that has been revealed and not denied by the Minister? Canadians think that politicians are involved in politics only for what they can gain and that their purpose in serving public office is to try to benefit themselves. Businesses are also under a cloud as a result of the manner in which the Government has handled this matter. Canadians out there are thinking that if a business gets ahead, if it is doing anything which involves the Government, there is some element of influence peddling behind it. Both those propositions are wrong. It is up to the Government to restore standards in which Canadians will have confidence. This is not the Philippines, nor is it Korea. Yet the attitude the Government takes towards conflict of interest guidelines gives the Canadian people the feeling there is just no difference. It is appalling and I welcome the opportunity in today's debate to try to make that clear to Canadians and to force the Government to assume its responsibilities in this matter.

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, I have a comment first and then a question. When a Member of Parliament says he obtained no benefit, when he makes that flat declaration, it would seem to me it is the obligation of his colleagues to accept his word at face value. Otherwise, we tear ourselves apart as Members of Parliament, we tear this place apart, we hurt the representative system and we call into disrepute Members of Parliament generally. If we are going to have Members of Parliament involved in key economic portfolios, we have to have Members of Parliament in those positions who have been there before, who have borrowed large sums of money from banks and know what the "street" is all about.

Mr. Nunziata: Boloney!

Mr. Blenkarn: It would seem the only kinds of persons we should ever have in those portfolios, with the kind of attitude expressed by the opposition, would be people who have no business experience, or have made no outright effort in the business world. However, my question does not deal with that subject. My question deals with the question of women.

Is it the viewpoint of the opposition that wives of Members of Parliament are suddenly second-class citizens—

Mr. Nunziata: Don't be sexist.

Mr. Blenkarn: —that they cannot operate on their own and take business decisions on their own because somehow they conceivably might be in conflict? In this particular case, a well-respected lawyer who has practiced law in the Province of Ontario for over 25 years, who is involved in business deals, running fairly large public corporations in the marketplace, and who is involved with brokers and with financial transactions, is all of a sudden, because she happens to be a wife, in conflict of interest. I wonder to what extent wives of Members of Parliament are suddenly second-class citizens in the eyes of the opposition?

Mr. Nunziata: That is a sexist question.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member began by saying we had to accept the Minister's word when he said: "I received no benefit". I thought when I heard that answer that it was a pretty cute answer. It was not a denial of the statement that his corporation received a loan interest-free for the first year and with no principal repayable until the end. If the Minister had stood up and said: "We did not get the loan. It does not have the first year interest-free. The principal has to be paid back during the term", that is the kind of answer which would have been responsive. But when he said: "I received no benefit", I thought it was simply a cute way of putting a good line on the record which did not deny any of the fundamental facts we were saying constituted the basis of the conflict of interest. That is why we dealt with that statement by the Minister as we did. If he had not received that loan, if it was not interest-free in the first year, or if the payment of principal was not deferred, I think he would have said that. That is why I think the facts are clear enough for us to make the statement and take the position we have.

To come to the question of how much is a wife independent when her husband is a Minister—and it is a spouse I am talking about—there are female Ministers and the same rule applies to their spouses. It does not have to be a Minister. There is no law which says a person has to take the responsibility of being a Minister of the Crown. It is up to them. But when they do, certain responsibilities flow through them to their families.

What is my authority for that? It is the Prime Minister of Canada. He is the one who said: "Ministers have a responsibility to prevent conflict of interest including those that arise out of the activities of their spouses". That is his statement. If a Minister or a candidate to be a Minister does not want to put this kind of constraint on his wife, if he feels it is unfair, if he discusses it with her and she is unwilling to do so, then he does not have to be a Minister.

The Government was elected with 211 Members, a lot of them better qualified to be Ministers than those who sit in the present Cabinet. There is no shortage of people to become Ministers of the Crown. Mrs. Stevens is a lawyer in Toronto with a good reputation, who is entitled to practice her profession, as is Ms. McTeer, as are many others whom I do not know, who are doing their own thing. However, as far as the Prime Minister's conflict of interest guidelines are concerned, the wives have to accept a certain responsibility for their husband's career in public life. Otherwise, these conflict of interest guidelines are thrown in the garbage. And I can see by the interpretation put on them by the Hon. Member who just spoke that they have been thrown in the garbage.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I think it is abundantly clear that what is at issue is the moral fabric of the Government. However, I would like to make a few comments with respect to how the Government has dealt with this particular issue.

You will know, Mr. Speaker, that the Government, through the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), over the last two weeks has attempted to defend the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. What was its defence? It was that the Minister received no benefit and that the conflict of interest guidelines were complied with. We do not need conflict of interest guidelines to tell us the difference between right and wrong. Canadians understand this particular issue. They do not have to refer to a Code of Conduct, or to the Prime Minister's guidelines to tell them it was wrong for the wife of the industry Minister to go out and seek financial support from individuals and companies which were doing business with the Government through her husband. The fact that she was able to obtain an interest-free loan for the first year of $2.6 million would suggest very strongly that the conduct was wrong.

I would like the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) to comment on the defences which have been put forward by the Deputy Prime Minister and the Government itself over the last two weeks. The Hon. Member pointed out quite rightly a few days back that it was the same Deputy Prime Minister who stood up in this House to defend himself over the course of a number of parliamentary days, who stood up to defend the former Solicitor General, who stood up to defend the former Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, and who stood up to defend the former Minister of Communications. The fact that all those Ministers ended up resigning would leave one to seriously question the conduct of the Deputy Prime Minister. I would like the Hon. Member for York Centre to comment on the actions of the Deputy Prime Minister over the last number of weeks, and whether his conduct has in any way served this Parliament or the integrity of the Government and this institution.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to observe that I think the Deputy Prime Minister has disqualified himself by his behaviour in handling the situation to which my friend has referred. He has disqualified himself from performing the function which he has been performing in the Government for the Prime Minister. I say that without reflection in any way on his excellent war record.

• (1300)

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to begin with a brief comment about the dignity and grace with which the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) resigned this morning. I think that nothing in the events thus far has done more credit to him than the manner in which he left his office this morning.

I wish to contrast his manner with the approach taken by the Government House Leader in this debate. If we are to believe the Government House Leader, then we have a Government which won power with vision and leadership and which has been frustrated and destroyed by an irresponsible Opposition. There are some facts which have to be put on the record to show just how ludicrous that suggestion is.

The first is that the Opposition is outnumbered by 211 to 69. It is a massive gap. Within the Government there is a concentration of power because of the number of seats it holds. This is something which in my view is unparalleled in Canadian history.

Second, this is a Government which is dominant in the committees of the House. We have seen in the past week attempts to take this issue before a committee of the House, such as the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure, which have been frustrated by the Conservative majority. This is also true with respect to attempts to take the issue to the Standing Committee on Regional Industrial Expansion. In fact, this is a Government which holds massive power. If it is not exercising its power to give us the vision and leadership which it wishes to give us, then it is the fault of the Government and not the fault of the Opposition.

The debate this morning has centred about the question of the Code of Conduct for Ministers. Again, this is contrary to what the Government House Leader has suggested. In fact, within the code there are a great many subjects covered. One of the subjects which is quite clearly covered is the behaviour of spouses. It is quite clear that the letter of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) which was written in September is considered to be a full part of that Code of Conduct. It makes it the responsibility of each and every individual Minister to take account that such conflicts of interest do not arise.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) will have 15 minutes in which to conclude his speech after Question Period.

It being 1.05 p.m., I do now leave the chair until 2 p.m. this day.

At 1.05 p.m. the House took recess.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CONTRACT TO REFIT DESTROYERS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, last Friday the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Andre) attempted to take the maximum credit possible for the award of a $1.2-billion contract to update four Tribal-class destroyers by waiting until after his ten o'clock press conference had finished before providing me with a copy of his remarks. While the Minister's behaviour represents a break with what is considered common parliamentary decency, he achieved little, since one need only know the history of this program to know that all was complete before the present Government set eyes on it.

The former Liberal Government gave this program preliminary approval in 1980 and final approval in principle in 1984. We see again the Conservative Government's failure and inability to put forward anything new. How long will the Government continue to piggyback on former Liberal programs? Why does the Government need two Ministers of National Defence when all they are doing could be done by half a Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

POLICE WEEK

CONDOLENCES TO FAMILY OF OFFICER CLAUDE ST-LAURENT

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, during Police Week in this country, already two policemen, one in Quebec City and another in Montreal, have been shot down while on duty.

Mr. Speaker, I think we often forget to appreciate the dedication and importance of the police who are prepared to lay down their lives so that Canadians can enjoy the freedom they have.

To the family of Officer Claude St-Laurent, his wife and his three children, I wish to offer my condolences, both personally and on behalf of my party, and as a former colleague of Officer St-Laurent, I share the grief of his colleagues.

CANADIAN CULTURE

IMPORTANCE OF SMALL LIBRAIRIES TO CULTURAL ACTIVITIES—WORK OF VOLUNTEERS

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, last Saturday on May 10, the first regional library convention of Abitibi-Témiscamingue was held in Rouyn-Noranda.

The general meeting, attended by more than 300 volunteer workers, was held to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the central lending library and pay tribute to hundreds of volunteers, the majority of whom are women, who are known throughout our region for their dedication to promoting books and reading.

I would like to point out that in 1976, we had only five or six libraries in Abitibi-Témiscamingue. Today, in 1986, we have about 80 libraries throughout the region, in communities with a population of less than 5,000.

In a region where organizing recreational activities is left up to the major municipalities, these several dozen small libraries play a fundamental role in promoting cultural activities locally.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to offer my sincere congratulations to all administrators and the 900 or so volunteer workers on their dedication to improving our cultural and social environment.

THE ECONOMY

SUCCESS OF GOVERNMENT POLICIES

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands—Canso): Mr. Speaker, the economic policies of the Government are working. Progress is being made in rebuilding the Canadian economy. The national unemployment rate has fallen to 9.6 per cent, down more than three percentage points. More than 600,000 jobs have been created.

These benefits are being felt in Atlantic Canada. The Government's regional development policies are bringing benefits to my riding. For example, the Government, through the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew), has announced a $10-million forestry renewal project. A special multimillion-dollar tourism agreement is being prepared. Other policies like the Atlantic Enterprise Program and the Atlantic Opportunities Program have been announced and will bring more benefits to the region.

Some of the first industries in recent decades have been announced for my region. Guysborough, Richmond, and Inverness Counties have received manufacturing facilities. This is success that was not achieved before, and there will be more success stories to talk about in the future.

LUMBER EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES—THREAT OF COUNTERVAILING DUTIES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, making off the record deals that are not in the best interests of Canadians is fast becoming a hallmark of the Government. Today we learned of yet another deal. Today the United States Forest Producers lodged a petition with the United States Commerce Department and the United States International Trade Commission calling for countervailing duties of $53.65 U.S. per thousand board feet to be levied against our $2.8-billion softwood lumber exports to the United States of America.

We New Democrats always believed that President Reagan had made a deal with the United States Senate Finance Committee to get it to agree to a fast track free trade proposal and that the deal was that the administration would support a countervail proposal. Obviously the Canadian Government was aware of this off the record deal and was quite prepared to make our softwood lumber industry the sacrificial lamb in the free trade talks. How can free trade talks continue with this lumber countervailing duty axe hanging over our heads? Why has the Government of Canada apparently abandoned Canadian lumber producers?

TRADE

IMPORTANCE OF CANADIAN LUMBER EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, our upcoming trade talks with the United States are about to begin. I should like to say a few words on the importance of these talks.

In 1985 trade between our two countries totalled more than $150 billion; 79 per cent of our exports goes to the United States and 21 per cent of theirs comes to Canada. Last year we sold more than $100 billion of goods and services to Americans. We are the closest and most important trading partner of the largest and richest market in the world. We must secure our access to that market if Canadian export industries, such as our lumber industry and the B.C. cedar shakes and shingle industry, are to survive.

If these trade talks are to be launched successfully, politicians on both sides of the border must steadfastly resist creeping protectionism in all sectors. It is in this spirit that I am sure the President of the United States will deal with the current recommendations of the International Trade Commission. Let us be positive about this, not negative.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

CITIZENSHIP

PRIME MINISTER'S LETTER

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, on April 11 I attended a citizenship ceremony in my constituency, and a message was sent from the Prime Minister's Office which I have confirmed is authentic. I should like to read a sentence of it with which I disagree very strongly. In part the message reads:

> The act of changing one's citizenship is a dramatic and emotional moment; it signifies a carefully considered decision to commit oneself for the future to a new land, and represents a cutting of ties with one's homeland.

I think this statement by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) shows a fundamental lack of understanding of the meaning of Canadian citizenship and of the broader concept of multiculturalism.

I urge the Prime Minister to reconsider such a misguided message and in future to send something which takes a more positive view of the relationship immigrants in Canada are permitted to have with their homelands as far as the Prime Minister is concerned.

WAR CRIMINALS

SOVIETS' REACTION TO DESCHÊNES COMMISSION

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, it seems as though the Soviets are once again trying to fester the historical wounds which exist between Canada's Ukrainian and Jewish communities. Recently the Soviets responded positively to the request of Justice Deschênes that his commission travel to the Soviet Union to obtain evidence against alleged war criminals in Canada. However, the Soviets were silent on the important safeguards which Justice Deschênes included in his original request. Their silence on this most fundamental issue reinforces my concern over their desire to manipulate these proceedings to serve their own political goals.

Representatives from both eastern European and Jewish community organizations in Canada have repeatedly called for these safeguards in order to protect against Soviet deception. Let us not be fooled by the motives of the Soviets. They want to be perceived as supporting an inquiry, but they are not willing to tolerate an independent and fair treatment of evidence. They want nothing more than to see an open conflict between Canadians of eastern European and Jewish heritage.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

INDUSTRY

LOSS OF JOBS AT CANADA PACKERS PLANT IN WINNIPEG

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have a statement which will now have to be dealt with by the new Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion.

On November 18 I wrote the former Minister to warn him that a grant which he made to establish a hog processing facility in rural Manitoba would have dire implications for the meat packing industry in Winnipeg. Unfortunately that warning has now come true. A full 200 to 300 jobs are now to be lost at the Canada Packers plant in Winnipeg in its hog killing operations. They will be replaced by 70 jobs at the new plant, and these jobs will pay about half what Winnipeg workers earned. Canada Packers is now reconsidering whether to proceed with modernization of its entire Winnipeg operation.

The new Minister must look at this use of public money when a $865,000 government grant results in fewer jobs at lower wages. If not, the Minister would better be named the Minister of Deindustrialization, in charge of moving plants to constituencies of Conservative Members of Parliament.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Sixty seconds.

NATIONAL PAROLE BOARD

MANDATORY SUPERVISION—DELAY IN PASSAGE OF AMENDING BILL

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-67, a Bill which gives the National Parole Board the power to refuse to release inmates on mandatory supervision if there are reasonable grounds to believe that they could commit a violent crime, was reported back to this House for third reading after extensive debate in the Justice Committee, three and a half months ago. Almost two months ago, on March 21, a coroner's jury in Toronto investigating the death of a man released on mandatory supervision endorsed the spirit of Bill C-67 and recommended that the Solicitor General of Canada (Mr. Beatty) implement it expeditiously following its proclamation. That was one and a half months ago, and Bill C-67 has still not reached the Order Paper for third reading.

The public wants this legislation, Mr. Speaker. I call on all Members of this House and all Parties in this House to get on with it and to pass the Bill quickly. Don't let it die on the Order Paper in June.

AGRICULTURE

HOLSTEIN CATTLE RESEARCH—USE OF SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TAX CREDIT

Mr. William C. Winegard (Guelph): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge Dreamstreet Holsteins to negotiate with Holstein Canada, the University of Guelph and others to develop a new and sound research proposal in order that the majority of the funds provided under the scientific research tax credit scheme can be used for research of benefit to Canada.

The current proposal does not have the support of the agricultural community and will not have that support until Dreamstreet decides to turn the project into a major comprehensive research effort. In the meantime Revenue Canada should use every means at its disposal to ensure that only research approved by the scientific community is undertaken with taxpayers' dollars.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

MARLIN TRAVEL CONTRACT AWARD

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, the awarding of a $130 million contract to Marlin Travel Ltd. for government travel will save very little money in the long run. The main effect of the move will be the loss of 90 jobs in Air Canada and CP Air. Some people may be hired by Marlin Travel but most will be out looking for jobs. Those who do find jobs with Marlin Travel will do so at much lower salaries and much reduced benefits, such as medical, dental and pension plans.

Can this kind of reduction in work conditions be considered a saving, Mr. Speaker?

INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, Bank of Canada interest rates have dropped 3.75 percentage points since the Government took office in September, 1984. The Bank of Canada rate now stands at 8.72 per cent while most banks are charging 10.75 per cent to preferred borrowers. There is a 4.5 point spread between top savings accounts and the cost to preferred corporate customers. The spread is much greater for operating and consumer loans.

One of the high costs to our agriculture communities is interest rates. For the good of the country we must get agriculture loans to below 6 per cent.

IMMIGRATION

ISSUANCE OF MINISTERIAL PERMITS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, while the Government is dragging its feet on the backlog of over 21,000 refugees, and while many Canadians are having a difficult time in successfully sponsoring relatives, we have a Minister of Immigration (Miss MacDonald) who is prepared to issue ministerial permits to a former spy for the Samosa regime in Nicaragua and two former members of the Chilean secret police. In both cases there are serious allegations of disappearances, torture, and other human rights violations to which these individuals have admitted.

I find it shocking and indefensible that such characters should now be seeking sanctuary in Canada with the blessing of this Conservative Government. What are the Minister's priorities? Where is the fairness in the system?

The Minister should facilitate the entry of decent individuals who are prepared to work and to contribute to Canada, rather than offering a haven to undesirables. Her appalling decisions should be reversed immediately.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

THE ADMINISTRATION

INQUIRY WHETHER MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION WAS FORCED TO RESIGN

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the front benches aren't very crowded today.

In any case, I would like to put a question to the Deputy Prime Minister regarding the statement made this morning by the ex-Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. For two weeks now, there has been a smell of corruption in the air in this country. Why did it take two weeks to obtain the Minister's resignation, when a Prime Minister who is really concerned about the ethics of the matter would have acted from day one? My question is as follows: Did the Prime Minister ask for the Minister's resignation or did the Minister offer his resignation?

• (1415)

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition tries to leave the wrong impression when he speaks of the former Minister's responses. He is aware that a week ago last Thursday the former Minister commenced answering questions. He answered all throughout last week, including two hours in a subcommittee. It was on that basis, reflecting on it over the weekend in all likelihood, that led the former Minister to write to the Prime Minister in terms which are now in the public domain.

PRIME MINISTER'S RESPONSIBILITY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the ex-Minister answered only when he was given the go signal by the Deputy Prime Minister from time to time. My question now relates to the Deputy Prime Minister's responsibility, and even more important, the Prime Minister's responsibility. Would he, and the Prime Minister on his return, be prepared to answer when, for how long, and what they knew about the conflict of interest of the former Minister, and would they be prepared to make that kind of statement to the House?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): What the right hon. gentleman accuses me of, namely, the former Minister responding only when I gave the go signal, is totally false. If he goes over the record carefully, he knows better than to say that. Here we have the spectacle of the right hon. gentleman and his colleagues in the Opposition saying for over a week that there should be an impartial investigation as to the facts. His remarks and two questions today are a shining example of why such an investigation is not going to be impartial in this atmosphere.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST INQUIRY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I heard an interjection from the government benches and it was reflected in the ex-Minister's statement this morning. Does the Government not admit there was a conflict of interest? If not, why the resignation?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): The answer is obvious, Sir. After the Minister's responses for two weeks, here and in committee, there was still an apparent confusion as to facts—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nielsen: —to put the best light on it. They ridicule even now the response of the Minister himself—

Some Hon. Members: You!

Mr. Nielsen: —when he asked, in his letter to the Prime Minister, for an impartial person to be appointed to investigate the facts.

Mr. Deans: I'll do it.

Mr. Nielsen: Surely that is the proper course to pursue. That impartiality is obviously not here by virtue of the intemperate charges of corruption by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition and the conduct of his own members in committee.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PROPOSED SALE OF CANADAIR—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. I would like to know whether the Deputy Prime Minister could inform the House whether, now that an inquiry has been proposed, the Government is willing to stop the sale or consideration of the sale of Canadair, in order to find out whether the Minister's conflict of interest has in any way affected the public interest and the sale of Canadair in the best interests of Canadians.

• (1420)

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker. As the former Minister and I have explained for well over a week now, that matter is in the hands, not of the Government at the moment, but of a divestiture committee of the corporation itself—

Mr. Orlikow: Appointed by that Minister.

Mr. Nielsen: —which in turn will be reporting and which in turn is being guided by a task force on privatization chaired by the President of the Treasury Board.

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, will the inquiry which is to be set up to look into this conflict of interest be able to look also at the sale of de Havilland to see why that company was sold for such a ridiculously low price and whether there is any ulterior explanation for that?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the former Minister, Members in both opposition Parties, and the media have requested an impartial investigation into the facts. That is what is going to happen—

Mr. Kaplan: Also for de Havilland?

Mr. Nielsen: —and surely that is, in all fairness and reasonableness, what opposition Members want.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): What about Parliament?

Mr. Nielsen: I have answered the question with respect to Parliament. That impartiality, which is absent in the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues by virtue of the conduct of his own caucus Members, ensures that there will be no such impartiality in this place.

Mr. Gauthier: With 211 MPs? Come on.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister and is based on the assumption that he has recently talked to the Prime Minister. In the House on May 2 the Deputy Prime Minister said:

—compliance by the Ministry with the Code of Conduct. That is the beginning and end of his responsibility. He has done that. I am satisfied, as is the Prime Minister, that that has occurred.

In other words, he was satisfied that compliance had occurred. In his letter of resignation to the Prime Minister the Minister repeats that he is innocent, says he has complied with the code and, in addition, with the provisions in the letter sent to him on September 9 by the Prime Minister. He is still contending that he is innocent of any violation.

Has the Deputy Prime Minister consulted with the Prime Minister? If so, does the Prime Minister still believe that the Minister has not violated the code with regard to conflict, or the letter of September 9?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister will obviously stand by his responses made in this House and elsewhere with respect to this matter, as do I. I am sure that neither one of us will prejudge, as the hon. gentleman would have me do, the result of an impartial investigation into the facts. Surely that is what he wants and surely that is what is in the best interest now with regard to all the circumstances.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, if there is one person who has prejudged the case it is the Deputy Prime Minister who made only one phone call on this whole matter.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I want to be very clear on what the Minister is saying. I understand him to be reiterating the Government's position, namely, that the former Minister has violated neither the code pertinent to conflict of interest guidelines nor the letter sent to him by the Prime Minister on September 9. Is that the Government's position?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): When the hon. gentleman accuses me of having made one phone call, he states something which is totally false. He should know that and should use words with more caution than to fling about accusations of that nature. I made a good deal more than one telephone call and had a good deal more than one discussion.

Mr. Broadbent: Answer the question.

Mr. Nielsen: I stand by what I have said in this House during the last two weeks.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, it will be interesting for the whole country to learn that the Deputy Prime Minister stands by what he has said because the whole country has, of course, appropriately reached a different conclusion.

CONDUCT OF INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): When will the Deputy Prime Minister be in a position to tell us who will be conducting this inquiry and what the terms of reference of the inquiry will be?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that must obviously be done without any delay. It is a matter which is under current consideration by the Prime Minister and his advisers. I can assure the hon. gentleman that there will be no delay in bringing about an impartial investigation as to the facts in these circumstances.

[Translation]

NATURE OF INQUIRY MENTIONED IN STATEMENT BY MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Deputy Prime Minister and try to clarify the nature of the proposed inquiry that was mentioned in the Minister's statement this morning. Earlier, the Deputy Prime Minister seemed to be saying that the Opposition had asked several times last week for an independent inquiry. Perhaps I may refresh his memory and say that the Opposition was specific in its request, and my question is therefore: Will the inquiry be held as requested by the Opposition parties last week, namely, before a committee of this House? This option was turned down twice by the Conservative majority last week, before two different committees. Where will the inquiry be held? In Parliament or somewhere else, hidden away from the public eye?

• (1425)

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will ignore the intemperate accusations in the question, on this occasion. The impartial investigation which is being considered will be governed by terms of reference broad enough to encompass all of the accusations, allegations—unfounded or whatever—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Or founded.

Mr. Nielsen: —that have come from opposition Members and, I might add, from the media.

[Translation]

EXAMINATION OF ACTIVITIES OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, since the guidelines and the Code have no legal clout, and since Canadians have to rely on the honour of those who hold these positions, will the Prime Minister agree that only Parliament or one of its committees may examine the behaviour and actions of one of its Members, and not an outside agency?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have already stated in response to questions by his Leader that, in my judgment, there can be no impartiality in the investigation of the facts in these circumstances if for no other reason—

Mr. Tobin: You have a majority.

Mr. Nielsen: —than that we have an overwhelming majority in the House and in its committees. Given a favourable report, I can just see them calling it a whitewash because of our majority. Surely we must seek a degree of impartiality in this investigation of the facts that will be conducted impeccably.

INVESTIGATION OF ALLEGATIONS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Prime Minister has acknowledged the concern of millions of Canadians in accepting the resignation of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and also in agreeing to set up an inquiry into the very serious allegations which have been made regarding conflict of interest, beginning some 11 or 12 days ago. Will the Deputy Prime Minister say what he did over the course of that time in order to carry out any investigations, since he now alleges that he did more than simply make a call to the Assistant Deputy Registrar General? Is he also not aware of the very serious disquietude among Canadians about his actions in this affair in stonewalling for two weeks rather than taking action—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that accusation by the hon. gentleman is totally false and again is evidence that impartiality is not going to be found in Parliament in ascertaining the facts in these circumstances. The Minister himself was here all last week answering questions. That did not satisfy the Opposition. Nor were they satisfied in committee. Nor, in the view of the Government, has public opinion been satisfied through the media and editorial writings. Therefore, it seems to me that honourable gentlemen and honourable ladies opposite would be welcoming—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. A supplementary question.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER'S DUTIES

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister should be aware that public opinion was not satisfied a week and a half ago. It is not something that just occurred this weekend.

The Prime Minister assigned the Deputy Prime Minister responsibility for the conflict of interest code. Does the Deputy Prime Minister believe that he has performed his official duties in such a manner that public confidence and trust in the integrity, objectivity and impartiality of the Government have been conserved and enhanced? Has the Minister's stonewalling impaired public trust and the integrity of Government?

• (1430)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is a statement of opinion by the hon. gentleman which I do not share and it is further indication to me that he would, along with his colleagues, welcome an impartial investigation of the facts.

ACCEPTANCE OF MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Does he now understand that the issue has become a question of the moral leadership of his Government, in particular, his Prime Minister? In light of the "Dear Sinc" letter the Prime Minister sent out today in which he lauds the work of the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Ms. Copps: —does he not realize that he is sending the signal to all Canadians that it is perfectly all right for a Cabinet Minister's family to use his influence to gain loans for the family?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Ms. Copps: The only thing that went wrong was the public outcry.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no, I do not believe that, and anyone who is at all familiar with the dedication and selfless manner in which the former Minister went about his tasks to achieve economic renewal in this country would not say that sort of unworthy thing about him.

One thing the Hon. Member's question does indicate to me is that she is coming to her own conclusions, and I would suggest not impartially, about something which would be better left to the impartiality of an investigation of the facts.

[Translation]

MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—CONFLICTS OF INTEREST—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): As a Member, Mr. Speaker, it is I who should have moral leadership, not somebody appointed by the Prime Minister.

I would like to ask him whether he is prepared today to tell the people what happened in the case of the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, whether there was a conflict of interest when his wife used his connections as Minister to obtain a loan for the family business. Is that a conflict of interest, yes or no?

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Well, Mr. Speaker, I choose to believe that most Canadians will endorse the course of an impartial investigation—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Oh, no.

Mr. Frith: They are not going to do that.

Mr. Nielsen: —as to the facts. They certainly, in my judgment, do not endorse the conduct of the Hon. Member asking the question, of leaping over chairs and tables in committee to harass the Minister.

MINISTER'S JUDGMENT

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. The Government continues to say it will investigate the facts with regard to the conflict of interest. I wonder if the Acting Prime Minister would also take the trouble to investigate the judgment used by the Minister when it came to compliance with the conflict of interest regulations, which read that Ministers must prevent—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Keeper: —real, potential or apparent conflict of interest.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is now becoming long.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): I would have thought that Hon. Members opposite would have anticipated as a natural matter of course that any impartial investigation would be conducted very much in the context of the conflict of interest code for public office holders, not just in one or two provisions, but in all of the provisions of the code.

CONDUCT OF MINISTER'S SPOUSE

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Acting Prime Minister is then saying that this investigation will not only investigate the facts but will also investigate the judgment used by the Minister? And will it cover the conduct under this code of the spouse involved?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the conduct of an impartial investigation would naturally include the conflict of interest code for public office holders and would naturally include the Prime Minister's letter of September 9, 1985, to Ministers.

REASON FOR GOVERNMENT DECISION

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, on May 8 I asked the Acting Prime Minister to start the same investigation which has been requested by the former Minister, and I referred to page 4 of the Prime Minister's letter to Members of Parliament, which reads:

> Obviously, from time to time, circumstances may arise that call for an impartial person to conduct an investigation as to fact.

The Acting Prime Minister said in response that he saw no reason for such an investigation. Could the Acting Prime Minister tell us what has transpired since May 8 to cause him to agree to an investigation which he said before was completely unnecessary?

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): That is very simple, Sir.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Damage control operation.

Mr. Nielsen: I answered that question earlier today when it was put by the Hon. Member's Leader. The answer is that after assessing the week's events, and the fact that the Minister had been responding throughout the week and in committee, and in assessing the obvious dissatisfaction of members of the Opposition and of the media with those explanations, that brought about the action which was taken by the Minister.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, two weeks of this Chamber's valuable time has been lost—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Baker: —because the Prime Minister and the Acting Prime Minister failed to act. Why did the Prime Minister and the Acting Prime Minister fail to act? Granted, the Prime Minister was in China, but China invented gunpowder. Surely he could have mustered another bang.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Bang, bang!

Mr. Riis: Don't touch it, Erik.

Mr. Broadbent: Handle this one with care.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Some days are worse than others, Erik.

Mr. Beatty: Did you look behind you when you said that, John?

Mr. Ouellet: Come on.

Mr. Benjamin: Time's up.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the Hon. Minister wishes to answer that?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): I would like to respond to the question, Mr. Speaker, if I could be heard. I see the right hon. gentleman chortling with glee in his reaction to that question, but the question itself, surely, Sir, is the strongest possible indication of the need for an impartial investigation into the facts.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—CANADIAN LUMBER EXPORTS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of International Trade. As we predicted, after Senate free trade approval, at noon today U.S. lumber producers launched a new thrust to cut back Canadian lumber exports. Will the Government tell the United States that this new attack makes a mockery of the freer trade talks? Will it tell the United States that this destroys any good faith beginning in these free trade talks?

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. gentleman I think the simple and short answer is that it is my understanding that no announcement will be made today by the U.S. lumber producers launching an attack, as the Hon. Member calls it, on our lumber industry.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): How about tomorrow?

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I want to put to the Minister as a question—are there finally going to be commitments on the part of the Government to get tough on this issue now, as it should have done long ago, and will it say to the United States that if there are such attacks made to get countervail, there will be no proceeding with free trade talks at this time?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Did the CLC write that?

• (1440)

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I think the record of the Government stands to show that we have taken a very firm position in the lumber issue and that, indeed, we have protected the interests of our lumber producers.

If I may say so, the very threat of this type of action points out the reason why we need this type of trade agreement with the United States. I do not know why the Party of the Hon. Member wants to thwart that type of action by the Government to protect our lumber producers.

HEALTH

COQUITLAM AND VANCOUVER WATER SUPPLIES

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Given the conflicting reports which have been circulating on the contamination of the Coquitlam water supply reservoir regarding abnormally high levels of radiation, will the Minister tell the House what actions his Department has taken to assure that the Greater Vancouver Regional District receives adequate assistance to guarantee accurate testing of all water sources in the area and, in particular, in the Coquitlam reservoir?

Ms. Jewett: That's a dead story.

Mr. St. Germain: It's not dead in B.C.?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Chairman—Mr. Prime—Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): This is not caucus!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): —I wish to say to the Hon. Member that there have been two tests done on the Coquitlam—the Leader of the Opposition laughs about these types of matters. Does he not take them as serious? Has he gone to levels which even he cannot describe?

An Hon. Member: You're pretty raw!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Ouellet: This is a planted question, that is why we object.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the Hon. Minister want to finish his response, briefly?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, tests have been done on the Coquitlam water supply.

I wish to remind the Hon. Member that the levels which we use as acceptable were very, very low and very much on the side of prudence. We have done two tests. I think we can indicate that the first test was right at the level of some concern. The second test indicated that it is below that level.

So the water radiation is safe. However, we are conducting further tests and we will keep the Hon. Member informed.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADA-UNITED STATES RELATIONS—EMPLOYMENT OF MICHAEL DEAVER AS LOBBYIST

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Many Canadians are becoming increasingly concerned about the embroilment of the Canadian Government in the impending investigations and, in fact, in the scandal associated with Mr. Michael Deaver who is a former counsel in the White House. I think that part of the problem has been confusing and contradictory information. Will the Secretary of State for External Affairs supply information to Parliament—not down south—regarding the report released today from the General Accounting Office which confirms that Mr. Fred Doucet of the Prime Minister's Office was the gentleman in question who raised the question of the employment of Mr. Deaver by the Canadian Government—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is a bit long, I think. Is that the Hon. Member's question?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I was asking a question. I would like to continue.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Was it Mr. Doucet of the Prime Minister's Office who raised the question with Mr. Deaver concerning his potential employment with the Canadian Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I do not know who raised that question; but I know when it was raised. It was raised after Mr. Deaver left the White House.

Mr. Broadbent: How do you know that if you don't know who raised it?

LETTER ISSUED BY CANADIAN AMBASSADOR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, that is right. We now have another example of a clear answer.

When the Canadian Ambassador to Washington referred to the fact that a senior official of the Government raised the question of employment prior to Mr. Deaver leaving the White House, was that senior official Mr. Doucet of the Prime Minister's Office?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, most things the Hon. Member does are inadvertent, so I assume that his twisting of the facts is inadvertent. The letter issued by Ambassador Gotlieb indicated that a Canadian official made a comment in a light-hearted way to Mr. Deaver. That official was Doctor Doucet.

Mr. Axworthy: That is what we wanted to know.

SEARCH AND RESCUE

ENDING OF ONTARIO SEARCH—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister either in his capacity as Deputy Prime Minister or as Minister of National Defence. Will the Minister order an investigation into the search and rescue efforts which took place last November in seeking two people who apparently lived for a number of days after rescue efforts had been abandoned?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, there has been a preliminary investigation conducted already. It is being carried on in some depth in an effort to try to answer these questions.

CO-ORDINATION OF OPERATIONS

Mr. Ian Deans (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, will the Deputy Prime Minister or the Associate Minister of National Defence not only table in the House the results of that investigation, but will they also look into the co-ordinated efforts of Search and Rescue between the various component parts of such an effort? Will they table in the House the clear method used by the various groups which take part, who was in charge, and who makes the decisions as to if, as, and when an effort should be abandoned?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has asked a great many questions. I am quite prepared to answer them in the appropriate forum on an appropriate occasion. The Hon. Member could write or come to committee when we are discussing Estimates and talk about the matter. However, he is asking me to table something on the assumption that there is some sort of document which will contain all of the information. I am not sure that that type of document is available in the form that he would like. There is no desire on our part to hold back any of the information which the Hon. Member seeks.

REPORTED INFLOW OF DIOXIN TO NIAGARA RIVER

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment. There was a report this weekend that dioxin is flowing directly into the Niagara River and Lake Ontario from a storm sewer in Buffalo, New York. Will the Minister advise the House what he and the Government intend to do to avert a potential disaster, one potentially greater than that at Chernobyl in Russia? What will he do to save the drinking water of approximately 20 per cent of the people of Canada?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the information about the presence of dioxin in the Niagara River was, in fact, released by my Department under my authority. The information adds urgency in the sense that we in the Government feel that something dramatic needs to be done to deal with the discharge of about one tonne a day of toxic chemicals into the Niagara River. Some experts say that it is as high as nine tonnes per day. Because of the urgency I will be going to Washington this afternoon. We will be there all day tomorrow and possibly the next day to deal with high-level officials in the United States administration to complete, I hope, arrangements being made between Canada and the United States for a major action plan to clean up the Niagara River.

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST—REQUEST FOR COMMITTEE INVESTIGATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. In the Prime Minister's letter of September 9, 1985, in which he wrote to Members of Parliament, he stated:

> You will find no quasi-independent agencies in this Code that will allow the Government to shirk its responsibility by saying that the problem belongs to someone else.

In view of the fact that that was said, will the Deputy Prime Minister not agree with me that the only appropriate measure is to have a committee of the House investigate the situation in order to fulfil the mandate which the Prime Minister gave to Members of Parliament on September 9, 1985?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as I have explained several times today, the answer is that that would not be in the best interests of this institution itself. All the Hon. Member has to do is look at his own colleagues and their conduct to see that there can be no impartiality in the investigation which must be conducted as to facts. What the Hon. Member fails to do is to read on in that same paragraph of that letter where reference is made to the fact that there may be circumstances which might require the appointment of an impartial person to conduct an investigation as to the facts. That is exactly where we are now in those—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Translation]

RESPONSIBILITY FOR INQUIRY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): According to the Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, one could use the same logic and shut down the whole Parliament!

Since he said in the same speech that these measures would not in any way free the Government from being answerable to the House, I would ask him how he can tell us today that another agent, not a parliamentary committee, should look into this matter. Were we told the truth on September 9, 1985? Yes or no?

• (1450)

[English]

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the proper course to follow is the course that the former Minister requested, consistent with the paragraph in the Prime Minister's letter from which the Hon. Member is quoting and, I think, consistent with the demands of the opposition Members and the media. I do not think there is any better course that can be followed in these circumstances than to identify a means of conducting an impartial investigation as to the facts.

HUMAN RIGHTS

SOUTH KOREA—PRIME MINISTER'S VISIT

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who will know of the ruthless suppression of the mildest form of political dissent occurring in South Korea, as well as the police beatings and torture. Is the Prime Minister, who is in South Korea today, not only going to raise these gross human rights violations with President Chun but will he also explicitly urge the reinstatement of the civil and political rights of South Korea's Opposition Leader, Kim Dae-Jung?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister will be using the occasion of his conversations in South Korea to bring to the attention of South Korean authorities our very deep concerns about civil rights abuses and civil rights situations in that country. He will be available to report on the nature of those conversations upon his return.

TREATMENT OF OPPOSITION LEADER

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister did not answer about the Opposition Leader, perhaps he does not know about the denial of his civil and political rights. Can the Minister tell the House whether the Prime Minister will in fact meet with the Leader of the New Korea Democratic Party, Kim Dae-Jung, while he is in South Korea?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, while I would not compete with the right hon. incumbent Leader of the Opposition for any claim to experience of terrible treatment of Leaders of the Opposition, I will—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Careful, Joe.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Because in my caucus, there was never a rat pack gone rabid.

Mr. Axworthy: You just lost your job.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I will certainly bring the Hon. Member's representations to the attention of the Prime Minister and he will be available to report on questions he has raised and responses to those questions, upon his return.

CANADIAN INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

MEDICAL PROJECT IN CHINA—NEWSPAPER REPORTS

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is also addressed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. I am concerned about reports of public funds from CIDA being used to pay for recent air fares for Canadian officials and their wives to witness a cheque presentation in Peking. Could the Minister clarify this situation and explain if this is actually what happened?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, those news reports constitute a serious injustice to both CIDA and officials of the Civic Hospital of Ottawa. The Ottawa Civic Hospital has been involved for some long time in a project totalling something like $1.6 million designed to help train, in Canada, those people who would train the mentally handicapped in China. Those officials are in China to help advance that project. That project and their plans were put in place long before the Prime Minister's visit was arranged. CIDA has not paid for the travel of any spouses.

In the circumstances, since the Ottawa Civic Hospital is also proposing to launch a $4 million fund raising campaign to help another project in China, I would respectfully suggest that those newspapers that have contributed to this maligning of reputations should be the first to contribute to the fund raising campaign.

Some Hon. Members: Hear hear!

RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. What is at issue is the moral fabric of this particular Government.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, the Minister did the right thing for the wrong reasons. The Government refuses to admit conflict of interest. It even refuses to admit an appearance of a conflict of interest.

Mr. Speaker: Question, please.

Mr. Nunziata: Would the Deputy Prime Minister not agree that the resignation was the result of public opinion rather than the result of the Government's sense of morality and decency?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no, I am not prepared to agree with that, but I can tell the hon. gentleman that I and other members of this Government can stack our moral fabric against that of the hon. gentleman any day of the week.

Mr. Benjamin: That's not saying much.

REQUEST THAT MINISTERS APPEAR AS WITNESSES

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I did not do any bugging. The Deputy Prime Minister has said that the investigation the Government is planning is going to be an impartial one. In view of that, will the Deputy Prime Minister, the former Minister, and the Prime Minister, appear before the investigator under oath to enable the Opposition to get to the whole truth of this matter?

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is obvious from the hon. gentleman's conduct in committee last week that he will never be convinced, even with a totally and utterly impartial investigation, of the facts.

INDUSTRY

CLOSURE OF THUNDER BAY WAFER BOARD PLANT

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Forestry. The Minister has received a telegram from the Canadian Paperworkers' Union asking him to take action, together with the Ontario Government, to seek a reopening of the Great Lakes wafer board mill in Thunder Bay. What action has the Minister taken to get 150 men back to work at this mill in Thunder Bay since my friend, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan, asked him about this same matter on April 30?

Hon. Gerald S. Merrithew (Minister of State (Forestry)): Mr. Speaker, I am rather surprised that the Hon. Member put two questions the day the plant was actually going to close, or the day after it closed. I will certainly deal with my colleagues, the Minister of Labour and the Acting Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, and I will take that as a representation.

REQUEST FOR FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL ACTION

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the Minister promised action on April 30. I would like to have his commitment this afternoon that he will get together with representatives of the provincial Government, the Premier of which has promised to take action, and do whatever is necessary to ensure that this mill, which is perhaps under new ownership since Great Lakes is moving out, will go back into production.

Hon. Gerald S. Merrithew (Minister of State (Forestry)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows full well that we cannot force a company to reopen a plant which does not pay or is not economical. I indicated that we would investigate the matter and that is exactly what we are doing.

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. You cannot start. It is three o'clock.

Mr. Frith: It's one minute to three. One question.

Mr. Speaker: My watch says three o'clock. One question only?

Mr. Frith: Just one.

CROWN CORPORATIONS

PRIVATIZATION—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. Is the Government prepared to instruct whomever is appointed to head the inquiry to investigate and review the tangled web of corporate self-dealing with respect to the disposal of Crown corporations under the CDIC umbrella? The Canadian public no longer have faith in the Government's ability or the ability of its appointees to look after their interests.

• (1500)

Hon. Erik Nielsen (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I tried to assure Hon. Members of the House, in response to an earlier question by a member of the Opposition, that the impartial investigation would have the broadest possible terms of reference to include even intemperate remarks such as his last intervention.

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra):

That this House condemns the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Government for failing to provide full and satisfactory information on the blatant conflict of interest situation involving that Minister.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, before the luncheon adjournment I had just concluded talking about the contrast between the statement of the Government House Leader and that of the previous Minister when he offered his resignation. At this stage I want to stress that what is at stake for the House is the question of integrity, integrity which can be helped by codes of conduct, integrity which can be aided by letters from Prime Ministers giving us some sense of direction, and integrity which ultimately rests on individual Members and individual Ministers to respect and to carry forward themselves.

That sense of integrity which is crucial to the House cannot be underestimated. It is crucial not just for our sense of collegiality as a Parliament, but much more important, it is also crucial because the country itself needs to have some faith in the integrity of its Government and its politicians. Without that sense of integrity, ultimately there is growth of a cynical lack of belief in Parliament, in democracy, and in the whole governmental system which exists in Canada.

Perhaps as crucial a cost as that is the inability of political leaders and economic leaders to co-operate and interact because of the constant fear that questions of integrity will be raised about them and their dealings when they meet, for instance, to discuss economic planning or to talk about future directions for the country. There must be a sense of personal integrity at the core of this institution.

It has seemed to us that there are three cases which have interlocked themselves and destroyed that sense of integrity in respect of the Minister who resigned today. I recite these facts not with a sense of glee or a sense of pleasure but simply to put on the record why the integrity of the House and its future was very much at stake.

The first case was that of Hyundai, a Korean manufacturer of low-cost cars which received a tremendous favour from the Minister—the cancellation of a commitment under his control to purchase a certain level of Canadian content within the country. The variations in levels mentioned have ranged from $300 million to slightly lower figures. In any event, it was a tremendous favour on the part of that company. It took place at the same time as the Minister's company was in receipt of loans from a Korean bank, a principal shareholder of which was that very Hyundai motor car company. That kind of highly questionable situation cannot be permitted to persist. It cannot be ignored. It cannot be examined by a Deputy Prime Minister and exonerated, with the people of the country being able to continue with a sense of integrity in this place.

Second, we had the case of Magna corporation, an extremely large, dynamic, and effective Canadian-owned company. Quite rightly, that company received large numbers of grants from the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion. However, it received those grants, which one has to consider were under the discretion of the Minister, in many cases at the same time as the spouse of the Minister was receiving help from the head of the Magna corporation to receive a $2.6 million interest-free loan which was not to go to her company. This business of women's liberation and a woman being able to carry her own career is not at issue here. The money was received by their company, with the benefits very much going back to the Minister himself.

Finally, we had a situation, which frankly has been developing for some time, involving one corporate empire within the country. The Brascan group had succeeded in setting up a very considerable privileged position for itself in respect of divestments in the country through dominating four of seven positions on the CDIC divestment committee. Moreover, it had used that position, through the debate which took place in respect of the contents of the CDC privatization Bill, to obtain advantages in the details of that Bill for the potential of Brascan and the remainder of that empire to control and direct CDC itself. Again it was a favour and a privilege. At the same time this was taking place, the spouse of the Minister who resigned today was approaching the company to request a $5 million loan.

That combination of mutual favouritism, which is all that we can call it, was simply so blatant as it became revealed to the people of the country that it was impossible for the Minister to continue. I give him credit for belatedly but finally reaching that conclusion. Let there be no mistake. This is not a fictional creation of the press and the Opposition. It is a set of facts which, put together, create an ironclad case which the Minister either had to answer in detail or resign, as he finally did this morning.

This whole case has done several things as well, Mr. Speaker. It has raised serious questions about the Code of Conduct dealing with conflict of interest which the Government has in place. It became clear to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) and myself as we talked with the Assistant Deputy Registrar General that the code did not include within it anything explicit enough concerning the question of conflict of interest where spouses are concerned. It became clear as well that there was absolutely no specification in the code that a blind trust should be made something effective. It was also clear that the Assistant Deputy Registrar General had no authority himself to carry out investigations or any resources to do so. Moreover, the neutrality of the Assistant Deputy Registrar General was not sufficiently protected because of his ability to communicate as he did to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) with respect to opposition Members who approached him about this question. These are all points which quite clearly must be improved in the handling of conflict of interest in the future.

A second broad point that has emerged has to do with the Government's handling of this crisis. We have had stonewalling on the part of the Deputy Prime Minister and today caterwauling on the part of the House Leader. Neither has been appropriate. Stonewalling and the attempt to reject systematically legitimate questions which our constituents asked us to raise is not appropriate behaviour on the part of the Government. Nor is the kind of complaining, caterwauling objections to our attempt to be a responsible Opposition appropriate behaviour on the part of the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

Despite this stonewalling, despite this caterwauling today, Parliament has nevertheless served its purpose, and we have once more seen the reason that we must have an effective Opposition, given its chance through the structure of the House, to make its case effectively.

This Opposition kept raising questions. This Opposition kept calling, despite the stonewalling, for inquiries. It kept fighting despite constant refusal from the Minister of a resignation that would respect the integrity of this place. It kept its commitment to the integrity which Parliament should represent. In doing so I think it served, in this case, the higher purpose, and I am proud to have been part of it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Are there questions or comments? If not, debate.

Hon. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, for over a week now this House has been consumed with one issue. That issue has not been the problems affecting the food industry in Canada, and they are monumental, or problems arising out of the high level discussions taking place in Japan with the industrial Group of Seven, or Canada's acceptance to the so-called G-5, or trade talks with the Chinese. Nor has the issue been the seeking of new industrial development in China and new industrial capital in China and Korea. As important as these issues are, Parliament has been consumed with one single issue, that of conflict of interest guidelines and how a Minister has adhered to these guidelines.

In saying that, I am not suggesting for a moment that this is not an important issue. Obviously, events of the day speak to the importance of the issue. Because it is the subject of this debate and was the subject of the Question Period, and the fact that the Minister resigned, should that make it the one consuming issue that takes all other issues off the agenda? I have some doubts about that, Mr. Speaker. I have grave doubts about it.

I have some doubt as well about the relevancy of this debate today. As a matter of fact I have been asking myself as I have sat here watching the events unfold today whether all of this was redundant. If the purpose of the motion put down by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) was to continue the Opposition's pressure on the Government and the former Minister of Regional Economic Expansion with a view to bringing about his resignation, then the statement of the former Minister at eleven o'clock today made that whole procedure redundant because the Minister has in fact resigned.

I am sure we could have rearranged our business to conduct ourselves in a way that we could address some of the other issues that have been neglected over the past week. Again, if the purpose of the pressure was to determine whether there was a serious breach of the conflict of interest guidelines, and if that was one of the objectives of bringing about this debate today, then I say the objective has been achieved, not only by the resignation of the Minister but by the very dignified manner of his resignation. He stood in his place in this House at eleven o'clock before we commenced the debate, the subject matter of which concerned his alleged conduct and whether he had violated the guidelines, and announced his resignation to the House. At the same time he called upon the Government to initiate an inquiry so that his name might be cleared. We have the Minister's resignation. We have the inquiry. What then, Sir, is the nature of this exercise? Why are we continuing to pursue this debate?

I have heard some questions raised critically with respect to the new rules of the House and whether they were able to meet the occasion of the day, whether they were able to rise to the challenges presented to us by the House in this issue. I suggest to you, Sir, and to the House that the new rules, and especially the new committee system, which is less than five weeks old, is able to cope with any situation that arises from time to time. We are still in the supply period. The Estimates are still before the standing committees of the House. The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition, under the new rules, has the discretion to designate and hold up the Estimates of any one Department beyond the end of the supply period. All these things are there for the Opposition to use.

I presume that the Estimates of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs are before the Standing Committee on Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Surely there was the vehicle whereby the conflict of interest guidelines could be directly addressed by examination of the Minister of that Department in his capacity as Registrar General, or of the department official known as the Assistant Deputy Registrar General. Surely it could have been pursued there, and it still can. There is no end to the opportunities the new committee system affords the House. That makes it very difficult for the House to justify having its agenda consist of one single issue for up to two weeks.

I heard the suggestion that the Opposition Parties tried to get this matter before two committees, the Standing Committee on Regional Industrial Expansion where the former Minister was defending his Estimates, or the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. I do not know what went on in the first committee, but I know what went on after the chairman adjourned the hearing because I saw it on television. The entire country saw the spectacle of Members of this House chasing a Minister out of the room, pursuing him with questions after the meeting had concluded. There was not one of us who saw that on television who was not embarrassed. I have never seen anything like it in my time here.

I have not had a chance to read the proceedings of that particular committee. I do not know whether the rulings of the chairman were pertinent and relevant to the rulings made by Your Honour in the House. Indeed, committees are independent in that regard. However, without having been present or examining the record I know the conduct in the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure was, in my view, proper and correct.

Under the rules of the House that committee has a very narrow mandate. It can only examine the rules and Standing Orders of the House. Any other matters have to be referred to it by the House. Rightly so. Obviously, you cannot have a committee of the House initiating privilege procedures. Only the House can deal with privilege. It can deal with it in any way it deems fit. One of the ways it normally deals with privilege, if the Chair rules there is a prima facie case, is to refer it to the committee. Were it to be any other way we could not really conduct ourselves in a proper and orderly manner in this place. Privilege is a sacred part of this place where it affects the rights each of us have as Members of this House.

Insofar as the Code of Conduct is concerned, the difficulty is that it is not a statute of this House. Consequently, it cannot properly be before a parliamentary committee other than when examining the custodian of the Code, in this case the Deputy Registrar General, or the Registrar General himself in the person of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Côté).

The Leader of the Opposition said in his speech today, and I do not quarrel with the statement, that the burden of proof is on the Minister to conduct himself in a manner above reproach. That is the burden carried by every Member of this House who is called upon to be a Minister of the Crown. However, I also say to you, Sir, that there is a responsibility which goes beyond those who are called upon to be Members of Cabinet. There is a burden upon each and every one of us to conduct ourselves in this House in a manner which will not bring disgrace upon us or embarrassment on the country. I suggest to you that there have been times over the last few days, both during Question Period and in committees of the House, when some of us have hung our heads in shame over the language, the exchanges in the House, and attacks on the Chair by innuendo. Surely, Sir, that has to change.

Mr. Tobin: Both sides?

Mr. McGrath: Yes, I have no hesitation in saying both sides. However, with all of the good will in the world in bringing in changes to the rules of this House, under a Government which was in my view magnanimous in what it was prepared to give up, those changes will not work unless there is a concomitant change of attitude on the part of all of us as Members. Without that change, without due regard for the responsibilities we have as Members of this place, then I am afraid we will just go from crisis to crisis on the floor of the House and the business of the nation will be swept to one side.

Important issues have been neglected this past week or 10 days as a consequence of the House being consumed by this issue. I do not mean this in any way critical of the Opposition, but under our rules the Opposition sets the agenda for Question Period. In doing so, due regard must be made for the other great issues of the day. After all, Question Period is the principal vehicle of accountability for us as parliamentarians, at least until we can develop a committee system which will take some of the issues away from Question Period and thereby make that a very important vehicle for accountability.

This is not a happy day for us. It is never a pleasant experience when any Member of this place is forced through circumstances to submit his or her resignation from the Cabinet. I commend those Members who made reference to the very dignified and responsible manner in which the former Minister conducted himself when he came to this place at eleven o'clock this morning to announce his resignation.

I hope, Sir, that we will give the new system a fair try. In doing so, I hope we as Members of Parliament will always conduct ourselves in such a way as to not bring embarrassment to the people of Canada, but bring honour on ourselves as Members of Parliament.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I was very interested to hear the Hon. Member participate in this debate. I believe he has earned the right to have Members pause and listen carefully when he speaks. That is so because of his work as chairman of the committee on reform and for the report he presented along with other members of the committee from all Parties. He is also entitled to that because of the work he has done following the presentation of the report to promote reform in this House.

Having said that, I reject the notion that no work has been done in the House over the last two weeks. I would not want the public to have that impression. We passed four Bills this past week, Bills C-96, C-107, C-108 and C-109. We have begun work on the Income Tax Act. House committees have continued to work. I think the public watching should understand that, while it is true media coverage, public comment and Question Period have been consumed with this issue, the work of the House has not stopped, and neither has the work of the legislative committees which resulted from the reform package, or the work of the standing committees with their new regulations which resulted from the reform package. None of that has stopped. The Member is right to be concerned that the spirit of reform, to the extent to which it exists among various players on all sides of the House, not be victim of the acrimony which grows out of this kind of conflictual matter.

I want to remind the Member that there was a time when this House was hijacked for two weeks. It was not consumed with a single issue, but hijacked. The bells were rung for two weeks. At that time no Bills were passed and no committees met. The bells rang for two weeks. Although it is not relevant, it was that side of the House that rang the bells. The public should bear that in mind.

Does the Member not agree that the basic premise for the function and operation of any Government has to be, not only the notion that the Government is honest and above board, but the perception that it is honest and above board? Would he not agree that the overwhelming media and public preoccupation with this issue over the last two weeks might have been avoided if we had in place in this environment a means to investigate immediately and cause to come to conclusion serious allegations of wrong-doing, rather than having as the only weapon open to the Opposition, the continued harassment of the Government and demands that something be done?

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I naturally want to respond to the rather extended comments made by the Member. The 10-minute period is given to the House for short comments and questions, but I will respond to his remarks.

In the course of his comments he interpreted what I said out of context. I was saying that the Opposition sets the agenda of the principal vehicle of accountability which we have in this House, that being Question Period. Question Period is the only chance we have in this House to deal with the issues as they develop, questions which used to be defined as "matters of urgent and of national importance" which cannot be dealt with in the ordinary manner in which we deal with legislation. That is precisely what I was saying.

The fact is that the work of the House continues beyond Question Period. That is one of the problems we have, because the only thing which is widely reported upon is the 45 minutes taken up by Question Period. I hope that that will be corrected. I hope that the House will soon be seized with a House order to allow the media to go into the standing committees of the House where a lot of the real work is done. I hope that as a consequence of cameras being allowed into the standing committees of the House decorum in the standing committees will improve.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the Hon. Member and I want to raise a couple of questions. He suggested that the Opposition was wrong to have devoted so much time in the House during the past weeks to this particular issue. Perhaps he is not aware of the frustrations we felt when questions about the conflict of interest situation were ruled out of order in the Standing Committee on Regional Industrial Expansion and in the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure which, as he said, has a limited mandate. We were forced back into the House of Commons.

I know that when the Member's Party was in opposition it, too, found that the only way to shake a majority Government was to focus on one issue. I contend that the issue of the integrity of an important Minister goes to the heart of what the Government is all about. If the integrity of a major Minister or of the Cabinet as a whole is in question, it is not worth ta!king about other issues for which the Government is responsible.

If the Hon. Member believes that there must be another way by which these issues can be resolved, I am not in disagreement with him. Can he make some constructive suggestions as to how that can be done in a way in which the Opposition could avoid using Question Period as its only recourse and putting this question so firmly on the agenda that the Minister finally had no choice but to do what he should have done 10 days ago, that is, resign?

Mr. McGrath: I thank the Hon. Member for that constructive intervention. I believe that there are ways of dealing with issues without consuming the entire Question Period, especially during the supply period. I have already referred to the fact that the matter could have been raised, and can still be raised— although I question the propriety of it now after what has happened today—at the new Standing Committee on Consumer and Corporate Affairs which has the responsibility of examining the Estimates of the Registrar General and before which the Assistant Deputy Registrar General can be called. It can be raised in the Committee on Government Operations where the Estimates of the Prime Minister's Office are examined. It can be raised in any number of ways. At the end of the supply period, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) can, under a new procedure, designate any one Department to have its Estimates examined for two weeks beyond the deadline of May 31.

The new committee system is barely a month old. I believe that when it starts functioning and we are able to develop a degree of collegiality as a consequence of the tenured membership which we hopefully now enjoy, it will lead to a development of expertise and that that collegiality will perhaps allow for more objectivity within the standing committees. I think that process would be furthered by the admission of all media, including electronic media. Quite frankly, it does seem to be functioning now but, by the same token, I do not think all of the avenues were thoroughly exhausted.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's comments with respect to the use of the Estimates process. Is he not aware that the Estimates process is severely circumscribed? Only two hours have been allocated for the consideration of about a billion dollars worth of spending in this Ministry's Estimates. The schedule had been agreed to by the committee before this issue flared up two weeks ago. If that was all the consideration possible within that committee, Opposition Parties would have had perhaps an hour of questioning to try to talk, not only about the Ministry's general responsibilities but about this specific and very serious issue. I do not believe that less than one hour of questioning is adequate, even if the chairman of that committee permitted all questioning to focus on the issue of conflict of interest.

Does the Hon. Member think that is adequate? Is there not need for some other means of dealing with these matters if they are to be taken out of the House?

Mr. McGrath: No, Mr. Speaker, it would appear that two hours would not be adequate to deal with a matter as important as this. I refer my hon. friend to the new Standing Order 96(2) which sets out the permanent mandate of the standing committees. It is certainly within the framework of that mandate for the appropriate standing committee to continue with an examination of this issue after the time set aside for the examination of Estimates. That is the objective behind the new system. I believe and hope that it will work.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

SUSPENSION OF PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS ON ALLOTTED DAY

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Danis): Earlier today the Government House Leader (Mr. Hnatyshyn) designated tomorrow, Tuesday, May 13, as an allotted day. Pursuant to Standing Order 38, therefore, the hour for Private Members' Business will be suspended.

Accordingly, in conformity with the statement made by the Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski) last Friday, I am instructing the Table Officers that the item on Private Members' Business standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) be dropped to the bottom of the order of precedence.

SUPPLY

That this House condemns the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Government for failing to provide full and satisfactory information on the blatant conflict of interest situation involving that Minister.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to take a few minutes to speak to the motion before the House today, a motion moved by the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) and which reads as follows:

That this House condemns the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Government for failing to provide full and satisfactory information on the blatant conflict of interest situation involving that Minister.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on what was said a few minutes ago by the Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) who openly accused the Opposition of talking too much about the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) and the conflict of interest matter during the last two weeks, while neglecting other major, national concerns that would otherwise have been discussed in the House.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of my hon. colleague from St. John's East to the fact that during the past week, an impressive number of bills were debated in the House, including Bill C-96, an Act to amend federal-provincial fiscal arrangements; Bill C-107 which was adopted at all three stages and concerns the United Nations Convention on Foreign Arbitral Awards. Bill C-108, an Act relating to commercial arbitration, was also adopted at all three stages on May 7. Bill C-109 to amend the Income Tax Act was introduced in the House on May 6. Furthermore, during the last few days we have considered Bill C-45, which proposes unionizing the employees of the House of Commons, and even Bill C-92, which deals with petroleum interests on the frontier lands, was debated in this House.

Well, Mr. Speaker, contrary to the claims made by my hon. colleague from St. John's East, the Opposition has not tried to make the national issues discussed in this House take a back seat to the errors committed by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. I agree, however, that during Oral Question Period, much of our time was taken up with trying to make the Government shed some light on this affair.

Referring to the attitude shown a moment ago by the Hon. Member for St. John's East, I would suggest he cannot censure any of the Opposition Members sitting on a House committee because last week on TV he claims he saw Members running after the Minister. I would remind him that he should have attended that committee meeting, for he would have seen a Minister systematically refusing to answer any question put to him, he would have seen the chairman of that committee in cahoots with the Minister to prevent any question from being directed to the Minister concerning his ability to continue holding his portfolio as a result of the fact that, at least in appearance, the Minister was directly involved in a conflict of interest situation, and he would have seen the committee Conservative majority endorse the ruling of the chairman who was thus gagging Members of the Opposition.

Mr. Speaker, the Government has already gone too far here in the House by refusing to answer our questions on conflicts of interest. Mr. Speaker, you should have been present at this committee meeting to see, not a Minister refusing to answer our questions, but the chairman of the committee, supported by all Conservative Members of the committee, deny us any opportunity even to direct questions. No wonder then that day after day the Opposition used practically all the available time during Oral Question Periods to force the Government into a corner with respect to this whole affair. It was the only avenue open to us. There was no other procedure, no other way for us to ask this Government to answer to the public and respond to our inquiries. Again I stress the fact that these two committee sittings were a sheer waste of time because the Government simply would not answer our questions.

In conclusion, my last remark in response to the speech of the Hon. Member for St. John's East is that the Conservative Members are hardly in a position to lecture the Liberal Party of Canada. I vividly recall being in this House on a certain evening during the constitutional debate when the Deputy Speaker, who was then occupying your position, was physically threatened by a few Conservative Members who marched right up to the Speaker's chair, fists in the air and shouting to prevent the question from being put on an issue which had been debated in the House for weeks on end. Therefore neither I nor any of my colleagues on this side of the House can be censured by Conservative Members who went as far as threatening the Speaker during a debate in this House.

If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to get back to current events which prompted the Leader of the Official Opposition to introduce the motion under consideration.

At the beginning of the sitting this morning, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion made an intervention in the House during which he offered his resignation. I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that it was a case of too little and too late. I say that it is too late because, as the Hon. Member for St. John's East said earlier, if it had occurred much earlier, such as two weeks ago, many other issues could have been discussed in this House in the meantime. If an inquiry had been launched at the very beginning, other Members of Parliament would have had the opportunity to discuss many other issues of national interest.

Did anything special happen last weekend for the Government to reverse its stand so completely this morning that it would ask the Minister to resign and decide to hold an inquiry? Last Friday, during the Oral Question Period, I and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. Deans) questioned the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), who answered this:

The compliance that is required is the compliance by all Ministers of the Crown with the Code of Conduct. I am required to ensure that there has been that compliance, and I have done that.

For the fifteenth time in two weeks, the Deputy Prime Minister replied that, in his opinion, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion had complied with the guidelines and the code of conduct.

What has happened since last Friday for the Minister to resign and for the Deputy Prime Minister to agree with the Opposition and say that he has asked the Prime Minister for an inquiry? I shall tell you what has happened. The fact is that, during the weekend, the Government had the time to reflect and to consult people who know about public opinion, such as the pollsters, and to realize that its image was dangerously compromised by the scandal which was developing while the questions which were being asked remained unanswered. I think that the Government gave in to public opinion because, in the short history of this Government, which came to power only one year and a half ago and which will probably not be able to last much longer, we have become used to see the Government withdraw in the face of public opinion.

Let me recall for instance the attack launched by the Government on senior citizens when it proposed to de-index their pensions. Only after three weeks or one month of public furore did the Government decide to backtrack.

Mr. Speaker, clearly the letter of the guidelines appears to have been violated—if it has not been in fact, because we have not as yet been given an opportunity to go to the bottom of the matter. Because not only do the guidelines forbid the Minister to get involved in a conflict of interest, but they direct him to make sure that neither his or her spouse, nor his or her children will even appear to be in a conflict of interest situation. And it is clear that, as it seems, the Minister's wife did things that would not be acceptable under the guidelines contained in the Code of Conduct.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to deal with the following fact: the guidelines are not legally binding in Canada, and in that sense they are unique. In a number of countries, as in the United States, there is some sort of legal code prohibiting under penal sanctions people in public office from getting into conflict of interest situations. Such is not the case here. In Canada, those guidelines are but a code of ethics, that is a promise, a commitment by people in public office not to violate either the letter or the spirit of that code.

Mr. Speaker, I submit that there is a price to be paid by a Minister of the Crown in a country where the code of ethics is not legally binding. And that price in my view is that, as soon as the conduct of someone in public office is being questioned because of any action, the public is entitled to expect immediate, complete and forthright explanations. And this in my view is what we should expect from the implementation of those guidelines.

If someone in public office is in a sense protected because the code of ethics is not legally binding, he is thus protected against charges that might be levied against him. He is sure not to be subpoenaed. In view of the fact that these guidelines have no legal value, the holder of a public office and all those for that matter who assume important duties and who are governed by these guidelines should agree to provide forthwith complete explanations.

During the Oral Question Period, Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister assured us that an impartial investigation of the conflict of interest in which the Minister is involved would be carried out. However, he hastened to add that he felt the House or a committee of the House, if I understood him right, should not be empowered to rule on the Minister's behaviour, since there remain very few impartial people in the House who could deal with this. Well, my response to this is: Who, besides Hon. Members sitting in this House, could be empowered to rule on the behaviour of one of their peers? Given the fact that the guidelines which the Minister appears to have transgressed have no legal force or form, I suggest that there remains only one group of people able to rule on the behaviour of their peer, that is, the Hon. Members of this House.

If the Deputy Prime Minister should continue to refuse that an investigation be carried out by a committee of the House, he would be maintaining the position which the Government adopted last week, when on two occasions committees made it impossible for Hon. Members not only to give replies, but also to ask questions concerning this matter.

I should like now to direct questions to the Government while considering together with you, Mr. Speaker, some of the mysteries which continue to exist even after the statement made this morning by the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. The first mystery is this: What has changed? I have been asking this question since last Friday, and I did again earlier. What has changed over the past two weeks during which we have continually heard the Deputy Prime Minister trying to defend what was indefensible. Does a conflict of interest truly exist or not? The mystery continues. We have here a Minister who is resigning while continuing to claim that he has followed the guidelines. If this is not a mystery, I should like to know what is. If the Minister involved has not really transgressed the guidelines concerning conflicts of interest, why is he resigning? Why is he asking for an investigation?

Another mystery to clear up is this: Has the Prime Minister demanded or not this action by the Minister? On the face of it and if we can believe him, the Minister seems to have asked to be relieved of his duties.

If we can rely on a Canadian Press wire originating from a foreign country which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is presently visiting, it seems that it is not the Prime Minister who asked for the Minister's resignation. I find this rather strange, for if we look at the guidelines drafted by the office of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), if we read the letter he wrote to all Members, Ministers and Senators last September 9, he stated that in the end it is the Prime Minister's responsibility to see to it that all public office holders abide by the guidelines. Therefore my question is this: How come the Prime Minister himself did not ask the Minister—some time ago, two weeks—how come the Prime Minister did not ask for the Minister's resignation?

From the English version I have here I will quote part of the letter the Prime Minister sent to Members, Ministers and Senators last September 9:

• (1550)

We have taken great pains to ensure that the new Code leaves no doubt that the ultimate responsibility for the ethical standards of the federal Government rests with the Cabinet and, more particularly, with me.

This letter is signed by the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney). So it is a great mystery to me that the Prime Minister has not seen fit during the past two weeks to ask the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) to resign instead of waiting for the Minister to offer his resignation in a statement this morning. Where is the responsibility of the Prime Minister? Where is he, in fact? We have not seen him for the past two weeks. He has the excuse that he is on official business, but it is certainly a strange coincidence that every time a matter of this type errupts in the House of Commons it so happens that the Prime Minister vanishes from the country—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): —and is not here to account for himself. Hon. Members opposite and I know we can go back to other instances where he has been away at a time when he should have been here to make sure first that his Government stands on its feet.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): His job is to go out and sell this country just as we are all doing.

Ms. Copps: Don't sell it out the way you've been doing, or, my God, we'll have nothing left.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I would like to quote from this letter once again. It reads, and I quote:

In carrying out that responsibility the Government is directly accountable to Parliament and through Parliament to the people of Canada. You will find no quasi-independent agencies in this Code that will allow the Government to shirk its responsibility by saying that the problem belongs to someone else.

All we are awaiting now is an announcement from the Government that some judge or some outsider has been handed the responsibility of looking into this matter so that once again another promise will be broken. Let us not have another quasi-independent agency, as referred to in this letter, deal with the matter of the conflict of interest instead of a committee of this House so that we can be sure that these guidelines are worth the paper they are written on. At present they are just words being thrown away.

I hope we will be able to witness the responsibility taken by the Prime Minister and the Government towards the people of Canada through this House of Commons by having an inquiry run by Hon. Members of this House so that the public will know that the Government has not shirked its responsibility. I look forward to seeing that.

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, is it the position of the Opposition that it would rather have the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure do the inquiry rather than a judge, for example, of the Supreme Court? I ask that because Hon. Members of the Official Opposition on television the other night acted like banshees in terms of their decorum. They certainly did not do any good to the reputation of Hon. Members of the House generally. It would seem that as a result of their various protestations over the last two weeks something independent is what they required. I just wanted to ensure that the record declare what, in fact, is the position of the Hon. Member.

• (1600)

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): First, I do not know whether or not the Hon. Member walked into the House during the course of my speech. My speech was all about the matter the Hon. Member raises.

When the Hon. Member spoke about banshees at the committee meeting, that is another place where he should have been. He would have seen then that all of what he saw on television happened after the meeting and not during it. He would have seen one member of the Cabinet pushing some of our members around. This is how the whole thing erupted.

An Hon. Member: No, no, no.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): The Hon. Member should not say: "No, no, no" because he was not there either. I would like those Hon. Members who wish to discuss this issue and who were there, as I was, to stand up in the House and discuss it.

An Hon. Member: You should be ashamed of yourself!

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I am not ashamed of myself. What we were doing at that time was asking questions in a civilized, bona fide fashion. We were being denied by the Tory majority even the right to ask our questions. If that is not correct then I would like any Hon. Member in the House to stand up and say so.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, it is not with a great deal of pleasure that I rise to participate in this debate. I do not believe that this debate should have been necessary.

I contrast the present situation with the situation involving the resignation of the former Minister of National Defence some months ago. At that time a newspaper account appeared in the Ottawa Citizen indicating that the Minister had spent some time in a questionable bar in Lahr, West Germany, during a trip to NATO bases. The article appeared in the morning edition of the newspaper and the Minister offered his resignation, which was accepted by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), even before Question Period started that day.

With the benefit of hindsight, perhaps one has to ask why we are so prudish about matters relating to sex and so complacent about matters relating to financial conflicts of interest. Why is it in this case that after the initial press accounts, which raised serious questions about the Minister's activities and about the conflicts of interest in which his spouse had entangled him, the Government stonewalled our questions for a period of almost two weeks until the Minister offered and had his resignation accepted today? Even today he says that he wants to clear his name and that he wants an investigation. As far as I am concerned, I am satisfied that there will be some form of investigation. I believe that this matter should properly be handled within the House itself by the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. That was the case with the reference of the matters involving the former Member for Verdun and of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). These matters went before the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. It seems to me appropriate that that should have been the place for this matter to have been referred.

Along with many members of the House, I deplore the behaviour of certain members of the Liberal caucus after the meeting the other night of the Standing Committee on Regional Industrial Expansion. I was there at that committee meeting and I was not part of the shenanigans which took place afterward. Hon. Members have spoken of the frustration we felt at that meeting. I certainly felt frustration, since all of the questions relating to the integrity of the Minister were consistently ruled out of order by the Chairman of the committee. We found that despite the new rules, our ability to use the new committee structure in order to get at a matter which was of grave public concern was, in fact, frustrated as a result of the interpretation of the rules by the Chairman.

I have said that the affair concerning the former Minister of National Defence was dissimilar to this situation. However, it was similar in one way, that is, the Government of the day and the Prime Minister knew about the problem for some three weeks before action was taken. What is different is that in the first case action was taken as soon as the matter became public, which indicated that the Government was at least publicity shy. In this particular case the Government has known for as long as all of us have known. It did nothing until it finally became clear that it had no choice but to act or else we would be devoting the entire next month and a half to this matter in Question Period. The Hon. Member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) said: "Why do that?" He has asked why we should devote so much time in Question Period to this particular issue. As I said in my intervention, it is because this issue goes right to the heart of the integrity, not just of one Minister but of the entire Government. After the Government, through the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen), began to stand up for the Minister's compliance to the Code of Conduct it became a question of the integrity of the entire Government.

I wish to remind Hon. Members that again and again the guidelines which were circulated to Ministers in 1975, which are a follow-up of similar provisions which have prevailed since 1963, indicate that there is an obligation which goes far beyond just simply complying with some narrow letter of the law. One section of the principles in the guidelines states that Ministers have an obligation to act in a manner that would bear the closest public scrutiny, an obligation which is not fully discharged by simply acting within the law. Another section states that Ministers shall perform their official duties and so arrange their private affairs in such a manner that public confidence and trust in the integrity, objectivity and impartiality of government are conserved and enhanced. Through the course of the last week and a half we saw one revelation after another about ways in which the Minister's network of interests in his business career and in his private life was interfacing and interfering with his ability to act impartially and without potential or real conflicts of interest in his work as the Minister for Regional Industrial Expansion.

As soon as this matter was raised, as soon as serious allegations were made and as soon as it was clear that they were not just the passing fancy of some sleazy journalist in a third rate newspaper—and they definitely were not that—the Minister should have indicated at that time that he was resigning his seat and asking that the matter be investigated. To do so now indicates that the Minister has been forced into it or that he has been made to take this particular action by the Prime Minister. In other words, it is not voluntary. It is not seeking to uphold the highest standards; it is only because he has been forced to take this action and because he has no alternative.

I would remind the House as well of the facts about which we are speaking.

[Translation]

I wish to remind all Hon. Members of the letter dated September 9, 1985, which the Prime Minister sent to all his Cabinet Ministers exempting their spouses from the Code provisions. It stated in part:

"However," said the Prime Minister, "I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of the activities of their spouses or dependent children or the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children."

Now, Mr. Speaker, the conflict of interest situation in which Mr. Stevens is involved did not begin when Mrs. Stevens tried to borrow money from the President of Magna International, and eventually from Mr. Anton Czapka, an associate and former co-founder of this major company which has received so many millions of dollars in federal grants and subsidies.

The conflict of interest situation began when the Minister established his blind trust in October 1984, for the administration of his assets in the York Centre Corporation, because at the time, the Minister ignored the fact that his wife continued to act as vice-president of Cardiff Investments, a York Centre branch responsible for the real estate arm of the York Centre Corporation. Following the reception of the Prime Minister's letter dated September 9, the Minister chose again to ignore the fact that his wife was vice-president of this branch, that her company was in fact responsible for the administration of his very significant assets placed in a blind trust.

For all practical purposes, Mr. Speaker, he had failed to entrust his assets to an independent administration.

[English]

It is clear that when we come to look at the adequacy of these conflict of interest guidelines, as I believe we must and must do soon, the question of exactly how to deal with how spouses should be treated will have to be looked at seriously. My Leader pointed out the fact that spouses enjoy community of property with their husbands, or wives as the case may be, because of the marriage property rules which have come into force in Ontario and in other provinces in recent years. Therefore, even if a spouse has a business or a career which is entirely independent from that of his or her spouse who is in Government as a Minister, the fortunes of that spouse indirectly benefit the fortunes of the Minister. However, here we have a case of a conflict which is much more direct. Here we have a Minister who put his interests into a blind trust and then gave his wife effective power to run them. Mrs. Stevens went to the Chairman of Magna International and said: "Hey, can you give me a loan? We are having a tough time". She went knocking on doors on Bay Street, the doors of companies that were consistently doing business with her husband's Ministry, which was involved in the divestiture process, the privatization of Crown corporations, the raising of money for the Government of Canada and other business affairs. She did not blanch at the fact that the Minister had been told to avoid what would, in my view, have been very obvious conflicts of interest in these particular cases.

I am shocked by the reaction we have had in today's debate from the Government House Leader and from the Deputy Prime Minister during the course of Question Period. In particular, the Government House Leader should have known better than to make the speech he made this morning. He tried to say that all of this was trumped up by the Opposition, that it was simply a matter of innuendo, to use his word, a word that he had borrowed from "Velcro-Lips I", that is, the Deputy Prime Minister. He claimed that it was all supposition and that the Opposition had not made a charge. He suggested that the Prime Minister made efforts to consult with the Opposition on conflict of interest guidelines, and repeated the false charge made by the Deputy Prime Minister, which was that this matter had not been disposed of by the House Leaders. It has been, and the matter of conflict of interest guidelines for Members of Parliament has been sent to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services.

We were not talking about innuendo. We were talking about allegations made in reputable newspapers after very serious research and on the basis of documentary evidence from the Registry Office of the County of York. I personally spoke with Mr. Frank Stronach, the President and Chairman of Magna International, and I asked him to confirm that Mrs. Stevens came looking for a loan. He said yes and he said that he referred her on to Mr. Czapka. He confirmed the story which appeared in The Globe and Mail a week ago Tuesday.

We are not talking about innuendo, we are talking about facts. If the Minister had felt that these facts were in error, he could have taken action through the courts. He has not chosen to do so because these facts will hold water.

The Government House Leader suggested that we were talking about a contrast between subjective opinion and objective standards of conduct. We have objective standards of conduct but they have to be interpreted subjectively. That is why there is such reference to highest possible standards of conduct, to maintaining integrity and objectivity on the part of Government and to maintaining all of those things which are part of the principles of the conflict of interest guidelines laid down by the Government on September 9 of last year.

One of the reasons I and my Party believe that this matter should be referred, as the Mackasey affair was referred, to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure is the fact that we are looking at a matter of political judgement. I have a great fear that the Government will adopt a terribly narrow view when it sends this matter to its outside investigator. I am afraid it will adopt such a narrow view that the major issues and the major import of the allegations raised in the House will be ignored by whoever carries out the inquiry.

The Government House Leader suggested that the Opposition has never proved non-compliance. Among other things, non-compliance is in part a matter of judgement, and compliance or non-compliance is a matter of access to documents which, by the rules laid down by the Government, are secret.

We are talking about a Code of Conduct which was not adopted by the House of Commons but was laid down independently by the Government in a letter, a series of publications and an Order in Council from Cabinet, and which only represented one side of the House. I suggest as well that it is not up to us to prove this allegation. The burden of proof, when serious allegations are made, in fact returns to the Government and to Ministers who are charged with conflict of interest.

The Minister could have sought to appear before a committee to clear his name and put forward the facts which, in his opinion, would have proven that he was not in violation of the standards of conduct that were laid down. He chose not to do so and instead he has now asked that there be an investigation as to the facts respecting these allegations.

The Prime Minister's letter indicates that there will be an impartial investigation of the facts regarding those allegations. My Party is very concerned about the tone of that and about the Prime Minister's suggestion that we have an investigation to clear the Minister's name. I regret the fact that the Deputy Prime Minister does not agree with me, but I think we have to take the view at this point that these allegations are to be proven. It has not been proven either that the Minister complied or that he did not comply with the conflict of interest guidelines.

In resigning, the Minister has recognized, alas so late, that he made serious errors or that there were perceived to be serious errors made by him and his wife with regard to these particular guidelines. However, this investigation will not have credibility if it is carried out in private. It will not have credibility if the terms of reference are determined unilaterally without consultation with opposition Parties. It will not have credibility if the terms of reference are too narrow. It will not have credibility if the report is to be kept private and never made public or if portions of the report are censored before being published.

The investigation will not be credible if it only reports to the Prime Minister. There has to be a means by which it can be considered by Parliament, and I would recommend that the report go to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure so that it can be considered there and so that a committee of the House can have a chance to do the job that the Hon. Member for St. John's East has suggested that committees should be doing.

I would like an assurance that Members of Parliament will be able to make submissions before this committee. I would also like an assurance that Members of Parliament will be able to be privileged when they do so. We do not want the Minister to decide suddenly to have his lawyers try to stop anyone from making allegations before the committee, whether it be a Member of Parliament or a member of the public.

Finally, it has to be made crystal clear in the terms of reference that this committee is not just looking to facts but also to the respect for the spirit of the guidelines, the objectives of Section 4, the rules in Sections 5 and 6 and the long list of principles in Section 7. While I believe the investigation should be carried out first and foremost by a committee of the House, if the Government is using its majority to determine that it should be done outside, it should look at the question of the spirit and principles of those guidelines and not just the narrow letter of the law.

[Translation]

Let me remind you, Mr. Speaker, that Section 7, under the heading "Principle" provides that Ministers of the Crown, and I quote,"—shall perform their official duties and arrange their private affairs in such a manner that public confidence and trust in the integrity, objectivity and impartiality of government are conserved and enhanced". Also, Ministers "—have an obligation to act in a manner that will bear the closest public scrutiny, an obligation that is not fully discharged by simply acting within the law." And Ministers "—shall not have private interests, other than those permitted pursuant to this Code, that would be affected particularly or significantly by government actions in which they participate."

And elsewhere, Mr. Speaker, as I just quoted in French. It is provided that ministers should also make sure that their spouses avoid all conflicts of interest in dealings in property or in investment transactions. And clearly, Mr. Speaker, this may need clarification in the future. But clearly, it is—

It is crystal clear that the spouses of Ministers should not be running their business affairs when those business affairs have nominally been put into a blind trust.

My final question relates to the role of the Deputy Prime Minister and through him the credibility and integrity of the Government as a whole. I have just read the sections of the code that talk about the need for all Ministers to uphold the integrity, objectivity and impartiality of Government. What we have seen from the Deputy Prime Minister is something quite to the contrary. Since this affair began, he has insisted that there has been full compliance by the Minister. He has repeated that even today. He is a man who sees no evil, hears no evil and presumably, in his view, speaks no evil. He has not understood why it is that millions of Canadians have felt there was a conflict of interest situation. Even 65 members of the riding association of the Conservative Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes) were pressing their Member over the weekend and saying: "For God sake, do something. We cannot stand this kind of situation. You are bringing our Party down". Those rank and file grass roots members in Calgary had a lot more savvy than the 212 Members of Parliament on the Conservative side, particularly the Deputy Prime Minister.

The Deputy Prime Minister did not want an investigation when his official, the Assistant Deputy Registrar General, failed in his duty, as I believe he did at least to report to the Minister that the guidelines were inadequate to cover this particular case, that there was a prima facie case which should be investigated, and that somebody should take on the powers of investigation as an official act. When the Deputy Prime Minister became aware of how weak and ineffective that official was—I have met Mr. Boyle and I regret to say that that is the case—the Deputy Prime Minister did not then act. This fact means that he was derelict in his duty in terms of enforcing the Code of Conduct on behalf of the Prime Minister.

The Deputy Prime Minister assured us today that he took action, but he would not agree to indicate what that action had been. I suggest that his responsibility has been to stonewall for the Government. We have seen that again and again and again, where he used misinformation, disinformation and irrelevance, where he changed the subject or did everything possible to stay away from the issue which he, being an intelligent man, knew was the issue on the minds of not only the opposition Parties but also of Canadians from coast to coast.

Therefore, I believe it is time to consider—and the Prime Minister when he returns from his Asian trip should consider it—asking the Deputy Prime Minister to look elsewhere for employment than to be in the Cabinet. I do not believe that Minister has done his job in upholding the standards of integrity which the people of Canada have the right to expect from the duly elected Government of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Charles Hamelin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, normally, first-time Members of the House are full of enthusiasm when they are asked to speak in a debate. I think that applies to most of my colleagues who were elected to the House for the first time. This morning at 3 a.m., as I drove the 1,000 kilometers between my riding and Ottawa, I was not terribly anxious to speak to this Opposition motion today. Like many others, I arrived in September 1984, and it may be what some people call idealism—I call it idealism in any case, others call it naïveté—and until now I had always thought that in this House, this select group of elected Members, the representatives of the Canadian people had as much respect for this institution and its Members as I hoped to have and had personally.

One of the basic tenets of Canadian law and Canadian justice is habeas corpus, which means that a person is considered innocent until the courts consider or judge that person to be guilty. In real life, a person is presumed innocent until found guilty. In real life, any individual who claims his rights have been breached by another individual can make his case heard, but it must be supported by the facts. It cannot consist merely of allegations, insinuations and all matter of gossip. Mr. Speaker, if a case is based on false insinuations, the case is not only thrown out of court but the judge can also award substantial damages. That, Mr. Speaker, is real life. Unfortunately, this is not real life. Here things are different. Here, contrary to what I thought, we are involved in politics.

I also thought, Mr. Speaker, that the House of Commons was a place where there was serious debate on questions affecting the lives of all Canadians. I must say that here again, I had to adjust my thinking. I had to change my mind.

Mr. Speaker, during the past two weeks, major events were taking place both on the international and national scene. However, these events were practically ignored here in the House. Mr. Speaker, the accident at the nuclear power station in Chernobyl was not discussed at all. On the national scene, we had a Supreme Court decision concerning the use of official languages in Canadian courts. Not a word. There was no mention either of mortgage rates which are now at their lowest level since 1972. And of course, not a word about international terrorism which affects and threatens many Canadians working or travelling abroad.

Instead, Mr. Speaker, our Opposition colleagues could think of only one thing: to smear a man's and a minister's reputation, to have his head at any price.

And all this has happened, not as it does in real life but under cover of parliamentary immunity. These Members levelled charges against a Minister, charges that were biased and contained only the items that make the headlines in the media. People being what they are, and as a former journalist, I know whereof I speak, the charges appear on the first page and the explanations on the last page if at all. For instance, the Canadian Government's splendid contribution to Africa, announced by the Minister for External Relations (Mrs. Vézina), ended up on page 14 or 15 in nearly all the papers.

Mr. Speaker, what about the trip of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), our ambassador to Japan, which has also been ignored, or practically so?

Mr. Speaker, I have always thought that parliamentary immunity is an essential tool available to Members so they might enjoy greater freedom of expression. But as Duplessis used to say about freedom of expression: To some people, freedom of expression is like alcohol, they cannot take it. The least I can say about the way it has been used in recent weeks is that it has been irresponsible and quite inhuman, I think. For two weeks the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) was literally crucified by an Opposition bent on forcing him to resign.

When I opted for public life, Mr. Speaker, I knew that my private life would no longer be quite so private and that, as all Hon. Members, I would have to make sacrifices with respect to me and my family's private life.

Still I was and still am waiting for something, for I am a naïve new Member—green in English, blue in French—I do not know that. I thought my colleagues would display a sense of ethics and respect for their fellow human beings.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, the Parties will always have diverging opinions, and this is why I am a Conservative, someone else a Liberal, and yet another a New Democrat. I dare hope that such diverging opinions are always based on facts, or at least on one's perception of facts, and that the ensuing debates are carried out with respect for the individual and the hope to improve the well-being of Canadians. Indeed Canadian men and women expect their Members to do their work as best they can and be serious about public issues. In my judgment, Mr. Speaker, the debate over the last two weeks does not fall into this category.

What do ordinary Canadians, particularly younger ones, think of the sordid spectacle they witnessed in committee last Wednesday when I was there myself? Mr. Speaker, it was like a circus.It was like a zoo without the fences.

• (1630)

As usual, Mr. Speaker, the Minister had been invited to introduce the Estimates and to explain the programs of his Department. When the Committee decided to invite the Minister, the previous speaker, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy), protested against the fact that the Minister would appear only once because he had many questions to ask him about his Department. What happened?

The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre did not ask a single question about the estimates of the Minister's Department.

Yet, the rules are simple, Mr. Speaker. If the Hon. Member had questions to ask about the estimates, then was the time to do so. He did not. Instead of debating the issues, we had hysterics from the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) and a boxing match starring none other than the Rat Pack's Rocky, the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata).

Ms. Copps: And Mr. Bissonnette, the big guy of six feet seven inches and 175 pounds!

Mr. Hamelin: Mr. Speaker, I can understand perfectly that the Opposition should play the role of a watch-dog. This term is made up of two words. Usually, you imagine that you are dealing with a kind of sheep-dog, nice, but still effective as it will bite at the right time. However, that evening, instead of the two words, we had only the second.

I think that the people in their constituencies must be very proud to be represented in such a dignified manner. According to the people here, it seems that no witness was ever so badly mistreated in a committee. I personally witnessed the verbal assaults of the Opposition Members.

I felt that we had sunk very low. Just imagine how nervous the other witnesses will be in the future, and I am thinking about the ordinary Canadians who are called before our committees, the ordinary people who work with us!

I would like to tell the Canadian public that what we have seen in this case does fortunately not happen as a rule. I especially want to tell young Canadians who might be thinking of entering public life to excuse this shameful episode in Canadian politics.

I would now like to deal more directly with the motion and the guidelines on conflict of interests introduced on September 9, 1985.

I would like to remind this House that, on that date, the Prime Minister wrote both the Liberal and the NDP Opposition Leaders to ask them for suggestions about these guidelines. Yet, Mr. Speaker, even though a similar subject had been referred by my colleague, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Hnatyshyn), to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services, neither Opposition Leader made any concrete suggestion. They probably found the code adequate, but if not, they had an opportunity not only to express their concerns, but also to make suggestions to improve it. As you know, Mr. Speaker, they did not do so and refused to bother with this matter.

The code was therefore implemented as proposed and the Ministers complied with it.

All of a sudden, Mr. Speaker, the Opposition wakes up and cries shame—the code is inadequate! We are always ready to listen to their suggestions, but as yet they have offered none. The people of this country must therefore wonder about those watch-dogs, or whatever, of parliamentary ethics.

This is not the first time such a thing happens. Remember, Mr. Speaker, the wage and price control issue in 1974. The Progressive Conservative Party struck the right note at the time, and still does. Of course the truth may hurt at times, but we took on our responsibilities while respecting the dignity of this institution.

Even today, Opposition parties had an opportunity to initiate a debate on that code of honour. What did they do, Mr. Speaker? They used the forum of an Opposition day to attack the Government without proposing any significant improvement to the system. Instead, they have chosen as they did this morning, despite the Minister's announced resignation, to go on reviling one of the most articulate Members of this House. Let us make no mistake about it: the Opposition parties are attacking one of the brightest parliamentarians in this House, one of the most capable of running a department. Sinclair Stevens is one of the most competent men we have, with the most experience in those areas.

And I with all my greenness, Mr. Speaker, with my lack of experience, I had a chance with a group of businessmen to meet the Minister, to discuss situations, problems. And even though in 80 per cent of cases I failed to secure grants for those businessmen, each time they had this to say at the end of the meeting: We are carried away by that man's gift for analysis, and the quality of his questions.

And I am willing to be checked on that. We had $170 million in investments at the Donahue plant in my area, and despite my representations the Government of Canada failed to participate. The same thing happened with a few other companies, for much smaller amounts. In every case, I appealed to the Minister, I asked for his co-operation, and he accepted to meet my businessmen, to discuss matters with them, and each time I was proud of our Minister, of having him in this Government.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, Ministers should respect the rules as they are. With respect to the Opposition parties' imaginary rules we have been waiting to see them since at least September 9, 1985.

Mr. Speaker, our whole democratic system is based on statutes and legal documents, written black on white. Such are the parameters on which people are judged and assessed. When our society wants to adopt new rules, it proceeds through Parliament which can amend laws and create new ones.

On September 9, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister introduced his new guidelines, and Opposition Members failed to play their role as legislators by not submitting any serious proposal. The guidelines are clear, and if Hon. Members wish to suggest amendments, we are prepared to listen to them, as we have been ever since that date.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, I should like to remind Quebecers that the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion last year spent not less than 42 per cent of its budget in Quebec. It invested 43 per cent of all available money in Quebec businesses to create new jobs for Quebecers. Forty-three per cent! Some of my colleagues know very well, just as I do, that Sinclair Stevens has demonstrated an uncommon interest in Quebec's problems.

I therefore wish, Mr. Speaker, that the impartial investigation hoped for by Hon. Sinclair Stevens will clear up this matter and bring back to us a person extraordinarily competent and understanding whom this Government, Quebec and the whole of Canada need very much.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions or comments?

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I think it is obvious that what is of paramount importance in the minds of Canadians is this Government's sense of justice and morality. The Minister resigned today, notwithstanding the fact that the Official Opposition and others have been calling for the resignation for two weeks. The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) has continually defended the former Minister. Yet at no time today have I heard from anyone in the Government the admission of any wrongdoing. There is not even the admission of an appearance of conflict of interest. The former Minister said he did not know about the $2.6 million loan which was interest-free for the first year. We are all honourable Members in this House so we have to believe him. However, Canadians do not believe that his wife did not tell him about the loan. The Minister said he received no benefit. If you lend someone $2.6 million interest-free for one year, there is a benefit of over $300,000. The Minister said he did no wrong and that he complied with the guidelines. Does the Hon. Conservative Member who just spoke agree with me when I say that one need not refer to conflict of interest guidelines when one has to determine the difference between right and wrong?

The facts speak for themselves. If anyone has a sense of morality, decency, honesty and integrity, he or she does not have to refer to a set of guidelines. You look at the facts and the facts speak for themselves. Yet throughout, the Deputy Prime Minister and the former Minister said there was full compliance. If that was the case, and if we are totally off base, why has almost every journalist and every editorial writer in the country condemned the actions of the former Minister? Why have Canadians been talking about it every day? Is it that the former Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister and all the Tories, with the exception of two who had the courage to stand up and call for the Minister's resignation, are right? Is he suggesting that every one else is wrong and his Government is right? I ask him to search for an answer to the quagmire in which this Government finds itself rather than continue trying to stonewall on the issue.

[Translation]

Mr. Hamelin: Mr. Speaker, I have come to realize over the past few weeks that my hon. colleague, whom I know very little, unfortunately confuses the House with a court of justice. We should recognize that this is not a court of justice. The allegations he has made are unproven; on the other hand, we do not intend to hide the truth either. We are . . . I am glad to see that an impartial group or judge will fully investigate this matter and tell us what really went on. But, dear colleague, this is not a court of justice.

On the other hand, you have referred to newspaper editorials. I should like to emphasize also that your attitude and that of your colleague have been very widely criticized. It was criticized in the newspapers, and that is my point.

If the Hon. Member and I allow our standards of debate and behaviour to slide, I think we will lose all our credibility vis-à-vis the Canadian public. You know, if it comes down to drawing knives or using one's fists or fighting, I am sure some of us are probably quite able to hold their own in that respect. But I am not interested in that kind of fighting. Nor am I interested in flinging insults at my hon. friend. Not that I wouldn't want to, but I resist that impulse in order to maintain the standards of our debate. You can make stinging comments, you can be critical and you can act like real watch-dogs. And so you should. You are doing your job, and that is as it should be. Some of your colleagues do this very well, with eloquence and determination, without changing this Chamber into a court of justice and without any desire to destroy both reputations and individuals. I think we have to admire the Minister, who for well over a week has conducted himself with dignity here in the House, while listening to your invective. I am not questioning the substance of the point you have raised. I don't think this is the appropriate place to do so. But I strongly question the form and the tone of this criticism.

I am sure my hon. friend from Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) would not have indulged in this kind of attack. I am sure of that. However, I think he could have achieved the same results through a far more rational use of his intelligence. Hon. Members, intelligence is a weapon, but there are some Members in the House who lack that weapon. I hope to have interesting discussions with all my colleagues on the principles concerned, and if they want to be critical, let them be consistent.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member's reply. It was a bit long. Questions and comments. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) has just spoken as though the Minister had not resigned. He praised the Minister and expressed his support, because he is articulate, capable and competent, without mentioning the fact that this is the first Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion to be accused of a conflict of interest since C.D. Howe, a member of the Liberal Government in the 50s who had strong ties with the business world.

So we have to ask ourselves whether the allegations made by the Opposition were really unfounded. Why did the Minister resign? In doing so, he admitted that the facts are there. These are not just allegations, they are facts. There is the fact that Mrs. Stevens is vice-president of a company that is a branch of the company belonging to Mr. Stevens. It is a fact that the head of Magna International publicly acknowledges—to me and the press—that he met with Mrs. Stevens who wanted to borrow money and who eventually did get an interest-free one-year loan. I do not see how the Hon. Member for Charlevoix can fail to see there are very serious allegations which justify the Minister's resignation, much in the same way as the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) tendered his resignation as a result of allegations concerning his election campaign. In that case he was eventually cleared and went back to his Department. If the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion were really concerned about his ministerial responsibilities, he would have resigned at least a week ago.

Mr. Hamelin: First of all, Mr. Speaker, the parallel made by my colleague with a certain C.D. Howe, calling him a businessman with connections . . . As my colleague would have it, apparently, a poet should be appointed Minister of Finance, and a violin player given the Regional Industrial Expansion portfolio.

I for one can say I am quite pleased that we have financiers, businessmen, people with connections with the financial world, of course, who know what a balance sheet is. It is more interesting.

So for starters we agree that poets are better qualified to write poetry, and I might point out that I have several poets and painters in my riding, I admire and like them—

Mr. Cassidy: They must also be honest, mustn't they?

An Hon. Member: In Baie-Saint-Paul!

Mr. Hamelin: Yes, Baie-Saint-Paul is beautiful. Indeed I invite you to come and help the economy of my riding.

That being so, you are making statements and allegations, and turning this House into a court of justice.

Mr. Gauthier: This is a debate!

Mr. Hamelin: I am not making a judgment on the problem itself—

Ms. Copps: That is the problem!

Mr. Hamelin: The Minister decided, too late according to you, to resign this morning. He has done so, but he could have continued to take your accusations and allegations. As the Arab proverb says: "He has so many arrows in his side that they act as a shield against the others."

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I have just listened to the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin), who says that it is up to us to say good things in the debate and always to remain gentlemen and gentle women. However, I think that he has missed the point.

I entered politics in the first place mostly to have an opportunity to make some change in the life of Canadian men and women. I grew up in politics because my father was mayor of our city for about 14 years. When he was mayor during my childhood, some of my good friends used to tell me: "Sheila, all politicians are thieves!"

• (1650)

"They're crooks, all politicians are crooks". I was raised believing that politics is an honourable profession and that it is the right and responsibility of every member of this House to uphold the honesty that is politics. I believe that that quest for honesty supercedes political Parties. It supercedes the Party label, whether it be Liberal, Conservative, or New Democratic. I believe that there are Members on all sides of the House who came to Parliament for what they could do for their country. As John Kennedy said: "Ask not what your country can do for you but what you can do for your country".

In this particular case, Mr. Speaker, we have a blatant example of a Minister who, through his spouse, is using the interests of the country to serve his own family business. Throughout this debate today I have not heard a single Member on the government side of the House deny the fact that a $2.6 million interest-free loan was given to a family business in which Mr. Sinclair Stevens is the majority shareholder or the fact that the company, which is in fact a major shareholder in the Hanil Bank, also benefited by decisions of the Government not to go ahead with the establishment of certain factories here in Canada at the same time as it had a $775,000 outstanding loan. The question now—

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Minister is not the only one involved, because the Minister has resigned.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Louder!

Ms. Sheila Copps: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Carleton (Mr. Turner) tells me to speak louder. I shall do so. I shall speak louder because what is involved no longer affects only the Minister, but also the conduct of the Government and especially that of the Prime Minister who let this business go on for two weeks without having the courage to say anything to the Canadian people.

[English]

And then we see the incredible spectacle of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) sending a letter of exoneration telling the Minister what a wonderful job he did and shedding tears because he is leaving. He has not once had the courage to tell the people of Canada that what the Minister and his family did was wrong. We have seen the spectacle of Dominion Securities Pitfield, and Burns Fry being called into a meeting to bail out the Minister's private business. Those facts have been put on the table and have not been challenged by either the Minister or the Government.

When we see these things, we know that the Government has lost its sense of what is right and what is wrong. The average Canadian does not need conflict of interest guidelines to understand this. I was home in my riding of Hamilton East on the weekend and I went to a shopping mall. Someone tapped me on the shoulder and said that he was building an addition to his house. He asked whether I thought he could apply for an interest-free loan through the Minister. The Government, through the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) and the Prime Minister, by refusing to denounce categorically the actions of the Minister's family in using his public office to buttress and swell their own private coffers is absolutely, totally, and categorically wrong.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I believe the fundamental question which should be addressed in this House is the following: Why do the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Deputy Prime Minister go on day after day defending the actions of that Minister? Because they do not understand the question of morality in leadership. This does not surprise me, Mr. Speaker, because looking at all those who were behind the doors—

[English]

Let us take a look at the team which was behind the scenes trying to cut the throat of Joe Clark during the leadership race in the Conservative Party.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Copps: We see that the players are the Hon. former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, the Hon. Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay), and the former Minister of National Defence.

Some Hon. Members: Where's Chrétien?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please! Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Look behind you. Where's Chrétien now?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please! Could we be allowed to hear the speech of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Ms. Copps: The chickens will come home to roost, Mr. Speaker. My mother always taught me that you are judged by the company you keep. We can see that the Prime Minister had to reward those who were behind the scenes during the leadership race when Joe Clark was the Prime Minister of the country and the Leader of the Conservative Party. Those people were Sinc Stevens, Elmer MacKay, and Mr. Coates.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order! Would the Hon. Member refer to those Members by their ridings rather than their names, please.

[Translation]

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the issue is very simple. Is the Prime Minister here to show the people of this country some sort of morality? Is he here to tell everybody, not just Canadian men and women, that they do not qualify for those free loans which are available to the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion? Will the Prime Minister take his responsibilities and provide information to this House, to all the Members and to all the Ministers of the Crown? As honest men and women here in this House, we do not have the possibility nor the right to use our departmental responsibilities for family purposes that are not tied in with the common good.

[English]

That is the question which, unfortunately, the resignation of the Minister does not answer. We have seen quite clearly that the Prime Minister was originally prepared to hide behind the ADRG and is now prepared to hide behind an independent, impartial arbiter. The arbiter is the House of Commons. It is the Parliament of Canada which tells young Canadians that they can aspire to be political leaders and to come into the House of Commons under all political Parties, that they can aspire to politics because it is an honourable profession. Unfortunately, in the last two weeks the Deputy Prime Minister has been aided and abetted by the Prime Minister who was pulling the strings from overseas. He was leading the charge in the attempt to cover up and stonewall on this issue. It was not the Government's sense of morality which forced the resignation of the Minister, but a result of the Opposition sticking to the question and the public becoming wise about the cover-up. It was public opinion that forced the Prime Minister and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Stevens) to back down.

• (1700)

It is a crying shame that this resignation has nothing to do with the morality of the Government which has, unfortunately, shown itself to be bankrupt of any sense of the meaning of leadership.

An Hon. Member: The Liberal gazelle.

Ms. Copps: The Member says: "The Liberal gazelle". It is a sad day when the parliamentary process has been subverted by Members on the Government side of the House like the Deputy Prime Minister, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion who have no intention of answering to the public for the way in which they have been ripping off the system. It is also a very sad day when the arbiter of the public trust is a Deputy Prime Minister who, himself, is a self-confessed—

Mr. Blenkarn: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I thought I heard the Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) say that the Ministers to whom she was referring were ripping off the system.

Ms. Copps: That is right.

Mr. Blenkarn: That is an accusation of severe misconduct on the part of Ministers with respect to the financial aspects of the Government. It is an expression that she might want to consider withdrawing because it is an accusation that is certainly far from parliamentary. I think you should rule on it, Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The interpretation given to the words of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) is one interpretation that can be made. However, I am sure that is not what the Hon. Member meant and that is not the way the Chair understood it.

Mr. King: Ask her what she meant.

Ms. Copps: I am asked what I mean. The major brokerage firms of Canada are called together in a rescue attempt of a private business at the same time as the same Minister is doing business with those brokerage firms to the tune of $20 million on the deals of the CDC, of Canadair, de Havilland, Eldorado and Teleglobe.

The Government has decided to wash its hands of ministerial responsibility and suggests that somehow Mr. Stevens has been wrongfully tried by the Opposition. That is absolute nonsense. We have the responsibility in this parliamentary process to ensure that Ministers of the Crown do not use their ministerial privilege for private and personal gain. Quite clearly, private and personal gain was demonstrated in the loan which was accorded on an interest-free basis to the company in which Mr. Stevens is a majority shareholder. If there is a Member on the government side of the House who denies those facts as they have been put forward in the House, then I urge them to stand up and speak out. Otherwise, the facts speak for themselves.

We are talking about the CDC share offering in which over 23 million shares of Canadian companies were sold at $11.50 each. We are talking about the sale of de Havilland in which the key players in this corporate web involving the Minister were also not only involved in selling the company but involved in assessments of the company's worth.

In the case of Canadair, there is a rather peculiar situation in which Mr. Stevens through the CDIC, hired a particular firm to assess the company at the same time that a representative of that company is sitting on the board of another company which intends to put in a bid to purchase the self-same assets.

We are talking about self-dealing in the extreme. We are talking about a corporate web which was woven by the Minister and the Government as a result of their appointments to the CDIC and their own plan for divestiture. In light of all the questions that have been raised, it seems to me—

[Translation]

Let us take for instance the privatization of Canadair. Do we really believe the Government is now ready to give anyone an equal opportunity to buy that company? Not at all, Mr. Speaker, because we know it was the former Minister who appointed the firm chosen to set the price of that corporation, while one of the officers of that assessing firm, the Magna executive, is to apply to purchase that corporation.

And I am thinking about all those questions now which the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) failed to answer, because he even refuses to face the crisis confronting the Government. It is my view that all privatization moves should be cancelled now, in order that we have at least an opportunity to look at them closely in parliamentary committee.

[English]

It is clear that the privatization work begun by the Minister has been shown to be a tangled web of self-dealing. The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) asked about the sale of de Havilland. Government Members asked what was the relationship to de Havilland. In fact, we know that de Havilland was sold at a fire sale price, and we must ask why. Why is the Government selling Teleglobe? That company is making money for the people of Canada. Why is the Government asking a company, which has an interest in purchasing Canadair, through a director, to do an evaluation of Canadair's worth? This is self-dealing in the extreme and it is clear that the appointments made by the Government to evaluate the privatization process through the CDIC have too many links to too many contacts in terms of the bidding to carry out an objective evaluation.

I suggest that the only way we can deal with all of these questions is to put an immediate cease and desist order in the privatization process and reserve any future move toward the sale of Canadair, Teleglobe and these other companies until we have had a chance to conduct a full parliamentary analysis. For example, why did the Minister change the rules in mid-stream for the CDC share offering? Why did he change the definition of "associate" in such a way as to permit Brascan, one of the companies involved which has a majority representation on the CDIC board, to become the single largest shareholder in CDC?

We are talking about millions, if not billions of dollars in taxpayers' money. At least $20 million alone has gone to two brokerage firms, Burns Fry and Dominion Securities Pitfield, that have been very heavily involved in the privatization process. These questions must be answered and the Prime Minister must state clearly for every Canadian man and woman that what happened is wrong and that no Minister of the Crown has the right to use his spouse to secure loans for a company in which he is a majority shareholder.

It is absolute nonsense for the Deputy Prime Minister to hide behind the notion that somehow we are suggesting that women or spouses are chattel. When Mrs. Stevens went out to secure those loans, she was securing them for a company in which her husband was a majority shareholder, which was in a cash poor position and was literally on the verge of bankruptcy.

She was approaching the same corporations and the same individuals who were in the process of negotiating directly with her husband for loans and grants to the tune of millions of dollars.

Mr. Mantha: What about your husband?

Ms. Copps: I ask the Hon. Member for Nipissing (Mr. Mantha): How about my husband? My husband has never had a loan or grant from the Government. That type of comment is just indicative of the level of sleaziness in this Parliament and the Progressive Conservatives. It is not even worth the energy to respond.

I believe Canadians understand what integrity is. They understand that when the Prime Minister writes a letter suggesting that the Minister has done an exemplary job and should be congratulated, he is sending a message to every Minister of the Crown that they will be congratulated if they stick their fingers in the cookie jar.

Instead, the Prime Minister should have cut his visit short. He should have returned home and laid down the law to his Ministers by telling them that they are here for the good of the public and Canada, not for the good of their own family businesses.

[Translation]

And as long as he keeps silent on that issue, Mr. Speaker, he gives every Canadian man and woman the impression that he himself, the Prime Minister, is there to help his friends, the friends who helped him. When he ran for the Conservative Party leadership, who helped him? The same Ministers, that same Minister that he is now supporting in this new Government crisis. Why does the Prime Minister not send a clear and direct message to the Canadian people, and especially to his Ministers, telling them: You are not allowed, either yourself or through your spouses, to benefit from your roles and responsibilities as Ministers of the Crown.

• (1710)

[English]

As long as the Prime Minister remains silent on this issue, he is as guilty as the Minister involved. He is showing the Canadian people that he has contempt for the system and is in politics and power for what he can get from the public purse and not for what he can do for his country.

I urge the Prime Minister and all members of the Conservative Party to take seriously the question of what they can do for their country, because as long as they uphold this wall of silence in the face of the clear conflict of interest of the Minister responsible, they are doing a disservice not only to their Party and to this Parliament, but to each and every Canadian who has the right to believe in the integrity of the system.

I believe in the integrity of the system. That is why I am here. I would suggest that government Members take a look at their own consciences and ask themselves why they are here. If they are here for the same reasons as I am, they should denounce the actions of the Minister and his family in this regard.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), about the conduct of the Acting Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen). He is a Minister of the Crown who has become known as the master stonewaller. Over the last two weeks, the Acting Prime Minister has tried in vain to build a stone of wall around the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and around the Government. I am sure you are familiar, Mr. Speaker, with the old saying: "You can stonewall some of the people some of the time but you cannot stonewall all of the people all the time". The Acting Prime Minister has tried over the last two weeks to stonewall the people of Canada and he has failed.

What is at issue is the Acting Prime Minister's judgment. The Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion has resigned. We say he resigned because of his conduct. He tried to make excuses. What we are now mostly concerned about is the conduct of the Acting Prime Minister and that of the Prime Minister. The Acting Prime Minister is the same Minister who had the audacity to stand up and defend himself against the "bugging" incident. He said he did nothing wrong. Only as a result of public opinion did he stand up in this House and apologize. The same Acting Prime Minister defended the former Minister of Fisheries and Oceans, only to have that former Minister resign. The same Acting Prime Minister defended the former Solicitor General, who ended up being manoeuvred out of his position by the Prime Minister. The Acting Prime Minister also defended the Minister of the Environment, and the list goes on and on.

My question to my colleague is with respect to the conduct and judgment of the Acting Prime Minister. Does she believe that his conduct has been appropriate? Does she believe that the conduct of the Acting Prime Minister sets an example of high moral standards to which this House and this Parliament must aspire?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I think the actions of the Acting Prime Minister certainly do bear some public scrutiny. I believe his intention right from the beginning was to block the free flow of information in the House of Commons by daily stonewalling. He believed, as did the Prime Minister, who no doubt was involved in the political machinations surrounding this fiasco from the beginning, that since the Prime Minister was leaving the country and going on a world tour, making deals in Japan and South Korea and travelling through China, that somehow the opposition Parties would allow this issue to die down. The Acting Prime Minister was sent in, as is usually his role, as a stonewaller, as a government Member who refuses to answer a single question put to him and as a fireman who will put out the fire which has been burning for the last number of days.

The hitch in the works was that the opposition Parties and, in particular, the Liberal Party, believed there was in fact a flagrant abuse of the whole question of morality and ethics in Parliament and we would not be silenced. Had the Liberal Opposition not pursued this issue from the beginning, the Government's strategy and the strategy of the Acting Prime Minister would have worked. We would have seen beautiful photos of the Prime Minister travelling through South Korea, China and Japan. We would have seen him cosying up to his various Ministers and we would not have gotten to the core of this issue which affects the heart and soul of Parliament. I think the judgment displayed by the Acting Prime Minister was a flawed judgment, but it was a calculated flawed judgment. It was not an error in that he thought that perhaps nothing was wrong. He knew something was wrong and he was sent in as a containment officer to sustain damage control on a Government which had gone out of control. I believe the Prime Minister is every bit as responsible. He was here in the House to answer questions two days following the emergence of the story in the Globe and Mail, a story which has never been denied by the Government nor by the Prime Minister. But the Prime Minister sent in his hit man, Erik Nielsen, saying: "Mr. Nielsen, you look after things while I am gone and when I come back I expect everything to be quiet".

Mr. Fretz: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I respectfully submit that the Hon. Member in her speeches today has continually referred to cabinet Ministers by their names. We know that this is inappropriate and I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if you could bring the Hon. Member to order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Erie (Mr. Fretz) is perfectly correct.

Ms. Copps: We know that the Acting Prime Minister was assigned the job of chief stonewaller of the Government. The Prime Minister believed that strategy would work. Unfortunately for the Government it did not work. Fortunately for the people of Canada, we showed that honesty wins out in Parliament. I thank God that the Minister involved was put into the position by the Opposition, and by public opinion, whereby he was forced to resign. I am, however, upset that the Prime Minister and the Acting Prime Minister have still not indicated to the people of Canada that the abuse of ministerial privilege was wrong.

I am looking forward to the arrival of the Prime Minister back in the House when he can start answering some fundamental questions about what he really believes morality in government means. I suspect his perception of morality, given the weight he has attached to certain members of his own Party whose primary role in life before this Parliament was to inflict damage on their own former Leader, is far different from that of the ordinary Member of Parliament in the House of Commons.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), a question as to where we go from here. She outlined very articulately that it is not only the Government and the particular Minister who loses in this situation but that the institution of Parliament got battered in the process. I would like to ask the Hon. Member if it is correct to have this whole affair sent off to an "impartial" inquiry, as the Deputy Minister (Mr. Nielsen) suggests, or would this issue not be better placed with Members of Parliament through a parliamentary committee so that this Parliament, this institution, can regain some of the integrity it has lost? If the initial strategy was to take this matter out of the limelight, then I ask, as other Canadians are asking, is it the Government's second strategy, through an impartial inquiry, that we not know the terms of reference, nor the individual who will be leading that investigation? Is this part two of that same strategy? Would the Hon. Member for Hamilton East comment on this sensitive matter?

Ms. Copps: First, Mr. Speaker, it was interesting that the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) said that we are not a court of law. Parliament is in fact the highest court in the land. It is the court to which every Canadian has an opportunity to send his or her representative. Parliament is where this whole question should be dealt with. It is the reputation of Parliament which has been smeared by this Minister and by the Government's refusal to act on this very sensitive issue. It should be Parliament which has a chance to examine all aspects of the issue, not only the private loans which were obtained by members of the Stevens' family as a result of his position, but certainly the changes in government policy with respect to privatization, the whole question of the sales of Teleglobe, Canadair and de Havilland. All of these issues must be examined through the parliamentary process.

Today, for example, the Acting Prime Minister refused to answer in the House whether he would be prepared to testify under oath before an independent commission. It seems to me that if the Government in its usual fashion is continuing to stonewall parliamentary review of this situation, and if it does turn the matter over to a commission of inquiry then, at the very least, we must demand the full access of subpoena as well as testimony under oath, not only by the Deputy Prime Minister and the Minister involved in the infraction but also by the Prime Minister himself. It seems to me that the fundamental question which Parliament must answer, and which can only be answered when we have had a chance to review all the facts as they have been put before us, is: Why did the Prime Minister not exercise his moral leadership and responsibility by immediately stepping in when information was made available to him, as it was made available to the whole country, that the former Minister was using his position as a Minister of the Crown in an effort to secure loans for his family business through the agent of his wife and that companies in which he had a majority interest were, in fact, benefiting because of his ministerial connections? Why did the Prime Minister refuse to act as soon as that became known? Why did he refuse to say, as he did in the infamous The New York Times interview: "Bang. That Minister has got to go"? Why was it only when the Canadian public put a gun to his head that he finally said: "Bang"? It was not a bang but a whimper.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I have learned around this place is that if one waits long enough, the worm turns and that in fact everything tends to repeat itself.

I sat in the House when the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion was a member of the Opposition. I have heard a lot of sanctimonious gobbledegook thrown around here about how the character of the Minister is being slandered, as is that of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen). I wish to tell Hon. Members that I have been checking back copies of Hansard for 1976, 1977 and 1978. I wish to warn members of the Official Opposition that they ought not be too hasty because there comes a time when there is "another" time. One must have a long memory around here.

I remember back in 1974 when the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion accused the Liberal Government of paying off its friends through Economic Development Council loans. In particular, he cited a loan to Quebec's Davie Shipbuilding Limited which he said benefited because well-known Liberal Paul Martin, Jr. was President of its owner, Canada Steamship Lines. Talk about a person who can really get in there in the gutter and start throwing it around!

Then, in November of 1976, he accused a former Minister of Health, Marc Lalonde, of conflict of interest for accepting a free trip on a Seagrams' jet to Israel. Some two years later, in December of 1978, he circulated a news-letter written by John Turner, who was practising law in Toronto. The news-letter criticized Jean Chrétien, the then Minister of Finance, for his handling of the country's finances. The ex-Minister said that Turner may have violated conflict of interest guidelines for former office holders.

Then, in May of 1978, the ex-Minister charged that a group of Liberal MPs and Cabinet Ministers had manipulated the Canadian dollar to their own advantage. Unable to prove the accusation, he eventually had to back down and apologize.

So I wish to tell you, Mr. Speaker, that I recognize that these things happen again and again. Those who stand accused today are the ones who were the accusers at a previous time. Let us not get sanctimonious in this place. One has to keep in mind a sense of history when one is dealing with these types of matters.

It is fairly obvious that in our system of Parliament we have tried, and we continually try, to create an atmosphere of transparency in our parliamentary system. In effect, what we try to do is to ensure that the public is aware that we conduct ourselves with the highest possible ethics. Not only do we actually do it but it must appear that we do it. Thus we are consistently aware of providing opportunities for the public to know. That is why we have invoked such measures and passed into law the Election Expenses Act. This was done so that corporations and individuals who contribute more than $100 have to declare it. In fact, one could go to the Chief Electoral Officer and see who has given how much to which Party. This is also why we have the Access to Information Act. The whole purpose of that Act is that the public have the right to know. That is why the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure is looking at doing something about registering lobbyists on the Hill. This is why the area of great concern, the one with which we are dealing today, involving the question of conflict of interest, has been dealt with by previous Governments. However, it seems that it is still too "loosey-goosey". It is still not tight enough. The Clark Government of 1979 established conflict of interest guidelines for cabinet Ministers. In fact, they were very clear, direct and exact. With respect to controlled assets it stated:

> Ministers, their spouses and minor or dependent children may not, after the completion of any arrangements necessary to comply with these Guidelines, purchase, sell or retain any direct interest in any controlled assets including—

The guidelines go on to list them. It was fairly clear that the former Prime Minister wanted that type of control. He wanted to assure the public that there would be not only an actual dissociation but that it would appear to be so.

Then along came the Trudeau Government of 1980. It also changed the guidelines. It issued new guidelines to cabinet Ministers. With respect to spouses and dependent children, Section VII of the guidelines states that they do not directly apply to spouses or dependent children of Ministers. It then goes on to state:

> It goes without saying that Ministers must not transfer their assets to their spouses or dependent children with a view to avoiding the requirements of these guidelines.
> Ministers should also bear in mind their individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might conceivably arise or appear to arise out of dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

So we have the same principle being reiterated by the Trudeau Government of 1980. The Government then set up the Starr-Sharp Commission to look into the matter. A member of the Government, the then Hon. Member for Etobicoke—Lakeshore, was the director of that commission. It considered conflict of interest for cabinet Ministers. In fact, the Leader of the New Democratic Party wrote to the chairpersons of the Starr-Sharp committee and gave the views of the New Democratic Party. I wish to quote from that letter, which states:

> The 1980 guidelines expressly exempt spouses and dependent children from their purview. This reflects a view that each spouse may wish to pursue her or his own career. Because their careers are "independent", the financial details of only one are now required to be disclosed. This is wrongheaded. Despite separate careers, marriage remains in part an economic union, a partnership of equals.
> As has been recognized to varying degrees in family law reform legislation, each spouse may have a pecuniary interest in the economic activities of the other during (and after) a marriage. The conflict of interest provisions should not ignore this interest.

• (1730)

The Leader of our Party clearly put forward the Party's position with respect to conflict of interest and the role of spouses and dependent children. It seems to me that that is very clear.

Along came the Conservative Government of 1984. The Prime Minister set out his conflict of interest guidelines at that time. Along with his conflict of interest guidelines, he sent a covering letter to the Ministers, and the covering letter indicated the following:

I wish it to be understood clearly by all Ministers that they have an individual responsibility to prevent conflicts of interest, including those that might arise out of activities of their spouses or dependent children or the dealings in property or investments which are owned or managed, in whole or in part, by their spouses or dependent children.

There is absolutely no doubt at all that the intent was there and that the onus was placed on the Ministers. There is no doubt that in fact a spouse cannot run a blind trust. It says clearly in this letter that a spouse cannot do so and that the Ministers are indeed responsible.

It seems to me that that principle was reiterated on June 6, 1985, when the Prime Minister responded to a question put by the Opposition. At that time, he said the following:

—I would like to acknowledge that the guidelines are very much in effect and force, and that all Ministers are obliged to respect them in all ways, including appearance. We must seek to avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest.

It is obvious that the Minister had placed his holdings into a blind trust, but the blind trust turned out to be run by his wife. By no stretch of the imagination can that be called an effective blind trust.

The Prime Minister reiterated the principle again during the same Question Period. He said:

We view the guidelines with the utmost of seriousness. They must be honoured by all Ministers, not only in reality but in appearances to the contrary that might emerge, inadvertently or otherwise.

Now, that is crystal clear. There must not be even an appearance of conflict of interest.

Was there an appearance of conflict of interest in this case? The answer is yes, there was such an appearance. On April 29, 10 days ago, when this entire issue broke, the appearance was quite clear. Those guidelines then do apply in this case.

If the history of this matter which I have just outlined is fairly obvious, I asked myself, why has it taken 10 days for the Minister to announce his resignation? I asked myself if it was because the Government thought it could bluff its way through this whole mess. Second, was it because the Government lacks any sense of ethics? Is the Government paying big bucks and getting bad political advice? Is it the same old gang that harks back to an era in which all politicians did was to deny, deny, deny?

The Deputy Prime Minister comes from an era in which politicians believed that if they could deny something, maybe they could get away with it. Is that why there was such a delay? Does the group that runs this Government run it the way Parliament was being run 20 or 25 years ago? Has that gang forgotten that television has come to the House? The stonewalling that we saw day after day for 10 days on the part of the Deputy Prime Minister was reminiscent of an era of old-style politics.

I think that group has forgotten that millions of Canadians watch Parliament and particularly Question Period on television every day and that today they cannot get away with what they could get away with back in 1976, 1958 or 1960. I believe that by and large, this Government is still led by that kind of mentality.

In this particular case, I think it was the Deputy Prime Minister who was calling the shots. I watched his performance. Time and time again, he answered questions by saying that he was satisfied that there was no apparent conflict. How could he say that in light of the history of this matter? In municipal politics, this kind of stuff could not go on at all.

I spent two years on a municipal council, and if there was anything even close to a situation like this one, one had to declare a conflict of interest and could not participate in a debate or a vote. What seems to be passing for ethical behaviour would be tougher to have passed as such at the municipal level. It seems to me that this level of Government which is supposed to be the senior level of Government ought to take a page out of the book of conflict of interest guidelines which govern municipal politics.

What has the Government suggested that we ought to do? We have made many suggestions here in the House. We suggested that the matter be referred to a committee for study. We asked that the Minister step aside. We suggested a judicial inquiry, but we were denied that ability.

What have we got today? We have the Deputy Prime Minister saying that we are going to have an impartial investigator. The precedent is that while the Prime Minister has the prerogative to appoint Ministers of the Crown and to remove Ministers of the Crown, in fact the actual integrity of Parliament is the responsibility of individual Members of Parliament, and the only place where that matter should be investigated is in the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. Historically, that is the committee that has looked at these things, beginning with the Murdock case of 1924. The case of Bryce Mackasey was brought before that committee. He was a private Member of the House. The case of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), at the time he was a Minister, went before the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. The committee is quite capable of investigating these kinds of charges and it seems to me that that is where the buck should stop. We cannot pass our responsibility on to some impartial investigator, who may very well turn out to be a Tory hack, if the usual practice is followed.

It seems to me that Members of Parliament are the ones who should be looking at this question, not some outsider. The committee has the power to subpoena, swear and question witnesses. In fact, I am quite confident that under the new rules respecting committees, this investigation can be carried out very effectively.

I am loath to think that we could send the matter to committee and have the same sort of thing happen that happened to the banks investigation. Remember the Estey Commission, Mr. Speaker? We have not heard about that for ages now. It seems to have disappeared off the face of the earth. I am afraid that that is exactly what will happen in this particular instance. I believe that the appropriate place for this discussion is in a House of Commons committee of peers. That is where it belongs, and nowhere else.

• (1740)

I should like to point out another problem in this regard. It seems to me that Parliament has really been on trial for the last 10 days. In my opinion, the kind of example which has been held up to the public leaves a lot to be desired. Right at the start the Minister could have said: "It looks that way. The information is out. Whether or not there was conflict of interest before, there is now a conflict. Now I know where my wife got the loan. The situation has now changed, so I will step aside while the matter is investigated". Why could he have not said that? He did not even follow the example of the Minister of Communications (Mr. Masse) who immediately stepped aside once the word got out that there would be an investigation into his election expenses. Everyone on all sides of the House said that it was an example of the way we should behave, that it was living up to the parliamentary principle of ministerial responsibility. That was an example which the ex-Minister as of today failed to follow. Even the former Minister of National Defence moved quickly to remove himself from a situation which could reflect upon the Government.

It seems to me that that is the kind of action which should have been taken. That is the kind of advice the Deputy Prime Minister ought to have been giving the Minister. Unfortunately it was not followed, so for the last 10 days we had the spectacle of Parliament being on trial in the newspapers and by media commentators from one end of the country to the other. As a matter of fact, Members of Parliament have been receiving telegrams. I received telegrams and letters from folk across the country who said that something was wrong and that in fact the matter should be looked into. It was not a matter of whether there was dishonesty; the fact is that there were appearances of dishonesty.

To conclude, I say that Parliament was not even served well today. Not to accept any responsibility, to blame the media, and to blame the Opposition, are not in the best parliamentary tradition, and that is most unfortunate.

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), considering that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen) used the word "impartial" throughout the Question Period, whether he feels it might be more appropriate for the Hon. Member for York Peel (Mr. Stevens) to be accountable to a committee of this House, so that his colleagues might be more fully informed of what took place. Moreover, I should like to ask the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt why, in his opinion, following two weeks of questions being directed in vain to the Deputy Prime Minister, the Minister resigned this morning after wasting the time of the House for 15 days.

[English]

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I will answer the Hon. Member's second question first. I can only offer my own opinion. I think the Tory polling company, Decima, must have done some polling, and the leadership, with the captain away from the deck, recognized that they could not win this one and that in fact the public was aroused. One backbench Tory Member from Quebec—and I will not mention his name—told me that he was embarrassed by it and that the Minister should step aside. I think the polling showed that right across the country they were not getting away with it. I think they also looked at press clippings over the last 10 days which clearly showed that the Government was being hurt by the whole episode, and that in fact the people out there understood in very simple and clear terms that nobody's wife can call up a bank, a lending institution or anyone who lends money, even a loan shark, and obtain an interest-free loan of $2.6 million. Nobody out there believes that it can happen. In the eyes of many people, that is what they saw, so they judged the situation in very simple and direct terms. I think the Government, with its polling, press clippings and feedback from the back-benches, saw that it could not get away with it.

Now the Tories are into damage control. They are trying to control the damage by setting up an impartial individual to study it. We asked for a judicial inquiry. Who is more impartial than a federal appeal court judge? When we made that request, they said: "No way, José; we won't do that". We went to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure, which has historically done work in this field. Lo and behold the Tories used every little parliamentary technique they know to say that we did not have a reference from the House and that it was the prerogative of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to appoint Ministers and to be responsible for them. They stonewalled there as well.

It seems to me that those are the reasons the Government changed its mind today and that Sinc slinked out of here. The whole business of an impartial inquiry is so much smoke and mirrors, as the Tories are so famous for saying. In fact the House of Commons must be responsible for its ethical behaviour. That is where it belongs; the buck stops at the House of Commons. We cannot pass off our responsibilities to some so-called impartial investigator who may turn out to be some Tory hack.

Mr. Marchi: Mr. Speaker, I rise in my place to make a comment on the heels of the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) because I think his riding, like mine, is largely a working class community. We in the House must keep in mind what has been transmitted to me over the course of the last two weeks from individuals living in my riding. We have come down a notch or two in terms of the integrity of this institution. People have lost some belief in their elected officials in the national forum. It is one thing to look at individual Ministers and at a Government, and it is another thing to look at the damage which they have brought upon themselves.

Everyone in the House realizes that the Conservative Party hurt itself in terms of the image it professed to have. However, the more long-term problem is the effect on this institution. Very often we hear individuals saying: "You are there on my behalf to further the Parliament of Canada, not necessarily your Party". It should be noted very well that the losers in this debate are not necessarily the Minister or the Government. The real losers are Canadians because their Parliament, their national institution, the institution which they support through their dollars, certainly came under ridicule, and it came under ridicule needlessly. There could have been integrity, moral leadership and conviction to say no to this issue a long time ago. There has been an inability to rise and take the correct and courageous stand. The issue was allowed to drag on until the Minister tendered his resignation today and we were told that an inquiry was forthcoming. That, too, is food for thought as to whether it should be an inquiry. Let us not lose touch with the real losers. It is not a gain of one political Party as opposed to another. It is not the gain or loss of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney)—it is obviously the latter—but the losers in this debate have been Canadians through the diminishing value of this institution which we defend to our constituents each and every day.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I recall the time when the Tory Government was elected in September, 1984. Everybody felt there was going to be a change. People hoped the change would be for the better and that we would wipe the slate clean. We got rid of 16 years of Liberal rule. We hoped to embark on a cleaner, leaner Government with a change that is healthy for the system.

The Government has been in power two years and already we have had incidents happening. If Allan MacEachen were sitting over there, would we be at this particular impasse? I ask that in my own mind because I think the matter would have been handled differently from the way it was handled by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen).

Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do have a working class riding. I am most concerned about the way young people see politicians in politics. This kind of behaviour is not good. As parliamentarians we have lost because of the shilly-shallying on this matter. It should have been dealt with by making a clean break. That is the way it should have been dealt with.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I have, over time, witnessed resignations by Ministers before today, both while in government and in opposition, and I have reflected upon these circumstances and the events that led to those individual resignations. There is no question or doubt in my mind that we share in some degree the trauma that strikes the Minister involved, the pall of silence that comes over the House, the depth of feelings at the loss, however temporary, of a Minister of the Crown. That sense, that mood, is not infrequently shared by members of the Opposition, for some members of the Opposition remember well similar circumstances when they were in government. Of course, there will be those who feel a sense of elation at the misfortunes of a colleague sitting opposite, and that, sadly, is inevitable.

Today was a different, a sorely different day. Today the opening speech by the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) was more suited to some other forum than Parliament, in form, delivery and substance.

The Hon. Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner) alleges that an inquiry removes the issue from Parliament. Surely, Mr. Speaker, he would be among the first to express strong views if anyone else were accused without benefit of a hearing.

Surely the Leader of the Opposition before his speech today must have reflected on the spectacle of those who sought to run or leap roughshod over the procedural and democratic process of committees whose references of the business of the committee were well known. Clearly this moment of reflection was set aside and in its place the route to the high road was missed or ignored.

There is, as we know, a Code of Conduct which was put forward by the Prime Minister on September 9, 1985. At that time the Prime Minister wrote to the Leaders of the opposition Parties in order to provide them with an opportunity to comment and make suggestions to improve and extend the code to their satisfaction. As we know, nine months later, in the fullness of their opportunity for pregnant thought, they have failed to deliver a response.

Here is what the Prime Minister said in his letter to the Leader of the Liberal Party and to the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent):

Dear Mr. Turner:

As I believe it is imperative in a democracy that public office holders have the trust and confidence of the people they serve, I will be tabling in the House today a Conflict of Interest and Post-Employment Code for Public Office Holders. I have also written to the Speakers of the House and the Senate proposing that they explore the question of such a regime for servants of their respective Houses. I have no doubt that you will support me in this suggestion.

As well, while the roles of other public office holders and those of parliamentarians are clearly very different, I believe that the establishment of standards of ethical conduct for Members and Senators is long overdue. Given the differences in role, I would not propose the same regime. However, I know that you share my concerns and hope that you and your colleagues will be ready to work with us to explore the options.

You may recall that in 1974 and 1975, a Green Paper entitled Members of Parliament and Conflict of Interest was referred for review to the House and Senate Committees. In 1978 an Independence of Parliament Act was given first reading. Unfortunately the measures introduced in Parliament were never enacted. Even though the process may be a difficult one, I would propose that we start again with the goal of coming to the successful conclusion that Canadians deserve from us.

To that end, I propose that our respective House Leaders meet as soon as possible to discuss the appropriate mechanism for preparing recommendations on which Parliament can act.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,

As we know, no answer has ever been received. One can only assume that their silence, whether it signalled silent approval or a desire—

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) on a point of order.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I dealt precisely with that issue when it was raised by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Nielsen). I pointed out that this matter was, by agreement with the House Leaders, sent to the Standing Committee on Management and Members' Services—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. That is a matter of debate. The Hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco).

Ms. Copps: Tell the truth.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, one can only assume that their silence, whether it signalled silent approval or a desire not to deal with the subject, was a preference to wait for a future opportunity to seize some political advantage.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Member is misleading this House by stating that the Leaders of the two opposition Parties did not communicate with the Prime Minister.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan).

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, this is a debate about ministerial impropriety. This Member is raising a question of a letter written by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to Members of Parliament having to do with a standard of conduct for Members of Parliament, not for Ministers. I think it should be drawn to the Member's attention that he is talking about something completely different—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Cassidy: On a further point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: No. There are no further points of order.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed, from Friday, May 9, consideration of the motion of Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre) that Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and on the amendment of Mr. Lewis (p. 13066).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to S.O. 13(5), the House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred division on Bill C-96, an Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977.

The question is on the motion of Mr. Lewis:

That the question be now put.

Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Lewis), which was agreed to on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I believe if you were to ask, there would be a disposition to have the vote just recorded applied to the following question. They would both appear to be the same.

Mr. Speaker: I take it there is a consensus on that matter.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Accordingly, the question is as follows: Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Oberle, moves that Bill C-96, An Act to amend the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements and Federal Post-Secondary Education and Health Contributions Act, 1977, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Shall we dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, according to the agreement, the vote will be recorded in the same way as the last vote.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre)), which was agreed to on the following division:

USE OF PENSION INCOME IN CALCULATION OF UI BENEFITS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to present a petition on behalf of a number of residents of Kamloops, British Columbia, who are still very much concerned about the decision of the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Miss MacDonald) that after December 31, 1985, pension benefits will be deducted from unemployment insurance benefits, thus effectively eliminating the benefit to the worker of the pension package. They therefore call upon the Government to ensure that all retired employees receive unemployment insurance benefits without deduction of pension income.

REFERENCE OF ESTIMATES OF MULTICULTURALISM DIRECTORATE TO STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been consultations between the Parties. I think you will find a disposition to accept the following motion by unanimous consent. The motion will also be passed by unanimous consent without debate. It reads as follows:

That, notwithstanding the Order made on Thursday, February 27, 1986, the operating expenditures of the Multiculturalism Directorate under Vote 1 of the Main Estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1987, of the Department of the Secretary of State in the amount of $24,846,000 together with the grants made by the said Directorate under Vote 5 of the Main Estimates of the said Department in the amount of $15,282,000, as well as the contributions made by the Directorate under the same Vote in the amount of $3,465,000 be withdrawn from the Standing Committee on Secretary of State and be deemed referred to the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism pursuant to Standing Order 82(15).

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the motion to be introduced?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Shall the motion carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

ALLOTTED DAY, S.O. 82—CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE—RESCINDING OF EXISTING COUNTERVAILING DUTIES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap) moved:

That this House urges the Government not to proceed with any free trade talks with the United States Government unless that Government rescinds existing countervailing duties and guarantees that such duties will not be used in the future, given the current threat of U.S. countervailing duties in the Softwood Industry—an industry in which free trade now exists.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in the last few weeks we saw the role that Parliament has played in dealing with the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, the Member for York—Peel (Mr. Stevens). As a result of persistent questioning on behalf of Members of the Opposition, we finally saw a move toward justice in this country.

I believe we have another opportunity for the House of Commons to play a significant role in the pending free trade discussions that begin next week. On the eve of these talks, one of our largest and most important industries in Canada is about to enter a crisis situation. The forest industry of Canada is a $26 billion a year industry which employs 300,000 people directly and another 700,000 indirectly. We are talking about one million people in this country who are employed in an industry that earns more foreign exchange for Canada than agriculture, the fishery, mining and the automobile industry combined. It is a major industry of immense proportions which contributed $11 billion to our balance of trade last year.

Currently we are witnessing one of the biggest con jobs ever perpetuated by the Government on the people of Canada. It is a sell-out of the major industry and a sell-out of the regions of Canada for the sake of the industrial heartland. We are witnessing the traditional heartland-hinterland thesis unfold again in our country. The Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) and his cohort, the President of the United States, have either been making deals which will prejudice the forest industry or the Prime Minister has naively believed President Reagan when he says not to be concerned because the forest industry in Canada and the United States will be dealt with to everyone's satisfaction. Anyone who believes that probably believes in tooth fairies as well.

In the last number of hours the coalition of forest industries in the United States has begun the process of launching a petition to the International Trade Commission and the Commerce Department that, if successful, would result in a countervailing duty amounting to $53.65 U.S. per thousand board feet in Canada. Today, wood futures are trading on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange at $184.50 U.S., SPF-1. The tariff on our exports of softwood lumber to the United States would be 29.1 per cent, which would mean the end to vast areas of the forest industry in Canada as we know it today, particularly in British Columbia which is the main source of softwood exports to the United States.

Where do Members opposite stand on this issue, particularly those from lumber producing constituencies? The United States is about to launch a countervailing duty on our lumber exports that will literally close down dozens of mills across the country, the majority of which will be in central British Columbia. We are seeing a catastrophe unfolding. This industry is represented in Atlantic Canada, Quebec, Ontario, parts of the prairie provinces and the West Coast of Canada. The industry is experiencing unemployment levels of 25 per cent to 35 per cent right across Canada. Thank goodness we have an Opposition Day on which we can debate what is taking place in order to show Canadians the con job that is being perpetuated and how this industry is being sold out. This is taking place on the eve of free trade talks next week.

While our negotiators supposedly enter into preliminary discussions toward free trade, the United States forest industry, with the support of the U.S. administration, is moving against an industry in which free trade has existed for half a century. Our industry is able to compete so well in the free market that our producers are able to log and mill our lumber in northern British Columbia and export it as far south as Georgia and outbid them.

Mr. Brisco: Ask why.

Mr. Riis: Somebody says to ask why. One reason is that the companies in Canada have modernized their mills. They have invested heavily in the mills of British Columbia, whether they are in Clearwater, Kamloops, Merritt or Salmon Arm. They have modernized their mills at tremendous expense in order to make them some of the most competitive sawmills in the entire world. This modernization has taken place at a very large cost to the workforce in our country because 20,000 IWA workers in British Columbia alone have lost their jobs. In my constituency, 500 people are no longer employed in the forest industry as a result of the technological change that has occurred through modernization of our sawmills.

Mr. Brisco: Give us the corollary to that.

Mr. Riis: On top of the sacrifice, our forestry workers have developed their expertise to become among the most productive workers in the world. We have modernized our sawmills. Our employees in those mills and in the forests are among the most efficient and competitive in the entire world. We now represent some 34 per cent of the softwood markets in the United States.

Our free enterprise friends in the United States are saying that they cannot compete any longer because their mills are antiquated and their employees and operations are less productive. Since they cannot compete with their counterparts, they say that they will stop this free trade nonsense and impose a countervailing duty of 29.1 per cent on Candian exports of softwood to the United States. The American image of free trade is that it is acceptable as long as the Americans benefit. However, the minute that we are able to compete successfully in their market-place, they no longer will accept that competition.

Do Members opposite really believe the President of the United States when he says they can trust him because he will resolve this issue? Recently, we became aware of a letter sent by the President of the United States to the Senate Finance Committee Chairman, Mr. Robert Packwood, in which he promised: "—to press for an expedited resolution to this problem—" he calls it a problem: "—independent of the comprehensive trading negotiations." Mr. Reagan and his administration will resolve this problem of our competition in their markets, quite independent of what is taking place.

What is the Government of Canada doing about it? Nothing. It is making the forest industry of Canada the sacrificial lamb in the trade talks. That is the industry the Government will toss out and those are the regions of Canada that the Government is abandoning, perhaps in a vision of some benefits to the industrial heartland as a result of free trade. The Government has abandoned the forest producing areas of this country.

The President went on to promise to take unilateral action if the bilateral lumber talks fail. What is the Minister's response? It is to send an envoy at the eleventh hour to the United States to do a little PR work. He will make deals, give concessions, agree to some form of a countervail because the President of the United States made it perfectly clear that he and his administration are going to resolve the problem of our competition in their market-place. The only way that problem can be resolved to the satisfaction of the United States is for our Government to cave in. If one looks at members of the Government, one can see that the knees of their suits are all worn out because they have been down to Washington on their knees so many times. Next we will find that knee pads will be mandatory for Conservative Members of Parliament. That is the kind of negotiations we see going on with respect to this issue. If anyone believes that our forest industry is going to come out of this unscathed—and when I say "unscathed", I mean the price we will have to pay will be tremendous—they are wrong. The President of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association was talking the other day about the loss not of hundreds of jobs, not even of thousands of jobs, but of tens of thousands of jobs in every region of this country. At a time when that industry is experiencing 25 per cent to 35 per cent unemployment, the best we can do at this critical hour, during this moment of crisis, quite frankly, this process of sell-out and con job of the people of Canada, is to send an envoy.

Has the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) included the provincial Ministers in this decision? Have the provincial Ministers been consulted and involved in what this set of concessions will inevitably be? I notice the Minister of State for Forestry managed to find enough money to pay for five or six people to deal with the wood issue in this coming year. That is what his budget to deal with this crisis will allow.

The industry itself spent $10 million last year trying to work through this matter to a successful resolution. But the Minister of State for Forestry, representing all the regions of Canada, managed to come up with perhaps five or six individuals. We are up against a giant in the United States. We are up against one of the most sophisticated mainline lobby groups in the United States ever encountered by the administration there and our Minister of State for Forestry comes up with five or six people and, to be fair, $500,000 to fight this issue. At the same time he could find $4 million to advertise forestry. The other day we received buttons, seeds and so on as a result of the Government's efforts to raise the consciousness of Canadians about our forest industry.

I ask the Minister of State for Forestry what the point is of raising the consciousness of the people of Canada for forestry if we do not have a forest industry to support? Unless some strong action is taken we are going to see President Reagan cut off the Canadian forest industry. We are going to hear this Government, again in co-operation with the President of the United States say: "I guess this is the price we have to pay for free trade talks".

I am looking forward to the debate today. I will be interested to listen particularly to the Members of Parliament from British Columbia and to Hon. Members from the forest producing areas of this country. I would like to see them stand up and tell us what they are doing about this countervail threat. What have they already done about the threat in the red shake and shingle industry? It has already gone before the ITC. It has already been recommended to the President of the United States to go ahead with the 35 per cent duty charge. What has the Minister done on this particular issue which will again cost hundreds and hundreds of jobs even in just the southern part of British Columbia?

One Hon. Member stood up the other day and in one line of his statement indicated that Mr. Reagan should know what this will do to jobs in British Columbia. But that is not good enough. The Government has been given the responsibility, surely, to stand up for Canada's number one industry, our forest industry. But all we have seen so far is ample evidence that, again, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) naively believed the President of the United States when he said: "Listen. I'm making a deal with those senators in the Finance Committee. I want to get these trade talks on to the fast track. To do that I have to buy them off. I've got to appease these people somehow". What he really said was: "Don't worry, those of you from the lumber producing States, particularly in the Pacific northwest, I'll support you in your bid for countervail. Don't worry about it". He said, if necessary, he will take unilateral action if the bilateral talks fail and he will be pressing for a resolution to this problem.

The problem is that we are able to compete in that market. The United States perceives that as a problem in the same way as it perceives the fact that our red shake and shingle industry was able to compete successfully in its market is a problem. The United States realized it was receiving real competition from Canadians and it had to do something about it so it has asked for the imposition of a tariff.

This concerned our Party in terms of what it means for free trade, enhanced trade or improved trade. If it means that once we have a level playing field as we have had in the soft wood industry now for 50 years, if the playing field is levelled and Canadians are doing well in the United States market, and if its response is to come in with a countervail every time we do so, what is in it for Canadians and for Canada? Yet that is the only conclusion we can draw. That is why we say in this motion that free trade talks cannot continue as long as the United States administration plans to have a countervail continuously hanging over our heads.

We are going into free trade talks next week and over our heads hangs an axe. The axe is the threat of the imposition of a 29.1 per cent countervail on soft woods going into the United States from Canada. That is not the kind of good faith in which I think Canadians had envisaged we might enter these talks. This is not the kind of environment, the kind of milieu, the kind of open discussion we were anticipating with our friends to the south.

In closing I want to say we feel, as New Democrats, that the Government has essentially decided to sell out the forest industry of our country. It has decided to sell out our forest industry which is represented in the hinterlands of Canada. It has either entered into a deal knowingly with the President of the United States or it has acted naively thinking that the President will act in the best interests of our forest producers. That is why we feel very strongly and have suggested today in an Opposition Day motion that this issue be debated, that the Minister explain what studies he has and to show evidence of what these countervailing duties which will be imposed on Canada will do. We want to know what kind of studies, what kind of information he has and has he involved the provincial Ministers responsible for our forests. When we think of this critical industry and when we think of the brink to which it has been brought in the last number of days, we must, as parliamentarians, ask ourselves these questions.

As my hon. friend for Skeena has indicated many times the Government of Canada should have taken advantage of the hundreds and hundreds of articulate experts in terms of the forest industry who should have been in the United States lobbying every Senator and every major decision-maker in every conceivable State in the United States. It should be indicated very clearly we are competing in a free market situation. We have no subsidies in our particular industry. We are operating sort of on a toe-to-toe, nose-to-nose basis. The fact is we have invested heavily both in terms of job loss through technological change and modernization of our plants. We are doing very well, thank you. That is the kind of action which should have been taken, not the kind of non-action or the mealy-mouth approach of this Government in terms of protecting Canada's number one industry.

Mr. Caldwell: Mr. Speaker, I think this could prove to be a very interesting day. We may find out where the New Democratic Party actually does stand on enhanced trade. Would the Hon. Member comment on a quote from The Toronto Star yesterday by Marion Dewar of the New Democratic Party. She said, and I quote:

> The real alternative for Canada (and for the United States, I might add) is a policy that emphasizes self-reliance and puts an end to the no-win contest. A nation's economy must stop being based on the illusion that it is possible for every nation to export more than it imports. It does not add up.

Does the Hon. Member agree with that comment? Is this the way the NDP is going? Does the Hon. Member think that we should not be in the export market but simply produce for ourselves and place a border around Canada?

• (1130)

Mr. Riis: First, I agree 100 per cent with that statement, Mr. Speaker. Unless there were parts of the statement not read, I did not hear the Hon. Member suggest that she said we should erect trade barriers around Canada. I did not hear the Hon. Member say that she said we should not participate in international trade. What she did say was that we should strive to be more self-reliant, to do what any self-respecting country would do; that is, to take advantage of our own resources, to process our own resources, and not get into a sell-out mentality.

I know that if Marion Dewar were in the House today—and she might be one day—she would be standing in her place saying that the Canadian forest industry is too valuable and too important to use as a trade-off or a sacrificial lamb in free trade talks. That is what she believes and that is what she thinks. Quite frankly, she thinks that there should be more of an effort made for Canadians to become self-reliant in these areas. That is the type of initiative most progressive countries are taking. Of course, hand in hand with that goes some obvious trade initiatives which any major trading country such as Canada would obviously launch.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, it is worth noting at the outset, with respect to an issue which has been promoted by the Government as being one of the most important international economic initiatives, that the first opportunity for Parliament to debate the topic is on an opposition motion well over one year after the initial proposal was launched. This only underlines the basic philosophy which, unfortunately, is the hallmark of the Government; that is, keep people in the dark. I suppose the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) was raised on too many mushrooms as a young child. He became addicted to the fact that mushrooms are grown in the dark by throwing a lot of manure at them to make sure they flourish. That is the problem we have in this debate.

Perhaps there will be an opportunity today to cut through much of the confusion, many of the contradictions and the deliberate camouflage which has been raised about trade matters. They have only confused many Canadians with respect to what the objectives of the Government are and what the end results will be. What passes for debate is the Prime Minister calling people names. When one does not have a good argument one resorts to name-calling. There has been no specific set of mandates placed before Parliament which can act as the basic parameters for our negotiators. There have been but a series of incredible ironies and contradictions between Ministers and between the parties in the negotiations. The end result is that each time we turn around we are losing a bit of the edge in terms of the trade negotiations.

The passive, convoluted approach which has been taken thus far has placed us in a trade position which puts us on the defensive, as the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Kelleher) has admitted. We have been placed in a position in which we must respond, as opposed to being able to take the initiative. Nowhere is that clearer than in the issue as it relates to lumber.

Three or four weeks ago an interesting debate took place in the Senate Finance Committee of the United States about whether or not the committee would approve a fast track approach. At a late hour, after last minute log rolling took place, the Prime Minister swept down the grand staircase of the Langevin Block, like some apparition out of the time of Marie Antoinette, to announce that it had been a great victory. He said that it was a clean launch, that there were no preconditions and that everything would be wide open. However, as we looked at the fine print we saw that Mr. Reagan had promised the Finance Committee that he would send it a letter about lumber in which he would assure members of the committee that their deep concerns about their constituencies would be properly met.

We asked some questions about that matter the next day and the Prime Minister, as only he can do, rose to the height of his pomposity to say: "Oh no, don't worry. It was a clean launch and there were no problems". We now have a copy of the letter sent by Mr. Reagan to his Senators. Not only does the letter include the words expressed by the initiator of this motion, but Mr. Reagan went even further to say that he wants a solution to the problem before he can recommend comprehensive negotiations to the Senate Finance Committee. He said there is a clear declaration that there will be separate negotiations on lumber and other irritants. That was confirmed last night at a meeting of the External Affairs Committee when Deputy Chief Negotiator, Mr. Ritchie, said that there will be separate negotiations in this area. That statement puts the statements made by the Prime Minister three or four weeks ago into total disrepute. Once again, we are faced with a problem of not being able to accept the word of the Prime Minister because it does not hold for more than 24 hours.

We are now in an incredible situation in which the Government is launching a negotiation on comprehensive free trade at the same time as it is negotiating with the Americans. They are demanding more tariffs, more controls and more limitations on free trade. Yet the Government is telling us that the answer to our problem is in this comprehensive negotiation, except in the problem areas which have been identified by the American Government as being specific irritants. They are pharmaceuticals, intellectual property and lumber. In those areas they want separate negotations. Those separate negotiations are designed to limit trade and to restrict it. They will bring the barriers higher and not lower. Yesterday, the Minister said in the House that that was the very reason we started comprehensive negotiations. Many of these irritants will not be included as part of the negotiations. They will be subject to separate negotiations which must be resolved, according to President Reagan, before he recommends a comprehensive agreement.

Goodness, gracious, what is going on? What type of convoluted intellectual gymnastics is the Government going through that it can persuade itself that it will solve the problem on lumber through comprehensive negotiations while at the same time it agrees, through a special envoy, to get into separate negotiations on that very same subject? It is hard to believe that grown-up, mature men and women holding positions of responsibility in the Government could actually delude themselves into thinking that somehow they have a solution to a problem when they have created an even bigger one.

All we want to do in this debate is find out where the Government stands. Are we back to where the Prime Minister said we were? Are we back to having no preconditions, no separate negotiations, with everything on the table as part of the bilateral comprehensive negotiations? Or is President Reagan right when he says in his letter that he will start separate negotiations and that he will reach a separate deal before he recommends anything back to the committee?

Our Prime Minister and the President are supposed to be good friends. They are supposed to have a little phone which they can pick up everyday and wish each other good morning or good night. Surely, they might decide to get together and at least arrange to have a common position. If they do not have one, something which I suspect is more the case, then we have already acceded to those American requests for separate discussions.

• (1140)

According to today's headlines, the Canadian Ambassador in Washington said: "We are now recommending special envoys, a eupehemism for special negotiations, but we are not going to tell the Canadian people that". We in the House of Commons will rise and beat our breasts and say that we have made no deals, that there are no preconditions and that it is a clean launch except that there are a few other things about which we have not bothered to tell the Canadian people. The end result of that is what we have seen time after time over the past two years; we give things away.

The Prime Minister has told the Canadian people at least 5,000 times what a wonderful labour negotiator he was. I would sure hate to be one of his clients. What did he give away before we even got started with the negotiations? He gave away the NEP. That went right down the tubes. Then FIRA went away and we got nothing in return. Now we are giving away the pharmaceutical industry and we will get nothing in return. This is before we have even entered into negotiations.

What is the limit of the Government's generosity? Does it consider the United States to be a charity case, that it has to be given all these concessions with nothing in return? Would it not have been somewhat more effective if, in giving away all these bones of contention, the Government had asked for some clear statement of principle and a commitment to no further incursions on the lumber industry?

The Minister for International Trade, the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) have said: "Oh, but we have such a good friend in the U.S. administration. We can trust Mr. Reagan. We don't know if we can trust those guys in Congress but we can trust the administration". However, the President is now siding with all those people, saying very clearly that when it comes to lumber he will negotiate separately, and if he does not get what he wants he will start a countervail action, and if he still does not get what he wants then he will hold as ransom his request for comprehensive agreements until such time as Canadians accede. So much for a friend in camp. Who knows what our enemies would do under those circumstances.

This is not a matter of merely making debating points. As we well know, the softwood lumber industry depends upon its export trade. Not only has the lumber industry expanded and modernized, but the other major factor it has going for it is the exchange rate. Nowhere have the Americans conceded lightly that that is the factor that enables us to provide competition. Therefore, it raises a very clear suspicion that once we get into the so-called comprehensive negotiations the exchange rate will also be on the table and the Americans will start demanding a harmony in exchange rates or compensation for that exchange rate as part of the trade deal. That sends out a very serious warning signal, not only for the lumber industry but for many other exporting industries which have been using that comparative advantage to some very substantial effect.

Again, we have heard nothing from the Government about the importance of the exchange rate as part of the competitiveness of our lumber industry and the advantage it provides. What is the Government going to do about it? Is it going to concede, make deals, have the special envoys get together and negotiate how we may provide for some compensation in that area?

Let me deal with another warning signal having to do with subsidies. We have now seen three or four cases of this come before the International Trade Commission. The subsidies that are applied by the federal or provincial Governments toward regional expansion in disadvantaged industries, whether they be the fishing industry in Atlantic Canada, the softwood lumber industry on the West Coast or transportation subsidies for western grain, are a part of our domestic right to reallocate resources and opportunities across Canada to meet regional inequalities. That has always been clearly stated. The Americans have now said, through a variety of trade suits, that those subsidies are considered to be countervails and unfair trade practices. If that becomes a standard argument that will enter into the comprehensive negotiations, we are in deep trouble as a country. We will then be forced to start bargaining away our freedom of action as a country to decide where and when we want to allocate resources to help the less fortunate regions and those industries that we believe should be our competition loss-leaders and provide comparative advantage in international markets.

Do not kid yourself, Mr. Speaker. These negotiations really are not about tariffs. They are about non-tariff barriers. The primary non-tariff barrier put forward by the Americans is the question of Canadian subsidies. We have seen this in the fishing industry, in the softwood lumber industry and in the grain industry. All those industries that provide a large part of our export dollar are now being challenged on the basis of the subsidies we provide and the supports we give to those industries.

Let me deal with a third area that is part of this resolution and perhaps goes to the very heart of the trade debate. That is the issue of countervailing powers. If memory serves me correctly, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, in answer to a question put to him in the House, agreed that the negotiations that are being launched would be of no purpose whatsoever unless we were to receive major concessions from the Americans to limit their ability to provide countervail action through the ITC and the Commerce Department under the U.S. Trade Bill of 1979. He said that that was the heart of the talks and that if we do not get that special exemption, then what is the point of the talks themselves. I agree with that. There is no point getting into those negotiations if all the harassment that we now endure simply continues. What is the point of giving away the edges if the major problem of access to the market is constantly in danger?

Three weeks ago the United States administration agreed to start comprehensive negotiations, but today it agreed to support a countervail action on lumber, an action which will have devastatilng effects on that industry. How can the Americans start negotiating to reduce countervail powers and then three weeks later clearly signal that they are going to continue to use those countervail powers to protect their own industries in the United States? We should have known this.

Last week, in a television interview, Peter Murphy, the chief U.S. trade negotiator, said it is highly unlikely that they would even consider negotiating countervail powers.

We can look at this from an historic point of view. When the United States negotiated a so-called free-trade agreement with Israel it excluded any limitation on United States countervail action. What the Americans got from the Israelis in return was an agreement to limit subsidies down the road, but the Americans did not concede, give up or surrender any limitation whatsoever on countervail action. That is why we have been making the case that the best way to ensure against unfair countervail action is to strengthen the GATT process under the multilateral system, a system which clearly defines subsidies according to international standards, not standards set by the U.S. industry alone. Yet this Government has gone against that particular stand and argues that if it gets a deal with the Americans first, then it can try to incorporate it in the GATT. Why is the Government giving up what it already has as a more effective protection rather than trying to strengthen it through the multilateral international system? That is the way to deal with the problem of countervail and subsidies, the two major issues at the heart of the trade negotiations.

The Government has gone topsy-turvy. It is going the wrong way. It is heading off in the wrong direction to achieve its goal. As a result, it is contributing to the weakening of the GATT process. It is contributing to the erosion of the international trading system through a clear declaration that it is putting its bucks on the development of a bilateral continental trade agreement that will be discriminatory against other nations. That is the real problem we have with the trade position.

Not only is the Government a poor bargainer and negotiator because it gives away everything and gets nothing in return, but the option it has chosen to secure Canadian markets in the United States and elsewhere is the wrong option. It has surrendered a basic foundation of Canadian trade policy, the utilization of the multilateral system as the most effective means of protecting Canadian interests as opposed to relying on a continental bilateral system. That is the fundamental problem and that is why we are going to be paying a very heavy price in the negotiations.

What we see on the table today is that the Americans feel free to give all kinds of broad endorsements to a comprehensive negotiation as long as they can force this country to get into separate negotiations or make separate concessions on the problems that are the real irritants.

Last summer a Commons-Senate committee was asked by the Government to study the trade issue. It made a report to the House which was endorsed by all members of all Parties. It contained a very clear warning to the Government. It indicated that the irritants must be resolved before we started the comprehensive negotiation, or we would be held up for ransom. That was the recommendation of Conservative Members, New Democratic Members and Liberal Members of that committee. The Government chose to ignore the recommendation of that all-Party group and went ahead on its own sweet way.

What do we have in front of us now? It is a very clear contradiction. The American President, the U.S. administration, and Congress are short-circuiting and are demanding satisfaction on the lumber issue. This puts in jeopardy a major industry in Canada. The Government's panacea, which was to get into the comprehensive negotiation, has been put aside until that is resolved, clearly in the words of the United States President.

Mr. Benjamin: We have been had again.

Mr. Axworthy: That is right. Once more we have allowed ourselves to mistake hard-nosed bargaining for good intentions. As a result, not only the people in the lumber industry will pay the price, so will the entire country.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I have painfully listened to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). I should like to make a couple of comments and to direct a couple of questions to him. I think he should be singled out as probably the most anti-U.S. Member of Parliament in the Liberal caucus. I certainly get that impression from his comments, not only today but in the past.

There was the absence of a reference to trees in his last sentence or two, a very substantive part of the debate. I do not think the former Minister is too well informed on trees in any event. He made reference, and unkindly so, to mushrooms. I will leave that one alone. Clearly the bottom line is that he and his Party demonstrates an absence of intestinal fortitude when it comes to the subject of free trade. It is an anti-U.S. syndrome. It is an anti-intestinal fortitude syndrome. He wants everything our way. His negotiating process is 100 per cent our way and zero the U.S. way. There is no accommodation; it is our way or no way.

The Hon. Member expressed rightful concern over countervail. I share that concern, as did the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) who led off the debate. Contervail should be on the table, and all elements of it should be removed as a starting point. What would he do with the Canadian countervail? What position do we take vis-à-vis potato growers? What position do we take with berry farmers? What position do we take with apple growers? What position do we take with the silver, lead, and zinc industry? What position do we take on those issues which have caused the United States to respond, and what position do we take on the other side of the coin? Do we tell our potato growers and fishermen that we will not support them? Is that what the Hon. Member would do? Would he tell the farming community that we will not support it? I would like to know what position he would take on the other side of the coin.

While he is at it, he might also tell us the last time in the House his Liberal caucus, or any member of his caucus including the forestry spokesman, ever addressed the subject of forestry.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would be most happy to respond to that diatribe. The last significant economic treaty which was negotiated and signed between Canada and the United States was done by myself when I was the Minister of Transport. It was done on the basis of proper negotiation and of defending the interest of Canadians. It succeeded in repairing a major problem which had been around for 20 years between the two countries.

It would be useful if the Hon. Member would allow himself from time to time to examine the facts as opposed to dealing simply in his own form of mass hysteria. The fact is that for the many years the Liberals were in Government we were able to negotiate successfully a wide range of trade arrangements and agreements with the United States. Also it may be of interest to note that when we left Government we had a $20 billion surplus with the U.S. which the Tories have fortunately been able to maintain but not build upon; in fact it is now going down.

The Hon. Member claimed that we did not know what we were doing in trade and that we had all the wrong approaches. We resolved a number of trade issues on a bilateral basis because we knew how to negotiate and how to bargain. I was one of the Ministers who got one of those treaties signed, and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Mazankowski) has been unable to do that as yet. The Hon. Member might want to look at the contrast and compare who was and who was not successful.

When it comes to countervail, I ask the Hon. Member to read what I had to say as reported in Hansard. The genesis of Canadian trade policy has been the recognition that the best way to protect our interests when dealing with a number of large trading partners which dwarf us in economic terms is to rely upon the multilateral system. We were the authors of that system back in 1948 and one of the architects of the GATT rounds. We have been one of the major promoters.

Part of the system is that definitions are provided within the rules as to what requires subsidy. It has been made very clear that countervail can be exercised when there is a direct export related subsidy, and that subsidies related to economic development or regional equity are perfectly acceptable. If they had only followed the GATT rounds, we would not be in trouble on the lumber issue. We should be strengthening that principle and those kinds of rules, as opposed to getting into a bargaining position with a much bigger partner, which is bludgeoning us to death on this one and for which we will pay a heavy price.

We are talking about protecting Canadian trade because that is what we were elected to do. Perhaps the Hon. Member thinks that he was elected to represent the lumber interests of the United States. Maybe that is what he is talking about; maybe that is his definition. I happen to think that I have been elected to represent the interests of Canada. Of course that means maintaining as good relations as we can with other countries but never forgetting that we were elected to protect the national interests of Canada. I am afraid too many Tory Members have forgotten that because they have taken the example of the Prime Minister whose first political lesson was dancing for a song for Colonel McCormack, and he is still dancing today.

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, it was very interesting to hear what the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) enunciated this morning. I find it difficult to believe many of the things he said. I do not think he believes most of it himself. It was like the rhetoric between two wrestlers before getting into a match who say many things, but once they get into the ring that is truly what counts.

Negotiations have not started but we are preparing for it. Yet we heard all this rhetoric about the problems and about not accepting the word of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) when the Prime Minister has given his word and it has been kept. He has assured us that the lumber and wood industry of Canada, in particular of British Columbia and Alberta, will be protected. He has made that statement numerous times, so why should the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry say something completely different and out of context?

Then he talks about the sellout of the NEP. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry is still under delusions that the NEP was of some value. It was some value only to the Party and it created havoc not only in western Canada but throughout the rest of the country. The pharmaceutical industry is not going to be sold out. We are still in the negotiation stage. This is rhetoric before the fight, just like two wrestlers. We are looking for an assured market. We are struggling and we are going to obtain it. GATT is a process that will take time.

The Hon. Member mentioned that irritants must be removed according to the committee composed of Senators and Members of Parliament of last summer. That is what we are doing now, removing the irritants so that we can get on with the process of free trade. I suggest to the Member, why not consider and offer the positive aspects of what can be done, what is being done and what we are offering, having the best possible people available, with complete consultation right across the country among industry, labour, government and the provinces. We are using a process that has not been used before, and we feel this is the effective way of doing it. I ask for some positive aspects with which the Hon. Member can feel happy as well as the people of Canada.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would first draw to the Hon. Member's attention that unlike he and his colleagues, when we say something we mean it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: I want to draw to the attention of the Hon. Member what has transpired in this House in the last two weeks. There is a clear case that when we say something we mean it, but we are not so sure about the Government. When its members say something, we never know what they mean.

We are deeply concerned about what is taking place. We see statements by the Prime Minister not in any way in accord with the reality of what is going on. We are given those assurances and we are asked to take them at face value, but we then turn around and read a letter from the President of the United States who contradicts them. The Member says "Don't pay attention". Is this the new policy stance that you do not pay attention when the President of the United States puts something in writing that contradicts our own Prime Minister and his position? Are we not supposed to pay attention to that? Are we supposed to say: "Come on. Boys will be boys. They are just kidding". The President has made a commitment to the Senate Finance Committee. We know that he is insisting upon a deal on softwood lumber that will restrict imports, that will restrict the ability of our own industry to maintain its economic viability. That will be the price and the condition which the President will impose in order to get a trade deal. This Member has the gall and the nerve to ask Members to ignore that. God knows, we are in trouble.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

Hon. James Kelleher (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, if I may very briefly, before I begin my speech, address one or two points made by previous speakers.

First, I would like to make it very clear to this House that as of now no countervailing petition has been filed in the United States against Canada's lumber. Second, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) seems to find it strange that discussions are being held independent of the Canada U.S. trade negotiations which will commence shortly.

The Hon. Member will know that Mr. Yeutter and I met last December long before there had been any agreement to the commencement of Canada U.S. trade discussions. At that time lumber was, as it is now, a serious problem between our two countries. It was agreed then that we would begin discussions to see what we could do to resolve the problems. Those talks have continued and are continuing. We have met monthly: January, February, March and April, and there is another discussion tomorrow.

It is nothing new that we are having discussions independent of Canada-U.S negotiations. These talks were agreed to last December and the agreement to them was made public at a press conference at the time. I was also questioned in the House. There is nothing new or untoward in the continuation of those discussions. Nothing is being given away. What both countries recognize is that there is a problem that must be addressed.

However, Mr. Speaker, I will grant members of the Opposition one point. Without any doubt, countervailing duty actions are a serious threat to our access to the U.S. market. They are a serious threat to Canada's economy. No Member of this House knows that better than I do, for I have had to spend a great deal of my time as Minister for International Trade fighting the various outbreak of protectionist rashes in the United States, and countervail actions are one of the most serious and chronic of them all.

In recent years, the U.S. Commerce Department has carried out countervail investigations on Canadian exports of softwood lumber, tubular steel, Bombardier rail passenger cars, live hogs and pork products, raspberries, and fresh groundfish and fillets. All told there have been six major countervail investigations since 1982 affecting billions of dollars of exports.

I would point out that an investigation, in and of itself, is not a sanction. Of these actions only two, the ones on our live hogs and fresh groundfish, have resulted in the application of actual countervail duties. At the same time each new countervail action, no matter what the outcome, takes its toll. Each one represents a threat to our trade, a threat that restrictive action might be taken, and each one must be fought, which brings on heavy legal expenses. On top of that, each new threat of trade restrictive action does real but immeasurable damage to the investment climate in Canada.

At the moment the U.S. has a large trade deficit. Congressional elections are coming in the fall and Washington abounds with rumours of new complaints aimed at Canadian exports. The loudest rumour is that American lumber producers will file another countervailing duty action against Canadian softwood lumber. If they do, it would be their second filing in three years. They lost the first.

Maybe I should give this resolution the benefit of the doubt. Maybe it shows the dawn of enlightenment. I would like to believe that, misguided though it may be, it at least shows that Members opposite finally recognize the need for a better set of rules for the conduct of our trade and economic relations with the United States. Maybe I am an incurable optimist.

The problem, however, is nonetheless real. The resolution we are debating today on the other hand is not. It is naive and unrealistic. What it would have us do is tell the American administration that if it does not stop its lumber interests from filing a countervail action, Canada will refuse to enter negotiations that might lessen the likelihood of all kinds of trade restrictions, including countervail, between us in the future.

It is clear, Mr. Speaker, that current international rules do not provide the certainty and security of access to the U.S.

market which Canadian producers need to plan and invest. It is also clear that the existing rules can be improved only through international negotiations and that there are two avenues along which negotiations can take place. One is bilateral with our principle trading partner. The other is multilateral under GATT. This Government is pursuing both actions.

As Members opposite are aware, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade is the current contractual basis of our trade relations with the United States. It represents a careful balance of rights and obligations. The GATT recognizes that subsidies may have harmful effects on trade and production. It, therefore, permits the application of countervailing duties in situations where subsidized imports are found to be injurious to domestic producers of the same product.

Detailed international rules were negotiated in the Tokyo round of multinational trade negotiations, rules aimed at ensuring that these countervailing measures do not unjustifiably impede international trade. That relief is available to local producers adversely affected by foreign subsidies. The Tokyo round also established an international framework of rights and obligations for countervail actions. Indeed, from Canada's perspective, one of the most important achievements of the Tokyo round was agreement by the United States to incorporate an injury test in its countervailing duty law. As a result, several longstanding countervail findings against Canada were wiped from the records. Both Canada and the United States have equipped themselves to exercise their right under the GATT to apply countervailing duties to protect their domestic industries.

A few moments ago I mentioned that the resolution which we are debating is naive and unrealistic. It ignores the facts. The countervailing duties which are currently being applied by the United States to our exports of live hogs and fresh groundfish are not the result of a political act by either Congress or the administration, but of a quasi-judicial proceeding under the U.S. laws and the rules of GATT. The only immediate recourse is through the U.S. courts, an option which Canadian producers concerned are currently pursuing. The U.S. administration simply does not have the authority to rescind a quasi-legal finding, whether it agrees with it or not. Similarly, I am sure the Opposition in this House agrees that it would be inappropriate, and indeed impossible, for the Canadian Government to reverse a decision by a similar quasi-judicial proceeding in Canada. We still respect the rule of law.

With regard to the threat of yet another U.S. countervailing duty action on softwood lumber, I have conveyed to the U.S. administration at the cabinet level the Canadian Government's strong objection to the initiation of another investigation. I have made it plain that Canada considers there are no grounds for the U.S. Department of Commerce to accept a new countervailing duty petition. The Commerce Department has already determined in 1983 that Canada is a fair trader in softwood lumber and that there are no grounds for countervailing duties. There have been no significant changes since then in government policies and practices in Canada which affect our lumber producers and there have been no changes in American countervail law which would justify a new investigation.

Members of this House can rest assured that this Government is prepared to take all appropriate actions to defend Canadian interests in the event U.S. lumber producers try to countervail again, despite everything. It might be well to point out that the U.S. has no monopoly on countervailing actions. Canada too has equipped itself through the Special Import Measures Act to deal with injurious subsidized imports. We are determined in administering this legislation to ensure that Canadian producers can obtain relief from injury caused by subsidized imports.
