MR. CUSHING WINS AGAIN; ORDER FOR WINDING UP PULP CO. IS CONFIRMED

Cable to Barnhill, Ewing and Sanford Brought the News Here This Morning—End of Long Contested Litigation Over Cushing Sulphite Fibre Co.

A cable was received this morning by Messrs. Barnhill Ewing & Sanford, solicitors for George S. Cushing, from Messrs. Field, Roscoe & Co., solicitors, London, England, stating that the Privy Council had dismissed with costs the petition of the Cushing Sulphite Fibre Company Limited for leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada in the matter of the winding up of the pulp company.

The cable further states that the privy council also refused the petition of the company and of Captain Partington to appeal from the order of Judge McLeod postponing the sale of the pulp mill. The costs of all the liquidation proceedings will have to be paid under the judgment by the pulp company and Captain Partington.

Messrs. Barnhill, Ewing & Sanford, solicitors and Attorney General Pugsley and L. A. Currier, Counsel for Geo. S. Cushing, J. D. Hagan, K. C., counsel for liquidators and Messrs. Hamilton, Tweed & Hamilton, solicitors and H. A. Powell, K. C. and A. O. Banks, counsel for the company and English bondholders.

THE BOARD OF WORKS AND THE WEST END DREDGING

A secret meeting of the board of public works was held this morning in the mayor's office, to consider what action the city would take regarding indentifying the government against damage claims resulting from the west end dredging.

Representatives of the privy were not admitted as the aldermen claimed there were legal aspects to the case that it was advisable not to make public.

After the meeting, the mayor, the chairman of the board of works and the recorder, called on E. H. Mackenzie, K. C., the agent of the department of justice, and he believed the matter has been satisfactorily arranged.

PATRICK EGAN'S BODY RECOVERED

It Was Found in Thirty Feet of Water Early This Morning—Tragedy Marks Second Day of Yacht Cruise—There Will Be No Inquest.

AT JOHN O. VANWART'S, July 16.—About half past two o'clock this morning, Patrick Egan, the well known yachtsman of St. John, went overboard from the deck of S. L. Kerr's yacht, Laesa, and was drowned. Yachtsmen are now grappling for the body.

Mr. Egan and Mr. Kerr had been sitting in the cockpit of the Laesa taking for a long time, the former having come aboard from the Robin Hood. He stepped out of the cockpit upon the deck, which has no rail, and evidently stumbled and fell overboard. It was then quite dark.

Mr. Kerr went over after him and succeeded in getting hold of him but they sank below the surface together and Mr. Kerr finding himself clutched in what threatened to be a death grapple was compelled to break away and come to the surface. Mr. Egan did not rise, and Mr. Kerr and Mr. Egan were seen to sink and fell overboard. It was then quite dark.

THE ARNOLDFE PUZZLE, BY GORDON HOLMES

Author of "A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE."

Warren was puzzled again. He laughed in case there was a lurking joke. The word suggested a circus or a fair to him, but his guest went on:

"And who is Mr. Warren?" "He's the agent, Mrs. Warren's son. She's a housekeeper at 't' Hall. A nice fat job she's gotten him. A bonny agent to be sure! He doesn't know what 't' Hall means till they're outed. By gunt Farmer Brown tells me 't' other day—"

"His lordship was cut short by the ryal chair of a horse up the village street. The rider, a groom, dismounted in great haste outside a house with a brass plate on the door."

"What's wrong now?" said the landlord. "One of 'em Lord Arncliffe's men, Kenneth's, I'll be bound, as sure as my name's J. J."

Lester, of course, was in a position to hazard a guess on the point, but he said nothing. A consultation between the messenger and a serving maid caused the former to turn away, muttering his usual remark of a glass of beer is the usual resource of such a man if his brains are bridle under his arm, led his horse toward the "Fisherman's Rest."

"Here's a nice thing!" cried Lester, looking at the door. "Lord Arncliffe at death's door, and Dr. Smalley goes off on a round the Lord knows where! What's to be done—ride to Moseley or telegraph to Alnwick?"

"His lordship dyin'?" Swelp me!" wailed the innkeeper. "So Mrs. Warren said. She told me to ride like—well, as fast as I could, for Dr. Smalley, and now I'm in a fix. What did you say mixed ale?"

observing him narrowly as she descended the stairs, and a woman of her position might be trusted to sum up a stranger with exceeding accuracy. "My son did not quite understand that footman's message," she said in measured accents, though her natural emotion was betrayed by the effort to speak without comment. "Of course we are only too glad that a doctor should see his lordship."

"George Lester. Although not practicing now, I have recently been medical officer to the Associated Gold-Fields Company on the West Coast of Africa."

"Are you staying in the village?" She turned to usher him to the upper floor, and she briefly recounted the events since she and Lester were together. They traversed a long passage, adorned throughout with rare pictures, ancient arms, and fine china, with here and there a wonderful butal cabinet or marquetry table. Pausing at the end door on the right, Mrs. Warren stepped aside.

"Lord Arncliffe's bedroom," she whispered. "We brought him here from the library where—when Simpson found him. Lester asked no questions. The time for explanation was not yet. Some one, seemingly Lord Arncliffe, had opened the door of death. Let that all-important verdict be ratified first."

This room was dim. Green blinds shut out the afternoon sun. On a narrow shelf by a diminutive figure, fully dressed, near a window stood the man with the red gaiters. Near the still form on the bed was a liveried servant, aged and bent, gulping back his grief. Lester almost expected to find Miss Holk there too, but the large room held no other occupant. He noticed, but paid no heed to, the marquet of the agent when he entered the room.

His first action was to raise the blind of the window nearest the bed. Then he stepped over the stricken form stretched so stiffly on the coverlet. Water-cool and white linen were draped about the body. He lifted an eyelid, and a glance sufficed. The corpse was opaque. Though this sign is practically invisible, Lester applied a death-knell to the region of the heart. He listened intently for a period that must have seemed long to the watchers. Then he straightened himself.

"Yes, he is dead," he said. There was a pause of some silence. Even the weeping domestic with his job, Lester beamed over the bed again. Clearly, his attention was drawn by a slight irritation of the neck and scalp. "He has been dead for more than an hour," volunteered Warren, speaking in the stony, suspicious tone of one who respects, but cannot prevent, an intrusion.

"Has Dr. Smalley been in regular attendance on Lord Arncliffe?" inquired Lester, still examining the dead man's face. Mrs. Warren answered. "Yes, in a sense," she said. "Dr. Smalley saw him two days ago."

"Why this air of mystery, my good sir? Lord Arncliffe died from acute rheumatism. I have warned him repeatedly."

Lester was nettled by the little man's absurd introduction of professional rivalry into this affair. Yet his demeanor was untroubled. "I am an utter stranger in Arncliffe," he explained. "Even his lordship's name was unknown to me before today. Therefore—"

"Precisely, my dear sir. Lord Arncliffe's illness and its end conclusion are entirely within my province. Dr. Smalley placed his hands behind his back and glared up at Lester defiantly. More than once had he frightened away possible competitors by similar tactics. There was nothing else for it; Lester must speak openly.

"I'm going to tell you," he said with gold distinctness, "that Lord Arncliffe's heart failure was not due to natural causes. It arose from the administration of some powerful drug. Lord Arncliffe has been poisoned!"

CHAPTER II. LORD ARNOLDFE CONTINUES THE DISPUTE. "Poisoned?" cried Harry Warren, with the loud scream of a man asked to credit the incredible.

"Poisoned!" echoed his mother, gasping affrightedly at Lester. Her thin face blanched and she clutched at the steel chain which held the bunch of jangling keys fast to her waist. Lester, however, a sinister imputation against her household management.

"His lordship became angry indeed. 'Stuff and nonsense!' he almost shouted. 'How dare you come here, sir, and make such ridiculous statements and accusations against my patient for years. There is not the slightest ground for your opinion. It is grotesque and untenable. It amounts to a positive outrage. I absolutely refuse to accept it.'

Lester looked the enraged little man straight in the eyes. "I would not object to a death-knell to the region of the heart if you found therein would have amused him under different conditions. As it was, he declined the threatened."

"I have warned you, and I consider that my duty ends here," he said quietly. "Come to Arncliffe in search of peace. Be sure, I have no wish to be drawn into a distasteful controversy."

But Dr. Smalley was not to be pacified. "You must not forget, sir," he volunteered, "that your idiotic charge contains a grave reflection on my treatment of his lordship, and implies either that he was killed himself or that some member of his household has committed murder. Let me tell you sir—"

Lester received a deprecating hand to stay the torrent of words. He went out, closing the door behind him. None of the others offered to stay his departure. It was only natural that they should take Dr. Smalley's view of the dispute.

At the door, he told the waiting servant to lead the doctor to the study. Dr. Smalley's eye was straining there, too. For the second time within an hour he walked slowly back to the village.

Halfway he met the groom, who seemed to be surprised. "Is this lordship better, sir?" inquired the man.

"He is dead," was the answer. "The groom could gurgle forth his amusement. Lester asked him if he had seen Dr. Smalley."

"No, sir," he replied. "Then the doctor must have heard of Lord Arncliffe's illness from some other source, he said to the little man."

"He may have come into the park by the West Lodge, sir. It is possible he drove through on his way home. But for goodness sake, sir, what did his lordship die of?"

THE CHILDREN OF JAPAN

All the world is sitting at the feet of Japan in these days. The military enterprises of Europe and America are striving to learn the lesson—a wonderful one—taught by Japanese success in preventing disease during a campaign.

The boy in the elementary schools of Japan—says one observer—rises at half-past 5 o'clock in the morning, has breakfast at 6, and school begins at 7. Between 7 and 8, and school begins at 7. Between 7 and 8, and school begins at 7.

We read of old heads on young shoulders. "Boys will be boys," but not in Japan. The discipline in Japanese schools is no trouble to the teacher who knows his subject and how to teach it.

The compulsory subjects in the elementary schools are the Japanese language, arithmetic, gymnastics and morals.

BACK TO PUBLICITY. "Secrecy in corporate management," says the New York Journal of Commerce, "is gradually being uprooted and thrown to the scrap heap, fit company for other worn-out machinery and exploded devices."

A COMPARISON. Mr. H. H. Langton, a Canadian, writes to the New York Evening Post to correct some unwarranted comment on the comparative safety of British and American railroads following the recent terrible accident at Salisbury, England.

It would be easy to prove the exceptional safety of any ill-built, ill-managed pioneer railway, with one passenger train a day each way and a smash-up once a month, as compared to an equal number of miles of the New York Central, in the immediate neighborhood of New York, with about a thousand times as much traffic.

Mr. Langton points out effectively that the proper basis of a comparison of railway casualties ought to be the amount of traffic, not length of line. Passenger traffic on English railways is enormous, as compared with that in the United States, although the average distance over which each passenger is carried is probably not so great.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN. The Canadian Associated Press gives a report of Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Bingley which contains two interesting statements. We quote: "Mr. Chamberlain said that Cobden had declared that he rejected the idea of the federation of Canada because he thought it a preliminary step to the entire separation from the mother country."

HENRY M. WHITNEY ON LATE LONDON TRADE CONGRESS
Says it Points a Warning to United States to Trade Fair in Order to Hold British and Canadian Duties—Heavy American Duties, Mr. Whitney Says, Will Retard American Trade.

(Boston Herald.)
Henry M. Whitney, who has given much attention to the trade relations of the United States with foreign countries, was asked to give his opinion as to the significance of the London trade congress of commerce of the British empire, which has just been held in London.
"My opinion is," said Mr. Whitney, "that this congress was of very great importance, for it showed decisively that the direction of thought in the empire is strongly toward the adoption of a mutually beneficial commercial policy. The resolution introduced by the Canadian representatives, favoring a preferential treatment on a reciprocal basis within the empire, was adopted by a vote of 107 to 41, with 21 neutral. This vote was by a change of opinion, and it is said that the votes of individual delegates had been counted in the proportion in the affirmative would have been greater."
The action of this congress is of the very greatest significance to the people of the United States. It should teach us that we cannot afford to neglect the trade we would have with Great Britain and Canada unless we show a disposition to trade fair. We cannot forever levy prohibitive duties on their products and expect ours to find ready and easy access to their markets. From the time that the Chamberlain has the right idea, and in the end his policy is bound to prevail, for unless international benefits are reciprocal, commercial relations cannot be permanent and lasting. Trade will ultimately seek the channels which are marked out by intelligent and honest men.
And so it is bound to be that, if the United States shows no favor to Great Britain and her colonies, ultimately the British Empire will be bound to preferential treatment together by preferential duties. A British imperial tariff policy cannot fail to be hostile to us.

MORNING NEWS
Local

The picnic of the St. Paul's (Valley) church at Westfield beach Saturday afternoon was the most successful yet. There were 300 in attendance. There were the usual games and amusements. Among the features of the day was a quarter mile run, which was won by W. A. Moore with Harry Debon second, and W. H. Boyne third. The prize was a silk umbrella. A basket ball game was also played. The St. Paul's and Mission church teams, resulting in a victory for the former, 7 to 4.
In consequence of a Charlotte street dry goods store remaining open Saturday afternoon some of the other firms in the same line of business have closed their doors for the half holiday. Nothing definite was known yesterday as to what would be the outcome of the proposed agreement but it is regarded as likely that unless some new understanding is come to the Saturday half holiday is going on the street may be settled today.
Capt. J. E. Porter and party of friends left on the steamer Sydney Saturday night for Lake Umbagog, and are expected back early this morning. Just when the Sydney is going on the river may be settled today.
This evening the provincial board of health will meet at the government offices, Charon street, to make arrangements for the hearing of all parties interested in the question of the Fredrickton sewerage being allowed to flow into the St. John river. The hearing will take place at the capital. Two new members of the board, Mr. Curran, of Woodstock, and Dr. J. Sprague, of Fairville, will attend the meeting this evening. Hon. James Holly will preside.

MAN FALLS THIRTY-FIVE FEET

Sackville, N. B., July 15.—Frank Dobson, a bricklayer of this town, met with a serious accident Saturday morning while working on a chimney on the roof of a house being built on Lambton street for Prof. Crowell of Mt. Allison. He had built a scaffolding, piled bricks and mortar there on and just climbed up on the staging when it gave way, precipitating him to the ground, a distance of about thirty-five feet.
In falling he turned a complete somersault and struck on his head and shoulder, and a shower of lumber, bricks and mortar which overhung him, fell on him, causing him to be considerably injured. Every one who witnessed the accident felt sure that Dobson would be killed instantly but fortunately it was not as bad as that. He had a shoulder fractured, jaw broken in two places and it proved sustained injuries. The necessary surgical aid was rendered by Dr. Galtin, assisted by Dr. Seccord.
Dobson's recovery is considered doubtful.

CLOSE CALL FROM DROWNING

Chatham, N. B., July 15.—Lizzie Malley, aged eight, fell off the ferry slip where she was playing this evening, and had a close call from drowning. Police Constable Goughlin and another man jumped in after the child and brought her out after being under water five or six minutes. Mrs. Benson and Duff resuscitated her with difficulty.
The passengers on the steamer Miramichi had a bad scare today. The boat had been chartered by the Orange Society of Chatham and Lepperville to convey them to Lunenburg. When approaching the Chatham landing the signals to stop were not heeded, and the boat crashed into the mooring line of the Alexandria, breaking two 4 1/2 inch ropes and seriously injuring her guard.
The women alighted and others wanted to jump ashore. There were 122 persons on board, but no one was hurt. The boat afterwards proceeded to Lunenburg.

ANOTHER MYSTERY

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., July 15.—Carefully covered with lumps of lead, the body of John Streub, a twelve year old boy of Housatonic, was found under a tree in the woods near that village today and although decomposition had set in to such an extent as to conceal the exact cause of death, the circumstances in the opinion of the medical examiner, point strongly to foul play. Streub has been missing from his home since last Monday when he started out with another boy named Benjamin White to go to Torrington, Conn., where they expected to secure work in a factory.
Upon reaching Great Barrington, the boys separated, and White kept on to Torrington while Streub announced his intention of returning to Housatonic.
Dr. J. E. Boche, of Great Barrington, the medical examiner, will make a thorough examination of the body.

ORANGE GRAND LODGE

Toronto, July 15.—(Special)—The triennial council of Orange Grand Lodge of the world opens its fourteenth session here Monday. Representatives from all over the British empire and United States will attend. The last session was held in Dublin.
Mr. and Mrs. John R. McCloskey left Saturday for Saratoga, where Mr. McCloskey will attend the A. O. U. H. convention. W. J. Mahoney has returned from Halifax.

Drew's Knowledge of Bible

John Drew became quite melancholy the other day when he was regretting the fact that so few people read the Bible. It appears that John was supping amicably at the club and when nobody could tell him the "meaning of the word Easter," he exclaimed with a frown, "Nobody reads the Bible now." Just at this moment we confess our inability to turn to that particular part of the Bible which treats of Easter, his derivation as a word and its meaning, but of course we do not for an instant doubt that the whole matter is fully set forth somewhere, as is well known to John. Perhaps it is in Exodus or early in Leviticus; we always had a copy of the Old Testament to keep awake. Now we know why John was elected president of the Players' Club; it was in deference to his knowledge of the Holy Scriptures.—Rorwell Field in the Chicago Post.

BASE BALL

St. Josephs 3; St. Roses, 1. A couple of hundred people witnessed a good game of ball on the Victoria grounds Saturday evening when, in a six inning contest, the St. Josephs managed to defeat the St. Roses, 3 to 1.

George was the pitcher for the winning team, and had nine strike outs, while he was found for only two safe hits, and those during the last of the game. Downing, for the Fairville team, had six strike outs and was found for five hits.

The St. Johns made up on Saturday for the game they lost to the Esplanade Browns by defeating the visitors to the game of 13 to 2. The win was in the box for the home team and, while he struck out only one man, he was found for eight safe hits. The St. Johns played good ball one feature being a beautiful running catch in the third inning by Craigie in center field. McLaughlin and Cooper led in the batting. The game was delayed for a few minutes as the first inning on account of McLaughlin being hit on the head by a pitched ball.

Three Methodist Ministers Preached First Sermons in New Charges Yesterday.

Three Methodist ministers preached their first sermons at their new churches yesterday. Rev. Neil McLaughlin, formerly of St. John's, preached at the new church at the Fairville grounds. His text was "From everlasting even to everlasting."

Mr. McLaughlin in treating of the views advanced by atheists contended that in many ways the world is a grander and more beautiful than the existence of a God there must be some strange perversion that has destroyed the faculty which distinguishes man from brute.

Rev. James Crisp, the new pastor of Zion Methodist church, preached his first sermon at the new church at the Fairville grounds. His text was "The Lord is God."

Mr. Crisp in treating of the views advanced by atheists contended that in many ways the world is a grander and more beautiful than the existence of a God there must be some strange perversion that has destroyed the faculty which distinguishes man from brute.

DIED WHILE BATHING

York, Me., July 15—A. H. Ashton, of Rochester (N. Y.), who with his wife has been a guest at Hotel Hawthorn at Long Beach, in this town, died today while bathing in the surf. Physicians who examined the body said that death was due to heart trouble. He was 22 years old.

Motor boats of all sorts are becoming more and more numerous on the Western coast, threatening to displace the old-time gondoliers. The gondoliers are much distressed. In a dispute between two of them and two electric launch men the latter were stoned, one fatally.

Locals are devastating southern Algeria. The swarms are so great as almost to defy imagination. It is not easy to conceive of an almost solid phalanx of insects 125 miles long by six miles wide. Unfortunately the devastation which such myriads of voracious insects must create in vegetation is not so difficult to appreciate.

Mercury Registered 82 the Highest Point of the Season. Yesterday was the warmest day on record this season. Old Salt gained a decisive victory over the breeze and, registered 82. The lowest temperature was 66. The humidity, however, at no time stated more than 81.

The above temperature is exceptional in St. John and many feeling the heat bore down on the city today. It was to be seen during the greater portion of the day, reclining under some sheltering tree at Seaside Park. The shady nooks at Seaside were also great desiderata.

The sherry stables did a rushing business and many anticipating the warmth went out to the country in the such morning. The sherry stables did a rushing business and many anticipating the warmth went out to the country in the such morning.

THIS EVENING Herrmann Tonight. The King of Mystery Opens an Engagement at the Opera House. Herrmann the Great, who makes his first appearance in this city at the Opera House tonight is considered by all theatre-goers to be the foremost magician in the world. He has played in this country and Europe for many years, and although noted for the magnificent settings in which he always presents his performance, it is said that the new scenes in which he is to appear here far surpass anything of the kind ever carried by him in the past. He has expended five thousand dollars for scenic effects alone. For his coming engagement, he brings many novelties, that have never been seen in this country. Some of his illusions are startling in their extreme, and will undoubtedly set this city a talking. As an additional attraction for his engagement here, Herrmann the Great, secured the marvelous Sa-Hera.

The steamship Prank, which left the port for Cork, Ireland, was given quick despatch in loading. The deal cargo of 1200 stowage was shipped by John E. Moore & Co. Stevedore Alexander McDermott, who loaded the steamer with his gang of men, did it in the quick time of 7 1/2 hours.

The published statement that several dry goods houses were influenced to keep open Saturday afternoon by the action of a Charlotte street dealer, was entirely untrue. No stores were opened on this account, nor are any likely to follow this example. On the contrary, the half holiday movement is being strongly adhered to by the leading houses.

THE PLAYGROUND. On Saturday the supervised playgrounds the croquet lawn was made ready for use. During the afternoon the children were favored by Miss Campbell and Dorothy Whalen, who gave a singing duet. The attendance was large, about 400 being present. The smaller children were engaged during the day by waving paper flags. No stores were opened on this account, nor are any likely to follow this example. On the contrary, the half holiday movement is being strongly adhered to by the leading houses.

AT THE ROLLER RINK. Large crowds attended St. Andrew's rink on Saturday, and all seemed delighted with the sport of roller skating. The City Corset band was present in the afternoon and evening and the popular programme of music added more to the enjoyment of those present. It has been decided to reserve a night for July skating as a number of the "gaiters" are only commencing to acquire the art of roller skating and are a little nervous about skating among a crowd. The City Corset band will furnish music on the nights reserved for skating, and undoubtedly the scheme will be a grand success. Gentlemen who accompany ladies will be permitted to skate, but those not so equipped will be obliged to be satisfied with the promenade. No fast skating will be allowed and the management will see to it that this night only for the enjoyment and accommodation of the ladies.

POLICE COURT. Harvey Stackhouse was fined $8 in the police court this morning for being drunk and using profane language. The prisoner pleaded not guilty to the second charge but Sergeant Baxter said he used the language imputed to him.

Leon Danish and John Jamieson for acting disorderly and singing and shouting in Gilbert's lane were disposed of Saturday.

Carotaker Burns, of the suspension bridge, complained that a man named Murphy, employed by R. P. Worden, had allowed his horse to run across the bridge yesterday morning. Mr. Murphy explained that he was driving W. A. Fowling and his family to Bay Shore yesterday morning and when nearing the bridge the hindlers slipped back on the horse's head, becoming unmanageable, ran across the bridge. The owner said this morning that Mr. Fowling had tried to stop him and succeeded only when they had steered him into a pillar on the other side. The case was accepted by the court.

HERRMANN TONIGHT. The King of Mystery Opens an Engagement at the Opera House. Herrmann the Great, who makes his first appearance in this city at the Opera House tonight is considered by all theatre-goers to be the foremost magician in the world. He has played in this country and Europe for many years, and although noted for the magnificent settings in which he always presents his performance, it is said that the new scenes in which he is to appear here far surpass anything of the kind ever carried by him in the past. He has expended five thousand dollars for scenic effects alone. For his coming engagement, he brings many novelties, that have never been seen in this country. Some of his illusions are startling in their extreme, and will undoubtedly set this city a talking. As an additional attraction for his engagement here, Herrmann the Great, secured the marvelous Sa-Hera.

On Thursday "Sa-Hera" will give a special matinee for ladies only. No general boxes admitted.

"Sa-Hera" will then show her marvelous powers by answering any enquiries made by the audience, regarding relatives, friends, etc. On this occasion only the entire house will be placed at a reduced figure.

INTERRUPTED THE LOVERS. Magistrate Ritchie Discovers Amorous Pair Clapsed in a Warm Embrace.

James Macdon, a boy was arrested by Officer Lucas last night and charged with using profane language in the old burial ground. This morning in the police court the boy pleaded not guilty and was fined $8 which was paid.

Officer Lucas said that last night a number of young boys and girls kept him busy chasing them from the resting place of the loyalists. A large number of people occupied the benches and the boys raved about the boys. On one occasion he found Macdon and another boy fooling and the prisoner used profane language.

James Macdon said that he did not remember using the language ascribed to him. He said a young fellow named Graham was with him.

Judge Ritchie then stated that while passing through the old burial ground last night he noticed many occupying the benches. All went well until he got about half way along and lo, on a bench before him, he beheld a girl with both her arms around a young man's neck. The judge did not say who the couple were, but he said that he would be glad to see them if they would be made examples of.
