CARLETON AND VICTORIA COUNTIES TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

Large Attendance—Many Instructive Papers Read and Discussed

One hundred and five teachers were present at the opening session of the Carleton and Victoria counties institute, which convened in the Fisher Memorial school. Principal Denham, of the Woodstock schools, presided at the different sessions. E. J. Alexander was secretary.

Inspector Meagher spoke on physical training, nature work, writing, arithmetic, ventilation and cleanliness.

Inspector R. P. Steeves spoke of the success of institutes depending largely upon the interest and activity shown by teachers in topics presented. He spoke feelingly of Mrs. Hay and Brittain, who died recently, and referred to their good influence on the teaching profession.

E. J. Alexander read an interesting paper on "Nature Study in the Country Schools" that was discussed at some length by several of the teachers.

Miss Mulhenn's paper on Nature study in Town Schools, was also a topic for discussion.

Mr. Durost, who is connected with the agricultural department of the government, addressed the institute on soil conditions necessary for the growth of roots.

The public meeting in the evening was largely attended. A splendid programme of music was carried out and able addresses made by Premier Fleming, Prof. Peacock, R. P. Steeves, Mayor Jones and W. B. Belyea, chairman of the school board. Mayor W. P. Jones welcomed the teachers on behalf of the town, and said that the idea of teachers meeting together and exchanging views, were undoubtedly good. He was glad to see such a representative gathering, as it indicated an interest in educational work. He had a good word to say for the trustees of schools who worked without remuneration. The new library and agricultural college were about under course of construction and Woodstock would soon be an educational centre.

Prof. Peacock's address on Evening Technical Schools was an able effort and received the closest attention. He said evening technical schools should embrace, agriculture, commercial work, household science, and economics.

Inspector Steeves, who taught in Woodstock many years ago, spoke in a reminiscent vein and of the changes that were in evidence in the present surroundings, as compared with years ago.

Premier Fleming spoke briefly along educational lines and deplored the fact that rural districts were not thickly populated owing to the constant exodus to the cities and towns. Strong men are needed to meet this difficulty. Isolation made people leave the country and rural conditions must be improved by better roads, rural telephones and other improvements that will break down this feeling of loneliness and isolation.

At the third session much interest was taken in Miss C. P. Fawcett's instructive discourse on writing. Mrs. Carvell, F. B. Meagher, Miss Slipp, Miss Rice and Miss King discussed the subject.

A paper on physical drill by Miss F. E. Robertson was discussed by several teachers and demonstrated by Miss Lister with little pupils from grade 1.

Principal W. T. Denham, dealing with arithmetic, showed its importance on the school curriculum and argued that it should be part of the daily programme.

The next meeting of the institute will be held at Woodstock the last two days of the December term.

EAST FLORENCEVILLE BASE BALL TEAM

Well Organized and Getting Good Practice—Have Backing of the Citizens

The Florenceville devotees of base ball got together and organized one evening last week. The officers selected were: B. F. Smith, honorary president; H. T. Begg, manager of the Bank of N. S., president; Roy Hunter, secretary-treasurer; with P. R. Semple and H. M. Martell to complete the executive.

Martell will captain the team and has arranged the following line-up:

Joe Lindsay, pitcher
E. Charlton, catcher
Bob White, first base
Roy Hunter, second base
J. A. Tompkins, third base
H. M. Martell, centre
Billy Curran, short stop
S. Tompkins, right field
R. S. Semple, umpire.

This aggregation defeated the Consolidated School team one evening last week. Manager Atkinson is trying to arrange for a game with a Woodstock team to be played on the East Florenceville diamond on the 24th.

It is pleasing to note the names of prominent business men on the executive. This will give the team courage to go in and win for their town's sake. It is good business for a town to give its base ball team, or other legitimate sport, strong backing. A spirit of patriotism for the home town is thus kindled, the monotony of rural life is relieved.

It is to be earnestly hoped that the Hartland boys will not be discouraged in their attempt to organize. The business men should see that no young man should have any reason to want to get away because other towns afford better opportunities for diversion.

The Best Breed of Hogs.

At the Ontario Agricultural College an extensive series of experiments in the feeding of hogs of different breeds was recently carried out. The breeds selected for each were Berkshire, Tamworth, Poland China, Duroc Jersey, Chester White, Yorkshire. Each of the series of experiments was carried on with a view to ascertain which breed made the greatest gain in weight during a certain time under identical methods of feeding and care. Of the five experiments the Berkshires showed the greatest gain in four and second greatest in one. The Tamworth showed the second best gain in three of the experiments. The Chester White, grades of which are common in Carleton county held fourth place among the six breeds. The Poland China, another common breed, proved to be the least economical of any of them.

Bad Roads.

Some idea of the disgraceful conditions that prevail on many of the roads of Albert county can be obtained from the fact that Rev. H. D. Worden, pastor of Dawson Settlement church, nearly lost his horse on Sunday whilst on the way home from Nixon, where he had preached to full congregations. The reverend gentleman was proceeding on his way, when his steed, a valuable one, went down in a hole in the highway, its legs being completely hidden from view. Mr. Worden, after considerable difficulty extricated the animal from the dangerous position, very thankful that matters were not of a more serious nature.—Albert Journal.

CANADA-WEST INDIA CO. AGAIN.

There is sorrow among the farmer members of the great and only Canada-West India Company who are just now being called upon to pay the notes they gave that concern the solicitors, the Reverend J. B. Daggett and W. W. Melville. These notes are coming due and the "Company" has vanished. Some who were duped by this imposture declare that they will not pay the notes, but there seems to be no way out of it. If they got no value those to whom the notes were made payable have traded and dickered with them and got money or its equivalent, and those who now hold them are going to collect. In most cases they can do so as the notes were given by farmers who are able to pay.

It is well known that the leading promoters of the Company, E. S. Kilpatrick, B. F. Smith, J. B. Daggett and W. W. Melville, pointed out that this scheme "was a good thing and for Conservatives only". In one certain case a farmer was told how good a thing it was, and not for anything to give the good thing away; particularly he was not to let a certain neighbour, a Liberal, know that he was investing. The man kept mum until the Company went into the air. Last week he told the story to his Liberal neighbour and asked for and got money from him to pay the note. It would almost seem that the man he should have gone to would have been B. F. Smith, president of the Canada-West India Co.

Another man gave his note for $100.00 and paid in 70 barrels of potatoes on it. The note is now due, the value of the potatoes is not endorsed on it, and the full face of it will be collected. This man has only a pretty piece of paper to show for $200.

FLEMMING AND CIGARETTES.

Buyers of a certain brand of cigarettes, and the cheapest on the market, now find a very nice portrait of Premier Fleming inside the package. The honourable gentleman has adopted a new way to "get in with" the young men.

A FEARFUL OATH.

What purports to be the oath of the Knights of Columbus is the most villainous document that has ever come under our notice. Its purpose is to prejudice people who hold the Catholic faith but it is more likely to redound to the discredit of the perpetrators rather than to carry out the first intention.

The paper containing this "oath" says it is only "alleged" to be the true obligation, but it prints it, nevertheless, obviously for the harm it will do.

In the Canadian Senate last week the broad-cast circulation of this was brought up and characterized as the most dishonest, blasphemous and seditious thing ever put upon paper, and it was thought unfit to pass through the mails.

Many Conservatives are using the paper containing the oath to prejudice voters against Sir Wilfrid Laurier who they say has taken this awful oath; that he is awaiting only the opportune moment to lead in the disem-bowelling and torture of Protestants, sparing neither men, women or children, old or young, strong or feeble.

LATE LOCAL NEWS

P. Graham was in Woodstock on Saturday.

Mrs. J. A. Nevers has moved to Middle Simonds to live with her daughter, Mrs. Dean Shaw.

George Ginson has moved from Peel and occupies the tenement in the N. B. Telephone building, the Misses Ginson being the central operators.

Mr. Jones, who has been living in the Sharp residence has moved to the Gillin homestead and will work this summer for Clyde Rideout.

On Tuesday morning the death occurred, of convulsions, of Harold, son of Clarence Hayward of Rockland. The little fellow was four years old.

Burton W. Morgan graduated from Trinity College, Toronto, on April 29th, and will be ordained by Archbishop Hamilton in Ottawa on Trinity Sunday, May 18.

Mrs. J. E. Clowes and children, Arthur, Allan and Willie, left on Monday's express to join Mr. Clowes at Vassalboro, Maine, where they will make their future home.

In the report of the teachers' institute elsewhere in this issue a paper entitled "Nature Study" is credited to E. J. Alexander in error. Miss Gaynell E. Long prepared and read this paper. Mr. Alexander's paper was "The Backward Pupil."

The Hartland Minstrel Club, a local aggregation who have put on very successful shows here and at Centreville, gathered at the residence of H. G. Gillin on Wednesday evening and presented Mrs. Gillin, who acted as pianist at both performances with a handsome rosewood music cabinet. Mrs. Gillin was taken completely by surprise but expressed her appreciation in a few well chosen remarks, and music and refreshments occupied the remainder of a very pleasant evening. — Press.

Why is the Blood Impure in the Spring?

The artificial life of the winter—the artificial foods—the impure air of indoor life—the sedentary habits—the lack of outdoor exercise—all tend to make the blood thin, weak, watery and impure. The nerves are starved, exhausted, and wasted—the nerve force required for the proper workings of the heart, the lungs, the stomach, the liver, the kidneys and other organs is not forthcoming and the whole system becomes weakened and run down.

When spring comes vitality is at low ebb, and nine persons out of ten require restorative treatment to form new, rich blood and revitalize the nervous system.

Disease lurks on every hand in the spring time, and finds lodgment in the weak, run-down, and exhausted system

—you can protect yourself by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The spring air is often laden with disease germs. The waste and decayed matter of winter is thawed out, and forms a regular hotbed of disease, from which arise poisonous gases and germs of disease.

People with rich blood throbbing through their arteries need have little fear, for disease seeks out the weak and exhausted for its easy victims. For such there is no season more to be dreaded than spring.

Is this spring to be pleasant or disagreeable to you? Are you to feel invigorated by the fresh Spring air; to rejoice in the opening bud, the sprouting blade, and chirping of the birds? Or will you be overcome with languor and weakness, suffer from headaches and body pains, and drag yourself languidly about as though you had no interest in life and had lost all vigor and energy?

It is for you to decide this question, for the difference is in the state of your health, the richness and purity of your blood, and the vitality of your nervous system. After the debilitating influence of the artificial winter life, nine people out of ten require some restorative preparation to put their system in order for the enjoyment of life.

As a means of enriching and purifying the blood, building up the system, and revitalizing the wasted nerves, there is yet to be discovered a preparation in any way equal to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is composed of the most powerful restoratives to be found in all Nature's realm. It actually forms new, red corpuscles in the blood, feeds and builds up the shrivelled nerve cells, and gives new vigor and activity to every organ of the body.

They may talk about the grand climate of the west and south, but after all old N. B. has got other places beaten to frazzel. On May 3rd George R. Hartley of Tracey Mills sowed oats at the same time Burt White was threshing oats in an adjoining field. The oats threshed were sown in 1912 and had not been hauled in.

At three o'clock yesterday afternoon the marriage of Miss Sadie J. Clowes and Frank Seeley, a popular young C. P. R. brakeman, was solemnized at the residence of W. E. Thornton. Rev. E. C. Jenkins performed the ceremony. The wedding was a quiet affair, but many friends join in good wishes. The young couple left on the express for a trip to Fredericton and St. John and will later take up residence at Aroostook Junction. The bride was the recipient of a handsome piece of cut glass given by The Observer and staff, with whom she had been associated up to a recent date.

Ninety per cent of the millionaires become so through buying Real Estate. More money has been made in Real Estate than from all industrial investments combined. Miss Mildred Dow one of our popular young ladies who has been very ill of late is somewhat improving. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. James McCleary was greatly pleased lately when her daughters gave her a pleasant birthday surprise. The table to which they set down to lunch was decorated with ferns, caught up with a beautiful bow of white ribbon and a large bouquet of roses. The waiter, the youngest daughter, Gertrude, was becomingly dressed in white and gave greatest attention to her mother as it was her sixty-ninth birthday. She is ill but this seemed to put new life in her.

One of the swellest parties that has been held for some time was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Nixon when a number of the young people walked in to surprise their daughter, Stella, as it was her sixteenth birthday. She received some handsome presents after which a delicious oyster stew was served and maple candy was passed around. The party broke up about one o'clock, everyone going away saying "we long for another party just like this."

Death came on Monday a welcome relief to Grace, daughter of George Britton. The young woman who was about twenty years of age, has been ill for a long time and the summons was not unexpected.

HOW A DOCTOR KEPT HIS WORD

This is the plain, unvarnished story of a doctor who so highly valued his word that he almost gave his life in a successful effort to make good, says the Wide World Magazine.

Far to the north, in the Dominion of Canada, right on the very edge, honeycombing the new land with a network of steel, will be found the large construction gangs lying in their camps in the summer, spreading goodness knows where in the winter. Each of these camps has a doctor, who lives the life of the men and watches over them just as though they were his children. He does not have to deal with sick headaches nor pains in the stomach, but he has to patch up men who have been badly smashed, to doctor limbs which have been blown off in premature dynamite explosions, feet crushed into pulp by falling rocks, and many and various frightful accidents, from which the victims emerge alive, saved by their rugged constitutions and by the skill of a doctor who can think like lightning and act as quickly as he thinks, without the aid of the exquisite surgical apparatus to be found in hospitals and specialists' operating rooms. There is no medical assistance to be had on the edge save that which is on the spot; no hospitals to go to; no consultations and no nurses. It is all part of the difficult game of empire building, and can be played only by strong men immune to suffering, always ready and willing to face the seemingly impossible.

Away on the northernmost boundaries of Manitoba, formerly called the Keewatin district, is a town known as Le Pas. Here the snaking rails of the steel stop short, as though chopped off with an ax, right in the heart of nowhere. Twenty-six miles to the north of Le Pas is Cumberland House, a Hudson Bay trading post. Yet it took Dr. J. Davis, M.D., M.R.C.S.—a Le Pas doctor who went with the construction camps in the summer and practised in the town in the winter—six days to travel this distance, and the journey entailed sufferings and hardships which sent him to the hospital, his strong constitution undermined, his feet frost bitten and his lungs racked with bronchitis. Even so, his one ambition was to get out of the hospital and hurry back to the northland to watch over the hardy race of men who are helping to build a track of steel to the great bay.

Dr. Davis was not on an expedition of exploration; his was a mission of mercy. He had promised to attend some patients at Cumberland House, and, although it was the very worst time of a particularly severe winter in the snow-covered wastes, where the wind sweeps down from the north in a biting, frozen gale, and where the snow piles high in sparkling, treacherous drifts, hiding the land and obliterating all marks of direction, the intrepid doctor faced the journey. He was ready to endure any suffering rather than disappoint the patients to whom he had given his word.

He does not even now seem to realize how close has been his call or how near he came to leaving his frozen body in the white, cold, silent north he loves so well.

Dr. Davis is an Englishman, born in Durham, and a graduate of the Royal College of Surgeons, and for several years he walked a well-known London hospital. He is a big man, standing a full six feet in his moccasins. He has a most unassuming but withal a strong personality, and is about 47 years of age. A pair of twinkling, humorous eyes are set far apart in a massive head.

The doctor left Le Pas on December 26, 1911, and arrived at Cumberland House six days later, tied down in a sleigh which had been converted into a temporary carry-all. His feet were cruelly frozen and he was a physical wreck, but his spirit was undaunted, and his willing fingers were eager to feel the pulses of his patients. He doctored his own frost-bitten feet, but their tardy healing and signs of blood-poisoning made him hurry to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he arrived on Sunday, February 18th, nearly two months after his terrible experience in the plains.

The day following Christmas of that year Dr. Davis started for Cumberland House. He had promised some patients there that he would be with them for Yuletide, and it was his intention to keep his word. The heavy fall of snow two days previously had obliterated the trail and made the journey very dangerous. No dogs could be secured for the sleigh, and he feared that he would not be able to make the journey. On the morning of December 26th, however, Dr. Davis heard that George Amus, a German guide and teamster in the employ of Messrs. Revillon Brothers, was about to take the mails and a sleigh load of stores from Le Pas to Cumberland House, and he induced the guide to let him go along.

Amus drove a team of two horses harnessed to an ordinary sleigh, and they pulled out of Le Pas at noon against the advice of all who saw them start. So bad was the trail that by midnight they had covered only three miles.

Here, thoroughly exhausted, they made camp. The extraordinary part of it all is that when the men realized how great were the difficulties they did not go back. But the men of the plains are not built along those lines, and what they started to do they intended to finish. It was for weaklings and cowards to back out—not men.

The morning of the 27th dawned cold and windy, and they broke camp and started off again. From morning until night they plodded on. Walking ahead of their horses, they marked out the trail, feeling the way wary of some deep snow-drift, soft and dangerous, which might at any moment engulf their horses and their sleigh. Again that night they made camp, and the condition of their horses impelled them to spend the 28th in camp, for the animals were very weak, and it was dangerous to attempt the forward march until they had rested. Throughout the long night they camped, and all the next day, without a fire. There was no brushwood in sight, and they were afraid to go in search of it for fear they should be caught in a snowstorm and not be able to get back.

On the morning of the 29th, Dr. Davis and Amus made their third start, but, in spite of the long rest, the heavy load and the bad trail had done their work, and soon the horses began to flag. It was decided that the best plan would be to cache half the load on the sleigh, and the two men got to work. Everything as it was removed was piled high on the snow-covered ground, so that, no matter how heavy the snowfall, the mound of goods would stand out above the surface and be visible to those who returned to get it. This work took the pair three hours, and their sufferings were intense, for the thermometer that day registered 42 degrees below zero, and the wind was blowing none too gently from the north. It is not the still cold that is so deadly, but the cold that is intensified by the biting wind, which goes right through the heaviest kind of fur until the clothes feel like icicles next to the skin.

When the load was lightened they started off again, and under the easier conditions reached Barrier Lake, the half-way point between Le Pas and Cumberland House. The Barrier was frozen over, apparently solidly. They had already crossed several creeks and the Saskatchewan River, so they had no fear in essaying this. The horses and the sleigh shot down the bank on to the snow-covered ice, and the two men again took their places at the animals' heads. Just as they reached the middle of the lake a sudden crash ripped out on the silence and the ice split asunder. Dr. Davis was hurled into the deadly cold water, where he stood up to his waist, with his feet ankle deep in the oozy mud of the bottom. The loud crash had frightened the horses, and their frantic struggles broke the weakened ice for several feet around where they stood, and they, too, dropped into the frightful cold water, which covered them completely save for their heads. It was only their kicking and plunging that prevented the water from solidifying over them as they stood, for at 42 degrees below zero it does not take very long to freeze any liquid. Even as the terror-stricken animals plunged and screamed the unfrozen space grew narrower and narrower as the water at the outer edge of the open circle glazed over.

Dr. Davis, though numbed almost to insensibility by his sudden plunge into the water, made a clutch at the neck of the sleigh, and was fortunate in pulling himself clear. He lay panting, weak and frozen on the ice. Amus had been fortunate in escaping a dip, and struggled at the horses' heads in a vain endeavor to get the animals up on the ice. Dr. Davis's first thought was for the horses. They must be cleared at all costs, and the two set to work. For four hours these splendid fellows toiled, even after nightfall, while they endeavored to get the animals clear. While trying to force one of them up and on to the ice the doctor was again jerked into the lake. Again he struggled out. His clothes froze solid to his body, and it was only his tremendous efforts on behalf of the horses which kept him from succumbing to the cold there and then. In the sleigh was a small ax, and with this the doctor tried to cut away the ice to the shore and let the horses swim clear. He chopped and hacked desperately, only to find that when he had cut a narrow channel a few feet long the water behind him froze up and closed the pathway. Close in to the bank the ice was sixteen inches thick, and while negotiating this the axhandle broke and the head disappeared in the depths of the lake.

The loss of the ax, the most useful tool carried by the plainsman, was a severe blow to their splendid courage, for without it they could not cut fuel for a fire, even where they to come on any. But they never gave up.

Gradually the utter impossibility of releasing the horses was driven home to the two men, and they tried to find some solution to their piteous situation. Dr. Davis felt his strength going fast, for it was only his exertions to save the horses which had kept his blood warm and circulating through his body. No signs of brushwood were visible to his eye as he scanned the smooth white prairie. Any that existed lay hidden by the snow, and their hopes of a fire dwindled away. Death on the plain stared them in the face—death from cold and exposure, with the slow agony of the numbing limbs, drowsiness and the final slipping into semi-consciousness and oblivion.

Huddled together so that they could gain warmth from each other's bodies, the two men sat on the south bank of the Barrier Lake and silently tried to scheme out some way of escape. Towards nine o'clock that night the wonderful aurora borealis lighted up the heavens to the northeast and turned night into day. Suddenly the doctor caught sight of a thin column of dark smoke rising like a poplar tree against the horizon. The wind was dead, and the smoke hung still in the silent frozen void. There could be but one cause for this—a camp fire. Probably some Indian hunters were camped there. Dr. Davis shook off his lethargy and drove back the creeping drowsiness with a mighty effort, and shaking up Amus, who was gradually succumbing to the cold and the strain, he pointed it out to him. Years that smoke was, help was. Years had given the doctor a keen and correct judgment of distance.

"Bring help, and bring it quickly," were his instructions to Amus, as he sent him off to the camp. Even at the eleventh hour the doctor would not desert the horses. Foolhardy it may have been, but splendid humanity it certainly was. Even as he told his guide to hurry Davis feared that he might never give another order, but the thought was only momentary, and, waving his hand to the guide, who shuffled out over the snow, he commenced a dot-dog up and down by the bank of the lake, beating himself to keep warm. Through the long, weary, frozen night, he ran and jumped and sang, always keeping an eye on the poor horses, who grew weaker and weaker. As the ice froze in on them they became quiet. The doctor fed them with pain-killers, a store of which he found in the sleigh, and he mixed up oatmeal into a paste and forced it down their throats, thus keeping the fast-receding life in them. He maintained this treatment throughout the night, but, in spite of all his efforts, towards morning one of the poor brutes died, and the doctor again risked a fall into the water to unhook the traces so that the dead animal would not pull its companion under when it sank.

A NEW RECRUIT FOR GERMANY'S AIR NAVY.

The picture shows the latest Zeppelin airship flying over Lindau Harbor, on Lake Constance. Germany has now twenty-five dirigibles in commission. Their powerful engines propelling them at a rate of fifty miles an hour, while scattered over the country are twenty-seven aerial harbors to which the aircraft can run for shelter if caught in a gale. Germany is now constructing a concealed airship shed in Helioland. This novel house is to be placed in a deep hollow, and can be raised or lowered at will.

Six and a half hours after his departure Amus arrived with a band of seventeen Indians, and found the doctor almost caked in. He was unable to move, but he was still alive and able to grasp the hand of the faithful German who had not spared himself in his valiant effort to bring succor. The Indians soon had the remaining horse out of the hole in the ice. They spread around the country, and, with that unerring instinct with which they are possessed, located enough brushwood to build two roaring fires, between which they placed, or rather, propped, the horse, for it could hardly stand. More oatmeal, warmed, and painkiller was administered, and as the cold grey dawn lit up the sky in the far northeast the poor animal at last showed signs of recovery.

Dr. Davis lay still and helpless, gritting his teeth as the warmth sent his blood leaping through his veins with a vigor that caused an untold agony, which, however, gradually passed away. He was taken to the Indian camp, where he lay for three days with his feet frozen and a heavy chill upon his lungs.

It was plain to the Indians that he would require better attention than they could give him. The ways of the red men are different from the ways of their white brothers, and, whatever may have been their methods among themselves, they did not seem to prove efficacious with the doctor; so they decided to take him to Cumberland House. They fully realized that speed was important, and so, converting an open sleigh into a temporary carry-all, upon which the stricken man was securely strapped, they started off with a team of dogs to cover the thirteen miles which lay between them and the Hudson Bay post.

With whip and voice the Indians urged on the dogs, who, responding cheerfully, shot over the hardening snow, while the Indians glided alongside with equal speed, the traveling made easy for them on their snowshoes. Time and again the sleigh was overtaken in deep drifts and the unfortunate doctor jerked through the snow with the carry-all on top of him. Quickly it would be righted and off again, only to be overturned farther on. Dr. Davis was tied down on his back, but he had faith in the Indians, and knew that they would get him to his destination, and with this knowledge he was willing to put up with the difficulties until he reached his goal.

Wounded, sick, and almost dying, he was handed over at last to the care of the staff at Cumberland

Carpet Wisdom.

"In the spring the housewife's fancy lightly (1) turns to thoughts of carpets."

Quite right, too, for the amount of dust and dirt which even well-swept carpets will retain is marvelous. As a matter of health alone, they must come up for beating and cleaning. Dust is but dried mud, and what it might contain is best not thought about. This article is to help those who have not a vacuum cleaner, and have to seek the privacy, or publicity, of the back premises for carpet-beating.

The first necessity is a flat cane beater. Never use a stick. The second, a stiff birch-broom. Flat beating on grass is best. Beat the carpet on the under side first, then pull it away and brush the dirt from the grass or you will re-collect some of it.

Now reverse the carpet and sweep it well, following the "grain," and in this way the way of the pile. Brush from the middle outwards toward each side, and bring the brush off the carpet with an upward swirl.

Do a foot at a time like this, going round and round until finished. Now, taking hold of the broom-handle rather low, walk backwards, and brush vigorously from left to right. The different angle of attack moves a lot of dust, and you've a stronger purchase on the broom. Turn the carpet over again, sweep the under side, and again beat. Reverse, brush, and beat the upper side. Do this systematically, so that the whole surface receives attention. Brush once more, and then test for dust. A little may rise, for hand-beating never quite removes it all.

Now temporarily relay the carpet so that all spots and marks may be removed. Go carefully over the whole carpet with a hot iron and brown paper. This will remove grease spots, visible and invisible. If any remain not absorbed by the brown paper, spread on them a paste of fuller's earth and water, leaving it there until dry, and then brushing off. The marks will soon disappear.

Any other spots, of unknown origin, can be successfully rubbed with petrol, turps, methylated spirits, or soap and water.

There should now not be a spot on the carpet, and all that remains is to clean it and freshen the colors. For that make a mixture of half a pint of oxgall in half a gallon of hot water, and brush this into the carpet with a soft brush. Wash the lather off with cotton cloths wrung out in ammonia and water—tablespoonful to a gallon—renewing as it gets dirty.

Here you could stop if you like, but a final rub over with a flannel cloth dipped in soapuds and turps will make perfection perfect. The carpet will be as new. Dry very thoroughly out of doors. A worn spot can be doctored by carefully dolly-dyeing it to the ground color of the carpet.

For the Cook.

Asparagus Salad.—Arrange the cleaned asparagus tips on lettuce leaves or cress and serve with French dressing with two table-spoons of tomato catsup.

Poppers.—One cup flour, one teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one egg. Mix the salt with the flour, add half the milk slowly, and when a smooth paste is formed, add the remainder and the egg beaten thoroughly. Beat well before filling pans. Cook in hot, greased gem pans, or earthen cups, in a quick oven half an hour, or until the puffs are brown and well popped over.

Steamed Rice.—Half cup rice, one cup of boiling water, saltspoon salt. Pick over and wash the rice in three or four waters. Put it with the boiling water and salt into the top of a double boiler. Steam for twenty minutes or until tender. Serve with milk or as a pudding with boiled custard or with poached eggs.

Salmon Croquettes.—Take equal quantities of cold or hot boiled rice and canned salmon, add a little melted butter and salt and pepper to taste. Mold into small sausage-shaped forms and roll them first in finely powdered crackers, then into beaten egg yolk and again in cracker crumbs. Fry in hot fat like doughnuts. A palatable, nutritious food, easily prepared, and as the egg prevents the entrance of much fat they are readily digestible. This dish can also be baked as a scallop.

Oatmeal Mush with Baked Apples.—One-half cup coarse oatmeal, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups boiling water. Pick over the oatmeal, put it with the salt and boiling water into the upper boiler. Place upper boiler on the stove and boil rapidly ten minutes. Stir occasionally with a fork, then place in over boiling water and cook from forty minutes to one hour. Serve with baked or steamed apples. Excellent for constipation. Fine hominy and granulated wheat are cooked in the same way, but require only three times as much water as meal. Whole or cracked wheat requires five times as much water as meal, and should cook four or five hours.

Scotch Broth.—Half cup pearl barley, 2 pounds of neck of mutton, 2 quarts of cold water, one-half cup each of carrot, turnip, onion and celery, two table-spoons of butter or drippings, one table-spoon flour, two teaspoons salt, one saltspoon white pepper, one table-spoon chopped parsley. Pick over and soak the barley over night or several hours in cold water. Wipe the meat with a clean wet cloth. Remove the fat and skin. Scrape the meat from the bones and cut it into half-inch dice. Put the bones on to boil in 1 pint of cold water and the meat in 2 pints of cold water. Let the latter boil quickly and then add the barley. Cut the vegetables into quarter-inch dice, fry them five minutes in one table-spoon of butter and add them to the meat. Simmer three or four hours or until the meat and barley are tender. Strain the water in which the bones have simmered. Cook one table-spoon of butter in a sauce pan with one table-spoon of flour. When smooth, add the strained water gradually and stir into the broth. Add the salt, pepper and parsley. Simmer ten minutes, and serve without straining. Strained for an invalid, it forms a nourishing and delicate meal.

Hints for the Home.

Stamps which have become stuck together may be separated by placing a hot iron across their faces.

After wringing cloths get a piece of old blanket and mang it two or three times. This will dry the rollers and save them.

If fine linen is stained with tea, even after a long time, the stains can be removed by applying glycerine. A little of the best glycerine should be rubbed on the stained parts before washing.

Cabbage is made more nutritious and digestible if boiled in two waters. It contains a certain oil, which is apt to have a bad effect on people with weak digestion. Boiling in two successive waters corrects this.

An iron soon becomes cold when placed on a cold ironstand. To prevent this place an ordinary brick in the oven some hours before ironing. Use this hot brick as an ironstand, and the iron will keep hot a much longer time.

Before applying a new coating of paint to the wall of a room it is advisable thoroughly to clean the old surface. Do this by dissolving 1 ounce of soda in a pint of warm water and use while warm with a piece of flannel. Finally wash over with clean, hot water.

When boiling new milk, to prevent a skin from forming on the top as it cools, add two table-spoons of cold milk to every pint when at boiling point, and stir for a minute. The so called skin will then be re-absorbed, and the milk will not be so impoverished.

When washing new curtains you will generally find that they are full of lime. A great deal of trouble may be saved by soaking the curtains over night in water in which a little salt has been dissolved. The salt draws out the lime, and makes the curtains quite easy to wash without too much rubbing and soap.

Strangely enough, it is rarely deemed necessary to clean a broom. Yet all household brooms and brushes need to be cleaned as much as anything else, and if occasionally washed they will last far longer. About once a week prepare a good lather of soap and hot water, and into this dip the broom or brush up and down. Shake till nearly dry, and hang up with the bristles downwards.

STUDENTS PLACED IN CELLS.

Are Under Martial Law at Examination Times.

Students actually are worked to death in Wuchang, China, where every third year the queerest college examination in the world is held. From 12,000 to 15,000 students are locked in cells for three days while they struggle for a degree. So great is the strain that frequently several of the students die before the end of the 72-hour bout, and several times, hopeful candidates have been crushed to death at the gate when trying to get in. Every row of cells has two servants who cook and attend to the wants of the candidates. Martial law prevails during the examination, in which about only one per cent. of those who take it are successful. An army of 30,000 tradesmen, doctors, cooks, tailors, and printers gather in the university town when the big examination is pulled off. A salute of guns is fired in honor of the lucky Chinese who skin through.

Revising Things.

Hewitt—What do you think of this suffragette business?
Jewett—If it is carried to its logical conclusion it will result in woman putting her money in her husband's name.

SOME EXCITING ADVENTURES

WEIRD EXPERIENCES IN A HAUNTED HOUSE.

Days When Supernatural Stories Raised a Laugh Have Passed By.

Not so very long ago the mere mention of the word "ghosts" excited general ridicule; to-day it is otherwise. The numerous testimonials of reliable people to the effect that they had seen or heard phenomena unaccountable by natural causes, at length led to an earnest and widespread desire to take the matter up and make a systematic investigation.

Societies devoted to psychical research sprang up in various parts of the world, and, although no very "showy" work has been accomplished, a vast amount of evidence has been collected, which goes far to proving the actual existence of haunted houses and the occurrence of supernatural (styled by some "supernatural") manifestations.

It is not, however, of the doings of research societies I am going to write, but of my own experiences. The publication of my book, "Some Haunted Houses of England and Wales," by Mr. Evelyn Nash, some years ago led to a large number of people writing to me to know if I would investigate.

Inexplicable Happenings
at their houses, and the work so interested me that I eventually set aside for it a certain portion of each year.

One of my most exciting recent experiences was at a house in a Southern watering place, owned by an old schoolfellow of mine, whom I will call Dr. B. At his earnest request I spent a Twelfth Night with him.

"I won't tell you what form the hauntings take," he said, "I want you to find out for yourself, and then we will compare notes."

The house was the last one in a fine old crescent, that in all probability had been erected about the beginning of the nineteenth century. It had the deep and rather gloomy basements, long passages, and narrow staircases characteristic of that period. In the daytime it looked cheery enough, but directly the sun set and the evening shadows made their appearance it underwent an unpleasant metamorphosis. There is a peculiar something in the atmosphere of a haunted house that sooner or later betrays itself to me; in this instance it was most pronounced.

I at once set to work to locate it, and at length arrived at the conclusion that it was most in evidence on the top landing, back staircases, and in the basements, which spots I resolved would constitute my nocturnal beat. As arranged, directly the household had retired to bed I crept out of my room and, stealing softly across the thickly drugged floor, took up my position at the top of the stairs leading to the basement.

Hour after hour passed in perfect silence without anything happening, and I had almost begun to despair of witnessing any phenomena when a sudden noise below me set my heart violently throbbing. It was the sound of some one scraping—scrape, scrape, scrape—on a hard, metallic surface. Impelled by a fascination I could not resist I crept gently down the wooden stairs, and, aiming for the direction of the noise, perceived

proceeding from a half-open door.

Cautiously approaching on tiptoe, I peered in. Opposite me, eagerly engaged in examining the contents of an iron box, was an old woman. She was kneeling down by the side of a deep hole, and the light from the candle she had set beside her, falling on her face, revealed a countenance which for sheer devilry would have been difficult to match. I could not see what was in the box, but from the clicking sound she made as she passed her fingers through its contents I judged it was full of coins. After amusing herself in this way for some seconds, she carefully closed the lid, placed the box in the hole, covered the latter with a flagstone, and cemented the crevices.

That done, she gave a low chuckle of satisfaction, and, picking up the candle, advanced to where I was standing. In mortal agony lest she should perceive me, I shrank back. Out she came—out into the black, narrow passage, and, gliding past me, her pale, ghastly eyes fixed smilingly at the gloom ahead of her, ascended the staircase. At the top she paused; there was the sound of a violent scuffle, a chorus of awful blood-curdling screams, the rush of several heavy bodies through the air, a couple of terrific thuds at my feet—and all was still. That was enough for one night's vigil. I lost no time in getting to my bedroom, where I remained with the lights "full on" till morning. My doctor friend was greatly interested when I related to him what had occurred.

"You must be far more clairvoyant than any of us," he said. "We have never seen anything, only heard such noises as you have described—scraping and screaming. I will have the cellar excavated at once."

He did so in my presence, and under one of the flagstones we discovered an iron box. Imagine our astonishment when on opening it, we saw 50 golden sovereigns and

Two Sets of False Teeth.

At my suggestion he buried the teeth in a churchyard, and gave the sovereigns to a local charity. From that time the hauntings ceased. A year or so later he wrote to me, saying: "After endless enquiries, I have at last ascertained that this house was once occupied by two old ladies' reputed to be misers. They were frequently heard quarrelling, and were found one day at the foot of the kitchen staircase with their necks broken."

I understood, rather a different experience to this in a house in one of the London suburbs. Hearing that the place was supposed to be haunted, I pretended I wanted to look over it with the idea of renting it, and with this plea obtained the keys from the agent. I entered the premises after sunset, and, armed only with a candle, was proceeding to make an examination of the place when an icy current of air blew out the light, and I was left hopelessly stranded in the dark—in the intense dark, for the sky was heavily clouded, and there were signs neither of moon nor stars. To add to my predicament, I could not find any match-box.

Coming to the conclusion that the best thing I could do was to remain where I was, I flopped on the floor and had just succeeded in making myself tolerably comfortable when the sound of some one moving about overhead sent the blood to my heart. Who on earth—what on earth could it be? What but a ghost? For assuredly nothing else would be in such a house at such an hour. The sounds came nearer and nearer, over the landing, down the stairs, and—horror of horrors—into the room towards me.

Nearer, nearer, nearer! At last, unable to bear the suspense any longer, the hair on my head literally standing on end, I jumped up, and, in a voice quivering with emotion, asked, in heaven's name, who it was and what it wanted. For some seconds

There Was An Awful Pause, and then a voice, equally weak and frightened, faltered out: "That is just what I was going to ask you!"

We were both so relieved we burst out laughing. The owner of the voice was another ghost-hunter, who, oddly enough, had singled out the house and night for his investigations. On hearing me move about downstairs, he had made sure it was some kind of phantasm, and had just managed to screw up sufficient courage to go and look. We spent the rest of the night in each other's company, but, beyond the sound of one or two rats, there were no other manifestations. So much for the humorous side of psychical research work.

Now for the tragic. I was looking over a house one day with the occupier, who had only just commenced his tenancy.

"I wish you would tell me whether you have any peculiar sensations when you enter this room," he said, ushering me into a large bedroom on the first floor.

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed. "What's that?"

"What?" my friend asked.

"Why, that thing suspended to the rafter over your bed!"

"There's nothing there," he said, his cheeks ashy pale. "What do you see?"

"A skeleton!" I gasped. "A skeleton swaying to and fro!" And, unable to bear the sight of it any longer, I beat a precipitate retreat.

"It's very odd," my friend observed, a few minutes later, as we helped ourselves to brandy; "I can never see anything there, though I frequently have the sensation of being strangled—of feeling something tight around my throat. Do you think someone hanged himself there?"

I nodded. Exactly a week afterward I received a black-edged envelope from my friend's brother.

"Isn't it dreadful!" the contents ran. "Charles (that was my friend's name) was found this morning quite dead, hanging by a cord to the beam at the foot of his bed!" The house is now vacant. Too eerie a home for me!

A CRIMEAN VETERAN.

Sir Evelyn Wood has just celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday. Despite his advanced age, he is full of vigor, and is only troubled with a slight deafness. He is a regular follower of the Essex hounds, and no fence is too difficult for him to tackle. Sir Evelyn Wood is an Essex man by birth, but his ancestors owned Hareston Manor, near Plymouth, for centuries. One of them named Matthew Wood, who was a hop merchant, as famous in the annals of London, for he was Lord Mayor of the Metropolis, and enjoyed the distinction of representing the City in Parliament.

Sir Evelyn Wood entered the navy in 1853, and served in the Crimea with the Naval Brigade. He greatly distinguished himself, and was mentioned in despatches by Lord Raglan. While carrying a scaling ladder to the Redan, he was severely wounded, and it was thought that his career was finished. However, he made an excellent recovery, and at the conclusion of the Crimean War entered the Light Dragoons.

Henceforth, his career was one of continual active service. When only twenty-one years of age he gained the Victoria Cross in India. Few men have done more for the expansion of the Empire. He took part in various campaigns in Egypt, Africa, and India, and was singled out for his daring and resource. Finally he became a Field-Marshal and Adjutant-General to the Forces. Sir Evelyn Wood still retains a keen interest in military matters, and is chairman of the City of London Territorial Forces Association.

CHINESE SEALS OF WOOD.

Stone, Too, There Forms Part of Articles Usually Made of Metal.

In China seals are made of wood and stone, as well as of metal. They are used, in addition to a signature, to represent an individual, a legal person or a corporation. The seals used by the former emperor were distinguished as privy and state seals, and were three inches square.

China's state seal is used chiefly upon documents relating to foreign countries, explains the Oriental Review, and has Chinese characters stamped on it. The privy seals are stamped on imperial rescripts, issued for proclamations at home.

Japanese law requires that each individual should send in an impression of his seal as a specimen (called jitsuin), to have it registered and kept in a government office (district office of a city, town or village), that it may represent himself in a deed.

The material employed to make these seals consists of various kinds of precious stones, gold, silver, etc. Those mostly in use at the present day are of agate, rock-crystal, ivory, rhinoceros or wood or box-wood, and recently India rubber has come into use.

There are two ways of engraving characters on a seal—relief and intaglio. In the one the characters in the impression are shown in color, while in the other they are represented in white on colored ground. The ink used for stamping is called niku. It is generally of vermilion red.

The cheapest kind of seals are made of boxwood and gold at 5 cents apiece. Most seals are oval in shape, but some are round and others square. They rarely exceed one-half inch in diameter.

In Private.

As he started out with the bush of ashes he walked into a clothes line that he didn't see.

When he had picked himself out of the ash pile and recovered his hat he stood in the back yard and relieved his feelings.

"Henry," called his wife.

"Well," he snapped.

"Don't stand out there to do it. Come straight into the house, and tell me that it's all my fault."

A Safe Investment Yielding Good Returns

In Montreal bricks are sold for cash, and all the brick manufacturers together are unable to supply the demand. The demand is steadily increasing.

Contractors find the shortage a serious handicap, and would gladly buy 2,000,000 more bricks a week at present prices, which yield $4.00 net profit per thousand to the brickmakers. We already have one contract booked for 21,000,000 yearly for three years at $10.00 per 1,000. The Domestic Brick Plant supplying 800,000 a week will sell 23,000,000 bricks this year, with provision to increase to 75,000,000, and make $138,000 net profit, which is over eight times the Preference stock dividend. With this the company will pay 7% per annum on the $300,000 Preference Stock and could pay 30% per annum on the Common Stock and carry over $70,000 to reserve, which we guarantee will be done after the third year. You can readily see that it would pay you to invest in the

which is managed by a strong Board of reputable Montreal business men.

A small block of Domestic Preference Shares at Par carrying a bonus of 40% of Common Shares is now offered for sale. The Company is capitalized at $500,000, $200,000 Preference and $300,000 Common, of which $152,000 is issued, and owns 196 arpents of land at Laprairie, Province of Quebec. $500 will give you five preference shares and two common shares. The Preference Shares guarantee you 7% on your money, and the dividend on the Common Shares will greatly increase your income.

You can have a plan and prospectus on request.

Your Subscription may be telegraphed at our expense, or a letter simply stating that so many shares are subscribed for and enclosing cheque will be sufficient. Subject to prior sale, your certificates will be forwarded the day we receive the letter enclosing your money.

Will Tattooed on Man's Arm.

The will found in a scrap-book which came prominently before a Dames (Scotland) Court, is one of many that have been discovered in unlooked-for places. Even Mr. Rider Haggard's story of the will tattooed on a woman's back is nearly equalled by the case in which a dead man's arm, carefully preserved, was produced in the probate court. On the flesh appeared the last wishes of the testator concerning his estate. A lawyer, who is chiefly concerned with will cases, gave a representative various instances of strange places where wills were found.

The Agricultural Picnic.

St. Stephen, N. B., May 2—A special train bringing about four hundred excursionists from Aroostook Junction and intermediate points along the C.P.R. arrived here today about noon. This afternoon an agricultural picnic was held on the Dominion Fertilizer Company's grounds which was attended by the visitors and many of the farmers from the surrounding country.

Interesting addresses were delivered by J. B. Daggett, secretary for agriculture; Andrew Elliot, seed and soil specialist; H. B. Dorost, fertilizer, drainage and bee specialist; Mr. Mitchell of The Dominion Fertilizer Company; G. W. Ganong and Attorney-General Grimmer. The men were invited to visit the fertilizer works.

The visiting women and the members of the women's institutes in this section were then addressed by Miss Daisy Harrison, superintendent of women's institutes in New Brunswick.

Free lunch was served on the grounds by the company and a free round trip on the electric cars to the visitors.

Andrew Gaunce has moved from Plaster Rock to Hartland and will work with the Hartland Concrete Co.

The People's Shoe Store

A Refuge for Weary Feet

Hundreds of weary and disgusted feet come in here and go away glad. If we can't fit you properly we don't expect you to buy the shoes. We have your size, because we have every fractional size made, in all of our various lines. We take just as much pains in fitting a child as we do a grown-up. We want every shoe we sell to serve as a walking advertisement for this up-to-date store. No one can undersell us, quality for quality.

The Finishing Touch

Every woman realizes that the shoe is one of the most important items of dress, as it gives the finishing touch to her costume. We sell shoes that are not only stylish and attractive when you take them from our store, but which maintain their shape through a season of wear. A cheap shoe, in the sense of being of inferior material and workmanship, is something we do not tolerate on our shelves. We represent the high-class manufacturers, who have a reputation to sustain. You find here everything in footwear, and at specially attractive prices just now.

The Three Graces

Fit, style and perfection of workmanship are the three graces which contribute to the superiority of our shoes. With one of these qualities, lacking the other two would fail to meet the ideal. This combination is reached only through long experience in catering to a discriminating trade and in making a painstaking study of the great and complex industry of modern shoemaking. We clothe the feet of the entire family as they should be clothed, and reduce your year's shoe bill to the minimum.

Keep your feet in good humor. Slip them into a pair of cool "Gold Bond" Oxfords.

Funeral of Eva Nevers Held Wednesday.

[The following concerns the eldest daughter of Duke Nevers, son of the late Israel Nevers of Hartland]

The funeral of Miss Eva Nevers was held at the home of the departed Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. L. W. Steele conducted the service. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends to pay a last tribute of remembrance. Music was furnished by members of the Congregational church choir. Mrs. J. L. Boyle sang "Face to Face" and a trio composed of Mrs. Boyle, Miss Hazel Benway and Mrs. Ralph Matthews sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Sometime We'll Understand." The casket was banked with beautiful floral offerings. Among those who attended the service from out of the town were: Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shaw and Miss Elizabeth Brown of Everett, Mr. and Mrs. Knox of Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Shaw of Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. George Shaw of Woodville and Mr. and Mrs. Ransford Orser of Bryant.

Miss Eva Elsie Nevers was born in North Dakota Jan. 29 1888 and died at Snohomish Mon. April 7 1913 in her 25th year. She came to Snohomish eighteen years ago with her parents and has always lived at home. She attended the public schools of Snohomish and was afterward employed for two and one half years at the Independent Telephone office, being for part of that time chief operator. She was taken sick about three years ago and since December first of last year was confined to her bed. She will always be remembered for her sweet Christian character. Her unselfish devotion to others, her patience in suffering and the calm resignation with which she faced her passing to the great beyond has been a source of comfort to the dear ones left behind. Her mind was clear to the last and she bade an affectionate farewell to each member of the family begging them not to mourn but to help each other so to live that when their time should come they too would be ready. She urged her brothers and sisters to care for her mother and comfort her and gave to each one from her personal belongings, gifts to keep for her sake. She is survived by her father and mother, two brothers and two sisters all who survive at home.

A Noble Woman.

A noble woman does not descend to sarcasm, hints, innuendoes nor any speeches of covered poison.

She unconsciously tries to render herself agreeable to whomsoever she is with.

She is polite to her own children.

She never makes a weapon of her power to be disagreeable in order to gain her own way.

She is low-voiced.

She never dresses conspicuously.

She never reads the letters of other people, nor repeats what she has heard of other people's affairs.

She is true to her convictions, firm in her self-respect, faithful and unchanging in her love, gentle in her manner, unobtrusive in her relations to others, and the more intimate one becomes with her the more one esteems her.

In a word, the false aristocrats are they among whom familiarity breeds contempt; the aristocrats of the spirit are they who, the nearer you come to them, and the more closely you know them, the more highly you hold them.—Dr. Frank Crane.

Mammoth Anniversary Sale

Our Second Anniversary

Just Two Years Old This Month Under the New Management

To the Public: Just two years ago this month I took over this business of my late father, B. B. Manzer, who succeeded the late R. B. Belyea & Co., who established this business in 1873. To show the public my appreciation of their much appreciated trade, I offer you the following bargains on my second birthday, and every year we will fear this event. One thing in particular I wish you to bear in mind, and that is that all our stock is new and fresh. We don't offer you old shop-worn or moth-eaten goods, ten to twenty-five years out of date; but we do offer you the Season's Latest Creations in every department of our store. In comparing values, be sure and remember this fact, and also that we must sell cheap, as we keep no books of any kind or description, but buy for cash and sell for cash.
