Business Chances.

Sir Wilfrid Will Mediate.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been asked by the striking trackmen of the Grand Trunk to mediate in their behalf. Sir Wilfrid has accepted the invitation. The Conservative members of parliament, Messrs. Powell and Taylor, deserve every credit for their efforts to negotiate a settlement with Mr. Hays, but, naturally, the Premier of the Dominion should be able to exert a greater influence on the Grand Trunk in support of the trackmen's claims. The public hope for a speedy and satisfactory solution.

The Laidlaw-Watson Company's Removal to Aylmer.

The Free Press gives the prominence of several headings to the fact that the Laidlaw-Watson Shoe Company, of London, have accepted an offer to remove their establishment to the town of Aylmer, undertaking to employ 65 hands steadily. The object of our contemporary, in bringing the matter into prominence at this time, appears to be to make an indirect argument against the London Street Railway Company dealing with organized labor in its collective capacity. Here is the sting in the tail of our contemporary's state-

"Manager Pollock says that but for the strike the firm would not have thought of leaving the city, but their recent experience has caused a desire to get away from unions.' A representative of The Advertiser today interviewed the secretary-treasurer of the Laidlaw-Watson Company on the subject. The interview appears elsewhere in this issue, and makes very interesting reading.

The company state that, while the recent dispute (now settled amicably) may have been the means of causing Aylmer to make special proposals, it was not the former settled dispute with the union that decided them to go to the town mentioned, but the extraordinary financial inducements offered.

The Laidlaw-Watson Company, as good citizens and good business men, are entitled to use their own best judgment. London will part from the company with regret, will even wish them success, and will, no doubt, in due course get something else to take their place, as, indeed, is already talked of. There will always be little eddies now and then in London's career; but year by year, on the whole, there is steady expansion and progress. Of course, after reading the interview in another column, it will be seen that it would have been quite impossible for London to go into competition with Aylmer in offering inducements for a minimum of 65 hands. To do so would be unfair to the other businesses of London which bear the burden of taxation. To parallel the Aylmer offer, years; to put in free an engine and steam-heating system; to furnish steam

London would have to give the Laid-

It will be seen, therefore—as the Laidlaw-Watson Company explicitly declare-that the question of the union has been the least factor in their removal to Aylmer, the unusual-we may say extraordinary-inducements being the principal element in the decision

London the Beautiful.

There are few pleasanter cities on homes than our beautiful London. It has no slum quarters of Hungarians, Poles or Chinese. Possibly, if the policy of some of the Pennsylvania coal barons were adopted here, and hordes of these nationalities were imported to take the places of self-respecting, English-speaking artisanspossibly, in that case, we say, London might have a few hundreds more of population. But we are not so sure that it would; probably for every Hungarian, or Pole, or Chinaman, brought in, a better English-speaking man would have to leave the city to seek that employment denied him at home. But supposing, for the sake of argument, that it would increase the population by a few hundreds. If they got less than a living wage, they would not be of adequate value to our merchants as customers; they would not be able to bring up and educate their families as they should; they would be deprived of the opportunity of becoming desirable citizens. Depend on it, the questions of the living wage, and of the self-respect of individuals, and of the community, are closely related. We have no slums in London, and do not wish to have any.

The Hamilton and London

Street Railways. The Hamilton street railway employes have been circumstanced much the same as the London employes, The Hamilton men had been working 60 hours per week, at 15 cents per hour; but the company tried to induce them to accept a working schedule of 66 hours per week at 131/2 cents per hour. The men were not agreeable to the change, and several of the more prominent of them were discharged. The men felt that they must organize in self-defense, and the union was then formed. The period of friction came to an end a week ago,, when the Company signed an agreement with the employes, recognizing them as a union, and establishing the old scale of $9 per week. In London, as in Hamilton, there was no thought of a union among the street railway employes until the Company began to cut wages-at a time, too, when their profits, already large, were growing larger every month. If the Company do not like Unionism, why did they create it?

No Canadian Charters for Yukon Railways Entering American Territory.

Will Wait Until the Boundary Question Is Settled-Sir Wilfrid's Patriotic Statement.

Ottawa, June 10 .- The announcement was made in the house yesterday by the premier that the government had de-cided that in the public interest no charters for railways into the Yukon would be granted this year. Sir Wilfrid took the unassailable position there there would be no objection to granting such charters if the whole territory aff ted were assuredly Canadian; but, as he pointed out, the tract of country surrounding the Lynn Canal | Motormen and Conductors Quit Work is disputed territory, and the concession of a railway charter for a line running from Dyea or Skaguay, both of which towns are on the flord in question, would provide an additional complication, in that the American citizens of these towns would have an additional reason for impressing upon Washington the necessity of making a strenuous fight for the retention of the shores of the canal as American territory. It is easily to be seen that the construction of such a railway would have the effect of making Dyea and Skaguay the entrepots of the entire Canadian land of gold, something which, by the way, the White Pass Railway is now doing. Sir Wilfrid's idea is that any charters granted by Canada must be for railways running entirely in Canadian territory. He puts it in this way: "If it be determined afterwards by the arbitrators that the Lynn Canal does not be-tong to us, but that it belongs to the Americans, then the policy of Canada will be to get access to the Yukon, not by the Lynn Canal, but by building railways from the waters of the Yukon down to what is indisputably Canadian waters, to have a railway built which would perhaps be longer, to Observatory Inlet through the Cassiar district, the Atlin district, and Yukon district. This is the view that we have

NO CHARTERS FOR YUKON RAILWAYS

This Session-Sir Charles Tupper Objects.

[Special to Advertiser per C. P. R.] Ottawa, Ont., June 9.—At the committee today, Mr. Blair announced that the government had decided, for reasons that would readily occur to most, that for this session at least it would not be advisable to charter railways for going into the Yukon.

Sir Charles Tupper protested against this decision, holding that while there might have been some excuse for such course last session, there was none this session. He said that it was unjust that people who had gone to great expense for the purpose of improving the transportation facilities in the Yukon would be refused charters, and said that parliament was entitled to an explanation of the reason for the government's decision.

The minister of railways said the demand for an explanation was not unreasonable, and that one would be

STREET R. R. STRIKE IN CLEVELAND

Today-Linemen Will Follow.

Cleveland. Ohio 10 .- The motormen and conductors of the Cleveland Electric Railway Company declared a strike at 4 o'clock this morning, tying up the entire system, including the Euclid, Wade Park, Cedar, Central, Scoville, Wilson, Broadway, Jennings and Brooklyn lines.

President Bryan announced that no more conferences would be held with the company unless the officers seek out and treat with the union. Men on the way here to take the places of strikers have been headed off, the men

The fight is over the recognition by the company of the employes' union, which is part of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes of America. The men want a board of arbitration to pass upon alleged violations of company rules when a man is charged with violating these rules, and the union's officers and the company's management disagree upon the disposition of his case, and they want summary dismissals for causes not clearly apparent to them stopped.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Joseph Blackwell, Holmesville, Huron County, Ont., writes: "I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with more benefit than any medicine I ever used, and can highly recommend them for stomach troubles. I was in a terrible state with dyspepsia and deranged kidneys and liver, and could scarcely work at my trade. I tried all kinds of medicines and doctors, until I was tired of doctoring. Before I had used all of one box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pilis I could see that they were helping me, and after taking one box and a half I was cured."

To permanently cure stomach troubles it is absolutely necessary to set the kidneys and liver right. There is only one preparation that acts directly on the kidneys and liver, and tones and invigorates them, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. You cannot possibly be disappointed if you use this popular remedy. One pill a dose. 25c a box, at all dealers, or EDMANSON, BATES & CO., Toronto.

Why California Wants to Thin Them Out in the Golden Gate.

They Kill Off Too Many Salmon and Serve No Purpose Except to Lend Picturesqueness to the Rocks Near the Cliff House.

A unique warfare is to be begun in the waters of the Golden Gate. The California state fish commissioners are going to thin out the seals in San Francisco bay and adjacent islands. For years the seals have been protected by law, but long ago they became a nuisance, and now it has been determined that they must go.

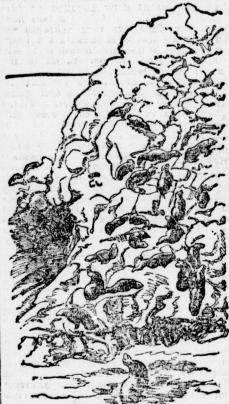

The fondness of the seals for salmon and other food fish has been their undoing. It is said that one seal will eat 50 pounds of fish at a meal and kill twice as much more just for the fun of it. Besides this, he destroys nets. When the fish commissioners reflect that thousands of dollars are annually spent to stock the Sacramento river with salmon, they draw the conclusion that seals are an expensive luxury.

All that the seals are good for is toadd picturesqueness to the rocks near the Cliff House, where their antics are watched by interested tourists. Years ago, when seal hide was used for belting, the seals were hunted and their numbers kept down, but since rubber has taken the place of seal leather for belting the seals are no longer systematically killed.

The principal breeding place of the seals is on the Farallone islands, about 40 miles from San Francisco. The territory of these islands is a lighthouse reservation and under control of the treasury department. As in past years seal hunters did much damage to lighthouse property, the hunting of seals and birds there was forbidden. So the California fish commissioners have put the facts before Secretary Gage and asked for permits to kill seals on the island. As soon as these permits are issued the killing will begin.

These seals are not the fur seals of commerce. They are the gray seals and are not worth the ammunition that it requires to kill them. In their habits they do not differ materially from the fur seals of Bering sea. There still is much to learn about them. After the baby seal has been taught by its mother to swim and care for itself the pup disappears and for two years does not return to the rookery where it was born. Where it goes and what it does in the meantime are mysteries that no one has solved.

The Seal rocks, near the Cliff House, are occupied mainly by the young bachelor seals, who have not yet established a claim to set up a harem. Until a bachelor seal reaches 5 or 6 years of age he has not the strength to meet the old bulls in combat and is driven off the breeding grounds. When his teeth are fully grown and he waxes strong, he enters as a competitor for the favor of the cows and at once becomes the head of a harem. The biggest bulls weigh something over a ton, and it requires four strong men to handle the carcass. The cows average from 1,200 to 1,,500 pounds, and the yearling pup weighs about 300 pounds.

Their favorite fishing places are narrow channels between the islands. through which the fish are carried by the strong current. When a certain whitish ridge on the waves shows that the fish are coming, the seals dive off the rocks and begin the attack. They toss up the fish and catch them in their mouths, but as soon as they have satisfied their hunger they wantonly destroy the fish. Generally they bite a piece out of the back of the fish, or else they simply crush it in their strong jaws and toss it on the water. If the air is in the fish's bladder, the carcass floats: if not, it sinks. After such a raid by seals the water is often covered with the bodies of dead and mangled

For 20 or 30 years the fishermen generally, and the salmon packers of the Sacramento especially, have been complaining of the sea lions and praying for their destruction. This same agitation has bobbed up periodically. Fish commissions have heard delegations, discussed, resolved and reported over and over again, and the verdict has always been that the sea lion destroys cnormous quantities of fish, seriously interferes with the fishing industry hereabouts, especially the salmon industry, and that his number should be lessened. But the sea lion has been protected by law, and each agitation has died without result.

But this time the seals must suffer. The exact method to be pursued has not been determined, but that is a mere detail. Deputies and some hired riflemen may be sent out to do the work. and, as is most likely, the work may be done under some sort of a contract arrangement with skilled men.

REMOVAL -SALE-

$150,000 Worth of Best in Garpets, Rugs, Linoleums, Curtains, Draperies and Brie-a-Brae.

TO BE CLEARED WITHIN THIRTY DAYS.

Contractors promise us possession of our new and handsome store for the early days of July. Between now and then our resolve is to reduce the present immense stock to the smallest possible size. Carpets and Linoleums and Rugs are heavy and awkward goods to remove.

We shall influence you to help in this removal by making prices exceptionally attractive. And this is to be said, that when this store announces a special sale, it is a special sale in the true and honest significance of the term. We believe in the old-fashioned kind of honesty that deals frankly and squarely with the customer at all times and in every particular. A removal sale here is a removal sale. Special prices are special prices. Discounts are real discounts from real prices.

Extra interest attaches to the sale of goods by this house, because it is well known that at all times we offer exceptional values and a class of goods that are thoroughly reliable and are unusually choice and select in style and materials. We have always in the carpet and drapery section many lines that are made specially for our own trade and to our own designs.

In size you know that nowhere in Toronto is there to be found a stock that nearly approaches ours. We have much need for the enlarged premises that are now being completed for our trade. This year our importations, selected personally by our own buyers, have been heavier than usualconditions that give emphasis to the importance of this sale.

> We give you in plain terms the programme of this sale. It is a cash sale. Every article in the store is always marked in plain figures and at our closest selling prices. For example, you will find certain lines of curtains that we marked down. The price remains on the goods for you to see for yourself. That everyone may have equal advantage, we will follow a plan of special discounts throughout the house. To wit: All Carpets, Oilcloths, Lincleums, a straight discount of 15 per cent will be given off the marked prices. The one exception in this case will be Staines' Inlaid Limsleums, which have been selling at the cut price of $1.23. net at $1.15, and a dollar line at 90c.

> In Rugs, and we have simply an enormous stock, a straight discount of 20 per cent will be given off the marked prices. In Curtains, Draperies, Furniture Coverings, Bric-a Brac, and the many beautiful lines of goods to be found in the Drapery Section, a discount of 20 per cent. will be allowed

Get this clear into your mind, that the whole stock consists almost entirely of new goods. We have little or nothing of odds and ends and undesirable goods to offer shoppers.

On the carpet floor our Fine Axminsters, sold at $1 26½ to $1 50, and $2 25, will be offered you, subject to the 15 per cent discount. For everyone engaged in housekeeping, or contemplating housekeeping—a great opportunity for summer brides—this sale is full of significance. Hotels and boarding-houses will find it a paying investment to buy from these stocks in anticipation of their early fall requirements, as well as needs of the present.

The Sale is Now on and in Full Swing,

Full preparations having been made for what we believe will be an immense Carpet and Curtain trade. You have the advantage in buying at this store of securing the advice and suggestions of those who have a thorough knowledge of the Carpet and Curtain business in all its details and branches. You can depend on just what is told you of the goods that will be offered you.

Orders from out-of-town shoppers will be filled exactly as given, and promptly. No matter where you may reside, you will save money by taking advantage of this great sale.

BASEBALL.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Hamilton, June 9 .- London's ball team demonstrated its superiority over Hamilton's in fielding ability in yesterday's game, the first on the Hamilton grounds between the leaders of the league. It was clean, sharp fielding that won for the visitors. Ham-1lton hit much harder and more frequently, but, in half a dozen cases. what would have been safe hits with any other team on the field, were converted into outs. On the whole, therefore, Pitcher Baker's work was better than Pitcher Seiver's. Neither issued a pass. Baker struck out nine men and Selver one. The first four men up for London fanned the wind. London was presented with a run by Hagerty in the fourth, with Howell on third and one out. McFadden hit a ground ball to Hagerty, who had lots of time to retire Howell at the plate, but threw to first instead. Hagerty also responsible for the mischief in the ninth, with two out he cut in front of Phillips on a ground hit, and made a fumble of it, Mohler scoring and Jones reaching first to be scored by a wild pitch and a hit.

Hamilton had but two safe hits up to the ninth. In that inning McCann batted for Baker, and made a hit. Hagerty, Elton and Congalton did likewise, and scored two runs, but Mc-Kevitt failed where a hit would have tied the score or, perhaps, won the game. Score:

Coney Island, N. Y., June 10 .- At the arena of the Coney Island Athletic Club defeat. last night James J. Jeffries defeated Robert Fitzsimmons, world's champion in two classes-middleweight and heavyweight-in eleven rounds of roar of excitement to welcome the vicring a rank outsider, and left it the acknowledged master of the man he defeated. He was never at any time in serious danger, and after the sizeup in the earlier rounds, took the lead and was never headed. He had the Australian whipped from the ninth round, and would have ended it in the tenth but for the lack of time. It was room. acknowledged that Jeffries would have an immense advantage in weight, height and age, but the thousands who tipped and backed his opponent to win were sure that he was slow, and that he would in that respect be absolutely at the mercy of the past master at the science of fighting that he was to meet. He proved, on the contrary, that he was just as fast as the man he met, and beat him down to unconscious defeat in a fair fight. Less than a year ago Jeffries appeared in New York a green, awkward, ungainly boy. Today he is the lithe, active, alert, trained athlete. At 24 he has defeated Robert Fitzsimmons, Tom Sharkey and Peter

Jackson. THE DEFEATED MAN. Fitzsimmons, the defeated man, was just as good as when he lowered the colors of Corbett. He was just as active, just as clever, just as tricky and just as fearless of punishment. He went unfalteringly to his defeat. He was the aggressor even at moments when he was bleeding and unsteady, and when stunned by the blows he received, he reeled instinctively toward his opponent. He was fighting all the time, and punished his opponent, but found him a different antagonist than he had met. Jeffries fought from a crouching attitude that was hard to get at. He held his head low, his back was bent down, and his left arm was extended. He kept jabbing away with his left, and found no trouble in land-ing it. It was there that his superior reach told. That giant arm served as a sort of human fender to ward off danger. He showed an excellent defense, and the ability to use both hands with skill. He is game, too, for

It was like a thousand calciums, and it showed their great white bodies in strange relief. When the blood came it was of an intenser red than usual. There was mot a suggestion of interference from the police. Chief Devery occupied a seat by the ring side, but never entered the

The great house filled very slowly, and it was after nine o'clock before the police had to bestir themselves and clear the aisles.

Jeffries was the first of the pugilists to appear. He came through the main entrance, and walked the length of the hall to an accompaniment of cheers at 9:20, while Fitzsimmons, who was accompanied by his Spartan-like wife, gained the building and dressing-room by a rear door.

WILTED FLOWERS.

Fitzsimmons' entry into the ring a few minutes after ten was made the feature of a rather theatrical demon-stration. Julian came first and then came the fighter, and then two men, who were bearing a great floral wreath that was almost funeral in appearance. It was inscribed "Good luck to ance. the champion," but the flowers are wilted now. Fitzsimmons bowed cer-moniously to it. Jeffries came next into the arena, and, like his opponent, got a demonstrative reception. Fitz-simmons looked lanky and thin, but his skin was clear, his eyes bright, and his step elastic. He made a great display of American flags at his waist. Jeffries looked sturdy and massive, and seemed a little nervous. He got the worst of the assignment of corners, for the great light shone into his There was no delay in the ring, and the big gong sounded out just as soon as the men had been presented to the crowd. When they squared off Jeffries looked 50 pounds to the good. THE FIGHT.

The first round was marked by no special features. In the second Jeffries knocked Fitz flat on his back with a straight left on the mouth. The champion was up in two seconds, and then the bell rang. In the third Fitz was bleeding at the nose-first blood for Jeffries. In round five, Fitz led off with a left to the face, splitting Jeffries' eye, which bled freely. Jeffries retal-lated with a hard left on the ear. In the sixth, during a clinch, the referee had to separate the men, the round ending in the Australian's favor. In the ninth round the men clinched. Jeffries threw his right over the heart with all his might, and had Fitz guessing when the bell rang. Jeffries had decidedly the better of the round. In the tenth round, Jeffries again knocked Fitz flat on his back. The Australian got up in five seconds, and was sent down again with his left and right on the jaw. He came up again in five seconds, and Jeffries rushed him in the corner, trying very hard to finish the champion.

The eleventh was the last round. Fitz came up slowly, but assumed the ag-gressive, Jeffries standing off, evidently waiting for a knockout. They clinched three times, coming to close quarters. Jeffries put two hard rights over Fitz's heart, and sent him back. A left on the jaw from Jeffries dazed Fitz, who stood helpless in the middle of the ring. Jeffries looked at him for a second, and then had him at his mercy, swinging left to the jaw. Fitz went down and out, giving the championship to the Californian. Time of

Statement That No New Men Are at Work in Kingston.

Montreal, June 10. - The executive committee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trackmen are arranging for a deputation from the men to wait upon the president of the G. T. R., Sir Chas. Rivers-Wilson, when he arrives in Montreal. This meeting will, of course, depend upon whether the president will consent to see such a deputation, and those who are familiar with the courses followed in such cases, believe he will probably be entirely guided by the management. Mr. Hays, the general manager, has gone to New York to meet Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson on his arrival. It may be assumed that long before the president reaches Montreal he will be in possession of all the details in regard to the strike developments. The special question that is the subject of the deliberations of the executive at the present moment is the expense of bringing so large a deputation to Montreal; but they think they will be able to overcome this. The executive they have received telegrams stating that the roadmasters in several districts are coaxing the men to go back.

A Wide-Awake Commander. General Hutton, commander-in-chief of the Canadian militia, seems to have brought to his post a creative enthusiasm which most of his predecessors lacked. The British War Office has always sent us capable soldiers, but not always capable organizers. Too often they failed to adapt themselves to their new surroundings. They usually followed ideas and practices of the regular pervice which were not suited to Canadian conditions, so that our militia sysitem was actually retrograding for want of intelligent and purposeful control. General Hutton came here with the definite conception of making the Canadian militia an effective unit, but he wisely realizes that he must employ democratic methods in a country where arbitrary notions of military discipline do not find acceptance. In other years the volunteers at the annual camps barely got a glimpse of The commander-in-chief. That per-Junctory gentleman was thought to be child's nature is wider than its mind. hoing a great deal if he gave a whole day to any one of the camps. General Hutton, however, believes that he has more practical duties than sitting at his desk in Ottawa, and occasionally re-Niewing a brigade. He has been with the London camp from the beginning, working every day on the drill field and Inspiring the men by word and example. He told them he had come to help and not to criticise. He is the first commander who has aroused positive enthusiasm among the Canadian volunteers. If he continues to direct affairs with the same tact and judgment he will leave the militia system vastly more useful than he found it.

Living vs. Dead Issues.

The British papers are full of long reports of what is called the Archbishops' court, in which various minaute questions of ritualism in connection with the Church of England are being laboriously argued. The latest topic has to do with the use of incense. The question before the Archbishops was whether incense should be used for fumigation, or as a mark of worship. "It depends a little," said Dr. Clifford, "on the kind of building. Some buildings need fumigation. These paltry quarrels about the accessories of worship take us a long way from Christ. Can we not hear Him saying to that court, 'Rubbish, rubbish, rubbish-leave these things alone and do something to make the world holier'?" It does seem pitiable, at a time when vastly important questions bearing on the relations between labor and capital are clamoring for settlement on Christain principles, that such tweedledum and tweedledee matters should take up thought and attention which ought to be devoted to things of real moment.

"Siberia" To Be Abolished.

The Czar of Russia has ordered the formation of a special commission under the presidency of the Minister of Justice to consider without delay the whole question of the deportation of criminals to Siberia. The commission will be called on to devise other modes of punishment for criminals.

The word Siberia has long been synonymous for cruelty and autocratic injustice. Many a man and many a woman has been exiled to Siberia on the caprice or suspicion of some corrupt or vindictive official. In Great Britain the greatest criminal has a fair trial. How different in Russia. where the very idea of liberty, as English-speaking people know it, it is difficult to grasp!

The London Times, speaking of the

Czar's action, says: "In the worst days the horrors of the march to their place of banishment were greater than awaited the exiles on arriving at their destination. great numbers died upon the way, and probably the least criminal suffered the most severely. The Trans-Siberian Railway has done away with the worst features of that long and dreary transit. It has, at the same time, ppened up the country, and brought settlers in such numbers that exile, apart from actual incarceration, is robbed of its former terrors. Banishment to Siberia has ceased to mean, as it once did, a living death; while on the other hand, the actual settlers, many of them probably ex-convicts or their descendants, protest with increasing energy against the letting loose supon them of really bad characters. Thus on both grounds it may easily be seen that the existing system calls loudly for revision. Men whom it is necessary to imprison and hold to hard is off! abor need not be sent all the way to Biberia to undergo their punishment. Unreclaimed characters cannot any longer be got rid of by inflicting their undesirable presence upon communities as industrious and prosperous as any to be found in Russia itself. Thanks in part to the profound ignorance of the Russian peasant, in part to the policy of the government and in part to the communal system, with its destructive influence upon individual Initiative, the settlement of Siberia has made comparatively slow progress. But the government is now more anxious to promote it, improved communications must by degrees teach the people habits of greater enterprise, folks. I see ye fine." Marks him down and educated Russians, desiring the unification of the empire, perceive that every effort must be made to dissociate Siberia from the ideas it has so long suggested to the popular mind. I canna believe a word that comes oot Thus the action of the Czar follows the lines traced out by economic changes, and in that fact lies the best reason to hope for its speedy success." | becomes a large hole.

Our Youths Should Have Better Industrial Training.

Education-Government Will Assist.

Hon. G. W. Ross, minister of education for Ontario, delivered a very important address before the Toronto Board of Trade, on Tuesday, on industrial training and technical educa-

It was a fact, Mr. Ross said, in his preliminary remarks, that the young people of the country were disposed to prepare rather for the professions than for industrial pursuits. He did not know that the schools were altogether to blame for this; the social conditions had, he thought, a great deal to do with it. Parents looked back to their own youth, and overlooking largely the great advances made in machinery and labor-saving devices, thought of the stress of work of pioneer days, and turned the thoughts of their children to the walks of life where manual labor did not play so great & part. However, conditions were again changing, industrial pursuits were beginning to receive more thoughtful attention and with the change was growing the demand for technical education. The board of trade had therefore sought a most opportune moment for the dis cussion of the question. As an instance of the department's interest in the matter, he referred to the provision in the school act giving boards of trustees the option of introducing manual training in the schools, and agriculture in the case of rural schools. The city of Kingston was the only case where the former provision had been taken advantage of. There were only very few instances where rural school trustees had ordered the teaching of agricul-ture in the sense that it could be taught in schools. He now proposed to take stronger measures, if parliament would assist him, and he believed they would, and make the TEACHING OF AGRICULTURE in such schools compulsory. The optional teaching of domestic science had only been taken advantage of in isolated cases. These subjects of a practical character did not seem to commend themselves to the people, as it was believed they would. Great movements of the nature of the one under consideration took their strength from public opinion, and such meetings as the one called by the board of trade were the best moulders of that opinion. advocates of Anglo-Saxondom puts it: He referred to the work accomplished by the School of Pracitical Science since its organization. Continuing, he said he believed with those who had been instrumental in calling the meeting together that the time was now ripe for a strenuous advance along the line of technical education. The system of apprenticeship, once so generally followed, had almost ceased to exist, and there could be no doubt that many men and women in Canada were entering trades and callings for which they were hardly fitted by their train-ing. In Britain and old-world countries a greater amount of skilled labor was being employed than ever before, labor trained not only by experience in workhad not been reached without heavy expenditure. The city of Berlin alone spent 200,000 marks annually for such training, and Britain one and a half million pounds sterling directly as a nation, besides the amounts paid by municipalities.

CANADA'S LOSS

While dealing with this point, Mr. Ross said that Canada exported a vast quantity of raw material which should be manufactured in Canada, and imported goods which should be made in the country from the material so exported. In the last 20 or 30 years, he said, thousands of Canadians had been compelled to seek work in the United States. But increase in manufacture from raw material, sound technical training to workmen and education in agriculture would go a long way to put a stop to this. Dealing then more paricularly with the subject of technical training, he laid down the principle that it should be based on a first-class elementary education. In support of this he read extracts from addresses and essays by such eminent authorities as Sir John Goss, the Duke of De vonshire, Archbishop Walsh of Dublin, and the Right Hon. Prof Bryce. would say that the experience of Germany would not bear that statement out, but it was on reports on investigations relative to the German system that the statement is based. Screams Were Heart-Breaking. 3 Doctors & Institute no Avail. CURED BY CUTICURA.

My little boy broke out with an itching rash. I tried three doctors and medical college but he kept getting worse. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body unaffected. He was one mass of sores, and the stench was frightful. At the time I was induced to try CUTICURA remedies, he was so bad that I had to cut his hair all off, and put the CUTICURA (ointment) on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. In removing the bandages they would take the skin with them, and the poor child's screams were heart-breaking. After the second application of CUTICURA (ointment) I saw signs of improvement, and the sores began to dry up. His skin neeled off twenty times, but now he is entirely cured. I used CUTICURA RESOLVENT for his blood, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day. ROB'T WATTAM, 4728 Cook St., Chicago, Ill.

ers in chemistry owing to the thoroughness of the early and after train-Professors of chemistry in universities and colleges in that country held their position on the condition that they devoted four-fifths of their time to original research, and this thoroughness of system was characteristic of all their branches of art and industry. Up to a certain point the training in Canada went as far as that of Germany, and there halted. He thought that when a boy of 15 or 16 had passed the public school course he should be passed on in the technical school, there to study the elements of all branches that contribute to the industrial wealth or education of the country. That would be the first step in the direction of the end desired to be reached. GOVERNMENT WILL AID

Such schools of necessity betook largely of their local surround-It might be under the management of the board of trade or a joint committee of the city council and board. What amount would be given to the Toronto school he could not say, but it would be reasonable and proper. Above all things, they would require at the head of such a school a broad-minded, practical man, who thoroughly understood the theory and practice of technical schools. The fact that they would have to look abroad for such a one, and perhaps for two or three assistants. should be no barrier to the project. Money should be carefully but freely expended in equipment; they could not afford to starve such an institution. On such lines as these he believed they could establish a system of schools that would be a credit to the province and a great aid in building up its industries The education department would, he hoped, be able to co-operate with the board of trade and the city council so far as a Toronto school was concerned. and thus lay the foundation for the system of technical schools which the province and the country needed.

A Modern View.

The Montreal Witness replies to a correspondent, "One Who Voted for Laurier." who thinks the government ought to be defeated because it does enact prohibition. It asks how much of a host could be led into the wilderness to vote for a party that has never done anything for them but to spurn them, and that utterly spurns them today." It points out the futility of treating the "temperance vote" as a solid mass, which will all go together one way or the other. "Every tem-perance voter has a mind of his own, a thing which some writers seem to forget." There are "Prohibitionists in the country, not Liberal party men at all, Dr. Potts, for instance, who is a strong Conservative, who think that it would be impossible for the government to carry a prohibition measure on the showing of the plebiscite vote, and wrong for it to do so if it the complete and pronounced opposition of one religion and of one whole people introduces an almost insuperable hindrance to a national measure."

that the attitude of Quebec is "an almost insuperable obstacle to a national measure," thinks it is the duty of the government to discover some way of giving effective prohibition to these provinces that have demanded it.

SENSATION IN SIGHT

Rev. Father Geoghegan's Case Is To Be Appealed From Triers to Bishop DuMoulin.

Hamilton, June 10 .- The Geoghegan

case is to be reopened, and it is said the investigation will be productive of a greater sensation than anything that became known during the hearing of the affair before the court of triers. Mr. P. D. Crerar, who is acting for Rev. Father Geoghegan, has forwarded an appeal against the verdict of the court of triers to Bishop DuMoulin. Mr. Crerar says that in the appeal the whole accusation of immorality, set up at the recent trial, is denied, and new evidence of surprising character will be offered. This evidence, he felt sure ought to clear his client. According to Mr. Crerar, Miss Hore, who made the accusations against Father Geoghegan. has retracted the charges. He claims to have a letter which he received from Miss Hore, and in which she intimates the charges were untrue, and were made by her out of spit, because Father Geoghegan had been circulating objectionable remarks about her conduct. The time for receiving the appeal is not up till June 14.

FRUIT MEN OBJECT

Mr. Penny's Bill Defining Size of Small Fruit Packages.

Ottawa, Ont., June 10 .- Mr. J. C. Ford, of Oakville, Ont., and Mr. G. W. Hunt, of Ottawa, accompanied by Messrs. Henderson, Pettet, and other members of parliament had an interview with Sir Henri Joly, regarding Mr. Penny's bill to define the size of small fruit packages. The bill proposes that the standard of measure for buying and selling strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants, and other small fruits shall be the quart, which shall contain, when even full, 67 cubic inches. The inside measurement of the standard quart basket shall be 51/4 inches on each side at the top, and 4% inches on each side at the boftom, and it shall be 2% inches deep. Similarly the sizes of the pint and half-pint basket are defined by the bill.

The deputation pointed out that the institution of such a standard, which was neither imperial nor wine measure, would be most disastrous to the fruit trade by greatly disturbing the conditions of the market. It would necessitate the construction of a different size crate, and would be a great hardship to fruit growers, because their wagons today were so con-

Doings at The House in The Woods-British Government Will Reconsider

Cape Town, June 10.-Sir Alfred Milner, British high commissioner for South Africa, returned yesterday from Bloemfontein, and was received with great popular enthusiasm. The Volksradd of the Orange Free State, in secret session, has indorsed all that President Kruger did at the conference with Sir Alfred Milner.

A London dispatch to the Evening Journal says: "Lord Kitchener is daily at the war office, where the staff is planning for the contemplated operations in the Transvaal. It is proposed to raise the British effective force in South Africa from 9,000 to 32,000. Of these 2,000 will be British troops, and 25,000 will certainly be drawn from India and Australia. The charge against Lieut. E. T. Tremlett, Lieut. C. A. Ellis, and Lieut. John Allen Mitchell was withdrawn, and they were called as witnesses for the state. Lieut. Ellis stated that overtures were made to him to hold Johannesburg and the forts till the British troops came. He was given to understand that the cooperation of the military authorities had been secured, and that capitalists were financing the movement; but he deposed he did not know the leaders of the movement. ### IN CHINA

British Policy Attacked by a Conservative Member-Official Statement.

London, June 10.-While the House of Commons was in committee of supply on the foreign office vote, Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford (Conservative) delivered a scattling criticism of the government's policy of "drifting" in China, during which he said the government had deceived the people and allowed the open door policy to be finally killed, by permitting Russia to intertere in a purely commercial enterprise like the Shanghai-Kwan Railroad. The admiral then proposed that the four countries most interested-Great Britain, the United States, Japan and Germany-go to China and offer to take over and organize her army, adding that if Great Britain took the lead he was sure the United States would follow, and asserted he also had a distines intimation that Japan would join in such a movement.

The parliamentary secretary of the foreign office, Right Hon. William St. John Broderick, replied, pointing out the difficulties in meeting Lord desire, adding that he Beresford's thought his lordship was over-sanguine in believing the United States would he lead of Great Britain. As regards the Yangtse we can send gunboats drawing six feet 1,000 miles from its mouth. Although we are not prepared to undertake policing this province, constituting one-third of China, we are prepared to control the Yangtse in order to protect our trade, and it is an essential part of the government's policy that in changes occurring in China the protection of our trade is assured. though it cannot undertake to relieve Tsung Li Yamen of the responsibility of governing China, the government is not prepared to let British trade suffer nor pass into other hands. Therefore it is proposed to take the following steps: With regard to the Yangtse, we shall hold the Chinese Government responsible for its undertaking not to alienate to any other power the provinces bordering thereon. and that a connection should be made with the Burmah Railway. The governmen't will also see, whenever it is desired, that the force in the Yangtse is sufficiently large to protect our merchants and their trade." Mr. Broderick also referred to the Anglo-Russian agreement as being a happy augury and a fair compromise. He said he doubted if the demand for a Russian railway to Pekin was ever made, but in effect the government, in no spirit of jealousy, but simply in the interest of China, must declare, if the demand was pressed, that it will be forced to advise the Chinese Government against as the large packing houses, street a concession calculated to transfer the railroads, clothing manufactories and government of Pekin to another power. In conclusion Mr. Broderick expressed evils of the present era of combin-the hope that there would be concord ations and trusts, menacing the liberty

IN THE UNITED STATES. Bradstreet's report says: Exceptional firmness in prices at the highest level as regards general staple values yet reached, a reasonably small rate business mortality, undiminished industrial activity, perhaps most manifest in all branches of trade in which iron, steel and other metals enter, and large bank clearings, reflecting some extent the improved tone of ! stocks, but otherwise, large payments on previous profitable business are among the features, not necessarily new, but still noteworthy, reflected in trade advices.

The outlook in the trade as regards next year's labor scale is still un-Union operatives are asking material advances, which are, to some extent, likely to still furth r enhance values, although recent advances in product may discount this, more particularly as raw materials have not advanced in nearly as great propor-

Small supplies of old corn and reports of too much rain in sections have helped this cereal, and are likewise reflected in hog products, but the prospects favor a very large acerage in this cereal. Wool is firm, and even higher in some grades at leading markets, with a fair business doing. Lumber retains all its strength, reflecting continued activity in consumptive lines. Business failures for the week number 158, as against 129 last week, but compare with 221 in this week a year ago, 256 in 1897, 234 in 1896 and 234 in 1895.

Dun & Co. say: After some advance wheat suddenly declined 2c. After some ad closing lower for the week. Against all accounts of injury, is the solid fact that western receipts were 5,049,194 bushels for the week, against 1,467,046 from the crop of last year, and at current low prices such receipts would be inexplicable if growers really expected a short yield. Exports have declined, being only 1,849,373 bushels, flour included, from Atlantic ports, against 4,206,293 last year, and 623,-400 from Pacific ports, against 253,233 last year, but even as to future foreign demands this is not strong evidence. The estimates of reduction in yield are weakened in market judgment by certainty that spring wheat acreage is unknown, and may exceed expectations, and that the prospect in spring wheat states is excellent. Corn has shown unusual independence, scarcely changing in price, with exports 2,804,-809 bushels against 4,134,641 last year For the current week failures have been 159 in the United States, against 204 last year, and 10 in Canada, against 17 last year.

Andrew Carnegie's Career Is Without Parallel.

The Largest Fortune Ever Made in Legitimate Manufacturing.

The Elements of Carnegie's Success-What Will He Do With His Fortune?

[London Times.] announcement which has this week been made of the sale of the vast business of the Carnegie Steel Comyany, in the United States, to a New York financial syndicate has been received with an unusual amount of interest in both. Europe and the United dtates. Not only so, but it is an event of extraodinary public importance as marking the culminating point of a private enterprise which is absolutely unique for its extent and its controlling influence, and of a career to which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find a parallel. The true position of the case is that the iron ore mines, coal and coke properties, railways, works, and other interests of the Carnegie Steel Company have just been bought by a syndicate of financiers in the United States for upwards of 300 millions of dollars, being almost cervainly the largest sum that has ever been paid for a single business in the industrial history of the world. This single business was founded by Mr. Andrew Carnegie and Mr. Harry Phipps less than 40 years ago on a very small scale. For a number of years the staple product of the firm was iron and steel rails, but by-and-bye they added other branches of manufacture, until they included plates, sheets, girders, beams, pillars, armorsheets, girders, beams, pillars, armorplates, and many other products. Plant was added to plant, mill to mill, furnace to furnace, until their existting resources are equal to the produc-tion of about 3,000,000 tons of steel a year. It is difficult to realize what this enormous output means except by adopting some adequate standard of comparison. It means more than five times the total production of steel throughout the world in 1870, and within 25 per cent of the total make of steel throughout the world so recently as 1880. The output of steel this year by the Carnegie Steel Company will be nearly twice that of the whole United kingdom by the Bessemer process in 1898, and considerably more than the output of British open-hearth steel in the same year.

NO PARALLEL IN HISTORY. There is, perhaps, no parallel record in history of a man who, entirely un-aided, without the direct help of any one, and without even the advantages of an ordinary school education, within 40 years, in legitimate manufac-turing business enterprise, without ad-ventitious aid from speculation, as such, has amassed any such fortune. In the case of Rockefeller his wealth was the outcome of organizing a vast monopoly. In the case of the Van-derbilts and Jay Gould there was au fond the dexterous manipulation of railways and railway stocks, involving now and then a grand coup, which brought in enormous hauls. This was neither more nor less than stock exchange gambling. In the case of the Astors the unearned increment of land values secured vast wealth, which was not materially influenced by any acof the owners of Manhattan Island, but depended on circumstances which they neither did nor could to any extent control. Indeed, no other fortune of the first rank, whether in the United States or in Great Britain, has been, like Mr. Carnegie's, due to manufacturing enterprise alone. In Europe again, the fortunes of the Rothschilds, of Baron Hirsch, and of other notable men in the world of British finance have been founded either on large financial operations, as such, or on the appreciation of land or other securities on which they were chiefly dependent. But here we have one of the largest fortunes of all time that practically owes nothing to any speculative operations whatsoever, and has not been affected or assisted by any investments worth speaking of out-side of the business of an ordinary manufacturer. Indeed, Mr. Carnegie is well known to have made it a fixed rule to "put all his eggs in one basket," in the sense of committing himself entirely to the fortunes of his own special business as a steel manufac-To that one business he has devoted himself heart and soul for close on 40 years, and he is now reap-ing the reward of his single-minded

Make every tissue so strong and well that consumption germs cannot find a foothold. Fill your body with rich, red blood build up strong, healthy flesh—put your digestive system in perfect order. Don't drag along half dead. You may be well as well as not. The following letter from Mrs. Jennie Dingman, of Van Buren, Kalkaska Co., Mich., will tell you how to do it. She says: "Before I took

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

I was hardly able to do my work at all: had pain in my left side and back, and had headache all the time. I tried your medicine and it helped me. Last spring I had a bad cough; got so bad I had to be in bed all the time. My husband thought I had consumption. We thought we would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and before I had taken one bottle the cough stopped and I have since had no signs of its labor and his concentration of purpose in the results with which all the world

A RECORD OF WONDERFUL PRO-GRESS.

It is a common belief that Mr. Carnegie has owed his remarkable fortune entirely, or at least mainly, to the protection afforded by the United States tariff. This may be true so far as the origin of the enterprise and its early records are concerned. But for the last half dozen years the steel industry of the United States has been able to protect itself, and for the last three years at least it has professed and its years at least it has professed and justified its readiness to do much more than walk without protectionist crutches. It is well known that during this interval the Carnegie steel company has been most largely ex-tended, having purchased vast iron ore interests in the Lake Superior region, constructed great plants for the manufacture of armor, railway material, open-hearth steel, and pigiron, as well as a railway 150 miles in length to bring its ore produce from Lake Superior to the works at Pittsburg, and undertaken developments of colossal extent in its vast coalfield of Connellsville.

The chief stages in the recent progress of the Carnegle Steel Company have been the building of Homestead works of plants of perhaps unequaled extent for the manufacture of open-hearth steel and armor-plates; the acquisition of the larger and richer part of the Connellsville coalfield, near Pittsburg; the buying up of the richest iron ore mines of the Mesabi and other ranges on Lake Superior; the acquisi-tion or control of a special fleet of steamers for the transport of iron ores from their mines on Lake Superior to Cleveland, on Lake Erie, a distance of 700 to 900 miles, and a private railway to take the ore overland from Cleveland to Pittsburg; and the construction of blast furnaces at Duquesne, on the Monongahela River, which have each produced as much in a day as the largest furnaces, 30 years ago, were capable of producing in an average

But one of the greatest elements of the success of this company has been its splendid organization, which is chiefly the result of Mr. Carnegie's administrative genius. One of the fundamental principles laid down by him for the conduct of his business was to be as far as possible independent of outside supplies of materials, whether raw or manufactured. In pursuance of this policy, the best mineral properties in the United States, if not in the world, were bought up with avidity, and at necessarily large prices. Another principle laid down, and strictly acted upon, was to keep all the plants fully employed, so far as that was possible, even if exceedingly low prices had to be accepted in order to obtain contracts. This policy secured regular work, and, by beeping the vast plants as a rule full; occupied, enabled the Carnegie firm to manufacture more cheaply than other s that might be almost as well placed in respect of location and supplies. Yet another fundamental principle laid down by Mr. Andrew Carnegie for the guidance of his business was

STIMULATE THE BEST MEN that he could command to do their very best in positions of trust and authority. This result was achieved with conspicuous success in two ways-first, by giving young men of recognized ability a stake, however small, in the business and to improve the holding according to the proved merits of the holder; and the next, to aim always at nothing less than the maintenance of the highest realized standard of attainment. The effect of the first arrangement was that Mr. Carnegie had a large number young partners, most of them owing all they possessed to the opportunities which he himself gave them, and each of them directly interested in producing the best results of which he was capable, not only as a means of improving his position and prospects, but also as a matter of amour propre and business reputation. If it was found that any one of these younger partners, in filling a certain assigned position, fell below the level of achievement established by a predecessor, he had usually to step down, or suffer transference to another position, and if in that other position he did not come up to a further recognized standard, he had usually to step out altogether. Mere mediocrity was rarely tolerated. The services rendered had to be better than the best that had gone before-every one knowing that the slightest error, failure, or defection would be noted by the chief, to whom every detail of the gigantic business was intimately known from day to day. whether he might be in Scotland. Egypt, China, or in any other equally remote part of the world.

It is highly improbable that such an important project as that of the transfer of the business of the Carnegie Steel Company can be carried out without affecting the conditions of production and prices in the United States, and possibly also in Europe. Hitherto, the Carnegie Company have been the keenest competitors of British steel manufacturers for the recent orders given out for Japanese, Chinese, Egyptian, Canadian, and South American railways. They were, moreover, the competitors most to be feared in the future, because they usually held themselves aloof from any combinations and were known to disapprove of the recently current consolidation or trust system, which has done so much to place the control of the chief Amercan industries in the hands of a few individuals.

THE MENACE OF THE TRUST. Under the new regime it is understood that the Carnegie Company's works will be carried on as a part of a gigantic consolidation which will practically place the steel trade of the United States at the disposal of two or three organizations, so long as it can be kept alive, and which may eithraise prices above their present level, or depress them in such a manner as to prove a serious and more or less permanent menace to the industrial prosperity of European countries, including our own. It is supposed by those who have found the capital to establish these monopolistic trusts in the United States that the cost of production can thereby be materially reduced, and that larger profits will therefore result than those earned by the old proprietors. Much will depend on the amount of capitalization relatively to the cost of similar properties, and on the efficiency of the administration. But it is unfortunate for competitors that such consolidations often continue to exist and to dominate the markets concerned long after they have ceased to earn profits.

A final word about Mr. Carnegie himself. "What will he do with it?" is the question that naturally occurs to those who contemplate Mr. Carnegie's great fortune, with a knowledge of what he has done in the past in the practical teaching of the "gospel of wealth." Of the profits that he has wealth." Of the profits that he has already made in his business Mr. Carnegie has expended several millions in the building of free libraries, art galleries, and music halls of the highest class in different industrial centers. His munificent gift to Birmingham shows him to have other aspirations and schemes of the same kind view, so that his immense wealth is certain to be largely expended in proGood Common Sense do NOT act upon the bowels. They renew and enrich the blood and make weak, tired nerves strong. They strengthen and only strengthen from the first dose to the last.

Most people find benefit from a tonic at this season, and thousands of authenticated cases prove Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to be the best tonic medicine known. That is why these pills have a larger sale than any other medicine in the world.

HEALTH BROKEN DOWN

Mr. John Barley, Lachute Mills, Que., says:—"Up to about seven years ago I had always been a healthy man. At that time my health began to give way, and at last I was left almost a physical wreck and for the last five years have not been able to do steady work the best part of the time, and as the many medicines I tried failed to help me, I had begun to look upon my case as hopeless. Finally a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and now after the use of only five boxes I am feeling well and strong. It is simply marvellous what they have done for me, and I shall always recommend them to my friends."

The same good sense that leads you to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial will prompt you to refuse any substitute an unscrupulous dealer offers. A druggist who says he has "something just as good," or "just the same except in name," is trying to mislead you for the sake of the extra profit the substitute gives him. ### CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

A Boston Journal Thinks It a Passing Phase.

[Boston Herald.]

The gathering on Sunday in this city of Christian Scientists from all the world was a notable event as indicating the existence in an age of scepticism of an exalted belief in the possibilities of spiritual faith. No doubt, by the great majority of people, the Christian Scientists are looked upon as fanatics, but this is obviously a term of reproach which agitators and reformers of every class, good and bad, have had to endure. We imagine one would not have to go back a long way in the religious history of Europe and the United States—that is, more than two or three generations-to find a large number of persons who had cherished beliefs in no way vitally distinguishable from those now entertained by the religionists who associate themselves under the modern name Christian Scientists. Certainly the belief that, through faith and prayer, cures of physical ailments can brought about, is a conviction which a large number of people have entertained from the days of Christ's presence on the earth down to the present

The manner in which a miracle is to be worked-that is, through whose instrumentality-is a matter of minor importance when compared with the miracle itself. And if any Christian had convinced himself that a modern miracle was impossible, it would probably be difficult for him to give a satisfactory explanation why miracles were limited to the early days of Christianity, or to specify the time at which an end was put to the ability to bring about those supernatural changes. The Roman Catholic church holds to a continuance of this divine power, and most Protestant denominations profess a belief in divine interposition in the affairs of men and of nations. The difference between the above and the Christian Scientist doctrine appears to be that the latter is a more literal interpretation of biblical assertions.

That the practice of this faith makes it run counter to modern methods and experiences is not at all strange; in fact, it is this which gives to the movement, in the eyes of those who are associated with it, the greater part of its attractiveness. Whenever, during the last nineteen centuries, the trend of human thought and feeling has been good appetite. Is essential to good health. Hood's Sarsaparilla creates an Appetite, tones and Strengthens the stomach.

And builds up the whole system. It relieves that tired feeling, and by purifying and enriching the blood, promptly and permanently cures all scrofula eruptions, boils, humors, pimples and sores; strengthens the nerves, and gives sweet, refreshing sleep. No other medicine has taken such hold upon the confidence of the people as Hood's Sarsaparilla, and its record of great cures is unequalled by any other preparation. You may take Hood's Sarsaparilla with the utmost confidence that it will do you good toward what would be termed materialism, there have inevitably sprung up, in opposition to this tendency forts to exalt the spiritual side of life. These movements, both in their professions and practices, have frequently been extravagant, and sometimes absolutely absurd, and yet they have probably been beneficial as preventives of the decay of religious vitality. A religious movement started in this way as a protest has for a time, perhaps for one or two generations, a wonderful amount of life and vigor, which, apart from excesses and crudities, influence contemporaneous religious thought and practice. Then, by de-grees, the impetus originally inspired by some leader, or group of leaders, dies away, the religious denomination is classed with others, and, except its technical points of creed, is hardly distinguishable from them. Having thus ceased to fulfil its spiritual functions. some other movement or agitation has to be started in its place, and it is one of those historically numerous uprisings that we are witnessing in Christian Science effort.

A RUINED CITY

Exploration of Mexican Ruins of the Hill of the Flowers.

Prof. W. H. Holmes, one of the head curators of the National Museum, has returned from a trip to Mexico under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution, says the Washington Star. He accomplished the exploration of the ruined city, Xochicalco, "Hill of the Flowers," something not done hitherto in a scientific and thorough way. The hill is a series of stone-faced terraces from base to the summit. It is a network of walls, finished in selected or cut stone and well plastered. The summit is about one-fourth of a mile square, and in the center stands a temple of simple but artistic character. Its walls are covered with rude glyphs carved into them. The temple is about 60 by 80 feet square, and is surrounded by a very complete system of courts and pyramids. Professor Holmes says the city belongs to the pre-Spanish period, and that to remodel and build the summit in the extensive way now indicated must have taken centuries of time. Therefore, he concludes, that the city is much more than 500 years old, as there is no record of its capture and occupancy by the Spaniards.

ENGLAND'S PRIZE BEAUTY. The most beautiful woman in England is without doubt Lady Helen Vincent. There has never been anyone to compare with her since she first ap-peared in society, and she was the most beautiful bride ever seen-in a white dress brocaded in lilies, with golden yellow stamens and palest green leaves. She is exquisitely fair, almost fragile, and some of her freshness doubtless is due to the fact that she never wears herself out with late hours, as so many other London women do. Even when staying in other people's houses she manages to live her own life in her own way, walking out and resting during a portion of th day, while every night, no matter what the attraction in the way of dancing or playing cards, she invariably says good night soon after 11 o'clock .- Cassell's Magazine.

A GOLD FISH FARM

From Which the Brilliant-Hued Beauties Are Sent All Over the World.

In Shelby county, Indiana, about 30 miles from Indianapolis, is the largest goldfish "farm" in the world. Here the original goldfish men of the country have their propagating plant, and here are produced some of the finest speciments in the world. The pets require a careful and systematic raising that is seldom considered by those who desire to purchase them at a small price. The "farm" is known as Spring Lake Fishery, and consists of innumerable small ponds all connected by narrow channels or sluiceways, in which the flow of water is controlled by water gates. These ponds are constructed with careful regard for depth, size, height of embankment and amount and kind of shrubbery on the banks. The most careful consideration is given to these details, for it has been demonstrated that they all, each and collectively, influence the health and development of the fish, and the perfecting of the color without which the goldfish is valueless.

Immediately after it is hatched the goldfish is very much like any common everyday minnow, and there is nothing in its appearance to indicate the glorious hues it will afterward assume. For more than a year it has a dull, whitish silvery color, which gradually gives place to the shadings and blotches of color so well known by fanciers.

Spring Lake Fishery is owned by L. Shoup, who has spent his life in studying the habits of goldfish and how nature may be assisted in her work of coloring the little beauties. He has found that the sun is the artist who makes the delicate tints on the film of the fishes' sensitive scales. But the sun is a variable artist, and no two of the fishes he paints are exactly alike. If a fish is kept in the shade from infancy it will always retain its youthful, silvery color, and will be a very ordinary, and, in fact, worthless fish; but if allowed to bask in sunny shallows and to lie with its sides exposed on pebbly ripples, its scales will sorb the rainbow tints of the sunlight refracted through wavelets of crystal It is not within the power of man to define or regulate the coloring of the fish, but by careful attention to the exposure to the sun's rays he can make the shades sober-hued or brilliant. Generally there is the greatest demand for bright colors, and those fishes are produced in greatest numbers whose markings are pronounced. There are but few exceptions to prove the rule that the sun is the only agency that paints the fish, but occasionally one is found that grows to maturity and to the last retains its dull silvery color. These are the albinos, and cannot be accounted for. They simply exist, and that is all that is known about them. The food a fish eats has nothing to do with developing its color. All the fish in Spring Lake Fishery are fed exactly the same food, and it is undeviating in quantity and quality. Toasted bread and nothing else is given them two or three times a week, and they thrive upon it better than anything else. It is well adapted to their delicate organism, and with the natural food, such as flies and worms, they can capture, is recommended for use in private aquariums.

DANGER FROM ANIMALS. The greatest difficulty with which the goldfish raiser has to contend is the night-prowling animals, such as cats, coons and opossums. These animals are very adept at catching fish, and experience little difficulty in securing all they want of the domesticated goldfish, which take alarm but slowly. Snakes and crayfish are also destroyers of the goldfish, and the most constant vigilance is maintained to see that none of these animals gain access to the ponds. The goldfish is insectivorous, and his appetite often leads to his death. The sting of some insects is fatal, and for a common snake feeder to deposit an egg upon one of the little vertebrates means its sure

The freaks and unusual developments in the fish are the varieties which always bring the highest prices in the market. Odd and rare colors and spots and blotches are the kind of markings most preferred by fanciers. Unusual shapes in the fish are also very much sought after and invariably bring high In physical development the tail is the great favorite of nature, for it is that appendage that receives the most attention. Fish with two, three, four and even five tails are not uncomman, and a few specimens with six tails have been known, but they are These abnormal developments rare. are always accompanied by the most brilliant hues, and have been known to bring almost fabulous prices.

More than 200,000 fish are in the Spring Lake Fishery, and specimens are sent every year into every state and territory. The aquariums of near-ly every country on earth have drawn upon it for perfect specimens, and for information concerning the production and care of the fish. Many of the royal aquariums in Europe are kept replenished from this fishery. Goldfish in private aquariums should be regularly fed, but never overfed, the water should be kept fresh, and at even temperature, and the aquarium

THE EMPEROR

His Idea of Monarchy as Proclaimed by Himself.

The German System of Life Compared With the English.

Which Is the Better and More Lasting? -Will Germany's Present Theory Last?

[The London Spectator.]

The German emperor has added to his many other functions that of playwright. The news from Berlin is that the one topic of conversation there is the production of the historical play called "Eisenzahn"-i.e., "Iron Tooth" -the first production of which took place before the kaiser at Wiesbaden. I. If this conception of politics holds The kaiser must have listened to the with not a few of the German people, performance with all the interest of young dramatic author on the night of his play, for we read that "many of the most striking and effective passages are actually from the emperor's pen." We need not describe the plot, which is based on a conflict that broke out in 1447 between the citizens of Berlin and the Elector Frederick II. of Brandenburg. As there happens to be a controversy at the present time between the Berlin municipal council and the government respecting the erection of a gateway for the graveyard where lie the bodies of the revolutionaries of 1848, the play has a living interest for the inhabitants of Berlin, who are thus forcibly reminded that their democratic city has a long reckoning with the overbearing house of Brandenburg. A courtly verse, comparing Vienna with Berlin, tells us that while the former is a Kaiserstadt, or imperial city, the latter is nothing but a Rauber-nest, and that is to some extent the view which the extreme monarchists in Germany have generally taken of the now great city on the Spree: Berlin is not "loyal," and rarely has been, and the present feud between government and municipality may be said to typify the general re-lations which have existed between the city and the monarchy. What possesses special interest, however for us is not so much the contest either of the fifteenth or the nineteenth century, as the self-revelation which "Eisenzahn" gives of the ideas which the German em-carries on with such profuse advertisement, and, let us add, with no little success. He would not, however, let us call it a trade. No: it is a state into which he has been sent by divine grace. The divine right of the Prussian monarchy has always been maintained by the Hohenzollerns (we should have liked, by the way, to hear what that prince of royal cynics, Frederick the Great, had to say about it privately), and never with more empressement than by German Diet at Frankfort in 1849. It has been made by the more conserva-tive political philosophers of Germany kind of corner-stone of government. Even those political thinkers who do not believe in popular religion, and who, perhaps, if there is any divinity at all, take a view of the state, and therefore of its head, which practically makes of the monarch a person, not only above disobedience, not only be-yond removal, but beyond any genuine criticism; and they are largely responsible for the energy of the great democratic movement which is seeking to undermine the foundations on strong a hold over German conserva-

it is in full entirety embodied in the herent in the race. We share the trekaiser. In all seriousness, and with the most complete honesty, William II. regards himself as the vice-regent of Deity, and those who oppose his policy are the enemies of God as well as of the Prussian monarchy. His ideas as to his office seem to be well expressed in the words put into the mouth of the elector in this play: "Let him that is with me, that can understand my mission, that cares for his native land, and wishes that our ships may fare across the sea, our crops ripen, that the German name be honored high and soar forth among the nations like an eagle—let him follow me! Branden-burg always!" There, if ever, spoke the real Kaiser Wilhelm. There can be no doubt about the authenticity of inspiration there.

What are we to say of this theory of political life? It is no mere academic question, when such views are set forth and acted on by the greatest military state in the world, by one of the strongest governments that ever existed. The medieval challenge, the iron glove of Gotz, is thrown boldly and defiantly into the arena in a time when the democratic commonplaces were believed by many to have passed into the category of undisputed truths. Here is a man who will none of democracy, This is the vital question, and this and who has an army of millions behind him, and who is one of the arbiters of the world. Nor can it be doubted that this policy has proved attractive to great numbers of educated men who do An American Eulogy of a Former not like the rough-and-tumble of popular politics with all the banalities and the humbug which it must be admitted cling to popular methods of government. Only the other day in one of the reviews appeared an able and well-informed article, in which German methods were held up to our admiration, and we were told that instead of abusing the German emperor it would be wise for us in England to adopt some of his methods, and to Germanize the life of England. German political philosophy has made not a little headway in England and the United States, and it might almost be said at the present time that whatever of political philosophy is taught in our seats of learning was "made in Germany." It is also impossible to travel in Germany without being impressed with what has been done since the formation of the empire. The splendid material works, the smoothness of the political and social machinery, the aspect of wide comfort, the growing scale on which life is laid out, the rapidity of improvements, the pushing character of the people, the habits of industry, and the general high level of intelligence—with all these and other aspects of German life one cannot fail to be impressed. The candid Englishman will admit also that the points won in the race of industrial competition by Germany against his own country have been deserved. There has been better organization and great-

But is all this due to the power of the kaiser and to his personal government? Is all this the outcome of that great bureaucracy which obeys the least desire of its crowned chief? And, on the other hand, has Germany made all gains and suffered no losses as the result of this high monarchical government? We give the powerful Hohenzollern family all credit for the iron perseverance, the wonderful industry, the simplicity and virility which have been shown by the long line of Prussian We have no doubt whatsoever that all this has had a great effect on the life of the people. But we do not think so meanly of the Germans as to suppose they could do nothing for themselves without a king to show them how, or to guide their steps as though they were tiny children. It may be doubted whether even the most purely political reforms carried out in Prussia would have been accomplished without the imitiation of great thinkers and statesmen. One looks up with admiration to the superb the present kalser. The doctrine was statue of Frederick in Berlin, but is it hissed out by Bismarck in the ears of not true that the great changes in statue of Frederick in Berlin, but is it the angry democrats who sat in the Prussia were as much due to the groups of great men round the pedestal as to the philosopher-king himself? Where, humanly speaking, would Prussia have been today had it not been for Stein, Hardenberg, Gneisenau, Scharnhorst; where but for Kant, Goethe, Humboldt? The theory of the kaiser is to ignore these men, and to attribute all that has been accomplished to his ances-Would Prussia have sprung a tors. generation ago into the front rank of powers by the unaided efforts of William I., or of his immediate predecessor? To ask the question is to answer it for any well-informed man. The real truth is that the facts of German which German monarchy reposes. In life which rightly impress us are the short, belief in divine right has as outcome of German character and of German training. The latter is due to tism as it had in the court of Charles Schleiermacher, while the former is inunhappily we have not been able to develop such a system of education as they. Energy, culture and characterthese are the real sources of German success, rather than electors of the fif-

> century. And now, on the other hand, is this apparent political success so solid and durable as it seems? The German Empire is not yet a generation old, and we must not pass judgment on such an infant. The world is of great age, and its great institutions can only be appraised after centuries of life. When the German Empire is one-fifth as old as the papacy, or half as old as its neighbor in Austria, it will be time for the observer to tell what he thinks of it. But there is a rule laid down by a great writer which holds in politics as well as in religion: "The things which are seen are temporal." We may greatly admire certain superficial results, and may for the time think they are worth almost any price. We may think the smooth, clocklike machine of a great bureaucracy better than the ungainly movements of a popular government. But, after all, is not life more important than machinery, and can machinery take the place of life? will prove the test as between democracy or popular institutions, and German monarchy or bureaucratic institutions. Popular government, properly organized, educates the people; bureaucracy educates nobody. We fully admit that to enthusiasts popular institutions have not been the glorious success which they expected; but, on the whole, what would we or they put in their place? Do we care to see the popular will die out in the presence of autocratic power, or subjected to the infinite chances which are inherent in despotism? Do we really think that a system which allows a Marcus Aurelius to be succeeded by a Commodus, or a Philip II.to seat himself on the throne of a Ferdinand and Isabella and to govern as he pleases-do we think that is a better system than that in which the ultimate resort is to "the common sense of most"? The noble despot may be followed by an idlot, the great plans of the wise may be destroyed in an instant by the vagaries of a fool. Such is the system of government, disguise it as he may, which the German kaiser, in his medieval enthusiasm, suggests to his country and to the world. We think even Germany will reject it before the next century is half-way

SIR JOHN MURRAY

Resident of This City.

[New York Sun.] In awarding the Cullum Geographical medal to Sir John Murray the American Geographical Society has American Geographical Society honored a brilliant and original geographer. He is one of the most productive of scientific workers, and has made notable additions to oceanography. Sir John has said that "since the discoveries of Columbus, Gama and Magellan in the thirty years from 1492 to 1522 there has been no addition to the knowledge of the surface of our planet that can in any way compare with that of the deep sea expeditions during the past quarter of a century." This is doubtless true, for no com-plete theory of the earth was possible so long as the conditions prevailing over three-fifths of the globe, buried under the oceans, were unknown. It was to the discovery and elucidation of these conditions that Sir John Murray and other distinguished explorers of the deep sea have devoted many Sir John was engaged for thirteen years in editing the "Challenger Reports," a work twice as large as the last edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica, recording not only the re-searches and results of one of the greatest scientific voyages ever under-taken, and in which he took part, but also including all available information on the same subjects down to the time when the Report was completed in 1895. Foreign governments placed their records and collections at the disposal of the Challenger experts and the scope which Sir John Murray gave the work has made it the one great textbook of oceanography. He completed, last year, another notable undertaking, a map showing the highest and lowest temperatures, or in other words, the annual range of surface temperatures in each two degrees square of the ocean as far as has been observed. This map is a special convenience in investigating the influence of temperature changes upon oceanic forms of life.

Geographical achievement knows no nationality and in awarding its gold medal the American Geographical Society recognizes the best work by whomesoever done. Its first medallist was the American Peary, its second the Norwegian Nansen, and its third is the Canadian Murray who has long dwelt in Great Britain.

The Chaton Bleu was a little restaurant down near Washington Square, and a famous place in its way. The B-la-carte system was in vogue, and of the dishes I could make out on the menu I wanted none.

It was early, and there were few people in the place. Diagonally across from me, and somewhat nearer the door sat a pretty young woman, to whom had just been brought an in-witing-looking dish. Bring me what that lady has," I said to the waiter.

This friend of yours was with her in a restaurant tonight, and there was a In my right hand I held a button-In my right hand I held a the a restaurant tonight, and there was a piere of violets, I had bought at the a restaurant tonight, and there was a liere of violets, I had bought at the performance between them loor. I gesticulated with this hand as little performance between them I spoke, and waved the flowers lightly the direction of the young woman the man looked at her and back to me.
"Ze la-dee?" he said, stupidly.
Yes, the lady—some of what she is eating; bring it to me." The man stared at me heavily for a second or two, and then an imbecile mile appeared upon his face. With a "Out Monsieur," he crossed to where the lady sat, bent over her table for a few moments, and then returned to me. "Ze la-dee tank you," he said, "mais she wish not to accept your flowers."

"You idiot," said I, "who said anything about offering her flowers? Go away! Send me another waiter."

The man understood my gesture this time, and departed greatly crestfallen.
Another garcon came, who spoke his "leetle Eenglish" rather more intelligently, and from him I succeeded in getting something to eat.

I glanced across at the lady. She was wonderfully pretty, and distinguishedlooking, too. She seemed a girl one would like to know. I grew lobsterred, realizing what an ass she must think me.

I hurried through my meal as quickly as possible. As I paid my bill a big man with a black mustache strolled in and took a seat near the door. I rose to go, and as I approached the table at which the young woman sat I felt her eyes fastened upon me. I returned their gaze. She smiled and I paused.

"Will you not sit down and take coffee with me?" she said, in a low voice.

I bowed, murmured my thanks, and seated myself opposite her. The thing was done quietly and naturally. It might have been a meeting of old acquaintances, and attracted no attention, apparently.

tion, apparently.
"I only wish to tell you that I was tion of being rude," she said, smiling brightly, "but it was very sudden, and I am not accustomed to having young men offer me violets."

I stammered some perfectly commonplace remark and stirred energetically the cup she gave me.
"In proof of what I say I will accept your flowers now. But you had no intention of sending me them. It was all the mistake of that stupid Gustave."

She took up the flowers and pinned them in her corsage.
"I cannot contradict a lady." I replied, "but I am glad you have them

"Will you believe in my sincerity." said, "if I tell you that I long with all my heart to know you better; that I desire a stronger claim upon your acquaintance than this ridiculous but happy blunder of the waiter's gave

Her smile had vanished now and she regarded me with a serious, enigmatical expression. "I am a gentleman." I assured her with some warmth. "I am certain of that," she replied at length. "It is for that very reason placed myself under your protection, for that is what I have done. I am seriously alarmed. I did an imprudent thing in coming here alone tonight, but I expected to meet some friends. I am afraid to walk the two blocks to the car alone. Will you go with me

While I expressed my delight at being able to render her so slight a service, she unpinned my flowers from her bosom.

"You must take these back now," she said. "Nay," as I opened my mouth to protest, "I wish it; they might cause me embarrassment.' But I will give you something as a souvenir of this meeting," she continued, "only a knot of blue ribbon, but keep it. Open your hand now and be ready to put the flowers away quickly, for we may be observed." With a rapid movement she dropped the boutonniere in my outstretched palm, and I slipped it into my overcoat pocket. As I did so I caught a glimpse of a bit of blue ribbon wound about the stems. Her face was quite pale now, she seemed really frightened, although still smiling, and my heart went out to the pretty, pathetic-looking little

We rose to go. Outside upon the pavement she stopped suddenly with a little exclamation of dismay.

"My glove—I must have dropped it der the table. Will you get it please?" I hastened back the waiters joined me in my search, and the man with a black mustache was an interested spectator. The glove was not to be found. I went back to the door to ask if she were not mistaken. To my astonishment she had disappeared.
"You seem to be looking for someone," said a voice behind me as I gazed up and down the street; "perhaps I can help you." It was the man with the mustache.

"I do not need your assistance, sir,"

I said, haughtily. "But I am in need of your society," he said in a low voice, and turned back his coat for an instant. I caught the gleam of a badge and knew what

"Come," he said, "I think I may promise you shall see her again very "Why do you arrest me?" I asked.

"What do you charge me with?" "Nothing as yet, young man, but your actions are suspicious and you were in bad company."
"Do you mean to say—" I began,
but stopped, chilled by the thought I dared not express.

"What did the lady hand you?" he saked as we walked together.
"Why a bunch of violets."

Mary went into the shed and brought the lamb out in her arms. The little the lamb out in her arms. The little creature hushed its cries at her touch, but it began restlessly sniffling the vaporous, odorous, early morning air. Dew still decked the grass; the shadow of the eastward wooded hill fell across the pasture and the barn-yard with a twilight-like effect. The sunbeams had reached the house, how-ever, and Mary moved instinctively toward the patch of brightness with the trembling lamb in her arms. "Why, Doxie, I never knew you to act so before!" she cried. "What makes you so frightened, pet? Why, a shrick, she fied toward the house.

Crouching and crawling on top of the barn-yard fence, was a great tawny beast, with cat-like head, gleaming eyes and a long tail that lashed nervously to and fro, as the animal advanced. Mary had heard so many stories and descriptions of the partitur, that although she had never panther that, although she had never seen one before, she knew this beast in a moment.

Her heart was in her mouth as she I had no fear, for I knew the chief sprung for the open kitchen door with the lamb clutched to her posom. Bewindered with the fright, sac did not close the door behind her, but sped upstairs and into her own chamber, dropped the lamb on the bed, slammed the door, and threw herself, panting and trembling against it.

In a moment she realized how foolish she had been to neglect the door below, for she heard the big cat bound into the kitchen and come sniffing up the staircase slowly and doubtfully. It could climb a tree like a squirrel, but it may have thought the staircase knot of ribbon, carefully.
"Will you explore that pocket a little farther?" asked the detective. too suspiciously easy. "Oh! What shall I do?" sobbed poor Mary, wringing her hands. "I can't keep him out of here! He'll break down this thin "Search me if you wish," I replied, indignantly.

I certainly shall, if necessary," he said, "but I prefer that you look."

I thrust my hand deep into my pocket and felt a small, hard object door in a minute, and eat me up, and

Doxie, too!' Her eyes fell on the narrow window of the chamber, high up in the gable, looking out over the roof of the kitchen. She snatched a chair, ran to the window, climbed up, opened the sash, and was about to go out on the roof when the lamb bleated. Mary looked

"Poor little Doxie, you sh'n't be eaten up!" she cried, bounding back to the floor with every nerve tingling. She caught the lamb, sprang back to the chair, climbed up and put her litthe pet out on the roof, just as the sound of fierce, rending claws came from the door. With a prayer in her heart that God would keep the panther back just a minute longer, she grasped the casement outside, and began to draw herself painfully through the window. The space was very narrow-so narrow that she had to turn sidewise in order to squeeze into it at all. For a little while it seemed as if she could not get through, but she let her breath out, shrank as small as she could, and with a frantic effort that nearly tore her dress off, wriggled through and drew down the sash behind her. yet she had not heard the panther enter the chamber, and she dared not look back to see if he were there.

How strange it seemed to be sitting out there in the broad morning sun shine, with the frightened lamb nestling in her lap, and the chimneyplied Quigg, reproachfully. "I knew she could give two men work to do, so swallows circling around her head, the woods so peaceful, the little pasture I had Feeney waiting for her on the sparkling with the dew, all outdoors corner of Washington Square, while I so serene, so indifferent, and yet that dreadful panther in the quietness of the house seeking her life! Suddenly Mary's heart leaped madly, and she clutched Doxie with a grip that made the lamb bleat with pain. She saw the panther crouched by the well-sweep, looking up at them. He had stolen out to the barn-yard.

The well-sweep! And the panther beside it! What if he should climb it? The great stick of timber from which the bucket was hung reached from the earth, where its box of stones weighed down the larger end, to a point over well, within six feet of the edge of the kitchen roof. Suppose the panther should climb the sweep? Could he reach a point from which he could leap to the roof, before his weight should cause the balanced timber to tip the other way?

The crouching cat moved even more swiftly than Mary expected. With a light, lithe spring he grasped the sweep just below the point where it fitted into the crotch of the upright post. Then he began to climb quickly

The girl trembled and shivered and stared, bewildered, at the blazing, hungry eyes and creeping form. The roof was her last refuge. Should the famished panther reach that, nothing but help from outside could save her

The beast was ascending more slowly. He seemed now to suspect the sweep, for he stopped frequently and sniffed the timber in front of him before resuming his slow and careful creeping. He passed the upright post, and still the heavily-weighted lower end of the sweep remained upon the ground.

The panther began to crouch lower, and gripped the timber more firmly with his claws. He was getting ready to spring.

But he did not leap when he pre-pared to do so. It seemed to occur to him that he could run lightly along this seeming branch and spring from very near the end of it. He rose higher and came on as a cat trots on a fence. Mary staring, shrieked and shrieked. Then suddenly, the bucket-end of the sweep went down with a rush. The weighted end went up; the surprised panther pitched head first, clawed desperately, trying to keep his hold, and did not wholly lose it and his balance until he was directly over the well. Then into the well he pitched head-

Down he went, with a scrambling clatter. Then Mary heard a hollow-sounding splash, twenty feet below the ground surface, as the beast went head foremost into the water. For several minutes there was a great tumult in the well—an unearthly screaming, a frantic dashing and churning of water, and scratching at the rock-walls. Put all was quiet, and the trembling girl began to draw full s again, long before an hour had

The forenoon was far advanced, however, when Mary ventured to pry up her chamber window and slip back into the house. Taking Doxie with her she stole down stairs, and closed and barred the heavy kitchen door. Then, feeling sick and faint, she lay down on the lounge, and presently fell asleep, exhausted by the nervous reaction.

The next thing she heard was knock at the kitchen door, and her mother calling: "Mary! Are you there, child? Let me in!"

As soon as she heard her daughter's story. Mrs. Mavfield went and looked into the well. Down in the gloom, pro-her pet lamb a basin of milk. "I believe I will go to Aunt Lyddy's," she said to herself, looking up at the deserted house. "It is so lonesome! The woods are so still all around, that it almost seems as if I could hear the wild creatures moving in the hugh."

jected slightly above the surface of the water, was something—she could not tell what. She let down the bucket, but it struck a solid mass, and could not be dipped. "I declare, Mary," she exclaimed, "I believe your panther in could not be dipped."

she exclaimed, "I believe your panther is actually drowned in the well!"

Mary laughed nervously. "He either drowned," she said, "or went through to China, for he certainly didn't come up again. -The Youth's Companion.

Why do Some Women Grow Homely so Soon?

That's a question we ask ourselves every day as we watch the daily crowd in great cities, in villages and towns. Women nowadays begin to lose their good looks before they are twenty-five; the lustre leaves their eyes, and the color their cheeks, and in its place comes dulness, sallowness, muddiness, or any unhealthy pallor—and presto! beauty is gone.

Wives and daughters, you do not take proper care of yourselves, that's why your good looks vanish. Our grand-your good looks vanish. Our grandmothers and great grandmothers were wiser in their generation than are we today. They did not allow themselves to be so driven as we are, for their steady, continued health gave them strength enabling them to keep abreast of their work which, when it was finished, left them tired, but happy, not as we find ourselves today, bilious and constipated and generally forlorn. Their secret will be found in the regular use of herb teas, prominent among them being preparations of clover tops and clover roots. These kept their digestion in good trim, and so made their blood pure and muscles strong. That's why they were so nimble on their feet, and could do their own housework till they were three-score and ten!

Karl's Clover Root Tea revives the use of this wonderful plant in our generation; its for-mula, prescribed by a famous Ger-mula, prescribed by a famous German physician, is printed on every package. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." Why not try this grand remedy? We guarantee your cure or money refunded. In Order to Mark the Mourning for Prince Alfred.

Aldershot-The Charing Cross Bazar.

[Special London Cable Letter to The Advertiser.]
London, June 10.—The splendid weather of last week brought fashionable people to the parks and streets, and has given London the gayest appearance. Everyone is now looking forward to the Ascot races, where a very large attendance is expected, although fewer houses around Ascot have been taken. Ascot, however, will be shorn of its leading feature by the omission of the royal procession up the course each day. The Prince of Wales and the other royalists will drive to the course privately, the Queen having prohibited the procession, in

A GREAT BAZAR.

Society is intensely interested in the great bazar, at Albert Hall, in aid of the Charing Cross Hospital, which is expected to net at least $250,000. People moving in the highest ranks of society will give their services in the various stalls, Mrs. Arthur Paget and Mrs. Ronalds being the soul of the affair. The American stall, which will be decorated with American colors, will be attended by Mesdames Choate, Bradley-Martin and Ronalds, and Miss Drexel.

The Queen is a patroness of the bazar. It is the first time she has acted as patroness of a bazar in 66 years. She accepted upon this occasion because her first patronage, when she was 14 years old, was given for the Charing Cross Hospital.

AMENDING CRIMINAL LAW. The Society for the Amendment of Criminal Law met this week under the presidency of Sir Charles Cameron. The Preparing for the Grand Review at members are keenly interested in the case of Mrs. Maybrick. Sir Charles Cameron, who is well known as a prison reformer, said to a representative of the Associated Press: "The Maybrick case is one of the planks of our society's platform, and now that Sir Matthew White Ridley, secretary of state to the home department, is reviving the case by Lord Salisbury's direction, and through the pressure of the American Government, exerted through their excellent ambassador, it will only be a matter of a very short time, in my opinion, before her unconditional release. Until then the strong society will never cease to back up all efforts in that direction.'

The Bell Organ and Piano Company will, on and after the 14th inst, discontinue their branch warerooms at 167 Dundas street, and the popular in struments will thereafter be handled in London and vicinity by the firm of Sanborn & Trebilcock, who will carry a full line of Bell Pianos and Organs at Anderson's Book Store, formerry the London headquarters of the Nord-heimer Company.

It has long been the intention of this firm to do away with branch distributing points and make Guelph the location of their extensive factories. their only shipping point for both wholesale and retail trade, but this important step has been deferred until desirable dealers could be found to take up the London retail business in a manner that would not only do justice to this eminent make of instruments, but who would also be calculated to espouse the interests of contemplating purchasers.

Mr. W. H. Sanborne has for years been connected with the Bell Co. as a trusted member of their London branch. He is widely known throughout the territory as a man of unim-peachable honor and integrity, whose word alone is sufficient security in any transaction. Mr. A. E. Trebilcock, who is related to Mr. Sanborn by marriage, and who will be his future business partner, has also had a position of trust with the Bell Co. for some years. He is a young man of more than ordinary ability, peculiarly adapted, by reason of his musical gifts, to succeed in his chosen line of business. He also embarks in this partnership with the most gratifying indorsements of the Bell Co., bearing upon his application and integrity in all matters pertaining to business. Further notice regarding the future policy of this firm will appear in the daily papers.

Mr. L. G. Mercer, who has successfully managed the Bell Co.'s affairs in London district, is appointed to the general supervision of the company's retail business in the west, and will continue to make London his headquarters as heretofore.

Mr. J. E. Keenleyside will also be retained in the company's employ to look after the retail trade in the vi-cinity of London.

JESSAMINE.

Few of earthly mold-such are the freaks of imagination and the compli-cations of nervous irritation—are, at all times, superior to like vicissitudes of purpose and temper. I trust, then, that my hero will not suffer materially in the opinion of the exceptional minority when I state that it was near noon ere he finally and stably reassured his dubious mind that in this flying visit to the parsonage he was acting wisely for himself, and, as secondary, third and fourth rate considerations, for Jessie, Boy and Mrs. Baxter. The lever that completed the task of elevating his selfesteem from the slough of doubt, was not the anticipation of Jessie's person ... and mental improvement, or Mrs. Baxter's gratified maternal longings. It was the thought how the light imprisoned in Eunice Kirke's beryl-like eyes, would break up to the surface in the golden glints he had seen, at infrequent intervals, dash their placid darkness; how her slow, bright smile would greet his unexpected appearance, and applaud his vivacious sallies; the sweet monotone, many a queen of fashion would give her costliest jewels to imitate successfully, reply to his questioning. For he would have many questions to put. This, as he remembered, was a stud-lous autumn with the sisters. While Roy had laughed at Jessie's lamentations over her lack of learning, protest-ing that she "knew more already of books and men than any professor's wife he had ever met," he had, in compliance with her desire, and believing that active employment would be wholesome discipline for her in the weary months of their separation, arvisited Dundee in the August vaca-tion, accompanying Roy back to town, not quitting him until he waved his farewell from the pier to the slowlygoing steamship, "outward bound." During those sad, precious, "last days," the disengaged pair were, of necessity, often left to entertain one another for hours together, and their decorous friendship had matured naturally and gracefully into an equally decorous intimacy. Orrin had marked passages for Eunice's consideration in divers books they had glanced over in company; sent her after his return to Hamilton, Carlyle, Emerson and Macaulay; besides running down for a day in Octoto bring a thick roll of duets. sonatas, and etudes, and the whole of Mozart's Twelfth Mass for Miss Kirke's practice in the lengthened evenings.

'We are almost relations-in-law, you know," had been his only apology for attentions and gifts, and Eunice had accepted all in simple good faith. Her interest in his talk, and her manifest liking for him, were a more flattering tribute to his vanity than was Jessie Kirke's frank cousinliness. If think it is always thus with the tokens of favor vouchsafed to friend an admirer by reserved, self-concentrated While Jessie was his especial study (or quarry) just now, he did not disdain the goods the gods offered him in the esteem and preference of the handsome elder sister. He had found her eminently convenient when his motive was to pique and mystify his cousin's betrothed by a feint of haughty indifference, and he was too wise an economist to cast aside what he had gained. He would be a clumsy diplomatist, indeed, were he to prove himself incompetent to the management of two affairs at the same time.

He had taken extraordinary pains to ascertain her tastes and desires in this direction, and displayed his customary tact in ministering to these.

If my attempted analyzation of a fascinating man's" principles and intention had seemed prolix to the surface-reader, he will bear in mind that It is but a meager abstract of what Mr. Wyllys thought, felt, and reasoned through the dreary November day, that did not see the sun until a break in the dark heavy clouds that hung low upon the western hills let out a few slanting rays of his welcome light upon a sodden, wretched earth.

The late burnished Windbeam's cor onal of cedars into golden-green, but curling fleeces of mist clung about his mighty chest and flanks, making him look grimmer and blacker by contrast; the valley was full of shadows, purple and gray; the old church was lightless save for the one dazzling arrow which was shivered against the slender tip of the spire, when Orrin undid the latch of the parsonage gate. Provencal warmth and roses were things that belonged to the dead summer. Eunice's evergreens hardly redeemed the garden from desolation. A trim arbor-vitae hedge kept warm the southern border, that would be gay in March, with crocuses and tulips; the box-trees were the only leafy shrubs in the alley down which Jessie had crept, to faint in his arms at the other end. A thrifty beaded with scarlet, mounted guard at the left of the front steps. as did a cedar, covered with bluish-white berries, at the right. A stately young pine, which stood near the entrance to #### the parsonage, and which he remembered as a favorite of Jessie's, filled the air with its solemn sighing, while he awaited the answer to his knock. "So, winter in all its dreariness comes

even to the Happy Valley," he moralized. "I ought to have known it, of course, only I had not thought of it. Patsey, the good-humored servant girl, opened the door, and immediately recognizing Mr. Wyllys, welcomed him with the broadest of smiles. "Mr. Kirke and Miss Eunice is not at home, sir. They're a-visiting some place in the village. Miss Jessie is in, though. Be pleased to walk into the parlor, and I'll tell her you're here."

He heard swift feet skim the floor overhead as his name was repeated, and Jessie was in the room before he could take off his gloves. With a wild, scared face, lips that moved without sound, and eyes that demanded confirmation or denial of the dread that was strangling her heart, she caught his hands, and looked up dumbly at him. His smile broke the spell sooner and more effectively than words could have done. She wrested her fingers from his, with a laugh so burdened with shame and happiness as to be more like a sob, testifying what had been the pressure and what was the release.

"I was sure-"That I was the bearer of bad news from abroad. I understand," Orrin took up the broken sentence. "You were never more mistaken. Your letter, inclosing Mrs. Baxter's, brought me. Your fears must take counsel of hope and faith another time. Roy was well when last heard from-well and happy, and, you may be sure, very busy. But what is this?" leading her to the window and scrutinizing her with fond solicitude. "What have you been doing with yourself? I am afraid he keeps his pledge of health, and resignation to inevitable better than you do yours to him. Are you not well? You been stck, and I was not told of it!"

Her complexion was dead to sallowness; her eyes were leaden, the lids drooping wearily; and she was thin-ner in face and figure than when he had parted from ther six weeks ago. Her dress, of dark, navy blue serge, made plainly, the long skirt heavy and still while she stood, and unrelieved save by narrow linen collar and cuffs, looked like a mourning garb.

"The Mater Dolorosa to the life!" and modern, French, German, and general reading for her. Orrin had also perfect. Who would have thought that a morbidly love-sick girl could, by dreaming and fretting, stamp her fea-tures with the imprint of that divine sorrow! Marvelous, forsooth, are the tricks of nature."

All this while he held Jessie's hand; his eyes seemed as if they could not leave the countenance whose change had so pained him. The girl's faint smile was very grateful.

"I am not sick. I have no physical ailment beyond a sensation of general good-for-nothingness. I ought to be ashamed to confess it, but I imagine I have a touch of what fine ladies call the 'blues.' Papa would have in Dr. Winters a month ago, in spite of all I Dann, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Reid, Mr. could do and say. He laughed at me a little, scolded me a great deal, and pronounced my malady dyspepsia, or low Dr. and Mrs. Buchan, Miss Buchan, fever, or nervous debility—he was not certain which. In any case, his prescription was quinine, dumb-bells, and Thomas F. Harvey (Chicago), Mr. S. porter, ale, lager beer, or a decoction of T. Britten (Toronto), Miss Hay, the gentian root and chamomile flowers. Think of it!" with a grimace. "Could my cup of existence be more effectualswing the bells a thousand times each good wishes for the welfare of the day, but I do not see that the regimen increases my appetite or makes me sleep better. There is nothing the matter with me that will not right a property of the wenare of the couple; from Capt. Robley D. If papa and Euna would rate me soundly for my folly and childishness, the counter-irritant would brace my system. should need no other medicine. But they won't, unfortunately.'

NIAGARA'S VOICES

Described by Mrs. Van Rensselaer-Not an Outrageous Noise.

Niagara has many voices, and some of them are thus described by Mrs. Van Rensselaer in the June Century: And the noise of Niagara? Alarming things have been said about it, but they are not true. It is a great and mighty noise, but it is not, as Henne-pin thought, an "outrageous noise." It is not a roar. It does not drown the voice or stun the ear. Even at the actual foot of the falls it is not oppressive. It is much less rough than the sound of heavy surf-steadier, more homogeneous, less metallic, very deep and strong, yet mellow and soft; soft, I mean in its quality; as to the noise of the rapids there is none more musical. It is neither rumbling or sharp. It is clear, plangent, silvery. It is so like the voice of a steep brook -much magnified, but not made coarser or more harsh-that, after we have known it, each liquid call from a forest hillside will seem, like the odor of grape-vines, a greeting from Niagara. It is an inspiring, exhilarating sound, like freshness, coolness, vitality itself made audible, and yet it is a lulling sound. When we have looked out upon the American rapids for many days, it is hard to remember contented life amid motionless surroundings, and so, when we have slept beside them for many nights, it is hard to think of happy sleep in an empty silence. Still another kind of music is audible at Niagara. It must be listened for on quiet nights, but then it will be heard. It is like the voice of an orchestra so very far away that its notes are attenuated to an incredible delicacy and are intermittently perceived, as though wafted upon variable zephyrs. It is the most subtle, the most mysterious music in the world. What is its origin? Why should we ask? Such fairy-like sounds ought not to be explained. Their appeal is to the imagination only. They are so faint, so far away, that they almost escape the ear, as the lunar bow and the fluted thats of the American Fall almost escape the eye. And yet we need not fear to lose them, for they are as real as the deep bass of the cata-

Nuptials of Mr. W. A. M. Goode and Miss Cecilia R. Sippi.

Well-Known Journalist and War Correspondent Weds a Popular London Lady.

Many Fashionables Present-Congratulations From Admiral Sampson and Other Officers of the United States

The marriage of Miss Cecelia Roderick Sippi, of this city, to Mr. W. Athel M. Goode, of New York city, was solemnized at St. Paul's Cathedral today, at 1 p.m. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Dann, assisted by very Rev. Dean Innez. About 50 invited guests were present, but the brilliancy of the wedding and the popularity of the young couple drew a large crowd of spectators to the cathedral The large edifice was filled to overflowing, and about 500 people, unable to gain admittance. waited outside to catch a glimpse of the bridal party, as they left the church, The beautiful choral service of the Church of England was used, and the music was feelingly played by the bride's uncle, Mr. George Sippi.

The bride's dress was of white duchess satin with pearl trimmings. She wore a veil of white tulle with orange blossoms, and white satin slippers. The maid of honor was Miss Rose Sippi, sister of the bride. The other bridesmaids were: Miss Ena Bucke, Miss Norah Buchan and Miss Kathleen Dann. They wore dresses of white organdie, trimmed with valenciennes lace, and Gainsborough hats, with white feathers. They carried bouquets of red and pink roses. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses. The groom's souvenir to the bridesmaids was a small gold bangle. The best man was Dr. A. T. Hobbs, of the Asylum, and the were Mr. George Sippi, Mr. J. W. Catty, who came from New York for the ceremony, and Mr. Pardee Bucke. The groom wore a black frock coat with white waistcoat and tie, and a white rose from the bride's bouquet.

THE GUESTS. Among those present were: Canon and Mrs. Dann, Miss Dann, Mr. Wm. Frank Reid, Miss Aspinall, Dr. and Mrs. Bucke, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Pope, relatives of the bride, and others. ### COMPANY

LAIDLAW-WATSON

The True Causes of Their Removal to Aylmer.

Misstatements Corrected by the Company's Manager.

The Laidlaw & Watson Shoe Company, of this city, will remove their factory to Aylmer shortly. The town of Aylmer has offered them inducements that could scarcely be profitably duplicated by any other town in Canada. The town of Aylmer agrees to transfer the plant from this city at their expense, to give, rent free, for eight years, a solid brick, two-story building, 130 feet long, with the option of purchase by the company at the end of that time for $2,500. The town also agrees to put in free an engine and steam heating system; to furnish steam for heating and power free; to put in 50 electric lights and furnish free light; to supply free water, and to put in free a gasoline machine; also to give the company a fixed assessment of $1,-000 for eight years. Railway companies add to the inducements by giving the shoe company free cartage on all its goods.

The company, on its part, agrees to employ not less than 65 hands, but expects to employ about 100 hands. Henry B. Pollock, manager of the Laidlaw & Watson Shoe Company, in conversation with an Advertiser reporter this morning said:

"I want you to emphatically deny the statement in the Free Press that we are leaving London to get away from the union." Mr. Pollock then read the following from the Free Press:

"A few weeks ago, it will be remembered, the employes of the factory went out on strike. The firm were so provoked in the matter they at once determined to leave the city and to this end wrote to several manufacturing towns to know what privileges would be guaranteed them."

"The last part of that statement," said Mr. Pollock, "is a deliberate falsehood. We were negotiating with Berlin, but we never wrote to anybody in the matter. It is true that during and ly embittered? I take quinine, and Mrs. Sampson, who sent the heartiest after the strike we did receive offers from a number of places. Among them was the offer from Aylmer, which was received after the strike had been satisfactorily settled. We were influenced in deciding to move only by the advantages of Avlmer's offer, and not in any measure by the existence of the union. Referring to the Free Press article again, Mr. Pollock read: Manager Pollock says that but for the strike the firm would not have thought of leaving the city, but their recent experience has caused a desire to get away from unions."

"That," he said, "is another false-hood, intended to blacken the unions. We have never had the slightest objection to the union, and never asked a man whether or not he belonged to a union. As I have already said, the union had nothing whatever to do with our leaving the city. The only way in which the recent strike could brought into the matter would be on the presumption that it probably induced Aylmer to make us an offer.'

PINOS FOUGHT DESPERATELY

Left 50 Dead in the Tranches-Large Tract of Country Swept Clean of Insurgents.

Manila, June 10-4:30 p.m.-At daybreak today a force of 4,500 men, under Generals Wheaton, Lawton and Ovenshine, advanced from San Pedro Macati, sweeping the country between the Bay of Manila and Bay Lake, south of Manila. By noon the country had been cleared almost to Paranaque. The Americans lost 2 officers killed and 21 soldiers wounded. The rebels resisted desperately at the stronger of their positions, and left 50 dead in the trenches. Many more, wounded, were left behind by the rebels in their retreat.

The heat during the day was overpowering, and there were many pros-trations of American solders from that cause. Chicago, June 10 .- Capt. P. H. Rom-

THE TORONTO CONFERENCE. Owen Sound, June 10 .- At the morning session of the Toronto Conference the twentieth century fund was under debate. Dr. Potts addressed the conference on the subject, and urged the pastors vigorously to assist in the movement, which will be inaugurated in October next. It was decided that the committee to apportion missionary grants meet in the fall. A re solution to assist Wyevale out of the missionary fund was defeated.

Michigan's Wheat Crop One of the Poorest on Record.

Lansing, Mich., June 10 .- The Michigan crop report for June, issued by the secretary of state, is a discouraging document so far as the prospects for wheat are concerned. "During the past month," says the report, "the condition of wheat has continued to "the decline until, at the present time, we have one of the poorest crops of wheat known in the history of Michigan. The extreme cold of mid-winter reduced it materially in vitality, the exceedingly warm and dry days in April were not beneficial; and lastly, the Hessian fly has infested such great numbers that the crop is practically ruined.'

THE SOLDIERS

The Camp on Carling's Heights Is Over.

Successful March-Past by All the Troops in the Division.

Thousands of Citizens Witness the Review - Major-General Hutton's Praises for the Men-The Last Night in Camp.

The volunteers, who have been in training on Carling's Heights for the past two weeks, have left for their respective homes throughout Western Ontario. From 7 o'clock to about 9 there was a steady outpour of troops to the G. T. R., C. P. R. and M. C. R. trains. Not only by their bronzed, sun-burned faces did the men show the effect of the sojourn on the heights. the practiced eye of the soldier, the improved bearing of the "rookies" was noticeable in every move. The camp was productive of much good. For the first time Canadian troops were brought together and organized into brigades and divisions, with a staff formed from officers of the Canadian militia, and in several respects this was calculated to inspire increased zeal and enthusiasm among the

The spectacular features of the recent camp made it more popular with the citizens also. Any who were for-tunate enough to witness the review yesterday afternoon or sham battle or tattoo will hold the camp of 1899 in pleasant remembrance for a long time. The scene on the heights vesterday afternoon was a grand one. When Major-General Hutton conducted the march past and review at 4 o'clock. The troops made a splendid showing, and won high praise from the majorgeneral. Five or six thousand citizens, many in carriages, were lined along the brow of the hill to the south of the square in front of the tents, and from this vantage every movement of the several battalions of infantry and the First Hussars could be easily seen. The divisional staff included Major-General Hutton. G.O.C.; Col. Holmes, D.O.C.; Col. Gordon, in command of the First Infantry Brigade; Col. Buchan, in command of the Second Brigade, and Capt. C. F. Winters, of the Governor General's Foot Guards.

of the Governor General's D.A.A.G., of the Second Brigade—all men who have been in active service. During the march past the staff was stationed to the south of the paradeground. The officers, in their splendid uniforms, formed a striking group, and their superintendence of the movements of the troops was closely followed by the spectators. The infantry was first drawn up in brigades in line of quarter column, the cavalry preceding the first brigade in column of squadrons, and after inspection all marched past in column of double companies. At the center of the parade-ground was a brigade band, which played the regi-mental march of each battalion as it passed the major-general. Following the march past the cavalry returned in double-quick, and the infantry in mass subsequently advancing in review order and forming up in a square, where they were addressed by the majorgeneral.

With reference to the inspection re view, the major-general made the following observations: "The troops were remarkably steady under arms, and the narching, all considered, was well done. Numerous mistakes were made, due to inexperience in ceremonial parades, which require not only more experience on the part of staff officers managing the same, but considerable practice of the troops themselves. These opportunities can hardly be given in so short a training as twelve days. The determination of troops to acquit themselves well in the march past is, as a rule, a sure means of success. In this instance success may be considered directly attributable to this. The cadence of both brigades was too hurried, in one 124 and in the other 128 to the minute, in place of the regulation 120. A sufficient interval was not allowed in some instances between battalions. The cavalry, both at a walk and a trot, acquitted thmselves remarkably well. The review generally may be considered to have been successful, and with additional opportunities for gaining experience on the part of the staff officers and other senior officers, would have been very successful." PROGRESS APPRECIATED

Last night orders from headquarters read: "The major-general commanding desires to convey his congratulations to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the First Huzzars and the First Infantry Division upon the success of the year's training. It is, so far as the major-general is aware, the first occasion that Canadian troops have been brought together and organized into brigades and divisions, with a staff in accordance with modern regulations, formed from officers of the Canadian militia. Many changes and reforms have been initiated, both in drill, interior economy and in discipline. The major-general commanding desires to express his warm appreciation at the excellent spirt shown by the troops generally in carrying out the changes necessary to the increased efficiency of the militia of Canada, and for the zeal and en-thusiasm generally shown in the performance of duty. Many errors and mistakes have been made, and there are innumerable matters which require amendment and improvement be-fore the militia of Canada can be considered to hold the high place among the forces of the empire which it is the earnest determination of all concerned to insure. The major-general commanding feels confident that next year will bring about the improvement in administration, organization, discip-lipe and drill which all ardent Canadian soldiers are determined to in-THE LAST NIGHT. "camaraderie" of camp life is never more manifest than on the last night. Fun and good-fellowship are the order for the occasion. This is traditional. And last night the tradition was well borne out. Cooks' parades, in which costumes, the product of which may not properly be called a fine art, yet certainly reveal wonderful inventive genius, are worn, by the frolicsome Tommies, began early and continued late. Pranks of all sorts were played by the men on their chums, the wit and the story-teller reigned supreme. Goodfellowship was the distinctive characteristic of the last few hours in camp. There was little sleep to be had in any of the tents until after midnight.

NOTES. General Hutton left last night for Niagara-on-the-Lake. Col. Gordon will return to Montreal, and Col. Buchan and Capt. Macdonnell will go to Niagara.

The "ghost" walked last night, but only the commanding officers were waited upon. Some of the companies will not be paid off until they reach this afternoon, and also met in the evening. The house of refuge committee's first report showed the institution to be well kept. The appointment of Mrs. A. E. Hodgins as assistant matron was confirmed, and her resignation, to take place in July, was accepted. The warden, inspector and keeper were empowered to fill the vacancy. Seventyfive dollars was ordered paid to Ekfrid, re Catharine McLean. Report was adopted.

The jail committee reported that the jail had been found, neat, clean and well kept. No action was recommended relative to the sheriff's request for uniforms for court constables. Repairs were recommended for the county registry and county buildings. In their second report, the finance committee recommended that the rate of taxation on Middlesex proper be 9 1-7 mills, producing $26,862 92, for the purpose of paying the debenture interest and providing the sinking fund. Also that a rate of .95 of a mill be levied on the whole of Middlesex, producing $32,410 57, to meet the current expenses. It was also recommended by the finance committee that a sub-committee be appointed to pay over to the city $15,000, when they secured proper certificates that the Victoria Hospital was furnished. Agreed.

On motion of Messrs. Hodgins and Elson the council decided to petition minister of railways for assistance for the construction of the London and Lake Huron Railway, as "we believe the construction and operation of such a road would be of great advantage to this county."

Mr. E. W. Scatcherd, of Lucan, askthe council to recommend to the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario his appointment as police magistrate for the townships of London, Biddulph and Nissouri and the villages therein situated, without salary or allowances for traveling expenses. Referred to a special committee. Mr. A. McGugan, of Caradoc, was recommended as county student of the A. C. for the term beginning Octo-

The county council resumed session HUGE CONSOLIDATION

Adjourned.

The Forepaugh-Sells Show the Greatest Combination of the Age.

Quite the biggest thing so far attempted in the circus line in this country is the consolidation of the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers shows. Other "combined" shows have been announced before with a great flourish of trumpets, but such combinations have generally turned out to be chiefly on paper. But it seems this consolidation is just what is claimed for it; that it is a genuine consolidation of the two greatest shows in the country. They opened this season at the Madison Square Garden, in New York city, and the papers there all said that it was the biggest and best thing in the circus line ever seen in the metropolis. This statement is all the stronger when it is remembered that New York is peculiarly loyal to its idols, and for many years the Barnum & Bailey show had a monopoly of that city. It is in London now, and has become a fixed English corporation. Mr. Bailey is still the director and control-ler of the Adam Forepaugh show, and the consolidation was brought about by him to control absolutely the circus business in the cities of the country. To do this the consolidation has made show of such commanding size and merit that no other concern can possibly hope to compete with it for pat-ronage in the large cities. As the country has become so large that there are enough cities to occupy the time of one great show, the ordinary shows of inferior size and merit will be permitted to have the smaller cities and towns to themselves. So the consolidation cannot be considered as a trust, even if it is a monopoly in the sense of supplying the big cities with circus entertainment. The standing of this city in the estimation of the managers of the consolidation is shown by the fact that the big arenic aggregation will exhibit here in all its vast entirety on Thursday, June 29.
