PETERSON TAKEN OUT.

About 8 o'clock, just after the little street. Polloch child had been taken from the ruins, the workers succeeded in getting out Ed Peterson, a man about 85 years of age. Peterson is a farmer from near St. Johns, and at the moment of the catastrophe was in the store of Hamilton, Long & Co., making a purchase. In the fall of the ceiling he was pinned to the floor beneath a mass of wreckage and though the rescuers could hear his calls, it was some time ere they were able to reach him, or to remove the timbers which pinned him down.

The ceiling which fell on Peterson was, however, the ultimate means of saving his life, for it held the greater mass off his body, and so protected him from further injjury. As Peterson was being carried out he said: "Thank God, I'm all right." His escape was nothing short of miracu-

A CLOSE CALL.

Fred Weise, of Wellington street, and an employe of W. J. Reid & Co., had a very close call from death, and he deems his escape miraculous. He was working on the second floor of the Reid establishment, when the accident occurred, and he and his fellowworkers were warned by the approaching disaster by a large crack, which appeared in the outer wall of the building. Everybody ran upon beeing this, and all escaped safely, with the exception of Weise and a fellow-workman named Loney, whose story will be found in another column. A huge wooden beam pinioned Weise to the floor, and he was only released after much arduous labor on the part of the rescuing crew. SNATCHED FROM DEATH.

One gang was at work under the adjoining building, down in the cellar, cutting, hacking and sawing with all the strength they had, to reach some poor unfortunates who were known to have been buried in the ruins. In many cases the victims of the wreck were brought out barely alive, crushed, mangled and bleeding, and their lives saved through the heroic efforts of their rescuers, who snatched them from the jaws of a terrible death just in the nick of time.

In other cases the rescuers, after almost superhuman efforts, reached the victims just a little too late. After suffering what must have been agonzing torture, in many cases, the poor unfortunates died just as help and rescue were at hand. The awful susoense was among the worst of the tortures which those pinned under the ruins had to suffer.

The doctors in attendance did splendid work, considering the handicaps. Among the most energetic of the medical men at the scene of the wreck was he used to good purpose. A great feast is held and a programme arranged. Usually the auction of Indian girls is the first feature of the programme. Girls from 9 to 15 are sold to the highest bidder. They bring from $500 to $2,000, and this money is used to buy blankets to give away or potlach. The authorities have been notified repeatedly that the sales of the Indian girls takes place, but they are not disposed to interfere, as the Indians have been accustomed to auction their young girls from ancient times. The only time any comment was caused out of the ordinary was when white girls were sold to white loggers. The investigation which followed came to nothing beyond disclosing the fact that the girls, though white, were half-breeds, and that they were quite willing to be sold. The first item in the programme over some sub-chief collects his tribe around him and gives away in blankets all he has earned during the fishing season. The biggest chiefs then start giving blankets, and the rivalry between chiefs sometimes ends in complet ebeggary with both. It is all a question of honor and dignity. With the Siwash Indians, a rich chief is of no account, if he hoards his riches beyond a year. He must raise money by hook or crook, and the more he raises the greater he is, but only if he gives it all away at the first potlach of his people. Thus it would appear that the white man and the Indian are entirely at variance in such

THE CATASTROPHE.

Mingled with the sympathy that goes out to the bereaved and afflicted, is a feeling of exasperation that yes terday's catastrophe was not the work may be difficult to fix or apportion responsibility, and it is well to wait for an official investigation before trying to do so. In most other cities of London's size there are stringent building regulations, and officials whose sole duty is to enforce them. It will be a matter for scathing comment elsewhere that a community of 50,000 should be without a building inspector. It is to be hoped the inquiry will be thorough and searching, and that the result will miminize the risk of further calamities of the same nature. London has acquired an unfortunate reputation in this respect.

For the relatives of the victims, needless to say, there will be tender compassion. For those who have suffered the destruction of their property through no fault of their own, and in some cases may have been ruined, there will be general sympathy, the more so because such losses cannot be covered by insurance, and there may be little or no redress. The gallant firemen and policemen and volunteer rescuers have their reward in the admiration and gratitude of their fellow-

THE "UNWRITTEN LAW" AGAIN..

The frank avowal of the "unwritten law" defense in a recent murder trial at La Plata, Ind., and its immediate acceptance by the jury, prompts some of the American newspapers to ask whether it would not be wiser to secure the formal writing on the statute covers the same ground, and defines the rights of the private avenger of family honor. In this particular case there was an entire absence of the cusomary claim of incantly. There was simply a plain admission of the mother and brother of a betrayed girl that because of the betrayal and refusal to atone by marriage they killed the betrayer. There can be no doubt such a story, told with becoming pathos, makes a strong appeal for sympathy, and it has been found that in the Southern States, at least, it is practically impossible, in such a case, to secure a jury that will find a conviction for murder. That there shall be no private revenge of individual revenge is a great principle of civilized law, as administered in British and Canadian courts. Such, also, is se intent of the law in the various Mates of the Union, but in this case, as in more than one before it, justice has given way to sympathy, for it was clearly one of private and personal vengeance, and was no more excusable than any one of the numerous lynchings so comomn in the south. So long as there remains a law outside of the statute books, recognized by the community and enforced and applied as jealousy, as any portion of the writcode, there will always be danger of lynchings and avengings such as this. The purpose of the law, and the law courts, is to apply punishment for Injuries, and the penalties to prevent repetition. If the penalties are not sufficiently severe, the civilized way is to amend and made adequate the law. But to admit the principle that any injury, however extreme, can qualify a person or persons to adjudge and inflict the penalty of killing, would be to completely shatter the system of government by law. WOMEN AS PHILANTHROPISTS.

An interesting feature of the gifts to philanthropic objects in the United this year is the part taken by The present will certainly be year for beneficence, the total first half of it being far in Of the total sum contributed ince Jan. 1, 1907, women have given no less than $23,062,400. It is not surprising to find that nearly two-thirds of their total gifts, or $15,589,640, has been for charitable objects. In this large amount is not included small gifts that it is impossible to trace, nor the goodly amounts raised at bazars, charity balls, fairs and suchlike entertainments, promoted and conducted by women. It represents straight donations of large sums of money. Next in order comes education, which benefits to the extent of $4,605,267, colleges receiving the largest share. Detroit Girl Employs Her Own Crew and Makes Good Living.

Detroit, July 16.—Detroit's girl diver, Miss Florence Baker, is regarded as a stop trying to get rid of every tiny protege by all the sailors of the Great Lakes. She is twenty-one years of age, and has laid up a comfortable bank account by following her hazardous calling. Her first professional work was when she raised $20,000 worth of copper from the ship W. H. Stevens, which sank in eighty feet of water in Lake Erie several years ago.

Miss Baker's father, Capt. H. W. Baker, was a captain of divers, and from the first time she was allowed to go lown to the river alone, she used to watch her father's wrecking ship leave the dock and long to go with him. The ambition to become a diver matured in her as she grew older, and she deplored the fate which had condemned her to be a girl.

At last her desire to become a diver evercame the objections of her friends but she has saved so much money in the and she began making wrecking trips with her father, and soon became his inseparable companion. She made a study of every part of the machinery connected in any way with diving, and in time learned to command the wrecking boat with great skill and assur-

Her First Descent. Her first descent was in Lake Huron,

where a big wooden barge had gone down, and before the wrecking steamer had reached the spot where the barge had sunk, the owner spoke to Miss Baker, regretting the loss of a diamond ring which was in the cabin. Miss Baker immediately offered to recover it for him, as she had been planning for some time to make her first descent upon the first favorable opportunity. When everything was made ready for her to descend, her own father manned the compressed air apparatus, which meant life or death to her, as she calmly walked down the ship's ladder, and, without a moment's hesitation, disappeared under the water

In describing the sensations of the nitial trip, she said that the feeling at the outset was as if some great creature with a thousand arms was pressing her gently, but firmly on all sides and as if in a few minutes her breath would be cut off entirely, but she was far from frightened, and continued her descent until the shadow of the sunken barge loomed up before her. She had a strange feeling of buoyancy, and the twenty pounds of lead attached to her feet seemed no heavier than leather soles as she followed her companion to the walls of the sunken ship, and with his aid climbed over them.

Undaunted by Pain.

At this point she experienced sever pains in her head, and felt as if her nose were going to bleed, but, still undaunted, she reached the cabin of the barge, where she entered, and with the aid of the electric light at her belt. sought out the corner of the cabin, which contained a small stand, upon which was the tlny box containing the much-desired diamond ring. In her haste to reach it she stumbled set and fell, and, for the moment was con sumed by a terrible fear as the pres-sure of the water, together with breathing the compressed air, had now become almost overpowering; but she quickly gained her self-control, and, with the box in her hand, returned to the deck of the wrecker

As a reward for this exploit Miss Baker was presented with the diamond ring she had recovered, and it is now in her possession.

The ring marked the beginning of her fortune, as she had proved that she could live under the water, and to be able to do this means that a person is worth anywhere from $50 to $200 a day to a wrecking company. As ninety-nine out of every 100 men who descend into the waters of the lakes will in a few minutes begin to suffer from bleeding at the nose, head-splitting pains, and suffocation, that is why all good divers from one end of the Great Lakes to the other may be counted on one's fingers and toes.

Miss Baker now began following up her adventure with practical work, and she early discovered the fact that she was fitted for a captain of divers, instead of a diver alone, as the locating of the lost copper ship, which had been searched for for years, has proven.

WRINKLES ARE HERE AGAIN

REACTION AGAINST THE FACE WITHOUT EXPRESSION.

Women Have Discovered That Lines Can Give Character to the Face, and That Worry About Wrinkles Reduces Natural Charm.

New York Sun: Wrinkles are in fashion again; or, to be more accurate, the over-massaged, pudgy, expressionless face is losing favor. The woman who was afraid to indulge a hearty laugh for fear of increasing the etchings at the corners of her eyes need be anxious no longer.

The following conversation took place the other day at a Fifth avenue photographer's. A woman with the bright, animated look of a wide-awake girl, but with lines in her face which showed she was 30 or more, came in briskly, carrying a large envelope. In the envelope were proofs sent for her approval.

"These proofs do not look natural." she began, as the photographer advanced with a confident air. "You have taken out every wrinkle." The photographer looked as

"Madam," said he, in the soothing an ordinary walking stick, colored dark to have wrinkles left in." light pale green underneath, with a beauthat line between my eyebrows and I tiful orange band at the back of the head. want it left there." was the laughing

The expression on the man's face changed from astonishment to satisfaction. He is an artist. He looked from the proofs to the original and back again before answering. ou are perfectly right, madam

With the line your face is distinctive, expressive; without the line it is comparatively inexpressive and far less interesting." "Now!" exclaimed in triumph the woman to a friend who accompanied her and who had a middle-aged figure and an immovable, wrinkleless face. The friend smiled skeptically. "Before long," the other continued, line in their faces. They are stopping "It isn't that a smooth face makes a woman uninteresting, supposing it is natural to her to have a smooth face, but that the trying to run out every wrinkle or to keep a wrinkle from coming prevents a woman from being her natural self, and from giving her best time and thought to things which will make her interesting or keep her

"As a woman grows older naturally society expects more from her than from a schoolgirl. The bovine type of woman is never very thrilling even if her face is perfectly smooth. The most sought after women I know are not the women with the smoothest com-

"A case in point is a New York woman who is married to a man at least ten years her junior. Her face has no end of small lines in it. They were there before the era of facial massage set in and she lets them stay there. "Evidently she prefers to spend her time in other ways than in smoothing out wrinkles, knowing she has no need to return to her girlhood complexion; for she is one of the most attractive and popular women in society. In vivacity and youthfulness of expres sion she is one of the youngest women know, and that she feels as young as she looks is evident. "There is no make-believe about it. Were she to begin worrying about every wrinkle and to spend hours trying to smooth it out very soon she would lose her greatest charm. "Taking good care of the skin is one thing and striving night and day to keep the face as smooth as a baby's is quite another. The latter can't be done without sacrificing other things, which in the long run are far more important to a woman who cares to thought interesting."

"Everything you say is absolutely true," the photographer rejoined. "A Government official came in here the other day to look over photographs and arrange for a sitting. 'Mind,' he cautioned me after the posing was over, 'that you don't send me proofs which give me the face of a scho I want these photographs to make me look as I am-a man of 60 and not an undergraduate.'

"I sent him the proofs with little or no retouching and he gave me a large order for photographs to be made from

"Naturally few women feel that way, and for the last five years it has worried me a good deal to be obliged to spoil many a good picture by rubbing out every line which gave character to the face. I am more than pleased to hear that a reaction has set in. I hope it will set in fast. "As for you, madam, I am delighted to be able to tear up these proofs and print others which will do you greater

He does absolutely nothing and does it with such a masterly inactivity as to rouse one almost to enthusiasm at the idea of how successfully this proud prince manages to while away his golden days.

Prince Prosper in Fairvland hadn't more delightful cycle of years than his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. I will give you a brief, authentic sketch of the day's doings at Mariborough House. Those of you who hug the ancient idea that princes get up in the morning to the fanfare of trumpets, deck themselves out in royal obes and pass down a gallery lined with bowing and obsequious flunkeys will be disappointed at this recital of the humdrum existence of an apparently middle class suburban home.

CHAPTER XXIV.

It was nearly an hour later before Geoffrey left the cottage. He got up looking oddly gray and old in the light of the lamp that burned on the round center table, and held out his hand to Bessie.

"I must go out and think," he said."I can't see my way-I don't know what to do. Does North know anything of

"Nothin'," said Bessie. "He got the verdict at the inquest, but he believed her guilty - I think he believes her guilty still-and I've been afraid almost to tell him what I was doin' in case he should go against me. But he's got a soft heart, 'as the doctor, and he'd cut off his hand afore he'd do and send him to you tomorrow."

Geoffrey looked round dully. The little familiar room, clean and shining as Bessie watched him as the fog swalit had been ever since he knew it first lowed him up, and stood long after such long years ago, looked strange the sound of his footsteps had died and unreal. He turned abruptly and strode down the little path and out of the gate crouching beneath the window rose, stiffly and slowly, and looked around as if the fog that was swooping down upon the Oldcastle streets was seizing and gripping and stifling him.

He stood for some time as if he had no strength or will to move his limbs. Then a sound in the cottage seemed to rouse him. He turned slowly and stumbled blindly over Davy Merrill's wanted to be out now. Perhaps in the neat garden, dragged open the little open air he could think. PRISON LABOR INOUIRY

Committee of M. P.'s Asked to Investigate Conditions.

Toronto, July 16. - No commission will be issued for the parliamentary inquiry into prison labor conditions. Hon. Mr. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, who has returned to th city, makes this declaration: "What has been done" he said, "is that the Government has asked Messrs his set gray face and wild eyes, and J. P. Downey, South Wellington, F. & Macdiarmid, West Elgin, Geo. Pattison, Waterloo, and J. R. Dargavel, Leeds, to give the matter special attention between now and the meeting of the House. The Government has asked that they be considered a committee for that purpose, the idea being to divide the work up and visit, as far as we can, in groups of two at least. the different places that would be of benefit and interest in framing legis-

ALIENATION OF AFFECTION.

Toronto, July 16.-John Henry, of Glen William, Peel County, is suing Joseph Mothersell, of Alva, for $20,000, for alleged alienation of his wife's affections. Both men are well-to-do farmers, married, with grown-up families. Three weeks ago Henry, returning home unexpectedly, found Mothersell in his house. He chased the latter across several fields into a neighboring farmhouse, where Mothersell took refuge. Henry then entered an action for damages.

A Steady Trade

is most important to every baker. A business in which the receipts and profits vary every week, while the expenses remain the same, is a source of great anxiety to any business man.

No baker can hope for a steady and increasing business unless the quality of his bread is uniformly superior to that of his competitors. He can have no more valuable asset than the reputation that his bread is the "best in town." Any baker can win this reputation for his bread by using only "FIVE ROSES" and "HARVEST QUEEN" FLOURS.

These flours are made from the very highest grade wheat obtainable and are superior to ordinary bakers' patents in every way. They will not lose, but make, trade for any baker who uses them, as they make the very sweetest, most wholesome and most nutritious bread. Regular and ever increasing custom can be obtained by any baker who lets his customers know that he uses "FIVE ROSES" and "HARVEST QUEEN" only.

Why has it lived and thrived and done its glorious work for a quarter of a Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medi-cine has even approached its success is plainly and positively because there is no other medicine in the world so good or women's ills.

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of womankind is not because is a stimulant-not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever iscovered to act directly upon the female system, positively curing disease and displacements and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is lue. If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly pres-cribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it will effect & cure.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, bloating (or flatulence), falling, inflammation, ulceration, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration, or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking Lydia E. CITY ENGINEER'S VIEW.

Thinks Cutting Out of Windows Weakened the Wall.

City Engineer Graydon prophesied he disaster. Only a few days ago he had occasion to visit the building, as a frame elevator was being put in. He ordered this to be bricked over, and was returning through the lane when he noticed that six windows had been cut out of the wall on the east side. "I told the brick contractor," he said this morning, "that the wall would collapse if he didn't put steel girders in those windows. He said he would speak to someone about it. I have no doubt that this wall went first and smashed through into Brewster's.' William G. Murray, the architect, that they should not have materially weakened the building, "We removed a 30-foot wall," he said, "but we replaced it with five iron pillars five inches in diameter, and three-quarters of an inch thick. We used 15-inch eye beams. Neither this nor the cutting out of the windows should have caused a collapse. Body Taken From the Ruins About 8 o'Clock, but Life Was Extinct. Fourteen-year-old Willie Tambling was uncovered at about 8:30 o'clock. The poor little fellow was dead, however, having evidently been killed when the fall first came. He was son of Mr. Wm. E. Tambling, carpenter, 351 Oxford street.

The lad had been attending the Collegiate here, and was getting along finely. Last Thursday he secured a position with Mr. Brewster for the holidays, and was looking forward to drawing his wages on Thursday. He was engaged at his work when the fall came

Mrs. Tamblyn heard of the accident shortly after it occurred, and at once hurried to the scene to see if her boy were safe. She was assured by those around that he was, and went away contented. The family did not know of the lad's death until about 12 o'clock and Mrs. Tamblyn, who had been at the hospital, was not told till some

Shortly afterward the work of rescue began in an organized manner. It was learned that the first floor of Hamilton, Long & Co. had given way with the weight of material, and in falling to the cellar had formed a sort of V-shaped tunnel. Near the outer end of this tunnel lay Percy Robinson, so pinioned that he could not move, while at the far end, pinioned by the feet and legs, lay the Clugstor boy. Just above the latter, on the upper side of the flooring, lay a body which was so terribly mutilated that it was unrecognizable. The rescuing party worked with might and main to rescue Robinson and Clugston, but it was several hours before the first. named was taken out, and 11 o'clock before the Clugston boy was rescued.

The work of rescue was carried on under the greatest of difficulty. The little tunnel formed by the floor was obstructed by debris of every description, and the rescuing party were obliged to work on their hands and

Eight Rinks Left After This Morning—Four of Them Local.

The Labatt trophy contest is narrowing down, just eight rinks being left after this morning's play. Several well-known rinks went down, including that champion hard-luck skip, Dick Gosnell, of Blenheim. Tom Mc-Curdy's Stratford rink, last year's runners-up, also went down to Dr. Burritt's good Mitchell rink. Of the eight rinks left, four are London rinks, and it begins to look as if one or more will be in the finals. None of them has a cinch just now, as Burritt's rink is going strong, and will take a lot to beat. The teams will play off this afternoon and some rare bowling will be seen. There were some fine games this morning. Gosnell and Bert Bingham

(Aylmer) had a bang-up contest, one knees. For some time after the work of the nerve-racking variety. Neither began the place below was filled with could get a running start on the other gases, and that, coupled with the constant they see-sawed from start to stantly rising dust, made breathing a finish. Bingham made a good finish and largely responsible for his great victory over Tom McCurdy. The Strat-

LEARNING TO SWIM.

Never waste time at first in attempting to learn to swim by means of the "breast stroke," the "side stroke," or any other stroke. Simply wade out to where the water comes to your shoulders, lean forward, with arms extended, and with one toe on the bottom; then suddenly throwing back both feet, splash and kick as ous performance a few times you will feel momentary sense of buoyancy beneath you; and as your efforts are continued, making no attempt to propel yourself, forward, but simply to keep your nose above water, you will gradually come to the perception that Old Neptune will hold you up with surprisingly little effort on your part. And once that confidence gained, it is a prejudice. So the only way out of it simple matter to learn the more intricate and showy strokes .-- The Out-
