Mr. Ballantyne said that the agreement was clear, and the naval estimates could be completed in a few minutes. Unfortunately, Mr. Ballantyne added, the leader of the Opposition had lost his temper and left the House in a huff. Some Opposition members protested indignantly. P. F. Company Cuts Off All Passes to P. U. Employees and Developments Are Expected Shortly—Two Letters Are Written, Protesting Action.

Unexpected developments in the street railway situation have resulted from the action of the railway board in refusing free tickets to any persons except those specified in bylaw 916. Among those affected by this order are the employees of the public utilities, who have occasion to use the cars considerably in traveling to Springbank, Because the street railway company is given the privilege of entering Springbank Park without making any payment to the city in return, the members of the commission think that their employees should at least be allowed free transportation. The cost of this is more than outweighed by the discontinuance of free transportation. The other points out that in entering Springbank Park the company is operating on private property and that it has no agreement which permits it to do this.

Although the letter gives no intimation of further action, it is probable that the commission will take further steps unless the order is rescaled. They might go to the extent of barring the cars from the park.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 29.—The slate submitted to the Northern Baptist con-vention by the nominating committee and headed by Ernest I. Tustin of and headed by Ernest I. Tustin of Philadelphia, was elected, the tellers reported at today's session. Rev. J. W. Brougher of Los Angeles was elected as one of the thirteen members of the executive committee.

Opposition to Mr. Brougher developed opecause of his attitude on the question of marriages and divorce. He performed the marriage ceremony for Dougla and o the marriage ceremony for Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, and on account of this act and subsequent utaccount of this act and subsequent deterances on the subject and certain element among the delegates sought to replace him on the committee slate by nominating the Rev. James A. Francis also of Los Angeles.

The convention ended today.

Jacob and Harry Wilmer, two East London merchants, appeared in police court this morning, charged with receiving stolen goods, and on motion of W. R. Meredith, their counsel, the case was adjourned one week. The accused, who are brothers, are alleged to have purchased 40 pieces of slik valued at $1,200, which were stolen from the Mihell & Gill department store at Strathroy by two youths now serving prison sentences for the crime. On information furnished by them local detectives arrested the Wilmer brothers last week, since which time they have been out on bail of $4,000 each.

John and Elizabeth Scheeler of Strathroy to though Elliot Traver have issued a writ in the supreme court against the town of Strathroy for $3,500 damages for personal injuries sustained by Elizabeth Scheeler while engaged at work in the service of the defendants or servants, and for $500 on behalf of John Scheeler for loss of comfort and services of Elizabeth Scheeler. Expenses incurred are also claimed in the writ.

FAINT AND DIZZY SPELLS WEAKNESS AND SHORTNESS OF BREATH

You can generally tell when the heart is affected by the faint and dizzy mothering sensations, weak, sinking, all-gone feeling, choking sensation, etc.

Many men and women become rundown and worn out when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first sign of heart weakness.

No remedy will do so much to make the heart regain strength and vigor. Liberals and Farmers Hold a regulate its beat and restore it to a healthy and normal condition as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. C. A. S. Drake, Paris, Ont. writes: "I have used on towards the second box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and find they have done me nerve Pills and find they have done me good. I had those fainting, dizzy spells, once in a while, and also weakness and shortness of breath, and would become so choked up at times I could hardly sleep without sitting up in bed. When walking too fast I would have to stop and try to catch my breath. I feel a lot better since I have used your pills and know that they have helped me wonderfully as I have improved very much."

Spain was not free from trouble despite her attitude on the war, indeed that very attitude tended to increase her difficulties, but during the war period and since then there have been some remarkable politiin secret ways and in a manner that is wholly extra-legal.

This movement dates back to 1917, when there was every prospect of a republican revolution, and when Alfonso is reported to have gone aboard the royal yacht, which had steam up, ready to leave at a moment's notice for England. It was in the midst of this general revolutionary movement that the officers' "tuntas de defensa" were formed, in organization as in their tactics not unlike the labor syndicates of Catalonia. Their object was to get rid of the central bureaucracy that kept all the court posts about Madrid for its friends and banished the mass of army officers to dull routine duty in Africa, the islands and the small garrison towns of the country. The "juntas" sent representatives to meet with other revolutionary bodies and it was understood that at the proper time they would depose their was no secrecy whatever about the revolutionary plans, everyone knew about them from good judge. Alfonso to the street beggars. From some source close to the throne steps were cleverly taken that brought on prematurely the strikes that were to be a prelude for the revolution. The result was that the lower classes were weakened and the middle classes alarmed. Alfonso surrendered to the military, who got what a they wanted out of it, and then forgot all about the revolution in which they were to participate. When the outbreak came the army did not move, but the authorities jailed the leaders, suppressed some radical newspapers and snuffed out the disturbance. The only people who gained everything they were after. The renot with the king nor with the ministry, nor yet with Parliament, but with the unions of army officers. . . Spain is thus the best example of middle-class sovietism."

Today, according to Dr. Livingston, Spain is in a fairly quiet state, since the military "juntas" are not inclined to show their strength more often than is necessary, and they keep in the background. Two disquieting facts, however, face their leaders. One of these is that their strength rests on the presupposition that the rank and file of the army will obey orders. something that is none too certain. The other is the possibility of another revolutionary movement with which they would have to take sides or openly oppose. In the parliamentary debates earlier in the year Mr. La Cierva, Conservative leader, was in favor of recognizing the control of the military, putting a military government behind the employers and removing the in ustrial anarchy by force. The Reformers and Republicans, on the other hand, prothe army, to enforce the law against both syndicalists and employers, while legalizing syndicalist organization and compelling adjustments of labor disputes. The issue between these two elements is still unsettled.

RUSSIA'S ARMY OF INDUSTRY. [By Mrs. George Hambleton, M.A., Late Fellow of the Department of Political Economy, University of Toronto.1

The first chaos in Russian industry, ensuing upon unlimited control by the workers, was brought to sharp close by nationalization. Nationalization has been in force in Russia just two years today. to seek bread, and also because they are busy with It has at times, during that period, been merely a cloak for autocratic, perhaps ruthless, control by are the words of an official report. the central government, whose instruments were now the revolutionary tribunal, now the council of national defence. It would appear that those more violent stages affecting the manufacturing industries are now passed or passing. Unskilled work, such as wood-cutting, certain repairing of railroads and gained anything were the military, and they highways, may be carried out by mobilization of labor. That method, however, is too rough and too unwieldy to apply generally to skilled trades or to sult is that "the seat of ultimate authority rests manufacturing industries. For these there now emerges a more permanent organization. How Trade Is Arranged.

On the one hand, huge trusts are evolved; or the other, great national unions of workersindustrial unions. The trust directs, the union The foreign trader, in doing business in Russia, will have to deal, not as he may have feared or hoped, with workmen's committees, but with a small board of directors, usually five, controlling the trust of which they are the head, and controlling it at least as thoroughly as boards of directors ontrol the great American trusts, or once controlled the government - protected cartels of Imperial

This is an unexpected outcome of communistic heories. Its development is as eventful as some of fragments. But the cold evidence of Russian official papers is all that is here dealt with.

The hierarchy of Russian industry is directed at present by three men: Krassin, Rykov and Milioutin. They form the executive of that extremely powerful body, the Supreme Council of Publi Creation of the council at the end of 1917 passed almost unnoticed during the din of Continually it has increased in power. Its his statement. official aim is to control the economic activity of the nation, the financial resources of the govern-ment, and socialize the whole of Russian production and distribution under soviet control. The council posed to assert parliamentary authority over follows three great lines of authority: the supervision of all government budgets, the financial control of industry through its own budget, and the direct control of industry. It attempted an almost impossible program—and the whip of confiscation which it held in its hand, although powerful enough to drive out the private owner, was often impe to spur the individual worker or the mass of work ers. Extensive as was its power, its machinery broke down several times in the quagmire of the natural laziness of masses of workers and in the conditions brought about by lack of food, fuel and

This rapid growth in the power of the executive of the Supreme Council of Public Economy marks the third stage of nationalization. The transitio control of industry to strongly centralized bureaucratic control has been brought about by succeeding crises, the result of falling production.

The final stage began with the soviet revolution. After six months trial it was brought to an end by workers themselves. The workmen's councils of the factories met with the Moscow soviet and agreed o place all the factories and manufacturing facilities at the disposal of the central government and under its control. They declared, in session, that the workers would "augment production, end disorganization." and that "all stoppages of work or strikes will be treason to the proletarian with that decree the technical staffs, which had in many cases been driven out, were induced to come back, and the soviet government forsook the first plank in its platform of proletarian economies. It promised and paid higher salaries to the technical experts and directors than to the common workers.

Evidence of falling production had been too strong even for the most revolutionary. A few instances will suffice. They are taken from statis-tics collected by the commissariat of labor in

The total number of employees in industry in and about Petrograd on January 1, 1917, was about 450,000. The survey made by the Russian commissariat of labor covered about 350,000. Of these there remained in the neighborhood of Petrograd on July 1, 1918, only about 100,000. By October, of the 670 industrial enterprises existing in Petrograd in 1917, over a third had shut down. Among indus tries, the metal industry suffered worst. Decline in the production of necessities of life was even more serious. Butter production was one-third in 1918 of what it was in 1917. The production of paper in Petrograd fell from 40,000,000 pounds in 1917 to one-fifth of that amount in 1918. Unemployment was rampant. Of the 240,000 metal workers employed in Petrograd in 1917, only 40,000 remained by October of the following year.

Falling Productivity. The soviet inquiry did not stop at revealing the abyss into which Russian industries had fallen. Merciless light was let in upon that other factor which, coupled with war and general want, was productivity of the worker. The worker was working less; the peasant planting less. Two textile factories illustrate. They were not lacking in raw material and fuel. The number of Rivers where salmon leap! workers in the two factories had increased from Windmills turning their slow square 2,500 to 2,700, yet, in six months of 1918, as compared with the corresponding period of 1917, only one-half the quantity of cotton was spun. Inquiries were extended to cover almost the whole textile industry in operation in 1918. Four months each of the number of workers had increased from 44,000 to 46,000, yet production was one-sixth less. In the nanufacture of thread, workers in 1918 spun one sixth of the quantity spun in 1916, while the price went up thirty times.

It is little wonder that the workers themselves It is little wonder that the workers themselves were willing to hand the factories over to the hold of to see if you are sick.

The first six months of government ownership The first six months of government ownership and control had little effect in increasing the outare under the stumik.

What are the duties of a citizen? The necessity of locomotives was critical. Yet in 1918 it took 64,000 men to do the same amount of work done by 16,000 in 1916. The situation with his of work done by 16,000 in 1916. The situation has part of mankind ash can.

Names the races of mankind.

Names the races of mankind.

The report shows that the number of workmen kinds. ncreased from 1,200 in 1916, to 1,700 in 1918, but the number of workers' off-days and holidays also the number of workers' off-days and holidays also increased. In 1916 the off-days counted 6 per cent of the time. In 1917 they doubled, and in 1918 they were 40 per cent of the time. The Moscow shop Our dream-ships from the dreamwere 40 per cent of the time. The Moscow shop Our report states that it took 80 men to do the amount of work which one man did in 1916. The reasons given for the disastrous conditions of work were:

The workers' curious conception of freedom. Their irresponsibility and careless indulgence. The time they took off to talk in committees. Conditions in the collieries were also bad. The formal output of a man in a month, before the revolution. was about 15 tons; in 1918 it fell to 5

Now comes the second stage of nationalization, a stage in which the people pay the penalty for mistakes committed in the first. It marks the apogee of the Russian worker, and coincides with the period of the most violent external wars in which the soviet republic has yet taken part.

The state took command. The period now under review actually covers from July, 1918, to January of this year. But the soviet government did not take active measures until February, 1919. Then it divided the whole population into five classes:

1. Soldiers. 2. Workmen and employees.

3. Families of workmen and employees. 4. Country people.

5. Other citizens.

Great Confusion Paper money and the cost of living had by this time almost lost track of each other. Wages were no longer paid in currency alone. After the soldier, the workman had the first call. Uniform salaries had largely disappeared. It is now laid down that the worker who does not work shall not eat. Bonuses in?" of extra food, matches, tobacco, are issued to energetic workmen. The state plays the double part of employer of labor and of distributor of food and necessaries, not from any love of playing with economic principles, but from the grim necessity of keeping the population alive. It is the darkest period in that sufficiently dreadful cycle of events. Food and work are mathematically weighed against each other. The government calculated that cutting sajene of wood cost 41/2 pounds of flour; sledding it eight versts, the same amount of flour; and loading it, 11/2 pounds. For cutting more than the quantity fixed, the workman was paid in addition half pound of salt, two ounces of tobacco, half economics of life and work could hardly be reduced further. Production during that grim period did not greatly increase. It could hardly be expected to Recruiting for the red army was carried on continually; in addition, the system of selection was bad. Skilled workmen were often taken first. A casual note entered regarding match manufacturing last winter casts a vivid light on the situation: "The production has fallen to 5 per cent of normal because the workers have left en mass agricultural labor and unloading fuel wood"-such In December, 1919, the horizon cleared a little The Supreme Council of Political Economy brought in its report, which showed that during the fail of 1919 the factory production was increasing, excep in the case of those manufactures which depended upon imported material. Petrograd was an exception, however. Lack of fuel there had closed prac tically all the large factories. A Titanic Deficit. When the Supreme Council of Public Economy brought down its accounts for the first six months of 1919, the actual cost of nationalization became evident. There was a deficit of five billion roubles. The budget voted had been eleven million roubles. In addition the railroads showed a deficit of four billion The railway budget had been five billion The council has not yet presented its roubles. complete report for 1919, but indications are that the deficit will be proportionately greater than in

- Russian industry has now entered the third stage nationalization. Since October last, according to Russian official reports, production has been generally increasing wherever raw material fuel have been available. The chemical products factories doubled their output in a month. the raciest chapters of the French Revolution of Poutilov metal works have increased their production, which last fall was 36 per cent of normal, to 140 per cent of normal. This may well mark the turning of the tide, because in this factory the increase was due directly to the improved work by The number of employees during

GOOD-BYE.
[Eugene Field.]
I love the words—perhaps because
When I was leaving mother,
Standing at last in solemn pause
We looked at one another,
And I—I saw in mother's eyes
The love she could not tell me,
A love eternal as the skies
Whatever fate befell me.

She put her arms about my neck
And soothed the pain of leaving,
And though her heart was like to break She spoke no word of grieving; She let no tear bedim her eye
For fear that might distress me,
But kissing me, she said good-bye,

Miss Lorna MacGillivray, of "Belleview Heights" returned home last week from the Ward-Belmont Conege, Nashville. Tenn.

The friends of J. C. McCallum will be glad to know that he is progressing favorably after undergoing an opera-tion in St. Joseph's Hospital on Friday.

The London Conservatory of Music graduation exercises to be held in the Masonic Temple this evening will be one of the big musical events of the season. Such talented plano pupils as Miss Laura Kirkwood, Miss Dorothy Davis, Miss Olive Shaddock and Miss Doris Watts will provide the program along with Miss Florence Dewey, Miss Olive Shaddock and Miss Gertrude Dumaresque, vocal pupils. During the evening diplomas and medals will be distributed, the Rev. W. Leslie Armitage delivering the address of the occasion.

Following the graduation exercises, a banquet and reunion of conservatory graduates will be held at Wong's Cafe.

One of the season's most successful pupils' recitals was given Thursday evening by the violin and piano students of Mrs. Grant Harris, assisted by Miss E. Brown, vocalist. Special mention is due to Miss Marjorie Smith and Master Tom Smith, both under 10 years of age. Tom Smith, both under 10 years of age, who gave a brilliant violin and piano number, the little sister accompanying her violinist brother. Other violinists were the Misses W. and C. Burr and Mr. Howard James. Those giving piano solos were Misses I. Morrison, L. Dear, C. Myers, G. Wray, C. Fairless, E. Wheeler and Masters W. Rosser, J. May and R. Lashbrook. Mrs. Grant-Harris was heartily congratulated by the many friends present at the close of a most enjoyable evening. of a most enjoyable evening.

that hurt.

Calbert fished for one-of the homers, his third in three games, with one on in the seventh, after the example of Shay in the fifth, who fooled Trefry playing in to back up a bunt by landing one over his head into the left field weeds, shooing Kennedy in.

The Vehics cranked up early, grabbing two in the first and another in the third. The trible trailed along until the fourth and just failed to overtake them when Crichlow's two-bagger drove in two counters, and Harper looked due to hit with Dowling still with the swag on second. They headed them off in the fifth properly by going out and getting three and to make good and sure, after Flint had crept up and tied it in the seventh they collected four more and another duet in the eighth.

"Hick" Farrell, the first offering, had more than any of his successors in office, though getting "tetched up" for six. Two of these were for six bases and they were painful. Anderson pulled him after Shay's homer. Tengen followed and he gave up four hits, Calbert's homer in the seventh, which scored Shay, Pittenger's three-bagger scoring Crichlow and Pittenger's arrival at home on a wild pitch showed his need of a change of scenery and he gave way to Trefry for the eighth. The late departed Umps. Shuster

The late departed Umps. Shuster apparently had a sense of humor behind his raucous voice and rawshush sense of sight. According to a story of Official Statistician Stein, Shuster was managing a team one time out West. His team had worked in the park once and on the return visit there was a brand new fence up—a high board affair. Shuster beckoned the opposing manager and asked him who put fence up—a high board affair.
Shuster beckoned the opposing manager and asked him who put up the fence, and when.
"Oh, just got the boys to get out on an off day. Pretty good fence, eh!" opined the other manager dexterously getting a long straw out of the line pf departure of huge flow of tobacco juice.
"Not a bad fence," agreed Shuster (for once), "but we'll bust it to pieces. You should nailed them boards on from the inside."

Heffernan and Ashplant, the Lond Rowing Club pair, took the Langfor trophy over to the clubhouse by the river last night as a result of their win over the Elmwood duet, Gidley and Cornelius. The final tally was 14 to 12, and last night's game constituted the best of the recent doubles tourney in that play was close throughout, and there were many hair-raising moments.

in that play was cose throughout, and there were many hair-raising moments. There was a big gallery out to see the game, interest in the first journey of a new trophy bringing out the bowiers. The Rowing Club pair played rather erratically, giving the uncertainty touch to the duel,

With one end to go, the Elmwoods were only three shots down. They had the three in order when the London Rowing Club sent good draws down that cut the lay to one shot.

Elmwoods were particularly keen on taking the trophy over to the south end, as that would have given them the first and third events of the big doubles classic.

AT THE GRAND.

Undoubtedly the most beautifully staged and dramatic of motion pictures presented to a London audience is Cecil Until He Took "Fruit-a-tives" B. De Mille's production, "Male and Female," showing at the Grand Theatre all this week. Those fortunate enough to witness this offering yesterday were of one mind regarding its quality—all were delighted. Many films have been shown in local theatres, where the scenes are wondrous, the gowns elaborate, and the production lavish with dramatic ability thrown in for good dramatic ability thrown in for good measure, but no motion picture with all these qualities combined in such a happy way has been shown in Lon-don to equal "Male and Female." The scenario has been adapted from J. M. Barrie's successful play, "The Admirable Crichton," with Thomas Admirable Crichton," with Thomas Meighan in the stellar role. That this artist has already won his laurels in movie fame is admitted by critics, but he has surpassed all previous work here as Crichton, the butler. The humor of the offering is chiefly provided by the inimitable Theodore Roberts in the role of Lord Loam. As Lady Mary Lasenby, Gloria Swanson shares premier feminine honors with Lila Leo, the diminutive onors with Lila Leo, the diminutive favorite, who plays the part of Tweeny, the scullery maid. The vehicle opens in an English country estate, the home of Lord Loam and family, with Crichton and Tweeney as servants, who are made to feel their position by the suctoracy of Lord histing to the South Seas, where the Loam yacht is wrecked on a desertishand, with the peer and his daughters, because of their helplessness, thrown upon the resources of Crichton and Tweeney, chiefly those of the buffer. Class prejudice is soon beaten down by virtue of the necessity of struggle for existence, and Crichton, the fact, to the distress of little Tweeney, the maid, Lady Lasanby falls in love with Crichton, but the arrival of a ship forestalls a wedding, and the vehicle ends as unexpectedly as could be imagined without sacrificing any strength of the pict. AT LOEW'S.

"Excuse My Dust" is the title of a very good automobile picture, featuring Wallace Reid and Anna Little, the first half of this week at Loew's Theatre. A photoplay of speed par excellence, the plot is clever, treatment spirited and interesting throughout. In depicting a great speed contest between Los Angeles and San Francisco, the realism is at times highly thrilling and such pletured exploits as driving a motor car madly over a railway bridge, whizzing through gorges and diving through gulches, are vivid demonstrations of brilliant work on the part of the camera man. The play deals with the attempted reformation of a speed friend, whose father manufactures the swiftest make of speed cars and whose young wife placeds with his attempted relocation. whose father manufactures the swiftest make of speed cars and whose young wife pleads with him in vain to curb his mania for rapid driving. She leaves him to go to Frisco, but later wires him that the baby is ill, and so he breaks his pledge against speeding once more to drive in the wild race, is wrecked by the villain driver of a rival car, but nevertheless comes in second and finds the baby recovered. Despite the plotting of unscrupulous rivals and spurred on by superhuman efforts to save his son, the father drives the new test motor and wins first place. The prize of ten thousand dollars by common consent is turned over to the baby.

"Gee Whiz," a Mack Sennett comedy, is reasonably entertaining, with clever "Gee Whiz," a Mack Sennett comedy, is reasonably entertaining, with clever humor showing in spots through the slapdash. Loew's News Events add much interest to the film production.

The vaudeville offering is varied, a nicely balanced bill, and enjoyed an audience Monday night varied enough in its tastes to give very good applause to each of the four acts.

Frawley and West, in a piano and song duet, were well received. The planist knew how to play and the vocalist had a good voice of the popular nasal type. His repertory of songs was new and snappy.

"Don't Every Marry," which began showing at the Allen Theatre yesterday, is the most amusing of comedies. It is a rapid series of events so utterly residually. It is a rapid series of events so utterly ridiculous that the audience is soon one great rocking body of laughter. "Don't Ever Marry" is the advice of one who tried it and found it a failure to another, who heedless sets forth immediately to the minister and then passes such a night of hopeless muddled adventure that he expects almost anything to happen by morning. Mat Moore plays the part of the young bridegroom, and pretty Marjorie Daw that of the bride, who seems to be hopelessly out of the game when two other women claim the same man as their husband. The blood and thunder father of the young bride, who, on matter of principle, refuses to consent to his daughter's marriage, is another interesting character who makes the action of the story move rapidly. Wesley Barry, the juvenile comedian, who acts the part of bellhop, with periscope to spy out people's business and then take toll for silence, is screamingly funny and plays a big role in the picture.

The regular comedy picture is also very fine, being the story of a young girl who has absorbed too much "culture" at college and is treated to "kultur" by her young lover at home, in an effort to cure her of the affliction.' A garlic-eating professor is imported for the purpose, but young Miss Culture turns the tables by going through a mock marriage with him, greatly to the distress of her lover. Everything turns out right in the end, however, and Miss Culture promises to forego her "culture."

INGERSOLL, June 28 .- At a meeting of the board of education tonight a retiring allowance of $300 a year was granted to Miss C. McNeill, who has granted to Miss C. McNeill, who has served for more than 40 years as a member of the teaching staff of Central school. The members of the board each expressed their high appreciation of the long and efficient service rendered by Miss McNeill.

A lengthy discussion followed the reading of the teachers' committee report, which recommended that salary increases be not granted to Miss Tovell, who had asked for an increase of $200, Miss Martin, who also asked for $206, and Miss Roach who asked for $100.

By a vote of 6 to 5 a tablon that the report be amended to grant Miss Tovell an increase of $100 was adopted. The motion was based on the grounds that this amount had been granted that this amount had been granted to Miss Tovell last November, but re-scinded in December when all the teachers were given a 15 per cent in-

TN making concrete or mortar, SUPER CE-MENT is used in exactly the same manner as Portland Cement.

SUPER CEMENT is not a mere surface wash, liquid chemical or paste to be added to Portland Cement or the mixing water of concrete or mortar.

SUPER CEMENT is Cement and is manufactured in Portland Cement Mills.

SUPER CEMENT is sold by the barrel the same as Portland Cement, and is packed for shipment in bags of the same size and weight as ordinary Cement.

SUPER CEMENT does not increase the cost of water-proofing, because it is much cheaper and easier to use than any method or water repellant known.

Super Cement Is Guaranteed Absolutely Waterproof

Remarkable tests have been made with SUPER CE-MENT in Great Britain and Canada that prove its absolute waterproofness and superior strength. A book containing the story of these tests will be mailed to you on request.

SUPER CEMENT has been used with great success on works for the British Government. It is the discovery of an English Engineer and patented all over the world. It is now being manufactured in Canada, and full particulars are obtainable from

MONTREAL STOCK EXCHANGE.

Montreal, June 29.—Breweries was the big actor for the first hour on the local stock exchange this morning, selling at a new high on the present movement. Insiders cannot account for this strength, but the street seems to think that the new stock has a promising future. The paper stocks are quiet, but inclined to be firmer, while in the industrial list there was a tendency to stick at recent levels.

HELENE'S MARRIED LIFE

CX.-Changeable Alice.

Alice never once mentioned the sub-ect of a previous marriage, concernject of a previous marriage, concerning myself. Often I wished that she might bring the question up, so that I might confess the whole truth to her. At last I took the bull by the horns, told her about my previous marriage-with Jim. I told her of his of course. lapse of memory. I told her some of foolish fears as to reviving that memory in him. And then I spoke about Jim's second wooing, and our second wedding.

"Do you think it very silly, Alice inquired quite humbly.

She gave an envious laugh.

"No, not silly. Only romantic. You're so lucky, Helene. Of course he'd naturally fall in love with you a second time. You're so attractive. But of course I don't entirely believe in this loss of memory, business I'm sure loss-of-memory business. I'm sure your Jim was only playing a wily game to win you back!"

Well, I knew better. But I wasn't going to argue out the point with

"Do his people know?" she languidly inquired. "Do they know of your previous romance" with him?" I shook my head.
"Well, don't tell them. Just let well enough alone." An air of profound enough alone." An air of profound wisdom settled on her pretty little face. "I wouldn't give them any information, It'll only let them have the upper hand. And that's fatal."

And that's fatal."

I had my own ideas on this point.
But I said nothing.
The telephone bell rang. I answered
it. I heard the voice of Tony on the He had written Alice twice, he said And had she got his flowers? And would I please tell her that he wes coming round immediately to see her? I was flabbergasted at his impudence. Coming round to my apartment —quite uninvited, too! Did the man not remember his last visit to the place when Travis Lloyd had had to kick him down the stairs?

I found my voice. I told him pretty sharply that it would be impossible to receive him at the apartment—now—or at any other time.

Mrs. Anstruther, I added, was not yet seeing visitors.

Tony answered me most imperti-

That made me furious. Tony—of all people—to dare to assume that attitude towards me.

Why, I know enough about the fellow to have him put in isi! low to have him put in jail!
"You can't come here, I won't admit you." I said sharply, injudiciously raising my tones a little. Then

I returned to the sitting-room, to In returned to the sitting-room, to find Alice in tears.

"I—I heard—the cruel things you said—" She was sobbing quite dramatically. "Oh, Helene, you want to cut me off from all my friends—"

"Alice, I'm astonished at you," I stared at her, amazed.

"I—I'm so lonely—"

I sat down beside her, and deliberately recounted to her the tale of Tony's last visit to the apartment. I spared no details, emphasizing Tony's wish to compromise me, his plot to lure me in-the provisions of the board's form of contract was dealt with. Objection was taken to the requirement for a marked check, and it was decided to remove this, as such action had practically been agreed upon at a previous meeting. None of the other clauses were changed. Another clause against which protest was made was that giving the arctitect power to dismiss incompetent employees. It was claimed that only the contractor should have this power. No change was made in this. Protest was also made against specifying each section of the work to be done instead of submitting a bulk contract. This also was not changed. Trustee Mrs. Harris thought that the board should know the cost of each part of the work. Another provision, which was protested was that requiring a year's guarantee of the work. It was thought that thirty days would be enough, Chairman Hayman said that no builder would make a guarantee now for a longer period than that unless a big percentage was charged to more than the cover possible loss.

About twenty men of the different trades were present, and at the close of the meeting each one expressed his willingness to aid in forming a union in the city.

Ernest Curtiss of Hamilton, or-ganizer for Eastern Canada, was in charge of the proceedings. He spoke on the aims and value of a union in the city, stating that the manufacturers would recognize the union as men, and receive their work as being done by men, giving a fair day's wage for a fair day's work. He read the rules of the union was to benefit the work to the time when he was employed as a laborer, and recited the beginning of the year the membership of the unions in Canada has increased the object of the union in Canada has increased to the provision, which was protested was that requiring a year's guarantee of the work.
