Fair-Minded Co-operation Will Smooth Empire Troubles, Earl of Derby Says

DERBY REGRETS CANADA'S ACTION

English Lord Calls For Greater Co-operation in Empire Affairs.

ONE BIG FAMILY

Associated Press Despatch.
London, July 3.—The Earl of Derby presided at a banquet here last night given in connection with the Congress of the Empire Chambers of Commerce. Many men distinguished in political life were present, including many representatives from the overseas dominions. The Earl of Derby, in proposing the health of the British ministers, deeply regretted the relations in which the dominions were involved in homeland political controversy. Empire affairs should be taken out of those relations, he said. "We have a common stage in our history," he declared. "Our relations with the dominions are being compared with the relations of a father and his children. That is not fair. When young have been reprimanded, sometimes smacked, but the time comes when they can be no longer reprimanded, but only advised. He said that moment had now arrived.

Father and Son Idea.

The father who makes his son his greatest friend and the son who makes his parents the greatest pals of his life, these are the relations which should be the greatest in the empire. These were the relations he desired to see with the dominions. "We must let our children lead their own lives, carrying that fatherly hand, but advice can be given."

The dominions, continued Lord Derby, were growing children whose policies ought to conform with that of a united family.

Britain for the moment had decided to be a free trade country, but he felt that where for purposes of revenue any duty was imposed, it was the duty of the mother country and the dominions to give preference to their own kind and kin. It should be remembered that the empire would be a self-contained nation and everything should be done to facilitate that end.

Lord Derby regretted that the imperial conference resolutions had not been ratified because ratification would have been a graceful and grateful recognition of the fact that the dominions have been doing for the motherland. He feared that non-ratification might destroy confidence. He was going to take the risk in which he was proud to belong had a great future, but foresight and tact were required in developing it.

J. H. Thomas Replies.
J. H. Thomas, colonial secretary, in replying, said that a majority of those throughout the empire who had attended the last meeting were already out of office but still interested in empire affairs. The clear, definite proposal to be drawn was that in questions so vital and far-reaching, the time had arrived when no party should be known in imperial affairs. He was going to take the risk in which he was proud to belong had a great future, but foresight and tact were required in developing it.

Mr. Robert Horne, Conservative M.P. for Glasgow, said that if the suggestions of the dominions were rejected, nothing positive must be put in their place. It was impossible to go drifting and leave the dominions to the cajolery of outside nations.

The motive for the murder still remains a mystery.

Sections of City Visited By Peculiar Rain Storm

Nature's store of tricks is not yet depleted. With a storm unparalleled for oddity, she showed London yesterday that she still had a number up her sleeve. Rain, which had very much the appearance of a cloudburst, fell in this city late yesterday afternoon, following a week of intermittent downpours. This rain, with a little way all its own, fell from low hanging clouds, and touched only certain parts of the city, leaving the West London baseball park, where a game was in progress, conveniently untouched.

Commencing shortly after 4 o'clock the rain proceeded in a series of visits about the city. It commenced in East London, where the sun shone brilliantly for the first half-hour.

APPEALS ARE MADE FOR DRIVES FOR SHUT-INS

At the meeting of the Women's Christian Association, held yesterday afternoon, many suggestions were brought in as to how the shut-ins at the Aged People's Home and the Victoria Home could be made happier. Among the suggestions offered were motor rides to the country for the shut-ins, summer entertainments, such as picnics on the grounds or in the country and concerts and treats to be brought to the homes.

An appeal was made to generous citizens to offer their cars and the officers of the association or the matrons at either homes will be very grateful for offers of this nature. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. C. B. Hunt.

HIGHLY-PRIZED BLOOMS STOLEN AT INGERSOLL

Many Flowers Are Stolen or Damaged by Unknown Visitors.

Ingersoll, July 2.—Flower gardens in various parts of the town have been objects of nocturnal visits recently. In some cases, the highly-prized blooms have been carried away. Apart from the theft, damage has been caused to expensive varieties of flowers. A few nights ago the well-known garden of P. P. Leake was visited, and many of the choicest peonies stolen.

Mr. Leake has many rare peonies, and if their identity is established the guilty parties will be prosecuted.

GYMNASIUM PROVIDED FOR BARRACKS SOLDIERS

The soldiers at Wolsey Barracks are to have a gymnasium. The new sports department will have a separate building just to the east of the east wing of the barracks.

A long, single story building that was used for the training of overseas troops during the war will be used for the gym. A gang of about twelve men is busy making the necessary alterations. The work will be completed shortly.

WILL DISCUSS PICNIC.

There will be a special general meeting of the G. W. V. A. tonight in the Dugout. The meeting has been called to set a date and to make plans for a picnic. All members are urged to be present, as the officials wish to make this picnic a most enjoyable one for everybody.

LOOSENS SIX BRICKS.

When lightning struck the chimney at the north end of the east wing of Wolsey Barracks it just tore out six bricks. The damage was practically nothing, but it took two men a day to get the ladders and scaffolding up to replace the damage done by lightning's whim.

TAX AMENDMENT STILL HANGS FIRE

Inspector Has Received No Word of Proposed $500 Exemption.

INQUIRIES MANY

G. Tambling, federal inspector of taxation for London district, stated this morning that a number of letters and inquiries have been received concerning the proposed $500 exemption for dependent children under eighteen years of age.

The inspector points out that no notice has been received that the amendment has been made. A resolution was passed to bring up the matter for consideration but no notice has been received that the amendment was put through.

Upon the receipt of such advice all files that will be affected on account of such an amendment will be dealt with. All payments and refunds that are on order will be dealt with, so that all checks will be in the hands of the taxpayers at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Tambling states that it is not necessary for the taxpayer to make any specific claim. The adjustment will follow automatically from the inspector of taxation's office.

The second installment of taxes paid by those who are liable for their taxes in two or three payments were due on June 30. They came in very nicely, stated the inspector. The next instalment, due at the end of August. Persons paying taxes under the installment plan pay interest from April 30.

PARK BENCHES AGAIN HAVENS OF QUIETUDE

Number of Loungers Increases as Warm Weather Gets Under Way.

With the coming of warm weather the park benches are beginning to assume their usual summer foliage. This morning bench loungers could be seen enjoying the after-breakfast smoke and the morning paper. They varied from the well-dressed chap, taking a day off, to the man out of work, looking over the classified ads, to the man who had lost interest in his sartorial equipment.

They picked the benches where there was just enough shade, and they looked most comfortable. All the parks had their share of these nature lovers, and in the afternoon Springbank caught the infection.

Another bench was occupied by a Muskoka or English or to the Pacific slope, the other chap goes to his park bench. When the bench gets empty, the grass is so green, and many are taking advantage of the first days of summer.

HUSBAND IS ORDERED TO PRODUCE MONEY

Domestic Troubles of Couple Are Aired in Police Court.

The domestic troubles of Walter H. McMahon and his wife, Agnes, were aired for half an hour or more this morning before Magistrate Graydon, who asked, with the result that the case was adjourned two weeks to give McMahon time to find some money for the support of his wife and child.

The court suggested $50 or $55 a month. McMahon offered $25 a week. Mrs. McMahon said she couldn't support two children on that amount and the court agreed.

It seemed that McMahon had been receiving money for some time, but he had been replying he had been out of work and all the money he got was from a small pension.

He ended all this nonsense, and declared the court in adjourning the case.

VARIED ARE THE PURSUITS BETWEEN FOUR AND SIX

New Crusader Tries To Retrieve Precious Two Hours in the Afternoon.

TENDENCY TO IDLE

It's Tea Time in England and Here Businessmen Slip to the Links.

An astute individual has put his finger upon a new leak in Canadian life. Fired with enthusiasm for a new economy, he has established himself as a crusader. Henceforth his mission in life will be to find out what people do with the precious hours between four and six in the afternoon. On the part of most people, he says, this enterprise will be a failure, there is an insidious tendency to let the hours pass idly, wholly lost, with no task either begun or ended. If possible, he wants to see this one hundred and twenty minutes re-ordered once more to the daily calendar.

Unless all time spent in amusement or recreation is conceded to be wasted, the crusade will probably result in failure. An investigation of what London people do with the hours of four to six reveals the fact that in nearly every case, they are put to excellent use. Where they are wasted, it is only those who are constitutionally lazy, or who are relatively unimportant in the scheme of things, so that it matters little or none at all what they do with their time.

DELIGHTFUL HOURS

English people consider them the most delightful hours of all the day. Tea time is when they may set a teacup down with one hand to pick up a tennis racket with the other. Even in business and newspaper offices, they are reputed to "knock off" around 4:30 for a bit of idle conversation and a cup of tea, which sends them back with renewed vigor for another hour's work before dinner.

In Canada, the afternoon tea is confined chiefly to the homes, and would begrudge them their bit of pleasant chatter before the duty of getting dinner once more calls them to the kitchen.

A survey of the local golf links reveals the fact that scores of men leave their offices to the tender care of stenographers while they spend the last departing hours of the day chasing a little white ball around on the green. The tennis courts have always an army of eager players. Swimming pools do their best business, because the girl is slow indeed who hasn't discovered that a sunbath is a far more enjoyable and less costly way of passing the day.

The hour of four to five belongs only to a privileged few. A greater number of individuals can claim from 5 o'clock on, when most business offices close.

One man revealed an entrancing occupation for this intriguing hour. He matched thread and lace for his wife so many days a week, enjoying a little jaunt to the market. On the other days he stops in to purchase a bag of fresh beans or some ice cream.

Another individual has the hour for a particular purpose in life. He overhauls and cleans the car, preparatory for the evening ride. An original crowd from a neighborhood, with the appearance of a habitual grouch, "That's the only time of day I can ever get anything on my radio," he complained. "Rest of the time that fool son of mine has a bunch of snuggle puppies around listening to jazz music from Detroit."

NO LADY'S MAID.

"Can you see any signs of me having a lady's maid, or do you think I grow like this. That hour just saves me one hour's sleep in bed, and I don't sleep for half an hour or so I won't be blinking my eyes all evening, and then I spend another hour dressing and curling my hair, and manicuring. The only time I can get anything on my radio is at 6:30 I'm a regular old and I'm in so tight and the nail polish on so high that it lasts until morning."

"Splash in cold water, dress, breakfast, street car" can rise at 8:40 and be at the office only five minutes late.

Amusement in these modern days has taken such a strenuous turn that it is more or less work. The decision drawn was that the hours between four and six are indispensable. They provide a break in the tension, the only real hours of relaxation provided throughout the day.

ANGELIC GARDEN PARTY A SUCCESS AT HIGGATE

Special to The Advertiser.
Higgate, July 2.—The 43rd annual Anglican garden party was successful on July 1, notwithstanding the chilly evening. The program was even better than last year. The male quartet from Wallingford, and the boy violinist, regarded as Canada's boy wonder at fourteen years of age, were special features. The event was a great success, and the first time since its inception, and was most enjoyed. Rev. W. Wallace, rector, made some good speeches. He recently came to this Anglican church.

TORONTO HYDRO'S STANDS UPHELD

Judicial Committee of Privy Council Acts in Electrical Union Row.

APPLIED FOR BOARD

Associated Press Despatch.
London, July 3.—The judicial committee of the privy council today granted leave to appeal in the case of Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission and the Snyder arbitration board. It was explained to their lordships that the electrical trades union had applied for a board under the industrial disputes act concerning a dispute between the union and the hydro commission. The latter objected to the jurisdiction of the board and affirmed that it had no power to alter their appointment. The commissioners further declared, interfered with civil rights.

Counsel for the petitioners in giving the matter to the judicial committee for not appealing the decision of the appellate court of Ontario to the supreme court of Canada was that they considered the matter was of urgent importance and that they took it direct to the privy council.

Edmund Leslie Newcombe, K.C., counsel minister of justice for Canada, who intervened in the case on behalf of the Dominion government, maintained that the appeal should be taken before the court of Canada. Lord Cave announced that the lordships were satisfied that the question was one of great importance and should be determined as speedily as possible. Leave to appeal was accordingly granted.

Following the appointment of the Snyder board of arbitration, dispute between the hydro commission and its employees the commissioners objected to the board and took the matter to the appellate court of Ontario, claiming that the industrial disputes act was ultra vires of the Dominion parliament. The court, however, on April 22 last, handed down judgment holding the act intra vires of the Dominion.

LAFOLETTE IS FAVORED BY U. S. PROGRESSIVES

William Johnson Will Deliver the Keynote Speech Tomorrow.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 3.—Declaring that neither the Republican nor the Democratic platforms were acceptable to them, the national committee of Progressive yesterday announced plans for the convention of the organization in this city, July 4 and 5. William Johnson, chairman of the committee, and who will also deliver the keynote speech Friday, said there was no doubt but that a national political party would be placed in the field to run independently.

"Virtually all of the delegates who are here are favorable to the presidential candidacy of Senator La Follette, and are insistent upon his running," he said. This sentiment was echoed by H. H. Hopkins, chairman of the committee of forty-eight. Other leaders predicted that the conference would not only nominate La Follette, but would adopt a platform which his followers offered in vain to the recent Republican national convention.

True Progressives, representing reputable organizations, will be welcomed to the convention. It was announced. To that end a resolution was adopted, charging with the duties of excluding Communists.

PREFERENCE PLAN BACKED BY C. OF C.

Resolutions From Canada and Australia Chambers Urge Imperial Policy.

EMPIRE CONGRESS

London, July 2.—The agenda of the congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire, which opened yesterday at the Guildhall, contained resolutions from the Board of Trade at Belleville, Ont., and Sydney, Australia, urging the adoption of an imperial preference. Sir Hugh Dennison moved the adoption of the agreed resolution, stating that the ideal to be aimed at was freedom of trade within the empire and reasonable protection against the rest of the world. In the meantime, he said, a mutual preference on the most generous and liberal basis should be established by reciprocal agreements between the dominions and the motherland. Sir Hugh suggested that imperial preference should be given a trial for five years.

Lieut.-Col. Ponton, Belleville, Ont., seconded the motion. A Huddersfield report opposing the resolution must be primarily considered.

Sir Edward Davison, president of the Associated West Indian Chambers of Commerce, moved an amendment recording his regret at the government's decision, and urged the establishment of a fiscal preference as the most practicable means of furthering imperial development. He asked for the early production of other means directed to this end.

T. R. Deacon, Winnipeg, declared that Canada had been holding out an offer for preference for 27 years. They did not feel that they had been appreciated, and would not continue to hold out an offer if there were no prospects of reciprocal action, he said.

The vote was postponed until tomorrow.

PLEBISCITE IS CERTAIN, DR. GODFREY DECLARES

Minister of Health Declares Vote On Temperance Will Be Taken.

PREMIER'S PROMISE

McCausland Declares Issue Will Be Settled Before October 31.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, July 2.—Assurance that a plebiscite is on the way, so far as Ontario temperance is concerned, was given tonight by Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Ontario minister of health and labor, at a Conservative rally in support of W. H. Edwards, the party candidate for the by-election for seat "A" in Northwest Toronto.

The announcement of the plebiscite did not appear to be any part of the planned speech of the minister of health and labor, as it came in response to an interruption on the part of one of the audience while he was pointing out the advantages for the northwest riding in sending a supporter to the government of Hon. Mr. Ferguson.

"How about a plebiscite?" was the question.

"You have asked for a plebiscite and you will get it," Dr. Godfrey returned. "You will find that, so far as the premier is concerned, he speaks 100 per cent of the truth. He has promised a plebiscite, and that means you will get it."

Following that was a further assurance from J. A. McCausland, M.L.A. for Southwest Toronto, who added that the vote would come before October 31, or as he put it, "he would stake his reputation on the fact that a vote will come before that date."

HOUSE OF COMMONS MAY EXTEND SESSION

Doubt Completion of Work by End of Next Week.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, July 2.—With a whole day spent by the House, in discussion of one phase of the banking problem, with Ontario redistribution still in the air, and supplementary estimates still to be brought down, prorogation by the end of next week is doubtful. There is now talk that the session may run on another three weeks or so, unless decision is reached to put over till next year some of the government measures.

BERRIES AT EIGHT CENTS OFFERED AT TILLSONBURG

Special to The Advertiser.
Tillsonburg, July 2.—The price of strawberries received a big setback today on account of the holiday yesterday and half-holiday again today. Dozens of cars and trucks were peddling No. 1 quality berries from door to door at 8 cents a box and the supply far exceeded the demand. There is a very big crop in this district and from all appearances now the price will be around 10 cents a box for the next few days.

CONFUSION EXISTS OVER RESTRICTION

Sarnia Residents Puzzled As To Status Under New U. S. Law.

QUOTA IS EXCEEDED

Special to The Advertiser.
Sarnia, July 2.—Considerable doubt exists in the minds of border residents on the Canadian side as to what their status is under the immigration regulation of the U. S. with regard to temporary entry to that country, a phase of the situation that overshadows in importance here the question of permanent entry.

In the latter regard clear interpretation of the act was given by Vice-Consul Monro here today, when he said in future Canadians seeking to reside in the U. S. must obtain a non quota visa, which costs $10. Europeans must obtain a quota visa, which can only be granted by the consul-general in their country of origin. Only applications can be taken at local consular offices.

With regard to the general passing to and fro between Canada and American points instructions are not so clear and more or less left to the discretion of the inspecting American officers. There will be closer scrutiny than in the past, Chief Immigration Officer Earl F. Coe of Port Huron stated on the telephone this afternoon. Those who wish to avoid close questioning, and Canadian-born are included, will do well, Mr. Coe said, to obtain identification cards, for which three photographs of the applicant are required. Port Huron immigration officers have always exercised discretion and courtesy where Sarnians have been concerned, and it is not expected that passage between the two cities will be made any matter of difficulty, though British-born residents may have more trouble in getting through unless they take the precaution of getting identification cards.

At the consulate it was stated that the would-be temporary entrant to the U. S. must prove to the satisfaction of immigration officers that he is not intending to remain for more than a stated period, be it an hour or a month, in the country, and it is here that the immigration inspection officer may exercise his discretion.

The one result of the new regulations, officials say, will be greater discouragement for the Canadians who seek employment in the U. S. and a closed door against the European who would use Canada as a stepping stone to Uncle Sam's domain.

The consular office here today was besieged with intending residents of the U. S., more than fifty applications being made.

TROUBLE AT TORONTO.
Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, July 2.—The new immigration regulations recently placed in effect by the United States government are having their effect in Toronto as elsewhere. A number of British citizens who have applied for permission to enter the United States have been unable to obtain it, as the visa forms, which all immigrants are required to fill in, have not yet arrived at the American consulate, and applicants at the consulate were advised to return about the 15th of the month as nothing could be done for them in the meantime.

The new regulations apply only to those intending to make their home in the United States, and no difficulty is raised concerning those entering the country merely for a visit. C. W. Martin, American consul in Toronto, has been placed on the retired list, and will return to the United States at the end of the month. Until a new appointment is made, the position will be filled by F. A. Bohne as vice-consul.

QUOTA EXCEEDED.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Montreal, July 2.—"It is absolutely useless for people born outside of Canada, who have been waiting here to enter the United States, but have been in the Dominion less than one year, to apply for admission over the border at this time," says a statement issued tonight at the United States consulate general.

The reason is that the total of would-be emigrants of all nationalities, but especially those of British origin, is so far in excess of the quotas provided for under the immigration act. Decision has been made, therefore, by the United States to give first chance to individuals who have been in Canada more than 12 months.

What Qualities to Look for in the Man
You Marry—Idolizing Mother After Marriage—The Cure for a Lazy Wife.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl of twenty-three and have two suitors. One of them is very good-looking and is a suave-mannered sort of a chap. His business prospects are not favorable. The other man is homely, rather brusque in manner, kind hearted, rue blue, a college graduate, and going up the ladder in business. Both of these young men want to marry me.

My girl friends all think the first man is wonderful, but say nothing about the second. The former has a fascination for me, because I worship good looks and nice manners. The second one I could love if he were better looking. I always feel that people will say of us: "Is that the best she could do?" You see, I don't know which man I really love. What qualities would I seek in a man you were going to marry?

A. B. C.

Answer:

If you don't know which of two men you love the better, you do not love either one well enough to marry him. Wait until you do not have to ask anyone to read your heart for you.

From your account, I should say that the homely man is incomparably a better chance than the good-looking one. It is the substantial qualities, and not a Greek profile, that make a man a desirable running mate.

Of all idiotic things for which either a man or a woman can marry the most idiotic is beauty, because those who marry for that are foredoomed to lose out within a few years, possibly a few months, and then they have before them a lifetime of association with an individual who has no attraction for them. A puny stomach, a bald head, false teeth, and your "he-ave" rump, you no more. A few wrinkles, twenty pounds of fat, graying hair and a fading complexion, and your living picture has become a chromo. And where are you then?

So, for heaven's sake, don't marry a man just because he is handsome and because the other girls think he is wonderful. You won't care so much to have other women crazy about your husband, anyway, after you are married. It will be peace and comfort in your soul to know that you are united to a man whose pulchritude does not catch every roving feminine eye.

Homely men are desirable as husbands for many reasons. First, because they don't keep you always watching your fingers. Secondly, because they admire you, instead of expecting you to burn incense before them. Thirdly, because you don't have to listen to people wonder why that sort of a looking sheik tied up with an ordinary-looking woman like you. And lastly, because the plain, or garden variety, of man is likely to have more sense than the beautiful one.

As to the desirable qualities in a husband, they are honesty, uprightness, intelligence, sympathy, understanding, good nature and an ability to get along in the world. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Why is it that before marriage a man's mother is plain woman to him, while after marriage she becomes a saint?

Before we were married my husband was no model son to his mother, and showed her no particular affection. But now he has developed an almost unearthly devotion which causes him to lavish many attentions and spend much money upon her, while I have my head snapped off if I even mention the fact that I am in need of a few dollars. LACHRYMAE.

Answer:

I think most men and women love and appreciate their mothers more after marriage than they did before.

Children and young people take everything that their parents do for granted, and as no more than their right, but when they grow older they realize the sacrifices that their fathers and mothers made for them and the burdens they bore in order that they might have a carefree childhood and youth.

Also, of course, blessings brighten as they fade, and no people are so perfect and admirable as those with whom we do not have to live. The sons and daughters who idealize their old mothers and fathers, and who sash over with the most beautiful sentiments concerning them, are those who do not have to live with the old people and put up with their grumpiness and ways. Mother's halo would get quite a few dents in it if your husband had to listen to her tell over the same old stories and endure her eternal nagging and gratify her never-ending curiosity.

It is the flavor of one's youth that makes mother's pies and mother's bread taste like ambrosia. In reality, they were generally soggy creations against which our stomachs would now revolt.

It is well and good for men and women to idealize their mothers. Nothing they can do can repay mother for the love she has given them, the care she has bestowed upon them, the sacrifices she has made for them.

But they have no right to put mother above their husbands and wives, and if they have a grain of sense in their heads they would put the soft pedal on their praise of mother.

For no man wants his wife to be always telling him what mother says and what mother thinks he should do, and no woman wants to hear what a marvelous cook mother is, nor how mother can run a house without money, nor what an angel mother is.

I should advise my wife whose husband was still tied to mother's apron strings to go off on a visit, and leave him to spend a long time with mother. He would think a lot better of wife's methods when she got back. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—What would you do if you were married to a big, strong, husky woman, who wouldn't get up and do your breakfast? I have to cook mine and take my wife's to her in bed. Then she gets up and goes off in the car and spends the day gadding around. The only meal she pretends to cook is supper, and she buys most of that at the delicatessen. JOHN.

Answer:

I would tell her that I was going off and get a divorce, and marry a wife who would get my breakfast for me. There is no reason why a man should support a woman who is a lazy loafer, who lays down on the job and refuses to do her part. If I were a man I wouldn't do it. DOROTHY DIX.

THE ISLAND OF DEATH

A Weird Tragedy of a Man Who Called Himself
"Monsieur le Devil."

By H. BEDFORD JONES.

INSTALMENT X.

The Leading Characters.

PAUL, LEBRUN, known as Monsieur le Devil, a kins among cut-throats and thieves, who, after escaping from life imprisonment in French Indo-China, has sailed his revenge against Jean des Gauchons, the man who caused his imprisonment, by invading the latter's South Sea island domain and brutally killing him. Lebrun intends to murder everyone on the island, but is opposed by CUREL, a dissolute soldier of fortune, a member of Lebrun's band, and J. HUDSON SMITH, an American, who has a strong cohort of Lebrun. He and Curel counter-plot to overthrow the reign of terror that Monsieur le Devil has imposed.

FELICE BONNARD, loyal to Lebrun. The mystery of life and death. I shall endeavor to elucidate it. As he spoke, Smith moved. His foot struck the thigh of Lebrun, which had been sewed by Lebrun. It was a shrewd kick, carrying very little force, but with enough to serve its purpose quite well.

CHAPTER XX.
A Lost Chance. From Lebrun was wrenched a cry of agony. He doubled up, catching both hands at his wounded thigh. Before he could move again, Smith had whipped the thin triangular blade from its scabbard and lunged forward with it. The thrust went home just as Lebrun was straightening up.

The blade entered the collar-bone, and Lebrun, rising as though to meet the deadly thrust, impaled himself. The blade protruded a foot behind his shoulder. He caught at it with both hands, and his mouth opened. Like an orange-ouang, shot through the chest who claws at the wound and foams great screams of agony. Lebrun tore at the thin blade and tried to vent his rage—but no sound came from him. His mouth gaped frightfully. He tried to rush forward upon Smith, but death was loosening his knees.

"I believe," said Smith, coolly, "that at last you comprehend everything, my friend."

The eyes of Lebrun widened. He clutched at the air, and rocked upon his feet for an instant; then his knees doubled, and he fell backward through the doorway of the library, whence he had emerged. Smith gazed after him, and a few things, said Lebrun, "I don't comprehend. I begin to comprehend why L'Etoile died," said Lebrun, his baleful grin still fastened upon the American. "I don't know what you mean," said Lebrun, his small eyes glittering.

The two men stood, thus, at gaze. Lebrun produced no weapon. He was clear, he considered Smith unarmed; he himself, doubtless, had appropriated Smith's automatic. "Don't make a mistake," said Smith calmly.

"Not I. You stated, I believe, that you were some sort of engineer, at work on the new railroad construction? Very good. Yet this girl recognizes you as the man of whom we all heard, yet whom no one knew before. The man whom the governor-general trusted."

"You forget," drawled Smith, "the slight matter of my being at present wanted by the authorities. I don't forget, for instance, that you are the unknown foreigner who has played the devil with all honest thieves—the mysterious foreigner! Well, there is no more mystery."

"There is no more mystery," murmured Smith, with a slight nod of assent. "That is all very true, Lebrun. But now I am your comrade."

Lebrun laughed harshly. "My comrade? Bah! I don't forget that L'Etoile was my comrade. As for you, assassin, you are a comrade of mine. I want no policeman at my side."

"But, the reward!" Lebrun brushed aside this suggestion with a shake of his bulging jaws. "No, no! Never mind all that." He leered at Smith, brought up his hands, and began to crack his knuckles rapidly. "Hey! Do you know that I am going to kill you?"

Smith gazed at him with imperturbable calm. Only his right thumb moved, very slightly. With this movement, he unfasted the catch which would lay bare the steel of the sword-cane in his hand.

"Kill me?" he repeated. "But, in the name of everything, why?" Lebrun laughed. From him emanated a faint but distinct red, obviously, he had been at the brandy bottle again. He was not responsible.

Smith perceived that there could be but one issue from this encounter. He could read this issue in the eyes of the other man. Lebrun knew him to be wounded, weakened, and unarmed. There was no pity in the eyes of the killer.

Almost instantly Smith dismissed the notion of shooting Lebrun. He could do it with a gun, but at this juncture would spoil everything. A shot would bring every one, and there must be no shooting until the time was ripe. The Morpion was merely an obstacle; the true focus of danger was Monsieur le Devil. And for all Smith knew, Lebrun might be in the adjoining room.

"Kill me," he said again. "Why?" "In the first place, because you killed poor L'Etoile," grated Lebrun, coming a step or two closer. A new gleam lighted his evil eyes.

"And, in the second place, because I have decided that this girl shall be mine instead of yours. In the third place, because you are the mysterious foreigner. I don't like foreigners, me, nor mystery, either."

"But," argued Smith pleasantly, "all this is no basis for killing, my friend! Besides, M. le Diable wishes to make use of me."

Lebrun leered. "Yes, but when he learns who you are, he may change his mind."

"At least, you will allow me to die quickly."

"As quickly as my hands will do it," Lebrun bared his teeth. "Ah! You damned gentlemen—I want to feel your throat under my thumbs! Curel is another, with his accursed lazy elegance. Well, his turn will come! Now I shall kill you."

"In effect, you understand everything," said Smith. "Everything," repeated the other, drawing closer, his hands outstretched and tense. In his eyes was the bloodlust.

"But there is one mystery which you do not yet comprehend," said Smith very calmly.

The other paused, blinking at him. "En? And what is that, you white-throat?"

The mystery of life and death. I shall endeavor to elucidate it. As he spoke, Smith moved. His foot struck the thigh of Lebrun, which had been sewed by Lebrun. It was a shrewd kick, carrying very little force, but with enough to serve its purpose quite well.

Gains Millions in Lobsters.

Fresh lobsters to the value of nearly $1,500,000 have been shipped to the United States from Canada during the past year. Lobsters have thus become an important industry in Canada.

Two courses were open to him. In one direction, at the end of that avenue of palms, was Berangere; he might go to her. In the other direction was the harbor, where he might join Curel and Lebrun. Why not go thither and trust to the single cable there had vanished. Only one remained; the large motor cruiser, which had been drawn into the boat-house, where the water was deep close to the float.

This was the better course, decidedly. He knocked out his pipe and rose. After a moment he stood leaning on the stick, and turned toward the cove. It occurred to him with passing curiosity that he had seen nothing of Felice Bonnard, but he dismissed the thought as inconsequential. She was probably about the house somewhere.

Holding himself stiffly, Smith slowly proceeded toward the boat-house. He could walk well enough, although his strength was slender. What worried him most was the single cable ridge in his automatic. It gave him a terribly slender margin.

Pausing occasionally to rest, he followed the winding path and came at last, to the little house perched at the verge of the cliff overlooking the cove. He had already heard from the creak of the sculler, and knew how it was worked. There was only a lever to pull.

He sank down upon the seat over-looking the cove. For a moment he felt dizzy and weak; everything was a blur. Then a voice and a step, and the creak of the sculler, he looked up to see Lebrun standing before him.

"Smith! What's the matter, man?" exclaimed the other quickly. "You're livid—"

Smith's fingers trembled. One cartridge. He dared not do it now. He could not trust himself to shoot. "Overdone," he said faintly. "Hurt my side."

"Rest," said Lebrun, with decision. "Take it easy, man! I've been working here this morning. Make yourself at home—the place is yours."

With a chuckle, he passed on. Smith looked after him, and even reached for his pocket. Then he paused—he dared not risk that one hand at the moment. Then the moment was passed; Lebrun had disappeared.

With a long breath, Smith regained control of himself. The weakness passed. It was very good to sit here and rest. His eyes wandered to the cove beneath—ah! What was wrong down there? He leaned forward, alert once more. He saw now what it was that Lebrun had been working over, doubtless aided by Curel. All those boats down there had vanished. Only one remained; the large motor cruiser, which had been drawn into the boat-house, where the water was deep close to the float.

Starting and Stopping a Debate.

An interesting point in parliamentary procedure came up at Ottawa, when it was demonstrated that 20 members, a minority of the House, could change the subject under debate, bring in a matter to which the majority objected, and do it all with the sanction of Mr. Speaker and in accordance with recognized rules of parliament.

The Commons was prepared in its afternoon session to go ahead with the discussion on church union, a matter that had been waiting long enough. Sir Henry Drayton was anxious to have a chance to bring the question of the postal strike up for debate.

A ruling that is not often used was brought to bear on the subject. Sir Henry claimed the postal strike in Toronto was of serious national importance, and as evidence stated that letters he had written to Toronto had not been delivered. In such a case the Speaker reads to the House the statement of the matter to be discussed, and asks if the member has the leave of the House. If objection is taken, the Speaker requests those supporting the bringing up of the matter (in this case the postal strike) to rise in their places, and if more than 20 members rise the Speaker calls upon the member who has asked leave to speak.

There were several protests from members of the House, some of whom could not grasp the idea of any 20 men in a chamber of almost 12 times that number foisting their wish on the majority. The remarks of some in the way of request for information leads to the belief that they did not know of the existence of the rule.

Yet it was done. When 20 Conservatives stood in support of Sir Henry Drayton's desire to speak on the postal strike, while the majority of the members would have voted to go on with the church union debate, Sir Henry was given the floor of the House. The debate he started was fairly relevant at first, but tapered off into a sort of Alice in Wonderland affair, when Mr. Martell introduced a motion, as little used as the one by which the debate was started, his wording being: "That the House do now proceed to the Orders of the Day." That really meant that the debate must stop and the regular business be proceeded with. More questioning drew from Mr. Speaker the ruling that the motion was quite in order, and was carried by a majority of 120 to 45.

Thus a debate that was started on the vote of 20 against the rest of the House was stopped by a majority of 120 to 45. All of which goes to show that parliamentary procedure is a fairly complex thing, and not nearly as simple as some might imagine.

A Pig Wrecks a Car.

A peculiar accident occurred near Wallaceburg when a touring car with five occupants was thrown into the ditch from striking a pig that walked in front of the car. Motorists know that it is no use attempting to try conclusions with a cow, for the effect is about the same as running into a stone wall, but the idea of the lowly pig putting a car in a ditch with such force as to smash it badly and send several of the passengers to the hospital is a development that many motorists have probably never considered.

One of the oldest auto dealers in London, who has had a long experience with cars, states that he has known cars that were ditched with bad results from running into a good-sized dog. His viewpoint is interesting. "I would rather," he states, "run into a cow than a pig, going at the same speed in both cases. Running into a cow would certainly stop you and perhaps wreck the front of your car, but the machine would stay on the road. Running into a smaller animal such as a pig is worse because it is much the same as striking a big stone, which will throw the car to one side and probably into the ditch. In the case of the cow the machine stops right there; in the case of the pig it is hard to say where it will stop. My experience is to let either the cow or the pig have all the right-of-way it desires, for one can never tell when they will come from the side and walk directly across the road."

In the Name of Religion.

How is it that a person with peculiar ideas in regard to religious matters can always find a following?

Just now London, England, has placards calling for the mysterious box left by Joanna Southcott, over a hundred years ago. This box is said to contain certain writings that will save London from an impending disaster, and a petition bearing the names of 12,000 London women has been sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury urging him to use his office for the discovery of the mysterious box which must be opened in the presence of twenty-four bishops in keeping with the will of Joanna the prophetess.

Joanna Southcott has been dead 110 years. Working in her earlier years as a domestic servant, she became convinced that she was a prophetess and began the circulation of her writings, many of them in rhyme. Before she died she had a following of over 100,000 calling themselves the Southcottians or the Joannas. Following her death the sect faded and dwindled, and nothing more might have been heard of her but for an explosion in 1874 that shattered the tombstone that was erected over her grave, she having died from brain disease.

Yet there are thousands today, some of them probably sincere, others nudged on by curiosity, calling for the opening of some old box that this rattle-brained individual was supposed to have left telling how London might be saved from impending disaster.

Just what the disaster is no one seems to know, but they want to be saved from it just the same.

The story of the Joannas can be duplicated in any country. It is only a few months ago that the leader of the House of David was chased from his cozy quarters in Michigan. He was a miserable fakir from first to last, but he was able to prey upon the religious instinct, or its substitute, and drag a number of people into his net. Their property became his property, and in the end he was proven to be a moral leper and a despicable thief. Yet he was enabled to carry on right under the eye of the law, whereas he should have been taken by the scuff of the neck or by his long hair and shoved into common jail.

People who are otherwise normal seem to possess a weak spot that is open for the approach of some new leader who claims to have been struck with a new ray of light, or hit with a vision that the rest of the world has been denied. There is a big corner in the world's graveyard for the tombstones of faddists and freaks and sometimes plain swindlers who have waxed fat on the frailties of human nature to scamper off when some new leader crooks his finger.

The Houses People Live In.

Assessment Commissioner Bennett believes that people should live in houses that have some bearing on the size of their income. Probably it's an old-fashioned idea the commissioner has picked up, but its revival is not a mistake.

An assessment commissioner has a better chance of looking over the field than most people. It is his business to poke into people's affairs to a certain extent, and if there is to be free warning and advice now and then, it should come from an authority.

Mr. Bennett takes the case of a house assessed at $7,000, while the owner's income is $1,400 per year. The regular taxes and special charges against such a property would not be far removed from $300, which is $25 per month. Then he has his investment to look after, and a house assessed at $7,000 would probably be held for at least $9,000. At six per cent there is another $540, or $45 in all at a very conservative estimate, which is $70 per month. According to the old rules of housekeeping if a man were to pay $70 a month for a house he should be making a salary of $3,640 a year, or as much per week as his rent per month.

The trouble is that the huddled-up way in which too many are living, and the high prices asked for many small houses, has forced people to get away from a safe basis, where they can carry a load that balances their carrying power. Keeping up too big a house is forced on some people, and with it the problem of building a fence in the premises and renting part of the place.

Apart from that the advice of the assessment commissioner is sound. Debt and financial worry take most of the glamor off a too big house. The less pretentious place that can be easily handled stands a better chance of romping off with the sweepstakes in the race for joy, happiness and sweet content.

As the Prince of Wales Sees Canada.

The Prince of Wales will visit his ranch in Western Canada this fall. His reason for so doing makes rather a human statement. He finds the great open spaces of the west a real tonic, and he sees Canada as "a great, clean country, full of hope and confidence in the future."

That is as fine a compliment as could be paid to the Dominion, "a great, clean country, full of hope and confidence in the future."

Note and Comment.

A $5,000 wife in a $3,000 car is quite a strain on a $2,000 income.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS.

A symbolic event took place the other day when the Queen of Belgium walked up to the ballot box and dropped in her vote.

It was noticed by most newspaper readers with a curious smile, and possibly mentioned over the coffee cups as a picturesque item, but really it was significant and worth turning over in the mind.

It marks the utter passage of the old order. Kings and queens and all the Lord's anointed are certainly not what they used to be.

Imagine Abdul the Damned or Louis the Magnificent waiting in line at the polls, or picture the Prussian Kaiser or the Russian Czar standing up to be counted!

Sometimes we grow peevish and inclined to think the old world is getting sour, that it's the twilight of the gods, the rich own the earth, and little son Tommy is entering upon a world game with the cards stacked against him.

Where are our liberties? We ask, and its' Oh for the good old merry days so light and gay!

Then a little thing like a Queen voting brings us up with a jerk.

And there comes to mind what we have read: Of Grand seigneurs of Bourbon days deflowering a mother's child, flanking the horror-stricken parent a purse of gold and riding away singing raptatlap, raptatlap.

Of noble lords of Charles Stuart's day ordering his bullies to flog the impertinent tradesman for daring to send in his bill.

Of Richard's summary command, "Off with his head!" and then chorline, "So much for Buckingham!"

Of Le Roi Soleil, the magnificent old lecher, who lounged through the barbaric splendors of Versailles, played with wantons at Trianon, and said, "The State? I am the State," neither did anybody deny him.

Of the imperious Hapsburgs riding down peasant children in the street and insulting ladies in the cafe while their escorts stood respectfully at attention.

Of Russian grand dukes flogging moujiks for daring to complain of sickness, and Cossacks shooting down the assembled people who had the temerity to present a petition.

Of slave drivers tying black men to whipping posts and selling their little ones into bondage. Of all the cruel, dirty, cowardly and unjust antics of privileged scoundrels and crowned perverts.

Of all the unhung tascals upon thrones that, halloed by superstition, exalted by tradition and protected by soldiers, have trampled their gluttonous way through honest human wheat, defiling what they could not destroy.

And of how children were taught to honor them, how bishops consecrated them, how decent men accepted them as a matter of course and struggled for their favors.

How Goethe lived upon a noble's bounty like any lackey, Mozart cooled his heels like a milliner's maid in the antechamber of simpering duchesses that his divine genius might get a hearing.

Of how for long centuries, from generation to generation, mankind has been lulled, buncoed and browbeaten by the ancient delusion of hereditary nobility.

And then when we see her royal highness voting, alongside the millman's wife and the grocer's clerk,

We are forced to conclude that the world does move, and that in spite of the fact that the banker lives in a fine house and we live in a walkup flat,

That Mary Pickford makes a thousand dollars or so a day while our Rachel works harder and only gets fifteen a week,

That Wall street gentlemen control millions while we have difficulty in holding our jobs,

In fine, that some are still rich and dress in purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day, while others must hustle mightily to pay the rent.

In spite of it all, and for a' that and a' that, it's a better world than it was,

Children have a better chance and shed fewer tears, Young men and maidens have cleaner dreams and a finer romance,

It's no such disgrace and stigma as it used to be to be a workman,

That the winds of liberty blow free, from the Statue of Liberty to the Golden Gate,

And that altogether out of the blood and grime and dust and disease of the past there is pushing up the white flower of Hope.

Anyhow, it's not so bad as it was. The queen votes.

Mary and John

Yes, Mary went into the sea, while John he stayed close to his home, he couldn't see no fun at all in listenin' to the waters moan.

His wife was young, a sprightly thing, the seashore dudes spread out their dough, they tumbled o'er themselves to rise each way that Mary chose to go. Yes she had caught them by the nose, a merry widow said they all, and planned each one to marry her between the summer and the fall.

While Mary in these giddy times, she stabbed her pen into the ink, and as she penned some words to John into her eye there came a wink.

'Twas thus she wrote to John at home, "My dear, I'm feeling blue today, life seems a dull and dreary thing when John from Mary gets away. But I am resting at this place, my nervous system's been made new, I'm longing for the day to come when I'll be turning back to you."

While Mary's campin' by the sea John is no more an also-ran, for John is kickin' up the deuce, he is a wild and giddy man.

To the Editor

Recalls Former Days.

Resident of Cincinnati Tells of Times Spent in London Many Years Ago.

Editor of The Advertiser:—

Sir—"Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who newer to himself hath said, this is my own, my native land?" Having lived in Cincinnati for nearly twenty years, it occurred to me, after the incident related in my letter of last week, that many an interesting thing might be told that would amuse the younger generation as well as the older in London of things that belong to forty years ago, as well as happenings since that day in November, '84, when I went to Chatham, never knowing that it would be the last time I should know London as my home.

Several years ago I called on an old gentleman I had some acquaintance with, and incidentally asked him how he had enjoyed his summer vacation with his son in Canada, and mentioned that I was born in Canada, in London. He said in reply that he had crossed the ocean in 1864, with a man from London named Adams, who was a wagonmaker, and I had then to say, "Why, my grandfather was a wagonmaker in London." In my early days I used to go often to the wagon factory located on the corner of Ridout and Fullerton, occupying, as I recollect, about a quarter of the entire block. Grandfather John Plummer died in 1877, and Uncle John Plummer carried on the business until about the time I left London. He was president of the Western Fair Board and the Baseball Club, and I believe was well liked.

Ephraim Plummer, after whom I was named, is now living in New York, retired. I was talking to another man here one day, and after knowing him for ten or twelve years, found out that he was also from London, about 62 years, having come to Cincinnati when about 20 years old. He is now 82 years old and retired, after having been quite successful in the planing mill business. I enjoy making an occasional visit with him, and he seems to enjoy them too.

His name is Andrew Morrison. Still another is Robert Atkinson, who has been here longer than Mr. Morrison.

I asked Mr. Atkinson if he knew Andrew Morrison one day, because I knew Atkinson had belonged to the Canadian Association when we had one about eighteen years ago, and it turned out that Atkinson was also a near-Londoner, having come from Biddulph, Ontario, sincerely,
EDWARD P. ANDREW.

OTTAWA REJECTS NEW BANK PLAN

House Votes Against Proposal
To Investigate Central Banking Plan.

VOTE IS 109 TO 32

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, July 2.—By a vote of 109 to 32, the House of Commons, just before midnight, rejected the report of the select standing committee on banking and commerce seeking the enlargement of the scope of the committee to include the investigation of "some type of central or federal bank system in Canada."

The vote came after an all-day debate, in which the support of the report and of the idea of a federal reserve bank came chiefly from the Agrarian members. Of the Conservatives, only Leon Ladner (South Vancouver) and W. F. MacLean (South York) supported the report. These, with J. L. Stansell (East Elgin), were the only Conservatives to vote for the report when the division was taken. All the Liberals, and about half a dozen Progressives, including J. Fred Johnston, chief Progressive whip, voted against.

Referred To House.
The chairman of the committee, Thomas Vign (Liberal, Lotbinière) explained that the report embodied a motion made in committee which as chairman he had been compelled to rule out of order because it was outside of the "order of reference" on which the committee conducted its deliberations. It had been decided to refer the question to the House.

The idea of a central reserve bank was not a new one. It had occupied the Canadian House of Commons before. If an enlargement of the scope of the committee was asked in order to permit it to collect information on the workings of the system, it might be said to be superfluous. Since the formation of the Federal Reserve Bank in the United States in 1910 a whole library of information on the subject had become available, and some of it already deposited in the parliamentary library.

If, on the other hand, the object of the discussion was to form immediately a Canadian central reserve bank, then Mr. Vign thought such a move was undesirable. He gave a number of reasons why he thought the system as it obtained in the United States would not be suitable to the Canadian system of banking.

Sees No Necessity.
Unsettled financial conditions were by no means peculiar to any one section of Canada, Mr. Vign said. The same economic difficulties which confronted the Western farmer also faced farmers all over the United States where a federal reserve bank was in operation. He pointed out that business organizations, other than banks, had suffered because of the shrinkage of credit, which he regarded as an aftermath of the war. He quoted evidence given by Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor.

Train Windows Broken By Shots

Special to The Advertiser.
Chatham, July 2.—Mysterious shots were fired at a C. N. R. train when within a mile of the station here last night on its westbound trip. Bullets shattered the windows of one of the coaches and narrowly missed E. C. Blackall, local Canadian express agent, and his wife (former Londoners), who were returning to the city from London. While police believe that the shots were fired at random by some persons fooling with firearms, the matter will be fully investigated.

general manager of the Bank of Montreal, in opposition to the proposal for the establishment of a central reserve bank in Canada. Sir Frederick had said that there was no necessity for such a bank at present, although the time might come when it would be required.

L. J. Ladner (Conservative, Vancouver South) pointed out that no one was advocating a federal reserve bank for Canada and that Mr. Vign was building up a strong man simply to knock him down.

J. T. Shaw (Independent, Calgary West) declared that the request was simply to consider and study the system and not to adopt it. Mr. Shaw said it was the duty of parliament to furnish adequate credit facilities for the country, and it was necessary that a better system of rediscouinting should be found. He approved of Hon. J. A. Robb's resolution to provide an inspector-general of banks. It would convert the finance department from an undertaking institution for banks into a hospital clinic where they might be treated for their ills.

Control Inadequate.
The finance department at present did not constitute adequate control of banks. The credit of the Home Bank had been impaired for years and the department knew nothing about it. What was needed was an independent accounting board which would take the incoherent factors in the national banking system and make them work together for the country's benefit, to effectively administer the national resources of the country.

The proponents of the system did not seek a revolution of the present banking system, but rather an evolution. It was necessary also, to restore the confidence of the public in the banking institutions. Hon. J. A. Robb said that this question had been pretty thoroughly threshed out last year. There was ample information available on the subject, and further research this session by the banking committee would be useless. Answering Mr. Shaw's reference to the necessity for a better system of rediscouinting, Mr. Robb thought the provisions of the finance act afforded Canadians as much protection as the federal reserve afforded Americans. He would vote against the report for these reasons.

W. F. MacLean (Conservative, South York) said he would like to see the banks prosper, but they must not lose sight of the fact that the underlying principle should be the credit of the nation before anything else.

National Plan.
He stated that banking in a number of other countries had evolved into a function of the state, and suggested that at some future date it might be necessary to apply to the Canadian banks a somewhat similar process as that which resulted in the formation of the Canadian National Railways system. Mr. MacLean said that the United States had gradually evolved a banking system which that country would not change for any system of private banking in the world.

Banks should not be allowed to issue their own notes. Because of a feeling of confidence in provincial savings banks the provincial banks had done very well. Mr. MacLean regretted the limitations placed on the postoffice savings branches.

G. G. Coote (Progressive, MacLeod) supported the report. He quoted at length the opinions of experts on the beneficial operation of the Federal Reserve Bank in the United States, and expressed the conviction that Canada would derive as much benefit from it.

H. Marler (Liberal, St. Lawrence-St. George) said that the unit system obtaining in the United States was so different from the Canadian system of branches that a system which succeeded with the one would not succeed with the other. Canada had a right to be proud of its banks and their achievements. The Canadian system, he said, replying to Mr. Shaw's observations on credit, provided the most elastic system of credit.

As for bank failures, Mr. Marler said there were many more failures in the United States.

Attacks Robb.
W. C. Good (Progressive, Brant) argued that a central bank was closely related to the protection of depositors. The safety of deposits, he said, was greatly influenced by recurrent inflation and deflation and the fluctuation of price levels. A central bank would make possible a managed currency, by which a check could be put on business crises with their attendant perils in the banking world. In the debate this afternoon the acting minister of finance had apparently taken the ground that the House should refuse the banking and commerce committee even the right to investigate this proposal. Such an attitude was outrageous.

Mr. Good thought it time Canada changed its "Rip Van Winkle policy" and abandoned the systems of twenty years ago. He said that the management of its banking and community credit. If a change was not made there would be in the future very unpleasant results.

E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) wished to emphasize the statements made by Mr. Good. William Irvine (Labor, Calgary East) said that he was not certain that a central reserve bank would solve all our financial problems, but he was certain that it was worthy of study.

Full Approval Given To Move Avenging Death of American.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, July 2.—George Landbury, Labor member, asked in the House of Commons today by whose authority the commander of the British gunboat, Cockchafer, had compelled, under threat of bombardment, the authorities of Wanchien, China, to follow the funeral of Edward Hawley, a United States citizen and employee of a British export firm who was murdered by Chinese junkmen, and had demanded the execution of Hawley's murderers. Frank Hodges, civil lord of the Admiralty, in reply to the question, said the Cockchafer was the only war vessel present and that its commander had taken the action which he had considered necessary. There were cheers from the opposition when Mr. Hodges said that the British officer's action had materially assisted in saving life.

COMMITTEE OPPOSES RURAL CREDITS PLAN

Report Emergency Scheme
Not Feasible—Will Discuss
Depositors' Claim

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, July 2.—A report against emergency legislation this year in regard to rural credits was presented to the commons banking committee this morning by Dr. McKay, Liberal,

Renfrew, chairman of the sub-committee on rural credits.

The report stated that any plan adopted should apply to all provinces, that it would not be possible to create machinery this year, and that therefore attention should be concentrated on the drafting of a permanent rural credit scheme.

Dr. McKay also presented a report recommending amendments to the Bankruptcy Act to provide that in provinces having a provincial official analogous to a bankruptcy trustee, such officer may act as trustee under the Bankruptcy Act where the insolvent is a farmer.

Chairman Vign announced that the debate in the House of Commons on the committee report on the reimbursement of the Home Bank de-positors would probably take place on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

WHICH — next winter?

NEXT WINTER can either bring you the prized human adventure . . . or, the ordinary human humdrum.

Which will largely be decided by this summer. For now is the time to plan your cruise to the Gateway Ports of the World.

What an experience these cruises contain! Your great private yacht follows springtime 'round the world. It slips into Gateway Port after Gateway Port. You explore the lands of romance, Spain, Egypt, Holy Land, India, Java, China, Japan, and many more. You meet their peoples, shop their bazaars, live their histories. Of such is life at its biggest.

On sea, you enjoy the luxury of a Canadian Pacific Empress; on shore, the best hotels, motorcars and trains. All arrangements are Canadian Pacific, that is, of highest standard. Canadian Pacific spans the world . . .

Cost? No more than comparable luxury at home. Time? Hardly more than an ordinary vacation.

ROUND THE WORLD CRUISE. Sailing from New York, January 14th. Returning via Hawaii, Vancouver, San Francisco, Panama Canal to New York, 130 days; visits twenty-two countries, option of returning via rail from Vancouver or San Francisco. Steamship—EMPERESS OF FRANCE. Chosen twice for voyages by Lord Renfrew (Prince of Wales).

MEDITERRANEAN CRUISE. Sailing from New York, February 9th, 62 days. Steamship—EMPERESS OF SCOTLAND. Her fourth cruise in these waters.

CHATHAM SEEKS OLDEST "OLD BOY"

Reunion Officials Arrange Contest For Visitors At Old Home Week.

Special to The Advertiser.
Chatham, July 2.—While some "old boys and girls" took their departure today, others arrived by all trains, and they are not permitting any let-up in an enthusiastic Old Home Week celebration.

Crowds flocked to the athletic park this afternoon, where interesting soccer and lacrosse contests were staged, while another record crowd witnessed fast horses compete in speed trials at the Chatham Driving Park. A feature of tonight's program was a monster dance held on King street, where hundreds of couples danced to music furnished by the Kent Regiment band. The feature is to be repeated tomorrow night.

Reunion officials are arranging a contest to ascertain who is the "oldest boy" present with the largest family, the oldest "old boys and girls" here for the celebration, and the "old boys and girls" who have travelled the greatest distance for the reunion. The results of the contest will be announced Friday afternoon and the prizes awarded.

The Griffin Theatre was filled to capacity tonight, when Geoff O'Hara, a former Chatham boy, provided an interesting entertainment. O'Hara's fame as a singer and composer is international.

So far there has been no accident, and no incident which warranted police interference, a state of affairs which was referred to with pride by Chief of Police Groves.

CONTRACTOR WINS IN ACTION FOR RETURN OF 'TITLE' MONEY

Associated Press Despatch.

London, July 2.—The jury hearing the suit of Colonel George Parkinson, a Blackpool contractor, for the return of money alleged to have been paid to an organization known as the "College of Ambulance," on the understanding that he would be awarded a title today delivered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for £3,000, the full amount of the claim.

Mr. Justice Lush, however, said he would hear further legal arguments towards the end of July. During the hearing he expressed the opinion that Parkinson's move to purchase a title was an illegal transaction and that therefore he had no claim. Parkinson, in his evidence, said he had been assured that the president of the Ambulance Society was the late Princess Christian, who was said to have had calls on certain honors.

The little lad was struck by the northbound Pere Marquette passenger train near the Park avenue crossing, and sustained a fractured skull. He died while being rushed to Dr. C. E. Oliver's office. An inquest will be opened tomorrow morning by Coroner McRitchie.

MOVE AMENDING B. N. A. PROPOSED

Canada Asks For Right To Amend Her Own
Constitution.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, July 2.—W. F. MacLean of South York, proposes to move an address in the House, requesting that the British Parliament make such amendments to the British North America Act as to give Canada the right to amend her own constitution.

Constitutional amendments under Mr. MacLean's proposals would be brought about by an absolute majority vote of each House of the Dominion Parliament. The Dominion Parliament, would not, however, be empowered to pass any amendment affecting the rights guaranteed in the British North American Act to minorities. Australia already possesses the right to amend her own constitution.

Three Students Hike 350 Miles

Special to The Advertiser.
Stratford, July 2.—Walking and riding at intervals, three students of Ohio Wesleyan University arrived from Delaware, Ohio, yesterday, a distance of 350 miles, to attend the wedding of Miss Pearl Garden and Alden Noble, which will be held tomorrow morning at the home of the former's aunts,
the Misses Garden, Water street.
The hikers, who chose the trip
as part of their holiday program, are representatives of widely separated corners of the earth. All are the sons of missionaries in foreign fields. One of the young men, Harold Noble, calls Seoul, Korea, his home. Ralph Simister comes from Hoochow, China, and Harold Smith is from Algeria.

representative of The Advertiser he looked over the building he expects to conquer. He said he could do it, and to hear him say so is to believe it, for he just radiates confidence.

Mr. White emphasizes that his profession is no haphazard occupation.
It must be carefully studied. The human fly must have a perfect body, exceptionally strong and perfectly healthy. He must study buildings, know his strength, and be sure of the amount of strain his muscles will stand. Armed with these most necessary attributes, he is ready to tackle the game, provided, of course, he has the nerve.

Master of His Work.

To see Babe White, a man of five feet seven inches, weighing 150 pounds, broad chested, robust and bronzed, who when he smiles gives a glimpse of perfect teeth, above a determined chin, is to believe that he is master of his work. To feel the powerful muscles of his wrists and arms is to know the most that one could expect of human flesh.

Asked if he ever had any fears for his safety, he answered yes, many times, but he felt that fear could be replaced with confidence by training, just as a weak muscle can be trained to be a strong one.

He recalled his first grip of fear, when he climbed his first building in Minneapolis, Minn. It was only a three-story building; he was up two stories when he became afraid.

Beat Fear.

"I hung on, looked up and then looked down. It was two stories to the bottom, only one to the top, and I decided to go higher, and so beat fear. I am accustomed to divide fear into two classes, the fear that makes one slip or just go limp and the other where one hangs on for dear life. They seem to be equally dangerous, I try to conquer both; as a matter of fact, they only appear when I am tired. As strength decreases confidence decreases, then fear steps in. I try to regain confidence by a slight rest, or if that is impossible banish it by substitution, that is, think of something else for a minute.

Questioned as to whether he was ever overcome with dizziness, the human fly replied that he had never experienced any such feeling. He felt that dizziness would come from imperfect health.

Asked if tobacco or liquor would affect his work, he thought that his body was equal to throwing off any bad effects of those vices. Just the same he did not use them, for he is very careful. He admits to having a passion for sweets, he loves pie, and cake and cream and ice cream sundais. He was ashamed to admit it, but he sometimes ate more goodies than was good for him.

Well Trained.
Mrs. White believes that no accident will ever befall her husband. She knows that from childhood he has been trained in all the various branches of balancing, tightrope and slackwire climbing. Her husband conquered some of the meanest buildings in America during their tours from Mexico to Canada. Both feel that what a human fly meets with mishap it is due to carelessness, or lack of training.

Mr. White would not advise anyone to take up the profession. For himself, he likes it, as he has been in the show business since his fifth birthday. He looks upon every building as a distinct challenge, and to keep himself in a position to accept the challenges of grim walls he puts in several hours a day going through exercises to increase his strength and his "grip."

He warned against small boys trying out his stuff, thinking it easy, pointing out that every movement he makes is carefully planned, and while it may carry the appearance of carelessness, it is studied to the finest possible degree.

however, they were invited to join in the fun, which they did with celebrity.

Mr. J. Murray and Miss E. Pitt-away were in charge of the day's program.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC A SUCCESS

Young Members of Hope Church Spend Day At Summer Grove.

What was voted a very enjoyable and entirely successful picnic was held by the Hope Sunday School at Summers' Grove, first concession.

The members of the school were conveyed to the grounds early in the morning and remained there until late at night, enjoying themselves in a hundred ways.

An extra truck, filled to capacity, carried lunches to the grounds, and the picnic was a complete success.

A lively sport program was held in the morning, while a ball game featured in the afternoon.

A baseball match was played between the Reds, captained by D.
Webster and the Blues, captained by E. Pittaway, which was won by the former to the tune of 10 to 5. The losers led most of the way but a rally in the last two innings gave the set-to to the followers of the Reds.

The evening the young people held a vesper service, consisting of many varied offerings, which were thoroughly enjoyed when the grand finale was the dazzling fireworks which attracted the attention of the whole countryside and brought several farmers from the district to find out what was going on. On arriving,

Westminster Names Special Constable To Act Against Petting Parties.

Petting parties beware!
Stanley Lawson of Glendale has been appointed township constable for Westminster, and will give special attention to lovers who park their cars on Glendale sideroads.

After listening to speeches by the new constable himself and Frank Dale, Westminster township council decided to make the appointment at yesterday's council meeting, and it now remains for Mr. Lawson to be sworn in by the county judge. Both residents stated that conditions were disgraceful on Westminster roads and that the third concession rider was also going to ask for special protection.

The petition asking for a constable was read by Councillor Bill Boler and was signed by 85 names. Messrs.
Boler and Johnston moved that the request be granted, and submitted the name of Mr. Lawson.

Lambeth school trustees and residents were present in force at the afternoon session, asking for $18,000

Prairie Provinces Are Enveloped in Warmest Weather of Season.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Winnipeg, July 2.—The Manitoba sweltered today in the warmest weather recorded in the province this summer. The mercury in Winnipeg reached the high mark of 90 degrees in the shade, which, however, is several degrees lower than other Western points.

A man believed to be William Green, of St. James, a suburb of Winnipeg, was stricken by the heat today while riding a bicycle on Portage avenue. He died before reaching the hospital.

Stricken by the heat, Mrs. F. Gun-thorpe of Logan, Sask., fell dead while attending a Lutheran Church concert at Drake. She leaves sixteen children, the youngest four years old.

Edmonton and Calgary report a slight drop in the temperature from the respective high marks of 96 and 91 registered on Tuesday, the humid wave seeming to be travelling eastward.

Farmers throughout the West are satisfied with the weather conditions, the general belief prevailing that the
