"Only the Scars Remain."

Says HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who certifies as follows:

"Among the many testimonials which I see in your issue, I have seen one in which you speak of the medicinal properties of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in curing cases, cleansing the blood, etc., none of which I have more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. My family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the scars healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the post for the past two years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

Mother Urged Me

Close the Book.

Now close the book and lay it away—
The Old Year's Book; we've read it through;

Leaf after leaf, and day after day,
We have turned the pages, both I and you.

What it has told us full well we know;
Each for himself the story has read;

Alas! they found it who mourn their dead.

And some have read of trial and pain,
Of weary burdens, so hard to bear,
Of bright hopes crushed, again and again,

Turning its pages in blank despair.

"A pleasant story," others may say,
Telling us more of joy than of pain;

Almost as we lay it away—
Would we might open and read it again!"

And some have read it with love's own eyes,
By the light that love alone can give,
While the pages glowed with love's surmise.

And life were joy, and 'twere joy to live,
But close the book, the story is old;

Lay it away with a smile or a tear;
Written in black or written in gold,
We open the book of another year.

SELECT STORY.

MRS. MUNROE'S COOK.

Mrs. Munroe was in ecstasies of delight. She had secured a new cook at the most ridiculous wages. Of course she had not told the new girl, but it was quite true that she paid her but half what she had been compelled to pay the cook who had just left her.

But when Almira Pollers, a fresh, pleasant-looking, young country girl, had applied for the place and had accepted Mrs. Munroe's offer of $2 a week to start with, her new mistress did not think it necessary to mention that the proffered sum was very low indeed.

"Of course, you shall have more as you improve, Almira, but you know so little about fancy cooking I scarcely feel able to pay you more at the start."

Mrs. Munroe had said, smiling sweetly on Almira, who did not know that very little fancy cooking was ever done in that household. And so Almira took up her burden, and for her first time in the nineteen years of her life began to earn wages.

The Pollers had always been farmers, and owned their own place, but Almira's father had somehow managed to get behind, and a mortgage had been fastened upon the farm. The man who told the mortgage was very well satisfied to receive a good interest every year and never Peter Pollers' note, but it came to pass that it was hard to pay even the interest. This particular year the crops had mostly failed.

It lacked but a few weeks until the interest was due, when Almira, the eldest of the flock—there were ten in all—made up her mind to go out to service. Her determination created a great commotion in the family. None of the Pollers women had ever worked out, and the idea was very distasteful, but Almira eventually carried the day. Had her education been thorough enough, she would gladly have taught school, but the little Pollers had appeared at such frequent intervals that Almira was obliged to stay at home most of the time to assist her mother, and her education was limited.

So, not without some inward struggle, she had decided that the only way she could help along would be by exercising her chief gift—cooking. Mrs. Munroe's advertisement in the weekly paper had caught her eye, and she was very happy when she had secured the situation. The wages were not large, but she could save all the money for her father, and there would be one less to feed at home; that counted for something.

Mrs. Munroe's family consisted of herself and a brother. Mr. Munroe had died several years before and his widow was quite wealthy. Her home, situated in an aristocratic suburb of the city, although small, was handsome and well appointed, and she had sufficient income to keep it up well. Mrs. Munroe liked to call herself economical, and we cannot deny that she was in some things. She dressed elegantly and gave largely to her church; but there never was a closer woman in some respects than she. The shop people dreaded to see her come in, for although she always purchased the best, she invariably haggled at the price until she got the goods for less than their marked price. At the groceries it was the same way, and woe to the servant who wasted a scrap of anything or pretended to eat more than the mistress thought necessary. After the first table Mrs. Munroe removed any delicacies she considered unnecessary for a servant's coarse appetite, without the slightest compunction. Her brother Tom, who paid a handsome wage to her, the privilege of sharing her home, once saw this performance, and remonstrated with her but to no avail.

"It would be casting pearls before swine," she remarked, to his intense disgust, as she replaced a dish of lemon jelly in the closet and substituted a saucer of molasses.

So Tom, seeing the uselessness, ceased to remonstrate, but many a stray dollar passed from his generous hand to the toil-worn hands of the different cooks who had been in Mrs. Munroe's employ, to make up for his sister's stinginess.

Tom Birney was one of those big-hearted, convivial fellows who, left with more money than they needed, succeeded in getting rid of it in different and unprofitable ways. He was not really bad, but he drank a good bit and never had done anything useful in his life. He had been put in his father's office, but he was extremely weak in his arithmetic, and succeeded in making up the figures so badly that it took an expert to untangle them. After that his father had not tried to make a business man of him, but had said that as Tom was out for a gentleman he should be one.

But that was exactly what poor Tom was not out for to be—that is, if we agree to the accepted meaning of the word—a man of refined manners. He loved horses and enjoyed the society of horsemen; liked better to hear a robust German girl sing funny songs at the garden than to hear Patti at the Grand. If he ever yielded to his sister's importunities to accompany her to a dancing party, he was sure to step on his partner's toes or tear their dresses by his awkwardness, and drink too much champagne at supper. In fact, Tom, although kind hearted and honest, was very ill at ease and out of place in society, and at last, after making himself especially conspicuous at a New Year's dance, his sister vowed she would never ask him to go out with her again. She told him this very emphatically the morning after the ball, as she left him to eat his late breakfast alone.

Tom was feeling very badly and indulging in a severe case of "kitten-jammer," the result of too frequent visits to the punch bowl, but looked up when Almira came in with his breakfast, and noticed that she was looking pale.

"What is the matter, Almira?" he asked.

"Nothing, Mr. Tom," replied Almira, moving towards the door quietly.

"I say there is something wrong; out with it, Almira," continued Tom, out with it, help her if she was in trouble, and at last, after making himself especially conspicuous at a New Year's dance, his sister vowed she would never ask him to go out with her again. she asked anxiously, "If it isn't a gown or a hat, what in heaven's name is it?" she burst into tears, and forgetting that she was Mrs. Munroe's servant girl and that Mr. Tom was her brother and a rich man, forgetting all save the trouble that was wearing on her and making her pale and thin, she poured out her woes into his sympathetic ear.

She told him about the mortgage on their farm; how it had been renewed from year to year when the interest was paid. They had grown so accustomed to that they never thought of losing the place until Mr. Pollers, on taking the interest so hardly earned and increased by Almira's savings, had been informed that his creditor needed his money and must have it or the farm.

The blow had fallen like a clap of thunder from a clear sky. The thought of leaving the old homestead was insupportable, and yet where could Peter Pollers expect to raise the money to cancel the mortgage?

Almira told her story, punctuated by sobs, and Tom listened attentively. When she had finished he asked: "Is it a large sum, Almira?"

"Oh, yes, Mr. Tom, $2000!" she said, sadly.

"Hum," said Tom, pulling his mustache and looking very hard out of the window, "couldn't your father get someone to pay the man and take up the mortgage?"

Almira shook her head dejectedly; no, there was no one.

"Suppose—suppose—I take it up, Almira?" ventured Tom, still looking out of the window and getting very red again. Astonishment and rapture appeared on the girl's face at his words.

"Do you mean it, Mr. Tom?" she cried, "you are too good!" she cried.

"Bob," said Tom, brusquely, "it's simply a good investment. Don't accuse me of being good, Almira, I'm incorrigibly bad, I am. But, hearing footsteps approaching, "run on, I'll drive out and see your father to day and get the mortgage. And without giving her a moment to express her thanks, he hurried out.

Not long after this Almira noticed that Tom was drinking steadily. He took what meals he ate at home alone, Mrs. Munroe declaring she could not and would not lend him her countenance. The girl, as she waited on him, felt a great deal of pity for this man who seemed so alone and was wasting health and fortune in dissipation, and at last one morning when he was looking unusually used up and his hands were trembling so that he could hardly hold his cup, she again forgot the difference in their stations and spoke out.

"Mr. Tom," she said, "I'm sorry for you."

"What! Sorry for me? What do you mean, Almira? I'm having a jolly good time. A short life and a merry one—that's my motto."

Almira shook her head and looked at him steadily. "Do you never think how much good you might do instead of throwing yourself away and turning yourself into little better than a beast?"

"Hum! That's pretty strong language, I must say," he growled.

"But it's true, Mr. Tom; if you keep on you'll sink lower and lower—it's dreadful to think of it." Almira shuddered as she picked up her tray and left the table.

"Hold, there," said Tom, "you don't understand it, Almira. It's got such a hold on me. How can I shake it off? I've got no one to help me if I try," and, weakened and unnerred as he was, the tears started to his eyes.

"Tell me what to do."

"You can get down and pray to God to help you," said Almira, solemnly, "and you can go to a cure. They say it's wonderful what they can do. Be a man, Mr. Tom, and try it," she urged.

Tom sat irresolute for a moment, then rose and grasped her hand. "I will try," he said, "and if I come out ahead it will all be owing to you. But ahead it will be hard, Almira. I know, for I tried once, only I couldn't stick to it. But I'll try again, if only to show you."

He stopped abruptly and wrung her hand and rushed out of the room.

If Mrs. Munroe had known that her brother set such value on Almira Pollers' good opinion she would have been horrified. She reported that brother Tom had gone to a sanitarium because she had lectured him into it, and was quite satisfied as the weeks lengthened into months and Tom still remained there.

In truth, he was having a terrible fight with the demon who had so nearly claimed him as his own. But at last he "came out ahead," as he himself explained it.

When he returned home he walked straight through all the handsome

Almira was alone at work. The look on his face, even before he spoke, told her that he had conquered.

"Oh, I'm so glad," she faltered, putting her toil-worn hand into the one he held out. "I knew you could do it."

"You had faith in me, did you, Almira?" he asked, still holding her hand and looking curiously at her beaming face. Almira nodded assent.

"Well, I'm cured now—wouldn't touch a drop of it if there were gallons and gallons of the very finest flowing around me. But will it last? I can't tell, and I've got to have somebody to help me if that dreaded thirst comes on again. I've got to have a wife who will love and believe in me, and keep me from falling. You're the only one who had faith in me, Almira, and you're the one I want for a wife. Say yes, Almira."

"Oh, Mr. Tom," she cried, trying to draw her hand away, "you can't mean it—why—I'm—only your sister's cook."

"That has nothing to do with the case. You're the noblest girl I know, and I want you and you alone. Can't you try to love me enough to marry me, Almira? I'll try to be a good husband, I swear."

"How can I help loving you?" murmured Almira. "I've nearly worshipped you ever since you lifted that heavy load from my poor father's shoulders, and if you think I am good enough for you?"

"Put on your bonnet right away and we'll find a license and a parson. Mrs. Munroe might say some things—pleasant things—to Almira Pollers, but she would not dare to say to Mrs. Tom Birney," and in spite of Almira's remonstrances, she was marched off, and so expeditious was Tom that inside of an hour they were married.

Mrs. Munroe, when she was notified of the happy event, gave full sway to her rage in the privacy of her own room. When kind friends offered condolence she sighed and wiped a few imaginary tears with her handkerchief.

"Brother Tom was always the black sheep of the family," she said. "We never could make a gentleman of him. I suppose we should be thankful he's done no worse. The girl is really quite capable and may be able to keep him straight."

Almira did keep him straight, and he needed her help not once, but many times until, being routed at every trial, the demon left him in peace.

The usual order of things was reversed when Mrs. Tom Birney on her wedding day made her father a present, and it was nothing less than the mortgage on his farm. And Almira said, as they all drew around the fireplace and watched it turn to ashes, that it was a blessed mortgage; after all, for it had her seductively to her Tom.

Halifax Letter.

DEAR ACADIAN.—The all prevailing topic at present is the anticipated funeral of the late Premier, for which the most elaborate preparations are being made and which will no doubt have taken place before this appears in print. As I write (New Year's day, 11 a.m.) H. M. S. Blenheim is just coming up the harbor. Minnie guns are firing from each fort as she passes with the body of the deceased statesman. Throughout the city the emblems of mourning are profusely apparent. The public buildings and the churches situated near the route of the procession are heavily draped, although the storm of last night and to-day has drenched everything. Flags are at half-mast. Shop windows exhibit black and white draping relieved with purple. This morning I viewed the funeral car now nearing completion in the shops of J. M. DeWolf, Son & Co. The whole structure stands some 12 feet high. The undercarriage is that of an ordinary carriage with a broad floor, the centre of which is a dais about two feet high. On this will rest the casket. From each corner of the floor there springs a large silver pillar. Upon these the canopy rests, surrounded by four immense plumes, one directly over each pillar. The spaces between are filled in with smaller plumes. On top of the canopy there rests a large silver crown, out of the centre of which, and inclining backward, is a silver cross. Around the edge of the canopy is festooned very heavy silver fringe. The sides of the car and the pillars will also be heavily trimmed in black and silver.

The car was designed by Mr. R. P. Greenwood. Both design and workmanship will compare favorably with any work of the kind yet executed. The body will be conveyed to-day by the military to the Provincial Building, where it will lie in state until Thursday. Then undertaken by six horses, will convey it to St. Mary's Cathedral. The last solemn rites will then be performed, the large procession will then reform and the body be conducted to its resting place at Holy Cross Cemetery.

The executive committee of the board of governors have been busy since school closed in providing teachers to fill the places suddenly vacated by the resignations of Misses Graves, Harding and Suck. The principalship has been left in the hands of Miss Jackson and Crowell, the former to superintend the course of study and the latter to perform the business and disciplinary functions of the office. Miss O'Key, of Port Williams, will superintend the department of Piano, and Miss Minnie Chipman, of Wolfville, takes the place of Miss Harding. Some of the classes in science will be taken by Professors in the College in that department.

The Land of the Midnight Sun.

I had the pleasure of examining prints taken from the negatives which were secured by R. G. Willoughby, of the wonderful city in Glacier Bay. This city is not real, but is a mirage or the reflection of a city upon the bosom of the Pacific Glacier, the largest glacier in south eastern Alaska.

The photographs show that portion of the city directly in the foreground remarkably clear and distinct. Directly in front, apparently surrounding the city, is a high stone wall, back of which loom up immense buildings, perhaps of stone, of queer architecture, most of them being square with flat roofs, except that smoke can be seen issuing from a number of the chimneys, and several massive buildings are clearly in course of erection. The streets must be very narrow as the buildings are very closely packed together and have no squares or blocks. The city is very large apparently, extending back as far as the eye can reach, and is dotted all over with spires and cupolas. Mr. Willoughby informs me that he has watched this strange city appear and disappear every year since '80, which occurs during the longest days in June, and just as the sun is setting behind Mount Fairweather.

The principal towns in Alaska are Sitka, Juneau, Wrangell and Loring. Sitka is the capital of the territory, but Juneau is the chief settlement and is the headquarters of the mining business. Most of the other places the steamer stops at are trading posts and fisheries. Fishing, mining and trading are the principal industries in Alaska.

On Douglas Island, opposite Juneau, the Paris or Treadwell mine is the great mine of Alaska. The gold-bearing ledge there is 500 feet wide, cropping out upon the surface and forming like a stone quarry to the open air.

There are many objects of interest also in the towns of Sitka, Juneau and Wrangell. Juneau-city, a thriving town with a dozen or more general stores, with schools, churches, newspapers, etc., presents an instance in this connection where hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended in laying out and clearing up a townsite and in building upon and improving grounds to which the occupants have no established title and cannot have any until Congress sees fit to extend to the territory at last some of the provisions of the general land laws.

Throughout the whole island passage one is passing now and then some Indian village of more or less imposing appearance and numbers. In Alaska they all belong to a single great tribe, the Tlinkit bound together by a common language, but by no stronger ties, for each village or cluster of villages make a sub-tribe, having no sympathies with the other, and they are against one another. It is not often that one would want to call a tourist's attention to an Indian village, for the average encampment of habitations of the noble red men is not the most attractive sight or study. But in the Tlinkit towns we have no such hesitation, from the curiosities to be seen in their houses and surroundings, they are certainly one of the strangest people on earth. They are the artistic savages of the world. In front of each loghouse, and often rearing its head much higher than it by two or three fold, are one or two posts called "clen poles," which are merely logs on end; but on the upward face the savage sculptor has expended all the resources of his barbaric imagination in cutting in hideous faces and figures that, with a hundred or so such terrible "tolema's" in front of the village, makes one think of some nightmare of his childish days. The houses, too, are carved inside and out. Every utensil they have is sculptured deep with diabolical but well executed designs, and their spoons, of mountain sheep and goat horn, are marvels of savage work. All these are for sale to tourists, and every excursion steamer brings numbers of these romantic remembrances, a yet more romantic journey, back to civilization.

In Sitka the Indians are much finer and more intelligent than those you have seen further south. You will be amused to see the squaw, on the arrival of the steamer, sitting around on the sills of the wharf, dressed in their best raiment, and many of them with a portion of their faces blackened—sometimes their teeth, which, aided to their natural ugliness, makes them look like the very old Nick himself. The more stormy the weather the less clothing these Indians wear, as a rule, for they evidently consider clothing made more for ornament than use.

A copy of the Northern Daily Mail, published at West Hartlepool, England, which has been handed to us by Mr. O. B. H. Starr, gives a description of the magnificent new steel steamer which has just been completed for Messrs. Furness, Withy & Co., for the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick trade. She is called the St. John City, and is of the following dimensions: 300 ft. by 37 ft. by 25 1/2 ft. and of 2,300 tons register. She is fitted with all the best modern appliances and will steam about 13 knots. The St. John City will at once go on the route and is billed to leave Halifax Jan. 31st.

Try a bottle of Rand's Emulsion for that cough and run-down feeling. It is a splendid exhibition. Very palatable, easily digested.

Golden Wedding. Last Christmas eve a large party of invited guests assembled at the residence of Mr and Mrs John Ellis, of Sheffield's Mills, to celebrate their 'golden wedding.' It was a very happy family reunion, all of their children being present except Mr Fred Ellis, of Maitland, N. S., who was unavoidably absent. The company were all the more interesting that many of them as friends and relatives of the host and hostess had been guests at their wedding fifty years ago. Several friends sent presents as souvenirs of the happy event. A most enjoyable time was spent by all present. Mr and Mrs Ellis appeared hale and hearty for their year. It is true that "Time" has left a few traces of care upon their brows, and the snows of so many winters have slightly changed their familiar faces, but they looked as if the storms and trial of half a century had passed lightly and gently over them. They appeared not like trees dismembered and rent in pieces by the tempests of life, but as sheaves of good grain, ripening for the "Master's garner."

Mr Ellis has been one of our most successful and prosperous farmers, and Mrs Ellis has lived to see all her children reach manhood and womanhood; six children and eighteen grand children, in whose affections she is deeply enshrined. After partaking of a most bountiful supper, the Revs. Messrs Martell and Dawson made brief speeches suitable to the occasion, to which Mr Ellis briefly responded, thanking the guests and friends on behalf of Mrs Ellis and himself for their kind wishes and presents, and expressing the wish that many of those present might be spared to celebrate a similar event. A hymn was sung, a portion of scripture read and the blessing of Almighty God was further craved upon the highly favored couple during the rest of life's journey. CORRESPONDENCE. To the Editor of the ACADIAN. Mr. Editor—I read the articles published in the ACADIAN recently over the non de pinne "Fair Play," and the replies by "Fair Play," "Economy," and "Buyer." Some have given me the credit of writing "Fair Play."

For the information of my friends I wish to say most positively that I neither wrote nor dictated a single sentence of any of those answers, and have not the most remote idea of who did write them. Although the letter of "Fair Play" purports to be written from the merchant's standpoint, I cannot convince myself that any merchant of this town would in his own interests, write such an article; and I am quite sure he would not feel much flattered to have his name attached to some of the base insinuations contained therein. The cowardly sneer who hides behind a wall to give you a thrust in the back and the one who stabs you over an assumed name, merit alike universal contempt. The time should come very soon—if it has not already come—when correspondents of a private or personal character should be discontinued in the columns of a newspaper, especially when the writer has not the courage to write over his own name. This is not intended as an answer to any remark or allusion of "Fair Play." COLIN W. ROSCOE.

Mr. Editor—Having learned that some busybody has been circulating the report that I am keeping liquor in my place I would take this opportunity to positively deny such and will defy anyone to prove that I have ever sold intoxicating liquors; and if I hear any more of this unjust and false slander I shall let this shameful scandal-monger deal with my lawyer. G. E. TORRIS.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 4, 1895.

Local and Provincial.

Only a night from old to new; Only a sleep from night to morn. The new is but the old come true. Each sunrise sees a new year born.

The monthly meeting of the town council was adjourned to meet next Tuesday evening.

Rev. Dr. Boggs, filled the Baptist pulpit last Sunday morning, and preached an excellent sermon.

Public school and the School of Horticulture open on Monday. The other educational institutions open on Wednesday.

The People's Bank agency in this town is receiving subscriptions to the National Fund for the support of Lady Thompson and her family.

The street storm on Tuesday transformed our always pretty town into an enchanting scene. Nothing could be prettier than the glistening picture that has been presented to our gaze during the past two days.

Go to the new Kandy Kitchen for Chocolate Creams from 20c. up.

The next quarterly meeting of the Grand Division, S. of T., meets at Port Williams on Jan. 29th. As Kings is the banner county of the Province in the order the meeting will likely be an interesting one and well attended.

Examine the three star nursing bottle. It's perfection. No tubes to clean.

A nice assortment of biscuits, fresh, at the Kandy Kitchen opposite the Bank.

Quite a number of the citizens of Wolffville gathered on Monday evening hear the store of Bockwell & Co., to hear the Band play the old year out and welcome 1895 in. They played a number of selections which were much enjoyed and applauded by their hearers.

Try the delicious candies at the new Kandy Kitchen opposite the Bank.

Oranges, only 20c. per doz. at the Kandy Kitchen opposite the Bank.

At the Dominion Atlantic railway meeting Dec. 25, at Cannon street hotel, London, the president submitted a very satisfactory report. The most cordial reception was given General Manager Campbell, who speaking amidst applause, said Nova Scotia was going ahead despite the surrounding adverse trade conditions.

Have you seen the perfumery window at the Drug Store?

Mixture made of pure Granulated Sugar, only 10c. per lb. at the Kandy Kitchen opposite the Bank.

Mrs. Donovan entertained a few friends at her house in Lower Wolffville on New Year's eve. When 12 o'clock arrived one of the guests, dressed in the costume of an aged man was made to symbolize the departure of the old year. Appropriate songs were sung. At a late hour the guests departed well pleased to end and begin the year in such a company.

Candy Canes, and other Xmas Novelties, at the Kandy Kitchen opposite the Bank.

The remains of Mrs. Armstrong, who died at her home in Round Hill, Annapolis county, on Friday last, were brought to Wolffville for interment in Willow Bank cemetery on Tuesday. The funeral took place after the arrival of the afternoon express from Annapolis. The deceased was a native of Wolffville, being a daughter of the late Arthur Murphy.

Local and Provincial.

Attention is directed to the adv. of the Overseers of the Poor for Horton, for tenders for supplies, in another column.

Quite a number of the citizens of Wolffville left on Wednesday for Halifax, to attend the funeral of the late Sir John Thompson.

Mr. G. V. Rand, our genial postmaster, who has been confined to the house for some weeks, is, we are glad to state, recovering and will be out again soon.

There was a bountiful fall of snow on Monday night and the sleighing is now good. The pleasant jingle of the sleigh bells has been heard on our streets for the past few days.

We were shown this week a freak of nature in the shape of a large mushroom. It was found flourishing in a flower pot in the American House, and was the growth of two days.

During the past few weeks Mr. Heala has been busy engaged getting the rink ready and skaters have been anxiously awaiting an opportunity of trying the new rink.

New Figs, Malaga Grapes, Florida Oranges, Dates, at the Kandy Kitchen opposite the Bank.

We are indebted to W. S. Sanders, Grand Scribe, Halifax, for a copy of the Sons of Temperance Year Book, G. D. of N. S., for 1894. In this pamphlet of 162 pages we find that the "Sons" organization still holds its own in this Province. For the year ending September 30th, there were 232 Divisions within the jurisdiction, with 12,350 members, net gain 397, net loss 879. There were also 82 bands of Hope with a membership of 5534. The principles of "Love, Purity, Fidelity," have taken deep root in the hearts and minds of progressive Nova Scotians.

Personal Mention. (Contributions for this department will be gladly received.)

Mr. D. Livingstone Parker arrived in Wolffville on Friday last. After spending a few days visiting his family here he left on Wednesday morning, and will study at Colby University.

Miss Edna A. Gillmore, of this place is now employed in the office of the New England Farmer, at Boston. We have to thank her for a copy of that excellent journal, lately received.

News comes from Vancouver of the marriage of Mr. Charles D. Rand, formerly of Canning, N. S., but now of Vancouver's wealthiest citizens, to Miss Wallace, of Belleville, Ont. The marriage ceremony was performed at Teocoma, Washington.

Rev. C. C. Burgess preached his farewell sermon Sunday evening. Mr. Burgess has been pastor of the Baptist church during the past five years; during his past labors here he had made very many friends and has been instrumental in doing much church work. He has removed to Wolffville, N. S., where his family are now residing.--Wolffport Cor. Courier.

Men's, Youths and Boys' Clothing, Woollen Underwear, Hats and Caps, Shirts and Ties, the best assortment in town, at the Glasgow House.

Local and Provincial.

The terribly sad intelligence reached Wolffville yesterday morning that Dr. W. A. Payzant had committed suicide in Halifax. The whole community was shocked and could scarcely believe the news.

The deceased was a son of Dr. Payzant, of Wolffville, and a brother of Dr. James A. Payzant, who practiced in this city up to a month ago, when he removed to Hants county.

"I took carbolic acid," Dr. Bigelow heard him say no more. Payzant was then leaning against the wall.

Dr. Bigelow immediately called Mr. James Kelliker, who occupies the room above, and telephoned the police station for assistance. Mr. Kelliker found Payzant leaning against the door. Payzant looked at him and said: "It's all over with me; I have taken carbolic acid. Pray for me." Mr. Kelliker laid him on the bed and loosened his collar.

Dr. Read, Black and Wm. McKay, M. P. P., who had been called in, saw at once that medical skill was of no avail. The man was dead. He lived only about 20 minutes after taking the dose of carbolic acid, which was nearly half an ounce.

The letter was as follows: MY DARLING MOTHER:

What I am guilty of I do not know, but it must be something; but if it is I wasn't my own agent. Try to forgive my neglect of you, darling mother. I send love to father, Austin and sisters and Lina. I promised Bessie on her death bed to try and be good and succeeded very poorly in my promise. I really did not know I was so bad, so wrapped up in my conceit. God forgive me, I am trying to believe in Christ. I hope God will help me. Your affectionate son, WILL.

The sad affair has cast a gloom over the town, and the heartfelt sympathy is felt for the sorrowing family.
