Impressions.

The touch of a hand, the glance of an eye,
Or a word exchanged with a passer-by,
A glance of a face in a crowded street
And afterwards life is incomplete;
A picture painted with honest zeal
And we lose the old for the new ideal.
A chance remark, or a song's refrain,
And life is never the same again.

An angry word from one lip is sped
Or a tender word is left unaid,
And one there is who, his whole life long,
Will cherish the brand of a burning wrong;
A line that staves up from an open page,
A cynical smile from the lips of age,
A glimpse of loving seen in a play,
And the dreams of our youth are swept away.

A friendly smile and love's embering spark
Leap into flame and illumines the dark;
A whisper "Be brave!" to our fellow-men
And they pick up the thread of hope
—again.
Thus never an act or a word or thought
But that with unguessed importance is fraught,
For small things build up to eternity,
And blazon the ways for a destiny.

SELECT STORY.

A Life for a Love.
BY L. T. MEADE.

CHAPTER XXXI.—Continued.
He felt wonderfully calm and quiet; he was not excited, nor did his conscience smite him with a sense of any special wrong-doing. Right or wrong he was going to do something on which no blessing could be asked, ever which no prayer could be uttered. He had been brought up in a house where prayers had been many; he had whispered his own baby prayers to his mother when he was a little child. Well, well, he would not think of those things now. The hour was come the moment for action was ripe. There was a little daylight, and during that time he meant to occupy himself with one last task; he would write a letter to his wife, a cheerful, bright everyday letter, to the wife for whose sake he was about to rush unbidden into the arms of death. He had a part to act, and this letter was in the programme. To make all things safe and above suspicion he must write it, and leave it carelessly on his table, so that the next ship they touched should convey it to her.

He took out a sheet of foreign note-paper, and wrote steadily. His hand did not shake, he covered the whole sheet of paper; his words were bright, contented; no shadow of gloom touched them. They were full of anticipation, of pleasure in the moment—of pleasure in the coming reunion.

The writing of this letter was the very hardest task of the man's whole life. When it was over great drops of sweat stood on his forehead. He read it steadily from beginning to end, however, and his only fear was that it was too bright, and that she might see through it, as in a mirror, the anguish beneath.

The letter was written, and now Wyndham had nothing to do. He had to sit with his hands before him, and wait for the gathering darkness and the ever-increasing gloom.

He sat for nearly an hour in his own cabin, he was past any consecutive thought now; still, so great was the constraint he was able to put over him, self that outwardly he was quite calm. Presently he went into the saloon. Cecily Harvey alone was there, all the ladies having gone in to dinner. She sprang up with a cry of delight when she saw Gerald.

"Mr. Wyndham, have you come to stay with me? Why aren't you at dinner?" How white you look!"

"I am not hungry, Cecily. I thought you would be alone, and I came out to see you. I wanted you to give me a kiss."

"Of course I will—of course I will," said the affectionate child, throwing her arms around his neck.

"You remind me of one of the little sisters I have lost," he said hurriedly.

"Thank you, Cecily, thank you. Be a good child, always. I would say 'God bless you' if I dared."

"Why don't you dare? You are a good man, a very good man, the best I know."

"Hush, Cecily, you don't know what you are talking about. Give me another kiss. Thank you, sweet little girl."

He went back again to his own cabin. The longing for compassion at this crucial moment had made him run a risk in talking so to Cecily. He blamed himself, but scarcely regretted the act.

It was certainly going to be a dirty night, and already the sailors were busy overhead. The good ship creaked and swung as she fought her way through the waters. The ladies loudly expressed their uneasiness, and the gentleman-passengers fought down some qualms which they considered unmanly.

Wyndham rose from his seat in the dark, pressed his lips to the letter he had written to his wife, suddenly he started, reeled a step and fell back.

There was no accounting for what happened—but happen it did.

Valentine herself stood beside him, stretched out her arms to him, uttered a brief cry, and then vanished.

He felt like a madman; he pressed his hands to his head and rushed on deck.

"Stand there, Mr. Wyndham, there," said the sailor Loggan. "You'll be safe enough. Oh, yes, more than one wave will wash us. Shall I lash you to the wheel, sir? My life it would be safer."

"No, no, thank you." The voice was quite quiet and calm again.

Certainly the night was a rough one, but between and under the loud voices of the stern, Loggan and his companion exchanged some cheerful phrases.

"No, sir, I ain't never feared." "What if you were to go to the bottom?"

"The will of the good God be done, sir. I'd go a-doin' of my duty." "What an odd fellow, Loggan; shake hands with me."

"That I will, Mr. Wyndham. What are you doing with that rope, sir? It's cold, it's slippery—oh, the knot has gone, I'll call a man to tighten it, sir; let me—let me. You'll be over, sir, if you don't look out; we're going to lunge this way. Take care, sir—take care—for God's sake, take care!"

Wyndham took care.

CHAPTER XXXII.
The summer came early that year. The rector was a charming place in the summer, and on this particular bright day in June one of the numerous school-teasts was in course of preparation, and all the young Wyndhams were working with a will and energy which could scarcely be surpassed.

The feast was in full progress; the village children consumed tea and buns, as only village children can. Augusta was refusing to help the babies to any more; Joan and Betty were half-crying because she snatched the rich currant buns out of their hands; Marjory was leading the most obnoxious members of her flock away to the other end of the long meadow, where they could play orange and lemons, nuts in May, and other festive games; and Lillias, as she helped to pack away the remnants of the feast, was answering some questions of Carr's.

"We ought to have heard by now," she was saying. "My father is a little uneasy, but I am not—at least, of course, I am anxious for Valentine. The suspense must be very trying for her!"

"When did your brother's ship sail?" "On the 25th of March."

"And this is the 15th of June. The Esperance must have been reported as Lloyd's long ago."

"How stupid of me never to think of that," said Lillias, her face brightening. "But would they not put the arrivals in the papers? I have certainly looked and never seen it."

"You have probably overlooked it. I will write and inquire for you. The Esperance, even allowing for delays, has probably reached its destination some weeks ago. On the other hand it would be scarcely possible for you to have had a letter from your brother. Yes, you are right not to be anxious. I will go and have a chat with your father presently. Is Mrs. Wyndham well?"

"I think so—fairly well. She is coming to stay with us next week." "I won't marry until I love some one even better than my only brother," replied Lillias in a grave voice. "That who came up at that moment. "Ah, yes, your face is brighter already for having had an interview with him. Whisper no secrets to me. I know—I know."

"Lillias' clear brown skin was transfused with color." "Don't be silly, Marjory," she said. "I don't mind avowing that Mr. Carr is a comfortable person to talk to. He has just been removing my fears about Gerald."

"Oh, I thought you had no fears." "Well, father's fears, then. He has been saying things to me which will remove my father's fears completely." "That is right—Heaven be praised. You and the rector are nothing but a pair of old croaks lately. Hey-oh! I am perfectly weary of your long faces and your apprehensions. Thank goodness, Val is coming; she'll wack you up a little."

Lillias opened her dark eyes. "I did not know you cared so much for Valentine," she said.

"I admired her very much the last time I saw her. That was a month ago—she seemed so spirited and courageous. I used to think her something of a doll, but she's a woman now, and a fine one. Perhaps it's the thought of the baby coming."

"Or perhaps," said Lillias, "she has found out at last what our Gerald is." "Beth, most likely," said Marjory. "Anyhow, she's changed; and the funniest part is that that old man—"

"What old man, Marjory?" "Don't interrupt me—her father. I always call him that old man—well, I think he's afraid of her. She doesn't put him the way she used, but she's very gentle with him. Oh, she's a good bit altered; there's something in her now."

"I suppose there was always something in her," said Lillias. "For Gerald—her lips trembled—"gave up so much for her."

"No more than any man gives up for any woman," said Marjory. "A man shall leave his father and mother. Oh, yes, poor old Lil, I know how you felt it. You always made an idol of Gerald. I suppose you'll marry some day; you are so pretty—and I'm—"

"h'm—there's somebody waiting for somebody—there, I don't want to tease only when you do marry, my pretty Gerald in your heart."

"I won't marry until I love some one even better than my only brother," replied Lillias in a grave voice. "That possible delay, she is at least that time overdue. The last tidings of her were from the Cape, and it is feared from their date that she must have encountered rough weather in the Southern Ocean. Nothing is known, however, and every hour we look for a cable announcing her arrival at Melbourne if not at Sydney. It is possible she may have been injured, which will account for the delay, but I scarcely apprehend anything worse. I ought scarcely to say that I am anxious; up to the present there is no real cause to apprehend anything worse than an accident to the vessel. Vessels are often a month behind their time, and all is satisfactorily explained at the end. I am now troubling you with regard to another matter. I do not want my daughter and your son's wife to be needlessly alarmed. It is most important that her mind should be kept free from apprehension until after the birth of their child. You kindly asked her to go to see you. Can you have her at the rectory at once? And will you send Lillias to fetch her? I know you and yours will keep all fears from her, and, poor child, she reads my face like a book.

"Yours faithfully,
"MONTRESS PAGE"

"Well, Lillias," said the rector, "Well? He's a little over nervous, isn't he, oh? Vessels are often a month overdue. Eh, Lillias? But of course they are. Somehow I'm not nervous since I got that letter. I was before, but not now."

He rubbed his hands together as he spoke.

"It's summer now, and we'll have Gerald back before the next snow comes. I told the boy so when he hid me good-bye; he was a bit upset that night after you girls went to bed. Poor fellow, I had quite to cheer him; he's a very affectionate lad. No, I'm not nervous, and I wonder at Paget. But what do you think, Lillias?"

Lillias folded up the letter, and put it back in her old father's hand. Then she stole her arm round his neck, and kissed him.

A Ghastly Relic.

A somewhat gruesome but valuable relic was unearthed at Grand P. E. on Thursday of last week by Mr. L. E. Duncanson, proprietor of the American House in this town. While pointing out and expatiating upon the points of interest and beauties of the "Home of Evangeline," he noticed an indentation in the ground which at once suggested to his speculative mind the possibility of something in the way of relics. He secured permission from the owner of the land, which is not far from the Old Well, to examine, and as soon as possible after returning home procured assistants and proceeding to the spot commenced the work of excavation. They were rewarded for their trouble, as before a half-hour had elapsed the pickaxes met with a sharp resistance. Further developments proved the obstruction to be a coffin, in which the remains of an Acadian settler were probably stowed away a couple of centuries ago. While endeavoring to remove it, the various sections became loosened, and not before seven hours of hard work this antiquated receptacle of deceased humanity removed. Mr. Duncanson at once conveyed his treasure home, where it has since been put together, and it is now on exhibition at the sample rooms of the hotel. Returning to the place next day, he succeeded in finding a complete set of teeth, which, however, was the only indication of the presence of anything mortal. The coffin measured 6 feet 3 inches in length, and is constructed of pine and fir, which is in a remarkable state of preservation. Mr. Duncanson has probably one of the best collections of Acadian relics in the Province, but this ghastly memento of the early struggles and privations of the land of people whose exhibition has been immortalized by Longfellow, will be viewed with special interest by our Gardens and Orchards.

RESTORING FLAUNT FOOD TO IMPROVERISHED SOILS—PLANTING TREES—FIGHTING INSECT PESTS AND FUNGUS GROWTHS.

By Prof. E. E. Faville, Wolfville, Prof. Faville, in addressing the Farmers' and Dairymen's association at Antigonish last Wednesday, spoke of three vital points as necessary in successful fruit raising: 1st, preparation of the soil; 2nd, planting of the orchard; 3rd, care of the orchard. The summary of his address is as follows:

The two great props or supports serving as under pillars of successful farming in the greater part of the province are dairying and fruit growing. Every farmer should have a garden and an orchard; both aid in keeping down the expense at the "corner grocery." The soil problem presents itself to every farmer. Especially is this true in Nova Scotia, where the virgin soils of the uplands have long ago been depleted of their natural resources and impoverished by continual cropping, without sufficient returns to the soil of those constituents necessary to plant-life. Of the seventy or more elements existing in the soil and air only fourteen are essential to plant life and growth. In most soils these ingredients occur in sufficient quantities excepting nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, which go so largely to make up the growth, structure and fruit products of the plants.

At present the condition of our soils is bringing about a process of manufacturing crops out of raw materials chiefly supplied by the farmer, the soil serving as a medium and implement of manufacture. There is going on a "give and take." The farmers should understand the cardinal points in the application of fertilizers, that is, applying of general manures and piecing out with commercial fertilizers and green manures, such as peas, clover, etc.

In order that fruit trees may thrive and in order that these ingredients will be properly manufactured in the soil, the ground must be thoroughly under-drained. In preparing a garden or orchard use a sub-soil plow in addition to the surface plow. This gives a deep tith and unlocks many stores of plant food.

By a compilation of analyses it was shown the amount of fertilizing ingredients in the fruit removed from an acre of different fruits and vegetables in full bearing. Apples 15 tons: 30 lbs. nitrogen, 45 lbs. phosphoric acid, 100 lbs. potash, 18 lbs. phosphoric acid.

Mr. Douglas Sutherland, of Westport, Digby Co., a brother of Mrs. F. P. Rockwell, of this town, is paying a visit to our town.

Mr. G. W. Dawson, manager of the St. Croix Wood Mill, was in town on Wednesday last.

Mr. G. Wilbert Cox arrived in Wolfville on Wednesday afternoon from Cambridge, Mass., where he has completed a course with honors at Harvard University.

Mr. I. Crombie, of Hantsport, was in town on Saturday last. Mr. Crombie has resigned the principalship of the Hantsport schools, which he has had for some time, and intends coming to Wolfville to reside.

EVANGELINE" ROUTE:

After Monday, 3d July, as of this Railway will run (excepted).

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 12, 1895.

Local and Provincial.

Having operations been begun. The crop will not be a large one, but in most places will be up to the average.

The Band played on the stand for the first time since its removal to the new location on the School property, Wednesday evening.

The proprietors of "Evangeline Beach" are making arrangements for another Band Concert on Wednesday evening of next week. A good time is promised.

W. H. Townsend's stables at Windsor were destroyed by fire on Saturday. Nine out of eleven horses were burned alive; insured in the Manchester for $200. The fire originated by boys looking for eggs with lighted matches.

A musical and literary entertainment is to be given in Oddfellows Hall, Cranston, next Monday evening, July 15th, by Miss Mary Harding Fitch, the popular teacher of violin at Acadia Seminary, assisted by leading talent. We can assure the citizens of our sister town a rich treat, and bespeak a generous patronage.

A number of the quiet players met last Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. C. B. Moore, and organized a club, to be known as the "Wolfville Quoit Club" with a membership of fifteen. Officers were elected as follows:

President—E. S. Crawley. First Vice—G. W. Borden. Sec. Vice—J. W. Caldwell. Secy. & Treas.—C. S. Baker.

Ship Canada arrived at Liverpool on July 1st, making the passage from Sydney, Australia, in 85 days, by the Golden Rod on July 6th, making the passage from Monte Video at Australia. Ship Kings County is loading at Sydney, and ships Kororo, Heron Queen and Kambara are all bound to Australia to load cargo for England. These vessels belong to C. R. Burgess, Esq., of this town.

London Shrub—the latest drink, 5c. glass at the Drugstore.

A young man named John Frawley, belonging to Halifax, who has been engaged with Mr. J. M. Shaw for the past few weeks, died very suddenly last Friday afternoon, at his boarding place, the residence of Mrs. James Wilson, in this town. He had not been well for a few days, but was able to go to work as usual, and Thursday evening was in the shop and wrote a letter. Friday morning he was taken much worse and became delirious and died about 3 o'clock.

The lecture given by Mr. J. Khadden of Jerusalem, on Thursday evening last, in the vestry of the Presbyterian church, was well attended. The subject: "Jerusalem, Ancient and Modern," was treated in a very instructive manner. His descriptions of the dress and customs of the Oriental peoples were very interesting, and the audience gave him good attention until the close. Some of the Oriental characters were impersonated by a number of persons, especially adapted for the occasion.

The Co-operative Farmer and Maritime Dairyman, is the name of a semi-monthly paper published at Sussex, N. B., by R. D. Robinson, and edited by W. W. Hubbard, manager of the Avon Creamery at Windsor. It seems to us that there should be a large field for such a paper, which gives particular attention to the various departments of work in the Maritime Provinces, and is a really valuable publication. The encouragement of co-operative methods of work in dairying, etc., will also be one of the features of this paper, which should be liberally supported by the farmers of the Maritime Provinces. We wish it every success.

EMERSON

Emo Elaine Hext.

The above talented elocutionist, who is to appear in Acadia Villa Hall, Horton Landing, next Monday evening, is meeting with unqualified praise from the provincial press. From a number before us we select the following:—

Miss Emo Elaine Hext, elocutionist, appeared for the first time in this city in Opheus hall last evening. The audience was not as large as the merits of the entertainment would warrant, but it was a thoroughly appreciative one. As an elocutionist, Miss Hext met as accorded front rank with those in her profession who have visited this city. The selection of selections, which added variety and charm to the entertainment. Miss Hext deserves a large audience to-morrow night. Her entertainments are refined, pleasing and instructive, and she is a thorough master of her art.—Halifax Chronicle.

Those who had the pleasure of hearing Miss Emo Elaine Hext, Monday, in her dramatic recital, and seeing her statue-like posing, enjoyed a treat seldom afforded a Truro audience. Miss Hext exhibited excellent artistic merit. The programme was one brilliant effort from beginning to end; the posing in Greek costume being particularly effective and marble like in appearance. The "Chariot Race" was a master piece, and without doubt eclipsed any previous effort of the kind in this town.—Truro News.

Correspondents who have anything pleasant to say about anybody usually sign their letters. Some write letters to the papers for the purpose of advertising themselves and gaining public or private favor. Correspondents, on the other hand, who like to criticize or denounce general practices or individual acts generally do not sign their letters; they prefer to shoot like the Indian, from behind a tree. The newspaper editor has to play trees and take the shots aimed at the Indian. We would rather prefer the opposite practice. When a correspondent has something sneaky to say we have no objection to his being modest and giving us the benefit of it; when he has some physic which he deems it his duty to administer to somebody let him appear in person.

Arrangements have been effected between the directors of the Bridgetown Driving Park and the well-known driver, Mr. William Crabbe, whereby he will have charge of the track for the remaining portion of this season. Mr. C. H. has been located at the Wolfville race course thus far this summer, where he has been handling a number of horses, some of the best ones belonging to Dr. Bowles. He will lend the new track quite a prestige and will bring along a fine string of the equine race for training.—Monitor.

At the Exhibition in St. John, N. B., in September and October, one of the attractive spots will be Machinery Hall, where a variety of novel machines will be in motion, producing from the raw materials, a variety of articles. Some of these machines are of recent designs, doing work not known a few years ago. Shrub shake is elegant, so is Egg Shrub (with cream).

The Summer School of Science is now in session at Amherst, with a good attendance. Prof. A. E. Caldwell, of Acadia, is on the staff of instructors.

French Phantom Speaks.

I, Jean de' Abouville de Darndesfaulle come

To seek my dry bones from the spirit home.

Two hundred years dead, I return once again

To discover my mortal remains but in vain.

Two centuries I said? But I must be mistaken,

For now in the full tide of memory I waken,

And well I remember the exquisite bliss

Of those times when I stole Evangeline's kiss.

When Gabriel was absent,—for truth must assert

The innocent Eve was somewhat of a flirt,

And she,—it was known by each page and each dance,

Was engaged to no less than six fellows at once.

But the English came after both us and

And scared like the dickens, I took to the woods,

And escaped; sacre bleu! oh, mon dieu!

It was sad; Had to work for a living and so I died glad.

They made me a coffin of fence boards so old

And buried me seven feet under the mould.

Years rolled on in silence; at length my poor bones

Were disturbed by a pickaxe and rattle of stones.

And right onto my coffin long mouldered away

Another was placed, twenty years ago, say.

In the new one was buried a late deca-

ated creature,

A Newfoundland canine of excellent feature,

Who died of La Grippe and the lack of good nature.

But a short time ago, came a gentleman shere

And dug up the coffin which held some black hair

The last of poor Towser; and what do I find?

The people around have all made up their mind

That Evangeline's father was herein confin'd.

But I must now begone to the dim phantom shore,

And leave poor Towser's coffin for the town to adore.

GENTLEMEN!

Remember!

BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH.

The Narrow Escape of a well known Newburg Man.

By the loss of a Finger Mr. Chas. Moore of that Village Near Death's Door, but is Rescued after Doctors Have Failed.

From the Napanee Beaver.

In the pleasant little village of Newburg on the Bay of Quinte Railway, seven miles from Napanee, lives Mr. C. H. Moore and family. They are favorably known throughout the entire section, having been residents of Newburg for years. Recently Mr. Moore has undergone a terrible sickness, and his restoration to health was the talk of the village, and many even in Napanee and vicinity heard of it, and the result was that The Beaver reporter was detailed to make an investigation into the matter.

Mr. Moore is a carriage maker and while working in Finkle's factory last winter met with an accident that caused him the loss of the forefinger of his right hand. It was following this accident that his sickness began. He lost flesh, was pale, suffered from dizziness to the extent that sometimes he could scarcely avoid falling. He consulted physicians and tried numerous remedies, but without any benefit. He was constantly growing worse and the physician seemed puzzled, and some of his friends thought he would never recover. One day a neighbor urged Mrs. Moore to persuade her husband to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and after a few days he began to feel better, and it no longer needed persuasion to induce him to continue the treatment. A marvelous change soon came over him. Each day he seemed to gather new strength and new life, and after eight boxes had been taken, he found himself again a well man. Mr. Moore is now about sixty-five years of age, he has been healthy and has worked hard all his life until the sickness alluded to, and now, thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, he is once more able to work in his old accustomed way, and does not hesitate to give the credit to the medicine that restored him to health, at a cost no greater than a couple of visits to the doctor.

Time and again it has been proven that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure when physicians and other remedies fail. No other medicine has such a wonderful record and no other medicine gives such undoubted proofs of the genuineness of every cure published, and this accounts for the fact that go where you will you hear nothing but words of praise for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This great reputation also accounts for the fact that unscrupulous dealers here and there try to impose a bulk pill upon their customers with the claim that it is "just as good," while a host of imitators are putting up pills in packages somewhat similar in style in the hope that they will reap the reward earned by the merit of the genuine Pink Pills. No matter what any dealer says, no pill is genuine unless it bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. Always refuse substitutes which are worthless and may be dangerous.

Moderate Use of Tea and Coffee.

A woman physician, eminent in her profession, and with a very wide experience, was talking the other day about the use of tea and coffee. Some one has asserted, and called able counsel to prove, that these beverages were injurious to the health, destructive to the complexion and every way evil.

Having for many years taken a few patients into her own household, where they were constantly under her eye, she gave it as her opinion that the moderate use of both these articles, while they were, perhaps, in no way advantageous, certainly are not the deadly foes that they are reported to be.

She said: "I have never yet known a person kept awake or made restless by tea or coffee at moderate strength taken at a proper hour. I have seen the time when I felt such a need of a cup of fresh coffee, after the French method of percolation, was refreshing and comforting, and to this extent, at least, beneficial, that it made the patient content and cheerful, and put the nerves in that good order that comes from a grateful appetite."

"I believe that I have, more than once, when coming in tired, cold, perhaps all overstrained from hard work and anxiety felt rested and greatly relieved, as to nervous tension, by a cup of hot coffee."

"Humanity is benefited by the moderate use of most of the good things of life. It is the abuse of them, the use of them at wrong times, under disadvantageous circumstances and in immoderate quantities, that makes the trouble. Until I see better evidence than has yet been presented, I shall insist that a single cup of tea or coffee of moderate strength is a genuinely good thing, if for no other reason than because the taste is delicious and it is a pleasure to drink it."

A story is told of a certain committee meeting in which the proceedings commenced with noise, and gradually became uproarious. At last one of the disputants, losing all control over his emotions, exclaimed to his opponent: "Sir, you are, I think, the biggest ass that I ever had the misfortune to set eyes upon! Order, order! I said the chairman gravely: you seem to forget that I am in the room."

Little Willowden, walking with her mother, stumbled several times over the pavement. Her mother said: "What is the matter, daughter? Nothing?" The matter with me, she indignantly replied, it's the ground that is too thick in places.

First journeyer—Do you always get your meals on time here?

Second journeyer—Yes; I have to till some of my friends show me. I'm generally glad to see you.

Extracts from the President's address at the Great Convention in London: REALIZATION OF PRACTICAL POLITICS.

It took some of us well nigh twenty years to see what the prophetic mind of Oliver Wendell Holmes long ago discerned, when he was wont to say to his friends: "Some of you will live to see the temperance question, the woman question, the labor question, the purely question, all merged in one mighty movement of the people, massing itself in a political party that shall make for righteousness, and save the nation from its sins." This declaration applies to no one people, but it is true of every people in proportion to the development at which they have arrived. None has yet reached the heights from which so wide an evolution is possible, but all are on the way, and the two great English-speaking nations, mother and daughter, will be first at the goal. This Convocation, in which the representatives of these two are so largely in the majority, is a milestone on the long, slow, patient journey towards the realization of practical politics which shall practice morality and incarnate the spirit of the gospel in custom and in law.

FITTEST TO SURVIVE.

The law of the survival of the fittest, has, in the popular mind, two methods of application; tested by them both, ought the liquor traffic to survive?

In the first place, is it fit? In the days of our ancestors intoxicating liquors were made by men who stood as well in the community as the average tradesman. They were sold in the same places where flour and other things essential to the physical well being of the people were to be had; and no reproach rested upon those who dealt them out or drank them down. But it is no longer equally reputable to sell wheat and whisky, bread and beer, apples and ale.

As a general rule they are not sold in the same place, and those who sell them do not stand on the same plane in public confidence. There must be a reason for this, and it is found in the outcome of their respective use. The fittest has survived. Food holds its place as a necessity; intoxicating drinks are losing theirs; and from great numbers of the most highly developed communities they have been banished altogether. Now England tortures and sold them in shops along with other good creatures of God. The churches still abide, and in them are trained the best examples of our civilization; the school children and are the handiwork of heaven; but the saloon is the contrasted outlaw of our civilization. It has been banished from three of the five New England States, and cannot long survive in any.

Another meaning of the famous phrase is that, whatever is best fitted to its environment survives, or that which adapts itself best to its surroundings possesses the inherent quality of survival. But as our case develops along the lines of self-government, drinks that intoxicate or which have a tendency to produce that condition, become more dangerous to him. Under a feudal system, when he was but the parasite of the lord in the castle, his personal habits counted for but little, only so that he was brave as a Turk in war. But his environment has changed his value to himself, to his home and the state that depends on the conservation of his forces, physical, mental and moral. Intoxicants degenerate his personality in all these particulars, and they do this either actually or through his descendants.

The places in which intoxicants are sold have become the rendezvous of those classes which are either the foam of society or its dregs; the do-nothings of the upper and nether edges of the great social wave. One of our Chicago mayors gave as a reason why he did not close the saloons on Sundays that "they were the traps in which he was sure to catch criminals." If baker's shops were the lurking places of the burglar and the trap, if the basest political plots originated there, we should combine against the baker rather than the politician.

We are here, then, English-speaking women, gathered out of the leading nations of the world, with a few native pioneers from Oriental and Continental countries, to put our heads and hearts together for the building up of the woman's home protection movement, because it is the fittest to survive, the best adapted to its environment, and we are here for the pulling down of the liquor system, because, judged by its results, it is the most unfit and least adapted to that slowly improving environment which is the outcome of humanity working on the minds and bodies of the human race.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

No woman ought to find it difficult to laugh in her sleep these days.

A large majority of those who think they need coaxing really require clubbing.

Aw—why do you make your own cigarettes? My—aw—doctor ordered me to take some light exercise.

Cherokee Vermifuge kills worms every time.

She—Tell me, when you were in the army, were you cool in the hour of danger? He—Cool? I actually shivered.

He—You're an ass!

She—Oh, no, I'm not. I wish, were I could dress so much more com. fortably.

Its concentrated curative power, makes Ayer's Sarsaparilla the best blood purifier.

Why do you punch that hole in my ticket? I asked a little man of the railway conductor. So you can pass through, was the reply.

The Toucher—My word is as good as my note any day.

The Utterer—Yes, that's what's the trouble with your notes.

MINARD'S FAMILY PILLS are purely vegetable.

The Minister—"Did your father whip you for catching fish on the Sabbath?" "Tommy—No, sir. I told him I wouldn't clean them if he did."

Emily, if William to-day asks you to marry him you must tell him to speak to me. Yes, mamma; but if he does not? Then tell him I want to speak to him?

MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM, once tried, always used.

Thomas Plaster—Here you see tobacco as it grows in the field.

Miss Celia—Charming! How long will it be before the cigarettes are ready for picking?

Johnny—Papa, what do people mean when they talk about your constituents? Mr. Jenkins, M. P.—A constituent, Johnny, is a man who expects you to get him a job.

MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM is a sure cure.

Grant—Can it be possible that Hawking is in love with that fat girl? Why she weighs 300 at least.

Hobbs—No; I don't believe he's in love; he's just infatuated.

Shakspere was a great writer, admitted the principal of the Plunkton Commercial College, but how much better writing he could have done had he taken a course in our department of ornamental penmanship.

Ayer's Hair Care is a warranted specific for all malarial diseases and bilious derangements.

Do you know the value of an oath? I asked the judge of an old darkey who was to be the next witness.

Yes, sah, I does. One ob dese yeah lawyers done give me foah dollars to swear to culin'. Dat's de value of an oath. Foah dollars, sah.

Mrs Van Sham—"These abominable society papers! There's no keeping one's affairs out of them! Here the Sunday Table Gossip has a full report of my reception on Friday, names and addresses, and not half the names spelled right."

Mrs De Frank—"Well, you know that you do write such a shockingly bad hand, my dear."

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use grease or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

"Doctor, I called to see you about my mother-in-law, I have a presentiment she's buried alive again. The last time we buried her she came to life, kicked off the lid of her coffin and burrowed to the top of the grave."

Doctor (proudly)—"Don't be alarmed this time, sir; I am sure she is dead, for I attended her in her last illness."

If you do not know how good a remedy Gardol Tea really is for constipation and sick headache, send a postal card to D. Denmore & Co., 271 Queen Street, West, Toronto.

"Something ought to be done to prevent those two lunatics from going out roving together," exclaimed the nervous woman.

"Don't mind 'em, madam," replied the bystander. "Each is in good company. One of 'em is the man who rocks the boat and the other is the man who wants to see how far from shore he can swim."

A conjurer was recently performing the old trick of producing eggs from a pocket handkerchief, when he remarked to a little boy in fun: "My say, my boy, your mother can't get eggs without hens, can she?"

"Of course she can," replied the boy.

"Why, how is that?" asked the conjurer.

"She keeps ducks!" replied the boy, amid roars of laughter.

THE WEAK LINK IN A LIFE IS OVER A NEGLECTED COLD. Working in the morning spell? For 'em in pastures green, Where feeding cows are seen, There's scarce a tinkling bell, I long to tell of these. Sweet vale of peace and love, Thy towering hills above Seem like a fort to thee; To guard thee from the storm, That raging off in vain In hurricanes of gloom, I through Gasparee.

Wrapped in a peaceful calm, As if the least alarm, Working in the morning spell, For 'em in pastures green, Where feeding cows are seen, There's scarce a tinkling bell, I long to tell of these. Sweet vale of peace and love, Thy towering hills above Seem like a fort to thee; To guard thee from the storm, That raging off in vain In hurricanes of gloom, I through Gasparee.

The farmer that I use, Has cast his usual strain; For from the river shore, There comes a song so pure, That his would sound in vain At Gasparee.

Sweet vale of peace and love, Thy towering hills above Seem like a fort to thee; To guard thee from the storm, That raging off in vain In hurricanes of gloom, I through Gasparee.

Now I must cease my lyre, For dawn grows the fire In vain attempt at song; Yet, my heart will be, A spot reserved for thee, As varied memories throng Of Gasparee. C. W. BISHOP.

To make a bold sauce; put a teaspoon of sugar, in a small saucepan; moisten with half a teaspoon of boiling water, and cook until it thickens. Just the white of one egg, put a pinch of cream of tartar in the boiling sugar, pour over the egg. Beat until cold and thick. Flavor.
