

The Morning Star.

VOLUME 1.

FREDERICTON, N. B., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1878.

NUMBER 8.

PROSPECTUS.

The die is cast! We have launched our barque! May our voyage be a successful one! We to-day present our first-born—the MORNING STAR—to the public. May they receive it with the good wishes for us that we have for them in making the offering.

THE MORNING STAR is destined to fill a long-vacant place in the city. Everybody here must know that the CAPITAL CITY OF THE PROVINCE should not be left to the tender mercies of two weeklies. These papers never could fill that void which we now propose to fill.

No doubt much is expected of us on our first appearance, some people expect to see us flaunt in silks, while others expect to see every "item" knock somebody down. They will be disappointed. Under the ragged coat often palpitates a noble heart—excuse our appearance if we look somewhat shabby at first—and we come not to knock down, but to build up. The easy way, like the old man who commenced pelting grass, we shall try, till a desperate case compels us to give harder knocks. It is only when badly angered we will bring a millstone on a mosquito's back. Some people—of course there are busy-bodies everywhere—are itching to know what the POLITICS OF THIS PAPER ARE. Our politics, dear friends, we create for ourselves. Rest assured our paper shall not, like a cur, creep, and lick and fawn, and wag its tail or its tongue, that dame Lucre may follow. No We shall set up no man as an idol; to none shall we "crook the pregnant hinges of the knee," from Sir John Macdonald to Mr. Fraser, from Mr. Fraser to nobody. We shall not shape our policy after a flock of clamorers, be they Government or Opposition, for when these fellows' stomachs are filled, they, as a rule, subside like gormandized gulls. Our policy shall be

A POLICY ON PRINCIPLE! And we don't care who upholds that policy, we are with them. But let nobody be deluded into believing that if we stick to our party when on the road of political rectitude, we are going to follow it into every dirty slough. No. When we approach a dirty neighborhood, we act the part of the coward and return to our own broad platform.

We shall not define just now what the particulars of our policy are, but suffice it to say, that as far as the Great Disposer has given us what He has not given many of our politicians, we shall use the same towards ameliorating the people's condition, towards battering down those walls that divide one paltry clique from the other, in trying to bring discordant elements into harmony, and in trying to rout once and for ever from the field those clamoring crows whose sole object is to fill themselves.

THE MORNING STAR we hope to make an EXCELLENT FAMILY NEWSPAPER. No slang or degrading literature shall find a place in its columns; no crew of rampant scribblers shall practice on its pages. It shall be devoted to choice literature, important and reliable information, and several departments we hope to make in time specially suited to

OUR YOUNG READERS. We shall have it circulated all over the Province, yea, beyond St.

Lawrence Gulf. In the woodman's hut and the farmer's cot it will be found, on summer evenings and winter nights, bringing mirth to the jocular and wholesome information to the inquiring. In the railway cars and on the steamboats, in the hamlet and in the town, the STAR will be found always full of matter to please the old or the young, the poet or the calculator. We hope to be able to afford little that the ignoramus will enjoy. Catering to this section of humanity, alas! is becoming the curse of the press, due in part to the ignorance of attaches in part to the greed and low taste of the managers.

We know pretty well what the public want and what is good for them. We shall give

SPICED DISHES and varieties of food. We guarantee nothing that will take an emetic to work off, nor anything that will make a soporific. Others in the business can do that better than we. We shall sound no notes on the Temperance or the Opium question, on Orange ascendancy or Fenian degeneracy—we weigh the two latter, observe—but should these questions at any time come up, did intimidators stand with pistols or pitchforks, money or "slobber," we shall

LAUNCH OUR BROADSIDES into the action and on the right side. During Exhibition week the MORNING STAR will be published daily—every morning—after which we shall issue a tri-weekly—always trying to keep up to the mark—on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings. On Saturday evening we shall strike off the WEEKLY STAR, a large paper, containing considerable original matter. The latter paper will be excellently adapted for people living outside the city. And now this part of the tale is told. We hope to be long in the field, and if ever we get into a contest, we hope to show our wounds on the front. If we go down, it will not be without a hard struggle. Gnats cannot affect us, nor sneering opposition take a feather out of us. The heart, strength and respectability of the community are on our side, and we cannot but win. We have full confidence in the public, and, to be candid, no small amount of confidence in ourselves.

We have been in the dark long, but this issue of the MORNING STAR—bright herald—announces approaching day. The dark shadows of night flee before its piercing twinkle, and a new flood of light bursts upon us. May it ever be a true light, showing things as they are. May we ever stick fast to our motto.

Before our pen shall Error fly, And Truth the vacant place supply.

Great Men.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time."

Thus spake Longfellow, and we shall now with the kind indulgence of our readers commence a series of articles on such of the great men as shall occur to us.

Some of us are "flowers born to blush unseen." Some of us are in poets, but the divine seed has never been nurtured. It is nipped by the cold chill which must ever be where no enlivening sympathy is. Some of us at our earliest breath have drunk deep of lessons that stamped themselves upon our after life. Early impressions are everlasting. No scenes like those first presented to our young minds. While yet a boy Lord Byron roamed at will among the dark crags and frowning peaks of Loch Na Garr. Though in after years he gazed upon Ossa and Pelion, Olympus and Parnassus sacred to the divine muse, the theme of "glorious Greeks," yet the scenes of his childhood,—peeping down from the rugged peaks into the dark still lochs and silent tarns, rapt in contemplation of the wild majesty of the scenes about him—were the first that gave impulse to his genius. Hear him in his "Hours of Idleness:"

"Away ye gay landscapes and gardens of roses,
In you let the minions of luxury rove,
Restore me the rocks where the snowflake reposes,
Though still they are sacred to Freedom and Love.

Though catarnets roar 'stead of smooth-flowing fountains
I sigh for the valley of dark Loch Na Garr."

The scenes of his boyhood were stamped upon his young soul.

Then young Scott the "Magician of the North," when but a boy stands out in the thunderstorm, arrows of lightning fly from cloud to cloud, and the heavens are shook by the roar of ethereal artillery. His mother fears for his understanding. His lines on the war in the Heavens are sublime. Then at day time he rides out in those glens of "velvet green," soars to the summit of some wild mountain peak, exorcises the hill-side, the glen, the lake and wood, each of which tells a thousand tales of Rob Roys, Normans of the fitful peak, Eddie Ochiltrees, Quentin Durwards and Scotland's fairest, best of Queen's.

'Tis true for Milton—

"The childhood shows the man
As morning shows the day."

While a boy young Scott would roam at night alone among the spots that enchanted his young mind. The ivy mantled tower, the ruined battlements, the decayed and crumbling castle,
"Whose wondrous gate and massy bar Hath off rolled back the tide of war," he dreams over. Fertile as Canynges box, are they of story rich and old and deftly, and mode powerfully than Chatterton does, he draws his glorious pictures.

Not more than twelve years old, the silver moon shining bright above, he gazes on Cumnor Hall, the gorm of Keliuworth, and his thoughts mould themselves into verse.

"The dews of summer night did fall,
Then moon sweet regent of the sky,
Silvered the walls of Cumnor Hall,
And many an oak that grew thereby,"

and as the boy's mind was, so was the man's. He was destined to make unforgotten glens and rude peaks, to live in story. From the wild bleak moor he extracts the lines—

"The bittern clamored from the moss,
The wind blew loud and shrill,"

Wild spots which nature in her anger had left in confusion, he circumscribes in poetical lines.

"It was a barren scene and wild,
Where naked cliffs were rudely piled,
But ever and anon between,
Lay velvet tufts of loveliest green."

Afar into the ages of the past, flees his mind. He sees a ruined castle majestic in its decay. No monument remains, but crumbling and ivy covered stones to tell the tale of its greatness. But Scott at once has "wassail rout and brawl," within its walls, a drawbridge spans the moat. It is to him a strong-hold of a feudal lord. Retainers "Home returning, filled the hall, With revel, wassail, route and brawl;" and this is not a lie.

"Still with trump and clang, The gateway's broken arches rang."

He everywhere smites chords that respond to his touch, as if struck by the magician's wand. The monument of his fame fast appears itself till the world look on spe-bound at the work of the enchanter. He is yet, like ourselves—unmarried. But the greatest romance in his life is a reality. He visits Gelsland in Cumberland Strait with his inseparable friend Ferguson. Towards the dusk of evening the ride out towards they forest, a fairy form mounted on a beautiful steed flits before them, and disappears in the glen. The scene suits Scott's romantic mind; he falls in love with the lovely mysterious creature. That night meets her at a ball room, and shortly afterwards marries her. She is the lovely Charlotte Charpentier and now in a beautiful cottage in a romantic glen lives Scott writing his immortality. He is courted by the great and the learned. For one work, he gets £12,000 and amasses wealth till on the banks of the Tweed begins to rise his fairy castle, the delight and ideal of his dreams, the far famed Abbotsford. The hands of eastern magic could not more profusely lavish wealth than Scott on this fairy palace, nor the nymphs of the woods and mountains shape grander or more romantic proportions. It is finished, and Scott's genius reaches its zenith. Like a bright star he has blazed out and dazzled the world, and made by his pen alone, over four million dollars.

His estates begin to crumble, his wife dies, but worse than this his publisher tells him his power has departed. Listen to the anguish of the shorn Sampson:—

"Well exertion, exertion, O, invention rouse thyself, may man be kind, may God be propitious! The worst is, I never quite know when I am right or wrong."

And the magic wand is broken, his power has fled, and Walter Scott, like the rest falls into the grave. Sic transit gloria mundi.

JOS. E. COLLINS, EDITOR. FREDERICTON, OCT. 17, 1878.

Effects of Intellectual Culture.

The greatest difference between man and the animal is the degree of intellect the one possesses over the other. We speak not considering that part which is of God—the soul.

A man of course, low, sensual tastes, bears the stamp upon his face. The face is the index to the character and what is good in many can be noticed there as in a mirror. Scarce ever is found the radiance of divine expression in him who chews tobacco or beets and makes a beast of himself with strong drink. The coarse, low, sensual face is found over the wine cup, at the bar-room, at the card table, gazing at the street corner, or peering from some dark alley-way. The other face—the human face divine—is found, while the other swears, gambles, eats tobacco or swills rum, in his room, a book in his hand. The thoughts that dropped into immortal form from Shakespeare's pen, the lofty and sublime waking dream of Milton he pores over. What Ben Johnson said or Garrick did he takes delight to learn. From the former he learns that "All the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players." He is told that "There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune."

His mind is elevated and the dignity of his manhood stands out boldly. Though in the battles among the angels he may only listen to the thunder as it "bellows through the vast and boundless deep;" yet he finds a something in his nature, a certain power awakened. Or he may take Dryden or Pope, he who though not much of an example was an excellent teacher. His words "Man know thyself, presume not God to scan, The proper study of mankind is man," can never die.

Even listening to Wordsworth's childish strains his tenderest sympathies may be awakened. He will find that men have lived to whom

"The meaneast flower that blows, can give Thoughts that often lie to deep for tears."

He can follow the wanderer and shed tears on the threshold of the widow's door. Yes, turn to thousands of books that can be purchased for the money thrown away on tobacco, and other such vile stuff, and he will find a pleasure and a joy that neither the street corner, the liquor shop, nor the pipe can ever afford. In Fredericton are many boys and young men, yea, and old ones too, with good natural ability, but on the road to the dogs. Is it ever possible these can be content to be mere "hewers of wood, drawers of water," and nothing more? Has not God given them his own image and likeness? Has He not for them, too, a home and a crown beyond? We hope so, yet they care not for themselves. Vice is at the corner, it is in the alley-way, for idleness, smoking and insulting passers by are vice. Why do not some of these who might be growing young men go to night school? or organize some respectable literary club, where they might attend? Neither Indian nor serpents names are necessary. As well may it be a Literary Society as a "Snake Club." We do wish to see our young men do this. And before closing we have a word for our "swells." Some of these are "clerks," some are "office hands." They all smoke cigars, have more meerschaum pipes than books, more rings and jewelry than literary gems. They are fashionable and frown down on the poor "corner-boy." They are not a whit better if they are not superior in mind. The despised toiler who digs from morning till night if he have a mind is better than the swell jingling in gew-gaws or revelling in perfumery. We want to see our clerks and swells organize respectable literary rooms. We are not done.

The Ameer's Son.

The Ameer, like many of our City Fathers, has his unruly sons. Famous in history is the name of Yacoub Khan. He has a lithe and gallant form, an eye like an eagle, and a spirit that cannot be subdued. In the year of 1870, when the people enjoyed plenty, and the Ameer his throne in peace, an insurrection was brewing throughout the country. As it burst forth at its head stood the rebellious son Yacoub. A struggle ensued but even the blackly painted Ameer has enough of the father's love in him to forgive the "wayward boy." Further he confers upon him the governorship of Herat. Four years he rules with intelligence, when again the demon that is within him rises. He again rebels against his father in 1874. Since that date up to a few days ago the chill, cold prison has been his room, the iron cot his couch. Now England threatens the Afghan land, Sher Ali releases his son and gives him command of a body of brave warriors. But again the demon breaks forth. Yacoub quarrels with an officer and stabs him. He is thrown into prison where he now "weeps and gnashes his teeth." An unruly lad!

Address to Earl Dufferin.

Earl Dufferin in anticipation of his leaving Canada transmitted to Mayor Gregory the address presented to him on his visit to Fredericton with the intimation that he intended to have all the addresses which have been presented to him, numbering some hundreds, bound, and requesting that the Fredericton address, which was somewhat plain, might be recopied and illuminated so as to correspond with others. The Mayor entrusted the recopying to A. G. Beckwith Esq., who has illuminated it very beautifully, and during to-day and to-morrow it may be seen at Mr. Croyley's bookstore.

With the withdrawal of the Earl Canada loses a man of a broad and highly cultured mind, in thorough sympathy with the Dominion he has so well governed. A thousand Canadian hearts that have learned to love him for his affability and worth will follow him with their best prayers when he embarks for the mother land.

MATRIMONY.

Candidly, we should not like to be an old bachelor, we therefore, to-day, give a treatise on marriage. Matrimony is the other name for a number of things: for joy, for sorrow, for poverty, and last but not least, for squalling—matrimonial music. It is now many years ago since Adam was a bachelor. He was a noble specimen, says Milton, but Darwin tells us he was a monkey. The race may have ended in the professor, not commenced in Adam. Well, Adam did not wear eye-glasses, sure, but he was without the noblest of the race.

"His fair large front and eye sublime declared Absolute rule; and hyacinthine locks Round from his parted forelock manly hung Clustering."

[Of course this does not say any of our bald-headed bachelors should not have some show.]

In the morning he rose from the couch, fresh and soft spread over nature's cap. All night long Adam lay awake, feeling that he was alone. He listened—'twas the sound of the wakeful nightingale who

"All night long her amorous descent sung."

He wondered why he had none to talk to. At early morn the trees breathing salubrious odors, the twittering choir of the wood attuning their notes, the onnces, bears, leopards and lions, who had not yet learned to be savage, cheered him not, but he went groning over Eden. The Lord saw his distress, and was moved, and Adam lay down in a shady nook of the quiet garden, whence he could see the rock of adamant at the eastern gate of paradise. Here Ithuriel and the rest of the heavenly warriors indulged in ethereal sports, drew their flaming swords

"From the thighs of mighty cherubim," whose gleams far round illumined the earth. Well, Adam fell asleep to waken and find a fair form that to see was to love. Adam became happy right away, but of course the wife tempted him and got him into an awful scrape. Never mind Adam just now, nor let us dwell on the nuptials of last Eve as in another column. We need but look through this fair city and see examples of wedlock, see a man who long after death has broken the link, yet happy in the thought of once having been married. Take Mr. GEORGE F. GREGORY for the example. The Mayor knows with the poet.

"'Tis better to have loved and lost Than never to have loved at all." Then we look round and see a man smiling all the day, clean shaven, short haired, always in good humor whether compounding rat or fly poison, just because he's married. This is Mr. JOHN M. WILKY. Look at this other who would go into the holy of holies with a mopy head, now polished up, his hair combed, just because he is looking for a wife. We refer to Mr. W. WILSON. When a man reaches the highest summit of perfection he thinks he ought to get married. One lies in the ditch his head on a grating, his nose between the bars. McKenzie's helping hand lifts him out. He becomes a new man; appears before the public as an orator and the first thing he does is advertizes for a wife. This is JOHN POOR.

Now look at the wretch, nobody to love, nobody loving him, skulking along the street anything but cheerful looking. It is he who has no hopes of ever being married. Take for this last melancholy example, OURSELVES.

Our advice is get married while you are young and have a little means. There comes with years a cruel biting frost, that kills the hair, and mars the beauty. O what a spectacle! Poor ourselves.

THE PRESS.—We have received a number of the Fredericton Morning Star, now issued tri-weekly. There is also to be a weekly issue. The names of editor and publisher do not appear. The paper is lively and promises to be a useful addition to the press of the Capital. A smaller sheet issued daily at one cent ought to be acceptable in Fredericton and might be sustained. We wish the new corner success.—Telegraph.

The Telegraph has not, it seems, the clearest eyesight. The name of the Editor does appear. We are thankful for the suggestion about the daily cent sheet. We are only sorry that we did not consult the Telegraph before publishing our first issue.

NEW COPPER MINE.—A new and very rich mine of copper has been discovered at Bay of Notre Dame, Nfld. The mine is at Little Bay, about 14 miles S. W. of Bell's Cove, on property owned by Mr. Ellerhausen and others. The discovery was made by a poor fisherman. Work was soon commenced, and it is expected that before the present season ends from five to ten thousand tons will be shipped. Gangs of men were taken from Hall's Bay and Bell's Cove to work the new mine, which is likely to prove a "big bonanza" for its owners. Halifax Herald.

Newfoundland is proving to be a vast store of hidden wealth. Everyday much is coming to light,—some of it mines give lead and silver some nickel some copper, and all in great abundance and of superior quality. Its day is assuredly dawning.

PROF. FOSTER'S RESIGNATION.—We understand Prof. Foster of the N. B. University has tendered his resignation to the Senate. No doubt the Professor feels that his ability fits him for a wider field than that of the somewhat circumscribed "Chair." Our good wishes shall be with him wherever he goes.

YESTERDAYS TELEGRAMS
OTTAWA.
The New Government to be Sworn In to-day.
OTTAWA, Oct. 16.
The Governor-General arrived at Montreal from Quebec yesterday. Sir John Macdonald, Hon. J. C. Pope, Tupper, Tilley, Jas. Macdonald, O'Connor, Senator Muirhead, Mason and Donville and Mr. Himsforth, Clerk of the Privy Council, are in Montreal. It is thought probable the ministers will be sworn in to-day.

THIS MORNING'S TELEGRAMS.
AQUATIC.
Articles for St. John Oarsmen.
Fearing that unfeeling aquatic opponents from this City should ever so far forget themselves as to pull hard and badly beat the illustrious followers of the watery Neptune in St. John, the following rules are writ. It will be seen that the rules are fixed so that a man might as well try to overtake his own shadow as "beat" the St. John men. If Frederickton come in ahead, the race is "off," if the wind blow, the Neptunes, too, begin to "puff," but, in every case, Dr. DeVeber's pulse is to be consulted.
