A Great Intrigue, OR, THE Mistress of Darracourt.

CHAPTER IV.

Before another word could be spoken, the marquises stood beside them, white with fear and rage.

"Fellow, this is your fault!" he ground out.

Harry Herne turned his eyes upon him silently; but the scorn, the contempt in them, made Lucille quail.

"How dare you risk Miss Darracourt's life with these vicious beasts?" hissed the marquises.

Still not a word.

"Miss Darracourt, if you will take my advice," he went on, still with the gleaming gray eyes fixed on the handsome face, "you will dismiss this vagabond from your service, and instantly. Pray, pray be warned by me, and discharge him."

Then Harry Herne spoke.

"And if you take my advice, Miss Darracourt," he said, his voice ringing low and clear, and, as it seemed, with the dignity of a prince, after the harsh tones of the other; "if you take my advice, Miss Darracourt, you will never place your life in the hands of a coward, who has neither knowledge nor courage enough to drive a couple of harmless ponies."

It was an awful retort from a man to a marquise, awful in its cold hauteur, the voice backed up by the stern dark eyes which fixed themselves on the marquise's face like an accusing god's.

"Insolent!" hissed the marquises. "Stand away, get out of my sight, or—" he seized the whip and raised it.

The threatened man could have avoided it, but he must have left the ponies which he would not do.

Down came the lash, wound itself round the arm upraised to ward it off, and with its tail end cut a livid line across the still bleeding face.

Lucille, with a cry of horror, flung herself before the insulted man.

"Oh! oh!" she gasped, as if the lash had cut her. "Oh, shame, shame!" and she covered her face with her hands.

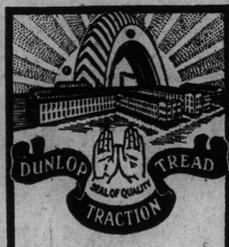

The marquises stood for a second appalled by what he had done, not by the injustice of it, but the effect it would have upon her.

"Forgive me, forgive me, Miss Darracourt!" he said, hoarsely. "The fellow tried me beyond endurance! He has had no more than he deserves! He has almost lost your life, and has added insult—"

"You insulted him first!" gasped Lucille, coloring and panting. "Go, please go!"

The marquise bent his head, took up his hat, and turned; but once more he paused.

"Will you not let me accompany you to the house and plead for forgiveness? I have been hardly tried;

The Master Tire fills the bill by reducing the bill. You see "Traction" on every style and make of car--on rear wheels, front wheels.

FRED. V. CHESMAN, AGENT, ST. JOHN'S.

I have made myself hateful to you.

"Only go!" said Lucille, and at that he turned and went slowly and reluctantly through the trees.

Lucille stood and sobbed. It was the only sound that broke the silence for a moment, then his voice said, softly, sorrowfully:

"Will you forgive me, miss?" She opened her eyes upon him, then averted them with a shudder at the blood-stained, whip-stained face.

"No! no!" she said; then all in a breath: "Oh, your face!—and the cruel whip! Oh, go home at once—at once!" and she stamped her feet.

"Let us go at once," and she made toward the carriage step.

"Wait—please," he said, in a low whisper; "I must take the ponies home, but you—you had better walk. We might be met, and—questions asked! I can reach the yard by a side way. The ponies have run away with me, and I've got my face cut—that is reasonable enough."

The thought flashed upon Lucille that even at that moment he could think of her!

Without a word, but with a quick, shuddering glance at him, she turned. Harry Herne stood and looked up at the sky. It seemed to be spinning like a huge top. There was something going like a mad machine in his brain. But through it all—the pain, the shame, the torture of a whipped man—he stooped and found the glove she had worn, and hid it away in his breast.

He got into the phaeton and spoke to the ponies. Cowed, ashamed of themselves, and utterly sick of the whole business, they trotted off like cows.

They had nearly reached the confines of the park, and Harry Herne was praying that he might get them home without anyone seeing him, when his quick eye, quick still, though it burned like fire, as did the brain behind it, saw the figure of a man crouching in the undergrowth and staring at the house. He was so intent upon his espionage that he did not hear the approaching carriage until the ponies were close upon him, then he sprang to his feet—which was a foolish thing to do!—and ran off.

Harry Herne did not call to him, nor set off in pursuit. He simply rose in the phaeton and took a mental photograph of the man. If he ever met him, say twenty years hence, and in a crowd of a thousand, the hawk-like eyes of Harry Herne would recognize him.

CHAPTER V.

Miss Verner was very clever. As she would have said in her charmingly frank way, she was no fool. Miss Verner had no money, but she had brains, and she knew it. Ever since she had been capable of thought, Marie Verner had resolved to make a place for herself in this best of all possible worlds.

At the school at St. Malo, no one knew anything about her. She was an orphan, and a distinct relative punctually paid her quarterly bills, and—well, that was all. Other girls talked of their friends and their homes, but Marie Verner was discreetly silent.

Notwithstanding this reserve about herself she was popular, and if she did not establish any of those warm and fast friendships to which school-girls are so prone, she never made an enemy, or quarrelled. She was so bright and quick that she was a favorite with the governesses, who regarded her as their most promising pupil. She was always ready to oblige her schoolfellows in little ways that didn't give her much trouble, that they were all of them quite convinced that she was generous and jesting, and singing about the dreary old schoolhouse. Miss Verner was keeping her gray eyes open, and watching for a chance of getting her foot on the first rung of the ladder.

The chance seemed a long time coming, and it looked very much as if she would have to content herself with sinking into the position of a governess, when Lucille Darracourt's fortune burst upon her, and she offered to take Marie Verner with her to England.

Here was the chance that Miss Verner had been waiting for, and she jumped at it. What might she not do in England, and in the train of one of England's greatest heiresses?

The appearance of the Marquis of Merle had seemed like the opening of a realization of her dream! Here he was within a stone's throw—she would see him perhaps daily! Here was the chance! Then she heard that he was poor, and saw at once that he should want to marry Lucille, the heiress, not Marie Verner, the companion, and penniless! Well, she would see. A poor marquise was something, and if it were worth her while she would cut Lucille out. Meanwhile she would watch and wait, and she could do both so admirably!

—watch without being suspected of taking even an interest, and wait, wait like the tortoise that, for all the hare's speed, wins the race!

The gray eyes were like those of a lynx. Nothing at the Court escaped her. She took note of the plate, of the positions of the rooms, the servants' faces, and most of all she took note of Harry Herne!

Who was this young man with the air of a prince and the dress of a gentleman gamekeeper?

She was asking herself these questions as she strolled upon the terrace, looking like a beautiful young creature without a thought or a care in the world, when she caught sight of the pony carriage with Lucille and Harry Herne in it.

Here he was again, and marvelous to believe, seated beside Lucille, the haughty and reserved!

"Lucille has neither jacket nor gloves," she murmured; "she can't go outside the gates, and I shall meet them. I want to see this handsome young prince in disguise face to face."

The park was large, and the paths winding and devious, and after a time she found that she had lost her way. The house was not in sight, and after turning up one defile after another, to find herself still more confused, she came to a stop, and with a touch of vexation on her fair face, she was about to seat herself and rest, when the bushes behind her parted and a young man leaped out and stood beside her.

His appearance was so sudden that any young lady would have been justified in starting, and Marie Verner did wince a little; but it was only very slightly. But her face went deadly pale, and her gray eyes expanded with a sudden, sharp fear.

He was not a bad-looking young man by any means. Tall, and not ungraceful in figure, with a dark face, made all the darker by a black mustache. It was curled at the points; and whether it was the curl or something else vague and indefinable, he did not look a gentleman.

The two looked at each other for a second, the expression of fear in Marie Verner's face giving place to one of surprise and affected pleasure, while his eyes rested on her in a morose, devouring, eager gaze; then she held out both her hands and murmured, oh, so sweetly:

"Sinclair!"

"The young man took her hands and pressed them between his own; they were hot and moist, and the dainty Miss Verner shuddered inwardly, and smiled all the time sweetly.

"Yes, it's me," he said, hurriedly. "You did not expect to see me, I suppose," and he gazed down at her with his black eyes.

"That I didn't," she assented, brightly; "but unexpected blessings are all the more welcome, you know."

"Why did you leave St. Malo, and come here?" he asked, abruptly.

"Why did I come here? Because the mistress of the place invited me. Wouldn't you have come, Sinclair?"

"If I had, and I'd been in your place, and you in mine, I'd have dropped a line to say so," he retorted; "especially if you'd totted and slaved to pay for my schooling, as I've totted and slaved for yours."

"Well, I was going to write to-day. We have been in such confusion, and there hasn't seemed to have been a minute to spare."

By Amphion's Crew.

London, August 19.—The Official Information Bureau has issued an interesting account of the sinking of the British cruiser Amphion by a mine in the North Sea, which was first reported last week.

After describing how the Amphion and the third destroyer flotilla proceeded to carry out a pre-arranged plan of search, the report continues as follows:

"A trawler informed them that she had seen a suspicious ship throwing things overboard. Shortly afterwards the German mine layer Koenigin Luise was sighted steering east. Four destroyers gave chase and in about an hour's time she was rounded up and sunk.

"After picking up the survivors of the German ship the plan of search was carried out without incident until about half-past three in the morning. At this hour the Amphion, on her return course, was near the scene of the operations of the Koenigin Luise, and her course was altered to avoid the danger zone. This was successful until 6.30 a.m., at which hour the Amphion struck a mine.

Engulfed in Flames.

"A sheet of flames instantly engulfed the bridge, the captain was rendered insensible, and he fell to the fore and aft bridge. As soon as the captain recovered consciousness he rang to the engine room to stop the engines, which were still going at revolutions for twenty knots. As all the forward part of the Amphion was on fire it was found impossible to reach the bridge or flood the fore magazine.

"The ship's back appeared to be broken and she was already settling down by the bows. All efforts, therefore were directed to placing the wounded in places of safety in case of an explosion, and in getting the cruiser in tow by the stern.

"By the time the destroyers had closed in it was clearly time to abandon the ship. The men fell in for this purpose with the same composure that had marked their behaviour throughout.

"All was done without hurry or confusion, and twenty minutes after the cruiser struck the mine, the men, the officers, and lastly the captain, had left the ship.

"Three minutes after the captain had left another explosion occurred. This enveloped and blew up the entire forepart of the vessel. The effect of this showed the Amphion must have struck a second mine, which exploded the fore magazine. Debris falling from a great height struck the rescue boats, and the destroyers, and one of the Amphion's shells burst on the deck of one of the destroyers, killing two Englishmen and one German prisoner.

"The after part of the Amphion then began to settle quickly until its foremost section was on the bottom, and the whole after part was inclined to an angle of 45 degrees. In another quarter of an hour this also disappeared.

"Captain Fox, of the Amphion, speaks in high terms of the behaviour of his officers and men throughout. Every order was promptly obeyed without confusion or perturbation."

at home. While no letters are mailed by those in action, mothers and sweethearts at home are allowed to write to their loved ones, but the communications must be sent through the admiralty.

The British warriors have vanished like phantoms into the night. Except for the military and naval authorities no one is acquainted with the numbers or disposition of the English forces.

One naval officer, a lieutenant commander in rank, was dining with his brother in Portsmouth, Eng., on the Sunday before the feet was ordered off into the sea. Monday he received orders to repair to his ship. Tuesday he had sailed. Since that day none of his family has received word of his whereabouts so strictly are official orders being carried out.—Boston Herald.

Prima Donna
 at the Crescent

Sings Madame Patti's Waltz Song.

After rendering what might be considered a treat seldom equalled in song in St. John's, the prima donna last night scored the biggest success ever attained by any singer for some time. The prima donna was accorded a wonderful applause after singing the celebrated waltz song, "Il Bacié" which was made famous by Madame Patti and in responding to the wishes of the large audience she sang the popular Scotch ballad: Annie Laurie." Prof. Spencer who accompanied her on the piano arrived by Wm. Clifford's "The Elks Convention" or Rochester, U. S. A., were two exceptionally good presentations. Two good comedies: "A Fool and His Money," a society affair, and "The Would-Be Detective" were reels of fun and humour.

The programme is a leader, and foretold enjoyment a visit to the Crescent is well repaid. The same bill again to-day; don't fail to hear Miss Clark in her big success.

The Holiday Excursion.

About two hundred persons went out by yesterday afternoon's excursion train to points as far as Kelligrews. Many others went by the several trains since Saturday last and upwards of 800 persons returned to the city by last night's train. On the return trip seating space was away above par, and even standing room was at a premium. Owing to such a heavy train of cars and the slippery condition of the rails the excursionists did not arrive in the city until 10.45 p.m.

KYLE ON DOCK.—The S. S. Kyle entered the dry dock yesterday afternoon to have some rivets placed in her bow, which had been damaged by contact with ice during her recent trips on the northern service.

SEAL OIL SHIPMENTS.—The R. M. S. Carthaginian which sailed for Glasgow yesterday afternoon, took a large quantity of seal oil, shipped by different firms in the city.

Yesterday's Baseball.

The Shamrocks defeated the Wanderers in yesterday's baseball game, which gives the former team the championship for 1914.

The game was a surprise to many of the fans, though the supporters of the Shamrocks were quite enthusiastic and appeared confident of victory.

In the morning game the field was in good condition and a fine exhibition was given, but in the play of which took place in the afternoon, the ground was slippery, and both teams were at a great disadvantage; fielding was difficult and interest in the game seemed to flag. The pitchers of both teams got in some fine work and the success of the Shamrocks may be attributed to Rossiter who pitched for his team.

The players and scores were:—

Wanderers	catcher	Shamrock
Ford	pitcher	Power
Brown	1st base	Rossiter
Hartnett	2nd base	W. Callahan
O'Flaherty	short stop	W. Callahan
McLeod	3rd base	Keener

Do Long Breaths Hurt?

DANGEROUS PLEURISY ALWAYS BEGINS THIS WAY.

Speediest Cure is Nerviline.

Ouch, that stab-like pain in the side is like a hot knife blade in the ribs! Probably got overheated—cooled too fast—now there is congestion, tightness, such spasm you can't draw a long breath.

This is the beginning of Pleurisy. Pleurisy is far too serious to neglect a single instant.

Quickest relief will come from a vigorous rubbing with Nerviline. This trusty old pain reliever will fix you up in no time—will take away the congestion—make you well just as it did Mr. Samuel St. John's, of Stamford, who says:—"In running to catch a train last week I became much overheated. I put up the train window and rode that way in order to get coolest air. In an hour my side was so full of pain and my breathing hurt so much that I thought I had pneumonia. I always carry Nerviline in my grip and at destination I rubbed my side thoroughly three times. The warm penetrating effect was soon noticeable and I quickly got relief. Nerviline I consider saved me from a serious illness."

Any sort of a cold can be quickly broken up with Nerviline which is a marvel for reducing inflammation, for relieving congestion in the throat and chest, for curing stiffness in the side, lumbago, neuralgia, sciatica or rheumatism. Nothing more soothing, or powerful. The 50c. large family size is the most economical. Small trial size 25c. at dealers everywhere.

The Cop.

I'd hate to be a peeler, and tread the pave of brick, the goat for every squealer who thinks he has a kick. He tries to do his duty, nine cases out of ten; the burglar fierce and shooty, all sorts of strong arm men, the hobo and the thief, the bad man with a past, he'll chase from post to pillar, and run them in at last. His life he doesn't reckon when tracking deadly foe; wherever perils beckon the peeler has to go. The cop must be a wizard, a Sherlock in disguise, and know from A to Izzard, the wicked's lures and lies; and he must be a scrapper, to master hoodlums rude; and yet he must be dapper and well groomed as a dude. The manners Chesterfieldian he must possess, of course, or we shall take his shield in, and fire him from the force. A Crickton he'll resemble, in nothing he'll be lax, or surely he may tremble, for he will get the ax. As brave as any lion, yet dovishlike mild and meek, as eloquent as Bryan—'at fifteen bones a week! I'd hate to be a copper, on feet that throbb and ache, the goat of every yawper who has a kick to make.

A Fight to a Finish.

What has happened to the allies in the valley of the Sambre is not very clear. What is clear however is that their forward move has not only been checked by the Germans, but that they have retired to the French frontier to their original lines of defence. Whether the action is called a check or reverse matters little, what does matter is whether the allies are able to check and hold off the millions of German troops without suffering a decisive defeat in a great action which counts, until the Russian millions can so make their presence felt in Prussia that the Germans will be compelled to weaken their forces to put up an adequate defence to the invading Russian. It is largely a matter of time. The Russians have enormous forces, but they have few railways, and this causes great delays in bringing them to the front, for it must be remembered that not only have millions of Russians to be moved over great distances, but these men must be fed and supplied with ammunition and trains of artillery. The German army has had to move over comparatively short distances, and in addition to the ordinary lines of commerce, the Germans have built military railways with immense sidings for the purpose of to-day. The policy of the Germans is to move the bulk of their forces and inflict telling and decisive blows which would cripple the French permanently and then rush back their forces and fall on the Russians with a similar overwhelming force. To do this, the Germans have to act quickly. The Belgians at Liege and elsewhere put them to some extent out of their reckoning. If the allies can keep them delayed by indecisive actions for some weeks, it will enable Russia to put in East Prussia an army as big as the Germans, and then the Germans must lessen their pressure in Belgium and France and find themselves between two great forces on the West and the East. The unexpected fall of Namur, the great Belgian, fortified town at the junction of the Meuse and Sambre has forced the allies to withdraw from their positions in the Sambre in Belgium and to take up a defensive position on the French frontier. If no decisive victory falls to the German arms on this frontier and the main defence is intact, it will be a serious blow to the Germans, as every day which elapses will give the Russians their chances of forcing the Germans to lessen the pressure on the French and English. The British have fought better when they were in a hole as witness Crecy and Agincourt and we have no doubt that whatever trials and tribulations are before us, the sons of the sires who made the Empire will know how to defend it both on land and sea. The struggle will be severe and costly in men and money, but we must rise to the occasion and no matter what the cost, no matter what reverses may befall, we must make our minds up to make sacrifices which ensure victory in the end.

Fishery News.

Aug. 15th. From B. Brazil (Island Rock to Point Rosey).—The total catch is 1,565 qtls. and for last week 445. No traps are in the water, but 17 dories and skiffs and 7 boats are fishing. No schooners from the Banks, but three from the Straits have arrived with 445 qtls. Prospects are poor and there is no bait. The lobster fishery is over but the catch is far ahead of last year's.

Aug. 15th. From J. F. Williams (Bay Bulls South Head to Long Pt.)—Twenty-one traps, 46 dories and skiffs, and ten motor boats are fishing. The total catch is 2,809 qtls. and for last week 150. The Laura May has arrived from Renew ground and reports no bait. Prospects are poor owing to the scarcity of bait. Nearly all the traps have been taken in.

Aug. 15th. From J. Butt (Blanc Sablon to Forteau).—The fishermen are jigging from two to three quintals per day per boat, but work with traps is about over. Prospects are fair and there is a small supply of lance and herring for bait. Four traps, 50 dories and skiffs, and 26 boats are fishing. The total catch is 4,800 qtls. with 500 for last week.

Aug. 15th. From T. Soper (Channel to Port aux Basques).—No traps but 20 dories and skiffs and 3 boats are fishing. The total catch is 344 qtls. of codfish and 33,800 pounds of halibut with 24 qtls. and 300 lbs. for last week. Five vessels which returned from the Gulf and Banks report both fish and bait very scarce. They are now in search of bait. Dogs are plentiful and are greatly hindering operations. As soon as gear is set they devour the bait and also any cod which may have been caught.

There is a rumor that we may expect ermine skins in the fall.

CAPE RACE, To-day.
Wind N.W., strong, weather fine preceded by southerly gales, rain and fog last night. The steamers Neous passed west yesterday and Marsaliborg west at 10 a.m. to-day; no schra. fishing here at present. Bar. 29.15; ther. 64.

Kyle From Labrador.

The s.s. Kyle, Capt. Parsons, arrived from the northward at 3.30 p.m. yesterday, having been as far north as Nain. Fair weather was experienced going and returning, but considerable quantities of ice were met on the northeast coast. Capt. Parsons reports a vast improvement in the fishery conditions and says that the majority of the "floaters" north of Cape Harrison, have done well during the past two weeks. South of that point there has been an improvement since last report. Notwithstanding the present outlook, which is promising, the Labrador catch will fall far below the average.

Note of Thanks.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Kindly permit me space in your paper to sincerely thank all those, being more than a hundred, who so kindly assisted in the search for my wife on Saturday night, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday morning. My wife also joins me in heartily thanking Mr. Walter Mills, who rescued her at the side of the pond, being only a short distance from Rexam's Harbor, and who brought her to camp where kind and willing friends did everything possible to alleviate her sufferings and to make her in a measure comfortable. Our heartfelt thanks go out also to Messrs. Harold Pelley and Henry Stone who brought her home in motor boat from Rexam's Harbor, where she had wandered, being about ten miles from her home. Thanking you in anticipation of space.

Yours very truly,
JOHN DUFFITT.

Eat Whatever You Relish!

Sometimes the digestive machinery gets away off. No kind of food looks good to you. You need Stafford's Prescription "A". It is a temporary artificial digestive process to do the work until the stomach recovers normal conditions. Many people think Pepsin is the thing to take. Four times out of five they are wrong. Pepsin will digest eggs, meat, etc., but has no effect on starchy foods like bread, potatoes, cake, pudding—in fact, most of the eatables that cause the trouble. Prescription "A" is the thing. It contains all the active ingredients for the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, nervous dyspepsia, etc. Eat what you like. Stafford's Prescription "A" will do the rest. Price: Small size, 25 cents; postage 5 cents extra. Large size, 50 cents; postage, 10 cents extra. Prepared only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, N.F.

Proclamation!

By His Excellency Sir WALTER EDWARD DAVIDSON, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland and its Dependencies.

YOUR KING AND COUNTRY NEED YOU! Will You Answer Your Country's Call?

At this very moment the Empire is engaged in the greatest War in the history of the World.

In this crisis your country calls on her young men to rally round Her Flag and enlist in the ranks of Her Army.

If every Patriotic young man answers Her Call, Great Britain and the Empire will emerge stronger and more united than ever.

Newfoundland responds to the Homeland's Call and promises to enlist, equip and despatch to England the First Newfoundland Regiment of 500 strong. We want to send our best, and we believe that Britain's Oldest Colony will gain greater honour and glory for Her Name.

If you are between 19 and 35 years old, will you answer your Country's Call? If you will, then go to the nearest Magistrate and enrol your name for service in the fighting line. If you live in St. John's go to the C. L. B. Armoury and enter your name at the Central Recruiting Office, or any evening between 8 and 10 p.m.

Tickets to St. John's will be provided by the Magistrate free of cost.

The terms of enlistment are: To serve abroad for the duration of the war, but not exceeding one year. It is intended the men shall leave within one month of their enrollment, and that in the meantime they shall receive a course of instruction and training in St. John's.

A complete outfit will be provided.

Each private will receive pay at the rate of $1.00 per day and free rations, from the date of enrollment to the date of return, a portion of which will be paid to dependents left behind, or it will be allowed to accumulate for their personal benefit until termination of service.

Volunteers from the outports will be given free passage to St. John's.

Any applicant for service, forwarded by the proper authorities and not accepted after arrival at Headquarters, will be provided with a free passage and maintenance back to his home.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Given under my Hand and Seal at the Government House, St. John's, this 21st day of August, A.D. 1914.

By His Excellency's Command,

JOHN R. BENNETT,

Colonial Secretary.

Battle of the Guns.

The Famous Deport Gun and the Clever Ruse Which Fooled the Germans.

(From The Manchester Guardian.)

Modern battles have ceased to be bodily combats and have become artillery duels. The French were the first to perceive it as soon as smokeless powder and repetition rifles made their appearance. It is obvious to them that these inventions were bound to "empty" the battlefields and do away with close formations. Hence the attacks were to be delivered by loosely formed lines, now leaping like grasshoppers and then seeking shelter or throwing themselves down on the ground until they advanced sufficiently to make a bayonet assault. This necessitated a change also in artillery tactics. The target having practically disappeared, all artillery could do now was to sweep the battlefield with fire and shower upon its various zones a whirlwind of shrapnel so as to make it untenable. For this a quick-firing artillery gun was required, and to the invention of it the French turned their attention from the very beginning of the nineties of the last century.

The result of the long labors was the famous gun of 1897, the so-called 75 millimetre or simple 75 gun, the pride of the French army. Its inventor was Major Deport, at that time director of the construction works at Puteaux and now director of a private armaments firm, and it remains to this day the most superb field gun in existence, with the exception of the improved Deport mode, now adopted by the Italian army.

The Germans came considerably later in the field, and then they fell the victim of a clever ruse on the part of the French military authorities. They had naturally been watching very closely what the French were doing and were trying to imitate them. This misplaced curiosity the French deftly turned to account. Before Deport another officer at the Puteaux works, Captain Ducros, had been experimenting with a new gun in which the French Ministry of War took an interest. Though an advance upon the old breech-loaders, it nevertheless did not solve the desired problem. It could fire some four or five projectiles a minute, but it was heavy, with a nasty recoil, and its initial velocity was too great. The gun was ultimately discarded in favor of the port model, but in order to confound the German enemy Deloys, who was at the head of the artillery workshops at Puteaux, pretended to have adopted the Ducros gun, surrounded it by transparent secrecy, and so well carried out the game that not only the German authorities but even the greater part of the French artillery officers were convinced that it was the Ducros gun with which the French army was going to be equipped.

The result was that the Germans, who had really been the discoverers of the initial principles on which the Deport construction was based, discarded them and set to work to construct a German Ducros gun. Their efforts were crowned with success, and at the very moment when General Deloys threw off the mask and presented all the batteries with the new field gun that the Germans completed at an expenditure of some $12,000,000 the rearmament of their artillery with an imitation of the discarded Ducros model.

The sensation was immense. For a time the Germans tried to belittle the Deport gun and to extol their own, gradually the idle talk died away and in 1905, the chief armaments makers having put their heads together, a conversion was effected of the German gun so as to approach it to a quick-firer. That in view of the enormous expenditure just incurred was indeed possible, and thus at the present moment the Germans, too, possess a modern gun, which, however, is in every respect inferior to the French. It is heavier, less mobile, requires more attendants, has a lower initial velocity.

The German Counterstroke.
Had this been the comparative state of the artillery of both armies throughout the plight of the Germans in the present war would indeed be very great. But the Germans are not a people to allow themselves to be easily outclassed, and in order to retrieve the balance in the field gun they have adopted two other types in which they surpass the French. The first is the heavy gun the application of which in modern battle was first shown by ourselves during the Boer War, when we brought to bear upon the enemy our navy guns. The German heavy guns, of which no fewer than 112 batteries already existed two years ago, have a much heavier shell than any of the existing field guns, and are intended for the special purpose of destroying the enemy's field artillery at the very commencement of an engagement. This is expressly laid down as a guide in the German military textbooks.

Another type of gun is the mortar, whose projectiles describe a curve. A field gun is only useful on a plain uninterrupted by hills or other cover, yet in one case at least out of three either the battlefield is not a plain or the firing battery has to hide itself becomes a mortar firing at an angle becomes highly useful. The Germans have of late been introducing it at the rate of 52 pieces to a corps, while the French army is highly deficient in it.

The main hope of the French remains that the German heavy guns will prove a far more unwieldy toy than they expect, and that they will never arrive in the field for the commencement of a battle so as to interfere with the work of the 75 field guns. Experience alone will show whose calculations are more correct.

See the Great Film. at Rossley's.

Yesterday crowds of delighted patrons attended Rossley's, the feature being one of the greatest boxing contests given under the old London prize ring rules; the applause was deafening. This is no fake fight but a real set to and without gloves. The Vitagraph Co. in "An Amateur Lion Tamer" is another wonderful film showing a great lion and a lioness at large and they look as though they enjoyed their brief taste of liberty after their captivity; this is one of the finest wild animal films ever shown. Many interesting war incidents. Next Monday Mrs. Rossley will show a series of real living patriotic pictures, she is very hard at work rehearsing for this beautiful novelty act, and to-morrow a great feature.

Teaching Our Children Snobbishness.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Children are naturally democrats. Whether the pampered babies of the very wealthy, waited on by trained nurses and fed out of golden mugs, begin to sense their superiority even in the cradle, I do not know, but the ordinary child is a democrat for a few blessed years.

And then his parents—more likely his mother—begin to instill the principles of snobbishness into his mind, which is all too quick to receive them. I do not know anything that makes me sadder than to see this process begun.

"I don't want you to play with the little girl next door," says the mistress of the summer cottage to her six-year-old daughter.

"Why mother?"

"Because that's not the kind of a little girl I want you to play with."

"But, mother, she's awful nice and—"

"Don't tease. I said you couldn't and I know best. You'll understand such things later. They're not the kind of children I want you to associate with. That's all."

Having dismissed her daughter with this germ of snobbishness in her mind, the mother turns to her guest.

"They are just people who are down here for two or three weeks. I don't know who they are and I don't want Doris to associate with them. I understand the father is a mechanic."

As a matter of fact they unquestionably were plain people, the kind who have a two-weeks' outing instead of the whole summer in the country.

but that apparently was the only thing against them. The children were sweet and well-bred, comparing favorably with Doris.

From the point of view of contamination I am sure nothing could have been more unnecessary than this prohibition. But of course it was necessary that Doris should learn to be a snob, and for a first lesson in that accomplishment this was a great opportunity. After a few more lessons she will learn to "draw the line" for herself.

Having spoken of the danger of contamination I want to take this opportunity to say something on that point. Middle class mothers often object to having their children associated with "the lower classes" because they may learn something objectionable from them. To my way of thinking there is not one whit more danger from the poor child than from the rich child. Let me tell you something. As a child I was a thorough democrat in my associations and frequently fraternized with the denizens of our local substitutes for slums. Yet never did I hear a word of evil from one of these children and the only evil I did hear was communicated to me by a girl who was, if anything, above my own social class.

As we grow older we all tend to be snobbish, whether we base our sense of superiority on the fact that we have more high-priced cars and a more magnificent house than our neighbor, or that we live in the front tenement instead of the back. It's the hardest instinct in the world to fight, as I can testify to my own shame. And the part of a true mother is to help her child sense the brotherhood of man and (even more difficult to establish) the sisterhood of woman, instead of teaching him snobbishness.

Liberated, Free Germany Will Arise

FROM HER DEFEATED SELF.

Professor F. V. Riethdorf, of the staff of Woodstock College, and a former German soldier, has written a remarkable letter in denunciation of the German Kaiser. After stating that the quarrel in the present war is not with the German people, Professor Riethdorf says:

"We must deeply sympathize with the German people in the sufferings and dangers brought upon them by their ruling classes, by an oligarchic, insane, military Government. It is the Germany of the 'elched fist' and the 'drawn sword,' of the 'shining armor' and the 'rattling in the scabbard,' that calls for no sympathy on our part. It is the Germany that has precipitated the monstrous world struggle of the day that fills us all with horror and indignation.

"I am a native German and a former German soldier. My own position in this struggle is perfectly clear. My loyalty to the British flag makes me stand against any and all enemies of Britain. If need be I should even fight against Germany, though with a bleeding heart. Furthermore, desire disaster to the German army in this way, for the reason that it will mean restoration of fellowship among the western nations for one of the greatest peoples of Europe. A liberated, free, democratic Germany will start on a new and lasting era of prosperity, of peace, and in arm with England and France.

"Germany's defeat will mean the establishment of a German Republic, and the elimination of William II., and all that he stands for. Such things as 'divine right' and 'milled hat' are anachronisms, an insult to the intelligence of the people of the twentieth century. William II. is the common foe of Europe, and he must be eliminated. Defeat of Germany in this war means ultimate salvation and freedom for her; Germany will be the greatest gainer through defeat."

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Hr. Grace Notes.

Our citizens are called together for Monday night to make arrangements to fall in line with the St. John's Patriotic Committee, as to the Volunteer movement. Carbonear is having a meeting the same night for the same purpose.

Some codfish of a very fine size and excellent quality were in the local market this morning, and sold at very reasonable prices.

Messrs. Robert and Frank Morris, sons of Mr. Joseph Morris, arrived yesterday from Sydney to spend a time home, owing to the works being closed down or somewhat curtailed.

Mr. Selby Parsons is expecting a cargo of coal shortly, which he intends to sell at $6.75 per ton. Why not get a load of flour, Mr. Parsons, and give your friends the benefit of reasonable prices.

Speaking of flour, reminds us of a little incident that came under our notice the other day, when the business men, of the most of them put flour away up. A poor woman who had very little money, but who feared the result if she neglected the warning of the grocer to secure a "stock," decided to sell a couple of highly prized articles of furniture, so as to get the flour. Since hearing that orders are now being taken for delivery in October at $6.00, the poor woman thinks she was badly treated. There are many other people about Harbor Grace and other places who are sorry they got "scary" so quick.

Misses Fanny and Florence Parsons arrived from Green's Harbor by last night's train, having spent a very pleasant time with friends.

A number of bankers were here and at Carbonear during the week looking in vain for squid.

The day was beautifully fine a real "hay day," and the farmer's son who is here from Boston on a holiday, was busy in the field. The domestic, like Rachel of old, had a sweetheart who called in the forenoon to "make an appointment." The farmer's son with true American ingenuity took in the situation at a glance, as he saw the young man approaching. In a very friendly but forceful way he informed the lover that he needed help, and he required him to serve, not for years as Jacob did, but for a few hours, in the field, otherwise Kitty would not be able to see him that afternoon. They went to work—Jack and Walter, and oh! how the hay tossed and made it was well on in the afternoon before Jack thanked him for his services, and assured him the toll had been paid. Jack is sorry they do not keep more domestics.

Portugal Hopes Britain Will Succeed

London, August 19.—The Lisbon correspondent of the Morning Post says that on account of the fear of running short of coal only half the usual number of trains are being run through-out Portugal. "Lighting" for the streets and public buildings has been reduced to a minimum for the same reason.

The only topic of conversation in Portugal is war and good wishes for the success of England.

Prayers for Victory.

Bishop of London Calls for Special Intercession Day in England.

London, Aug. 18.—The Bishop of London has addressed the following letter to the clergy of his diocese:

"We are face to face with the greatest crisis which our country has known for nearly a century, and, thank God, as far as this particular quarrel is concerned, we can encounter it with a good conscience. To have betrayed our friends, to have stood by with folded hands while the independence of the smaller States of Europe was robbed, would have been a lasting disgrace to Great Britain. No one was less anxious for war than we were. No one strove harder for peace than our representatives.

"We can, then, pray with good conscience for victory, and appeal to God, who knows everything, to decide between us and our enemies, and yet we must pray, as our Lord prayed, in perfect charity with all men.

"We have no quarrel with the German people as such. When the military despotism which for a time controls their policy is brushed away it may lead to better relations with the German people than we ever had before.

"It is to secure such united intercession that Friday, August 21, will be observed as a special day of prayer, and intercession."

Jeff Tesreau.

Red McGhee says: When big league scouts first took a squint at Tesreau they agreed a mint would put on double shift to turn out coin to match the pile that Jeff could garner after a while with any sort of thrift. The scouts thought Jeff the one white hope to mix Jack-Johnson's sleepin' dope an' put him out for ten. The big boy had the build an' weight to lay the black man cold an' straight—he weighed 230 then.

He pitched for Houston, Galveston an' Shreveport, down there where the sun fries beefsteak on the hoof. But when the gumshoes lapped his frame right straight up north the youngsters came to dress neat Muggsy's roof. Toronto took him for awhile to chisel down his rough-edged style, but he came back 'fore Fall. In nineteen 'leven that took place. In 1912 he struck his pace an' hurled some classy ball.

Last year 'twas Tesreau's big right paw that saved the pennant for McGraw when no one else could win. He's pitchin' close to Mitty now—he makes the league's best hittin' the bow whenever he goes in. If Jeff can make his spittal last he'll have the whole darn field outclassed for tight-powdered pitchin' stuff. So let Jack Johnson wear his crown. Jeff don't have to knock him down. His star is bright enough.

Divorced Life

By Helen Hessong Fuesle

Over Their Chop Suey

The exotic color and tang of the Chinese restaurant furnish many with an escape from their habitual, humdrum environments. Its devotees nibble strange foods and fancy themselves on the other side of the earth. There is romance in the little journey to Chinatown. Many a troth has been pledged at its teakwood tables. It is the proletariat that is chiefly given to hungering for Chinese fare. Its crowds are composed of commoners. Its foods are inexpensive, and its patrons are not exclusive.

Marian looked out her and saw clerks and shop girls, maids on rare outings in gaudy, tasteless finery, sprinklings of many nationalities gleaned from the motly East Side. Much bottled beer was being consumed. Loud laughing came from some of the tables.

"Not much like the Edgewood Club," smiled Barker.

"Hardly," said Marian. "Coming to a place like this once or twice a year does me."

"It usually makes me glum," returned Barker. "Reminds me of a very dear friend of mine who used to get sudden cravings for chop suey. My fiancée," he added, "Poor girl, she used to ask for it at the hospital, where she was ill for many weeks preceding her death."

"Oh," put in Marian. "She died? I'm sorry."

"You remind me somewhat of her," said Barker, searching Marian's countenance with dreamy, memory-haunted eyes.

"I see now why you have never married," observed Marian sympathetically. "Despite your bereavement you are a lucky man. Death, much more than marriage, is apt to make ideals fixed and eternal. There must be a tremendous satisfaction to you in having remained genuinely in love with this girl. Marriage, you know, is the best of love-tures. As a remedy for being in love, there's nothing like it."

"I've often thought that I might have made a great mistake had I married Jeanette—that was her name. As you say, love is often just a boy-and-girl affair that can't stand the test of marriage."

"I pity any man who marries," observed Marian coolly.

"And women too?" demanded Barker, puzzled.

"Surely. But a woman usually marries because it's the only way to earn a living for which she has been at all prepared. And even her training for that is invariably pitifully inadequate. A man hasn't even the excuse of the economic urge for getting himself into the distractions and troubles of married life. He merely yields to a passing impulse, shuts his eyes tight, disregards his own best interests, and takes the plunge."

Barker laughed. "An ingenious description, but you don't mean all that," he said, shaking his head.

Barker was right; she didn't. She had merely resolved to throw a number of cards on the table that might add interest to the game which had begun.

"Mean it," she echoed. "I mean every word!"

Anti-German Riots General in Germany

London, August 19.—The correspondent at Genoa of the Daily Express says much anti-German sentiment is being shown by crowds in various cities of Italy. Despatches are received in London from Messina that several riotous demonstrations occurred there while the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau were in port. The inhabitants refused to sell the Germans fruit or food.

Clears The Head, Opens The Nostrils Stops Sneezing, Cures Catarrh.

You Get Instant Relief by Inhaling the Soothing Vapor "Catarrhazone."

Catarrh is bound to come with this weather. Slight colds become more offensive and sickening every day. The inflammation extends further into the head. Soon the ears begin to buzz and ring. The head aches, the eyes pain dreadfully, the nose gets plugged up and this forces the patient to breathe through the mouth. Vile filthy secretions are forced back into the throat, requiring a great deal of coughing to keep the air passages free. Finally, this foul matter finds its way into the stomach, causing dyspepsia and general ill-health. By this time the patient has SYSTEMATIC CATARRH, which saps strength, depletes the vital energies and consumption is the unhappy result.

There isn't the slightest use in trying to cure this condition with tablets, snuff or spray. Such treatments are wholly inadequate. You must employ Catarrhazone the only remedy that possesses power to kill the germs of Catarrh. The healing vapor of Catarrhazone is carried by the air you breathe to the most minute cells of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Its antiseptic medication goes everywhere that air can go. No case is too chronic, no person too old—everybody that has catarrh of any kind can be cured by this grand treatment which is endorsed by thousands of physicians throughout America, who say: "The only way to permanently get rid of Catarrh is to use Catarrhazone."

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Wedding Bells.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Thomas J. Rolis, of the General Freight Office, Reid Nfld. Co., was united in matrimony to Miss Lizzie Griffiths, this city. The ceremony took place at St. Patrick's Church, Riverhead, and was performed by Rev. P. McDermott. The bride was daintily attired in a beautiful gown of white Duchess Satin, with veil, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Misses M. Griffiths and Madeline Coady, were the bridesmaids, and the groom was supported by Mr. George Griffiths, brother of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's mother, on Power St., where a large gathering of the immediate friends of the contracting parties had assembled. Many valuable and useful presents were received. The groom's present to the bride was a set of solid gold ear ornaments; to the bridesmaids silver brooches, and to the best man a gold stick pin. Mr. and Mrs. Rolis left by last evening's train for Holyrood en route to Salmonier where the honeymoon will be spent. The Telegram unites with the many friends of the happy couple in offering congratulations, and in wishing them a pleasant voyage over the matrimonial sea.

Knocked Down by Tram

While Mrs. Howlett, of the Goulds, was attempting to cross the street in front of an east bound tram on Saturday evening last, she was struck by the car and thrown to the ground. She was dazed by the suddenness of the blow and was also cut about the head and face. She was taken into Mr. Glasco's store, opposite which the accident occurred, where her wounds were dressed by Dr. Pritchard who had been summoned in the meantime. Later she was driven to her home.

Squid Struck In.

Squid made their appearance on the local grounds and several of the fishermen secured a sufficient quantity for bait purposes. Codfish have been plentiful on the grounds of late, but a scarcity of bait has hindered operations. It is hoped that the appearance will make an improvement in the shore fishery.

In Memoriam.

On the 15th August, death visited the home of the Furrys at St. Joseph's, Salmonier, and claimed as his victim Katie, youngest daughter of James and Theresa Furey. Deceased was subject to heart trouble for several years, this fact was the cause of much anxiety to her people particularly her two brothers James and Frank, with whom she lived, both her father and mother having predeceased her. Apart from this Katie can be said to be truly a martyr, for 25 years she was totally blind. With the humility of a child, the patience of a martyr, and with resignation to God's will, she bore her sufferings until she was released from them by death. She died peacefully, fortified by the rites of Holy Church. Interment took place on the 16th August. —R.I.P. St. Joseph's, Aug. 21.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, Etc.

At Gower St. Church.

(L. C. M.)

The change in the Methodist pastorate of the city has been so great that it is but natural to note what it really implies. Three devoted pastors have closed their term of office, and the vacancies created by their departure have been filled by the appointment of the present incumbents.

Of these, the Rev. Norman Guy is one, and he officiated at Gower Street Church on Sunday morning, and gained golden opinions from the congregation. His discourse was based upon the great question of the Master when He asked: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

The rev. gentleman treated this great subject in a most impartial and logical manner; and he was listened to all through with the closest attention and with unabated interest. His treatise was of a three-fold character, viz., physical, moral and spiritual. He spoke of the greed and covetousness of the age, and of its materialistic tendencies, and how men in their blind pursuit for wealth lose sight of the greater purpose of life. To gain their ends and to gratify their ambitions, they grasp the lesser and thus defeat themselves in that which is the greater. Moral worth is forgotten and spiritual life is neglected, and the immortality of the soul is not considered.

In business speculation men ask themselves the question: "What is it in this for me, and what will I get out of it?" Very proper questions in their place, but the same reasoning is not applied to the greater question of the text. Thus it is that men make the mistake, and in their eager grasping for the shadow they lose the substance.

The sermon was twenty-five minutes in delivery, and was marked by due emphasis and becoming deliberation, and everybody felt that the pulpit of St. John's will be the stronger by the ministrations of the rev. preacher.

At evening the service was in charge of the pastor, the Rev. D. Henneon, and quite a large congregation was in attendance. The text was taken from the Epistle of St. James, 1st chapter and last verse: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

The preacher dwelt chiefly upon the latter clause of the text, and delivered a soul-searching discourse upon the importance of pure living and high ideals. The very nature of religions was such that men everywhere expected the best of it and from it. Men would not have it, if it were any lower in its standard than it really is. Even those who do not live up to its teachings acknowledge by their criticisms that religion implies clean, honest living. This applies to every position and condition of life. Public men and private citizens, and social and domestic duties, could all have upon them the stamp of the genuine, and be unspotted from the world. Some men dared to say that this could not be done; but such a statement is false. Many fail it is true, but every age had its hosts of faithful people, and this age has them, and this city has them.

We have not time to report more fully upon this very able discourse, but from what we have written the reader will readily see what timely lessons it contained and how searching these lessons were.

The Salmonier Garden Party.

On the 15th August the Salmonier Garden Party took place at New-bridge. The place chosen was an ideal one. The day was a delightful one. A day previously the men of the church committee worked zealously preparing tents, where tea was to be served, and erecting dancing galleries. A fisherman's boat came late in the afternoon was the cause of much excitement. Young and old seemed to enjoy themselves. Tea was served until 9 p.m. when everybody prepared to leave for the school hall where a dance was held, and refreshments served. Too much praise cannot be given to the ladies of New-bridge, who assisted by the ladies of St. Joseph's worked hard and untiringly to make the affair a success, which undoubtedly it was. The sum realized was above the expectations of those in charge.—Com.

German Attack British, Who Behaved Admirably--Losses Heavy on Both Sides --- French Withdraw From Alsace-Lorraine.

BRITISH PEOPLE CALM BUT DE-TERMINED --- HEAVY DEATH ROLL EXPECTED.

LONDON, To-day.
This day of waiting has brought home the realities of war to the British people; not before has the nation been so deeply moved. Many thousands have relatives and friends in the army. They know the casualties must be great. The death roll will probably be heavier than in the case of any British force since the Crimean war. The only information of the events the country has had, is contained in a brief official bulletin of a vague character. These have not been cheering. Throughout London, people are in a much more serious mood than at any time since they faced war. There are no scenes of gaiety in the theatres and restaurants. Last night the crowded streets were very quiet. This does not mean that there is any less determination on the part of Britons; only that people are beginning to realize what this war may cost them. On every side are heard declarations that the country must be prepared for a long and exhaustive struggle. While not many reproaches come from supporters of Lord Roberts' crusade for compulsory military service, not a few admit that they never realized how small a part the British army counted in a great European struggle. Thus far England has felt the war far less than any European nation engaged, probably less than Holland and Switzerland, but they are now waiting for the issue of the battle and for the lists of killed and wounded. English people understand all that it means. Every boat from Belgium comes crowded with impoverished refugees who have fled before the German invasion. An organization is being formed to care for these people. Part of the Prince of Wales relief funds which amounts to more than $7,500,000, will be sent to Antwerp for sufferers who have taken refuge there. Thousands of Belgians have crossed the French frontier for the asylum, and the committee will arrange for their relief. England and France apparently propose to care for their smaller ally who thus far has borne the brunt and hardships which war entails.

NAMUR HAS FALLEN---BATTLE STILL RAGING.

LONDON, To-day.
A summary of the war situation in the London Times states that Namur has fallen. This is the words of the official communication, necessitates the withdrawal of a portion of the allied troops from the line of the Somme to their original defensive positions on the French frontier. Namur is a strongly fortified city at the junction of Meuse and Sambre. It was confidently expected to present a formidable obstacle to German advance. There is as yet no explanation of its sudden fall. No doubt the Germans have attacked the allies in this part of Belgium with all their available forces. The battle, now raging from Mons to Cere, will last several days and it will be necessary to await the definite result before a sound conclusion can be reached, as to the effect of this first real engagement.

ITALY NEUTRAL.

LONDON, To-day.
A despatch from Rome says the Italian Premier assured a committee of deputies that no mobilization was imminent in Italy, and that if it did occur later, it would not mean any abandonment of Italian neutrality.

RUMORS OF NAVAL ENGAGEMENT.

TOKYO, To-day.
The British, Russian and French Embassies are flying the Japanese flag as symbols of the alliance. Vice Admiral Kato has been appointed commander in chief of the first squadron. Contradictory reports are in circulation of a battle between British and German warships, but there has been no confirmation.

PARIS, To-day.

The French War Office issued the following announcement. The French and English plan of attacking having failed, owing to unforeseen difficulties, they have retired on covering positions west of the Meuse. The English army on our left was attacked by Germans but behaved admirably, holding its ground with traditional steadfastness. The French assumed aggressive with two army corps. An African brigade in the front line carried away by their eagerness were received by murderous fire. They did not give an inch but were counter attacked by the Prussian Guard and were obliged to retire, only, however, after inflicting enormous losses. The Prussian Guard especially, suffered heavily. East of the Meuse our troops advanced across extremely difficult country and made a vigorous attack, when they emerged from woods, but they were obliged to fall back after a stiff fight, south of River Semois. On the order of General Joffre our troops and British troops were withdrawn to the covering positions. Our troops are intact. Our cavalry has in no way suffered. Our artillery has affirmed its superiority. Our officers and soldiers are in the best condition, morally, physically. As a result of the orders which have been issued, the aspect of the struggle will change for a few days. The French army will remain for a time on the defensive, but at the right moment, to be decided upon by the Commander-in-Chief. It will resume a vigorous offensive. Our losses are heavy. It would be premature to enumerate them. It would be equally so to enumerate those of the Germans who suffered so heavily that they were obliged to abandon their counter attacks and establish themselves in fresh positions. In Lorraine we delivered four attacks yesterday from our positions. North of Nancy, inflicting very heavy loss on the enemy. In regard to the general situation, we have full use of our railroads and retain command of the seas. Our operations have enabled the Russians to enter East Prussia. It is to be regretted that the offensive operations planned failed to achieve their purpose, as a result of difficulties impossible to foresee. It would have shortened the war, but our defenses remain intact in the presence of an already weakened enemy. Every Frenchman will deplore the temporary abandonment of portions of Alsace and Lorraine which we had occupied, and certain parts of the National territory will suffer from the effects of which they will be the theatre. The ordeal is inevitable but temporary. Thus detachments of German cavalry, belonging to an unattached division operating on the extreme right, have penetrated to Roubax, six miles North of Lille and Roubaix district which are defended only by territorial reservists. All our valiant people will know how to find courage to support this trial with unflinching faith in the final success which is not to be doubted. In telling to the country, the whole truth, the Government and military authorities give its strongest proof of their absolute confidence in the victory which depends only on our perseverance and tenacity.

THE FALL OF NAMUR.

Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, This Afternoon.
Beyond the bare statement that Namur had fallen, the Official Bureau has issued nothing on the subject.

LONDON, This Afternoon.
Commenting on the fall of Namur, before the Germans, the "Times" says it is one of these inexplicable events which makes war gamble, and that is that Namur should have fallen in two days, will require a good deal of explanation. The "Times" added that a military expert says that it is too early to say that the line of the Meuse, south of Meiserres, must be abandoned, but the outlook is not favorable, and the development of the situation in the next few days will be watched with legitimate anxiety. The taking of Namur was vital for Germany, and it was a fine stroke for the Germans to have rushed the place under the eyes of the allied armies. We still hope and believe that our counter offensive in the north is postponed and not abandoned. The Chronicle says the news to-day is decidedly bad, adding that if the allies "lose see before long the German war march in earnest upon Paris. Namur is a fortress of great strength, which its defenders could possibly hold several months. We do not imagine that it was taken by rush, more probably by a breach made elsewhere. The allies imposed on them the alternative of leaving a large force to be invested in Namur or withdraw from it altogether. The blunt fact remains that in reality the first clash of battle by the French troops occupying a secluded position of singular strength were driven out by Germans after not more than two days fighting. This speaks volumes for the power of the German attack. England and Russia's most stubbornly fight, come what may to France. They will never surrender to Germany, but will stick to her as they stuck to Napoleon until they cut her down. As long as we hold the sea, we cannot ourselves be vitally struck.

The losing team have lodged a protest with the League on the grounds that their opponents played with men belonging to other League clubs.
At 6.15 when the match was supposed to start the only one to enter the field and who seemed ready for action was the referee. A dispute was on between the teams and nobody seemed to be able to adjust it. A bitter feeling between the players of both teams and their respective supporters was created and it looked as if there would be no game. The bulk of the onlookers were seated on the grand stand and were unaware of what was going on. It was suggested to settle the dispute temporarily by postponing the game and giving back the people their admission fees, but this was considered unnecessary and after fifteen minutes of unnecessary discussion the players came out and started the match, the C.E.I. agreeing to play under regular rules. The C.E.I. did not all their regular players and took on five substitutes.

BRITISH HOLD THEIR OWN AFTER ALL DAY BATTLE.
Special to Evening Telegram.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
The Official Bureau to-day gave out the following announcement: The British forces were engaged all day Sunday and until after dark with the enemy in the neighborhood of Mons, Belgium—they held their ground.
CONFLICT ALL ALONG THE LINE.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
The French Embassy, this morning, received a telegram from the Minister of Foreign Affairs at Paris, stating that contact had been established between the opposing forces all along the line and up to the present without advantage to either side. A confirmed report states that the German ship Zeppelin VIII has been destroyed and that there have been great Russian successes.

ALLIES DRIVEN BACK—OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT FAILS.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
The allies have failed in their first offensive movement against the Germans in Belgium, and have been driven back upon the French frontier. The War Office admits this through the official Bureau when it issued the following: "News has been received that the first line of defence has been taken necessitating the withdrawal of a portion of the allied troops from the line of the Sambre to the original position on the French frontier. No information has been made public regarding British casualties."
GERMAN VICTORIES REPORTED.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
A despatch to the Associated Press from Berlin by wireless has brought the startling news of German victories over the French. An official announcement is made in the German capital that a German army has defeated a French army at Nuechateau, capturing guns and prisoners. The Germans are pursuing the French vigorously in one case beyond Longwy. Another German army has captured 150 French guns in the French department of Meurthe and Moselle. The Germans are reported West of the River Meuse advancing against Mabeuge. They have defeated an English brigade of cavalry.

PREPARE FOR LONG STRUGGLE.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
After nearly three weeks of mobilization the battle of the giants has begun. Roughly speaking, the Germans are trying to work around the allies' flank in Belgium, while the French are attempting the same process to the Germans in Alsace. Official British statements explain calmly that nothing resembling a great battle has been fought as yet, and warn the people against optimism and confidence of success. The English papers are warning the people that the war is only beginning, and that they must be prepared for a long struggle which will tax the resources and manhood of the nation to the utmost limit. While appreciating all that the colonies have done, they expect colonies with the population of Canada and Australia to contribute much more in men and money to the Empire than they have yet done.

FILLED WITH WOUNDED.
VICHY, via PARIS, Aug. 24.
The Presidential Palace and all the hotels have been converted into hospitals and are now filled with wounded. All branches of the service are represented among the patients, including artillerymen, infantrymen, dragoons and husars.

REPORTED FALL OF NANCY.
PARIS, Aug. 24.
A rumor is in circulation in Paris that the Germans have occupied the unfortified town of Nancy. The report lacks confirmation.

GERMANS ROUTED BY RUSSIANS.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
A despatch to the Times from St. Petersburg, reports the Russian success in East Prussia and says it is not a defeat but a route.

JAPANESE CALMLY APPROVE WAR.
TOKIO, Aug. 24.
Unanimous approval of the war which is calmly and dispassionately discussed summarizes public opinion. The newspapers express regret over the necessity of hostilities with Germany and urge the public to refrain from exhibiting resentment towards the Germans in Japan.
AUSTRIA'S EXCUSE FOR DEFEAT.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
According to the Times' correspondent at Venice, the Official Telegraph Agency in Vienna publishes the following official notice on the Austrian-Serbian situation: "On account of Russian intervention in the Serbian War, Austria is forced to gather all its forces for the principal struggle in the North East, consequently the attack on Serbia is henceforth looked upon as a punitive expedition and not a definite war. The decision, therefore, has been reached to retire from the offensive and take up a waiting attitude, making a fresh attack when the opportunity presents itself."

GERMANS CHANGING THEIR NATIONALITY.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
According to Reuter's correspondent at Melbourne, a prize court has been established in all the States of the Australian Commonwealth. The correspondent adds that nearly 800 Germans have been naturalized in Australia since August 1st. The average monthly total of naturalization, he says, is fewer than 70.

JAPANESE FLEET BUSY.
TOKIO, Aug. 24.
The Yamato, in an extra edition, to-day, says the bombardment of Tsing Tau by the Japanese fleet has commenced. This message was passed by the censor of the Navy Department.
ANARCHY IN ALBANIA.
LONDON, Aug. 24.
The Venice correspondent of the Daily Mail sends a report that Prince William of Albania, accompanied by his family, has reached Brindisi en route for Germany, and that Albania is in a state of complete anarchy.

One of Belfast's Best.
The triple screw passenger and mail steamer Statendam, which is the largest vessel ever constructed in Belfast with the exception of the three huge White Star liners, Olympic, Titanic and Britannic, has been successfully launched from Messrs. Harland and Wolff's shipyard. The liner was built to the order of the Holland-America Company for the Atlantic service between Rotterdam and New York. The Statendam is a truly palatial vessel of over 33,000 tons, and is the largest Dutch liner afloat. The Statendam is nearly 770 feet in length over all, is over 86 feet beam, with a gross tonnage exceeding 33,000, and a displacement of 44,000 tons, and has been built to the highest class at Lloyd's, and under survey of the British Board of Trade for passenger certificate, also to meet the requirements of the Dutch and American laws.

The structure of the hull is exceedingly strong. The double bottom extends right fore and aft, and there are eleven watertight bulkheads carried up to the bridge deck at the fore part of the vessel and the saloon deck at the after part. There are nine steel decks.
The vessel will have three funnels and two steel pole masts, fore and aft schooner rig, four derrick posts, and twenty-five steel derricks, electric winches, and Harland and Wolff's steam steering gear, controlled by telemotor from the navigating bridge. Needless to say, there will be a complete installation of electric light, also emergency lighting, and wireless telegraphy and submarine signalling apparatus will be fitted. The arrangements generally for working ship and cargo will be of the most complete character.
The passenger accommodation in the vessel will be on the owner's well known sumptuous style, over 3,000 passengers in all being provided for—800 first, 630 second, and nearly 2,000 third class.

The fact that skirts are growing wider is absolute, and well established.
