Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XXV.

"All mothers cherish the same hope," said Mrs. Vancouver, with a sigh, "but it is a vain one. You may prepare yourself to give up your pretty darling at a moment's warning. Did you notice my son Alec at dinner?" she added, with a suggestive laugh; "he's in love with the dear little girl already."

Mrs. van Cortlandt fairly beamed with gratified pride. Her cup of triumphant joy was full to overflowing. There was a little interval between the dinner and the theatre going, and some adroit manoeuvring Carroll Fitzhugh managed to keep Kelpie all to himself.

"Let's run away and hide ourselves in the conservatory," he said entreatingly, when he had lured her as far as the music room, under the pretense of showing her a new ballad he particularly admired. "You don't care to return to that glaring drawing room and be stared at by all those stupid people, I'm sure. Besides, I want you to find a rosebud for my buttonhole, just to match those in your belt."

"You seem to be very certain about my preferring your company to other people's," said Kelpie.

"On the contrary, I am wretchedly uncertain about it," replied the young man promptly. "I can scarcely believe you are the dear girl who saved my life at New Castle Light a few months ago."

"I find it hard to believe it myself," replied Kelpie carelessly, but her heart beat fast under her silken bodice.

"You treat me as if I were the veriest stranger," Carroll went on, "and we were such good friends down at the little cottage at Thatcher's Rock. Do you know, dear, that I wish at times that you had let me die instead of nursing me back to life."

"That's nonsense," said Kelpie carelessly, but the color deepened in her cheeks, and when the young man took her hand and drew it within his arm, she made no resistance.

The glamour of those happy summer days, when this handsome and high-bred young aristocrat had whispered sweet, sentimental, meaningless phrases in her ear as they sat together in Nurse Janet's little parlor still dazzled her eyes, and rising, and falling with every throb of her foolish girl's heart was the tiny locket which had come to her under the wandering bird's white wings, through all the midnight storm.

The romance of it all was very sweet and alluring to her girlish fancy.

"It isn't nonsense," said Carroll, in a tone of reproach; "if I am to be a stranger to you now, I wish you had let me die in those blissful days when I fancied— But no matter."

He broke off with a tremor in his finely modulated voice, and, turning away, suffered her to enter the conservatory alone.

"Shall I select your rosebud now?" said Kelpie, looking back with an arch glance.

Kelpie was blind with tears by the Fitzhugh was at her side in a twinkling.

"If you will be so kind," he answered eagerly, "and I want it precisely like those you wear."

"Suppose I forbid you to wear my favorite rose?" she demanded jestingly.

"I won't believe you can be so cruel," he replied. "You used to gather wild roses for me by the armful down at Shaddock Rock."

"We are not at Shaddock Rock now," she said, with a sigh, "but you shall have your rosebud, nevertheless."

She broke three long-stemmed beauties from a bush near by and held them out to the young man.

"Won't you kindly fasten them in my button-hole?" he entreated.

"I've given you an inch, and forthwith you demand an ell," she said, with a charming shrug, "but no matter."

She took a silver pin from her girdle as she spoke, and, leaning forward, fastened the lovely bud in the young man's buttonhole.

He gave a great start, and catching hold of her arm, drew her close to his side.

Through the mistlike lace about her fair throat his keen eyes had caught the flash of the slender gold chain.

"I beg your pardon," he murmured, and, taking the chain in the tips of his fingers, he drew forth the tiny locket.

"Kelpie, my darling, did the white bird bring my little gift, after all?" he said.

"How dare you?" she panted, her face crimson with blushes, her bosom heaving.

He caught her in his strong arms for answer, and held her close to his heart.

"My little love gift," he repeated; "did the white bird carry it safely through all the storm, and you have worn it close to your heart ever since? My darling, my sweetheart, my dear little love, it is fate. We belong to each other, and no power on earth shall part us."

Abashed, overwhelmed, and covered with blushes, Kelpie remained passive in his arms, but when he would have kissed her quivering lips she made her escape from the conservatory.

"It is fate," said Carroll, following her slowly. "And fate is even more powerful than love."

"And revenge is stronger than all!" echoed a sibilant voice, and for an instant Aubrey's face appeared like a Nemesis in the gloom of a mystic old alar tree.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The morning mail brought letters for Kelpie from New Castle Light, a long and loving epistle from old daddy, full of the tender, unselfish love that had always made his brave life of toil and peril so lovely and noble. As usual he had no thought of himself; his one desire was to make his dear little woman happy. He missed her, of course, but he and Tom were getting along famously, and if his dear little girl was happy and content to remain in her new home, they had not a complaint to make. It was natural she should fancy the life of a grand lady, and desire to be made acquainted with the great world and he was glad she had such a fine opportunity.

Even if it should turn out that what Mrs. van Cortlandt had asserted was really so, and his dear little woman was not his granddaughter, as he had supposed for so many happy years, he had not a word to say. He should feel toward her all the same and it would be pleasant to know that she would be so well cared for when he was gone. But she must not quite forget her old friends in her grand, new life, but some day, when she could spare the time, run down and make them a little visit. Nurse Janet, Tom and Peto, the green parrot, would all join him in giving her a royal welcome.

Kelpie was blind with tears by the time she had finished reading this letter.

"Dear, precious old daddy, how noble and unselfish he is," she thought. "It was always his way to think only of me and never have a care for himself. But it is plain enough that he is quite heartbroken, and I was a wicked girl to leave him. I'll go back to him and dear old Tom to-morrow. Yes, I will, no matter what Mrs. Cortlandt may say."

But the morrow brought its own interests and pursuits, and Kelpie failed to keep her word.

Mrs. Vancouver gave a grand reception in Kelpie's honor, and all sorts of entertainments followed in swift succession.

If Mrs. van Cortlandt had been a royal lady, instead of an upstart of doubtful origin, as Mrs. Vancouver called her behind her back, her daughter could not have been more highly honored.

It was the third day after the dinner party that Carroll Fitzhugh called at Van Cortlandt Place and asked for a private interview with the mistress of the mansion.

"I've been expecting you," she said, giving the young man her hand with great cordiality, when he was ushered into her boudoir. "Your mother has told you, I suppose?"

"Yes, she has told me, and I was never so utterly astonished in my life. How in the world did such a wonderful thing come to pass?"

"Fate took the matter in hand," replied the lady, "and arranged it to her liking; that's all I can make of it."

"Do you know, my dear Mrs. van Cortlandt," continued Carroll, with a laugh, "I have a strong suspicion that you and my mother, who is the greatest matchmaker under the sun, concocted the whole business between yourselves."

"What right have you to take up such a notion as that," my dear Carroll?" said the lady pleasantly.

"No right whatever; the notion simply struck me, that's all."

"Well, you're mistaken, as my lawyer will prove to you if you cannot take my word."

"Oh, there's no need of proofs. I shall be only too willing to fall in with your plans, but I feel a bit curious to know if it is really a certainty that Miss van Cortlandt will lose her fortune if she refuses to accept my most unworthy self as her husband?"

"It is a certainty, I assure you, and, as I stated a moment ago, I refer you to my lawyer if you desire proofs. This is the way the matter stands: The money comes to Kelpie through my first husband, who was a close friend of your father."

"Yes, I know."

"I regret to say that my life with Kelpie's father was not a pleasant one," the lady went on, "and only a short time after our little daughter's birth we separated. I believe now that I was far more to blame than he.

However, that is neither here nor there.

"We separated, and five years later he died abroad, leaving a will in the hands of his attorney. It has only been quite recently that I discovered that such a will existed, and also that my husband had inherited an immense fortune a short time before his death."

"Not a dime, however, comes to me, but the handsome sum of three millions is bequeathed to my daughter, provided she marries the son of the late Colonel Randolph Fitzhugh before attaining her twenty-first year, and she is at liberty to marry and take possession of her fortune at eighteen. I have told you the sum and substance of my first husband's will, and all that remains to be done is to ascertain if you are the man in question, and if you are willing to comply with the conditions I have mentioned."

"Yes, to both questions," answered Carroll, with emphasis.

Mrs. van Cortlandt's lips quivered, and a mist obscured her eyes as she held forth her jeweled hand.

"My dear Carroll, you don't know how delighted I am," she said. "If I had made up my mind to select a husband for my dear little girl, you are the man I should have chosen."

"My dear lady, it is more than kind of you to say so!" cried Carroll, lifting her hand to his lips.

"Will you allow me to add," he went on eagerly, "that I had already made up my mind, before hearing a word of this, to make a determined effort to win your charming daughter."

"Do you really mean this?" said the lady, with a beaming face.

"I do, indeed, and you would readily believe, madam, if you knew of our little romance."

"Whose romance?" she demanded.

"Kelpie's and mine, of course. She made me promise not to betray our secret, but surely all this absolves me."

"You are talking in riddles," said Mrs. van Cortlandt impatiently. "Tell me what you mean?"

"I will, and I must trust to Kelpie's forgiveness. We were not strangers to each other when she came to live at Van Cortlandt Place."

"What?"

"Kelpie and I were not strangers when you claimed her as your daughter. We had met, and I had fallen in love with her several months before. I was wrecked on the shoals near New Castle Light, and she saved my life and I fell in love with her."

"And she with you, of course?" cried the lady rapturously.

But Carroll shook his head.

"I dare not say that," he answered gravely. "I am miserably uncertain as to her feelings; she quite freezes me out of late, besides, her adorners count by the score. I have but little ground for hope, but if untiring effort and faithful devotion count for anything, she shall be mine in the end."

Mrs. van Cortlandt put her lace handkerchief to her eyes.

BEAUTY AND AFTERNOON TEA.

The afternoon tea has become rather a conventional and necessary institution in this country, and is altogether a pretty habit.
The afternoon tea, considered from the health viewpoint, is decidedly more harmless than some other social functions, where late hours are observed and an excess of dancing is indulged in on an overheated room.
Afternoon tea is a leisurely quiet affair, or, at least, should be. It occurs in those dull hours in the late afternoon, when there does not seem ever to be anything very exciting going on; the tea itself, when made right, is a wholesome enough beverage, mildly stimulating, not heavy, cleansing to the digestive organs.
The main temptation at an afternoon reception which is foe to good complexion is found in the things which so often accompany the tea, such as rich sweets, elaborate cakes, large and small sometimes varied, sandwiches of almost unvaried composition and things, both sweet and sour, which stimulate the appetite.
All of these are usually very good and the temptation is to partake, not wisely, but too well, and thus spoil a 'perfectly good' dinner appetite, load up the stomach with much that is not healthful and in a few days reap a harvest of tiny specks and pimples upon the chin and forehead.
The afternoon tea guest, as well as the afternoon tea user, will therefore be warned in time and choose sparingly of all these kickstaws and condiments. Just a small portion of this or of that, just a tiny bit of many things will not harm her; but to yield to temptation and to take too much, to overeat, particularly of sweets, is to make a mistake which no art-cure of her complexion will be guilty of.

Looted Liquor

From Ship's Cargo. A message has been received by Minister of Justice Squires from Magistrate Miffen, of Greenspond, intimating that three men named Philip Youden, S. Harding and Joseph Stockley had been convicted before him of the larceny of a quantity of liquor from the cargo of the S. S. Popota and sentenced to six months imprisonment each, without the option of a fine.

IRISH WITH ALLIES.

London, March 18.—The Daily Chronicle publishes an article by T. P. O'Connor, M.P., drawing attention to the remarkable part that Ireland and the Irish are playing in the European war, and dealing more specifically with the Irish in the United States. Mr. O'Connor says: "There was no part of the world where anti-English influences worked so powerfully as in the United States. Almost every Irishman there is a son or grandson of an evicted tenant—evicted in all the horrors and sufferings of the Black Forties, and most of them had heard stories of those wrongs from their mother's knee."

"In addition to the old doctrines of revolution and anti-English sentiment, there was German money and a German propaganda headed by Professor Kuno Meyer, that false friend who, while loved by Irishmen as a great Celtic scholar and welcomed at all their banquets, did not in private conversation ever hesitate to express contempt for their national aspirations."

"The well-subsidized and well-organized campaign has failed. Of the Irish in the United States, up to 85 or 90 per cent. are with Mr. Redmond and with the cause of the Allies."

"One significant little story will speak trumpet-tongued on the attitude of Irishmen to England. In 1867 five Irishmen were condemned to death for an emoué, in which a police sergeant was killed. Three—Allen, Larkin and O'Brien—were hanged, and to-day live in the Irish martyrology. One was liberated. The other was reprieved because he had the good luck to be an Irish-American citizen, but he did not escape scot free, for he served nine years' penal servitude, and in days when penal servitude meant starvation and other horrors of a less humane period."

"His name is Captain O'Mearghar Condon, and he is loved and honored by every Nationalist in the world. Since his liberation he has lived in the United States, and holds there a public position under the Secretary of the Interior. He has nothing to hope or fear from England, but he is on the side of England and her Allies. An old fighter for freedom, how could he take any other side?"

STEEL CARS.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Swash." Nowadays no American railroad is up to date unless it hauls its passengers in steel cars. Steel cars have become a very expensive fad. Hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of them have been built in the past ten years. They are very expensive and contribute materially to the high cost of living.

But they also contribute materially to the increasing difficulty in dying, which accounts for their popularity. A steel car will bend when great inducements are offered, but it does not transform itself into toothpicks with cheerful eagerness as the wooden car does when assaulted by a locomotive. It merely folds up a little at the edges and when the passengers are removed a little later with the aid of a can opener they are found to be intact, though not enthusiastic.

When a steel car ploughs half way through a sand bank or a stock train all the passengers in the said car move up front over the seats and mingle with the utmost informality, like the cast of characters in a football game. This is not pleasant, but it is much more healthful than being mixed up with burning splinters in a sort of coroner's hash in the old time way. Steel cars are not only safe, but they are sanitary to the eye. It is impossible to carve the interior of a steel car into a maddening mess of early Pullman art. This alone makes them worth their price to a tortured country. Steel cars are now used on almost all main lines, while the wooden cars have been sent back to the minors on the bush league branches. This is a shockingly foolish idea. There is little use for a steel car on a main line bristling with block signals. It should be sent to the seat of the trouble which is the branch line with the ties that fall to hind and the block-head system of signals which are displayed by a sleepy boy with a coal oil lantern just after the train has gone by. Living on a branch line railroad is about as irritating a pastime as watching an automobile parade from the broad line, and will be until the branch liners rise in their might and establish jitney accommodation trains.

Germany Generous at the Expense of Her Allies.

The situation in the Mediterranean is apparently unchanged. The King and the new Ministry of Greece are standing pat on neutrality, and doing their best to frown down any propaganda in favour of Greece intervening in favour of the Entente Allies. Diplomats of the latter are urging on the Balkan States to form a League against Austria, Germany and Turkey. The difficulties to be overcome are great, as Bulgaria is anxious to obtain part of Macedonia assigned to Serbia after the last war, and Greece and Bulgaria are not in agreement over the boundary line between them. German diplomats are trying to keep Bulgaria out of the war by the promise of Turkish territory, just as Germany is trying to keep Italy neutral by the promise of Austrian territory. It is hardly likely that either Austria or Turkey will submit much longer to the carving up of territory to suit German diplomacy. Last week there were rumours of Turkey suing for peace, which were probably not unconnected with the news that Germany was offering Turkish territory to Bulgaria for her own ends. Turkey may well pause at finding her intervention in aid of Germany costing her dear. Her army in the Caucasus has been crushed by the Russians. Her Black Sea ports bombarded by the Russian fleet. The control of the delta of the Euphrates and Tigris has passed from her to the British. Her expedition to Egypt has proved a costly fiasco. Smyrna and other ports have been bombarded. The Dardanelles are in course of being forced by the British and French. And while she is paying so much for the aid she offered Germany, Germany is offering to give away part of her territory to Bulgaria to keep Bulgaria quiet. The same story is true of Germany's dealings with Austria. There can be no doubt that Germany egged on Austria to war with Serbia to serve her own ends and to provide a pretext for Germany's campaign for World Power. Austria has paid dearly for acting as Germany's pawn. The little coast she has is blockaded. Her army has suffered severely. She has had to abandon her campaign against Serbia, and she has already lost the greater part of Galicia, including the great fortress of Przemyśl. The de-

GREECE STANDS PAT.

ATHENS, To-Day.
An official communication on the foreign policy of Greece was issued to-day. It says the Government is attributing great importance to calm and tranquility in public opinion. Regarding the proper treatment of foreign affairs it considers it an absolute necessity to deny statements to the effect that if Greece does not abandon her attitude of neutrality she will lose the opportunity of realizing her national aspirations. The divergence of views between the Government and its predecessors arose from opinions regarding the gravity of dangers threatening the integrity of the country. The Government is doing everything in its power to avoid possible dangers.

FIGHTING FOR CARPATHIAN PASSES—DIPLOMATS ACTION IN THE BALKANS.

LONDON, To-Day.
The battles for the Carpathian Passes continue with extreme violence, this being the only region where for the moment fighting on a large scale is taking place. The Russians, who recently regained possession of Dukla Pass, are pushing their way toward Bartfeld on one side and Svidnik on the other, where, if they achieve their object, they would have in their possession the heads of railroads running southward into Hungary. The Russians are also carrying on offensive operations against Usok Pass to the east, but at Tukholka Pass, still further to the east, they apparently are satisfied to withstand the Austro-German attacks against their strong positions at Kozlonwka, which the Germans have tried so often to capture. Along the rest of the Eastern front the battle is of a desultory character. In the West also the commanders are waiting for better conditions before making any effort on a large scale, although the French are here and there attempting to capture positions which would give them an advantage when a general offensive is decided upon. To the general public more interesting are the operations in the Dardanelles, of which, however, nothing has been officially published for some days. It is presumed the Allied fleet is waiting for the mine sweepers to complete their work before the attacks on the forts are renewed, and perhaps also for the reinforcements of ships and ammunition. Upon the success of these operations depends not only the fate of Turkey but probably the future policy of the Balkan States and Italy. In Italy big demonstrations were held yesterday calling upon the Government to take action to realize the ambitions of the country, while in the Balkan capitals the diplomats of the allied nations are busily engaged in the endeavour to reorganize the Balkan League and insure a simultaneous intervention of all the Balkan Powers on the side of the Allies. Before this can be done Serbia must be induced to make concessions to Bulgaria in the part of Macedonia which fell to her after the last Balkan war. The Germans are also active in Sofia and are trying to induce Bulgaria by a cession of part of European Turkey to remain neutral.

PARIS, To-day.
Austria has made a definite offer to cede to Italy part of the Province of Trent at the close of the war. The Petit Parisien's Rome correspondent says he has been informed he adds that the proposal was made on Thursday and that the Italian Government deferred its reply.

FRENCH SHOW MUCH ACTIVITY.

PARIS, To-Day.
Along the length of the Meuse to the east of Verdun, in the vicinity of Les Pargés, the French are again driving against the German forces defending St. Mihiel-Metz line of communications. Hard fighting has been in progress south of Etain in the Woivre district, but a series of strong night attacks have dislodged the Germans from several lines of trenches in the Vosges. German artillery is bombarding the position which the French took upon the eminence of Hartmannswillerkopf. In the Champagne district there has been no weakening of the French pressure against the German lines. Reports from that region state that the number killed amount to actual slaughter. Belgian airmen have become active and an aviator bombarded the German aviator camp at Chistelles, seven miles southwest of Bruges. Several hangars were set on fire and two Taube machines were rendered useless. The bomb fell in the midst of a group of soldiers and it is believed a number were killed. Desultory artillery fire is reported from several districts on the northern end of the battle line.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, via St. Pierre, March 27. Rain storms prevailed all day yesterday, and the situation was rather quiet on the greatest part of the front. The Germans attacked between the Meuse and the Moselle, but were easily repulsed. The enemy made two attacks in Coueres and Consenoye Woods, three at Eparges and two in Lepetre Wood.

In the region of Neuport, artillery duels took place. Further south we captured St. George's farm, opposite our lines. In Champagne, cannonading occurred, but no infantry attacks. In Lorraine, north of Badonviller, we strongly fortified the ground gained since last Monday. In Alsace at Reichsackerkopf, the Germans threw some burning liquid on our trenches but without any result.

Six of our aviators bombarded the airfield of Frascaty, and the Metz railway station, dropping about a dozen shells which caused panic. Although fiercely shelled, the aviators returned safe and sound. Barracks situated to the east of Strassburg were also bombarded by us.

Petrograd.—On the front lying between Bartfeld and Aujak, we are still advancing, although the enemy has been reinforced. On 24th March we captured 1,700 prisoners and two cannon. In direction of Mankas Hay and Ustbalena, the Germans re-attacked our positions, but without success.

Paris.—According to instructions received from the Minister of Public Schools, the National Serbian holiday was celebrated in all the public schools throughout France. Regular class hours were suspended, and a speaker entertained the scholars with the heroic struggle maintained by the little Kingdom.

AVIATION CAMP BOMBED.

PARIS, March 27. (Official.) Belgian aviators have bombarded the German aviation camp at Chitelles, in the west of Flanders, 7 miles southwest of Bruges. To east of Height of Meuse, near Mareheville, we captured 300 metres of the enemy's trenches and repulsed two counter-attacks. At Les Eparges we continued our progress of the previous day, winning 150 metres of trenches.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS.

PETROGRAD, March 28. The following official statement was issued here last night: West of the Middle Niemem on the right bank of the Narew and on the left bank of the Vistula, there has been no essential change in the situation. In the Carpathians we have made considerable progress in the direction of Bartfeld. The Austrians in falling back set fire to the village of Zborov. In the direction of Baltigrone we have carried a fortified height. East of Ravoletz, near Russkedynva and Kostwka, we successfully repulsed important forces of the enemy. During the course of the day we made prisoners of about 2,500 Austrian soldiers besides 40 officers. We captured several machine guns. In Eastern Galicia, we drove back a battalion which crossed the Dneister near Jolva, inflicting very heavy losses.

REPORTS U-37 DAMAGED OR SUNK.

LONDON, March 28. The captain of the steamship Lizzie, which arrived at Llanelly, Wales, on Saturday afternoon, stated that he was close by when the British steamer Delmira was torpedoed on Thursday by a submarine in the English Channel. He said the submarine proved to be the U-37. It was some distance ahead of the Lizzie, which ran over it at full speed. The German then disappeared, and from oil seen on the surface of the water, the captain concluded that the underwater boat was either seriously damaged or sunk.

THE 'VOGES' TORPEDOED.

LIVERPOOL, March 28. The steamer Voges, nationality unknown, was sunk by shell fire on Saturday evening off the Cornish coast. The chief engineer was killed, and three of the crew injured by shrapnel. The steamer's crew was brought to New Quay by a patrol boat.

DOWN.

LONDON, March 28. The following official statement was issued by the War Office late last night: The day passed quietly all along the front, the enemy showing no activity. A German aeroplane which, yesterday, had thrown a bomb in the region of Badonvillers, was brought down by us. The pilot and observer were captured.

GERMAN SUBMARINE TOTAL . . .

THE F-4 TOTAL LOSS.

HONOLULU, March 28. Hope that the United States submarine F-4 would be raised before night, failed yesterday, when the ship attached to the disabled craft, slipped, and the F-4 settled back again to the bed of the ocean. The most optimistic concede that there is no reasonable chance of the submarine's crew being taken out alive.

LIVERPOOL DOCKERS RESUME WORK.

LONDON, March 27. Responding to the appeal made by Earl Kitchener, the Earl of Derby and the leaders of their Unions the Liverpool dockers resumed work today. The men at Birkenhead, however, still remain out and are trying up the work of several big ships. Ship building employers will hold a conference early next week with Lloyd George and will then advise complete closing of saloons in districts where armaments are made and ships built, claiming that the output in both cases would be increased fifty per cent. by such a course.

ITALY STILL MARKING TIME.

ROME, March 28. Contrary to statements which have appeared in the French and English press, Austro-Hungary never opened any direct negotiations with Italy concerning possible territorial concessions. From the highest sources here, it is affirmed, that everything done in this line was due to the initiative of Germany. The action of the German Ambassador to Italy, Prince Von Buelow, it is said, was animated by a desire to eliminate the causes of antagonism which always have existed between Austria and Italy, but even the work of the former Imperial Chancellor of Germany, in this direction, was most cautious, so that decided statements which have appeared, in one sense or other, were most premature. This prominent Italian point out, is why Italy vigorously continues her extensive military preparations, not knowing what the future may bring. Next May, according to most reliable opin-

Austrian reservists between the ages of 28 and 42 years, who had been exempted because they were regarded as unfit, have been summoned to the colors. They are to report on May 6th, but will undergo medical examination at once. This measure, which has been adopted as a last resort, is causing widespread discontent, which the newspapers are striving to lessen. They quote the words of the Emperor that the war is necessary to the empire's existence, especially since new enemies are threatening the frontiers, ready to tear the empire's territory in pieces.

ions, the European war will take a definite turn. The Council of Ministers, yesterday, did not discuss the international situation. The Ministers took under consideration the proposed rules which would prohibit the publication of news of a military character; a plan for a partial reopening of the stock exchange, and measures for the benefit of the unemployed.

EIGHTEEN LOSE THEIR LIVES.

LONDON, March 28. Eighteen members of the crew of the British steamer Frostburg, lost their lives yesterday when the vessel was wrecked near Cape Spartel, on the Morocco coast, at the entrance to the Straits of Gibraltar, according to a despatch from Tangier to Reuter's Telegram Company. The Frostburg was a vessel of 7,000 tons. Earlier reports said that 13 men of a crew of 70 had been saved, but that further rescue work was made difficult by high seas. Three British torpedo boat destroyers and one French cruiser are standing by the wreck.

THE LATEST CAPTURE OF A SPY IN PARIS SHOWS HOW WELL GERMANY HAD HER PLANS FOR THE SUBJUGATION OF FRANCE.

For more than four months the spy had fished in the Marne for two hours a day. By accident somebody caught him fishing a telephone wire out of the river, saw him attach it to a pocket instrument and talk-German! The line was traced up stream and across country to the German lines. It had been installed by the German engineers before the retreat from the Marne.

MARIE OF LOUVAIN.

A True Incident.
One of the band of little waifs That still our homestead fills, Her frightened heart found sanctuary Beneath the Sussex hills. Yet could not take our yearning love, Our toys before her get, It seemed her timid eyes beheld Some haunting horror yet.

A brutal blade had scarred her wrist And God knows what her heart— She did not weep, but still and pale The child-face grieved apart. Till, one day, Dick, the woodman's son,

Home, wounded from the war, Came limping in to see, he said, "What sort these kiddies are."

She sprang up at the khaki form One eager glance she cast, Then—"Bittish! Bittish!" Marie cried And flew and held him fast.

And weeping, laughing, murmuring words We could not understand, She nestled till she fell asleep Still clinging to his hand.

Ah, Dick, and all your plucky pals, You win a double crown That friend the weak, and fiercely strike Their murdering foeman down. —Habberton Latham.

IS SHE PRETTY?

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

My friends sometimes laugh at me because my first question about my unknown female quantity usually is, "is she pretty?"
But why not? When you come right down to it, doesn't the possession or lack of beauty have a tremendous effect on a woman's life?
Or on a man's too, for that matter? Good looks are a possession in anyone's favor. As I have often said, it is the show window which makes people want to come inside the shop. The goods inside must keep the customers, but it's a good deal easier to get them there in the first place with an attractive show window.

The Tortoise and the Hare.

A homely man or woman can accomplish just as big things but it usually takes more force of character. Perhaps this very lack of beauty helps develop force of character. Who knows? In any case there are few of us who would refuse the possession of good looks if some fairy god-mother offered them to us.
Which brings me somewhat nearer the point I started for.
Are you a mother? If so, are you doing all you can to give your children the largest measure of good looks possible to them?

Look Out For the Shape of the Head.

The shape of the head is an important factor. Up to the age of eighteen months a child's head is more or less malleable and the shape can be injured by letting it lie too much in one position. If you put a hot water bottle down on a pillow it will take a certain form and hold it. That's what happened to a child's head and if you don't want it to be poorly shaped you should turn the child on the pillow frequently.

Few things detract from good looks more than protruding ears. A little cap to hold the baby's ears down at night will help discourage ears that have the protruding tendency. Be sure it is thin enough not to make him sweat. Be careful, too, that the child does not lie with the ear-folded under.
Missshapen teeth will spoil the finest face. Be careful that the first teeth do not stay in too long and force the second to come in crooked. Directly after the second teeth have come in is the time to correct any dental deformity. Take the child to a first class dentist. If you can't afford that, perhaps there are free dental clinics in our neighbourhood.

Sleep Means Roses.

A good complexion is a gift that your woman-child will thank you for all the days of her life. Cleanliness of the skin, fresh air, lots of sleep and healthy diet with not too much sweets are the best means to insure a good skin. Plenty of sleep during the growing years is likely to mean roses in the blooming years. Your children may resent the early bed hour now, but just wait.
Don't think all this is too much bother over too small a matter. This is what a pretty wise student of human nature says:
"With one-half the world only, as all know, is character destiny; the rest is bent and twisted, glorified or smashed by physiognomy, the great potter."

Mr. Smuts, finance minister, announced in the Cape Colony Assembly on March 4th that ten thousand Boer rebels were taken prisoners during the recent rebellion against British authority in the colony, and the losses on both sides totalled 1,000. The rebels will be imprisoned until the end of the European war, the Government announced, owing to the impracticability of meeting out adequate punishment at this time. The 293 ring-leaders will be prosecuted at once.

Thrilling Story of Tragedy

IN THE AIR WHILE BATTLE RAGED.

Paris, March 22.—One of the most dramatic incidents of the war occurred when the fighting in Flanders was at its height. A lieutenant observer, with a sergeant pilot, was ordered to locate a concealed battery whose fire had become extremely troublesome. The mission having been accomplished, the aeroplane then found itself in a rain of shot and shell, better directed than the others, burst just above our heads. For a moment I believed my brain had burst. "Are you all right, man lieutenant?" I shouted, but I received no reply. Believing that he had not heard, I repeated the question, this time opening my eyes, but not only did I receive no reply, but saw nothing but blackness all round me.
I was alone in space 6,000 ft. above the earth. I was afraid. Guided by noises below, I turned in the direction in which I hoped to meet comrades. I continued in this direction approximately for two minutes, when to my astonishment the lieutenant called out, "Look out, man. Go up, go up." Quickly I twisted, raising the aeroplane so quickly that the machine shot up. "Thank you, mon lieutenant," I said. "You must excuse me, but I cannot see. But you are wounded." "Yes," he answered, "I fear seriously." Then, seeing I was turning my back on our lines, he said: "Make a half-turn to the left. More to the left still. That's right. Straight ahead now." Soon a fresh hail of bullets warned me that we were again above the German lines. Three minutes later the voice of the observer called, "That's it. Here we are. I see our men down there waiting for us. Shut off the spark and volplane gently down." I heard no more, but soon afterwards, at the end of a spiral, our landing wheels grated on the ground. There was a murmur among the bystanders who were look-

Scarcity of Work at Bell Island.

We understand that there is very little labor activity at present on Bell Island and no employment to offer to incoming laborers and miners. Both the Dominion and Nova Scotia Companies are operating on a very small scale, each having one slope running, consequently only a comparatively few men are engaged. Those who are at work are known to the Companies as the regulars or family men and, we learn, that so scarce is work becoming on the Island that even some of the regulars are not employed.

Nellie Louise Arrives

68 DAYS FROM PERNAMBUCO.

The schr. Nellie Louise, Capt. Burke, reached port Saturday night after a lengthy and eventful trip of 68 days from Pernambuco. She had been on this coast since Feb. 11th. During that time a series of storms were experienced and the vessel received a bad drubbing, a portion of her canvas being carried away. Fortunately huge seas were shipped but no damage resulted. In the early part of March the Nellie Louise ran into the ice off Cape St. Mary's. No headway could be made against the ice and Capt. Burke put into North St. Mary's Bay, where he remained a fortnight and until the ice moved off. On Friday last the vessel bore up for St. John's and came along quickly.

Kyle's Long Trip.

The S. S. Kyle which left Port aux Basques at 10.45 a.m. on Saturday last made an unsuccessful attempt to reach North Sydney. The ship was inside low Point when she was obliged to retreat because of the impenetrable ice barrier at the entrance to North Sydney harbour. On the return, a north west gale, with snow squalls, was experienced and the ship was forced to "lay to" about 10 miles east of Scatarie, until 3 a.m. to-day when the course was shaped for Lunenburg, which port she reached at 11 a.m. today. As she was to take only mails and passengers it is expected she left again for Port aux Basques about noon though she was not reported up to press hour.

For two years she had been collecting coins of these denominations, the collection containing $76 in quarters, $350 in dimes and $18.60 in nickels.

While cutting down trees on his farm near Sykesville, Md., last week, Benjamin Kemper found a badly disfigured cheque. It was drawn to the order of Wade H. D. Warfield, for $4.93, was dated April, 1906, and proved to be part of Samuel F. Hess' effects which were blown away by a cyclone in September, 1913. The cheque was found 22 miles from Hess' home.

The London Times says that it learns from a trustworthy source that relatives of German soldiers killed in Belgium are now allowed by the authorities there to enter the country to search for their dead, and take coffins with them for the purpose of posing of taking the bodies back to Germany for reburial. In many cases, however, coffins are brought back full of plunder. In one case, one of these coffins fell off a truck. The lid came off and silver teapots and trays fell out.

That German submarines receive fuel from a floating base of supplies, disguised as a Scandinavian tank steamer, is suspected by Captain Jonsen of the Danish steamer Louisiana, at Boston from Copenhagen. The steamer passed the mysterious tanker 100 miles off the west coast of Ireland, according to the captain's story. The tank steamer appeared to act strangely when the Boston-bound steamer passed it. It is built like a Swedish oil carrier and has a Danish flag painted on each side.

How the Germans Are Proposing to Re-Map Europe.

Berlin, March 16.—German newspapers are discussing with animation an article by Rudolph Martin, formerly Counselor in the German Foreign Office and now a Representative in the Bavarian Diet. Herr Martin portrays the reshaping of Europe after the war and predicts a territorial victory for Germany. He also estimates the indemnities which the Allies would have to pay to the victorious Teutonic Allies. As a basis, he uses the war indemnity paid by France to Germany after the war of 1870.

"The indemnity of the Allies," the article says, "would have to pay in case of a probable German success of arms would range from 125,000,000,000 to 150,000,000,000 marks ($20,000,000,000 to $27,000,000,000). This enormous sum will probably be apportioned among Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey at the ratio of sixteen, ten and four, respectively.

"The basis of my estimate is that which was used to fix the indemnity which victorious Germany exacted in 1871 from France. This amounted to 75,000,000,000 marks, and was two and a half times the actual cost of the war, which, it was estimated, had cost Germany 30,000,000,000 marks.

"Germany, if victorious, will take possession of the best part of the French coast and install there a permanent force of aviators. From strategically chosen points it will then be possible to control London and Paris. Approximately 20,000 men would be necessary to secure for Germany this tremendous advantage for the securing of a permanent peace.

"In addition to this Great Britain will be compelled to consent to the building of a four-track tunnel underneath the Channel. This also will be controlled by Germany. Sweden, as a reward for her neutrality will receive Finland. The Baltic, Provinces and Poland will fall to Germany. Austria will receive Southern Russia, including Odessa and Kieff, and Turkey will be rewarded with the entire Caucasus and Egypt. A portion of Arabia will be given to Roumania in return for a bona fide treaty with Germany and its Allies.

"Alsace Lorraine will naturally remain German. Belgium will become German, and Belgium will be placed, together with the Congo, under a German military protectorate. In addition it will have to pay an indemnity of 6,250,000,000 marks within a few years. Great Britain and France will have to relinquish Egypt, India, Algeria, Tunis and Morocco. The Suez Canal will be placed under Turkish control.

In conclusion Herr Martin says that Germany cannot expect peace before Great Britain has been successfully invaded and London is occupied by German troops. He leaves it to his readers to figure out how this invasion can be accomplished. He estimates that the war will last four years.

BRAVEST DEED OF THE YEAR.

London, March 21.—The Stanhope gold medal for the bravest deed of the year has been awarded by the Royal Humane Society to Edward J. Hales, chief officer on the steamship Minerlic, of the Andrew Weir Line.

On June 3rd last, the Minerlic ran into a violent typhoon in the Sea of Japan. At the height of the storm an upturned fishing schooner was sighted with four men clinging to her. In spite of the storm the Minerlic rescued them, and learned that a woman was pinned captive under the wrecked boat.

Hales immediately took an axe and leaped into the wild sea. At last he reached the boat and, clambering on to it, hacked a great hole through the side, through which he pulled the exhausted woman.

When the Minerlic attempted to lower a boat to pick up the rescuer and rescued a great gust of wind blew the boat out to sea. Hales and the woman whose life he had saved, were forced to cling to the upturned boat for nearly an hour with the waves breaking over them.

At last the sea calmed and a boat was lowered.

The explanation of the coat of arms of Glasgow is curious. On it are an oak tree with a bell hanging on one of its branches, a bird at the top of the tree, and a salmon, with a ring in its mouth, at the base. St. Kentigern, in the seventh century, took up his abode on the site of the present city of Glasgow. Upon an oak in the clearing he hung a bell to summon the savages to worship, hence the oak and bell. A queen, having formed an attachment to a soldier, gave him a precious ring, which the king had given her. The king, aware of the fact, stole upon the soldier in sleep, abstracted the ring, threw it into the Clyde, and then asked the queen for it. The queen, in alarm, applied to St. Kentigern, who went to the Clyde, caught a salmon with the ring in its mouth, handed it to the queen, and was thus the means of restoring peace to the Royal couple.

British Auxiliary Sinks German Converted Cruiser

IN BATTLE OFF THE PLATTE.

A special cable from Valparaiso to the New York Herald says:

The British auxiliary cruiser Orama, which steamed to this port on Tuesday and the wounded from the German cruiser Dresden, sunk at Juan Fernandez on Sunday, brought the first news of a battle off the River Platte, on November 11, in which the German armed merchantman Navarra was sent to the bottom.

The Orama, taken over by the British Admiralty early in the war and fitted with a formidable battery, was proceeding early in November to join the British squadron at that time seeking the German Admiral Von Spee in the South Atlantic, when she sighted the Navarra off the mouth of the Platte. The Orama gave chase and the auxiliaries exchanged shots. The gunnery of the British vessel was more accurate and after a brief engagement the upper works of the German were seen to be afire. The Orama redoubled her efforts, but her guns were silenced when the crew of the Navarra took to the water. Four small boats remained undamaged, and in these the crew pulled away from their vessel just before an explosion sent her listing far to starboard.

The Navarra's crew scarcely had been taken aboard the Orama when the ship turned slowly over and disappeared. To prevent the possibility of her becoming a drift net the Orama before she sunk steamed as close as safety permitted and sent a few more shells into the burning hulk. The Orama escaped undamaged from the action and without a wounded man among the crew. The casualties aboard the Navarra were few.

From the narratives of the German prisoners the men of the Orama gathered that the Navarra, one of the big Hamburg-American line steamships, was bound for South American ports when war was declared. She touched at Pernambuco early in September and stopped at Punta Arenas on October 10. She then was bound for the Pacific, where she got in touch with Admiral Von Spee's squadron near Juan Fernandez Island just before the battle off Coronel, in which the British ship the Good Hope and Monmouth. The men aboard the Orama are convinced it was not until the Navarra joined the German squadron that she received her armament and took her place as a commerce destroyer.

The foregoing special cable despatch is the first news to reach New York of the battle between the Orama and the Navarra, although the London Daily Mirror in its issue of February 24, published photographs of the sinking of the German ship. No date of the battle and no location was mentioned in the Mirror, and the British Admiralty has not announced the action. Accompanying its photograph the Daily Mirror said:

"All the romance of the great war at sea does not get published, but we should not forget that Britain is ruling the waves wherever she meets an enemy craft. Here are two dramatic sea incidents. When the armed German liner Navarra met the armed British liner Orama a sea duel took place, which resulted in the enemy's vessel being sunk."

The Orama, commanded by Captain John R. Segrave, of the royal navy, formerly was a merchant vessel of the Orient line. She is of 13,000 tons and was built at Clydebank by Messrs. John Brown & Co. She is a triple screw vessel, one of the latest additions to the Orient line fleet and the first turbine driven ship constructed for the Australian mail service. With the Kent and Glasgow she attacked and sank the German cruiser Dresden last Sunday at Juan Fernandez.

The Navarra was one of the Hamburg-American line vessels, engaged principally in South American trade. She was of 5,794 tons.

At the R. C. Cathedral. Scotch Stoker Brutally Assaulted.

Rev. Fr. Cox, S. J., occupied the pulpit at the R. C. Cathedral last evening and preached an impressive sermon on the Sacred Passion. In eloquent language the reverend Father reviewed the different stages of the Passion from the Agony in the Garden to the Crucifixion on Mount Calvary, dwelling particularly on the love of the Man-God who besides giving His humanity also sacrificed His divinity for the glorious work of our redemption. The meekness with which He suffered the cruel torments endured on the road to Calvary was described by the Jesuit in a manner that would move the most hardened sinner to tears of repentance. The sermon was followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Volunteers at Port Nelson. Current Events Club.

According to a letter just received in the city from a St. John's man in Port Nelson, a gang of young men who were engaged railway building in that region for the Canadian Government, have given up work and gone to enlist with His Majesty's Forces. So much interested were they over the war situation and so keen was their desire to offer their services for the Empire, that they walked distances of from 115 to 120 miles, under the most adverse and trying conditions, to get to the nearest railroad point where they expected to connect with the Canadian Military headquarters.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

From the time of its birth the child's mouth should be cleansed morning and evening. To accomplish this use tepid water and salt, or water made slightly alkaline with a pinch of powdered borax. A small piece of soft linen cloth may be wrapped around the forefinger, dipped in the water and gently rubbed about the child's mouth. When the temporary teeth are all 'cut' which is usually at the age of two years, a small, soft brush should be used morning, noon and night with the alkaline water, brushing the teeth, carefully in order to reach all the grooves. At the age of three the child should be given a brush and taught to use it properly. The tooth brush should be concave in shape so as to adapt itself to the curves of the jaws. The bristles should be medium. Of course, the child will regard the brush as a plaything at first, but it will soon become a habit to imitate mother and brush the teeth upon rising, after each meal and before retiring. The mother should emphasize the fact that it is just as necessary to keep the teeth clean as the hands. Indeed, it is really more important, for soiled hands will not cause half the mischief that soiled teeth will, and just because they are out of sight is no reason why they should be 'out of mind' any more than hands or face.

FIVE KRONPRINZ MEN HE SAYS

London, March 20.—Chronicle tells the story of adventures as a prisoner on board the German commerce raider Kronprinz Wilhelm, as a member of the crew, in the steamship Potaro, which was captured by the British on the sailing of the Potaro from Liverpool on the 8th of the month. The crew sighted the cruiser, which they believed to be British. She came up and fired two shots across the bow. The crew then discovered Kronprinz. Time was wasted in which to get their own and then all of the crew aboard the raider were saluted with a hail of shot.

On Jan. 14th the Nebel and Brae was similarly captured and passengers, crew and passengers transferred and a prize put aboard. Later the same day the schooner Wilfred was captured and the crew were transferred to the raider. Kronprinz rammed her and was not sunk, and the crew with her after this time of Bremen came along. The raider was transferred to the Kronprinz, the Hemisphere, which on Dec. 28.

A week later the Norwegian barque Schunda, 2,400 tons of wheat, was encountered. She was transferred and the crew were transferred to the raider at a distance of between six and seven miles. Allan said: "They could not sink her, and they had to send a number of men to scuttle her. My opinion is that the Germans were playing with their guns. They were anything at point-blank range."

After being six weeks in the hands of the raider, the crew were transferred to the raider, taken to Buenos Aires, the Kronprinz had captured passengers from the ship. Allan said: "They gave us a captain seemed to be a man, but I know who he had been there. I never a ship came along. I sent below. We did not what perils we were night, have been blown up while they were taken prisoner, who would never surrender the ship. "There were sent and day, while they were continually searching for dum-dum bullets. "Five members

50 Persons Killed
AT HOWE SOUND, B. C.
Vancouver, B. C., March 22.—Fifty miners were killed, and as many more injured, early to-day by a snowslide which swept away several bunk houses at the Britannia Mine at Howe Sound, B. C., according to a despatch received here. Beside the bunk houses part of the aerial tramway of the mine was carried away.

The mine level is on the side of a mountain and nearly five thousand feet above the shore of the Sound. The tramway destroyed extended from the mine to the beach.

Soon after reports of the avalanche were received here a steamer with physicians and nurses left for Howe Sound. Details are lacking owing to it is believed to the fact that communication with the mine has been cut off as telephone wires are down.

The Britannia is a coal mine employing more than one thousand men. The slide swept away a bunk house containing fifteen men, a cook house containing ten men, and several private houses in which were a number of women and children. Several men who were going off the night shift at midnight were also killed.

At last reports rescuers were working on the pile of debris, but few bodies had been found. Fifteen of the injured were brought to Vancouver to-night by steamer.

Owing to lack of communication with Howe Sound, except by boat, details are not yet available.

WEATHER.—A light N.W. wind prevails along the line of railway to-day, with occasional snow squalls in the vicinity of the Topsails. The temperature ranges from 22 to 30 above.

Mysterious Death

Of a Private of Second Contingent in Vancouver.—Had been in Company with a Suspected German Spy, and His Body Found in a Pool.

Vancouver, B.C., March 29.—Military authorities in Vancouver are co-operating with the police in attempting to solve the mystery of the probable violent death of Private Peter Wassel of the 29th Vancouver Battalion. His body was found yesterday lying in a pool of stagnant water a few hundred yards away from Havings Park, where the thousand men of the Second Contingent are quartered. A coroner's jury to-day brought in an open verdict.

Wassel came to Vancouver late in October, 1914, from Cambil, Oregon. There is no record as to Wassel's original nationality. His next of kin was recorded as Ivan, Christian Wassel, 8272 Palmer Street, Chicago. Ivan and Christian in the brother's name suggest Scandinavian, but there was an impression that Wassel was a German-American. He told acquaintances that he lived in Seattle, but gave no address. When he first joined, Wassel seemed cheery and anxious to be sociable, but after another recruit named Skrimp, now known to be a German-American, got in touch with him he changed and became morose and held himself aloof from the jollities of his comrades in their leisure hours. The authorities now made no secret of the impression that they think Skrimp was a German spy, and it is a strange coincidence that he deserted on the same day as Wassel, and has not been heard of since. It is also strange that while Wassel left in military uniform his body was in civilian clothes when found in the lonely pool, where it might have lain there for months more if a little had not gone there to look for frogs.

FIVE KRONPRINZ MEN EXECUTED HE SAYS.

London, March 29.—The Daily Chronicle tells the story of six weeks' adventures as a prisoner of war on board the German commerce raider Kronprinz Wilhelm, as related by a member of the crew, J. H. Allan of the steamship Potaro, who arrived at Liverpool on the sailing ship Desado. The Potaro left Liverpool on Christmas Day for Montevideo, and on Jan. 5th the crew sighted a four-funnel cruiser, which they believed to be British. She came up to the ship and fired two shots across her bow, and the crew then discovered it was the Kronprinz. Time was given to them in which to get their effects together, and then all of the crew were taken aboard the raider and the Potaro sailed away with a prize crew on board.

On Jan. 14th the Nelson liner Highland Brae was similarly treated. The crew and passengers, including a number of women and children, were transferred and a prize crew were put aboard.

Later the same day the three-masted schooner Wilfred M., was pulled up and the crew were transferred. The Kronprinz rammed her twice, but she was not sunk, and the Germans left her with her after part still afloat. A few days after this the collier Holgar of Bremen came alongside and transferred to the Kronprinz the crew of the Hemisphere, which was attacked on Dec. 28.

A week later the four-masted Norwegian barque Schmandia, laden with 2,400 tons of wheat from Queenstown was encountered. The crew were transferred and the Kronprinz fired sixteen rounds into her wooden hull at a distance of between 200 and 300 yards. Allan said:

"They could not sink the ship by gunfire, and they had in the end to scuttle her. My opinion is that the Germans were playing a game of bluff with their guns. They could not sink anything at point-blank range."

After being six weeks on board the Kronprinz the crew of the Potaro were transferred to the Holgar and taken to Buenos Aires. Altogether the Kronprinz had on board prisoners and passengers from five ships, numbering 222, Allan continued:

"They gave us good food. The captain seemed to be a considerate man, but I know who would come off best had there been a fight. Whenever a ship came alongside we were sent below. We did not know what was happening, nor could we tell what perils we were facing. We might have been suffocated there or blown up while the German crew were taken prisoners by the English, who would never suppose us to be on the ship."

"There were sentries over us night and day, while the Germans were continually searching our kits for dum-dum bullets."

"Five members of the German crew were executed for disobeying orders, but the most remarkable incident of all was when we were captured and transferred. Among the crew which went to take possession of our ship was a man whose face I remembered well. I had sailed with him under the British flag to all parts of the world, and here he was, after war was declared, sailing under the enemy, taking British steamers prisoners. That, in my opinion, is how the Germans get their information."

Straight Talk.

One year ago Bear Brand Rubbers were unknown in Newfoundland. Today, everyone knows of them. Why? Because they have been in the public eye incessantly during the past twelve months.

Mr. Dealer, what does this mean to you? It means that your customers will DEMAND Bear Brand. If you cannot provide them they will go elsewhere. It means that if you stock Bear Brand, they will not be unsold on your shelves. They will be constantly moving out, and you will be constantly moving new supplies in.

That is the result of our advertising. We KNOW we have a first class article. Your customers also know it, either from personal experience this winter, or from their friends' glowing accounts of their wearing qualities.

People always buy the advertised article, and if they find it good, they buy again, and again, and always.

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:—

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $331,000.00, and a reserve fund of $225,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities and administers their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.
