The Heir of Bayneham

—AND—
Lady Hutton's Ward.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

It was but the vision of an excited, bewildered mind, yet it turned his thoughts in quite a different direction. He forgot Lady Grahame—she faded from his mind like a forgotten dream—but he remembered Magdalen, who had spoken sweet words of the Judge he trembled to meet. If she were but here now, if she could bend over him, with her gent' touch and her loving heart, he should not be so frightened. And again he bowed as he reaped. He had driven his wife from him in the proud arrogance of his prosperity, and he would have given all he had in the world if she could have been with him.

He remembered his child. Poor Magdalen was dead; he had seen the green grave and the simple stone that bore no name. But his child lived, the child with her mother's face, and her mother's voice. Perhaps she knew the same gentle lessons that his wife had taught—would she come to him? It mattered little about keeping the secret now.

It flashed across him that he had seen Lord Bayneham in town—how long since?—only yesterday. He would send for him and ask if it were possible that he could see his wife. Science did wonderful things—surely it could give him a few hours.

"I want to see Lord Bayneham," he said, touching Dr. Arne's hand; "let him be sent for at once."

It was fortunate that the messenger found Lord Bayneham at home. He received the summons with wonder and surprise. Mr. Fulton dying—and sending for him! Like an electric shock the thought struck him it must be something about his lost wife.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Fast as it was possible to go, Lord Bayneham hastened to the dying man. He heard from the butler, when he stood in the hall, every particular of the accident—he saw real, unfeigned tears shining in the man's eyes.

Mr. Fulton was loved by his inferiors for his invariable kindness and good-humor. Then he entered the luxurious chamber, where the master of the house lay, doomed and dying.

"Let him come near me," said Paul Fulton to Dr. Arne. "I have much to say to him."

The doctor rose from his seat, and made way for Lord Bayneham. Claude was inexpressibly shocked. So lately had he seen Paul Fulton in the flush and pride of his manhood, his handsome face smiling and care-free—could that pale, haggard man, with crimson-stained bandages upon his head, be the same who had saluted him so early a few hours ago? The wild eyes, full of horror, glared upon him.

"I am dying, they say," gasped the hoarse, low voice. "I never feared man, but I am afraid to die."

Lord Bayneham did not know what to say—a woman in his place would have uttered the exact words the dying man wanted to hear—something of mercy and pardon and hope. Lord Bayneham looked awkwardly around the room, and then murmured something about recovery.

"No," said Paul Fulton sorrowfully; "Dr. Arne tells me I shall not see this sun set. Lord Bayneham, I want to speak to you about your wife."

The young earl started. In the shock of seeing that ghastly figure, he had forgotten for a moment that he expected to hear of his lost love.

"What of my wife?" he said gently; for even supposing that Paul Fulton had caused all the sorrow and suspense, it was not possible to maintain the faintest gleam of anger against the shattered, dying wreck before him. "What of my wife?" he asked again.

"I should like to see her," whispered Paul Fulton. "I am dying, they say, and this is my last prayer. Let me see your wife once; let my last look be upon her face."

"Do you know where she is?" asked Lord Bayneham.

"No," was the calm reply; "at Bayneham, I suppose. It is not too far, my lord. There will be time if you send at once."

Ah, then he knew nothing of her flight—their half suspicions had been wrong.

"Why do you wish to see my wife?" he asked; "trust me—tell me."

"I will," said Paul Fulton. "I do not know whether you have been told anything of your wife's history. I want to see her—oh, Lord Bayneham, I want to see her, because she is my only child."

"Your child!" cried Lord Bayneham in unutterable wonder.

"Yes," said Paul, "my child. Her mother was the fairest and sweetest girl in all Scotland, and she was my wife. When I saw your wife, Lord Bayneham, I thought my own had returned to me again, young and lovely as I first knew her. She is my daughter. I was Lord Hutton's dearest friend; her mother was Lady Hutton's foster-sister; Lady Hutton adopted her when my wife joined me over seas."

There was silence for some few moments, and a thousand thoughts flashed through Lord Bayneham's mind. This explained all that had seemed so mysterious—the notes—ah, and perhaps the interview.

"Why was this kept a secret from me?" he said sadly. "It has caused bitter sorrow."

"I will tell you, Lord Bayneham," said the dying man. "My daughter longed to make her secret known to you—it embittered her life. She knew nothing of it until her poor mother went to see her, and died at the Firs cottage. Her mother, my poor Magdalen, forced her to take an oath that she would never reveal it, and that oath she faithfully kept. It seemed like an especial decree from Heaven that I should go to Bayneham, and find there my wife's grave and my living child. I knew she was my daughter from a ring that I had given her mother, and which she wore, and from her picture, my lord."

"Yes, I remember," said Lord Bayneham sadly; "why did you not tell me the truth?"

"You will hear," continued the dying man; "I dared not, because my whole life is a living lie. She told me so. My name, Lord Bayneham, is Stephen Hurst—I dare utter it now that I am dying. My father was a gentleman—no truer or nobler one ever lived. I was always wild and wicked. When I had wasted my little fortune I went with Lord Hutton to visit the lady he loved, Miss Erskine of Brynmar, and there I met Magdalen Burns, the fairest girl I ever saw.

married her, and we went to London. Let me tell you what I did, Lord Bayneham—yesterday I would have died sooner that have told it; to-day I care not. I committed a forgery, and was sentenced to transportation.

"Ah, do not turn from me, my lord; I have suffered for my sins, I lived through a martyrdom—no words can tell what my punishment was like. Magdalen came to me like an angel, of pity and goodness; I treated her with barbarous cruelty, and drove her from me and broke her heart."

"When the time of my sentence expired, I went away to the diggings, and there like many others made a large fortune.

"Lord Bayneham, I am dying here alone, and every sin of my life seems to recoil upon my head. I never meant men to know who I was. I have kept my secret, hoping to make for myself a new life from the wreck of the old one. All things have prospered with me; I had wealth and honor—my heart's wish—a marriage with Lady Grahame was soon to be accomplished, and now it is all over. I have wasted my life, and would fain have it to begin again."

"I cannot understand," said Lord Bayneham gently "why you wished this to be kept a secret from me."

"I dreaded its being known," he replied. "As Stephen Hurst I should have been despised and outlawed; as Paul Fulton men have esteemed me. If I had claimed my child, I must have told who I was. She begged of me with tears to tell you, but I would not."

"She is sacrificed to your pride," said Lord Bayneham. "Tell me, on the last evening you were at Bayneham, did you meet my wife and your daughter in the Lady's Walk? Did you talk to her there?"

"Yes, said Stephen Hurst. "I did so; I asked her to meet me there, and most unwillingly she complied."

"You gave two notes into her hands," continued Lord Bayneham sadly.

"Yes," replied Stephen; "but how do you know, and why do you mention these things?"

The Home Dressmaker should keep a Catalogue Scrap Book of our Pattern Cuts. These will be found very useful to refer to from time to time.

A SMART AND POPULAR DAY DRESS.

4216. Here is a model ideal for business or home wear—showing simple lines, attractive and practical features. The collar is convertible. The sleeve may be finished in wrist length or to the elbow. The graceful becoming fullness of this model is held by belt sections over back and front. Prunella or twill for service and kasha, crepe or velvet for a more dressy dress in this style would be fine for its development.

The pattern is cut in 7 sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size requires 3 1/2 yards of 54 inch material. To make the collar of contrasting material 3 1/2 inches wide requires 1/4 yard. The width of the dress at the foot is 2 1/4 yards.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

Lausanne Conference Strikes A New Snag.

Strong Protest Against French Action in Ruhr -- German Miners Refuse Work and Call Strike -- New York in Fresh Crusade With Alcohol.

LAUSANNE SNAGS.
LAUSANNE, Jan. 21. The Near East Conference has struck a snag on one of the questions which everyone thought close to a satisfactory settlement that of the proposed compulsory exchange of minority populations between Greece and Turkey. Demetrios Caclamaos, the Greek Minister to Great Britain, took the floor at yesterday's session and suggested on behalf of his country that the compulsory transfer be abandoned, and that only voluntary intermigration be provided for in the Peace Treaty now under negotiation. Marquis Curzon has acknowledged that the private discussions between Britain and Turkey concerning the Mosul oil district have failed, and the whole problem of this coveted territory will be threshed out in a meeting of the full commission on Tuesday. The forthcoming week promise to be as one delegate put it "active and decisive."

RUHR SEETHING WITH EXCITEMENT.
ESSEN, Jan. 21. The entire Ruhr Valley is seething with excitement. Manifestations of protest against the arrest of German industrial officials are being organized although these are forbidden the French who announce their intention to repress them ruthlessly should necessity arise. The labor leaders who favor co-operation with France apparently have been overwhelmed by popular sentiment and may declare a general strike tomorrow. Sunday proved a quiet day. There were no clashes although the people were in much greater ferment than last Sunday. Nationalist manifestations in Dortmund and in Bochum districts were abandoned owing to the firm attitude of the French, who hurried troops to strategic points in these cities.

GENERAL STRIKE OF MINERS CALLED.
ESSEN, Jan. 21. A general strike of miners in the Ruhr district has been decided on effective tomorrow. The strike decision was taken after a twelve hour session of the Labor delegates here. This points to a complete defection of labor. An ultimatum from Berlin announced that workmen would be prosecuted and sent to jail if they transported French coal and if miners brought it to the surface.

ENFORCING THE LAW.
NEW YORK, Jan. 20. Thousands of New York's saloons and cafes, many in the white light districts, may be closed in the near future as a result of decisions made at a conference on prohibition enforcement yesterday. The padlocking of virtually all establishments convicted of violations of the prohibition law, it was stated, would follow, beginning today, of united action by Federal and local authorities.

MINERS STRIKE.
LONDON, Jan. 20. An Essen despatch to the Times says the Belgians yesterday occupied the premises of the Gute Hoffnung mine at Stearkeade. The miners struck immediately, refusing to resume work until the troops were withdrawn.

STRIKING A BALANCE.
ESSEN, Jan. 21. Concrete returns from France's ten day's occupation of the Ruhr Valley, briefly summarized, are: One hundred tons of coal requisitioned and shipped to France; Consecration of six coke ovens and four mines, all State owned; Sequestration of customs receipts and tax collections amounting to about 250 million marks from the Dusseldorf and Essen branches of the Reichsbank. To achieve the above results the French had to resort to various coercive measures, including the arrest of nearly a score of persons. Counter strokes directed against the French by Germany included the closing of the Reichsbank branches in Mayence, Dusseldorf, Essen and Dortmund; the removal of headquarters of the Rhenish Westphalian Coal Syndicate from Essen, and of the Benzol Syndicate from Bochum; the absolute refusal by industrialists to co-operate with the occupational control mission; and the strike of railroad men, who refused to transport requisitioned coal outside the Ruhr.

EIGHT DEAD IN TENEMENT FIRE.
LAWRENCE, Mass., Jan. 20. The bodies of eight people were removed from the ruins of a tenement house here, gutted by flames early today. It was a five story brick structure, housing five families, and the exact number of people indoors at the time of the fire is unknown. It is believed others may have lost their lives.

Rev. E. C. Earp Preaches ON THE WORLD'S NEED.

The Rector of St. Thomas's preached to a large congregation yesterday morning on what the common life of day demands. "Taking as his text 'as ye stand together'" (Isaiah 59:3) "we are members one of another", he pointed out that that speak of an "isolated individual" day is a contradiction in terms. "We are all bound together in the bundle of life and no man liveth to himself. To-day we recognize that this is everybody's world. Recent events emphasize this large view of life. A few days ago French soldiers marched into Germany and occupied the Ruhr, and as a direct and instant consequence two thousand men on all Island, in Newfoundland, were out of employment. The world is one big family, and if one member suffers all the other members suffer. The bread we ate this morning was grown on Canada's plains, and milled by men we never saw. The clothes we wear are brought to us by countless hands which stretch half-way across the world to reach us. If we make an inventory of our household goods we find pictures from Europe, furniture from English oak, treasures from India, vases and ornaments from China and Japan. In almost every home we lay the whole world under tribute for our comfort and our needs. This principle, continued the Rector, is even more applicable to the religious life of men to-day. Christians must stand together--for we are members one of another. If the whole world is a neighbourhood, we can only advance in it by the spirit of fellowship. This fellowship can make neighbours into friends and nations into co-operative agencies. The common life of to-day demands that men learn to trust one another, that sincerity take the place of suspicion, and that frank and open dealing become the rule in our affairs. We need a long patience, a spirit of forbearance, a kindly tolerance and a reserved judgment. In a word, this old world needs love. A modern writer has said: "Part of the pathos of the whole movement of our time is, that we are trying to be Christians without following Jesus."

Before concluding his sermon the Rector referred to the approaching Mission of Bishop Mowll, pointing out that its value will be that we shall be led to a re-consideration of our relation to Christ, first as individuals, and secondly as a congregation. There is one name under Heaven whereby we must be saved. The principles of Jesus are the only ground on which we can live together in happiness and peace. Apart from Christ we cannot follow His principles, but as true disciples we can learn to say with St. Paul: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." If, said the Rector, we regard the coming Mission as an avenue to a clearer understanding of our mutual responsibilities and of our common tasks we shall realize in it a season of deep spiritual blessing. Pray for it.

Hymeneal.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized, last evening, at St. Patrick's Church, when Rev. W. P. Kitchin, D. D., united in matrimony Miss Bride Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Collins, Jersey Side, Placentia, and for many years accountant with the firm of T. P. Kemp & Co., to Dr. J. L. O'Connell, the bride, who looked charming, wore a Periwinkle costume with large hat and silver fox fur, the gift of the groom and was attended by Miss Isabel Gambors, who was also daintily attired in a dress of navy blue Canton crepe and crimson hat. The duties of best man were ably performed by Mr. Michael Murphy, Anglo Operator of Placentia. After the wedding the party drove to the residence of Mrs. Walsh, Proprietress Springdale Hotel, where a most tempting repast was served and with the usual toasts, songs and music helped to make the evening a very enjoyable one. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of K. of C. Emblem cuff links, and to the bridesmaid a magnificent sterling silver dressing set. The happy young couple left by this morning's train for their future home in Placentia. The presents received were numerous and costly, and included several chaises, gold, etc., testifying to the esteem in which the happy couple are held. The Telegram joins in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Dr. O'Connell many happy years of married life.

Scotch Express Wrecked

On Saturday afternoon, January 19, 1923, shortly before four o'clock, the 8:50 a.m. Midland train from St. Pancras to Glasgow, dashed at express speed into a landslide from the embankment of a "cutting" between Lazonby and Little Salkeld, some fifteen miles from Carlisle. The momentum of the heavy train carried the engine and first coaches over the debris. The engine mounted the embankment, the first coach fell sideways across the adjoining track, the second was telescoped against the engine tender, and the remainder, though derailed, remained upright, and suffered little injury, while fortunately the wreckage did not catch fire. The driver and fireman both escaped miraculously, and were among the first to render assistance to the passengers pinned among the wreckage of the two foremost coaches, and the work of rescue was carried out with prompt efficiency. Help was wired for, and in remarkably quick time it came, not only from local doctors, but from the medical staff of the Carlisle Military Hospital. All the injured testified to the promptitude of the help rendered them. Altogether three women and three boys were killed, and twenty persons were injured--eight of them seriously.

Collapse of a Spinning Mill.

A terrible accident, resulting in the death of a number of women, occurred at a flax spinning mill, Belfast, at a quarter to ten on January 20, 1923, the side wall of the mill suddenly collapsed, and carrying with it the flooring of two stories. A large number of women were at work in the reeling rooms at the time, and they were buried in the debris. The mill was a four-storey one, the ground-floor being used as a roughing-room, two others as spinning rooms, and the topmost as a reeling-room. The outside wall gave way from top to bottom, and fell with a tremendous crash on to a smaller, outbuilding, the roof of which was completely demolished. At least 20ft. of the wall

The three floors, burdened by a large quantity of machinery, and deprived of their outside support, collapsed almost simultaneously, taking with them dozens of workers, who were hurled to the ground, and sustained injuries of a shocking character. Doctors and ambulance men were sent for, and three conveyances took the killed and injured to the hospital. The process of removing the debris was necessarily slow, and it was painful to hear the cries of some un-

SALT AND SMOKED FISH. The Christmas holiday season made the month of December one of the quietest the salt fish dealers have experienced for some time.

The early Lenten season this year is expected to quicken the pace of the market before many weeks of the New Year have past.

The export market continues to be poor. A ray of hope is seen in some quarters in the prospects of a Cuban loan being floated in this country.

In this connection it is interesting to note that in Newfoundland there is considerable agitation for compulsory control of all codfish exports as a check against the unfavorable conditions under which dealers in that colony are exporting their products.

SALT MACKEREL. The supply during the month of December was more than sufficient to meet the needs of the trade.

SALT HERRING. The leading varieties on the market during December were the Alaska and Holland. Alaska herring seems to be growing in popularity constantly.

SALT CODFISH. One of the largest dealers in salt codfish in New York declared that he has had little difficulty in disposing of his stock in spite of the general dullness in the market.

Hand to mouth buying has characterized the smoked herring market during December.

United Fishermen's Movement.

DELEGATES INTERVIEW THE GOVERNOR.

The interview granted the delegates of the United Fishermen's Movement on Saturday, by His Excellency the Governor, Capt. Jesse Winsor out of the present condition of the industry, and the impossibility of continuing the fishery until a reduction in the cost of living had been made. The spokesman for the delegates informed His Excellency of their interest in the Prime Minister, who had told them that the House would open before the first week in January at the earliest. He pointed out that this date would be too late for the contemplated reduction of duties to be of value for this year's fishery, and asked His Excellency to use his influence to have the Legislature convened immediately. His Excellency intimated that a constitutional convention had to take place before the end of the year, and that the Prime Minister, who had promised to lay their case before the House, would do so.

An Appeal

LETTER TO FISHERMEN OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

The following circular letter has been addressed to the fishermen of Newfoundland by the Delegates of the United Fishermen.—We are about to start a campaign throughout the various Districts for the purpose of securing a reduction of taxation. You are aware at the present time of the outbursts of the fishermen's hope to make both ends meet. It is utterly impossible last year to catch enough fish to pay expenses and feed and clothe our wives and children. Unless the taxes are reduced to the same state of affairs will exist this year. There is no hope for the fishery under present conditions. Fishermen will leave their native shores for foreign shores, and on the people will fall the burden of paying a burden of debt and taxation that will be unbearable. It is for us to be up and doing. The House of Assembly must open and measures must be reduced to twenty per cent. to allow the merchants to supply for the fishery next summer. This is our whole object—the best of our country for our children. Will you help us? We are counting on you. We hope to address you on these matters.

Yours truly,

At Gower St. Church.

(L. C. M.)

There was so much in the message which the pastor of Gower Street Methodist Church, the Rev. Hammond Johnson, gave to his people yesterday morning, that suits the times.

That suits the daily experiences of men and women, that we deem it worthy of passing on to that wider audience known as "the public." The public may be Catholic, or they may be Protestant—or they may be Septic—we care not. Whatever they are, we know that they are "men of like passions" with their fellows; and women of like devotion with their sisters. We write for men, not for sects. It was men that the preacher appealed to in his sermon, and it was women that he included in the same equality—the equality of duty and responsibility.

Basink his remarks upon the parable of the lost sheep, the keynote was struck by emphasizing the fact, that in the appeal to the individual, there was a lesson implied, which was sometimes overlooked, "which of you?" This was a direct appeal to the people by whom the son of man was then surrounded. They were the leaders of their times—the lawyers and Pharisees. They had murmured and found fault because publicans and sinners had been helped. They failed to help people themselves; and now that one was at hand who could do something, they objected to His teaching.

The Master's answer to their charge was made by parable: Thus we have three of the most beautiful of the many which He used—the piece of silver, the lost sheep, and the Prodigal Son.

There was a human touch in the question put by the Master, "Which of you?" Under certain conditions, especially of suffering or danger, would not act? This was a direct appeal to their manhood—their better selves; for after all they were men; and it was man that the Son of God had "come to seek and to save." Not a part of a man; but the whole man. The man in body, mind and soul. The lost sheep was a figure of a lost man; and men are still lost—in more causes than one. Lost in men are lost to the best that is in them. They miss their chance. They are blinded by the meaner things of life, and seem never to open their eyes to Heaven. They look everywhere but up; they seldom look within.

Men may be great in life's best things, and yet become so absorbed as to lose themselves. A musician may so devote himself to the divine melody, that he becomes lost to other equally divine passions. A statesman may reach to the highest pinnacle of fame, and yet fall short of discovering his truer self. A man may even become so wrapped up in his Church that his soul has small place for other people who have never heard of Church. A man may become so busy as to miss life's best emotions. All these cases illustrated the lost man—as far, at least, as this life went; but the regrettable feature of it all is that men don't know they are lost thus. They think they are great men when they are small. They hide themselves off to their offices, and then to their clubs, and to their pleasures; and fill out a daily round that demands all their time, all their talent, all their best; and they continue this and in many cases they are not only missing the mark, but losing themselves.

The price paid by modern business is too steep. Money is being made, and opulence gained and positions sought after, at the sacrifice of these higher principles which make life worth while. Life to such people is but a mass, but a wilderness—a wilderness in which they wander, and wonder, and suffer mental torture and spiritual starvation, and lose their truer selves. They are wandering sheep on the highway of time, and on the voyage to Eternity; and their position is like that of the elder brother who, though he was "in," found himself "outside."

On the sermon in full we have not time nor space to write—nor is it necessary to do so. This is but an outline of the introduction of the sermon and it is of such a character as suits "all ranks, classes and conditions of men." They may be in the Church or out of it; in the wilderness of doubt, or in the pleasures of certainty; but whatever they are, they are not beyond the mercy and guidance of the Great Shepherd of the Sheep.

Steady Improvement Noted at Royal Bank Annual Meeting.

Sir Herbert S. Holt, President, in Drawing Attention to Difficult Period Through Which Banks Have Passed, Stated Vitality, Stability and Reserves of the Royal Are Unimpaired—Necessity of Strong Immigration Policy.

Edson L. Pease, Vice-President and Managing Director, Reviews Conditions in Canada and Outside Countries Served by the Bank—Retires as Managing Director After 40 Years' Service—Will Continue as Active Vice-President and Director.

C. E. Neill, General Manager, Reviews Annual Statement—Deposits Held Up Remarkably Well in Face of Trying Conditions—Strong Liquid Position Maintained.

The annual meeting of the Royal Bank of Canada brought together a very large number of shareholders and the addresses submitted by Sir Herbert S. Holt, the President, and Edson L. Pease, Vice-President and Managing Director, indicated that in a general way conditions had improved to a very considerable extent, both in Canada and in the outside countries which are served by the Bank.

Sir Herbert, in his address, made it quite clear that banking conditions in the past few years had been difficult and expressed the opinion that never in the history of banks had they been subjected to a severer test than in the past two years of depression and deflation. Fortunately, the earning power of the Royal and its reserves were such that it had emerged with its vitality, stability reserves unimpaired. The last twelve months had aggravated the problems of disturbed Europe, whereas Canada had strengthened her position among the nations. Production had increased, our credit was never higher and the Canadian dollar had gained in purchasing power in almost all the markets of the world.

Vigorous Immigration Policy Needed. Regarding the future outlook, Sir Herbert considered that the unfavorable feature is the unsettled European situation. In Canada there was reason to look forward to the coming year with a great degree of confidence, based upon the prospect that the present industrial activity will continue during 1923, that exports would improve, that there is no surplus of goods on the shelves and that the banking situation is secure; in fact, has probably never been better. As to Canada's greatest need to meet her increasing debt, there was urgency for a vigorous immigration policy to open up a new era of development. An influx of settlers brought prosperity to the United States and enabled that country to pay its great Civil War indebtedness. By inviting to our shores men and women of stout heart and with willing hands we may achieve a like result. We must bring in new people to share with us the triple role of producers, buyers and taxpayers.

Revision of Bank Act. Dealing with the decennial revision of the Bank Act, which calls for action at the forthcoming session of Parliament, Sir Herbert said: "I feel confident that, as in the past, the subject will be considered solely from the point of view of the commercial welfare of the Dominion, and that few changes will be found necessary or advisable. No banking statute yet devised can prevent some hardship in times of depression, but we can claim for our system that all the moneys, entrusted to us have been absolutely secure during the trying days of deflation, while in almost every other country of the world there have been some depositors who have lost their savings."

In concluding his address, Sir Herbert announced that Mr. Edson L. Pease had decided to relinquish the office of Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer, as he desired to lighten his responsibilities after forty years of service in the Bank. He was pleased to say, however, that Mr. Pease will continue as Director and Vice-President. The office of Managing Director will be discontinued and the General Manager will become the Chief Executive Officer.

Managing Director's Address. Edson L. Pease, Vice-President and Managing Director, in his address, said, in part:

"The President, having in his address fully covered the general situation in Canada, and the General Manager the bank's internal position, I shall deal briefly with the business of the bank in foreign fields.

"Each year sees the bank more solidly established in the foreign fields we have selected, and better equipped in every way to aid in that foreign commerce which forms a quarter of the total trade of the Dominion. The advantages of direct representation are brought home to us daily. The intimate knowledge that our officers acquire in the territory wherein they are placed enables us to give an efficient credit service and to offer opportunities for reciprocal trade.

"I visited last winter our branches in Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay. These countries have suffered acutely from the universal trade depression, aggravated by decline in the value of their paper currencies, which greatly reduced their foreign buying power. The elimination of many weak business houses, which have been forced to suspend, has made for greater stability.

"In the British West Indies, where we have numerous branches, and in Central America, normal conditions are gradually being restored. Fair prices prevailed for their staple products, sugar, coffee and cocoa. Very few failures were recorded, due to the accumulation of large profits during the period of the war. The prospects of a bumper crop and a continuance of present good prices for sugar, has created a general feeling of optimism.

Trade Agreements. "The efforts of the Canadian Government to extend the sale of Canadian goods abroad by means of reciprocal trade agreements, must meet with general approval. Treaties with France and Italy have already been concluded, and pacts of a similar nature with Belgium and Australia are now being discussed. The commercial rise of Japan and the industrial awakening of China are reflected in their trade with the United States, which for the year 1922, amounted to over half a billion of dollars. Our neighbor now has 25 consuls in Asia, who act as trade commissioners. Similar enterprises should be shown by Canada to foster trade in this wide market, and the excellent work already done by our trade commissioners should encourage the Government to consider an extension of the service."

"The passing in England of the bill to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle shipped to England will prove a great benefit to the Dominion. Owners may now send stock to be fattened in England, where a difference of eight pence per pound exists between the retail price of chilled and of home-killed beef. At one time Canada shipped 500,000 head of cattle in one year to the English market, but the number has fallen to 21,500 during the season of 1922. No doubt our dealers and shippers will take full advantage of the enlarged market."

"The Imperial Economic Conference, to which invitations have been issued by the British Premier, promises to be one of the important events of the year. It will bring together representatives of countries which have a combined population, equal to that of Continental Europe, and a land area three times as great. Within the limits of this vast territory bound by friendly and preferential tariffs, there is ample room for all the products of a greater Canada. The discussion of the best means of developing the Empire and stimulating trade between its members will be closely followed."

General Manager's Review. In the absence, through illness, of C. E. Neill, the General Manager, M. W. Wilson, the Assistant General Manager, read the General Manager's review of the annual statement. Mr. Wilson said, in part:

"The statement submitted to-day will, I think, be received by you with satisfaction. The past two years of deflation and depression have been trying ones for all financial and business concerns, and it is with considerable gratification that we present to you such a satisfactory balance sheet. Total assets show a decrease of only 4.25 per cent, which can be accounted for by reductions in circulation, the amount due the Dominion Government and Letters of Credit and Bills Payable outstanding—reductions directly due to deflation.

"Our deposits have held up remarkably well in the face of trying conditions, the decrease for the year being slightly under 1 per cent, whereas the average decrease of all Canadian banks is about 3 per cent, which shows how well our position has been maintained. There has been a substantial contraction in commercial loans, indicating healthy liquidation. Advantage has been taken of satisfactory bond prices during the year, and the sale of certain investments has resulted in a net reduction of $4,697,395.73 in securities held. A strong liquid position has been maintained. Liquid assets are 49.37 per cent of liabilities to the public, as compared with 48.61 per cent, last year."

"Our organization has been strengthened by the appointment in November last of four Assistant General Managers. Messrs. Wilson, Noble, Dobson and MacKinnon have grown up in our services. They are thoroughly tried, experienced bankers of outstanding ability, and I can assure you that your interests will be well served by them. "I desire to commend in the strongest possible terms the loyal and efficient service rendered by all members of our staff. I cannot speak too highly of their devotion to the bank."

Powerful Screen Drama.

"JUST OUTSIDE THE DOOR," WILL BE SHOWN HERE TO-DAY.

Edith Hallor, who was showered with many laudatory comments for her dual characterization in "Children of Destiny," her recent starring vehicle, plays the role of a young welfare worker in the forthcoming Select Picture, "Just Outside the Door," which will be shown at the Majestic theatre to-day.

Altogether the prominent members of the cast supporting Miss Hallor include a half dozen screen players known to possess considerable prestige. For instance there is J. Barney Sherry, a character actor who has appeared in many screen successes. Betty Blythe, whose screen career dates back to the early days of the silent drama, Eddie Sutherland, Arnold Greeg, Ida Lewis and Burt Appling, all equally known for splendid characterizations in scores of film dramas to-day.

The story is an adaptation of the famous play of the same name by Jules Eckart Goodman. The picture is replete with those little touches of human nature that somehow never fail to grip audiences, and Miss Hallor's rendition of the young girl who bears the burden of continually adjusting the troubles of others serves to place her in a role that demands quick wit and unflinching energy to circumvent each and every obstacle that is brought to her attention.

B.I.S. Drawing.

DIG LOTTERY TO TAKE PLACE ON JANUARY 30TH.

The L. and A. Committee of the B.I.S. at a meeting yesterday forenoon, decided that the Grand Drawing in connection with their lottery, would be held Tuesday week, January 30th. The drawing will be conducted by several of our prominent citizens, and the rooms of the Society will be thrown open to anyone who cares to attend.

MONEY WANTED.

Every day some plaintive gent at my humble home appears, asking me to give a cent I have earned in sweat and tears: "Dig up, in the name of Pete," says the gent, in accents sweet; "we are building a retreat for consumptive ancients." Every hour some drivemsmith bold to my cottage gallivants; for my stock of minted gold and my store of groats he pants; "Dig up from your treasure chest," is the drivemsmith's stern behest; "we would build a place of rest for decayed and shopworn aunts." Long ago when people came on an errand of this kind, they were backward in the game, to its faults they were not blind; now the drivemsmith doesn't plead; he is arrogant, unrefined, "Hand us'out the chickenfeed," is his dictum, unrefined, "If you do not promptly dig," says the man who asks my wad, "then your name in letters big will be advertised abroad; to the confines of the state, as a piker and a fraud." Let us stop these endless drives which the wartime made a fad, for they shoo from people's lives all the joy they ever had; let's discourage all the bores who go round to people's doors asking for all kinds of ores, for the hawbee and the scad.

My Dream.

One golden day in midsummer—when balmy breeze and cloudless skies, when shady nooks and murmuring trees and babbling brooks: when warbling bird, bluebird and golden butterfly on green elad lawn, and the blossoming flower called me forth to join them in high holiday—and whose irresistible summons made it imperative for me to go; then I fared forth. It was not "the dark brow of the mighty Helvellyn" I climbed, but I doubt if the aforesaid mountain is any steeper or presents a harder climb to a semi-invalid than the particular spot, where I ascended the South Side Hills. After many a stop I reached the top and sinking down to rest—I dreamed—not a sleeping, but a waking daydream. Before me lay the city. Over the East End hung the gray murky pall of smoke and dust that nearly always envelopes this part even on a midsummer day. Here and there Cathedral tower and Church spire pointed majestically upward. Cabot Tower in the distance loomed like a grim sentinel over all. The narrow—harbor and refuge for hundreds of years to many a storm stressed mariner, lay calm and peaceful within; whilst outside, the broad Atlantic waves still kept their incessant roll over the shores of our rock-bound coast. Looking Westward, my gaze rested on an entirely different scene. The beautiful Waterford Valley with its picturesque river, its fields and lawns and beautiful trees; up-to-date bungalows, pretty dwellings and magnificent houses and yet further distant are many substantial farms, a still greater asset to any country than mere picturesqueness—all lay before my vision and many thoughts arose within me. Twenty years before, as a bride, I had from a similar attitude looked out over the city. I could see, many new and needed improvements, new churches, new banks, factories, hospitals, schools (but by no means an adequate number of the latter to supply the children of the city with even elementary education.) My outstanding thought was: "How the City grows, Westward. From natural conditions it cannot do otherwise. We cannot go beyond Signal Hill in the East, but Westward we have many miles of suburban district to build into when St. John's extends her boundaries and becomes a greater St. John's. Surely the future as well as the crying needs of the present, demands extension in the West End of the City. And that means schools—well equipped ones up-to-date—which we have not as yet in this country. And not a hall in the West End of the City for any public, charitable or philanthropic purpose. My eyes rest longingly on a large plot of vacant land, gradually built around and hemmed in from all sides, known as Sudbury. Oh! had I the power of King Midas for a single hour that I might turn some things into gold. What would I not do? I dream. Before my vision rises a magnificent building of classical design and chaste appearance, set well back upon the hillside, and surrounded by terraced lawns, shady trees, and quiet nooks. As I gaze I remember what a delightful retreat—how restful, how inspiring an invitation or is it a command, seems to be "come and meet" Within my walls you will find education, recreation, inspiration. I smooth difficulties, broaden ideas, generate love and goodwill. All classes, all creeds, all denominations united with willing hands and loving hearts to place me here. I represent the broad-mindedness, the unity, the loyalty, the love, the faith in right, the high ideals, the honor, the nobility of the boys of Newfoundland who paid the Supreme Sacrifice and who held aloft the torch on Flanders Field."

FAME SEEKS MEN. Fame and wealth are seeking men. Men to share their power and glory, Men to do great deeds, and then Not write shame into the story. Men with level heads to rise High by skill and true endeavor, Still remaining modest, wise, Touching scandal's garments never. Men whom wealth cannot debase, Strong men for the world's elation, Who, respecting self and place, Will not stoop to degradation. association let it be a memorial association. Organize, not for whirlwind campaigns such as we have had that have left us more indifferent and apathetic than usual, but with a quiet steady determination to gather in the clubs—slowly at first for we live in strenuous times, but ready to do bigger, better work when business conditions brighten and commercial stagnation is a thing of the past. Our educational facilities are 50 years behind the times, our over-crowded, unsanitary, positively harmful schools—without proper equipment, not a really modern up-to-date one in our midst, the amalgamation of these same schools held up by a few very small big men, teachers and scholars alike suffering, all these things cry out for something to be done. The men seem to have fallen down on their jobs, so sisters be up and doing. Organize, work together for an efficient up-to-date modern hall well equipped with recreation reading and music rooms with gymnasiums and all other requirements for our young people. Every woman in the West End (and no better workers exist anywhere) knows how handicapped we are for need of a hall. Every church worker of every denomination also doing their utmost are working at a disadvantage and could do more effective work if a hall were procurable. Every charity worker who wants to do something for every good cause and they are so many, knows how cab hire, cars and motors takes the cream of our donations. The carrying of china, silver and etables to the other end of the town is a problem. Dress rehearsals prove a nightmare when we take part in amateur theatricals. Every mother who has tiny tots knows what an undertaking it is to get them to practices, rehearsals as well as their final parts. How much better if we had facilities for that kind of work nearer home. This proposed Memorial Hall should appeal most strongly to the women of St. John's West and could also be used for a Woman's Exchange, a much needed and a very helpful project. Let this be a woman's work, organized and planned by women, controlled and maintained by women as a labour of love for our fallen heroes, to be known as the Women's Memorial Hall.

Credit for the difficult feat of inducing the White Lights to enter the "movies" belongs to Director Frank Lloyd, who conceived the idea of using them in his Goldwyn production of Rita Welman's first original screen story, "The Grim Comedian." Those who see this unusual photographing effect when the picture is shown at the Nickel Theatre to night, will have a good idea of the thousands of brilliant illuminations that have given New York's Broadway the sobriquet of "The Great White Way." The Railway

AND ITS MANAGEMENT—COST OF COAL AND RUNNING EXPENSES.

Dear Sir,—

If the above figures are false, then Mr. Morgan's figures, which he submitted to show the losses of the railroad are false also; for I have based my calculations, to show the cost of Mr. Coaker's trip on the same figure that Mr. Morgan used to show the deficit of the railroad, namely, $3.06, the cost of hauling a train one mile. This is the basis on which the government gave the railroad $1,500,000. So that if Mr. Coaker or anyone else claims that my figures are false, he at the same time admits that Mr. Morgan's figures are false, and that the government gave the railroad $1,500,000 for losses that never occurred.

Talk about your reduction in taxation. How are you? There can be no reduction in taxation while such squandering is going on. No shuffling of duties from one commodity to that of another will reimburse the railroad for money expended in hauling its parasitical loads and sycophants in private cars. It costs money to move trains; and let it be clearly understood by the people of this country that when a train moves one mile over the Reid "System," whether it be going to Port Union with Mr. Coaker or going to Grand Lake with Mr. Reid, the people of Newfoundland will be taxed $3.06 for every mile run.

The reference to Grand Lake causes me to pause here and ask whether the railroad is contributing anything towards Grand Lake, gratis? I have been told that ties that were cut for the railroad, and paid for out of the funds of the country, are being sent to Grand Lake. Now if such is the case, the question arises why are the Grand Lake people—who we believe to be no other than the Reid Nfld. Co. Ltd.—securing their ties from the railroad and hauling them all the way from Brooklyn to Grand Lake. Surely after what we have heard about the unlimited timber resources in the neighbourhood of Grand Lake there should be ample ties to cut up there. In any case, the government and the country would do well to keep an eye on the doling of Grand Lake and see that it doesn't be another coldstorage. This is all for Grand Lake now.

Another item which must be given your attention, and which has added $400,000 to the taxes, is the purchase of those super-heater engines, which were given our attention about two years ago. Those engines were purchased at a time when there was absolutely no need of new motive power; and the need for new motive power has become less and less every year since they were purchased. It is the common knowledge of every man on the railroad that a dozen or more engines have been laid up the last two years; this proves conclusively that the purchase of new motive power was a waste of public funds. If it could be shown by the government that these engines are more economical and more powerful than those of the older type there would perhaps be some justification for their purchase; but they are not more economical than the other class of engines, and as to their power—well, they wouldn't pull a sitting hen off its eggs. But don't despair, Mr. Hall, there is yet hope that these engines will prove your claims to be true; for I have made representation to one of the officials of the railroad offering to increase the tractive force of these engines to such an extent as to enable them to handle a tonnage that would turn in $200 revenue per trip over and above that which they are able to turn in now; and also haul those ten passenger cars across country on time, like you said they were going to do, but which they cannot do. And furthermore, I challenge you or any other man that is working on the railroad, Mr. Morgan, included, to make good your claims. The challenge which I issued more than two years ago is still open; either put up or shut up. After this depression we shall revert to the money side of the equation.

The same month, in the same year, that the government purchased those engines America shipped 97 engines to various countries, and the prices of all those, except those going to the Philippine Islands, do not compare favorably to the price of the engines purchased by us. We can readily understand why the poor Philippines had to cough up for American products, but we cannot understand why we were called upon to pay a higher price for our engines than the price paid for engines going to other railroads below that of the standard gauge engines; and for this reason are lighter and therefore do not require as much material for their construction, which should very narrowly reduce the cost of the narrow gauge engine below that of the standard gauge engine. It might be argued that the engines in question are equipped with all the modern improvements that have been designed in recent years, and this accounts for the stiff price. But such an argument, if it were made, would be fallacious; for the engines are by no means equipped with the most modern appliances, much of the so-called modern improvements are, on the contrary, obsolete. Will anyone, other than Mr. Hall, (see R. Commission report) proclaim his ignorance of the progress of locomotive engineering by saying that the Walschaert valve gear, which is used on these engines, is a modern improvement. It may be considered modern to those who are as ignorant of locomotive history as they are of locomotive engineering; but to me the Walschaert valve gear is anything but modern; for I know that the valve gear with which these engines are equipped was invented in 1844 by Edgde Walschaert, a native of Belgium, one year after the Stephenson valve gear, with which the old engines are equipped, was invented by Thos. How, and not Geo. Stephenson, as so many people think. So we cannot account for the cost of our engines on account of "modern improvements," so we shall have to conclude that the exorbitant price paid for the engines was due to the fact that the government chose a type of engine from a catalogue, because they looked nice, and ordered them to be built without asking for bids on them; and thus saddled the country with another four hundred thousand dollars (the direct and indirect cost of the engines) for the tariff commission to fix up.

Hand in hand with the purchase of the engines went the squandering of public funds for other unnecessary railroad material, and for repairs to the railroad that should not have been undertaken at the period when the government launched blindly out on its extravagant railway policy. Just at the time when all other governments and railroads were laying up engines, side tracking cars, and cutting down expenses generally in anticipation of the financial storm coming, which was plain to any tenth rate economist, our far-seeing political economists rushed madly into an orgy of railroad expenditure without sense or reason, and for which there was not the slightest justification, as has been amply proven the last two years by the laying up of engines and the curtailment in railroad operation generally. The Advocate tried to justify the expenditure of $275 per mile, or $75,000 for the whole road, on the ground of life and limb, and said that the government gave the road such a fixing up as to render it safe and sound for many years to come. If the road got such a sound overhauling as the Advocate claims it did, what happened in two short years to the railroad to cause Mr. Coaker to write the following letter, which appeared in the Advocate, July 12th, 1922? Here it is: Editor Evening Advocate.

"Dear Sir: I notice a letter signed 'A Traveller' complaining of the condition of the Bonavista Branch railroad. I regret to confess (conscience) that the statement made by a 'Traveller' (did 'Traveller' travel in a private car?) contains much truth. The condition of the roadbed has been brought to the attention of the railway management. (What did the management say in those messages?) In my opinion the roadbed is unsafe (what! after spending $75 per mile!) and should be attended to immediately. The Catholics and Bonavista sections are even worse than other portions of the line. Anyone travelling by this branch who has any experience in travelling (in private cars) over railroads realises immediately the dangerous condition of the road (cough!) At least 50 per cent. of the ties are rotten (not much virtue in those $575) and thousands of tons of ballasting must be applied unless the lives of those travelling on the branch are to be exposed to risks that are criminal."

(Sgd.) W. F. COAKER. The present scribe has had about fifteen years of railroad experience, he has graduated from two of the leading Railway Colleges of America. If that is any good—and he has never seen nor learnt anything in his experience that would enable him to account for the utter collapse of the railroad. Only two years after it was given such an overhauling by the Railway Commission. The fact of the matter is, the Railway Commission simply dealt out the money, literally ladled it out, and knew naught whether it was going towards the repair of the railroad or going to make good losses incurred on the New York Stock Exchange. As a matter of fact the Railway Commission did nothing in the way of fixing up the railroad; that was done before the Commission came into being. What brought about the reduction in derailments, which the Advocate points to as an indication of the effects of the policy of the Railway Commission, was not due to anything that was done to the railroad in the way of roadbed repairs; but was, on the contrary, due wholly and solely to the fact that the present scribe called the attention of one of the railroad officials to the dilapidated condition of the air brake and pointed out that the condition was responsible for 75 per cent. of the derailments. The result was that some attention was given to the air brakes, which resulted in a greatly reduced number of derailments. The reduction of run offs is pointed to by the Advocate as justification for the millions of dollars that were squandered by the Railway Commission, when, as a matter of fact, the reduced number of run offs is due to a little more attention being given to the much neglected air brake, which is to-day, on account of neglect, a liability and a dangerous piece of mechanism when it ought to be a safety device and an economic asset.

No more damaging statement against the Railway Commission for its utter disregard to the way the public funds were wasted on the railroad, could be made than that found in Mr. Coaker's letter to the Advocate against the Bonavista Branch. If the money that the Railway Commission squandered on the railroad had been faithfully used in making repairs to the roadbed, it is certain that the railroad would have been put in condition to last for ten years; but the fact that Mr. Coaker comes out in a letter, two years after he fixed up the railroad, and tells us that the whole road is gone to the dogs, leaves us with the impression that the Railway Commission was recreant in its duty to the public, and that it was nothing more than a medium, used by the railroad company to extract the fruits of toil from the very laborers who make it possible for Mr. Coaker to be Chairman of that Commission. Having shown up the blundering of the Railway Commission with regard to its railway repairs, I shall hurry on to discuss another progeny of the Railway Commission in the person of Mr. Morgan and his coal "rocket."

In a letter that I wrote to your esteemed journal last July I mentioned the fact that Newfoundlanders have, time and again, paid for the education of foreigners who come in here taking hold of positions for which they are wholly unqualified to fill; and who, owing to their ignorance flounder and grope their way along at great expense to the country. I have said in other letters that I believe Mr. Morgan to be as good as any other man in his particular line of railroading; but I am not convinced that he is equal to the task set before him in his present capacity; and his recent blunder in choosing Welsh coal for the railroad, seems to corroborate my view.

Coal is the largest single expense, except wages, in the whole railroad business, and for this reason great care should be taken to see that the proper kind of coal is selected for different types of engines working under different conditions; and also that coal of the highest calorific value be purchased for railroad service. In fact, all well regulated railroads buy their coal, not by weight or volume, so much as by the number of heat units it contains, because it is the number of heat units contained in coal that determines its value both from a financial and economic point of view. A pound of good coal contains about 14,500 heat units, and the number of heat units in a pound of different kinds of coal varies between the figure just given and 4,000. Now, a pound of good coal will convert about 8 pounds of water into steam in locomotive practice, while a pound of coal will convert about 3 pounds of water into steam. So we can readily see from this the importance of selecting good coal for railroads. The price paid for coal does not necessarily determine the value of the coal. For instance, it is said that Mr. Morgan has purchased this Welsh coal, which the boys on the road are having so much trouble with, at a dollar less than the purchasing price of Sydney coal, but this coal is costing the country almost double as much to do the same amount of work that was formerly done with Sydney coal. Let me give an illustration. Supposing Sydney coal could be purchased for $10 per ton, and supposing Welsh coal was purchased by Mr. Morgan for $9 per ton. At first this would look like a saving of $1.00 per ton, but when we discover that it requires two tons of Mr. Morgan's Welsh coal to do the same amount of work that was formerly done with one ton of Sydney coal, we realise immediately that, while Welsh coal was bought at one dollar per ton less than Sydney coal, it proves to be 80 per cent. dearer than Sydney coal. Had there been no Railway Commission there would have been no Mr. Morgan to "monkey" with Welsh coal, and the country would have been in pocket a good many thousand dollars, which it is now called upon to pay in order to convince Mr. Morgan that the value of coal does not lie in its blackness. Just another tuitional fee. The boys on the road are having a deuce" of a time with this coal; they can't get steam enough to "ring the bell" so they tell me. And furthermore, if this winter proves to be a stormy one, and there is much snow to handle, we are going to witness a serious tieup of the road on account of this Welsh coal. It may not be apparent to Mr. Morgan that the want of a few pounds of steam at a particular time may result in the tying up of the road for weeks. The writer has seen the road tied up for weeks just because some poor "hangarhore" was short a few pounds of steam just at the time he needed it most. When an engine is negotiating a cut of snow it is forced beyond its normal capacity, and if it is not a good steamer and not supplied with good coal it will be found buried in the cut instead of having emerged through it. It would pay governments and railroads to give some of their officials, whose abilities amount to being able to sign their names to cheques and orders, a few months with the fire-shovel in order to show them that there is more in coal than the fact that some coal company quotes its coal at a dollar a ton less than another company. The value of coal lies in the number of pounds of water that it can convert into steam in a given time, and not in the price paid for it. This is where Mr. Morgan made the blunder. It is evident that he thought coal is coal, and that if he could save $1.00 on the price there would be a saving all-round; but the engines say no.

Now that we are on the last lap, perhaps it would be in order to ask what is going to be done with the road. The public and the newspapers seem to be frightened of government ownership, and whenever this is mentioned they hold up their hands in holy horror and point to what has happened to other railroads under government ownership. But they seem to forget that what happens to railroads under government ownership, happens to the railroads that are privately owned. The fact is that all railroads are owned by the governments; for the people in all countries have found the money that built the roads, so that if to buy a thing with your own money means ownership, then the railroads are owned by the people. What many people do not distinguish between is government ownership and government control of railroads. The Government of Newfoundland owns the railway, but the merely executes a public trust. The dual control of our road is the very worst form of control that could be thought of; for no one takes the responsibility of running it in a way that would give the best returns to the country. Those who control it do not have to worry in the least whether the railroad makes money or not, knowing full well that whatever the losses are the government will foot the bill. The present form of control destroys all incentive and renders the operators careless about the public interest and indifference as to the efficient management of the railroad. This cry that we are under a heavy financial obligation to the railroad is a lawyer's trick to frighten the people into the belief that we still owe for a road that we have paid for over and over. It is a vampirism of pale, subterranean leeches! The country owes the railroad nothing, for it has paid for it again and again; and it is the duty of the government to restore to the people of Newfoundland their rightful belongings—the Railway. Yours truly, W. L. BUTLER, Shoal Hr., Jan. 11th, 1923.

Shipping. Schr. Effie May Petite has sailed from English Harbor for Boston with 800 lbs. frozen herring, shipped by Jerry Petite. Barq. Clutha, Capt. Burke, arrived Saturday from Barbados, via Trinidad, where she harbored last week. The vessel brought 600 pineapples of molasses, which are being discharged at Harvey & Co's. For wiping windows, men's shirts with the starched parts cut off are excellent, as they have no lint.

The Call.

(A. J. O'R.)
 Little Newfoundland, by the swelling dark sea-wall, as one in vision traced, to a far faint call.
 From misty curtain ocean, up the murmuring sound, through the Tickle, o'er the Passage,
 echoing around.

Ahoy! Sons of sturdy seamen,
 the salt taste in your blood,
 an' join the endless quest around the ocean.

Ahoy! My merry lads, an' sail the sea.

By dark Holluland, rowing,
 Ericson's triremes, are sails jutting, faintly outlined,
 like the ships of dreams,
 warships, pennants waving, men all sans peur, rowing in by the dawn.

As a peasant passing by that dark sea-wall,
 the strange sounds that come,
 the faintest of that far faint call.

Ahoy! Sons of gallant seamen,
 the salt taste in your blood,

 their cargoes iron bullets, food
 for thirty guns, the captains, bold freebooters of the northern seas,

In the face of Peter Easton, evil, back-vised,
 sustaining jewel-hilted cutlasses

 the gallant, Spanish captain,

THE AMIABILITY COWARD.

"I hate to have anyone be cross to me," I said to a friend the other day. "I know you do," my frank friend answered me, "and it is one of your greatest weaknesses. You want to look out for it and not let it run away with you."

Faithful are the wounds of a friend. But stinging sometimes, too.

One sort of catches one's breath mentally when one is suddenly told that what one has thought of as simply part of one's temperament, perhaps even tending towards a virtue, is a serious weakness.

Does Us Good.

But it doesn't do any harm to catch one's breath mentally once in a while. On the contrary—

I know just what my friend means, and as I think it over I am inclined to agree with her.

Over-sensitiveness to other people's moods is a weakness. It is one thing to have tact and sympathy. It is quite another thing to be so sensitive to people's disapproval that one lets oneself be unduly influenced by the fear of having people be cross or disapproving.

Fight That Wish to Please.

People who have a tendency that way ought to fight it. In the first place, it tends to make them unhappy and you can't be unhappy without making other people less happy. In the second place, it tends to influence their acts and upset their judgment and make them do things that are not the things they ought to do and would Flour—The wheat market took a strong turn again this week, and May wheat in Winnipeg ran up to 115, and in Chicago to 121. The S.S. Belvernon brought in 1,600 barrels this week, the S.S. Sable I, 2,170 bbls., and the S.S. Rosalind 3,651 barrels. The local price is steady at $9.30 per barrel, wholesale, for No. 1 grade, and $9.50 to $9.75 per barrel, retail. The general opinion amongst the trade is that the market will get stronger in the course of the winter.

Pork—The market is quiet and somewhat easier this week. Ham butt and Fat Back have declined fifty cents per barrel on the wholesale quotation, but Spare Ribs hold at $28.50. Very little doing since new year and trade outside the city is confined to the accessible outports. The distant outports now shut out by the close of navigation, and the lumber camps, were nearly all supplied. There will be very little doing now till the spring when the bank fishery begins. The prices this week are $28 Ham Butt and S. C. Clear, and $28.50 Spare Ribs.

Beef—The imports this week were 682 barrels by the S.S. Belvernon, and 100 barrels by the S.S. Rosalind. Bos Flank has advanced from $21.50 to $23.50 in the local market. Boneless and family special are still $21.50 per barrel, wholesale, but there is evident a stronger tendency in all grades in the New York and Chicago markets since New Year. The difference in winter freights, as compared with the open season, will help to keep up prices. City trade is now quite dull.

Molasses—The local molasses trade has been very quiet since the outport requirements were supplied. The stocks on hand are quite small, but the cargo of the Clutha arriving this week with some 600 puncheons from Barbados will, it is believed, make a total sufficient to supply requirements till April, when the new molasses will be available. The local quotations is still 78 cents for fancy, wholesale, in the puncheon, and 50 cents per gallon for choice.

Sugar—The market is weaker, following the report of an excessive crop of Cuban raws. Lower prices are quoted for February shipment, and importers here are at present holding off, awaiting a more settled condition before making any considerable purchases. Local stocks are at a low point at present, although sufficient for the quiet demand common to this season. It is the general expectation by the trade that the long deferred reform in the sugar tariff will receive first consideration when the legislature meets. The quotation in the city to-day is $11.60 per 100 lbs., or 11 1/2 cents per lb., 6 cents of which is duty.

Potatoes—Owing to the mild weather this week outport farmers were bringing potatoes to the city, selling them at $3.50 per barrel for picked stock. The price of P.E.I. reads is also $3.50 per sack of 180 lbs. and $1.80 per half sack. Stocks of these held here are now small and prices may be higher as the season advances as further stocks are not available. No "blue" came forward this season as the species failed in P.E.I. the past season.

Hay—The hay situation is unchanged. Although the importations have been large the past three months, there is not as much baled hay in the local market as there was at this date last year. The opinion prevailing that the home-grown crop was abnormally large accounts for this. The demand is very slack just now. Next month when the stocks held are more reduced, it is likely that future imports will be a little higher, as the winter freight rates to Sydney and St. John's by rail are more expensive than the direct route. The present quotations are $39 and $40, according to quantity. The S.S. Sapper brought in 306 bales this week.

Oats—The S.S. Sable I brought in 400 sacks this week and the S. S. Canadian Sapper 370. This is the last end of the season's importations, and there will be no heavy consignments again till the opening of navigation in the spring. Large stocks are now held by dealers, who report trade since New Year rather slow, as in most other lines at this season, outport trade having been supplied before the close of navigation. Foreign market is now much firmer in sympathy with all other grains, consequently it is believed that present quotations for oats—$3.90 black, $3.70 white, will rule during the remainder of the winter.

Trophies Arrive.

WILL BE PLACED ON EXHIBITION

The medals and cups won at the Dominion Sports in November last, arrived by the last English mail, and will be presented to the winners on Wednesday night, January 31st, in the Casino Theatre, the night of the Cadet Boat Club Dance. The trophies, which consist of 10 silver cups, 17 gold, and 15 silver medals, with gold centres, were manufactured in Birmingham, England, by the well known firm of Messrs. Scholefield, Goodman & Co. They are of a very neat design, and will be greatly prized by the winners. The local agents, Messrs. W. Clouston & Sons, are placing the souvenirs on exhibition in the window of the shop of Hon. S. Milley this week.

Open Hall Notes.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Please publish through the columns of your much-read paper these few notes from Open Hall.

Although many have gone to America during the past twelve months from this little settlement, yet this Christmas was one of the best for many years here, and was enjoyed by all. During the holidays the young folks decided on having a Christmas Tree, and everything being ready, one of the most enjoyable times ever held here was spent on the night of January 3rd, when a dance was held in the R.C. School. About 140 people were present, and dancing was kept up till early morn. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the place, and the handsome sum of forty-two dollars ($42.00) was realized. Another dance was held on January 5th, and just topped off Christmas, everyone present enjoying themselves to the full.

Miss J. Barker, R.C. Teacher at King's Cove, Miss E. Moss, R. C. Teacher at Plate Cove West, and Mr. R. J. Murphy, R.C. Teacher at Keels, who were spending their vacation at home, have returned to their duties.

Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, and wishing you every success.

Yours truly,

HONOR 65th ANNIVERSARY OF SOCIETY.
 The Club Committee of the Newfoundland British Society arranged a pleasant surprise for the members and their friends in the rooms of the Society on Saturday night. The affair took the form of an impromptu supper, in honor of the 65th anniversary of the Society, and as an appreciation of the good work carried out by the club members during the past year, which was a record one in the history of the Society. Mr. J. Savage was moved to the chair at 10 o'clock, when the gathering sat down to supper, and a toast list was taken up as follows:
 The King—Prop. the Chairman; resp. God Save the King.
 The British Society—Prop. Mr. Bagden; resp. Mr. Chafe. "Rule Britannia."
 The Club—Prop. Mr. Geo. H. Cook; resp. Mr. Harry Butler.
 Our Visitors—Prop. Mr. Thomas Dowden; resp. Messrs. J. Baldwin, C. B. Stevenson.
 Mr. Chafe, a member of forty years' standing, proposed the toast of the Society, and in doing so, stated he was glad that the Society had again come to the front, and despite its age was still going strong both financially and otherwise. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was proposed the chairman by Messrs. J. Boone and J. Wiseman, for the very able manner in which he conducted the proceedings.

Popular Bandmaster Honored.
ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION FOR CAPT. BULLLEY.
 A special meeting of the C.C.C. Band was held in their rooms yesterday afternoon, when the members assembled to do honor to their late Bandmaster, Capt. Arthur R. Bulley, who has resigned his command owing to pressing business duties. Capt. Bulley has been associated with the Band for some twenty-three years, and for ten years had been Bandmaster, and it is due to his efforts that the organization has reached such a standard of excellence. In losing their bandmaster the members regretted his departure from amongst them, and they presented him with an illuminated address and a beautiful type-writing desk, as a token of their remembrance and appreciation. The address was done on silk and was decorated with the Brigade colors, with a Euphonium in the centre, and was worded as follows:
DEAR CAPT. BULLLEY.
 We, the members of the C. C. C. Band, assemble on this occasion to express our regret at your departure from amongst us.
 For a long period of twenty-three years you have been an efficient member of the band, acting as Bandmaster since 1913. During all these years you have endeared yourself to the members, by your kind and amiable manner and also by the deep interest you have taken in our work, urging us by your example as well as by your words, to put forth our best efforts, to ensure success. In conclusion we wish you prosperity and good luck and beg you to accept the accompanying gift as a token of gratitude, esteem and appreciation.
 (Sgd.) BY THE 24 MEMBERS OF THE BAND.
 Captain Bulley in thanking his old comrades for their kind remembrance spoke at some length, and exhorted them to be united and he was sure that they would be even more successful than they had been in the past. He also gave some of the history of the Band, during his years as a member, and while he regretted having to sever his connection with them, he would always watch with interest their progress and wished them every success.

A Miscarriage of Justice.

On January 19, 1923, a young man, who worked as a sailmaker in London, having obtained leave to visit his mother for a few days, started for home, a few miles beyond Deal. On arriving in the evening, much fatigued from his long walk, he applied to the landlady of a roadside inn for a night's lodging. Every bed was occupied, but she said if he would sleep with her uncle, who was boatswain of an Indian ship, he was quite welcome to stay the night. After spending an hour with his companion, they retired to bed. The young man (Walter Cullum), arose early next morning, to finish his journey, but his friend said he would, and it did not let himself out, as the latch of the door was out of order, so he gave him a clasp-knife from his own pocket to help to lift the latch. The landlady, knowing Cullum was not early, was not surprised at not seeing him, but when her uncle did not come down, she went to call him. She was shocked at not finding him, and more so when she saw the bedclothes and carpet stained with blood. An alarm was soon raised, but not a trace of her missing relative could be found. The bloodstains were traced to the edge of the pier-head. Suspicion fell on Cullum, and a warrant was issued, Cullum being taken that same evening at his mother's house. Marks of blood were found on his clothes, and in his pocket were the boatswain's knife, and a remarkable silver coin, both of which the landlady swore positively were her uncle's property, and were in his possession when he retired to rest. On these strong circumstances the unfortunate young traveller was found guilty. He declared his innocence, and related all the facts of the case truthfully; but as he could not account for the bloodstains on his clothes, the judge ordered the execution to take place in three days. At the fatal tree the youth again declared his complete innocence, and some of the bystanders pitied him; but the extreme sentence was carried out. The young man's body after hanging a very short time, was taken down and borne away by his friends, whose unceasing efforts, after three hours, produced signs of animation, and, after another untiring hour's work, the young man moved. He was taken by night to Portsmouth, and went on board a man-o-war, just about to start for a distant part of the earth. After five years' service he was promoted and made master's mate. Later, his ship was paid off in the West Indies, when he and four more of the crew were transferred to another man-o-war, which had just arrived, short of hands. When Cullum stepped on board his new ship, the very first person he met was the boatswain for whose murder he had been tried, condemned, and apparently executed. Surprise, delight, and ecstasy at first almost overcame him; he seized the man's hands, and begged an explanation. The old boatswain explained that he had been bled for a severe pain in the side, unknown to his niece, on the very day Cullum arrived at Deal. The next morning he discovered that the bandage was off, and blood was freely flowing, so he hastily left the house to go to the surgeon. He was stopped in the street by a press-gang, hurried to the pier-head, and into a boat, and was taken at once on board a frigate, under way could not write to account for his disappearance from the East Indies, from which he appeared.

Foreign Fish Markets.

A leading exporter asked by the Trade Review his opinion of the foreign fish markets, said: "The outlook has certainly improved this week for fish sales, and I regard it now as good as it was at this time last year, at least. The only market that has not improved since December is Brazil. "I by no means take such a pessimistic view of the fish situation as I find most people do. Conditions are mending already since new year, and I believe will continue to improve. We have a very small quantity of fish on hand, the smallest at this season for any year in my memory. As a matter of fact we could market it all easily on this side of the Atlantic before the new fish will come, if we were shut out from Europe altogether to-morrow. "Have you watched the continuous stream of dried codfish that is going out weekly to New York for the West Indies? You would be surprised at making up the total Brazil and West Indies could easily take all this season that we have left to send out if all the fish were of the quality that these markets require. Brazil—The Brazil market, which offered 45 shillings in December is not now holding up to this standard recently, and this may be attributed to the fairly large quantities of Newfoundland fish that have been in there the past month, and in addition to several other cargoes now on the way. Of course the weakening in the market occurred at the holiday season and there is quite a likelihood of a sharp recovery before Lent. Portugal—There is very little reason as things go to complain about the Portuguese market. The consumption for the past week kept up well to near 8,000 quintals. The five vessels outside the bar have all gone in this week to discharge, which accounts for the total stocks on hand going up to 65,000 quintals. This is not an alarming holding by any means and will be all absorbed before Lent is half through. Spain—The demand and the price for Labrador, especially has improved in this market and the stocks on hand are far from excessive, and not only do exporters see the price sustained, but even to improve considerably on shortage before the winter is over. The S. S. Snelfield, which sailed this week with 29,074 qtns. will land 28,484 qtns. of her cargo in Alicante. This is equal to about five schooner cargoes and is, it is true, a big addition to the Spanish stocks, but this is counter-balanced by the fact that the Snelfield takes practically all that there is to go forward and the cargo will arrive there at the very best season for rapid consumption. Greece—It is gratifying to find that Greece at last has been making enquiries for Labrador fish the past week. The report of scarcity of Newfoundland stocks has, no doubt, been the principal factor in waking up
