The National Thanksgiving.

A writer in London thus describes the appearance of the streets in London during the procession on the day of thanksgiving for the recovery of the Prince of Wales.

At Temple Bar, where the site of the great Law Courts—or, rather, the great site of the Law Courts, for the Courts don't exist yet—a little city of seats has been put up by an enterprising contractor. The price of these seats was wonderfully enhanced by the repetition in the papers of the historic fiction of Her Majesty knocking at the door of the city, and claiming admission of the Lord Mayor, when the gates were to be grandly opened after a great performance in heraldry. Her Majesty did by the gates as she does by the addresses presented to her. She takes the addresses as read, and she took the gates as opened. The Lord Mayor presented, as she paused on her way, the keys and sword of the city, which she graciously touched, and then the Mayor mounted his horse and preceded Her Majesty, indicating that her proud, self-willed, and independent legs of the famous old City of London, good as dead, were to admit Her Majesty within their walls or rather streets. Temple Bar has been wonderfully furnished up. It has decorations of gold and velvet, quite touching to behold. The Kings Charles I. and II., the Queen Anne, and others, have long reposed in stately mansions, but they are now anxious eyes their regal glories. It is about a century ago from this time, that the last of the heads of the traitors hung upon Temple Bar fell down. Any one may measure the process of civilization by this incident. At that time heads and quarters of bodies were suspended there, and people had a trade in selling the use of spy-glasses, to enable the curious to contemplate the last agonies of the dead, and final disfigurement of their bodies. It would be utterly impossible now to do anything of this kind, or to make so brutal an exhibition. The late barons' spectacle would send a thrill of horror through Europe. Until this decoration took place the nails still remained in the Bar, on which the heads were suspended. I have not been able to observe, under the decorations, whether they are yet there or removed. They are, probably, Barum has bought them for his museum. The gates, besmeared with the mud and sludge of a million omnibuses and cabs rushing through them every year, had a very grim look. To-day they are resplendent in paint, and the iron nails driven into them have their heads gilded, and the knocker upon it looks daintily enough for a Queen to raise. As the crowd passed through the Bar, after Her Majesty had done so, they raised the knocker and beat a tattoo that might be heard at Guildhall; but as they raised the knocker to-day, which is not a good-humoured police look on, and enjoy the fun in a devious way.

The Campbell Murder.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE TRAGIC AFFAIR—PRESENT PHASE OF THE CASE.
(From the London Advertiser.)
Phoebe Campbell and Thomas Coyle, who have been in the county jail since July last, will be arraigned at the Assizes, which opened here on Tuesday, for trial on the charge of murdering George Campbell, 14th of July, of last year, on the 14th of July, 1871.

The circumstances of the horrible deed have doubtless by this time been erased from the remembrance of many of our readers, and a rehearsal of the more important particulars may not come amiss. The Campbell family, consisting of George Campbell, his wife Phoebe, a little girl and infant child, resided on lot 17, concession 6, Nisour, in a small log house, on a farm rented by Campbell's father-in-law, Joseph McWain, for whom Campbell was working the place. The house is situated in a somewhat lonely place in a semi-circle formed by the woods, about an eighth of a mile from the roadside. All parties agree in their testimony that George Campbell was a very quiet, unassuming, inoffensive man. The murder occurred, as above stated, on the morning after, and at the coroner's inquest, that two men, with blackened faces, entered the house after they had retired to bed, and demanded from Campbell "his money or his life." The poor man declared he had no money in the house, and the blackened men, talking in negro fashion, dragged him from the bed and threatened to shoot him down with a pistol if he did not show them where the money was kept. A fierce struggle ensued, resulting finally in the murder of the farmer by the strangers splitting his head open with an axe which had been brought by the wife as a weapon of defence. The murderers then ransacked the house, and after a lengthened search were rewarded with only ten cents. They then left, first, however, threatening the woman with her life if she told who the murderers were, or gave the alarm before day-light. Visitors at the house next morning said the room bore the appearance of a place for slaughtering animals. Blood and portions of brains bespattered the walls, chairs and bedstead, and the floor was horribly stained by pools and stains of blood. The handle and blade of the axe were seen red all over with gore, and the pistol, which had been left on the floor, bore the same evidence of the tragedy that had been so recently committed.

Suspicion falling upon certain parties in the neighborhood, several arrests were made. A suit of clothes belonging to Thomas Davis was found stained with blood marks, and he was arrested. The clothes were submitted to scientific test which resulted favourably for Davis and he was discharged. Next John McWain, a cousin of Mrs. Campbell, and a young man named Barry, were placed under arrest, and then Thos. Coyle and Priestley, farm laborers of Joseph McWain, the father-in-law of the murdered man, and finally, the widow herself, her father and brothers Joseph and Thomas. All but Coyle and Mrs. Campbell were released a few days or their arrest.

The coroner's inquest started immediately after the murder became known, extended over several weeks, a largeness of testimony having been adduced, among which was almost direct evidence tracing the pistol found near the murdered man to Coyle, and also strong presumptive proof that the manner of the murder, as related by Mrs. Campbell, did not agree with the nature of the fatal wounds, or the position of the body. The jury, after much deliberation brought in a verdict of wilful murder against Phoebe Campbell and Thos. Coyle.

Mrs. Campbell was not in custody long when her demeanor underwent a great change. She became dejected and wept frequently, while previously her manner had been confident and hopeful. She finally summoned the Crown Attorney, Mr. Hutcheon, to her cell and told him that Thos. Coyle was the murderer, and that another person assisted him, whom she would not name until she had seen her father. Her statement was taken down in writing, and she repeated it in Coyle's cell. Coyle, however, positively denied the story and told Mrs. Campbell she lied.

On the day following Mrs. Campbell again sent for the Crown Attorney. This time she stated that during the night she had a supernatural visit. Her husband appeared to her in the cell, and taking her by the hand, said "Phoebe, you're innocent, and don't put the blame of my death on the poor boy down stairs"—meaning Coyle. When asked if her husband told her who were the murderers, she said "Oh, I never thought to ask him that." Soon after this she made another confession implicating her cousin, John McWain, as the sole murderer, and on the strength of her accusation he was re-arrested and examined before the magistrates. The evidence throughout was conflicting, and at the close McWain was simply allowed over to appear the next week if wanted. Mrs. Campbell stated in evidence that she committed the murder out of revenge for alleged abuse of her life by the murdered man. The evidence against the accused McWain was continued on the Friday following, August the 18th, and resulted in a virtual acquittal.

It was expected the trial of Mrs. Campbell and Coyle would take place at the fall Assizes, but the prosecution being unprepared the record was withdrawn. Since then the detectives in charge of the matter, Mr. H. P. King and Mr. J. B. Corbett, have been industriously working on the case, and are confident they can point out the guilty ones. We understand that a vast amount of additional evidence will be offered, which will entirely unravel the mystery that surrounds this most horrible crime and bring the heartless perpetrators to justice.

DEATH IN A FIGHT.

A melancholy affair happened in Toronto on Tuesday in consequence of a difference relating to horse racing. It seems that ever since the trotting matches on the ice, a short time ago, a match had been arranged. This came off yesterday on Dundas-st., and at the termination several of the parties adjourned to a tavern and indulged in drinks. Among those who were present were George Macfarlane, Hugh Caldwell, and George Brown. An altercation took place between these three men at about seven o'clock, and at last Brown, who was a builder, residing on John street, was knocked down and kicked in the chest in a brutal manner. The police came on the scene and carried Brown to his home, but he had received such severe injuries that he died shortly after. His appearance was dreadful, his face being swollen to double the natural size, and his body distorted by the blows which had been inflicted on him. Mr. Macfarlane and Caldwell were subsequently arraigned, each at his own residence.

A public meeting of the ratepayers of the township of Toronto, was held on Tuesday at Springfield, to take into consideration the advisability of granting a bonus of $20,000 to aid in constructing the Streetsville and Port Credit Junction Railway. Among those present were Messrs. W. K. Muir of the G. W., Hon. Mr. Carling, Mr. Barber, M. P. After a speech from Mr. Caprell, Mr. Carling was seconded by Mr. Caprell, Mr. Carling was one of the Directors of the G. W., and the G. W. Company was prepared to stock and run the road as soon as it was built. A resolution was passed in favour of granting a bonus of $20,000 to the Company.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS IN PARLIAMENT.

The difference between the Imperial Government and that of the United States, is referring to the Alabama Claims, in exercise a great deal of attention in the old country, and especially in Parliament. Yesterday we gave some explanations by Mr. Gladstone on Monday, in which he gave the House an inkling into the nature of the reply sent by his Government to the United States, which he stated was eminently pacific, but at the same time fully sustained the honor of Britain in the position she had assumed on the question. Again, on Tuesday Mr. Disraeli gave notice that he would bring under the consideration of the House the state of the relations with the United States. He was followed by Mr. Horsman, who reiterated his question, whether the Government were prepared to give Parliament an assurance that, in case fresh negotiations were entered upon with the American Government, no proposals would be finally accepted till they had received the sanction of Parliament. Mr. Gladstone declined giving an answer till he had consulted with his colleagues.

The same matter was also brought up in the House of Lords by Baron Redeford, who said that he had no wish to embarrass the Government, but gave notice of a resolution, declaring it to be the common interest of all nations to decide whether, when belligerents have been reconciled and become one nation, they can demand as such a nation from the neutral state indemnity for damages done to one of the belligerents. Should this resolution be carried, he stated that he would move another resolution, praying that an international congress be called by Great Britain for the settlement of this question. The Earl of Derby also gave notice that he would ask the Government what course they intended to pursue with regard to the Treaty.

From all this it will be seen that public feeling in Britain is very uneasy in regard to this question, and that that feeling has not been in any measure allayed by the pacific assurances of Mr. Gladstone. The London papers, we notice, also take a somewhat gloomy view of the matter, and are of opinion that his explanations throughout the country. We trust, however, that all these apprehensions will be dispelled, and that out of the present negotiations a pacific and satisfactory settlement will be made between the two countries.

SIR CHARLES BILKE, ON THE RAMPAGE.

The Advocate for a Republican form of Government in Britain raised quite a breeze in Parliament on Tuesday. He brought up a motion to investigate the expenses connected with the Crown. This motion being called by the Speaker in its regular order, Viscount Dary asked if it was consistent with the dignity of the House to allow Sir Charles, an avowed Republican, to proceed until he retracted, seeing that all the members had taken the oath of allegiance to the Crown. The Speaker said he saw no reason to interfere, and Sir Charles proceeded to read his motion, amid groans and cries and great confusion. The motion asked for detailed information respecting all the expenses of the Crown. A Herbert seconded the motion, and received no better hearing from the House than did the mover. Mr. Gladstone pointedly denied some of the statements made by Sir Charles, and took him sharply to task for his misstatement and misrepresentations. He asked the House to reject the motion. Mr. Herbert again attempted to speak, but the groans and cries which greeted his rising prevented his being heard. The uproar continuing, and Mr. Herbert persisting in his attempts to speak, many of the members left the House. Mr. Herbert continued, and expressed his preference for a republican form of Government. Finally, the vote was taken, and the motion secured the votes of only the mover and seconder, the division being 2 for, and 274 against.

THE WASHINGTON TREATY. — Gen. Banks' bill to carry out the Treaty of Washington, which he reported to the House several weeks since, is a special order for to-day. Nothing will be done with it, however, as Mr. Banks wishes its postponement until all doubts about the intention of England to go before the Geneva Conference are settled. The bill will probably be laid over until some time in April or May. The friends of the Administration to very desirous to have the bill postponed without debate; they do not want to have the Alabama claims discussed and the Washington Treaty discussed for fear that no good to them will come of it.

ENTERTAINMENT IN PILKINGTON.—An evening entertainment, got up under the auspices of the pupils and teacher, Mr. McMillan, of School Section No. 5, Pilkington, was held on Thursday, the 14th inst., before a full house. The programme consisted of dialogues, recitations, and music by the W. M. Church Choir. The music was very acceptable, and we might give special mention to such selections as "Happy to-night," solo and chorus, by Mr. and Miss Patmore; "Castles in the Air," by Mr. H. Patmore; "Driven from Home," by Miss Bettschen, and many other selections, among which might be mentioned, "The School Room," by Miss M. J. Wallace. Another item of the evening was the presentation of prizes to the pupils of the school. Short addresses were then delivered by the chairman, Mr. J. L. Halley, and the Trustees. The proceedings were brought to a close about 10 o'clock, by singing the National Anthem.

SOIREE AT WINTERBOURNE.—A soiree was held in the W. M. Church, Winterbourne, on the evening of the 6th which was well attended. Mr. George Wright, of Conestogo, discharged the duties of chairman. After the refreshments, which were excellent, were partaken of, addresses of a suitable character were given by Rev. Messrs Youmans of Winterbourne, and Skolbs, of Berlin, and Dr. Passmore, of Glenallan. During the evening, the choir of the congregation delighted the audience with some excellent music, Miss Hendry and Miss Booth accompanying on the organ.

LOVE AND HONOUR.

A TALE OF THE CLYDE.

CHAPTER XXII.

For nearly half an hour the storm, such as we have described it, went on without visible abatement. It was directly overhead, and to the two watchers in the rocky recess seemed confined to their own glen, though had they been in the adjoining Glen Leon, or by the sides of Loch Eck or the shores of Loch Long, they would have found that it raged there with the same intensity. That it was very close to them, however, was proved by one of the thunderbolts striking a crag within their sight, splintering a portion of its surface into fragments, which rolled to its base. A fearful look passed between them at the sight of this, for if the crag under which they were sheltered was struck in the same way it might result in their destruction.

At length the thunder-cloud, while it settled more densely on the hills at the top of the glen, lightened towards the south and the light breeze which gave the first indication of the storm passing. From this moment the gloom lessened, then the intervals between the thunder-peals returned and grew longer, the torrent of rain subsided, and soon the edge of the cloud was seen fringed with white. Dis- tant and more distant grew the reverberations, and, as the sounding air quieted, thence of the streams which had been so suddenly called into existence was more distinctly heard as they rushed along. Presently the blue sky, bright and beautiful, was seen above Benmore, and the nearer hills became again clear and distinct. Finally the sun burst forth, the clouds broke into white masses, which rolled slowly away over the crests; the songsters, whose warbling notes the storm had hushed, left their hiding places, and made the air vocal with joyous melody; and all Nature, roused to beautiful, and made fragrant with incense, smiled in deepened peace after the elemental war.

At the earliest possible moment Hermann and Helen quitted their place of shelter and picked their way towards the road. They knew how alarmed the inmates of the villa were by their account, and hurried forward to relieve their anxiety. They had little more than quitted the glen, however, when they met Mr. Bridgenorth, Edwin and Ritchie on the way to meet them. Their anxiety had, indeed, been extreme, and equally glad were they to see them safe and un- harmed.

The time till Monday passed all too quickly away. Every one was sad in view of Hermann's departure and the danger he was about to enter. On Sunday evening, Edwin mitigated the general despondency in some degree by intimating that he had resolved to go as a spectator to the seat of war. He had been in consultation with Ritchie on the subject, and Ritchie had engaged to accompany him as personal attendant. Their presence might serve nothing to avert danger from Hermann; still it was a comfort to know that they were near him, and through them those left behind would have constant intelligence respecting him. The two non-combatants could not go with Hermann on the morrow—the arrangements they had to make would not admit of that; but they would follow as quickly as possible, and hoped to be in Germany before any serious battle was fought.

It was further arranged that for the present Mrs. Allerton, Mr. Bridgenorth, and Helen should remain in the villa at Ardenadam. It was a quiet, pleasant place at which to wait for intelligence as to the progress of the war, and of Hermann's fortunes as a soldier. It was a place dear to them for its holy and deeply cherished memories, and its sweet and sorrowful associations. There they had experienced much happiness and much pain, and they thought they could better endure there than elsewhere the suspense and anguish of heart which must be their portion so long as the dear one whom they loved was exposed to the perils and dangers of war.

BREAKFAST—EPP'S COCOA—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which will save us many heavy doctor bills.—Christ S. "The Gazette." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labeled "James Epps & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Epps's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is, without doubt, the safest, surest, and best remedy that has ever been invented for internal and external use. It is applicable to a great variety of complaints, and is equally beneficial for man or horse.

THE WAY "to minister to a mind diseased" is to take Peruvian Syrup, a protected solution, of the protocid of iron, which gives strength and vigor to the whole system, restores the digestive organs to perfect health, thereby restoring the mind to its natural vigor.

We have seen it stated in various papers throughout the country, that Agents for the sale of Sheridan's Compound Condition Powders were authorized to refund the money to any person who should use them and not be satisfied with the result. We doubted this at first, but the proprietors authorize us to say that it is true.

From increased Physical and Mental Strength of persons who use Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, their augmented facility of endurance, the regular and healthy action of the Heart, Lungs, Stomach, and Bowels, and their improved appearance, demonstrated in thousands of cases within our knowledge, its power of restoring the great sympathetic and muscular system on which full and healthy development depends, is certain.

HAVE YOU A COUGH?
HAVE YOU A BRONCHITIS?
HAVE YOU THE ASTHMA?
HAVE YOU ANY LUNG DIFFICULTY, OR WEAKNESS IN YOUR THROAT?

READ THE FOLLOWING:
 Mrs. Amy Kennedy, of Painesville, Ohio, says: "I have suffered with Asthma 21 years, have been doctored by many Physicians, as soon as I took the Balsam it relieved me, I cannot express the gratitude I feel for the benefit your Allan's Lung Balsam has been to me."
 Dr. Harris, of Middlebury, Vermont, says: "I had been troubled with Bronchitis for two years so affecting the organs of speech that I could not speak aloud for six weeks, I had with it a severe cough and cold night sweats, I took two bottles of Allan's Lung Balsam, and an entirely cured."
 Capt. Foster, of Burrow, Ont., says: "I have been troubled with a cough that is very severe for years past. I have found Allan's Lung Balsam to relieve my cough more readily than any other cough medicine I have ever tried. My wife also used it with the most satisfactory results. FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES

All the blood-cleansing bodies, whether they be the bile, the lymph, the lacteal, or even the plasma, are subjects of the Vegetable Kingdom are sustained by vital force, which binds all the particles of existence, and as nothing can survive them, the moment when this principle leaves them, the discovery of means whereby vitality may be sustained in the living body is in fact a triumph to the world.

Modern Chemistry has ventilated the question and discovered the ingredients constituting the brain, muscles and nerves, and that by introducing these ingredients in proper proportions the brain and nervous system are strengthened.

This is a substantially the basis on which the Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is made, and it is the only medicine that can be taken with confidence in all cases.

As this is entirely distinct and different from every other preparation of Hypophosphites, be careful to ask for Fellows' Syrup, and take no other.
