Inoxos, March 25.—The majority of 89 for fiving precedence to coercion is rather less than was expected. Some stands hopporters of the Government falt that Mr. Smith made a mistake in tactics, if m nothing else, in aking the House of Coumons to surrender all its time to a bill, the nature and detail or which vere not dieleosed in a drance. Con-siderations of this sort complet with re-pugnance to coercion induced some ten or twelve Tories and Liberal-Unionists to absent themselves. The debate has been throughout a party delate. Mr. Gladetone for the firs-time openly took the lead of the combined Liberal and Parnellite forces. His speeth Liberal and Parnellite forces. Much of his attack on the Government was most effective. His power of mastering voluminous blue books was shown in the use made of the Cowper Commission report. He of course entirely supported Mr. Morley's amendment, which indeed he is said to have drawn. His voice failed him long before the end came. The general feeling in the House was that the speech was intended rather for the country than for immediate debating effect. It has exasperated his oppoyents, who pronounce it a purely partisan harangue, and even some of his own followers ask won-deringly whether Mr. Ghadstone really is going to take his policy from Mr. Labouchere. Mr. Chamberlain's reply was in the uncom-tromising tone with which the public is now familiar. Perhaps the most impressive pas-sage was the warning to his former colleagues against allowing Liberalism to become identi-fied with lawlessness. His speech amounted to a pledge to sustain the Ministry in coercive as well as remedial measures. The Parnellites, Ho sy to in obsering, interrupted Mr. Chamberlain frequently and bitterly, but seldom with effect. No man is cooler in debate or readier in retort. Mr. Graschen had to undergo a similar ex.

m retort. Mr. Goschen had to undergo a similar ex Mr. Goschen had to undergo a similar ex-perience last night. The noise at one time from the Irish banches brought him to a full stop. Mr. Goschen has in fact a gift of irri-tating the Parnellites by pungent directness of speech and force of statement. None of the other speeches requires notice. Mr. Parnell's complaint at the end that no time had been given to the Irish members to discuss the sub-ject had a humorous effect in view of their studied silence during nearly the whole debate. The Government have got the urgency they demanded, but the Opposition say the bill will not get on much faster for that. Obstruction at every stage by parliamentary means is to be the order of the day. But the Unionist alli-ance holds good, even under the strain of co-erion. The new closure rule has already been shown to be efficient, and the Speaker is known to be resolute. On the whole the ad-vantages in the coming struggle are not all on ing struggle are not all on

A Curious Controversy.

LONDON, March 26.-The De Lesseps-Alcester controversy is one of the most curious in recent times. M. de Lesseps lately alleged is also certain that the debate will disclose recent times. M. de Lesseps lately alleged with the utmost distinctness that Lord Alces-ter, commanding the English naval forces in Egypt in 1882, had given him a check for $100,000 as compensation for the damage done to the Suez Canal, after which M. de Lesseps had placed the administration of the canal at the disposal of the English. This Lord Alces-ter denied, and M. de Lesseps reafirmed the Bank of England.
