PROF. JUDSON A. EATON RETIREES FROM MCGILL

Former Granville Boy, Graduate of Acadia and Harvard, and Post-Graduate Student at Yale and Leipzig, Resigns After Twenty-five Years Professorship at McGill to Lecture Under Auspices of Archaeological Institute.

In order to prosecute research work which his university service has left him little time for, says the Montreal Witness, Professor A. Judson Eaton, professor of classics at McGill, will retire at the end of the present academic year after a service of twenty-five years.

His departure will come as a distinct loss to the university, where he is exceedingly popular, and is known as one of the soundest classical scholars on the continent.

Dr. Eaton went to McGill in 1886, after an extended course of collegiate training at Acadia, Harvard, Yale and Leipzig universities. Graduating from Acadia with honors in classics, and mathematics in 1875, he served for five years as principal of one of the leading academies in his native Province of Nova Scotia. He then proceeded to Harvard University, and took a two years' course in honor and post-graduate work.

At the close of his studies at Harvard, having received the Morcy Foundation as a reward of scholarship, he entered Yale University to take a doctor's degree, after a residence of one year there, acting under the advice of Professor William Dwight Whitney, one of the greatest Sanskrit scholars of his day, he resolved to finish his course in classical philology and Sanskrit at Leipzig University. Leipzig was at that time attracting scholars from all parts of the world by a brilliant coterie of men in its philological department, among whom were Professors Gergel, Curtius, Ribbeck, Leskien, and Windisch, and under them Professor Eaton studied and graduated with high honors. He had the special privilege also of being elected a member of the private Seminars of Professors Curtius and Ribbeck during the last two years of his course at Leipzig, and contributed several papers which have found a place in the works of these scholars. Since that time, Dr. Eaton has been a frequent contributor to educational journals in Canada and the United States.

Professor Eaton, as general secretary of the department of Canada of the Archaeological Institute of America, leaves about the middle of this month for an extended lecture tour under the auspices of the institute in the western circuits of Canada and the United States.

Professor Eaton is a son of the late Woodworth Eaton, and brother of Valentine and Barton Eaton of Granville Centre.

He Sent His "Best" Remedy

The young daughter of Mrs. T. S. Dougall, 523 Picta Avenue, Winnipeg, was arranging some of her doll's washing on a clothes rack, beside the stove, when she fell and her hand came in contact with the hot stove. She sustained a serious burn and her screams brought her mother quickly to the spot.

"I sent to the druggist for the best remedy he had for burns," she says, "and he sent back a box of Zam-Buk. He said that there was nothing to equal it. I applied this and it soothed the pain so quickly that the child laughed through her tears. I bound up the hand in Zam-Buk, and each day applied Zam-Buk frequently and liberally, until the burn was quite cured."

"The little one was soon able to go on with her play, and we had no trouble with her during the time the burn was being healed."

Zam-Buk Soap should also be used by all mothers for baby's bath and for skin troubles, rashes, pimples, etc. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at fifty cents box, and Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

Law Every Man Should Know

The final talk in the Annapolis Reading Room course was given by Judge Owen, his subject being "Law every man should know."

Rev. W. B. Muir was called to the chair and introduced the lecturer.

The Judge prefaced his remarks by saying that the old adage, where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise, did not apply in law. To plead ignorance of the law does not excuse one.

Dealing first with Banking Law, the speaker referred to "Notes" in order to hold the endorser liable, the note, if payable at a certain place, must be presented at that place at the proper time, or if no place is mentioned, then it must be presented to the maker at his usual place of business. Should it not be paid, notice must be given on the day following or the day following to each of the endorsers, notifying them of the presentment and non-payment of the note. It is rather a popular fallacy that before a note on demand can be sued, a demand for payment must be made, but this is not so. The first demand may be the service of the writ, the date of which the defendant would have to pay.

Touching upon the subject of Deeds, the lecturer stated that in the event of the grantor being married his wife should be a part to the deed and should go before a Justice of the Peace, a Barrister, or other person authorized, and release her dower, otherwise, should she survive her husband, she would still have a right of dower in the property, which would amount to a life interest. One third of it, excepting in timber lands, in which a widow has no right of dower.

Mr. Owen spoke on the necessity of having a mortgage properly leased. To this end, the mortgage should be released under seal, the release signed by the holder of the mortgage in the presence of a witness, who must make affidavit that he saw the holder of the mortgage sign the release.

The only way to discharge a mortgage is by recording the release on the records. In some cases instead of a release, the mortgage and bond are given up to the maker of the mortgage under the mistaken idea that when these are destroyed the mortgage is released. Such, however is not the case, and unless the mortgage is released upon the records it still stands.

There is no branch of law more important to the average citizen, at least, than that which deals with contracts. The law in this connection is comparatively simple, yet it is surprising how many people are totally ignorant of even the first principles. Any person who is twenty-one years of age, and who knows what he is doing, can make a valid contract. Infants can contract, and bind their parents, for necessity.

Somewhat akin to the Law of Contracts is the Married Woman's Property Act. By this a woman, having obtained the consent of her husband in writing, and having placed the same upon the books in the office of the Registrar of Deeds, can carry on a business in her own name. She can acquire and hold real and personal property and generally can do anything that she could have done had she remained unmarried.

Partnership—the names of the partners, the object of the partnership, the amount each member has invested in the firm, should all be set forth in the Articles of Association. If no object is mentioned a partner can bind the rest for anything he chooses to contract for, if it is mentioned he can only bind the firm for that which is necessary to the conduct of the business.

The lecturer's long experience in the office of Judge of Probate is especially qualified him to speak of the matter of Wills. He said the general public had many erroneous ideas of the laws relating to this important branch. The party making a will is called the testator; a person taking real estate under a will is called a devisee and one taking personal property is called a legatee. An heir at law is one who inherits when there is no will.

Any person above the age of twenty-one years, who is of a sound and disposing mind can make a will, the essentials of which are that the testator shall sign his name in the presence of at least two witnesses, who must both sign their names as witnesses in the presence of the testator and of each other. A witness must not be a devisee or legatee under the will.

Burglars Failed in Attempt to Rob Store

G. D. Campbell and Co.'s General Store at Weymouth Bridge Entered by Burglars—Shots Exchanged

The office of G. D. Campbell & Co. Weymouth Bridge, was burglarized early Wednesday morning by two unknown characters, who it is believed are Norwegians. The burglars, however, were not very successful in their attempt, as no sooner had they wrenched the lock off the door than a shot rang out from the revolver of night watchman Mullen. The burglars offered no attempt to overpower the watchman, but as quickly as possible vanished through the door. Mr. Mullen fired three shots. The watchman is of the opinion that the last shot struck one of the burglars on the arm.

Mr. Mullen happened to be not far from the main entrance to the offices when the attempt to rob the firm was made, and he thought he had mistaken the sounds caused by the wrenching of the lock for something else until the burglars lunged heavily against the doors. He immediately put his revolver in use, shattering the door. A minute later everything was quiet and although it was a bright, moonlight night, the burglars had their escape so quickly that no trace of them could be found.

Two of the employees, however, met two suspicious characters early in the evening. They were both smooth faced, one was of heavy build, about 5ft. 10in. the other more slight, about 5ft. 5in. The taller one wore a fur cap, and the other a stiff hat. Both wore overalls.

It would be well to give the description in good circulation, because where gentlemen call next, the parties they call upon might not be so well prepared to receive them as Mr. Mullen with his 32 calibre revolver which gave them a very unpleasant surprise that will probably keep them away from that vicinity for a while.

one named with powers to settle and wind up the estate. These persons are called executors. Where no person is mentioned the next of kin or in some cases a creditor is appointed by the Court of Probate to wind up the estate. Such a person is called an administrator.

A married woman can make a will, but if she leaves to her husband more than he would have received had she died without a will, she must make a declaration before a notary (at which time her husband must not be present, to the effect that she made and executed her will as her free act and deed, without fear or compulsion from her husband. Many people are under the impression that a parent making a will must mention the names of all the children and leave each of them at least one dollar. This is not so. The only restriction is the widow's dower.

The matters of libel and slander were gone into quite fully, and many interesting and valuable points were brought out during the course of the lecture, which it is impossible to quote at length in the space at our disposal.

At the close remarks were made by P. C. Wattman, A.M. King, Dr. McGee and others, and a vote of thanks was tendered the learned lecturer.—Annapolis Spectator.

TEN MILLION SPECTATORS

FOR CORONATION CEREMONIES

Canada and Other Colonies Expect to Send 100,000 Visitors to Witness the Thrilling Pageant.—More than Thirty Miles of London Streets to be Traversed by King and Queen.—Coronation Ceremony Under Rehearsal.

London despatch.—With the coronation less than six weeks away, all England is astir with preparation for the celebration. Brilliant pageants are being organized, and daily rehearsals of the ceremony have begun in Westminster Abbey.

Leading up to the climax of Coronation Day there will be many imperial and royal ceremonies. On May 12 King George and Queen Mary will drive to the Crystal Palace to open the Festival of the Empire, which is to be an imposing exhibition of the greatness of Britain's imperial resources and a demonstration of the wonderful progress made in commerce, art and craftsmanship.

In addition to the coronation ceremonies on June 22nd there will be the royal progress through the streets of London on June 23rd, the naval review off Spithead, the next day, the gala performance at the opera on June 27th and the service in St. Paul on June 29th. Then will come the visits to Ireland and Scotland, to be followed a journey to Carnarvon for the investiture of the Prince of Wales on July 13th. More than thirty miles of London streets will be traversed by the king and queen during May and June and it is estimated that the coronation and its attendant spectacles will be witnessed by ten million spectators.

It is believed that there will be at least 150,000 visitors from the United States this season that 100,000 more will come from Canada and the British colonies.

The despatch adds—"The usual stores are going the rounds as to the extravagant prices being charged along the route of the coronation procession. Some certainly have already been booked at remarkable figures, but in every case they are for very rich people who do not care what they pay so long as they get a good view of the great show.

At the present time would-be letters of seats refuse to bargain, but the chances are that before the day set the coronation prices will come down, as they have always done on the occasion of such big pageants. It would be well for intending visitors to wait before booking. There were cases where seats that had been held at $50 each went for as many shillings on the morning of the late king's funeral.

When the Minister Came to Tea

By Harriet Paullin Fenton, in "C. E. World"

"We'll have to have the new minister to tea, of course," said Mrs. Sanderson with a frown of finality as she passed the rolls.

The Sandersons had a reprieve over the breakfast table.

"Everybody'll be inviting him," continued Mrs. Sanderson sagely; "so I'm set on having him among the first, before he gets tired going around to other folks' houses."

"You'd better ask him quick, then, ma," spoke up ten-year-old Henry. "I heard Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Simpson invitin' him right after church last Sunday."

"For the land's sake!" Mrs. Sanderson clicked the nickel coffee-pot down on its wooden stand. "I declare some people haven't a mite of sense in their heads!" she exclaimed. "Why, last Sunday was only his first Sunday here! I really thought more of Susan Brown and Maria Simpson than that," she finished in a tone of disapproval.

The forwardness of her two ambitious neighbors still preyed on Mrs. Sanderson's mind as she rode in silence by her husband's side in the old buggy that night. Amos Sanderson was one of the deacons, and never missed a prayer meeting.

In spite of their reputation for punctuality the deacon and his wife were late for the service. They entered the church as quietly as possible just as the young minister in the pulpit started to read the Scriptures. Richard Hilton's addresses were simple, clear and earnest. Mrs. Sanderson felt a fluttering in the cardiac region as she watched him.

"Just as the one for Mary Ellen" she thought to herself. She looked around blushing as guiltily, as if she had given voice to her reflections and Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Simpson had heard. Fifteen minutes later Amos Sanderson helped his wife into the buggy.

"I've asked the minister, and he promised to come Wednesday," she announced triumphantly, as he tucked the carriage robe about her.

"To-morrow?" asked Amos.

"No, of course not," responded Mrs. Sanderson quickly, "a week from to-morrow. That'll give me time to 'peel things up a bit, and get ready for him. Besides, Mary Ellen'll be home!"

"She gave a sigh, and clasped her hands in her lap."

Amos turned his horse's head to the road on the right, and checked to old Doll. Away in the distance a sharp whistle rent the air. The carriage rattled over the stony way to the foot of the hill, arriving at a small wooden station, just as the headlights of a train showed around a curve. Amos helped his wife out, and tied the horse to the lithograph post while the train slowed up with a shriek.

One passenger jumped lightly from the steps while one trunk was thrown from the baggage-car. A slight young lady in some kind of a well-fitting dark travelling-suit threw herself joyfully upon the two old people.

"It's Mary Ellen!" cried the older woman, trembling in her pride as she pressed her daughter to her. "And she won't be going away from us any more!"

"Now that you've got your 'deacon,' you won't, will you, Ellen?" said Amos, patting the girl awkwardly on the shoulders.

"You mean my degree, father," laughed Ellen in joyful, musical tones. "No, not for some time, anyway. We're going to have great times together now!"

Ellen was twenty. Her features were not handsome, but her intelligent, merry brown eyes and smiling mouth made her face attractive and interesting. She was rather tall for her build, but she had learned to move about with the careless, natural ease that only four years' training at a typical American college could give her. The constant mingling with girls of her own age, of equal mental gifts, had given her that polish, so indescribable and yet so effective, which is characteristic of college women who have lived dormitory lives. The old people had done a great deal of scripping to give their daughter this opportunity, but, as she sat between them on the wide buggy seat, dainty, refined, radiant, and full of life, every sacrifice seemed to them well repaid. Mary Ellen was different from other girls. The children thought so too.

"So the minister's coming to tea," said Ellen at the breakfast-table the next morning, after the news about town had been told.

"And I've got so much to do before he comes that I don't know what to do," added Mrs. Sanderson. "There's every room in the house to clean, to begin with. Then some of the chairs need new chintz covers. You can get some real pretty stuff at seven cents at the store. Then, ya, you'll have to mend some of the shades, and beat the rugs, and now the grass, and weed the flower-beds. O, yes, before I forget it, I need to get some new curtains for the front room. That's got to be all aired out, Mercy! I almost wish I had asked him two weeks ahead instead of one."

"Way, what's the matter with things as they are, mother?" spoke up Ellen. "I'm sure that everything looks as cheerful and homelike as it can. I wouldn't do a thing if I were you."

"That's what I tell her," put in Amos. "There's no sense in women folks cleaning house so often that they rub the paint off it!"

Mrs. Sanderson arose quickly, a flush on her face. Her wisdom as a housekeeper had been challenged.

"Have the minister come to tea, and see a speck of dust, or a hole or a darn, or a tear or a worn spot in my house—never! Mary Ellen! but you are changed. I can remember the time you nearly cried your eyes out when Elder Pierce first came here, because you had speckled your green gingham dress, and you were afraid he would see it. As for you, Amos, I can't say as I expected much different from you; but, however, if you be, you must make up your mind to wear that new stand-up collar I bought you, your stiff bosomed shirt, and your meeting suit. If you get scratched, there's plenty of cold-cream in the house. They say the young parson has been a city fellow all his life, an assumed-midnight evening dress day and night both, I guess."

Ellen checked behind her napkin, but Sanderson glanced up mischievously.

"What are you planning to have, ma?" Mrs. Sanderson inquired mildly.

"Sliced ham and chicken, began Mrs. Sanderson; "perhaps a little tongue, too; it looks so well mixed in. Then of course I shall make some rhubarb and blackberry pies, fruit cake, sponge and lemon cake, hot biscuits and muffins. Then there'll be pickles, sliced tomatoes, radishes, lettuce, and currants, not speaking of apples, pears and plums, and strawberry shortcake."

"Hope he'll have enough," commented pa Sanderson.

"Ma, let us sit up!" begged Johnny, and Henry in a chorus.

"Provided you don't ask for a second helping of things," responded their mother, quick to seize this opportunity of laying down the law in preparation for the coming event. "If there's any more for you I'll ask you to have some."

That very morning, preparations for the minister began at the Sanderson home. Mrs. Sanderson first opened up and aired the ottoman, grown rusty from disuse, took down the curtains and started to work with pail and water. Ellen, who had not forgotten the knack of housekeeping to which she had been inured at an early age, accepted an equal portion of the cleaning, although she did not appreciate the necessity of so much preparation just because the person invited happened to be of the cloth of a minister.

"Well, just about get this room cleaned today," remarked Mrs. Sanderson about three o'clock that afternoon, as she leaned against the step-ladder to rest for a moment. "We won't stop to get much for supper."

There's some cold things in the pantry. Amos won't mind a pick-up tea for one."

"Ma," said Johnny from the door-way, where he stood rubbing one bare foot over the other, "I met the minister, and he said he was coming up to tea to-night."

Mrs. Sanderson started so that the cake of soap she held in her hand splashed into the bucket. She crossed the room, and gasped the way by the shoulder.

"What did he say?" she demanded nervously, giving him a little shake.

"He said that he believed he had the pleasure of dining with me to-night, and he said the 'to-night' as plain as could be. Johnny hastened to explain.

"He's made a mistake in the day, and I said as plain as could be a week from Wednesday, and not Wednesday. What shall we do?" exclaimed Mrs. Sanderson. "I haven't a thing in the house! She sank down on the bottom step of the ladder.

"Send word for him not to come," advised Mary Ellen calmly as she kept on wiping the pail.

"That would be dreadful," he mother almost wailed. "We couldn't do that. What would Mrs. Brown and Maria Simpson say? What shall I do?" she reiterated. "He'll be here in an hour, for I asked him at four, and there's not a mite of pie or cake made, nor anything. And I wanted everything to be particularly nice!"

"Don't worry," said Mary Ellen soothingly. "If we've got to have him, let's make the best of it. We can slice the cold chicken in the pantry. We've plenty of lettuce and I'll make an egg salad. The strawberries are ripe in the garden, and I'll whip some cream for them. Perhaps we can borrow a cake from one of the neighbors."

Mrs. Sanderson bounded up suddenly with determined lines around her mouth.

"Never," she said grimly. "I'll bake a sponge this minute, Johnny, she called sharply as she hurried down the hall, "go out and pick some strawberries; and you, Henry, go out to the orchard, and polish up the best dish of fruit you can find there; then both you come and get into your best clothes mighty quick!"

For the next few minutes she fairly flew around the sitting room, for using the parlor was out of the question now. The chairs were put into their proper places, a tidy was carefully thrown over a thin spot on the arm of the big rocker, and a pile of sofa-pillows completely hid the darn on the couch-cover. The setting of the dining-room table was a more complicated matter. There was some consultation for her disappointment in the knowledge that neither Sue Brown nor Maria Simpson could boast of so fine china and silver as she possessed. As the clock struck the half-hour, she rushed to the kitchen where Mary Ellen was hastily preparing dishes for the table.

"We'll have to go up and get dressed now," she began excitedly. "He'll be here any minute now—with the house as dirty as it is. I should die of mortification if he should get a glimpse of this door from the dining-room!"

"I'll wash it, mother," announced Mary Ellen. "Run along and make yourself sweet."

"You!" exclaimed her mother, starting. "You'll have hardly time to dress yourself as it is!"

"I'll wash it," she said. "You know father was to go for my trunk to-night. This waist I wore home yesterday is soiled, and there's nothing up in my closet but my o'g gymnasium blouse; and you won't let me have my dress!"

"No!" Mrs. Sanderson dropped into the nearest chair, and put her hands over her face. "But I wanted you to meet him," she said faintly, making no effort to conceal her disappointment.

"Oh, I'll see him again," Ellen assured her cheerfully. "Now, hurry, mother. Everything's about ready, and the children are cleaned up."

Mrs. Sanderson allowed herself to be led to the foot of the back stairs, where she stood leaning against the door-jamb disconsolately.

"Lacy Dean is about your size," she began. "Can you borrow a waist from her?" she added hesitatingly.

"Mother!"

After she had handled her parent upstairs Ellen returned to the kitchen, where she rolled up her sleeves, and checked herself in an old blue checkered apron. Next she brought from the laundry closet a pail, scrubbing-brush, cloth and soap. A minute later she was down on her knees, vigorously applying soap-suds to the brown oilcloth about her.

"What a fuss all for a minister!" she thought to herself contemptuously. "I wish people around this town would hurry up and find out that because a man belongs to the clergy it does not follow that he is an archangel." She laughed gaily. Just then her soliloquy was interrupted by a rap at the door.

"Come in," called out the young lady cheerfully. When neighbors ran in on one another in the little village, knocking was hardly considered necessary.

Mary Ellen did not bother to change her position as she knelt, back to the door. The screen door opened and shut hesitatingly; and Ellen, looking under her right arm to survey the newcomer, saw something that made the pink flush her cheeks. It was nothing more or less than a pair of well polished black shoes protruding from two immaculately creased gray trouser-legs. She waited for the stranger to speak.

"Er—er," came a faint burr from the door.

"Well, what is it?" snapped Ellen. She gave the cloth an impatient slap. It struck the wet cake of soap, which promptly took a slide in the very direction it shouldn't have. The next minute she saw a hand grasp it gingerly. Then three bold strides were taken toward her.

"Miss Mary Ellen Sanderson, allow me to make you a present of—"

Mary Ellen was on her feet in a minute.

"Richard Hilton low in the world did you get here?" Her embarrassment of a few minutes previous disappeared as she gazed at the good-natured, freckled face before her. She calmly wiped her wet hands on her apron, while the Rev. Richard Hilton, dropping the grocery cake, dabbed his dry on a silk pocket-handkerchief.

"One of the archangels you were speaking of," he answered mischievously; "so perhaps I swooped down here rather suddenly." Then he laughed at the amazement depicted on her face.

"You don't mean to say you are a minister—the new minister here?"

"Minister I am called," he answered a little gravely as he thought of his responsibilities. "You see I decided last fall on this profession, and they let me preach in a place like this after the first year in the theological school. But let me help you while I tell you about it. Let's renew the old camp rule. All pitch in and help."

"There's a mop over in that closet," laughed Ellen, pointing to an old-fashioned cubby-hole.

When Mrs. Sanderson, still, except in her best no-hair, opened the kitchen door to see that everything for supper was ready, she came upon a scene which nearly took her breath away. Mary Ellen with rumpled hair, water-soaked apron, and rolled up sleeves was calmly scrubbing one corner of the kitchen floor. That was no more than she expected. But when in the opposite corner, with his coat off and his trousers turned up, the Rev. Richard Hilton was applying the sopping mop with vigor.

"It required a great deal of explanation to make things clear in Mrs. Sanderson's mind.

That the minister had come to the door by mistake, that was plain enough, but not until she had apologized shamefacedly for the appearance of Mary Ellen who evidently was not at all concerned about it, did she understand that the conventionality of dress was not a sensible point with ex-campers and that a man could be just as much a minister without a frock coat and a grave as with those accessories.

It was a merry party that gathered around the Sanderson table that night, pa Sanderson who had occupied the tortures of a high collar and the uncomfortable of a Sunday suit, beamed upon the young elegy man. The boys, though they thought longingly of the promised strawberry shortcake, reflected that there had not been time to cram them full of table manners; so they pronounced him "bully" on the spot. As for Mrs. Sanderson, she felt that the last quiver of disappointment had vanished when the minister remarked, as he took his third helping of sponge-cake, that he had never felt more at home in all his life. Then it was that she noticed with pride how young and girlish Ellen looked in the hastily donned gymnasium blouse.

After the minister had gone, much later than Elder Percy's hour for departure, and Mary Ellen was putting the boys to bed, Mrs. Sanderson joined her husband on the old fashioned porch.

"Well," she began suggestively, as she took her place in the low rocker by his side.

Amos thumped the front legs of his chair down.

"That young preacher's alright. He's the very man we need, and he's got backbone enough to make that church move," he said mixedly.

There was a silence, while each seemed to read the others' thoughts. Suddenly Mrs. Sanderson leaned over and placed her hand on her husband's shoulder. She looked around nervously before she spoke in an anxious whisper.

"Amos, do you think Mary Ellen has a show?" she asked hesitatingly.

Her husband looked quickly at her, and laughed.

"Show?" he exclaimed amusedly. "It seems to me that she's the bull show."

Gentleman in Vancouver Owes His Recovery TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 1st, 1910.

"I am well acquainted with a man, known to thousands in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, who for nearly a year was practically a cripple from rheumatism. He was so troubled with the disease that he found it difficult to even turn over in bed. His heart appeared so weak that he could hardly get upstairs. Last June he received a sample of 'Fruit-a-tives.' He used them and dates his recovery from that time. To-day there is no other man in Vancouver enjoying better health. He was building a house this fall and finished a good part of the roof in a driving rain storm without suffering any bad effects."

WOMAN'S HIGH POST.

Washington, D. C., March 27—Secretary Macveagh approved an order which will place a woman in direction of the mint and assay offices in the United States for short intervals at various times during the year.

The woman is Miss Margaret V. Kelly, of the Mint Bureau, one of the three highest paid women in the government service. George E. Roberts, director of the mint, is obliged to be absent from the Treasury much of his time, and R. E. Preston, the mint examiner, is also away much. In such cases Miss Kelly will be acting director of the mint with full powers.

JUMP IN WESTERN CANADA LAND VALUES

The Hudson Bay Company Has Almost Doubled the Price.

Winnipeg, March 31—Western Canadian lands are rapidly increasing in value, and it is quite evident that there will soon be no more $15 an acre land in the West. Whether it is through reciprocity talk, railroad construction, or the national law of supply and demand, reasonably priced land as measured by former standards is certainly vanishing at a wonderful rate. It was learned today that the Hudson Bay Company have put into effect a remarkable increase in price of their lands, ranging from $5 to $10 per acre additional. Lands along located lines which three weeks ago were generally quoted at $14 and $15 per acre cannot now be purchased from that company at less than $20 and $25 per acre.

This will no doubt be a signal for a general increase on part of all companies in the price of their lands in the West. Notwithstanding the increased prices buying is extremely active, and sales are daily reported at from $20 to $30 per acre. There is every indication that in the matter of farm land values the West has entered on a new era, and that 1911 will usher in the establishment of a considerably higher standard of prices.

"I suffered untold misery even when under treatment from the best doctors for over ten months, and leading a wretched life. My trouble was inflammation of Kidneys and Bladder."

Two days, however, before my intended departure, a neighbor called and happened to have a GIN PILL in his pocket, insisted on my taking it, and after six hours after taking it, the results and benefits I derived, were simply nothing more or less than miraculous. Instead of going to the hospital, I sent for a box of GIN PILLS with the result that I am a cured man. I recommend GIN PILLS to everyone suffering from Kidney Trouble."

BORDER OFFICIOUSNESS

Woman Turned Back and Charges Impertinence

Toronto, March 25—Mrs. Kate J. Crosby, a widow, of Belleville, was refused admittance to the United States at Black Rock by zealous American officials yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Crosby said last night that she had been asked several personal and offensive questions. She told the officials that she was going on a visit to her son and daughter at Pittsburg, and that she had sufficient money to last her during her proposed stay of two months. She had sent on ahead to her brother, also of Pittsburg, $150.

"The official then asked where I got so much money," said she. "As he was impertinent and officious, I replied that I took it out of the bank." "We cannot admit you," she was told. "Mrs. Crosby said that her husband was a citizen of the United States and that they had lived on a farm in Pennsylvania for thirty-three years. She was a Canadian by birth, and her daughter is a trained nurse at Pittsburg."

She telegraphed to her brother, who is in business at Pittsburg, saying that she was turned back at the border and that she will be waiting for him at the waiting room in the Union Station today.

Humane Slaughtering

At a public hearing before a committee of the Massachusetts legislature upon the bill entitled "An Act Relative to Humane Methods in the Slaughtering of animals," the chief purpose of the bill being to secure the stunning of the animal before the blood is drawn, President Francis H. Rowley of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, spoke in favor of the measure, basing his arguments largely upon the reports of the committee appointed to investigate slaughter-house methods throughout the world, and the report of the United Societies of Germany as condensed by Mr. Ernest Bell, of London. A brief summary of his plea for the bill follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

At a meeting of the American Humane Association, held in New Orleans, November 1908, the committee appointed the previous year to report upon the methods of slaughtering food animals in this and other lands, was compelled to make the statement, "that in no other civilized country is the taking of animal life for food purposes attended with more cruelty than in the United States. Absolutely no progress what ever has been effected on the humane side of this question, for methods still prevail here which were discarded in Europe over a quarter of a century ago, as brutal and inhuman. Whatever changes have taken place in our abattoirs, in slaughtering and holding the animals, have only greatly added to their sufferings, the governing object being to reduce them to the various marketable products with the greatest possible saving of time and expense." No one familiar with the facts will deny that the situation in our own country is forcibly set forth in this declaration. When we turn to other lands it is quickly discerned that Germany is the country that has led the way in this crusade for humane slaughter. In 1893 that country offered prizes amounting to $1,250 for the best devices in humane slaughtering. The prize committee consisted of eight abattoir directors and veterinary surgeons, three wholesale butchers, and four representatives of the societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Out of the contest came a weapon known as the "Behr" pistol, a bolt-shooting device which is described by the directors of various German abattoirs, veterinary surgeons and others competent to judge, as perfect in its operation and effect in producing instantaneous insensibility.

In 1903 a prize of $250 was awarded to Herr Hugo Heiss, we are told director of the abattoir of Sinsheim and president of the South German Municipal and Abattoir Veterinarians, for his brilliant essay entitled "Humane Slaughtering," which has lately been published in book form in English. Mr. Heiss' great perfection as an abattoir director, as also his reputation as one of the foremost authorities on all questions relating thereto, give to his opinions the greatest weight. In response to an inquiry made by the committee he stated that "we have already throughout Germany about seven hundred modern slaughter-houses in which the slaughtering with the shooting apparatus has been introduced and successfully practised for many years. In our abattoir, all large cattle have been killed by means of the shooting apparatus for the past few years."

Question 10—Have you seen injuries such as the fracture of bones or horns inflicted in the cauning process. Out of 481 answers, 343 were in the affirmative.

Question 19—Do you consider the forcible wrenching of the neck with the head-holder cruelty to animals? Of 488 answers, 413 were affirmative.

In the matter of flow of blood it was asked:

Question 2—Does stunning retard the flow of blood? Out of 523 answers from abattoir directors, 472 replied that not only did it not retard, but on the contrary made the flow more rapid and complete.

Question 7—What is the effect of the Jewish method upon the flesh, is it any better than if the animal had been stunned before being bled? Of the 475 answers, 393 declared absolutely that there was no difference, 32 claimed there was "little or no difference, and 50 held the opposite view, basing it on the claim that the animal bled less freely—a supposition shown later to be unsupported by the opinions of a large majority.

The report says, after quoting the actual opinions of the directors of the abattoirs, "A method which is condemned root and branch in such a decided manner by hundreds of experts has not a trace of justification in the twentieth century even though it has been raised into a religious ordinance by a few hundred thousand people. A true religious act never violates morals, but the non-stunning method hardens the young slaughtermen."

The report concludes (a) that the present-day non-stunning method of slaughtering, as used by the Jews should be strictly forbidden in a country of enlightened morality; and (b) that of all methods now necessary to secure meat none is so unhygienic and most humane as the firmly condemned by experts and so distinctly characterized as reprehensible and out of harmony with the spirit of the times, as the non-stunning method.

Our Mr. Chairman, in the name of the more than 100,000,000 food animals, exclusive of fish and poultry, that annually are slaughtered in this country. If they must die for us we are not morally bound, in the name of justice and humanity, to see that death shall come in the least painful and most humane way. And our plea also is in the name of the tens of thousands who eat the flesh of these animals, the quality of which is injured by every moment of fright and cruel usage.

It is our hope that what goes on in the slaughter-houses of this land think of the stanza inscribed over the entrance of a German abattoir: "This is a task of blood, slaughter that task."

With mercy, let thy victim know no pain, but let the sudden blow bring death, such death as thou wouldst not."

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12, 1911.

The recent incident of the wreck of the Steamer Bruce, off the Cape Breton coast has called public attention to the apparent lack of regard for public safety shown by officials of passenger steamers.

As it fortunately transpired, the weather and circumstances being favourable, the wreck was attended with a minimum loss of life, but disquieting tales are told by the passengers as to the condition of the life-boats and life preservers, and the mind of the general public has been disturbed and vague conjectures have been raised as to the usual condition of such life-saving apparatus on other small passenger steamers.

A demand is made not only for an investigation in this instance, but for some system of rigid and regular inspection by government officials of the life-saving apparatus of every steamer employed in the passenger service, as it is only by such methodical inspection that the safety of the travelling public can be reasonably assured.

The water-power propositions before the legislature at its recent session show that the people of this Province are alive to their opportunities in the industrial line and ready to take advantage of nature's forces for power purposes.

The only danger is that the scheme may be exploited for the benefit of individuals rather than the people as a whole.

The provincial government should follow the example of Ontario and take the enterprises under its own protection, thus insuring the maximum of benefit at the minimum of expense.

The Moncton Transcript thus refers to this important question:—

"All over Canada the rivers are being harnessed to furnish the motor power of industry, and it is evident that in a short time
"white coal" will supplant the product of the mine for power purposes.
The manufacturer looking about for a site for a new industry now goes to the place where electrical power is cheap and abundant. He does not care about putting in a steam plant which involves, besides the capital outlay, a heavy maintenance expense, and special conditions as to location, when he can get electric current generated by water power at a much lower price than he can operate a steam plant, and locate his factory without regard to the facilities for obtaining coal.

"Industrially the Maritime Provinces are greatly handicapped by the lack of cheap power. In one city small consumers are paying from $125 to $216 per horse power per year for electrical power, whereas in Ontario the rates in most cities run from $17.50 to $25, and in some of the smaller towns are as low as $12. Unless the local government takes measures to assure the development of our water powers in such a way as to overcome this handicap we can not expect to make much progress as a manufacturing community.

"Incidentally it may be pointed out that Canada possesses in its water powers an industrial asset which if conserved and developed in accordance with the policy adopted by Ontario will soon place our manufacturers in a position not only to resist competition from out side but to invade on an extensive scale the markets of the United States. And whether or not we have free trade in natural products, the attraction of cheap power will in the near future serve to bring hundreds of industries across the border—that is if we do not hand our water powers over to private parties unreservedly, and allow them to be exploited solely for private advantage."

The desirability of patronizing one Company in preference to another is justifiable and wise, when clearly demonstrated that it is in the first rank respect-those features in which you as a policy-holder are materially interested, viz:—

Obituary.

W. E. VROOM.

The death of Mr. William Ezra Vroom of the firm of Vroom & Arnold, of St.
John, N. B., took place Saturday afternoon at the General Public Hospital, where he was taken for treatment only Friday, following an attack of paralysis.
The deceased was one of the most prominent of the elder generation of citizens and leaves many friends, who will lean of his death with the most sincere regret.

The late Mr. Vroom was born at Granville Ferry, Annapolis County, N. S., on March 30, 1837, and was the eldest son of the late Mr. Frederick L. B. and Eunice (Foster) Vroom, and a great-grandson of John Vroom, a United Empire Loyalist, who settled in Annapolis County in 1753.

Mr. Vroom left his early home in 1852 and after spending two years in Bridgetown he went to St. John and entered the employ of A. Gilchrist, a dry goods merchant. Later he was connected with a mining enterprise in Albert County, and on returning to St. John he entered the employ of the Bank of New Brunswick, and later became chief clerk for the late Hon. John Robertson.

In 1860 he formed a partnership with Mr. R. H. Arnold, which has continued ever since. During the first year they were in business in Montevideo, South America, and then returned to St. John, where they engaged in the marine insurance business, later taking up fire insurance and establishing a record as one of the most reliable firms in the city.

In 1864 Mr. Vroom married Miss Sarah G. Bond, who survives him. He

Wm. Neilson, of British Columbia; Mr.
John P. Vroom, of Kaslo, B. C.; Mr. G.

who died in California some years ago.

BERNARD S. GRANT.

The death of Bernard S. Grant occurred March 30th, at his father's residence, South Willinston, N. S., in the 32nd year of his age. He had been in failing health for about two years and his death was quite expected. He was a young man of noble christian life and character and was held in high esteem by all in the community. He died a happy peaceful death. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grant who will have the deep sympathy of many as this is the second son they have lost within two years. Besides the parents there are three brothers and four sisters.

PIG FEEDING METHODS.

Importance of Water and Exercise in Getting Results.
Keep your pig on his feet sufficiently after a meal till he has digested his food in his stomach, says Professor Dietrich of the Illinois experiment station. That means to give him exercise. Keep your pig running around in the barnyard picking over manure. Make him run to the back end of the farm looking for more food. It is not good practice to feed him till he will not keep awake.

The large Yorkshire breed of hogs has a nose of extreme length and depth of body, from which can be taken large pieces of meat suitable for hams. They are not as broad as the land type of hog across the shoulders, loins and hams. While not early maturing hogs, they are rapid growers and thrive well on pasture. They are good breeders, good mothers and produce large litters regularly. The illustration shows a good two-year-old sow.

practically nothing where corn costs a great deal of money. That means we should feed the pig water. Here, again, is one of the answers to the question why the fall pig does not prove so profitable, simply because the weather is cold. The cold weather does not allow the pig to drink enough water. He loses his appetite for water and won't drink enough when you give him dry feed and turn him loose at the water trough.

If the pigs won't drink enough water make the feed into a slop and make them drink it. In summer we have the other phase of the trouble—the pigs drink too much. The fact that they drink too much in the summer is not as bad as the fact that they drink too little in the winter.

Nine-tenths of all the scrubby pigs and mums are so because they are overfed and not fed properly. They are often overfed on protein. This is a quicker way to make a runt or crippled pig or to kill him in fact than to overfeed him on protein. Yet it is a country necessity to feed your growing pigs on protein. When they are full grown they do not need much protein.

I have spent a good share of the past six years at the station working out how to feed properly. We have published a lot of it in circulars for your eyes. See 120 and 122. They give the quantities according to maximum gain—that is, when pigs are being fattened for market purposes. One should never feed more than seven-tenths of a pound of digestible crude protein per 100 pounds live weight, between six and seven months of age. One should never feed less than one-tenth less, never getting above six-tenths of a pound.

The amount of water necessary is also given in these circulars. A pig that is started at two months of age at weaning time should have twelve pounds of water for every 100 pounds of pig.

Building Up a Beef Herd.
With a good pure bred beef sire, a herd of native cows and plenty of pasture, had a farmer in two or three years' time develop a good grade beef herd. One should never feed his profits and maintain the fertility of the soil.

Treatment For Dog Spavin.
Dog spavin of horses should be relieved by complete rest and running water from a hose on it for half an hour twice a day. If this treatment is not successful in two weeks apply a blister of Gombault's caustic balsam.

DAIRY WISDOM.
"More dairy cows, better feed and more butter fat" is a good motto for every farmer.
When one takes into consideration the difficulty in buying satisfactory cows there is little question that under nearly all conditions it pays to raise well bred heifers as a basis for maintenance and improvement of the dairy herd.
The cow eats today and she pays for her feed at tonight's milking. No other farm animal gives such prompt return for feed and labor. That is one reason why a herd of dairy cows should be on every farm.

Your winter cow is always the most profitable, and it must be remembered that she needs the best of care in order to yield most liberally.
Alfalfa and clover are the best dry feeds there are for the cow. Timothy hay is splendid to sell.
The dairy cow is the foundation of all soil improvement and farm property, and no other line of farming is so well adapted to the development of the highest manhood and citizenship.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DISTEMPER.

Bed-time Story

HOW THE BREAD CAME TO THE CHILDREN.

The little old man sat in his doorway. He was smiling, for he loved to watch the people passing by and everybody was kind to him.

"The ploughman passed by with his shining plough and his strong, steady horses.

"Where are you going, ploughman?" asked the little old man.

"To plough the ground and turn over the sod and make ready for the sowing of the grain, so that by and by the children may have bread," answered the ploughman.

"Then came the man with the harrow. It had many wheels sharp like knives.

"Where are you going, oh man with the harrow?" asked the little old man.

"To break up the sod that the ploughman has turned, and fit it for the sowing of the grain, so that by and by the children may have bread," answered the man with the harrow.

"A man came by with a sack on his back.

"Where are you going, oh man with the sack?" asked the little old man.

"To sow the seed in the moist ground, so that by and by the children may have bread," answered the man with the sack, and he scattered little yellow seeds in the fresh soil.

Then came by with shining hoofs. And as they walked along they whistled merry tunes.

"Where are you going, oh lads with the hoofs?" asked the little old man from his doorway.

"To root out the evil weeds that grow among the grain, so that only the grain may grow, and by and by the children may have bread," answered the lads with the hoofs, and they whistled more merrily than before.

Then the long summer passed, and the dew rose from the earth at evening and moistened the grain, the rain fell and watered it, the sun shone and warmed it, the earth fed it, and by and by there stood a beautiful field of wheat that shone like gold in the sun.

And the little old man sat smiling in his doorway, for he had watched the growing of the grain with joy.

Then there came a great wonderful machine, with long sharp knives like swords, and with great wooden arms, and it was called a reaper.

"Where are you going, oh man with the reaper?" asked the little old man.

"To cut the ripe grain and bind it into sheaves, so that by and by the children may have bread."

Then he drove his beautiful horses into the great field, and the long, sharp knives cut the grain, so that it fell in long yellow rows. Then the great wooden arms caught it and tossed it and bound it in some wonderful way with some of its own shining strands into sheaves of grain, and thus the bright sheaves back to the farm.

And the farmer's big wagons came and gathered all the sheaves and carried them to the barns.

Then one day an engine came puffing along the highway, and a little crowd of men followed it.

"Where are you going with your engine and your horses and your machinery?" asked the little old man.

"To thresh out the wheat and separate it from the straw, so that by and by the children may have bread," answered the threshers, and they hurried on.

Then came a man with many bags of grain piled high on his wagon.

"And where are you going with all those bags of grain?" asked the little old man.

"To take the threshed wheat to mill and have it ground into flour, so that by and by the children may have bread," answered the man.

Then came a cooper's boy from the mill with barrels of flour.

"Where are you going, oh cooper's boy?" asked the little old man.

"To take the flour to the homes so that the children may all have bread," answered the cooper's boy.

Then the cook mixed the flour and baked it in the oven. And the dear mother cut it into thin slices, and the children came to the table to eat the bread.

But, before they ate it they folded their hands and bowed their heads and said this grace:

"We thank thee, Father, for the bread that shall supply our need. And may we live to prove our thankings by loving word and deed."

TWO WIDOWS.

From information received by the Halifax & South Western railway it would appear that the late Green McLaughlin, who lost his life in the train accident at New Germany, had been leading a double life. He is said to have had a wife and five children at Boston, and a wife and one child at Baker's settlement, Lunenburg County. The Lunenburg County wife had the remains interred at Baker's settlement. The Boston wife, alleged or real, telegraphed on learning of McLaughlin's death to forward the body to Boston and asked also that payment of life insurance, etc. be withheld. She intimated that she would come to Nova Scotia.—Exe.

WANT HOMES FOR THE TUBERCULOUS POOR

A delegation from the Lunenburg County Medical Society, consisting of the president, Dr. Cochran, the secretary, Dr. Penney, and Dr. W.H. MacDonald, supported by a number of Halifax physicians, waited upon the government recently and presented a memorial, signed by over one hundred and forty medical men from all parts of the province, who are interested in the question of tuberculosis. The object of the deputation was to express the confidence of the profession in the management of the provincial sanitarium at Kentville, and to call for an increase in its accommodation and equipment. Also to urge upon the government the need of homes for tuberculous poor in various parts of the province. The views of the deputation received very favorable consideration from the premier and his colleagues. Much of the success of this meeting was due to the enthusiasm and energy of Dr. Penney, who devoted much of his time during the past month to correspondence on this subject.—Herald.

RAPID PROGRESS ON TRADE TREATY.

Document May be up at United States' Extra Session.

Washington, April 1.—Such rapid progress is being made in drafting the new arbitration treaty with Great Britain that President Taft today expressed the hope that he will be able to submit the document to the senate at the extra session. The work of preparing the treaty is in the hands of Secretary Knox and the British Ambassador, Mr. Bryce. The work is going forward with the greatest possible care and President Taft is being consulted at every step.

The farmers of the treaty hope to make it a model for all such treaties in the future. Each word that goes to make up the text is given the fullest consideration. The treaty is expected to be brief and free from ambiguity. It will provide for arbitration on practically every dispute that can possibly arise and will include matters of national honor and territory.

President Taft is delighted over the prospect of the ratification of this agreement and will regard it as one of the greatest successes of his administration. He has strong hopes that France and other European powers may eventually become parties to such an agreement with the United States and thus make war practically impossible.

THE HOME

SLEEP FOR DISORDERED NERVES

A woman who, if she has a few spare moments, can lie down and relax absolutely, perhaps even drop to sleep, has a better chance of standing the stress and strain of business or of housekeeping than the one who finds it impossible to do so.

Plenty of sleep is imperative, and yet so many neglect this great restorer of the nervous system. Frequently they complain of an inability to go to sleep easily, and spend long hours of the night lying awake and entertaining worry thoughts. This symptom of disordered nerves should not be neglected. A warm bath before retiring, followed by a gentle massage, especially along the spine, will, by relaxing the nerves and muscles, produce very good results. A hot foot bath, by drawing the blood away from the brain, often will be beneficial. A glass of hot milk or cocoa taken just before retiring may have the same effect. If the sleeplessness is a result of indigestion a plain diet will relieve.

LET THE BOY DO HIS SHARE.

In an address before "parents and guardians" a while ago the head mistress of a girls' school for advanced classes called attention to the handicap that girls have to contend against in their home duties, as compared with boys. It was not that she thought girls should be entirely exempt from helping in the household—rather a certain amount of housework and the performance of some home duties—good training in more ways than one. But this teacher complained that boys were not made to do their fair share, but allowed to spend their time in their own way. In some families there was always something for a girl to do in the house, and her time for study was seriously curtailed, but in what was understood in most households that a boy should have everything done for him. This was bad for the boys as well as unfair to his sister.

FISH CROQUETTES.

Those who do not like fish balls are advised to try preparing them after the following: Mix the flaked fish with hot mashed potatoes, half a cupful of hot milk, one beaten egg, a teaspoonful of butter, and seasoning. When cool mould into croquettes, dip in rolled cracker crumbs and beaten eggs, and fry in deep fat. These are very delicate.

CHEESE SCALLOP.

Take one cupful of finely-chopped cheese, one cup of breadcrumbs, one cup of milk, one egg, a teaspoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt and dry mustard, mixed, and a dash of cayenne. Arrange the cheese and breadcrumbs in a baking dish in alternate layers. Beat the egg and add to the milk with seasoning and pour over these; dot the butter over the top. Let the dish stand a few minutes to spizen the bread, then put in a good oven and bake fifteen minutes, until the top is firm like a custard. Serve hot.

WOMAN'S SYMPATHY

The ordinary woman loves those who love her; the noble woman finds something to love wherever God's creatures live. The ordinary woman pities physical weakness; the noble woman pities all who suffer from moral and spiritual weakness and disease, and loves those who need her help. The ordinary woman sees defects in her associates; the noble woman discovers the divine in people; she respects it, tries to heal it and save it.

Many women need a hobby to take up their spare time and to occupy their minds. If their minds are occupied and their bodies kept in good condition by proper care, they soon will gain control of their nerves. If you find yourself getting nervous, make up your mind to overcome it by filling your life so full of work and play that you will have no time to give way to the nerves. When you feel an attack coming on get busy and "work it off."

THE WELL-ORDERED DAY

How shall the day be ordered? To which sage The young man spoke. And this was his reply: A morning prayer, A moment with thy God who sends the dawn Up from the east; to thank Him for the care That kept thee through the night; to give thy soul, With faith serene, to His complete control; To ask His guidance still along the way. So starts the day.

A busy day, Do with a will the task that lies before. So much there is for every man to do And soon the night when man can work no more. And none but he to life's behest is true. Who works with zeal and pauses only when He stretches forth his hand to help the men Who fall or fall beside him on the way. So runs the day.

A merry evening, When toil is done, then banish I the care That frets the soul. With loved ones by the hearth The evening hour belongs to joy and mirth. To lighter things that make life fresh and fair. For honest work he's earned his hour of play. So ends the day.

SCRAMBLED EGGS AND TOMATOES.

Make a cup of thick tomato sauce in advance by cooking down half a can of tomatoes with a slice of onion salt, pepper and chopped parsley; put a tablespoonful of butter in the hot chafing dish, pour in four eggs, broken together, and as they begin to set add the tomato sauce. When all sets, serve at once.

CORN FRITTERS

Drain the liquor from a can of corn and turn out the contents for several hours before using. Chop the corn fine. Make a batter of a cupful of milk, one beaten egg, salt to taste and enough flour to make a thin batter; into this beat the chopped corn and whip hard for several minutes. Cook on a hot griddle as you would pancakes.

NIGHT CAPS WITH OPEN WINDOWS.

An English doctor says that the night-cap which used to be worn by men and women, protected them against colds and influenza. There might be a reduction in the number of cases of colds if the practice were revived. Men cover their heads when they go into the open air by day, but by night they expose themselves to the chill air of a bedroom.

LITTLE JOHNNIE ON "GIRLS."

Boys should always be polite to girls, however young they may be. Girls are not so strong as boys, their hair is long, and their faces are prettier; so you should be gentle with them. If a girl scratches you on the cheek, don't punch her, and don't tell her mother. That would be mean. Just hold her by the arms till she feels you could give it to her if you had a mind to.

Girls Farmed it on the Old Homestead

Kansas City, Mo., March 10—A Missouri young woman has proved the woman's "sphere" is a very elastic thing by going into the fields and performing a man's work on her own farm. She is Miss Loretta Judson, 24, of Caddo, Webster county.

When the young woman and her sister Miss Daisy Judson, two years her junior, lost their parents in a runaway accident three years ago the sympathetic neighbors were sorry. To keep the farm and live in their old home would be out of the question the neighbors believed. At that time farm land was cheap in the Ozarks and it was realized that little could be obtained from a sacrifice sale of the eighty acres of upland.

Polly, but firmly refusing all offers of all, the girls made known that they intended to make their own way in the world and on the old homestead.

And they set to work, the younger sister as housekeeper and the older sister as a worker in the fields. Miss Judson now has one of the best farms in Webster county. In the spring time she may be seen in the fields with her team of black horses ploughing the land for the coming crop of corn or oats. A little later she litches the team to the check row and plants the corn.

After the corn comes up she takes her cultivator and keeps it clear of weeds throughout the season. She practices rotation of crops, intending to sow a field in clover every fourth year.

Her main crops are corn, oats and clover. She owns all her own machinery and can drive a binder as well as any farmer. Miss Judson never sells any of the grain or hay from the farm. She feeds it to her cattle, horses, pigs and sheep. She keeps only registered hogs and sheep and has a good grade of short-horned cows.

She rears good colts each year and attends to the breaking of these herself. She can ride the wildest colt and soon teaches the young animals that she is master.

In the winter Miss Judson cuts enough wood to last through the spring and summer and a good stone henhouse was built by the elder girl for her sister who cares for the poultry. Large flocks of chickens, turkeys and geese are marketed by the girls each year.

The girls take pleasure in showing visitors over the farm and talking of their plans to build up the place and make further improvements, but they never boast of having done anything that any other girls could not have done.

They are not only able to show a well-kept farm, but they can drive the visitors over a stretch of good roads in front of the place. This is due, by the belief of Miss Judson in the virtues of the road drag. She has a heavy drag, and after a rain she uses it on what would be her part of the highway. This part of the road is one of the few places of road in the country which is kept in good condition the year around.

SNAPSHOTS OF THE MODE.

What the Modish Gowns and Collars Are This Season.

Plain white net, pin dotted net,illet lace and Venetian lace are popular for the round or square yoke and high collar.

ONE OF THE SMALLEST FANCY BLOUSES. Brown and tan suede leathers are being largely used in dress accessories with tailor made dresses.

Black satin aprons veiled with white chiffon are worn with white costumes. Barbicent effects in beadwork are sought for, and very striking results are often obtained.

Coral is very much to the fore just now in the way of ornaments, and it is used to touch up embroidery on gowns.

The separate waist that is trimmed with banding and buttons is exceedingly smart and one much in vogue. The waist illustrated carries these features.

COLORS FOR MOURNING.

What the Peoples of Other Nations Mourn In. We are accustomed to think of mourning as necessarily black, though we know that the Chinese wear white instead. But there are other colors as well worn for the purpose of expressing grief for the dead.

The kings of France, for instance, used to wear purple and sometimes scarlet. Purple is also the mourning color for cardinals. In Egypt and Burma yellow is worn, probably to signify the "saw and yellow."

LOW NECK OF HOPE. Widows' caps imitating the pendants of Brittany are also popular.

In Turkey violet is the regular color of mourning, and deep blue is the Bohemian color. Brown seems an appropriate color when we think of earth and ashes. Light brown is worn in Persia and grayish brown in Ethiopia and Abyssinia.

Really, looking them all over, doesn't black seem the saddest and most hopeless shade of all? It ought to mark the least civilized of peoples.

Here's a mighty smart little blouse. The front is slashed and overlapped and can be finished with or without a frill. The sleeves are trimmed in a novel manner. JUDIC CHOLLET. This May Manton pattern is cut in size for boys of one, two and four years of age. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 687, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. MODISH CONCEPTS.

Military Trimmings in Fruits and Flowers Fashioned From Silk.

Charmingly real looking little bunches of cherries for military purposes are made by covering leads the size of the usual cherry with bright red satin ribbon in several tones. When surrounded by foliage leaves the effect is very natural and pretty.

Flowers made from fur are another novelty in the millinery world. Roses dahlia and camellias are the blossoms that have been selected for the modish.

The centers in some instances are constructed from gold tinsel, colored velvet or mouseline de soie.

A dinner gown worn by a smart New York matron is of black liberty silk with a deep band of Irish lace over emerald green around the feet. The corsage is draped with the same kind of lace over green, and the high waist

AN ODD LITTLE FROCK. Is draped with a band of metallic gauze with touches of green in it. The sleeves are of lace and fur.

Indian muscivores of soft tan leather with appropriate decoration may be obtained to fit the tiniest baby and toddler of two years and more.

The little dress that is made in one with the sleeves is one of the latest developments of childish fashions. This model is very novel, being closed over the shoulders by means of buttons and buttonholes. It is simple and easy to make, yet is smart in the extreme. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

Not Afraid of Eve's Fate—Furs For Formal Occasions. Women are taking to snakes. The fashions prove that. The newest silk petticoats that have been imported from Paris have snakes worked on them. There is the snake hat, which has been coming into vogue slowly. It is said women are adopting snake bonnets. But there are also butterfly styles for stockings, petticoats and hats, and butterflies are worked on handkerchiefs.

For formal afternoon wear chin-chin in and plain evening scarfs, mufflers and sometimes hats are much in evidence. Bands, especially the small porcelain bands, are used on everything, from cotton crepe blouses to satin evening dresses.

The long butterfly bow and its long pointed ends is very novel, and on white frocks it carries out the craze for the snake combination. Immense white hats are draped with metal tissue over blue or rose. Thick

Will Reciprocity Increase Farm Values?

From the Canadian Century) Advocates of reciprocity are making statements to the effect that the adoption of reciprocity will immediately increase the value of Canadian farm lands 25 per cent. or more.

The great influx of settlers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta accounts for the rapid increase in farm values in those provinces but what is the explanation of the extraordinary increase in farm values in the three Maritime Provinces of Canada?

Undoubtedly the great increase of values in the Maritime Provinces is due to the establishment of manufacturing industries in recent years.

It is reasonable to draw the conclusion that if as a result of reciprocity large quantities of Canadian wheat and other goods go into the United States, it is more probable that the American prices will come down than that the Canadian prices will go up.

NOTE.—Anyone who would like to procure the series of articles concerning reciprocity which have appeared in this paper should send his name and address to the chief editor of The Canadian Century, Magazine, Montreal, and a pamphlet containing these articles and other valuable information will be mailed free of charge.
