1924 SCHOOL ESTIMATES PLACED BEFORE MILLION VOTE For Women Adds 1,000 Names To London Lists

CITY SCHOOL FIGURES CALL FOR $70,000 MORE THAN ASKED LAST YEAR

Total of Board of Education Estimates For 1924 Placed at $1,006,318 as Against $936,640 Last Assessment—Increases in Salaries Account For Most of Additional Requirement.

NO PROVISION FOR NEW BUILDINGS

Citizens of London will be asked to pay $90,000 more for school purposes in 1924 than this year, according to tentative estimates prepared by the board of education and submitted at a special meeting of that body at noon.

This increase is large in view of the fact that no provision is made for new buildings of any kind, and that it was hoped the appropriations asked for, for public schools, would not be increased. No suggestion of a 1924 building program for colleges can be seen in the estimates.

Expenditures for 1924 are estimated at $1,006,318, as compared with $936,640 in 1923.

The figures as prepared by the various spending bodies of the board are in three groups—public, secondary and technical schools—all calling for an increase. Public school estimates have jumped $50,000, from $111,512.29 to $161,512.29, the largest part of which is accounted for by salaries. With the addition of a new collegiate unit in London, East, the figures for the secondary schools are $235,097.76, compared with $225,128.76. The increase here is accounted for by the necessity of using the Princess avenue school as the London East Collegiate, estimates for Central and London South showing a decrease. Last year's figures for Central were $170,751.74, while in 1924 they will be $147,021.74. London South in 1923 accounted for $54,377.02, while in 1924 $51,227.02 will be asked for. London East will need $18,755. for technical schools.

The technical school is requesting $112,670.27, against $100,000 in 1923. The estimates are purely of a cumulative nature and do not include salaries as the official figures for 1924, having been prepared at the request of the city council. The complete figures are as follows, showing estimates for 1923 and tentative figures for 1924:

FRANCE WILL ACCEPT PLAN FOR PROBING REPARATIONS

Agrees to the Appointment of International Body of Experts.

URGES U. S. ENTER

British Government Hesitates, Due to Certain Conditions Imposed.

Associated Press Despatch. London, Oct. 26.—France, Belgium and Italy have accepted the British invitation for a reparations conference, with the understanding that it shall take the form of a committee of experts under the authority of the present inter-allied reparations commission.

Associated Press Despatch. Paris, Oct. 26.—The French government is willing that an international conference of experts to be named by the reparations commission should be called to consider the question of reparations in conformity with the treaty of Versailles.

It was semi-officially announced that the French government, already had informed Secretary of State Hughes that he would accept an international conference of experts to determine Germany's capacity to pay, but that they must be named by the reparations commission. The British government, it was added, has not yet accepted this condition.

INTEREST IN NORTON CASE STIMULATED BY REWARD

City and County Officials Praise Advertiser's Reward For Bandit's Arrest.

PROPER SPIRIT

Opinion That It May Assist Materially in Securing Capture of Much Wanted Man.

Great interest in the capture of "Pat" Norton has been aroused all through Middlesex. The Advertiser's action in offering a reward of $1,000 for the capture and safe lodging in a Canadian jail of the famous and notorious "Pat" Williams held up the Home Bank at Melbourne in April, 1921.

Inquiries for further particulars and information regarding Norton have been pouring into The Advertiser office, and a complete description of the bandit who was the only one of the four to make his escape from Melbourne citizens will be published in Saturday's edition.

Police and county officials are unanimous in commending The Advertiser for offering $1,000 reward for the apprehension of "Pat."

"The Advertiser has shown a real public and community spirit," stated Chief of Police Robert Birrell of the London police department. "It was a splendid thing for the paper to do, and I think, help considerably in the capture of Norton."

"It was a fine idea," commented Nickle of the local force. "The Advertiser has shown the right spirit and the offering of the reward should bring results."

Sheriff Graham, who is also acting as high constable of Middlesex County, also commended The Advertiser for offering a reward for Norton.

The paper is on the right track in offering a reward," stated the sheriff, and his remarks were reiterated by County Clerk John Stuart.

Inspector Lucas was another officer who expressed satisfaction at The Advertiser's effort to bring Norton to book.

Provincial Officer T. V. Stratton and License Inspector Bolton stated that in their opinion the offering of a reward would soon have the desired effect of putting Norton behind bars.

With nearly $170,000,000 to be paid to holders of five-year-term Canadian Government bonds issued in 1918 on the first of next month, local financial men predict huge sums will be thrown on the market for investment purposes.

Contrary to general opinion that the majority of citizens holding maturity bonds would take advantage of conversion privileges, made possible by the recent $200,000,000 refunding loan, there is still, according to bankers, $170,000,000 in outstanding 1923 Victory bonds. This necessarily means that when Nov. 1 comes along and the bonds are cashed by Canadians, there will be a great quantity of loose money ready for reinvestment.

When the recent refunding loan was issued, holders of the 1923 maturities were allowed to convert the latter for the former. The 1918 issue was converted at 5 1/2 per cent, and on the five-year bonds a dividend of $1 was allowed, while on the 20-year issue $1.75 was gained on every $100 converted.

Expect Re-investment. In spite of the fact, however, that an additional fifteen days' interest would be added upon conversion, many citizens who purchased Victory bonds in 1918 failed to take advantage of the special government offer.

On the first of next month, when the five-year bonds mature, local banks will cash the bonds for their customers. Instructions have been issued to all chartered banks to this effect, and it is expected that a real rush business will be in evidence on Nov. 1 in all London financial institutions.

Bank managers anticipate that a large slice of the money secured from banks when the bonds are taken in will be invested in the recent $500,000,000 issue of Province of Ontario bonds. Subscriptions to this loan are being taken in at a rapid rate, and it is not expected any closing date will be set for some time. Local brokers will handle the bonds indefinitely, in fact.

$500,000,000 in District. As London and Western Ontario absorbed 20 per cent of the late refunding government loan, it is estimated, with that figure as a basis, that $100,000,000 or thereabouts is at present held by this district in the five-year bonds issued in 1918. With all this money available for reinvestment, local and district brokers are expected to do a thriving business.

The federal government refunding loan, having been closed a few days after the 15th of the month, cannot, of course, be purchased except from brokers who might have some of the bonds on hand. These will fetch a slightly higher figure than that at which they were originally sold.

MATURE NOVEMBER 1

Brokers Are Anticipating Re-investments On a Large Scale.

City Voters' List Shows Increase of 11,133 Names Over Last Year's Number

Approximately 33,000 Voters Have Right To Cast Ballots at Civic Elections.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Addition of Thousands of Women Accounts for Huge Increase—How the Wards Stand.

Approximately 33,000 residents of London have the right to exercise a ballot at the next municipal election, an increase of no less than 11,133 over 1922.

City Clerk Sam Baker issued his official statement today, with another warning to the electors that the last date of appeal for those whose names are not on the list is set for Nov. 6.

Voter's lists are available in his office, the public library, the schools and the several clubs. The tremendous increase in the number is chiefly accounted for by the thousands of women who are now entitled to vote at municipal elections—both husbands and wives may now vote as joint owners or tenants. Naturally more women than men are affected.

Ward Three, acknowledged as the "big labor ward," is now the biggest ward in the city, having passed Ward Four, with a greater number of electors, 9,541. Ward Two is still the smallest, with 5,475 voters. There are 2,318 Roman Catholic voters throughout the community.

Another peculiar fact is disclosed, that while more than 10,000 tenants or joint tenants are voting this year, the number of income taxpayers has dropped by 105. Less than a thousand of the voters pay income taxes apparently.

Complaints have been received from a war veteran by The Advertiser to the effect that although he was advised by the federal appeal board of Canada that he could inspect his file at the D. S. C. R. personally, he has been refused permission to do so.

D. S. C. R. officials, explaining the matter today, stated they had no order to allow veterans to inspect their files, and that until they received one, refusals would be in order.

Veterans have access to their files through Captain E. Fremlin, soldiers' advisor, who they may want to collect evidence for an appeal.

One soldier was permitted to inspect his file. At that time, however, an order had been passed allowing him to do so. However, later the order was countermanded, and until it is officially promulgated the D. S. C. R. officials will refuse to permit soldiers to inspect their files.

Instructions Withdrawn. The order-in-council permitting the inspection was passed at Ottawa, but after it had gone through Commons and the Senate, it was found that the clause granting such permission had been deleted. This was remedied by issuing instructions. He issued them. Later, it was found that the mistake would be corrected, and the order-in-council, and his instructions were withdrawn.

The soldier who was allowed to inspect his file came back ten days later, and was refused the order having been withdrawn.

As authority for his request, he produced a letter from the federal government. The fifth paragraph reads:

Claim Letter Premature. "You, or a person authorized by you in writing to do so, may in the future be called upon to furnish evidence for an appeal."

The D. S. C. R. officials say the letter is a bit premature.

They add that only one veteran has asked to inspect his file.

DR. W. J. STEVENSON WILL LEAVE HOSPITAL SHORTLY

Dr. W. J. Stevenson, who underwent a serious operation 12 days ago at St. Joseph's Hospital, was reported this morning by his physician to be greatly improved. It is expected Dr. Stevenson will be leaving the hospital in a few days, but he will be unable to continue his practice until the new year.

WRIT ISSUED. The McClary Manufacturing Company has issued a county court writ through Spencer and Braund against Roy G. Dodds of Alton, Craig, for $185.90, claiming it the price of goods sold and delivered.

TO CONSIDER ESTIMATES. Tentative estimates for 1924 are scheduled for consideration at a special session of the board of works, called by Chairman Douglas last night.

Sees Danger In the Kiss But Won't Put It Under Ban

Is the kiss more dangerous than the handshake? That is, from the point of contagion.

While Dr. W. S. Downham, city medical officer of health, is reluctant to suggest an anti-kissing campaign, as well as the anti-handshaking movement, he believes that most germs are located in the throat. From his carefully guarded remarks today, it is evident, however, that he considers the kiss more deadly than the handshake.

Dr. Downham points out that while of health.

Prince Has Set Brand New Style

Associated Press Despatch. London, Oct. 26.—The Prince of Wales has set a new style in the matter of dress and headgear at public receptions to his royal highness in connection with his present visit in Scotland. The leading citizens of Dundee, who were to take a prominent part in the reception to the prince today were arranging to wear silk hats and morning coats. Yesterday, however, the lord provost of Dundee received a telegram from Admiral Halsey, who is accompanying the prince on his trip, as follows:

"The Prince of Wales and party are wearing lounge suits and bowler hats tomorrow. He hopes you and all will conform to this."

Major-General A. C. MacDonnell, noted war leader and now commandant of the Royal Military College, Kingston, believes cadet training is one of the most effective antidotes to crime known. He also believes military courses for boys are invaluable molders of citizenship and character.

The major-general is in London today for the purpose of addressing the Kiwanis Club here. In an interview he stressed the importance of military training not only for defense, but also for the physical, mental and moral advantage of young Canadians.

As officer commanding the famous Strathcona Horse, and later head of the 7th Canadian Infantry Brigade and 1st Canadian Division, Major-General MacDonnell achieved distinction as one of Canada's most dependable higher officers during the war.

In his capacity as commandant of the Royal Military College, he became intimately associated with the cadets there, and is a great exponent of the value to the country of systematic military training.

European Uncertainty. The situation in Europe, the commandant believes to be "uncertain." He thinks European countries which are maintaining and building armaments are extremely wise. The situation is so acute that the smoldering fires of discontent may break out at any moment, and those countries that foresee such a possibility will be in a good position to combat aggression. As for Canada, however, conditions are radically different.

Every businessman should determine just what his military preparation, in his opinion, is required to keep Canada safe from possible attack," the general said. "He should also decide how many troops are necessary as a permanent force in case of war in which this country might be involved. In other words, what preparation would be required to hold the line until sufficient enlisted men could be procured to prosecute war to a successful conclusion."

Antithesis of Militarism. Cadet training, the general added, is the antithesis of militarism. It teaches respect for constituted authority without servility. It teaches a boy manners, and inspires him with the glory of his native land.

The trouble with all countries today is that the younger generation is so averse to "spade work." Boys like to start where their parents left off. But no country can afford permanent prosperity unless the young fellows do the rough work. It is all right to be ambitious, but too great expectations and too much pampering do not make for happiness.

Praises Militia. "The best thing that Canadians inherit from their French compatriots is the Canadian militia. The Canadian militia was organized for defense, not defiance, and it has never failed. In 1812-13-14 it commenced its traditions. In 1837-38 it suppressed the rebellion, and later emerged triumphant from the Fenian Raid, Boer War and the Riel Rebellion. These are episodes every boy should learn, for they tell him a wonderful estimate of the accomplishments of his own country."

General MacDonnell came to London yesterday to give a lecture on the militia for entrance into the R. M. C. He was a prominent figure in all the big engagements in which Canadian troops took part, such as Ypres and Passchendaele.

WENGE ENUMERATES CONSISTENT OPPONENTS

Promises To Augment List From Time to Time.

The mayor is drafting a little list of those whom he has selected as consistent public opponents.

It is a list which now with Mr. Whorship as to who shall head the list—ex-Ald. F. R. Manness or Ald. William Wilson. The mayor points out that one day the latter chooses to leave him alone, the other fills the gap and launches a general attack.

Others who are sure of a place on the list include Philip Pocock and J. Cameron Wilson, the mayor explains, while others will be added from time to time as they make themselves known.

"If ex-Ald. Manness would consult the city hall minutes," challenged the mayor today, "he would learn just what the 1923 council has done. It is not well to leave too much to hearsay."

DR. CHAS. STEINMETZ EXPIRES SUDDENLY

Famous Electrical Wizard Dies at His Home in Schenectady, N. Y.

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz, electrical wizard, died at his home here at 8:15 o'clock this morning. The cause was given as a physical breakdown, due to a trip to the Pacific coast, from which he recently returned.

The death of Dr. Steinmetz was entirely unexpected, his condition up to the moment of death having been considered good. According to the explanation given by his physician, breakfast was being served to the patient, when suddenly his heart seemed to give way, and he died immediately.

The American career of Charles P. Steinmetz, A. S. M. E., chief consulting engineer of the General Electric Works, Schenectady, N. Y., had its beginning in New York in 1884, when he was 14 years old. He was a very little English he arrived from Zurich, Switzerland.

At the time of his death Dr. Steinmetz was regarded not only as one of the foremost authorities on electrical engineering, but one of the greatest mathematicians of his time.

Born in the City of Breslau, Germany, on April 9, 1865, and educated at its famous university, young Steinmetz early became interested in science, and at a time when vigorous steps were being taken against it by the government.

EDISON EXPRESSES REGRET. Associated Press Despatch. West Orange, N. J., Oct. 26.—"The world has lost one of its greatest mathematicians and the electrical industry will miss one of its shining lights," said Thomas A. Edison today, when informed of the death of Charles P. Steinmetz at Schenectady. The famous inventor was shocked at the news.

Representative members of the London Labor party still entertain the view that at least one of their number should sit on the public utilities commission during 1924.

And a determined effort will be exerted between now and nomination day to induce both Ald. John Colbert and Ald. Frank McKay to enter the field. Their supporters are confident that they could be elected this December.

Upon one other occasion did Ald. Colbert run for the commission, being defeated by Commissioner Philip Pocock by about 100 votes. This situation will be considered when the party convenes again in special session early next week to select candidates for all municipal offices excluding the mayoralty.

COUNTY SPENDS HALF MILLION ON HIGHWAYS

Province Sends Bill For Middlesex's Share For 1922 Work.

Almost half a million dollars was spent on provincial highways in the County of Middlesex, according to information received at the county buildings today.

The county's bill from the Province of Ontario for work done on provincial highways last year totals $97,800, and as the county's share is but one-fifth of the total cost, the actual amount spent would be in the neighborhood of $48,900.

County Clerk John Stuart stated that the county's bill in 1921 was about $96,000.

Most of the money in 1922 was spent on the construction of the Lambeth highway and for the bridge over the north branch of the Thames river at Broughdale. But $3,000 was expended for road maintenance.

VOICE OF MELBA THRILLS AUDIENCE

Charm and Appeal of Great Singer Enraptures Londoners.

FINE PERSONALITY

As though time itself were loath to lay a hand upon so precious a gift of the gods, the voice of Melba still rings sweet and clear and thrilling. Crowned with every triumph the world can give a singer, and also a Dame of the British Empire, it was not until last night, within the pleasantly intimate auditorium of the Patricia Theatre, that Melba had made an appearance in London. Her introduction she made by way of the "Jewel Song," and as she sang it, there were revealed those years of training and experience which have so gloriously rolled themselves about a voice that seems, indeed, heavenly.

Yet Dame Melba sang it with all the romance, the charm, the appeal that might be bestowed upon it by a young singer, staking her all upon this one great test. With years of success piled up behind her, Melba remains ageless. As she sings she is a girl for a woman. Here and there a note might ring which is not altogether true, but her voice still has strength and purity, and above all, she still has the soul and the songs as she always sang them, and perhaps as Melba always will sing them, greater to any other.

At Home With Audience.

Last night she made herself surprisingly at home with her audience.

She seems to have that one great faculty of making a concert a delightful thing from commencement to finish, the faculty of appearing completely to be enjoying things herself. Dame Melba seemed delighted that everyone was so pleased. Two or three of her numbers she sang especially to please, and at the end she smiled as though to say, "You liked that? Yes, I thought you would." And she sang the song which answered the secret prayer of every listener in the house, "Home, Sweet Home." For this she played herself, and she sang with a tenderness that was sweet, yet not sad. She sang for her audience, and seemed, too, to be singing for her home, which yet weeks will pass before she will see.

And that she sang so encouragingly, first unexpectedly with "By the Waters of Minnetonka," with an operatic aria, and with "Home, Sweet Home," Melba was quick to come finally to the stage and declare, "No More, Good-Night." But before she put an end to this loveliest of concert evenings, with most charming good-nature gave "Comin' Through the Rye." To an evening, where the formality of the stage seemed utterly to have melted in the air of friendly intimacy, this was the perfect conclusion.

Interesting Personalities.

The Melba concert party included, with Melba herself, three immensely interesting personalities. With her were Mr. Miquelle, cellist, and the Prince Alexis Obolensky. In addition to the perfection of his accompaniments, Melba drew attention to the pianist, Carl Lamson. At the end of three of her songs (if one may use the term of so great a lady) she "grabbed" her pianist, drawing him to his feet, as if to say to her audience, that they, no matter how retiring he might be, must recognize his talent.

As Prince Alexis Obolensky commanded a list of names that he should be standing in the crystal and gold of a European drawing-room, and that the only applause which might greet him might be that of restrained and adoring hands. But as he sang he verged into a more pleasant intimacy with his hearers, until his later numbers and encores, sung in impeccable English (and with an enunciation far superior to that of many English singers), became nothing short of a triumph. The songs he chose in English were charming, and his voice as melodious and vibrant as an organ tone.

Cellist Unique.

The cellist was unique. Here indeed seemed the stroke of genius. Mr. Miquelle, a tall, thin, straight, level brow, a thin straight mouth, features, in fact, which as he plays have the appearance of a mask, this was the only one of the concert party who played with his eyes closed. As the house showed its appreciation, however, of his remarkable playing, the mask vanished and a friendly smile, of a fascinating and friendly smile, the friendliness doubly displayed in the aptitude with which he chose his numbers for the concert.

Of the entire affair, there was but one disappointing feature, and this, though it distressed Melba greatly, was the fact that Dame Melba's well-planned conclusion was put to rout by the eagerness of her audience, who showed no intention of leaving, even when she herself had come to the fore and insisted "No More." Thus it was that "God Save the King" was not played, as the audience left spontaneously some singing to the aisles, and there standing in the hope that the singer would relent. But it was not to be. She sang a song before her, and then she reached that other great dominion of the empire where her home is. There was a mute "God Save the King" in the conclusion of her concert, and the hope that there will be preserved also the glorious memory of Dame Melba's voice.

LIONEL A. WILLIAMS BRILLIANT ACTOR

Famous English Dramatist Scores Triumph in "The Heart of Cellini."

IS SPLENDID PLAY

After seeing "The Heart of Cellini," playing at the Grand Theatre the part of the week, it is hard to deny Lionel Atwill a niche in the theatrical hall of fame. The English actor, who seven years ago was a rather remote member of the profession, attained new heights of dramatic greatness in the superb romance modeled with skillful hands from the famous biography of the infamous Cellini. What the play would have been without Atwill is easy to conjecture, but with him it is one of the most interesting performances ever seen in the city.

There are, of course, unsatisfactory phases of "The Heart of Cellini," depicting as it does the subtle shades of character which were the most intimate features of the Italian artist. He leaves the theater with the uncomfortable feeling that Cellini, after all, did not have a heart. Fidelity was as foreign to his temperament as honesty. He was as confirmed a libertine, egotist, and braggart as it is possible to conceive—but withal, intensely lovable.

"The Heart of Cellini" has been described as a romantic comedy, but it is really a melodrama. In dealing with the life of Benvenuto Cellini the dramatist has pictured the central figure as one who, while he may appeal to a sense of certain appreciation of the romantic, cannot possibly gain sympathy through a measure of admiration or respect.

Remains Braggart.

Today the strange admixture of complexes which rendered the sculptor both famous and infamous would probably be accounted for by the term "artistic temperament"—which may, broadly, be accepted as covering a multitude of sins. Throughout the play Cellini remains a braggart, and one fears a libertine. It is only when, in the chamber of the Madonna Cecilia Orsini, he fights down his fear and attends to the plague-stricken Florentine, that he gains and holds for a moment one's sympathy.

Even when his regeneration seems possible, when his bravado and curiously eccentric impulses appear to have been extirpated in the cauldron of love, the audience is by no means convinced of any definite permanent change of character. One fears, in fact, that life with the angel of his dreams will go mightily hard for the angel when the first mad infatuation wears off.

While Cellini, in real life, as well as in the play, boasted of his genius as a sculptor with all the braggadochio of genius, fate decreed that his artistic genius should make him famous to posterity. It is not his noted "Perseus with the head of Medusa" now in the Leggia del Lanza, Florence, that gives him his world renown. It is the famous book written by himself from which "The Heart of Cellini" is taken.

Always the Artist.

Cellini was a scawlag of the first water, a supreme egotist, a libertine, a soldier of fortune, but always the artist in all that the term includes. Thus it will be seen that Lionel Atwill, in faithfully portraying the various shades of Cellini's character, has made a masterly contribution to real dramatic art.

Second honors go to Manart Kipper, who gives a favorable impersonation of Luigi Orsini, Cellini's rival. J. H. Brewer, as Giovanni Capretta, the despised jeweler, and William St. James, as the equally despised Bandinelli, also deserve eulogy. The women in the play were all good.

It must have required a battery of stage hands to operate the scenery, which in detail and artistic effect was creditable indeed. The final scene, where Cellini stands with his beloved beside his immortal bronze statue, is beautiful.

"The Heart of Cellini" is intensely interesting, but you have read Cellini's autobiography will prove doubly so.

ZANE GREY'S BOOK MAKES FINE FILM

"To the Last Man" Proves Interesting Picture At Loew's.

VAUDEVILLE GOOD

Zane Grey's novel "To the Last Man" has been made into a most effective moving picture. It forms the feature of the Loew program for the remainder of the week. Richard Dix and Lois Wilson are co-starred.

In common with the majority of "feud" pictures, "To the Last Man" has to do with that particular period in the label-Jorth feud when the son of one family falls in love with the motherless daughter of the other. But it is given variety by the fact that the Jorth outfit are not scrupulously honest. It has its most valid claim to distinction, however, in the fact that all the stark tragedy of the feud and the whole system of hate and bitterness behind it are shown with almost appalling reality.

In a remarkably telling manner, Richard Dix as "Jean Isabel," who finally remains the last of his blood, conveys the impression of the bleak despair that settles over him as he sees, one by one, his kinsmen snuffed out by a senseless hate. Lois Wilson does excellently as "Ellen Jorth." In this picture, more than in any other in which she has appeared, one may gain an impression of the ability Lois Wilson really possesses. Her first triumph in the way of public recognition has come with "The Covered Wagon," and from "Ellen Jorth" one hopes for big things from this picture, should it come to this city.

With these two splendid stars and the effectiveness with which the entire film is worked out, "To the Last Man" is worth seeing.

"Ladd and Morgan" are the headliners, their act being only slightly marred by the introduction of "blue" songs, which aren't indispensable. The concluding ensemble is a pretty bit of work which is entirely satisfying, all four of the dancers being nimble graceful.

U.S. MAY PARTICIPATE IN ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

DISAGREEMENT OVER RAILWAYS ARIED IN TORONTO

Ferguson Promises Government Will Try To Settle the L. S. R. Question.

IVEY PRESENTS CASE

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Reporter.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—The Ontario government proposal to buy the street railway system has been the subject of a meeting of the executive council when R. G. Ivey, vice-president of the company, stated the case for the company and argued that the five-cent fare, as allowed by the late Drury government, should be considered as an asset, during actual negotiations for the purchase of the road.

This was the assurance at noon today from Premier Howard Ferguson. His announcement was forthcoming after a meeting of the executive council when R. G. Ivey, vice-president of the company, stated the case for the company and argued that the five-cent fare, as allowed by the late Drury government, should be considered as an asset, during actual negotiations for the purchase of the road.

It is evident that Sir Adam Beck disputes this claim although he was not in attendance today with City Solicitor Meredith. He presented his case yesterday.

Special Session.
The cabinet has ordered another special session for Tuesday next when both parties will again make their presentations and an effort will be made to reach an amicable understanding in order to facilitate the proposed purchase.

Members of the cabinet, Sir Adam Beck, City Solicitor Meredith, and Vice-President Ivey will attend Tuesday's conference.

The city's representatives have claimed that only the interference of the Drury government prevented the probable bankruptcy of the street railway. The alleged interference of the late administration was legislation which permitted increased fares and which Sir Adam Beck seeks to upset.

SEEKS AGREEMENT

The street railway authorities submitted that they secured their rights in the ordinary course of events and should not now be deprived of them, but that they should be considered as assets.

Premier Ferguson points out that while the government can take no action before the house convenes in 1924, every effort can be made to reach an agreement to permit a purchase if the people of London say so at the December election.

SPECIAL ORDER TRIAL IS REFUSED

Nickle Declares Calling of New Assize Unwarranted in Murrell Case.

REQUEST BY ELLIOTT

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—The request from London for a special assize to try Sidney Murrell, in respect of whom a jury recently tried for murder, was refused today by Hon. W. F. Nickle, K.C., attorney-general of Ontario. No sufficient grounds existed in the Murrell case for departing from the course, the minister contended, of established justice and constituting a precedent.

The request for a special assize to try Murrell was forwarded by Crown Attorney J. C. Elliott, K.C. of London. A jury some two weeks ago disagreed in a charge of murder perpetrated against Murrell as the result of a killing which occurred in a bank robbery at Melbourne. The belief was held in the London that should be held for fear that sentiment in favor of the prisoner might accomplish his release before the January assizes.

The congregation arranged a farewell function in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Marshall to take place Tuesday next.

CURZON SENDS NOTE SUGGESTING PARLEY TO FIX REPARATIONS

Correspondence Made Public—Telegram Sent October 12—Hughes Indicates United States Willing To Take Part in Economic Conference—Want Inter-Allied Debts Considered Separately.

Associated Press Despatch. London, Eng., Oct. 25.—The British Empire, acting as a unit through the British foreign office, extended a formal invitation to the Washington government to co-operate in an attempt to settle the reparations difficulties.

Correspondence made public today by the foreign office showed that the invitation was sent to the United States following the first public statement by President Coolidge on the situation in Europe.

The invitation went forward through the British charge d'affaires at Washington, "in the name of the whole British Empire as represented at the imperial conference."

The news came as a complete surprise to the public and newspapers.

The secret had been well kept, especially considering the presence in London of all the empire representatives, who must have been aware of the move, which undoubtedly was not in attendance today with City Solicitor Meredith. He presented his case yesterday.

Lord Curzon's request is for the participation of the United States in any form, either official or unofficial, or, alternatively, to participate in an inquiry by a special commission appointed by the reparations commission. Whether the government's move was prompted by General Smuts, or whether Curzon was intended to lend weight to the government's move is not known, but it will be noted that Curzon's request was made at a conference of all the powers, including the neutrals, not merely those interested in reparations.

Economic Conference.
In his reply to Lord Curzon, Secretary Hughes indicates that the United States is willing to take part in any capacity, provided that the European allies chiefly concerned in German reparations participate for the purpose of ascertaining Germany's capacity to pay.

He emphasizes three points, however, first, that while the United States has no desire to assume any obligations of responsibility or just obligations, regard must be had for Germany's rehabilitation; second, that such conference should be advisory, and third, that the question of the inter-allied debt is entirely separate from the question of reparations.

No official opinion could be gleaned from the foreign office, but the general view seems to be that there is not sufficient advance in Secretary Hughes' attitude, as revealed by the conference, as to warrant a very strong hope that the suggested conference will materialize.

It is feared that France will still oppose any such suggestion, more especially as Mr. Hughes so firmly maintains the position that the question of the inter-allied debt must be treated separately from that of reparations, confirming that the new president has no more intention than his predecessor of forgiving the allied debts.

The publication of the correspondence was clearly planned to synchronize with the British statement of his government's policy as regards the reparations question and to attract some of the lightning like to strike the conference in which the realization that apart from this new effort to secure United States co-operation, the British government's policy is one of waiting for France to move.

CURZON'S NOTE

The telegram from Marquis Curzon, secretary for foreign affairs, to the British charge d'affaires at Washington on October 12, stated that the information which reaches the United States will have a significant effect on the government's attitude towards the reparations question.

OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR IS PROHIBITED TO ACT

Associated Press Despatch.

Okla. City, Oct. 25.—Lieut. Governor M. E. Trapp was declared acting governor of Oklahoma in a decision of the state supreme court late today, making permanent a writ of prohibition against Governor J. C. Walton and District Judge Tom G. Chambers, Senr., which restrains them from interfering with the lieutenant-governor's assumption of the office.

The decision sustains a resolution adopted by the state senate suspending Governor Walton during his impeachment trial, and nullifies an injunction obtained by the governor in Judge Chambers' court, which would have permitted the lieutenant-governor from becoming acting governor.

STORE WINDOWS BROKEN BY RUNAWAY HORSES

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, Oct. 25.—Several Chatham people had a narrow escape from injury when a team, driven by George Duquette, of Big Point, ran amok on King street in the business section of the city today. The horses became frightened when the wagon was lifted making a turn at an intersection. A quantity of meat in the wagon was strewn along the pavement, following which the rig struck a car. The driver was thrown from the auto, but escaped injury. The force of the impact with the car caused the horses to climb a sidewalk, over which they dashed for half a block, the wagon smashing plate glass windows of three big stores and felling a hydro standard. The team came to a halt in the door of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

FARMERS FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

John Kolton Shows No Emotion On Hearing Verdict At Sandwich.

IS OUT SIX HOURS OWN COUNTRY FIRST

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Correspondent.

Windsor, Oct. 25.—Evincing not a trace of emotion, John Kolton, 38, farmer of Sandwich West Township, sat stoically in the prisoner's dock in the historic court house at Sandwich tonight and heard the verdict that he is expected to send him to the gallows for the murder of his partner, Peter Staruchuk, on the night of April 8 of this year.

The jury after hearing the testimony of eight witnesses for the crown and none for the defence, retired at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Precisely six hours later they returned, bringing in a verdict finding Kolton guilty of murder.

As the jurors filed into the courtroom and took their places, Clerk Henry Gray made the formal inquiry of George Baines, prosecutor of the case, and foreman of the jury:

"Guilty of Murder."

"Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

The foreman rose. His face was deathly pale and beads of perspiration stood upon his forehead. His voice was inaudible to the court.

"Guilty," he uttered the single word.

"Guilty of what?" the clerk demanded.

"Murder," was the reply.

Then as Foreman Baines sank into his seat every eye in the courtroom was turned toward the prisoner, over whom the shadow of the gallows already hung.

But Kolton's face showed nothing. Justice Orde then thanked the jury for its work, declaring he was satisfied that the verdict was evidence. The sentence will be imposed after other criminal cases on the assizes docket have been disposed of.

STORY OF CRIME

The crime for which Kolton was found guilty was the murder of Peter Staruchuk, the latter's farm at Sandwich. Kolton had been engaged in garden truck farming together, but abandoned this for a manufacturing moonshine business.

On April 8 both men had been drinking heavily. The following morning Staruchuk's body was found near by. Both were heavily intoxicated with blood and an axe lay near by. Both were heavily intoxicated with blood and an axe lay near by.

DISCUSS RIGHTS OF PEOPLES

Hon. G. P. Graham Tells Parley Standard Text Books Are Not Practical.

OWN COUNTRY FIRST

By GEORGE HAMBLETON, Canadian Press Cable.

London, Eng., Oct. 25.—Provincial rights in Canada, and to a lesser extent, perhaps, state rights in Australia, have been much the subject of the imperial economic conference the last few days. Yesterday they arose on the agenda of reciprocal taxation of state-owned trading enterprises; today they came up in the discussions on education, on the reciprocal enforcement of judgments and in committee on workmen's compensation.

Under the subject of education it was the general agreement that the study of geography and the resources of the empire should be encouraged, and there was a suggestion made of having a series of lectures on the subject of the empire's resources.

George P. Graham of Canada observed that education in Canada came within provincial jurisdiction. He said that each province was at all practicable. Each province had its own text-books. He further thought that while a wider knowledge of the empire should be encouraged, children should study their own country first.

Agree On Judgments.
A similar position arose in regard to the enforcement of judgments. The conference had before it the problem as to how far it was practicable to make mutual arrangements with a view to the enforcement in one part of the empire of court judgments and arbitration awards given in another part.

The question was discussed in considerable length, and although no resolution was adopted, there was general agreement that it was desirable for purposes of trade to have arrangements made to enforce judgments where local conditions made a course possible.

At this point Sir Louis Gordon for Canada and Senator Wilson for Australia remarked that they were not empowered to answer in the matter for the provincial and the state governments. The minister of justice for South Africa, added that the judicial system of South Africa already made substantial provision in regard to such enforcement.

Finally, with regard to workmen's compensation, the Canadian representative on the special committee representing the empire, the question of reaching some common basis in respect to non-resident dependents of alien workmen, pointed out today that the difficulty lay in the fact that the fact that that matter came under the provincial authorities.

Search for a brick or stone which might have been hurled at the man did not reveal a missile. It is stated that the nature of the injury received by the old man was merely a black eye, and hardly one that could have been caused by a brick.

While Doctors Duncan and Agar, who conducted the post-mortem examination yesterday afternoon, declared that the man had been struck by a brick, the police headquarters today, the statements they have made do not help the authorities in any way. Chief of Police Groves said today that the police had been handicapped in the investigation by the delay in advising them of Hyatt's death.

The old man died about 10 o'clock yesterday evening, but it was not until after 9 o'clock the following morning that the police had any notification of the fatality.

Several police officers stated today that had his officers had an opportunity to check up some of the rumors which were apparently circulated in the vicinity of Lowe street immediately after Hyatt's death that it would have materially aided the investigation. As it is, the police have to be content with systematically checking up any information, no matter of what nature, in the hope of sifting out the right details which will lead them to the responsible party for the sad occurrence.

ONE KILLED, TWO HURT AS TRAIN STRIKES AUTO

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—More than one hundred school inspectors through-out the province of Ontario are seeking higher salaries. Led by E. J. Jordan, York County inspector, a deputation of 30 tendered a formal appeal today to Premier Howard Ferguson. The inspectors, including county and separate school officials, ask an increase from $3,000 to $4,000 per annum.

In a fervent appeal to the premier, Inspector Jordan argued that the inspectors were doing a very important job, and that the public school principals over whom they had jurisdiction. He stressed the fact that absolute fitness for their work was as many as twelve years' training and study.

While declaring that the government would meet the demands to a "certain extent," the premier was unable to state just what would be accomplished definitely. He added that in his opinion the most important work of the inspector is to develop in the student a greater appreciation of learning, automatically elevating personality and individuality. More of the personal element was required, he declared, and this can only be done by the closer cooperation between the teachers and inspectors.

Western Ontario was well represented in the delegation.

DEMAND FOR CITY LABOR REPORTED QUIET IN SARNIA

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Oct. 25.—Employment is very quiet in the city. W. H. Lott, government employment officer, stated today. There is practically no demand for labor from the city, though men can be placed on farms and in the lumber camps at good wages. Fifty men are reported as unemployed, the number including many mechanics.

The Imperial refinery is working with a reduced staff and Holmes' is on reduced hours. The building trade is slackening, and the Canadian National has temporarily laid off a number of trainmen. The docks are quiet, but are likely to remain steady till the middle of December.

AID CRIPPLED CHILDREN

Special to The Advertiser.

Stratford, Oct. 25.—The Far-Qua Club of Shrivers of Stratford have decided to continue its work of caring for crippled children. The last child under their charge is now completely cured, and another will be chosen shortly. Arrangements have been made also by the organization to aid the Rotarians in their Halloween frolic and old boys' reunion committee.

BLAMES CARELESS BATHERS FOR DROWNING INCREASE

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Oct. 25.—According to the harbor master of Detroit, 98 people have been drowned in the Detroit River, as compared with 59 during 1922, an increase of 27. Of the 86 so far drowned this year, the harbor-master's crew recovered 27 bodies, 25 were found floating and one was drowned outside Detroit.

"The figures indicate," the harbor-master said, "the need for greater care amongst bathers. About 75 per cent of the drownings are due to bathing accidents, and the majority of these accidents would not have occurred had bathers been careful to stay within the safety zone. They can be attributed to pure carelessness."

Saves Infant From Harm But Loses Foot and Arm

Special to The Advertiser. Detroit, Mich., Oct. 25.—A woman's impulsive place two children still jeoparded late this afternoon, and if she does not pay with her life, the cost will be almost as great, for she will be handicapped for life, with one arm cut off at the shoulder and a foot amputated.

Mrs. Grace Bittner, 28 years old, is the woman. With her baby in her arms, she stood at the Grand Trunk Railroad crossing this afternoon and waited with growing irritation while a lumbering freight blocked her path.

She started to crawl beneath one of the freight cars, and as she did so, the baby in her arms, before she could reach the other side the train started up. Lying prone, her first thought was of the baby, and so well did she protect it that it escaped uninjured as four cars and a caboose passed over the spot.

The mother was not so fortunate. Her foot was caught beneath the wheels and ground off, while, on the other side of the train, a protruding arm met the same fate.

CHATHAM DEATH MYSTERY GROWS

Believed Now That Albert Hyatt Not Hit With a Brick.

EXAMINE STOMACH

Special to The Advertiser.

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 25.—Despite the fact that in his dying moments Albert Hyatt stated that the wound to his head was caused by a brick hurled by an unknown local boy, the belief is now held that the fatal blow he received Tuesday night, which caused his death three hours later, was delivered in some other way.

This theory developed today as police sought vainly for some definite information which would clear up incidents leading to the fatal blow, but their efforts only brought deeper mystery.

It was at first supposed that Hyatt had been struck with a brick hurled from a neighboring backyard, when he had gone into his own garden to remonstrate with boys, who are believed to have been teasing him. Police have learned, however, that there were apparently two separate gangs of boys who had tormented the old man. They have information that the fact that early Tuesday he approached a gang of boys at the corner of Lowe street and Ursuline avenue, closed his home, and then returned to his home, where he was found dead.

CAPTURES CUPS IN PELOPORE

William Wadland Retains Laurels As Master of the Plow.

WINNERS IN ELGIN

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, Oct. 25.—William Wadland, veteran plowman of Yarmouth Township, was awarded both the trophy donated by Hugh McKillop, M.P., for the best plowed field in the county, and the trophy given by P. G. Cameron, ex-M.P.P. and M. McVicar, M.P.P., for the best plowed field at the Elgin County Plowmen's Association match on Tuesday and Thursday of this week.

The former cup is his for good, as he won it in last year's match. Mr. Wadland is a man well up in years, and in his speech he told of winning his first prize in England when fourteen years of age. When he was eighteen he had entered the men's class, and he won the first prize against the older men, while the other boys of the same age won the other prizes in the events, cutting the older and more experienced competitors out of the running altogether.

Held Banquet.
The prizes were presented at a banquet at the Parkview Hotel, which concluded the most successful of the matches held at St. Thomas. There were many speakers at the banquet, the principal speaker being Hugh McKillop, M.P., of West Elgin. He told of the benefit of such plowing matches to the country in general, and gave a short outline of the history of the plow, from the old stick which merely scratched the grounds to the modern one drawn by a tractor, and he wondered what some old residents would say if they saw the modern farm, with all its machinery and improvements.

J. L. Stansell, M.P., for East Elgin, declared that Elgin County was the banner county of Ontario. He thought that the benefit of the matches were that after a man had completed or seen the kind of plowing done at such a match he would go to his home and try to do better plowing himself, and in so doing raise the production of the benefit to himself and the rest of the county of inestimable value.

SIX WALRUS WOULD HAVE MEANT WINTER'S FOOD FOR ARCTIC PARTY

Wrangel Explorers Lose First Kill When Sled Upsets Into Sea.

SEALING FAILURE

Crawford and Maurer Risk Lives in Perilous Dash Over Unstable Ice.

Following is the seventh installment of the amazing story of five Arctic explorers—four white men and an Eskimo woman—who were marooned on Wrangel Island in the Arctic Ocean since the summer of 1921. Captain Harold Knigh, leader of the rescue expedition which brought back Ada Black-Jack, the Eskimo woman, the sole survivor of the gruelling Arctic exile, tells the story.

By HAROLD KNIGH,
Leader Wrangel Island Rescue Expedition.

Reading the diary record of the Wrangel Island expedition, I feel as though I were watching a man walking blindfolded toward a precipice and were powerless to stop him. Almost to the last, the boys failed utterly to realize the dangers of their predicament.

Summer over and the sealing more or less of a failure, the fate of the party now hangs on the walrus hunt. Six walrus would have saved the situation. Six walrus should keep five persons alive and entirely free from scurvy for an entire winter. They would also provide ample food for the hungry dogs.

The ponderous, black-skinned creatures of meat and blubber weigh upwards of a ton. When a man is living off the country, he will eat five pounds of meat a day. Except for the chance of eggs the spring, when the elder and crowsell ducks and the snow geese return from the south, he has nothing else upon which he can count.

Contrary to the belief of the civilized world, where a man thinks he jeopardizes his health, if he eats a mutton chop twice a day, the men of the north have demonstrated that they can remain perfectly healthy indefinitely on a diet exclusively of meat.

Scurvy develops, not from lack of vegetables, but from lack of fresh food of any kind. Vitamin A, which is the scurvy preventative, is found in either fresh meat or fresh vegetables. There is nothing in Knigh's diary to indicate that the boys realized how desperate their condition would be if they failed to eat walrus. They saw the walrus swimming in the water, but believed they must wait until they could catch them on the ice. Because there were no harpoon lines, they evidently thought there was no use trying.

Bad Luck Pursues. Even when the walrus finally came on to the ice and the whole party turned out to hunt, bad luck still enmeshed them.

It was late in the afternoon of a September day. From their tents on the sea coast of Wrangel the boys saw two walrus. The huge animals lay on the edge of a small cake of ice a mile southeast of camp and on the outskirts of the main pack. Full of excitement, the boys dragged their heavy dory down the beach and launched it. Here was the opportunity they had been waiting for. Walrus on the ice!

The dory, after landing on a nearby cake about a hundred and fifty yards from their intended victims, Knigh stayed there to watch the boat. The others went across the ice, keeping out of sight behind a pressure ridge.

All three men fired simultaneously. Two bullets hit the third walrus in the head. Maurer killed one walrus and Galle the other. When the animals dropped dead the three hunters got into the dory and rowed across to examine their prizes.

The dead beasts proved to be a large female and a half-grown calf. The boys were in high spirits. The walrus was coming on, but they decided not to risk leaving their precious catch to the vagaries of the shifting ice. They sent Galle back to camp in the dory for an axe and a lantern. The others stayed behind to skin the walrus. They had just finished stripping the hide from the cow when Galle returned. To their despair they found that the milking ice had blocked his path. They were three men, and the floating helplessly around on an ice cake, their only means of escape, several hundred yards away.

Forced to Leave Kill. Between them and the dory were a number of small and swiftly moving pieces of ice, sticking up like rocks in a river, but perilously unstable. Crawford, realizing that Galle could never reach them alone, decided to risk a dash across this ice field. With the help of a pole, he succeeded, in jumping from cake to cake, in reaching the dory.

Together the two men in the boat tried to reach their companions. Again they failed. The dory was so heavy and the ice so thick that navigation was impossible.

Taking as much of the precious meat as they could carry in their hands, Maurer and Knigh tried to get across the ice as Crawford had done, but it was moving too swiftly, they had been until midnight, when the ice finally came to a standstill and they succeeded in making their way, with the help of oars and ropes, to the dory.

By lantern light the four of them tried again to drag the dory over to the ice, but the ice was too rough, the boat too heavy, and the leads too many. At two in the morning they had succeeded in working their way back to camp, but were forced to leave their prize behind them.

They consoled themselves with the thought that the ice was now still. By four o'clock the next afternoon the ice was in such condition that they were able to launch the dory and try again to salvage their kill. They were able to get within a quarter of a mile of the ice, but could not penetrate no further, so went back to camp and brought a sled. Hauling the sled by hand over the insecure ice cakes, they reached the meat. The gulls and ravens had been at it all the night before. A polar bear had circled about in the vicinity, but for some reason, had not touched the meat.

Loss Precious Meat. They loaded the sled with 600 pounds of blubber and walrus skin and started back. They had nearly reached the dory when a lead opened across their path. They were forced to unload, for the meat and the skin were too heavy to move across the lead. Returning, they cut off a second lead about half the size, but they had failed to lash it to the sled. The sled upset on the edge of a lead and its precious burden slid off into the sea.

By the end of the second discouraging day they had been able to salvage only 50 pounds of meat—scarcely more than enough to keep them

Ingersoll, Oct. 25.—An old boys' reunion, lasting four days, beginning on the 15th of August, will be held next year. The reunion will be undertaken by the Big Eight Fraternal Societies, the decision having been reached after months of careful consideration.

It is some 12 or 14 years since the last reunion was held.

SQUABBLE OVER ELECTION.

Stratford, Oct. 25.—A family tiff is in progress at the local branch of the G. V. V. A. Following an election of officers some few days ago a few members claim that the new executive is not constitutionally elected, alleging that there were five men present who had no right to cast a ballot.

A meeting is being called shortly to deal with the situation.

NEW CROWN ATTORNEY NOT TO BE NAMED YET

Selection Fraught With Difficulty as Many Good Tories Want Job.
The Tory chiefs in Toronto are so besieged with applications and recommendations for the post of crown attorney in London and Middlesex County that a selection is going to be made only with extreme difficulty.

The Advertiser has been given assurance from an undisputed source at the provincial capital that no choice will be made for several days yet—a least, not this week.

As a matter of fact, it was announced yesterday that no serious consideration has even been given the appointment, and there is not the slightest idea among the chiefs themselves as to who may be so fortunate as to draw the lucky ticket.

About the only prediction that can be made with any degree of reason and safety is that the appointee will be a good Tory. Sunday would be a natural deduction, and if it so happens that a Liberal or a U. F. O. follower wins the crown prosecutor's role, it would indeed be a surprise—by no means agreeable to the Tory forces.

MAJOR SANDERS CITY SOLICITOR'S POWER TO ACT

SAYS SOLICITOR NOW EMPowered TO ACT FOR CITY

Mayor Questions T. G. Meredith's Right To Appear Before Government on Railway Matter.

WILL INVESTIGATE

T. G. Meredith is not functioning as city solicitor when he undertakes city business without the authorization of the city council, Mayor Wenig declared vigorously today, adding that this question will receive special attention at the next regular session of the council, if not before.

Mayor Wenig questions sharply why the city solicitor appeared early this morning before the Ontario cabinet with Sir Adam Beck to outline what he evidently considered to be the people's stand with respect to the street railway's 5-cent fare.

And his worship hotly denounced the principle, irrespective of the motive, or who may be called upon to pay for the city solicitor's services, or whether, as has been suggested, Sir Adam "robs the bill."

"Mr. Meredith was not authorized by the city council to appear in this matter," said Mayor Wenig. "I have investigated, and found that the city does not pay Mr. Meredith any retaining fee as city solicitor. Therefore, he is not city solicitor for this municipality, only at such times as his advice is being sought by the authorized city officials or city legislators, with the consent of the city council."

"At other times, he is not the city solicitor, and the city council is not bound at any time to seek his advice, but may seek the opinion of any other attorney," Mr. Meredith's opinion has been sought in the past, and a precedent has been established.

"In the meanwhile, it is my contention that Mr. Meredith is not the back and call of every person who is not authorized by the council. He had no authority to appear before Toronto to represent the city, however laudable his intentions, or Sir Adam's, for that matter, without first consulting the city council, and receiving their sanction."

"There is further proof to me that the time has come when the City of London should have a city solicitor, and then these sort of misunderstandings would not arise. I do not know the first thing about Mr. Meredith going before the Ontario cabinet, and I understand that no member of the council knew anything about it."

"I will see further about this Monday," Ald. Leonard Douglass, chairman of the board of works, pointed out that while the Ontario government may take no action until 1924 with respect to local street railway affairs, the cabinet may state what shall be done. "And if they recommend that the five-cent fare be reduced," he said, "as is being likely from present indications, it would have the desired effect upon the street railway corporation. And that the company will be more willing than ever to sell."

"Should the Ontario government, at the first session rule that the five-cent fare was granted for a period not to exceed the life of bylaw 918, then in 1925 the fare would revert automatically to 7 and 9 tickets for 25 cents."

Ald. Douglass asserts further that if Sir Adam Beck is unable to carry a purchase of the road, it would be a waste of time for members of the city council to make the attempt.

MR. STEVENSON THINKS STREET RAILWAY WRONG

Former Member Declares the Argument Over Bill is Unwarranted.

The London Street Railway is wrong in its present contention, according to Dr. Hugh A. Stevenson, who was member for London supporting the bill in the House of Commons when the 5-cent fare was granted. Dr. Stevenson maintains that Sir Adam Beck and City Solicitor Meredith are quite correct in their claim, and states that it makes no difference what the company may think about the question, as the act speaks for itself.

"The increased fare was to be effective only until 1925," he asserted. "It was in the bill at the time, and that was the understanding of the government. City Solicitor Meredith safeguarded the city's interest to that extent."

"It will be remembered that there was a big fight in the house about it at the time, but the government held that increased fare would prevail only during a period of depression, when the company complained that the high costs were preventing it from adequate operation."

"It was further provided that this increased fare was not to be taken into consideration when the city proposed to take over the road in 1925. It was but a temporary measure, and the old rate of fares—7 tickets for 25 cents—shall be effective in 1925 if the people do not buy."

There should be no argument about this as the part of the street railway, as the act is clear and distinct."

FARMERS WILL SUBMIT VIEWS TO COMMITTEE

At a special session of the finance committee of the city council a week from tomorrow will be discussed all its representative farmers will outline their views upon the local market situation.

Mayor Wenig directed City Clerk Baker today to set this date for the gathering, to be staged in the afternoon, at the Tecumseh House. The situation will be discussed in all its phases. It is hoped that the council will secure even more valuable information upon the subject than they have at this moment.

Plan To Probe Rum-Running

Canadian Press Despatch.
Victoria, B. C., Oct. 26.—Rum-running out of British Columbia ports to the United States will be investigated at first hand by Hon. Jacques Bureau, federal minister of customs and inland revenue, who will arrive on the coast shortly. It is understood, Canadian and United States officials will hold conferences in Ottawa soon to discuss methods of handling the smuggling situation, and it is understood that Mr. Bureau wishes to see conditions for himself on this coast before the liquor conference opens.

FIRE DEPARTMENT WILL FIGHT WAR WITH ESTIMATE

Mayor Declares Motorization of Apparatus Move in Right Direction.

COST UNDECIDED

After a conference today, City Treasurer James Bell and Fire Chief John Alken reported that it would be possible to show a surplus of about $600 and maintain the fire department quite efficiently until the end of the year. Mayor Wenig stated that this makes the fourth city department to give indication of ability to conclude the year within or at the estimated expenditure.

Both Chief Alken and the mayor, however, are anxious to complete the motorization of the department, and the retirement of the four remaining horses. The chief is willing to leave until next year the purchase of certain necessities.

In order to effect complete motorization, however, an over-draft would be required, as the present estimate, surplus would be inadequate for the purpose. If the motorization can be accomplished within the present estimate, the mayor would not object to an overdraft, he states. It would be only good business in such an instance.

To undertake the job, however, would require a sum which varies from $600 to $4,000, all hinges upon the success of the present estimate. The mayor would not object to the purchase of new equipment or the rehabilitation of old.

WOMEN'S SOCIETY RENAMES OFFICERS FOR COING YEAR

Methodist Missionary Organization of London District Meets at Belmont.

The officers who have held their posts so splendidly during the past year were again elected at the annual convention of the Women's Missionary Societies of the London Methodist district, which was held this morning and afternoon at Belmont.

Mrs. W. G. Young is again district organizer; Miss Hawkin, secretary; and Mrs. F. J. Hutton, the assistant superintendent.

These officers were unanimously re-elected.

One of the most delightful incidents of the convention featured by splendid addresses and general feeling of enthusiasm for the work in already given by the state, Mrs. Boyd, of Waterloo street, the wife of the late Rev. George Boyd.

Twenty six years ago Mrs. Boyd was one of those who in China, organized the Women's Auxiliary at Belmont, and just the short talk she gave at the commencement of the Belmont Church in various ways expressed their appreciation of Mrs. Boyd's presence, and treated her with genuine affection and the deference due to a guest of honor.

The morning session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. Mr. Parnaby, of London, and the program included a brief review of the study-book by Mrs. J. S. Barnard of London.

Address of Welcome.
The luncheon served by the ladies of the Belmont congregation was a beautifully sociable affair. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. (Rev.) Parnaby, and Mrs. W. D. Adams of London replied for the visitors.

Mrs. Sutcliffe and Mrs. Cowie of Byron conducted the devotional exercises, which opened the afternoon session. Several splendid addresses were given. The address on "Japan" given by Miss Courtis, was most inspiring. Miss Courtis dealing particularly with the recent disaster and conditions of child-life in Japan.

A second missionary address on "China" was given by Miss Sparling, also experienced in work in the mission fields there. Miss Sparling mentioned particularly the regret felt by every mission worker in China, of the death of Miss Craig, well known among workers there, which took place a short time ago. Plans were already under way, she stated, for the suitable erection of a memorial building to Miss Craig.

Contributes Solo.
Three other splendid features on the afternoon program were given by Londoners. Mrs. A. J. McLean of Empress Avenue Methodist Church gave a brief but instructive talk on "How to Promote the Devotional Life of the Mission Band"; Mrs. Gordon spoke on the need of co-operation between the Mission Circle and Auxiliary; and a cleverly-executed playlet.

"Hanging Up the Sign," in which the mission theme is well developed, was presented by Mrs. Childs, of Askin street church, with the assistance of members of her junior mission circle group.

During the afternoon a delightful solo was contributed by Miss Irene Walls of Ilderton.

MEN'S CLUB.
Last night's meeting of the Men's Club of the Crayon Memorial Church was well attended. All interest at present is engrossed with the club's share in the jubilee bazaar which is being held shortly, this being the conducting of the "County Store" booth. Last night further plans were discussed relative to raising the amount of money the club has guaranteed the ladies of the congregation in its enterprise.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF THE ARMIISTICE

Arranged by the City Council.

Armistice Day Will Be Marked by Services of Thanksgiving.

ARRANGE PARADE

Because Armistice Day, Nov. 11, happens to come on Sunday this year the customary solemn religious services are being held in the city hall.

Local churches are planning to observe the day in fitting manner. Clergymen all over the city will deliver sermons dealing with the occasion, and many reminiscences of the war period will be heard in local churches. Some of the churches will be attended by members of the active and non-permanent militia.

Mr. Sanders denied that he had added to the contents of the soup pot in any way. He stated he had visited the cat on an inspection trip and in company with the Chinese proprietor inspected the ice box, which wasn't as clean as it might have been.

Cook Got Angry.
"I then started to look at the utensils on the cooking range," said Mr. Sanders, "and I found a piece of your old big nose out of the soup." He said if I didn't get out he would make me. He gave me a tirade of abuse and wanted to know my authority for being there.

"He said he didn't know my business and that I might be able to pull it over a Chinaman, but couldn't pull it over him, because he was a Canadian. I thought he was going to strike me and I moved away. I went back Wednesday with a police officer to his name."

Sergeant George Tomblin stated he went with Mr. Sanders to the cafe Wednesday and that Cartledge said he had told the inspector to keep his dirty nose out of the soup.

Cartledge, in telling his story to the court, stated he had worked at the cafe for three weeks. He didn't know Mr. Sanders when he came in. Destroyed the Soup.

"Mr. Sanders walked up to the range and stuck his nose down over the soup," declared the defendant. "It was a cold morning if you will remember, and drops fell from his nose onto the soup. I told him to keep his nose out of it and he told me he had the whole city hall and the government behind him and could make the water drive out of the pot. I told him he couldn't."

"I threw out the whole four gallons of soup because I don't think it was fit to serve," continued the chef. "The inspector came in Wednesday morning with an officer and I told him the case. If he didn't civilize the officer what he had done, I told him he couldn't."

Fergus Murphy, appearing for Cartledge, submitted there was not enough evidence for a conviction against his client, but the court differed although it was not a serious case of abuse.

Cartledge, who was fined $10, wanted to be able to go through that cafe in peace, declared Mr. Sanders. "All right," said the magistrate in dictating the fine, "but if you will be brought back and fined."

NEW C.N.R. FREIGHT CARS TO CARRY 61 TONS OF GRAIN

Canadian Press Despatch.
Monday, Oct. 25.—To aid in the rapid movement of grain from the Lake ports to Montreal, St. John and Halifax, the Canadian National Railways are now placing in service 61 new freight cars of a new type.

By means of special axle design, and improvements in the general design of the car itself, these new cars will be able to carry 61 tons, or more than 2,000 bushels of grain each. This marks a considerable advance on the average type of box car, whose loading capacity is, with new axle design, about 46 tons, or approximately 1,500 bushels of grain.

ANOTHER DELEGATION MAY MAKE TORONTO TRIP

There is a strong possibility that others may journey to Toronto Tuesday next when the Ontario cabinet hears the street railway situation presented by Sir Adam Beck and the railway authorities. Mayor Wenig is now considering whether it will not be fitting if he also attended with other members of the council.

He has made no decision, however, and in the meanwhile it is more than likely that the street railway issue will receive a local airing Monday night.

Sanitary Inspector and Chef Figure In Police Court Case

That Inspector Sanders "Added To" Contents of Hotel Soup Pot Is Defence of Cook Charged With Abusive Language.

Robert Cartledge, chef at the Belvedere Cafe, grew rather peeved when Sanitary Inspector Richard Sanders walked into the chef's domain last Monday and drew up close to the four-gallon pot of soup being prepared for hungry diners at the 2000 hour. In fact, Mr. Cartledge handed out some rather warm and pointed language to Mr. Sanders, which resulted in the chef's appearance in police court on a charge of abusive language. The case was finally dismissed.

According to the evidence of Cartledge it was a cold morning and little "drops" were falling from the proboscis of the inspector. The chef alleged that Mr. Sanders, in his examination of the soup, stepped close and used abusive language. The soup was thinned by several drops from the nose of the inspector, causing remarks from the cook that were hardly gentlemanly.

Mr. Sanders denied that he had added to the contents of the soup pot in any way. He stated he had visited the cat on an inspection trip and in company with the Chinese proprietor inspected the ice box, which wasn't as clean as it might have been.

Cook Got Angry.
"I then started to look at the utensils on the cooking range," said Mr. Sanders, "and I found a piece of your old big nose out of the soup." He said if I didn't get out he would make me. He gave me a tirade of abuse and wanted to know my authority for being there.

NOTED SOLDIER AND ACTOR GUESTS OF KIWANIS CLUB

Major-General Archie McDonald, head of the Royal Military College, Kingston, will be a guest of honor and speaker at the Kiwanis Club luncheon today. Lionel Atwill, brilliant actor, now playing at the Grand, will be a guest of honor also. High school cadets, numbering 50, who are entered in the shooting competition, will be present.

CRONYN CHURCH BAZAAR OPENS IN PARISH HALL

Cronyn Memorial Church, Jubilee Bazaar, which is to celebrate the anniversary of the church on a worthy scale, both in the variety of things offered for sale and in the indefatigable efforts of members of the congregation to make it a real jubilee, opened at noon in the parish hall on William street and Queen's avenue. The bazaar will open again tomorrow at 1 o'clock and continue until the same hour.

Of special interest to brides is the very fine selection of hand-embroidered linens and lingerie, and there is, as well, an exhibition of dolls that will be sure to catch the eager eye of all the children, whose mothers take them to the hall. Some of these dolls are being shown in London for the first time, since their importation from the United States.

There are booths of underwear, brocade sweaters, booths of nursery fittings, booths of teddy bears, and a host of interesting displays that will amply repay a visit. For instance, there is a booth of the most gorgeous quilts, and then there is another of plainer and more serviceable ones, the kind to put on little Willie's bed and the sort he can't destroy.

There will be afternoon tea from 3 to 4 o'clock after afternoon.

DECLARES NEW DRILLING PLAN

W. C. Curd, Engineering Expert, States System Makes For Rapid Work.

PREVENTS CAVE-IN

W. C. Curd, Chicago engineering expert, who is conducting a series of drilling tests in London to obtain information regarding the city's water supply, commenced operations again this morning after drilling more than 80 feet yesterday on property near Pottersburg.

Mr. Curd's method of drilling, technically termed "jetting," is a new system of well drilling introduced into Canada only recently. Although the system has been used extensively in the United States to make rapid drillings for survey purposes, this is the first time the method has been used in this district. Yesterday in a few hours Mr. Curd drilled deeper than 85 feet. He expects to drill another 40 feet today, and it is expected that at that depth, the location at Pottersburg will be abandoned.

Look to Future.
With an increase in the city's population, increase in water supply becomes a necessity. It is with an eye to the future that the Public Utilities Commission has carried on the drilling operations in and near London. At the completion of several test drillings in different localities of the city, Mr. Curd will submit a report to the waterworks department on water conditions and prospects for the future.

Mr. Curd's method of drilling, although not as thorough as the general method, is a simple one. At the commencement of his drilling operation yesterday Mr. Curd inserted a ten-foot narrow pipe into the ground. The water drive was attached to the end. A stream of muddy water was pumped through the pipe. Ten-foot sections of pipe were attached as the drilling proceeded.

Forms Bank of Mud.
Mr. Curd said this morning that the muddy water was injected into the hole so that a bank of mud can be formed, and the water can be drawn from the hole. Mr. Curd's theory that a water formation can be best penetrated by water and for this reason he contended the water drive method was generally more successful than the

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1923.

The Day's Biggest News.

The biggest piece of news today is that United States is willing to take a seat at a conference with European nations to see what can be done to save Europe from an economic disaster.

It is not only the biggest news, but the best news.

United States does not commit itself to any great extent. The message accepting the invitation of Premier Baldwin is written in guarded terms that express the temerity the nation feels in moving even a short distance from its beaten path of splendid isolation.

The frank manner in which Britain discusses the matter will produce more results than any other method. Premier Baldwin was frank to the point of offending some of the French diplomats when he addressed Britain's reply on the matter of Ruhr operations.

Lloyd George, in his United States tour, has been equally frank in telling United States that she could not, with her wealth, strength and influence, stand to one side while Europe perished.

The matter immediately under discussion is Germany's ability or inability to pay her war debts. The thing runs in a circle. Germany owes France, Britain and the rest of the Allies large sums of money; her financial system has been riddled and exploited until her currency quotations are reckoned in terms of white paper alone. Britain, France and Italy, in turn, owe United States billions of dollars, and United States has come forward with a plan to pay pound for pound for everything she owes. It is for that reason alone, if for no other, that she is qualified to address United States on the subject of a conference where the method of German payment can be discussed. Had Britain flunked the question, she could not have spoken.

The Allies owe United States the following amounts, reckoned in dollars:

Great Britain$4,166,318,358
France3,358,104,083
Italy1,648,034,050
United States has a great deal at stake. She should be interested in listening to any plan whereby a movement toward repayment can be started. If Germany pays France, France can pay Britain; or if a basis of working can be arranged Germany could also start to pay Britain, for they both owe her money. Britain could then, with less of a crushing burden on her resources, go on with the payments she has already started to make to United States. The big thing is to get the work started.

To assist in the rebuilding of a financial fabric in Europe to make this possible, United States might be asked for a large loan. This would put her in the favorable condition of being able to dictate the terms on which this would be granted, and it is not out of reason to suppose that one of the stipulations would be that the powers cease the building of navies and the piling up of armament, which has been a tap on their vitality that has crushed useful and sane development in other lines. In making such a stipulation United States would, of course, be a party to it. The world must get the smell of gun powder out of its nose.

It looks like a big event, big enough to drive serious people to their knees in prayer that it may be a success.

Can Jump On Them.

Sir Adam Beck's horses cleaned up in jumping competitions at big U. S. centers.

Sir Adam has been showing the Chicago sewer canal people that he can do a bit of high jumping himself when Canada's water levels are at stake.

The Problem of the Farm.

To what extent can more farmers be classed as competitors of those already on the land?

This question comes because a number of representative agriculturalists who have been discussing their problems through the columns of The Advertiser express the view that putting more farmers on the land is going to make more produce to compete for the available market.

If Canada were growing for a world market, that feeling might not be so acute, but there is not a world market today. Half the world is bankrupt, and cannot buy from us. That backs the produce into the home market, and keeps it there. Liverpool becomes a positive market instead of a clearing house.

Put it another way. If Western

Ontario were to double its production of pork, cattle, wheat, oats, etc., what would happen? The people here could not consume any more than they do now; therefore there would be more offered to each purchaser. It would tend to beat down prices.

We realize this is not a popular theory for the man who likes to speak of national greatness in terms of millions of bushels, regardless of profits to those who produce them.

One farmer, in a letter to this paper, notes that nearly any meeting called in a city can pass a resolution and hold up both hands for more immigrants and more wheat and cattle growers to compete with those now in the business. He says these same meetings never pass resolutions urging a half dozen more factories to start to make agricultural implements, boots and shoes or clothing.

Another correspondent points out that with all the people leaving the farms in Ontario there is still plenty produced to feed the population. He asks in what line there is a shortage, and offers to at once go into the production of that commodity.

These questions are easier to forget or brush to one side than to answer. Going back a few steps, one is forced to the opinion that the world is not a very big place. Reeve Thomas Elliot, of West Williams, pointed that out in his discussion on farm conditions. The markets of Europe that used to compete for our produce do not do so now because their money is not worth anything. That makes one big outlet largely closed off. The market to the south is tariffed off, and when we had a chance in 1911 to bargain for access to that market we turned it down. Today the farm populace finds itself faced with a combination of world affairs and our own inability to enter into larger markets when the opportunity offered. The home market is today the most certain outlet the producer has, and it will remain so until considerable progress has been made toward European recovery.

London's Mayors.

Is there anything obligatory about a second term for mayor, is the query of a reader.

There is nothing whatever to guarantee a second term, nor is there anything to preclude it. It is custom, and the custom is good or bad depending on the calibre of the mayor.

London has had 22 mayors who have had a two-year term or more. They can be listed as follows:

Four years: Frank E. Cornish, 1861-62-63-64.

Three years: David Glass, 1858, 1865, 1866; John Campbell, 1872, 1880, 1881; George Taylor, 1889, 1890, 1891; John W. Little, 1895-96-97; Adam Beck, 1902-03-04; C. M. R. Graham, 1912-13-14; Hugh A. Stevenson, 1915-16-17.

Two years: S. H. Graydon, 1869-70; Benjamin Cronyn, 1874-75; Robert Lewis, 1878-79; E. Meredith, 1882-83; James Cowan, 1887-88; E. T. Essery, 1893-94; John D. Wilson, 1898-99; Frederick Rumball, 1900-01; Joseph C. Judd, 1906-07; Samuel Stevely, 1908-09; J. H. A. Beattie, 1910-11; C. R. Somerville, 1918-19; E. S. Little, 1920-21.

One year: Murray Anderson, 1855; William Baker, 1856; F. Leonard, 1857; William McBride, 1859; James Moffatt, 1860; Frank Smith, 1867; W. Simpson Smith, 1868; John Christie, 1869; J. M. Cousins, 1871; A. McCormick, 1873; D. C. McDonald, 1876; Robert Pritchard, 1877; C. S. Hyman, 1884; Henry Beecher, 1885; T. H. Hodgins, 1886; W. M. Spencer, 1892; C. T. Campbell, 1905; J. Cameron Wilson, 1922; George Wenige with one year, and a candidate for 1924.

Note and Comment.

Up to date 17 citizens have denied that they are going to run for mayor of London.

The season is here when men take guns and invade the northern woods. Here's hoping they may all be delivered from the guns of their friends.

Hon. Frank Oliver's first act on the railway board was to disagree with the first finding. A man who knows enough to disagree sometimes is a valuable member.

When that European conference takes place let it be around a pine table with no secret pigeonholes. Likewise ask the reporters to come in and sit down so that the world may attend the gathering.

The visit of Dr. Campbell Morgan to London during the week has been a big event in the religious life of London. He has not proclaimed a new 1923 gospel, but he has taken the old gospel and shown how well it can measure up to the needs of 1923 people.

The Saskatchewan government was told to keep its hands off the wheat pool. It did. Now it is being scored in certain quarters because of its non-participation. The Regina Leader regards it as a case where the government "is damned if it does and damned if it doesn't."

DIBS AND DABS

BY HARRY MOYER

As the Farmer Sees It

A farmer who resides near Appin discusses farm problems in an interesting way with The Advertiser.

Reveals that his name be not used. He agrees with figures used by Prof. Reynolds, of the O. A. C., on his visit to London, but cannot see how a restricted production plan would work out, because nature is a fickle partner, and some year might even see fit to diminish a crop when planned to be small in the first place. He also contends that the majority of farmers want to make their land yield as much as possible, and holds to the view that this is right and proper.

Our Appin friend has been busy picking and packing apples, but between barrels has found time to write:

"In packing my apples I am given an object lesson of some factors influencing agricultural production, viz., that we have so much to contend with in nature because of conditions really created through modern farming and disturbing nature's balance that results are very uncertain."

"I had thought along the same line as Prof. Reynolds up to a certain point. My own accounts of 1924 and prior, and 1921 and 1922, show me just the same facts in my own experience as to the purchasing power of my crops. I have not reached the same conclusion, that the farmer should withdraw himself into his shell, but this is possible when a co-operation that could limit production to the point of barely satisfying the necessities of our people could be practiced. This would lead to a demand for ultra-protection to farm products, etc. But there are two or three factors which are involved here. First, nature does not always respond. Often when we tamper with her she goes one better, and when we try to limit production, steps in and limits it further. Then many farmers watch their neighbors in cropping and follow the old mandate, 'When the other fellow runs I walk.' In other words, if Jones and all his neighbors and farmers 'other' neighbors, etc., are planting heavily to potatoes, or going heavily into hog production because either are a good price, Brown turns to something else. He sows his cheap grain. It might have been better if all these had co-operated to plant a limited acreage, or produce a limited number of hogs, and trust to the beneficence of nature. But farming is not wrought that way."

Then another factor is this, that a large percentage of Ontario farmers are good farmers, who aim to produce all they can for the labor they have or expect to have available, and no man sows with the expectation of a half crop.

Here are some of the large problems involved in agricultural production and marketing today and all affect the price received for farm products, and to a large extent influence the prices paid for what is purchased.

Transportation—particularly in relation to labor costs involved; inability of European markets to purchase our foodstuffs and manufacturers—Germany must increase her imports of food products alone by 75 per cent before she can begin to pay her reparations bills; competition of the eight and nine-hour day with the farmer's day; increasing production of Western Canada in dairy and poultry output.

The advent of the automobile also seriously influences these conditions. If one compares conditions today with those of ten years ago, we can see in this development a factor too lightly counted. I do not mean that farmers should not drive cars. They require them as much as any other class. But transportation is a cheapened thereby. Not only is the horse breeding industry given a comparatively lower place in agriculture; as the result of the average upkeep of cars is no inconsiderable item and the indirect charges which come because of the automobile cannot be afforded to the farmer. The investment in transportation in Canada has increased to such a degree that it is sought to calculate the interest and depreciation return in this item we would be astonished, and someone must pay in from productive industry.

"I have no definite solution of the problem. If I had I would be a prophet, and I would be paid for it. From the present viewpoint it looks as though financial necessities are driving to the background the sentiment that was the strength of our life. If this is so, conditions are serious."

DAY DREAMING ABOUT OURSELVES.

I will meditate in thy precepts and have respect unto thy ways.—Psalm 119.

Our dreams of the future are too much like the modern stage, full of elaborate scenery and machinery, crowded with startling effects and brilliant costumes and magical transformations, but strangely vacant of all real characters.

The stuff of which our day dreams are made is for the most part of very cheap material, woven into the threads of our innermost spiritual life. We fancy ourselves going through the various experiences of life, a fortunate marriage, a successful business career, a literary triumph, a political victory.

But we do not stay to ask what manner of men and women we shall be when we are living here or there, or doing thus or so. We seldom weave into these more important questions than the thousand and one trifling interrogatories about the future with which we amuse our idle hours.

We are on a path which leads upward, by sure and steady steps, when we begin to look at our future selves with eyes of noble and clear purpose, and see our figures climbing, with patient, dauntless effort, toward the heights of true manhood and womanhood.

Visions like these are Joseph's dreams. The very memory of them, if we cherish it, is a power of pure restraint and generous inspiration.

Your Health: What To Do For Cramps Caused by Wrong Eating

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
"Cramps in the stomach" are as painful as they are mentally disturbing. The agony is so great that the victim fears he will surely die.

Whenever there is trouble with an organ of the body contained within one of the great cavities—skull, chest or abdomen—there is great alarm because of the popular fear of hidden things. There is no mystery about the pain of a crushed foot or of a smashed finger. But when brain, heart or abdomen appears to be the seat of sudden disease, it excites everybody, because the significance of the attack is not understood. It may mean something terrible, an operation perhaps, and it may be fatal.

Everybody understands, too, that any disturbance involving what we commonly speak of as the "vital organs" is particularly dangerous, because life itself depends on their unflinching action. Therefore, the sudden onset of sharp, cutting, knife-like pain in any one of these organs is alarming.

Abdominal cramps are exceedingly painful. The severe gripping pain produces all the terrible symptoms. But just now I am referring to the uncomfortable cramps which follow indiscretions in eating. Such an attack is apt to be precipitated by exposure to cold or wet after the wrong eating has taken place.

Cramps or colic may come from drinking a lot of cold fluids, or water, lemonade, ginger ale—any beverage if taken ice-cold and in quantities may bring on these uncomfortable symptoms.

Most persons are more or less constipated. If these are unfortunate enough to get hold of some spoiled or infected food, severe cramps may ensue. The irritated intestines, in attempting to expel their contents, move the hard mass so rapidly that severe suffering results.

In hasty or improper feeding of infants cramps are not uncommon. Nervousness or hysteria on the part of the mother may show itself in the baby in the form of colic.

In treating colic it is important to empty the bowel. Castor oil or—ous—and they are in many cases, adjustments are, however, I believe, in the process of making. I see many young men and many older—going to the towns and cities. Said to the large centers are growing larger; but these men are seeking the larger wages that cannot be afforded in rural Ontario, or that many of its farmers do not afford. They are removed from the agricultural producers of the province and become consumers, some in an outside market not open to us for many commodities. Many are leaving the poor farms which can only pay an adequate return through dairy or sheep crop farming, and it looks as though this process will continue until the farmers of old Ontario, unless it be the cattlemen, will call for a protective tariff on their products "as high as Haman's gallows."

WINTER — ALGONQUIN PARK. Algonquin Park of Ontario has become one of the most popular winter playgrounds, and lovers of winter sports will be glad to learn that the Canadian National Railways have decided that the Highland Inn, the largest of the Park Hotels, will be open for the reception of guests from December 15, 1923, until March 15, 1924. THE MURRELL VERDICT. (From the Sarnia Canadian Observer.) People who have reposed unwavering confidence in the jury system of trial in Canada are shocked at the outcome of the Murrell case at London. The jury failed to agree, and consequently Murrell and Williams will have to have a new trial.

Murrell and Williams were caught in the act of robbing the branch of the Home Bank at Melbourne, Ont. A posse of citizens surrounded the bank, and one of their number was shot and killed in the encounter with the bandits. The two Murrells and Williams were captured and tied up to telephone poles, while one of the quartet, Pat Norton, escaped and has not been arrested. Later on the Murrells escaped from jail, and Sid Murrell was only recaptured last spring in California. His brother is still at large.

The inexplicable circumstance in connection with the jury's disagreement is the attitude of those who held out for acquittal. The defense was based on an assumption that the shot might have been fired by one of the posse. Even if this grotesque contention was correct, does it remove the complexity of these bandits in the slaughter of a law-abiding citizen. The criminal code fixes their responsibility for the murder of the victim just as definitely whether or not they actually fired the fatal bullet. They were caught robbing a bank and they are saddled with the whole responsibility of what happened in connection with that incident.

Jury men who fail to come to a reasonable verdict in a trial of this kind are taking a step that may lead to serious consequences to the whole fabric of law and order in Canada. In this crowd of citizens that surrounded the bandits at Melbourne were some who advocated a lynching right on the spot. Less impulsive citizens pointed out to these that justice in Canada had always been certain and impartial. The outcome of the trial, however, is such as to give a deplorable impetus to the instinct that prompts mob retribution.

THE END OF JUSTICE. (From the Chesley Enterprise) We were shocked at the result of the murder trial just concluded in London. The charge of Justice Wright was clear and definite and yet the jury disagreed. Four jurymen stood out against bringing in a verdict of guilty against Williams and Murrell. It will now be necessary to have a new trial with a new jury. It was not circumstantial evidence in the Murrell case. Slim Williams' evidence that Pat Norton, one of the four bank bandits who is still at large, had a revolver of the same calibre as Murrell's, seems to have influenced some of the jurors. Robbers who go into a bank armed will take the lives of those who oppose their purpose of taking money and the man who stands guard while the shooting and robbing goes on is equally guilty with those who fire the fatal shots. With the disagreement of the jury at the first trial the chances of Williams and Murrell being improved and we are not surprised they were delighted with the clever work of the lawyer who saved them. Evidence as well as the judge's charge was strongly against the prisoners and it does look as though the ends of justice were not served by the jury in this case.

COLLEGIATE HOME WORK. Editor of The Advertiser: Sir—Is there no regulation covering the amount of homework that can be given to a pupil in the colleges of this city?

The children have a number of teachers in the course of the day, each with a different subject, and each of these will give a certain amount of homework in his or her special line.

That in itself is all right, if the teachers had a sense of proportion, but it is all wrong because some of them seem to lack that fine sense. They fail to see what is the aggregate that has been given to a child to carry home to do. In our own house it often takes two and a half hours to finish up the home work that has been given, and that is too long.

Where there are several teachers giving home work to the same pupil it should be made a rule that none of the mbe allowed to give more than would take a period of 20 minutes. Then there would be no trouble.

In the first place they made a bargain with the McCormick people and the others out there. The fact that it was a good bargain or a bad bargain does not seem to have concerned the city council until within a year or so of the time when it runs out. Then they make the startling discovery that it was a bad bargain. That discovery does not take the city's signature off that document, nor does it change any of the conditions. The city has for years worked on the basis of that agreement, and has accepted taxes from the east end on that basis. Is it to be supposed that the city of London wants to go back on its agreement?

What is more, London got a factory out of this deal that is one of the biggest advertisements the city has. There is nothing in the country that can equal the appearance of the McCormick plant as it stands out there. If it were in some other city I suppose we would have a delegation running off to see them to interest them in pulling up and coming to London.

OCTOBER REFLECTIONS.

When Nature's clad in golden robes It's nae o' love that poets dream; Yet, Autumn wi' her beauty rare Gives ilka bard a timely theme: We're apt tae think o' maple leaves That noo are nae sae bonnie green; For frosts, instead o' gentle dew, Ha'e ca'd tae see them ilka een.

Tho' there is beauty a' about, A tear o' sadness dims oor e'e; For ilka leaf an' flowerlet fair Hears noo a ca' tae wilt an' dee. Yeon leaves which eadly flutter down Tell ilka mortal o' his doom; They speak tae men, wha've sense tae hear, About a near an' silent tomb.

Then, spirits o' oor sainted bards, This humble soul o' mine inspires, Thae I, on this October day, May braive tae my dearie lyre! Gie tae my lips thy magic tongue, Then I shall ha'e a sonnet sweet, That folk wha ken that life is brief In gloomy vales shall cease tae greet.

Ye spirits noo I hear thee speak, Tho' nae a form I see ava; Ye whisper, 'Tis nae sae far awa; Tae endless glory far awa; Frae sorrow, sin, an' grief, Frae wearie yin frae life's steep path, Is welcomed as a sweet relief.

Ye Scottish bards, tae glory gane, Whase spirits noo my heart inspire, Ye'll no' ha'e a discordant note Noo that aboon ye tune yer lyre! O better far in realms o' bliss Yer harp will ne'er be o'er o' tune! Then, Scots! What joys for ye await Wha'll hear yer native bards aboon.—Mack.

Order Books for Present Model Ford Closed Cars Will Close November 1st

When this organization decided, September 20th, to bring out the four-door Sedan and redesigned Coupe models, we had on hand approximately 4000 present type bodies.

To ascertain how the buying public would react on Ford car priced hereafter recommended, we reduced each closed model $100, in price—the Coupe to $2995, the Sedan to $2845, both F.O.B. York, Ontario (Government Taxes extra).

The response has been such that we have on hand now only 600 of these models to dispose of. This demand is evidence that the public appreciates value, and we take this opportunity of thanking you, and through you, the public is appreciation of their action.

In view of our appreciation, and in order that you may play entirely fair with the Ford buying public, it is advisable to inform you that at the present rate it is a matter of days before all these jobs will be completely disposed of to dealers. In any event, we will not be able to maintain orders from dealers on or after November 1st. On that date we will close our books. We reserve the right to do this earlier, if necessary.

If you have any orders you wish to deliver to the public after November 1st, it will be necessary for you to place them with us before November 1st.

All orders should, therefore, be taken by you with no obligation to deliver except as prior orders permit.

We must protect ourselves in the same way — we can deliver your orders placed with us only as prior orders permit and as long as the above number of cars last.

Yours very truly,
FORD MOTOR COMPANY OF CANADA, Limited,
Sales Manager.

The information in this letter should be known to every prospective Ford buyer. It opens up an opportunity for the family without a closed car to get one at prices which will probably not be as low again.

This is an opportunity for the man with a large car to relieve the larger car and decrease its depreciation, especially during the coming winter months.

Meat Flavors. Great economy is possible when the art of using meat for flavor both the fat and the lean of the meat—and the blending of the meats, one with another, with vegetables, is understood. This art can mainly be learned through the making of stews, but can be applied in many dishes and in preparing the finest set-up meats put on any table.

The selection of each meat has a decided flavor of its own, than which nothing can be made more hateful by cooking, and then which nothing can be more worth while as food when its worth and attractiveness is brought out. Treatment and seasonings turn the trick, and the first item is cleanliness and the trimming off of any weathered or rancid edges.

The seasoning of meats by fire is something to learn by long study.

It is not generally known that the Grand March in act II of "Tannhauser" was improvised by Wagner in a cab, and not at first meant for the famous opera at all, but a greeting to a German prince.

A Comfortable Mattress Better Than a Fine Bed

The Guest's Bedroom Should Above All Else Be Conducive to Repose.

Julia Hoyt.

Although the furnishings of the entire house or apartment may be indicative of a woman's personality, no room presents quite so many excellent opportunities for such expression as her own bedroom. It may be planned along any one of a score of lines. The guest-room, however, is quite a different proposition. In furnishing this, we should conform to certain rather definite and well-known rules. Of course, the principal thing to be borne in mind when furnishing a guestroom is the guest's comfort.

If possible, it is well to arrange the bed so that it will not face the windows and, of course, to provide dark shades for the windows, for many people are unable to sleep in a bright room. What leaves a more unfavorable impression of a visit in a guest's mind than an uncomfortable night? Remember, too, the importance of a good light beside or over the dressing table. A bedside table is almost a necessity in a guestroom, and it should be equipped with lamp, matches, ash tray, possibly some cigarettes, and a tray containing a pitcher of water and glass. The thermos water-jar solves the problem nicely, especially in summer, for the water is sure to remain cold. Just now one can get such pretty thermos pitchers, and when selected with an eye to the color scheme of the room they are not only useful but decorative.

Never a Cheap Mattress. Comfort in rest is vital to health. It seems to me that the poorest economy in the world is a cheap mattress. A really good one, although rather costly, just immeasurably longer and makes all the difference in the comfort of one's guest. I think it a good plan when furnishing a bedroom to buy a good mattress and springs before there is a possibility of being first tempted by some alluring bit of furniture or lovely piece of chintz, whose cost necessitates the purchase of a cheap mattress.

If there is space for it, it is pleasant, but not essential, to have a small desk in the guestroom. This, of course, should be equipped with stationery, ink, stamps, pens and blotter. The thought that a hostess gives to the comfort of her guests is as sure an indication of her character as the guest's consideration of her hostess.

Since so many of us are forced to live in tiny quarters these days, a word about the day bed cannot be amiss here. For the woman who cannot afford the extra room usually devoted to the overnight guest, the day bed really solves the problem. A good design should be selected, so that the day bed may be gotten later on if one so desires. Placed in the living-room, it cannot but add charm to the room, and its service as a lounge during the day and a comfortable bed at night makes it a worthy adjunct to any abode.

The Day Bed. Then, too, for the professional woman who lives in one room, who must use that room as living quarters during the day and a bedroom at night, the day bed again solves the problem. There is something so trim and charming about this type of bed that I wish more people would consider it as a substitute not only for sofas and couches, but for the usually rather ugly twin beds.

Of course, a great many women use their bedrooms merely for sleeping and dressing rooms, while others prefer to make of it a sort of second living room. Naturally, the size of the room has much to do with this arrangement; so have its cheerfulness and the amount of light it can boast. I happen to be one of those who love to make use of my bedroom as a workroom, consequently I am in it a great deal.

On a week-end party recently I saw an ideal bedroom. It was an L-shaped room, with a large fireplace across the long end. My hostess had placed her bed in the short end of the room and opposite it her dressing table. By this arrangement she could see the fireplace from her bed, and the dressing table was kept quite apart from the rest of the apartment. Between the windows was placed her desk. Near the fireplace was a charming chaise longue, and beside it a little table bearing an exquisite lamp. On the other side of the fireplace was the most inviting large chair imaginable. The place breathed comfort, feminine charm and cheer. I could quite understand my friend's spending most of her spare time in her lovely living-room bedroom.

MARY GRANT SPEAKS TO BROUGHTDALE CLUB

Mothers Donate $10 Towards Baby Scale for Ryerson School Clinic.

"Municipal Affairs," was the subject of an interesting talk given by Miss Mary Grant, township clerk, at the meeting of the Broughtdale Mothers' Club held yesterday at the home of Mrs. O. Mooney, Richmond street. It was decided to donate $10.00 towards the baby scale for the clinic at Ryerson school.

An enjoyable program was presented including solos by Miss Helen Lindsay, and instrumental numbers by Miss Stella Mooney. At the conclusion of the meeting, a tempting lunch was served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. F. Dickerson and Mrs. C. S. Webber. The text meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Urrin, Empress avenue.

RYERSON CLUB HOLDS A SUCCESSFUL SALE

School Orchestra and Choir Renders an Interesting Program.

The Halloween tea and sale of home-cooking held in the Ryerson school auditorium, under the auspices of the Mothers' Club, was a most successful affair of this afternoon. Mrs. Arthur Kennedy, president, and Mrs. Frank Jones, convener, welcomed the many guests. Tempting home-cooking was offered for sale at the home-cooking stall, in charge of Mrs. Southern, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Welton and Mrs. George Peters.

A charming program was given during the afternoon by the school orchestra and choir, under the direction of Mr. Carr and Miss Muriel Lancaster. At the tea hour Mrs. W. A. Tanner, president of the Union Club, and Mrs. W. F. Marshall presided over the tea table attractively arranged with Halloween decorations. The assistants in the tea room included Mrs. J. G. Gammage, Mrs. Charles Moran and Mrs. Neville. The proceeds of the affair are in aid of the fund, for a new school piano.

Paris, Oct. 26.—Hosiery in pale beige tones has proved a favorite, practically ousting stockings in brighter and more decided tints. Often an all-black costume will be relieved today by beige stockings and gloves.

HAIR LOW ON NECK.

Paris, Oct. 26.—There is a tendency today to wear the hair very low on the neck. Sometimes the knot is almost down on the shoulders. With this effect goes a very plain arrangement in front, and just a little plain dab of hair over each ear.

ORIENTAL WRIST BAGS.

London, Oct. 26.—Wrist bags, finely

THE HIGH-NECKED BLOUSE.

London, Oct. 26.—Tailored suits have brought in the high-necked blouse. Its collar, though high and plain, is of soft crepe de chine. Usually a soft, flat bow is attached to the collar, although an Ascot tie of another shade is sometimes used.

NEW MOIRE VELVET.

New York, Oct. 26.—Among the new velvets shown here today is one which combines two or three phases of the season's styles. It is luxuriously black, it is that fashionable fabric—velvet—and it has quality enough, a definite moire effect.

MOTTOS ON HANDKERCHIEFS.

New York, Oct. 26.—One shop which specializes in unusual handkerchiefs, is showing some of these today with a little motto in French embroidered across one corner. The handkerchief, in linen of a bright color, should be worn so that the motto shows.

Western U. Is Confident of Win Tomorrow :: C.R.F. Crew Tackles Sarnia Confident

Western Crew Eager to Put Varsity Down In Cellar

Ferguson Will Be Back On Line—Varsity's Win in Toronto Was Lucky.

Despite the fact that there's nothing as sure as death to stay out of the cellar in tomorrow afternoon's struggle between Varsity and Western U. football crews, there'll be some of the season's best football displayed. Western U. beaten by Varsity in Toronto, were the victims of two bad breaks and trick plays, but otherwise were even up on the play with the Blue and White. Tomorrow's game should give Western a chance to undo these breaks and quit the season even with Varsity.

Western was without the services of Traynor or Paul, both senior men, an absence because of injuries. The latter is in good condition now and will be in the line tomorrow and his presence will materially strengthen the Purple and White.

Western, despite the fact that it started the season with practically a green team, has made a good showing. Next year the story should be different. It is believed that in future depend on sophomores and freshmen from the first of the season. Men in their senior year under present conditions are unable to turn out consistently either to work out or games and even less experienced men in the first year will produce better results than if seniors are partially dependent upon and are only able to turn out at intervals.

The student rooters have a new group of cheers and songs with which to hurl defiance and encouragement at the Blue and White. They have heard their part of the program and will be aided by the university band.

HOLD EARLY DRILL

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, Oct. 25.—After the junior team of the O. B. A. League this year. The junior team will be chosen from the following players: Brodie, West, Saunders, Rupp, Searle and Dawdy. The juvenile team will be picked from the following: West, Brodie, West, Cupples, Donaldson, Mitchell, Wilson and Whitcraft. Searle has assumed the duties of coach for both teams, the junior workouts being from 7 to 8 Monday and Tuesday and the juveniles from 8 to 9 Tuesday and Friday.

On Nov. 3, representatives from the different groups will assemble at Toronto to elect a new executive, and to appoint conveners for the different districts. Each convenor being responsible for drawing up the schedule for the district assigned to him, the appointing of referees and the starting of the district games. Although the local delegate has not been officially reported, it is expected that Dawdy will be selected. Coach Searle, Westrope and Mr. McKencher have also been suggested. Great hopes are entertained for the continued success of the juvenile team. Last year they made the trip through out competition to the finals, which they won from Toronto Young Men's Hebrew Association. The boys themselves are very anxious to get an exhibition game to try out the 1923 mettle.

YOUNG MONTREAL LOSES ON FOUL

Associated Press Despatch. New York, Oct. 25.—After two minutes of fighting, Larry Goldberg, Brooklyn bantamweight, won a decision as a result of a foul blow in the first round by a 12-round bout with Young Montreal of Providence, at the Sporting Club in Brooklyn tonight. Montreal caught Goldberg in the groin with a left hook, and after an examination by physicians the referee awarded the match to Goldberg.

INSTALLS CHOPPING MILL.

Special to The Advertiser.

Port Burwell, Oct. 25.—Since the old mill at the Little Otter was dismantled, Port Burwell chopping has been done at outside points. W. R. Kirk has installed a thirteen-inch chopper, which is expected to be in operation on Friday of this week.

Edmonton Girls Keep World Title

Canadian Press Despatch.

Edmonton, Oct. 25.—The Edmonton Commercial Graduates, world's women basketball champions, retained their title in the series with the National Lamp girls of Warren, Ohio, which concluded here tonight with an aggregate score of 62 points to 28. The champions won tonight's contest 27 to 13, and won on Tuesday night by 25 to 5.

"Hug" Satisfied With Champions

But Is After Southpaw, and Hittin' Fielder.

Special to The Advertiser.

New York, Oct. 25.—"One more left-hand pitcher and a right-handed hitting outfielder would help the team, but I am satisfied with the champions as they are now constituted," Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, said in discussing probable changes in the team.

Huggins intimated that the club had several deals in sight, but said that nothing would be done until the winter meetings in Chicago. It was intimated that the Yankees were still after Jake May, the Pacific Coast League southpaw, and that Elmer Smith, utility outfielder, might be used in a trade.

The Yankees' loss is going to remain here over Saturday to see the West Virginia-Penn State game, at which he will be the guest of "Hinky" Haines, former Penn State, and now utility outfielder with the Yankees. Huggins probably will return Sunday morning to Cincinnati, where his home town is getting ready to acclaim him.

Down the Line In All Sports

Sarnia will not have any alibis, they claim, after Saturday's game. Like Zev, the Sarnia team really ought to have been represented as breaking out into a rash. That would be something new in rugby alibis.

Edmonton Eskimos again demonstrated that their world's basketball title is not an empty one. The way the Arctic Circle girls are defending their laurels makes them all the more desirable—that is, the laurels. But, unless London gets some unity in girl basketball circles, there would be little excuse for sending any London team out west after that particular title.

After the exhibition of senior basketball put on here last season by West End "Y" and Alfie Gatscliffe's Windsor Dodgers, there is a ready-made patronage awaiting the senior O. B. A. game in London. But if London is to get into senior O. B. A., there's a stiff grind ahead and some talent seeking to be done.

Queen's University has resumed the agitation commenced last season for a revision of the rules governing the apportionment of box office receipts in the Intercollegiate Union.

The subject is discussed editorially by the Kingston Standard, which says:

"Sooner or later the Intercollegiate Football Union will be obliged to face the necessity of a fairer and more equitable apportionment of the receipts from the football games played by the three members of the union. Receipts from the football games played by the three members of the union, which has always been a good drawing card, and in the last two years has easily been the greatest drawing card of any team in Canada, should receive not a single cent from the games played in Toronto and Montreal in which Queen's participates, but must be content with the receipts from the home games.

"The only fair way to adjust a matter of this kind would be to give each visiting team, whether the play be in Toronto, Montreal or Kingston, 33-1/3 per cent of the receipts of each game, leaving the home team to take the balance. Even at that, Queen's would get the short end of the deal, but not quite so short as it gets now under the present arrangement, which should long ago have been done away with if a fair deal had been given her."

PLAN Y. MASQUERADE.

Special to The Advertiser.

St. Thomas, Oct. 25.—Everything is in readiness for the Halloween masquerade to be held at the Y. M. C. A. on Friday night, Oct. 26. The ladies of the junior auxiliary have a fine list of games and guessing contests arranged.

Billy has blonde hair, snapping black eyes and a peachy cream complexion. He speaks in a rich dialect which would make him a hit on any vaudeville stage.

He thinks that the great mistake made by English fighters is that they have visited this country is that they have completely abandoned their own methods of boxing, and attempted to mull "la la American."

"American boxers," says Billy, "have got a lot of stuff that is valuable to know, but our methods are not all bad, and what I've tried to do is to copy everything American that struck me as good, while holding on to certain English methods that cannot be beaten anywhere—straight-arm leads, for instance. Infighting is all right, it is fine, and I'll admit we know little about it over on the other side. But when you mix the two, as I have tried to do, then I think you'll get the best results."

Well's record shows Charley Harvey brought the boy to this country suggests that he has the right dope.

London South Collegiate Eleven Defeat East End 5-0 In "Wossa" Soccer Series

Last Year's City Champions Had Weight and Experience

Riddle Scored Four of Team's Goals Against East End C. I.

London South Collegiate demonstrated yesterday by defeating East End 5-0 in the first of the Wossa series soccer games that their debutants and veterans of last year, which gave them the city's collegiate title in a series with Central Collegiate, wasn't any accident.

The south sides yesterday were heavier and more experienced than the Eastern Collegians. Riddle, the center pivot of the London South attacking line, did the most of the scoring, scoring four of the team's goals on well-placed passes from Ferguson.

The east enders played better in the first half than they did in the second, but the London South attack was too strong for them. The winner of the local series meets St. Mary's, the winner of the St. Thomas Woodstock round.

The line-up:

East London C. I.—Nickle, goal; Packham and Pook, backs; Dockstader, Hancock and Bunkard, half-backs; Goldenburg, Carwell, Armstrong, Ross and Taylor, forwards.

South London C. I.—Hayson, goal; Bellotti and Sinclair, backs; Mason, Votlick and Chapman, half-backs; Riddle, McLean, Ferguson, Haddfield and Appleford, forwards.

Referee—Diamore.

YANKS WON TITLE, BETTORS LOST BET BY SIX PUT-OUTS

Foster Recalls Close Margin by Which Fluke Wagers Were Lost.

TWO SERIES TIED

By JOHN B. FOSTER. Copyright, 1923.

New York, Oct. 25.—It seems that some wagers were laid by baseball followers who are wicked enough to bet that the Giants would tie the world series with the Yankees. That meant that each team would win three games.

The seventh, of course, was not included in the bet.

It wasn't such a fool bet as it might appear on the surface, although perhaps most fans do not realize just how close those hardy wagers came to winning it. Technically, there were just six outs between the Giants and a tie.

When the eighth inning of the sixth game came, the Giants, who had won two to the Yankees three, were leading by a score of 4 to 1. So certain were those who had the business details of the clubs in hand that they had begun to announce where tickets for the seventh game could be found.

In the ordinary course of things, all that the Giants needed to do was to get Ward, Schang and Scott in the eighth and Fenwick, Witt and Dugan in the ninth. But it didn't turn out that way.

Only Once Before.

In no other world series has an actual tie of games come down to so narrow a margin as six put-outs, except in the 1912 series between the Giants and Boston, where with a tie score in the ninth of the eighth game, it was possible to win in any inning after that.

Twice, therefore, the Giants have had the series of 1923 being tied at three-all, that between Pittsburgh and Detroit in 1909, which Pittsburgh finally won, and that between the Giants and Boston in 1912, which Boston won.

There was a 4-2 series between the two New York clubs, a 4-2 between the White Sox and the Giants, and a 2-2 series between the Yankees and the Giants.

FUTURE IS DARK FOR EMPLOYEES OF HOME BANK

Many Shareholders as Well as Depositors Face Financial Ruin.

POSITIONS ARE LOST

While shareholders and depositors of the Home Bank have banded together to protect themselves, a small section of the community which has been harder hit than any other, claim they are not receiving the consideration they deserve. This class is composed of Home Bank employees. F. D. Finlayson, who is in control of the three local branches, declared this morning that former Home Bank men, particularly branch managers, were in desperate straits. Men who have given their lives to the bank's interests are literally thrown out on the streets. Some weeks ago a meeting of senior employees was held in Toronto. These organized a Home Bank Employees' Association, but the comparative smallness of their numbers renders them incapable of exercising any strong influence with other banks or the Canadian Bankers' Association in connection with securing other positions. W. W. Muir, former Londoner, who is secretary of the association in Toronto, promoted the employees' organization. Appeals were made to other chartered banks, but in almost every instance information was received that there was no room for senior men of the Home Bank.

Refused Positions.
The association, therefore, narrowed itself down to only men over 40 years, but even these were refused situations with other banks. By December they will be out of jobs and many may be destitute.

In almost every instance small branch managers have lost their savings through the Home Bank fiasco. Indeed, several were shareholders of the institution, and will doubtless be compelled to pay the double liability. In addition they have lost their savings, which they naturally placed with their own bank, and on top of this chapter of misfortunes they will now lose, or have lost, their jobs.

One former Home Bank manager stated today that he regretted the branch managers had not taken action a long time ago and demanded a government inspection of the Home Bank. He declared that every branch manager was suspicious regarding the manner of carrying on the bank's affairs at the head office, but no one had the courage to demand an investigation.

Stigma Attached.
"Mr. Muir of the Rensselaers branch is better posted on conditions in the head office, and we would have done well to send him there to stir things up," he said. "If Muir had been allowed to make an investigation on behalf of branch managers he would have made startling disclosures long before Home Bank's suspension was announced." He added that, with winter coming on, the chances of senior men being thrown on the streets were big. He denounced the attitude of other banks who would deny former Home Bank men a chance to make good. It seems that the stigma of the failure is somehow or other attached to the branch managers, through some miscarriage of justice. "We are in such a small minority that our voice carries little weight. We are the greatest sufferers of any class, yet we are too weak to protect ourselves," he stated. Senior Home Bank men, he pointed out, are not asking charity. They are all experienced members of the banking profession, and could be valuable acquisitions to any bank staff. "All we want is justice and fair play," he concluded.

FREE STATE GOVERNMENT DENIES PRISONERS FREED

Associated Press Despatch.
Dublin, Oct. 25.—The Free State government announces that no prisoners have been released in consequence of a hunger strike, and that none will be, although freedom might be granted on other grounds. At a meeting in O'Connell street last evening, Republican speakers claimed that 27 hunger strikers had been released Thursday.

HUNTERS ASSURED SUCCESS

It means much to prospective hunters, whether traveling in a party or alone, to be put in direct touch with the best local for their particular choice of game and with outfitters and guides at the going-in point with whom satisfactory arrangements can be made beforehand. A hunting trip cannot be other than successful under these conditions. The Canadian Pacific Railway offers this service to anyone who contemplates a hunting trip anywhere, either in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick or in the Rockies for mountain game. Any of its agents will gladly secure this information, or an inquiry addressed to W. Fulton, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, will be given immediate and careful attention. Folder, "Open Seasons For Hunting in Canada, 1923," will also be forwarded.—Advt. C9,11,16,18,23,25,30

STREET RAILWAY FIGHT TURNS ON FIVE-CENT FARE

This Point Hampering Negotiations Between City and Company.

CLAIMS OF RIVALS

When the late Drury administration granted the London Street Railway Company the right to impose a straight 5-cent fare, was it the intention of the provincial legislators that this would apply for all time, or until the expiration of the company's franchise in 1925? This is evidently the point now halting negotiations between Sir Adam Beck and the street railway authorities respecting a possible purchase price. Through the medium of the member for London and City Solicitor T. G. Meredith, the municipality of London is setting forth the claim that the Drury government did not intend that the legislation permitting the 5-cent fare would extend over the period of the franchise. The street railway has disputed this contention, submitting that the right to impose the increased fare should extend permanently, and what is rather important at this juncture, should be considered as an asset of the company whenever a purchase price is considered.

Consider it Tuesday.
At a special session of the Ontario cabinet council on Tuesday next, both parties will present their claims again, when Premier Ferguson and his ministers will lend their advice. The premier acknowledges that the government is not in any position, however, to enact legislation in time to interfere one way or the other in the actual purchase of the road. The people vote in December. The issue does not come until the new year, and the company must be notified in March that it is the intention of the city to take over their holdings the following year.

The street railway bill of 1922, whereby the increased fare was granted, reads: "Whereas, the London Street Railway has by petition represented that by reason of the increased cost of operation and maintenance, it cannot continue to operate and maintain the desired service at the rate of fare now in existence, the company may for its unexpired term of franchise charge a sum not exceeding five cents."

What Does "Unexpired" Mean?
It is upon this that the city is basing its claim, contending that the "unexpired term of its franchise" alludes to March, 1925—the term of its natural franchise—and not providing for any five-year extensions as provided in by-law 916, in the event that the city does not desire to buy the road. The city authorities argue that the Drury legislators would not have defined the termination of the franchise if it had been intended that the legislation was to be in force for years to come, or until possible repeal or revision again by the government or the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

The city reasons also that had it not been for the so-called "interference" of the last government, the company would have been practically bankrupt, which condition naturally would affect the purchase price when the city entered the market as a prospective purchaser.

Cut the Cost of Electric Lighting

There is a Lamp Suited to the Peculiar Needs of the Hydro System

Laboratory tests of different so-called "cheap lamps" divide the bulk of them into two classes. One type is fairly economical on power because it uses a thin filament, but the thin filament burns out easily and the life of the lamp is short. Frequent lamp replacements make dear service. The other type is built with a heavy filament that lasts quite a long time, but it takes a glutinous amount of power to make that heavy filament glow.

HYDRO QUALITY LAMPS

made to the specifications of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for use on the Hydro System of Ontario, combine power economy and long life in an unequalled degree. The 1,500-hour guarantee makes them far cheaper in the long run.

"1915"—TOLD BY WINSTON CHURCHILL

DEVELOP SMOKE SCREEN FOR USE ON WARSHIPS

Churchill Also Informed of Presence of Poison Gas, But Refrains From Discussing Its Use—Small Vessels Are Chosen To Carry Out Experiments—Lord D. Urges Use of Sulphur.

QUESTION TURNED OVER TO COL. HANKEY

By RIGHT HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL, C. H., FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY, 1911-1915.

In earlier chapters of his book, Mr. Churchill explained the leading part he took in the development of tanks while at the admiralty. What follows is an account of his efforts to bring smoke screens into general use. In this connection it is interesting to note that the idea of using poison gases was brought to his notice before it was employed by the Germans on the western front.

The enormous pressure of the war upon those engaged in conducting it made progress very slow, but on March 15 Colonel Hankey, who had been making himself some experiments, wrote to Lord D. that: "In connection with the Dardanelles operation it may be desirable in certain circumstances to produce a large smoke screen." I now found admiralty affairs directly affected, and on March 21 I ordered a strong technical committee on the subject to be formed under the presidency of Lord D. I made it clear, however, that we could not depart from the accepted laws of war.

Masterton-Smith to D. D. D.

"March 23, 1915. "Mr. Churchill asked me to write and confirm a decision already communicated to you by Colonel Hankey, that while the smoke experiments are to be continued, it is not intended to proceed with the more important proposal (i. e. experiments in noxious fumes). Mr. Churchill agrees that it would not be expedient to introduce into the war elements which might justify the enemy in having recourse to inhuman reprisals. At the same time, Mr. Churchill wishes me to convey to you his sense of deep obligation for the ungrudging manner in which you have placed at his disposal your exceptional knowledge."

I now kept in close touch with the work of the committee, but progress, even in the limited sphere to which we were confined by international law, was slow and fitful.

Churchill Orders Experiment.

"April, 1915. "We are simply pottering with this subject, which my reflections increasingly lead me to suppose is fraught with most hopeful possibilities, both as regards operations on land and especially at sea."

"Action must now proceed at once. Let the ten best recipes for smoke mixture be made up into large barrels or other receptacles, and let these be taken during this week to Eastchurch or the Isle of Grain, or some other convenient place, and have them lighted up one after another. I will endeavor myself to attend to witness the experiments."

"Let 15 or 20 suitable small craft be selected and the names submitted to form the home service smoke-burning flotilla. Let also 20 of those big Belgian canal barges be selected and prepared as destructible smoke-ships. Let all these vessels be filled with what is ascertained to be the best smoke mixture. Probably 5,000 or 6,000 tons of material will be required. Let tugs be ear-marked for service with these vessels when required. Let all preparations of vessels proceed in anticipation of the choice of smoke mixture and of the purchase of smoke material. Let small steamboats be ear-marked for attendance upon the flotilla when required.

"For land service let a lorry capable of being towed or pushed by an armored car be designed, on which a large smoke-burning furnace or kiln of iron can be turned off, so that this furnace should be capable of being immediately closed and the smoke cut off. Let proposals be put forward for obtaining 100 of these, by whatever means will least interfere with production for existing services. Make sure, however, that the naval part of this work is not delayed or impeded on account of the land part."

"W. S. C." "Mr. Churchill to Sir John French, April 10, 1915.

"I have seen some wonderful smoke-making experiments carried out by my directions. A light portable metal cone of the simplest construction 3 feet high and 6 feet wide at the base is fed by gravity at the base with benzol. The oil spreads over the surface of the cone, causing a dense smoke which you can turn off instantaneously by a tap on the fuel supply."

"I am developing this system for naval purposes, but my reflections lead me increasingly to believe in its importance in the kind of warfare you are now waging. If the wind were favorable, you could blanket off absolutely in a few minutes a whole sector of the enemy's artillery and rifle fire. You could use it to cut out a particular village or line of trenches till your men were actually upon them with the bayonet. Or you could cover the bringing up to the decisive point of a large mass of cavalry at the critical moment."

"I imagine the whole apparatus with smoke for two hours, capable of blanketing off half a mile of ground and putting a much wider area in haze, could be carried on a motor lorry; and if this were protected by a light plating it could run right up in advance of the troops to the required point."

"They showed me at Woolwich barrels of another mixture, solid, which they had prepared for the army in the field, but which had never been asked for. It made a fine smoke; but the new method is preferable because of its greater mobility and the power of turning it off and on at any moment. If you like, I can make an experimental outfit of one car and send it across for you to see."

On April 22, 1915, the Germans, violating the laws of war, made their first poison-gas attack, and the second battle of Ypres began. This crime and folly was destined in the end to expose them to severe retaliation from those who had the advantage of the prevailing winds, and the end of the superior science; but who had hitherto been restrained by respect for international usage from turning their favorable position to account.

Early in September, 1914, Lieutenant-General Lord D. D. D., the grandson of the famous Admiral Cochrane, spoke to Lord Kitchener of various plans left by his ancestor for making smoke screens, and also for driving an enemy from his position by means of noxious, though not necessarily deadly, fumes. "Lord Kitchener," he said, "I had better see Churchill and not mention us." I had served in Lord D. D. D.'s Brigade in South Africa during the relief of Ladysmith, and I at once made an appointment to receive him. I was immediately interested in his plan, and asked to see the plans of the illustrious Cochrane. Lord D. D. D. replied, after a few days' consideration, that he felt that the national emergency at least justified him in revealing the secret which he had guarded all his life, and in the middle of October he brought me the historic papers which once before, in the Crimean War, had been placed at the disposal of the British government. On the inner covering of the packet, in the delicate writing of the old admiral, were the words, "To the Imperial mind one sentence will suffice: All fortifications, especially those on the coast, can be under cover of a dense smoke be irresistibly subdued by fumes of sulphur kindled in masses to windward of their ramparts." The reader, captivated by the compliment, will no doubt rise to the occasion and grasp at once the significance of the idea. I sent for the first sea lord (Prince Louis of Battenberg) without delay, and we had a prolonged discussion.

I now cast about for means of exploring the subject without endangering its secrecy. In the first instance I had recourse to Sir Arthur Wilson, whose practical and inventive turn of mind seemed specially adapted to the task. The results were, however, negative.

Mr. Churchill to Lord D. D. D., "October 18, 1914. "Sir Arthur Wilson thought the scheme obsolete on account of modern conditions, and it was useless to pursue it with him. I do not share these views, and am considering how and when progress may be made. Meanwhile, your most interesting documents."

Lord D. D. D. to Mr. Churchill, "October 24, 1914. "The term 'obsolete' does not describe a novel departure. You, I know, place an accurate value on the criticism. I must trust that the secret will be maintained by the officers to whom you intrust it. I feel sure that you will help my wish to conduct land operations under the plan if agreed that the navy is out of it."

During the weeks that followed Lord D. D. D. continued to send me admirable suggestions, based on his grandfather's ideas, and I continued to endeavor to secure in secrecy powerful professional endorsement. For instance: Lord D. D. D. to Mr. Churchill, "October, 1914. "This method of warfare once divulged can of course be employed by any nation, but as far as it is possible to foresee, an island nation with the command of the sea need fear little, but on the contrary may gain much."

"Since these plans were invented by Admiral Lord D. D. D. in 1811 (two years after he had conducted the explosion and fire ships in Basque Roads), in India by Sir George Murray, in Australia by the United Cable Service.)

"The successful use of the plan above all depends on a favorable wind. The wind statistics from the coast of Holland to Berlin show that the wind from N.W. to S.E. is more prevalent than from the opposite or eastern section of the compass. Especially is this so during November, December, January and February."

"The vehicles with sulphur would be conducted and operated by men in gas-proof helmets. . . . The wind statistics from the coast of Holland to Berlin show that the wind from N.W. to S.E. is more prevalent than from the opposite or eastern section of the compass. Especially is this so during November, December, January and February."

"There can be no question but that Lord D. D. D. had grasped at this time the whole idea of gas and smoke warfare, and that he had derived it directly from the papers of his grandfather. To these concepts modern chemistry offered terrrible possibilities. The use of noxious or poisonous fumes was explicitly prohibited by international law. We could not, therefore, employ it ourselves unless the enemy himself began. But when from time to time amid the rush of the war, I turned my mind to this subject, and thought of German chemical science and German mentality, I became increasingly disquieted. It was very difficult to obtain any high military or naval assistance, and as I had not the life and strength to carry this additional load of thought myself, I turned to another quarter.

Mr. Churchill to Lord D. D. D., "After very careful consideration I think you should lay your grandfather's scheme before Colonel Hankey, the secretary of the committee of imperial defense. He has himself been pursuing considerable investigation in a similar though not identical direction."

"I notice also with some misgiving attempts by the German government to purchase sulphur on an exceptionally large scale."

PRIZE STOCK HERE OWNED BY ROYALTY

Sheep On Farm in Delaware Township Owned by the King.

One would presume that the Prince of Wales' ranch at High River, Alberta, is the only farm in Canada where stock belonging to his royal highness is raised. However, such is not the case, for a few miles from London, in Delaware Township, on the Belvoir farm, are two of the purest bred Shropshire sheep that the westerners were proud to boast of. The sheep were exhibited at the last Western Fair, coming direct from the prince's farm, and made such a favorable impression by their splendid showing that officials of the Belvoir farm purchased them for breeding purposes.

Col. Robert McEwen, well-known sheep breeder, as well as looking after these two valuable animals, has 15 Southdowns belonging to King George on the farm for breeding purposes. The Shropshires will be exhibited at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto and the Guelph Winter Fair.

ALLURING HATS FOR TEAS AND FURS

Just one hat dominates millinery in Paris and New York this season. It is the tiny cloche, which pulls snugly down over the new close-to-the-head coiffure, and forms a close little frame for vivid young faces. Fresh from the soft crinkly tissue paper which has so carefully guarded their loveliness are these delightful new models. There are bright little hats to wear with furs, and creations of fairylike daintiness for tea and dance hats.

A particularly attractive departure from unbroken lines is a little cloche of hatter's plush in wood brown. It varies from having no brim at all in the back to a narrow one in front, and soft little flares on the sides. Gold lace is softly frilled across the front, and caught in place with French flowers in autumn shades of jade and gold and brown, $12.00.

To match the Spanish lace shawls comes a dance hat of black velvet and Spanish lace which droops alluringly in veil fashion over the eyes. A tiny thread of gold is woven in and out around the brim, which is trimmed with a gay little spray of French flowers, $11.50.

Gold ribbon and French blue velvet plaited in bandeau fashion adorns a transparent hat of mairine and metallic lace in antique gold. It has a soft cap crown, a demurely drooping brim, and a tiny bow at the back, $13.50.

Of black mairine and velvet is a graceful hat. The crown is velvet and on the transparent brim are embroidery and touches of fur, $15.00. Equal attention has been paid to hats for the debutante daughter who fills from bridges to dances, and to her attractive mother who is presiding at the tea table.

The Tea We Have Sold for Years.

Before we offered this Tea to the public we established a quality standard for use in our dining-room. That quality has been maintained, and though there have been many advances in the cost, we have never changed the price, but the recent advance in tea takes it beyond the price we set some years ago, and we are forced to now make a slight advance. The price will now be 65c a pound. Half pound, 35c. Compare it with higher priced teas. Basement.
