Says the Record-Herald:

This week's issue of the Farmers' Advocate makes a strong plea for better dairying facilities at the fair, and says the lack of accommodation has been a standing reproach for years. What the Advocate thinks of the city council's obstruction is pretty plainly expressed in the following:

"Western Ontario agriculture sustains the city of London, and the Western Fair and dairying are two of its best allies. The Western Fair is admittedly one of the most successful Canadian exhibitions. management has spent on these grounds out of their own proms some $58,000 in recent years in permanent buildings. The Fair Association, not unreasonably, ask, before spending over $10,000 in erecting an absolutely necessary structure, that there be some assurance of permanence by a twenty-year extension of the lease of the fair grounds from the city. They are, unfortunately, at once met with a nagging policy of a short-termed lease, that threatens to completely block the erection of the dairy building. One objector fears that the grounds will be spoiled in appearance by what is to be really one of the handsomest buildings, though small in size compared with wants the grounds sold for town lots, poses to check it, and adds: and streets run through them, thus blotting out forever "Queen's Park," with its fine grove of stately, natural forest trees. To destroy this breathing place would be little short of vandalism. Rather let the Civic Improvement Society and the park commissioner take a hand in improving it as a resort for the people, to-wards which the fair board will gladly assist, and an annual home for this splendid exhibition, which for years has proved a drawing card for London, and one of its very best assets. Immerise sums have been spent by the city and Fair Association on the existing permanent buildings and improvements, and the so-ber sense of a debt-burdened municipality will not authorize the folly of laying all this low and beginning another era of expenditures on a new site. In the interest of all concerned, we trust the council will promptly meet the fair board in a liberal spirit. pavilion will at once proceed, in order to be ready for this year's fair.

There was a large attendance at both services of the First Methodist Church service at Church next sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The band is composed of young men who are going to foreign mission fields, and during the coming bers of Parliament—two on a side—debated the G. T. P. contract before six thousand people. The speeches made were from party standpoints, but no little effort was made to reason with the people in the desire to win a few converts to this or that side. The weather was warm and everything conduced to make the day exceptional.
