CHAPTER XXVII.
CONTAINS A TENDER REVIVAL.

"Oh! well enough," she answered, swallowing obtrusive gurgles of anything but mirth. "I can bear it; especially for you. You are quite right; I am only 'old' Jean; and your Jean; and only dear to you. And that's all I want to be. The past won't affect me the least. For I know well enough there is no such thing as marrying for me, any more than for you. No home for me except with you, any more than there's a home for you except with me. You won't object to my being kind to those poor little children? But don't be concerned for me, Gilbert. I can meet Mr. Babbington as indifferently as any lady should."

Spite of which declaration, Miss Hurst shed many tears at home over the miniature of a thin and interesting young divine, with wavy hair and beard-like face, and a serene smile. The slowness was gone, for the reverend gentleman was inclined to corpulence, and the wavy forelock was swallowed up in advancing baldness. But Miss Jean's fidelity could stand the shock of such mere physical change. To her Horatius Babbington was idealized as the winner of her young affections. His smile was still seraphic; himself still more than other men, most interesting.

In time the now-come clergyman made his first call, behaving with soberest propriety, though Sydney secretly resented his inquisitive inspection of herself, and still more his bluntness of perception in dragging from Mr. Hurst every detail of first falling, and then fully lost, sight. That half-hour's visit stamped him on her mind as bland, opinionated, amiable domesticity, more widely selfish, theologically effusive—mentally beneath the standard at which he rated himself; and her first impression was correct. But Miss Hurst saw in him no flaw. Through the visit she bore herself with great discretion, but a stray remark as the guest was leaving, "Surely that little table used to stand in the bay window of the Stillcote drawing-room?" threw her off her balance. That bay-window was a spot dear in the heyday of her hopes. Mr. Babbington must have been dull of comprehension if in her confusion he had not seen that old ties were fresh in her memory. Miss Jean's perturbation flattered him. He was not dull. He returned to his lodgings and his children, thoughtful and very satisfied.

Inevitably then the curate in charge grew intimate at Wynstone. Miss Hurst, by upbringing and nature, enjoyed regulating parish matters. Now her assistance was constantly claimed for them. At the outset Gilbert Hurst demurred at the weekly call, offered ostensibly to furnish him with masculine companionship. "Don't have Mr. Babbington on my account, Jean," he said, "it can't be pleasant to you, and we never knew each other much." But Miss Jean turned restive at this, replying, "I'm afraid, Gilbert, you would like him better if he were a college friend, or that tutor you used to make so much of. I know he is only an ordinary, hard-working man, but poor papa was much attached to him, and for that reason I should have thought you would not grudge him civility." And after that her brother could but make the best of the gentleman's society, even when it extended regularly over Thursday's dinner-hour.

Before long Mr. Babbington had communicated to Miss Hurst much of his personal career since they were parted, and Sydney—not Mr. Hurst, she noticed—was made further recipient of these particulars.

"He was so unsettled, poor man, after he left Stillcote," Miss Jean said, evidently deeply gratified at the fact. "He tried two chaplaincies abroad, but then he felt that he must fling himself into something engaging, or—"

So he went to Palestine. Of course, he overworked himself. He couldn't help it in the state he was in. He had a wretched fever, and the consul's family took the greatest care of him. They had found out his value. One daughter, an excellent creature, no doubt, devoted herself to him. He was lonely, weak, always so impressionable to kindness. It was natural, indeed necessary, since the poor thing got so attached to him, for him to marry her. I should never blame him, never! But I scarcely think she was fit to be a clergyman's wife. He mourns for her, oh! most sincerely; but human grief is short-sighted. After all, it may be for the best that poor Mrs. Babbington, with her desire for English society and a larger income, was taken."

Apparently, poor Mr. Babbington grew to look on his bereavement in this light. A great unanimity of sentiment became more and more visible between him and the choice of his youth. His children, two plain, loquacious little maidens, and a small, shy boy, were perpetually trotting to Wynstone with messages—"Ought the dear widow, named Wilkin, to have bread given her every week?" "Please, papa wanted to know, was there any one in the place who could knit little Harry some socks?" and so forth; and Miss Jean's word on these matters became law. Belle and Fanny would enter now without knock or rite, so much at home they grew with their papa's kind friend. Harry soon learned to climb her knee, demanding cake at all hours. No matter when they came Miss Hurst found them no interruption, but ever turned their visit to some such charitable account as the mending of skirts, or stitching buttons on boots, or some neglected office of which the motherly Joss trio stood much in need. All which was well enough, and only diverted from her brother part of the lukewarm attention she had ever bestowed on his greatest pleasures. But another phase of Mr. Babbington's insinuation took a less agreeable form. He himself had great fondness for probing Mr. Hurst's sentiments on subjects men are often chary of dragging into common conversation. Now Miss Hurst followed suit.

"I fear," she said one day to Sydney, with the semblance of much anxiety, "Gilbert, while he is after this book he fancies he can put together, never happens to speak of—of better things? Never talks about religion, Miss Grey?"

"No!" replied Sydney, startled.

"Ah!" his sister sighed, "it's a pity. But he never would. And people bound together—with a heavier sigh—"as we are, ought to be open as daylight on such an important point; ought to see through each other like glass! But I can't see through poor Gilbert. Mr. Babbington was saying, clever as he is, he is so reticent to be thoroughly satisfactory. Oh! if he would only talk, Miss Grey, and tell me exactly what he feels, how thankful I should be! For all he says, you know, he might be a—what is the word? One that reminds you of ash-stick or knobstick, though it's neither of them precisely."

"Agnostic!" cried Sydney, divided between laughter and indignation. "Miss Hurst, you would do well to be angry with any one who called your brother that!" (Only a little while before, wearied herself by one of Mr. Babbington's copious discourses, in momentary unguarded petulance she had wondered to Mr. Hurst why every service took him so regularly to the little church. "For the peace that always lies within its walls," he had answered, and she cherished the reply, though self-conviction charged it with unmeant rebuke. This was the man whose sister was trembling over his spiritual state!) "Indeed," she went on, hotly, "you cannot think what the word means, or never could you hint at Mr. Hurst's being that!"

"Ah! well, I only hope you might be right," returned Miss Jean, slightly abashed, but dragged two ways as clearly as ever weak woman was; "but still, abilities are a great snare" (a parrot lesson assuredly), "and we know poor Gilbert has abilities enough. And thenceforth it became increasingly evident that what had once been so much dreaded was developing into an accomplished fact.

"Some—not a thing, but—person had come between Miss Hurst and her brother, and Miss Hurst did not fulfill her threat. She did not hate this person!

CHAPTER XXVIII.
Thus a juncture was reached at Wynstone whereat standing still is impossible, for, besides the garrulous little brook of Miss Jean's fluctuating fortunes, other currents were sweeping along, gathering silent force, that presently breaking loose were to stir two hearts to their inmost depths.

Those fair spring months were to Gilbert Hurst a roof-house of unuttered pains; of pleasures more unutterable. To Sydney they brought labor over which, abandoning all thought of self, she laid out her every endowment, from highest to lowest, on behalf of those whom unworshipful honor called her creditors. Beyond the present she took no thought. That this present should ever turn and wound her sorely she never suspected. So if Miss Hurst, now absent-minded, now fussy, wanted her assistance over a dozen immaterial trifles daily, it was always ready. She could but give what was wanted. And if on Gilbert Hurst shone out the rarest, tenderest traits of her nature, why that was neither her fault nor theirs; only the outcome of his such and her desire to pay him his due in some coin of her own.

So, as April smiled over the earth, Sydney pictured to him who could not watch the season's gracious footsteps the lovely miracle of fresh-clothed woods, from red-brown buds and peeping crinkled leaflets, through May's coy bravery of out-spread green, to the superb youth of queenly June; or the exquisite growth of pink-tipped fire-crests, swaying, clustering, growing on dark-limbed parent boughs; or the frolics of a field of bleating lambs in the jumping line, and mostly ended with a wild stampede round their safe hurried quarters, and an importunate hurry-scurry to their mother's sides. Earth's rawness had never had such tales to tell Sydney as now when she courted all its signs to pleasure some one else. And to Gilbert Hurst never had it seemed fuller of happy human suggestiveness than when its charms reached his senses mainly through a voice that was dearer to him than the singing of the south wind to the flowers!

acted as if they thought differently. There was more than one dragon-fly engaged in that sector, however, and as they passed and repassed, lucently flashing on long-veined wings so transparent and fairy-like, an observer would have noticed that their flights were not aimless aerodynamic exhibitions. They were engaged in the most essential occupation of all the wild kindred; they were hunting. And heavy was the toll of winged life they levied.

The Terror-Child of Nature.

In spite of the voracious appetite of these flashing gems of the air they, seemingly, made no impression on the careless winged life which innocently pursued such intricate lines of flight over the water. Though so iridescent a beauty, and classified as an insect, there was no creature of the wild, in any shape or form, one wit so savage, merciless, and insatiable as the little winged dragon.

For its size the dragon-fly was possessed of prodigious courage—in the same measure as its impenetrable ferocity and incredible strength, which qualities had won for it, and not without reason, the name of dragon.

Such small prey as gnats were devoured in countless numbers, but the

That drowsy lull, which we have come to associate with an English summer, was upon the countryside. For it was mid-July, and the sun blazed down hotly upon the sequent glade in the woods where a myriad diverse creatures bustled about the serious business of life. A laughing trout stream bubbled and tumbled merrily through the woods on its tortuous journey to the sea.

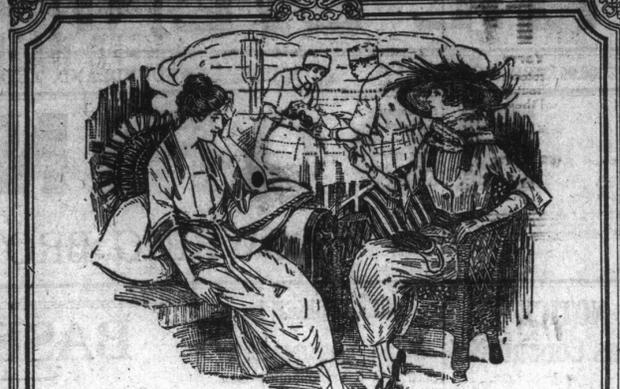

There were no human beings about; perhaps it was too hot, or maybe the woodland glade was a haunt too far removed from the abode of mankind. Sweet aromatic flowers and cool grasses hugged the banks of the stream. Gnats and other minute flies danced in the sunshine, and occasionally a light-hued butterfly moved erratically across the glade. The somnolent drone of a honey-gathering bee and the distant call of the cuckoo added to the hushed harmony of the wild.

Monarch of His Territory.

But for all its apparent peace and quietude the glade was nevertheless, the scene of violent death, speedy revenge, hate, and cunning. Tragedy, grim, unexpected, and relentless, stalked in the silence, while love bravely tried to play its part.

After the ago-worn instincts of his kind the little dragon of the air darted across the glade, wheeled with wiry-courtesy dexterity at an extensive patch of dock leaves, and recrossed his domain to where a stunted oak leaned perilously over the stream. He was the undisputed landlord over that particular area of the countryside—as far as the insect world was concerned.

There were others, of course, who thought differently; or, rather, who

Take It In Time!

Do you know that by far the larger number of the common ailments of women are not surgical ones; that they are not caused by any serious displacement, tumor, growth, or other marked change?

Do you know that these common ailments produce symptoms that are very much like those caused by the more serious surgical conditions?

Do you know that many women and young girls suffer needlessly from such ailments? More than that, they endanger their health by allowing their ailments to continue and develop into something serious.

If treated early, that is, within a reasonable time after the first warning symptoms appear, serious conditions may often be averted. Therefore, at the first appearance of such symptoms as periodic pains, irregularities, irritability and nervousness, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken. It is prepared with accuracy and cleanliness from medicinal plants. It contains no narcotics nor poisonous drugs, and can be taken with perfect safety.

The Vegetable Compound acts on the conditions which bring about these symptoms in a gentle and efficient manner. The persistent use of it shows itself in the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms. In a word, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts as a natural restorative, relieving the present distress and preventing more serious trouble.

The Badger Road.

In a recent interview, the Minister of Public Works stated that the completion of the Badger Road will be placed under private contract during the present week, and that all the men employed on the road will be discharged. And so is the last chapter written to another of the monstrous blunders, in the making of which the present Government has showed itself so proficient. As was pointed out some months ago, the Badger Road was a huge mistake from its very commencement. No one denies that it was absolutely necessary to find work for a large number of men who would otherwise have been left without any means of support, but surely it was entirely unnecessary to send them miles from their homes to build a road which may never be of any practical use. Over half a million dollars have been expended on the Badger Road. The amount could have been put to much better use if it had been spent on improving the existing roads in the neighbourhood of the Conception Bay towns from which came most of the men. It would have been put to better practical value if it had been used to supply more men for the fishery. What are the men who worked on the Badger Road going to do now? They could save nothing from their miserable pittance of $2.50 per day. In what way then have they benefited? There are now nearly 2,500 able-bodied men with no money and no work, in the various towns of Conception Bay. If they had gone to the fishery they might have done well enough to keep themselves and their families in some measure of comfort during the coming winter. But, these men now have nothing. And they have to support their families on that through what promises to be an arduous winter! The Government have most certainly been amassing trouble for themselves and the problem of dealing with these men will not be the least which they will have to face when the House resumes on December 12th next.

Championship Football.

At last night's meeting of the Football League it was decided that the championship game between the B.I.S. and the Star would be played tonight. The matter of the Guards protest was also dealt with, and it was ordered that the referee's decision should stand. In to-night's game a win for the Irish will give them the championship, whilst if the Star win a play off will be necessary. The B.I.S. will be playing without Burke and Brien, both of whom are out of town.

Hay and Fodder.

Whilst bundled imported hay is selling at $55 per ton, farmers are selling at $40 to $45 of the field, not including cartage. Out fodder which is now being harvested is selling at $25, the short ton, from the field. The yield of both hay and fodder is very good this year, and unlike last winter the farmers have adequate supplies for their stock.

How Hanniford Died.

Particulars have recently arrived of the death of Lawrence Hanniford of this city, at Thorold, Ontario, recently reported in Telegram. Hanniford was riding in a fitzy when the steering gear gave out, and the car went over an embankment, throwing him into a pond. He was found later by a diver, with his foot caught in the car in such a way that he was anchored fast to it.

Sensation in Railway Circles.

GENERAL MANAGER RESIGNS.
Mr. R. C. Morgan has resigned his position of General Manager with the Reid Newfoundland Company and returns to Canada by the Manoa. Mr. Morgan, in his resignation, stated that he could not undertake the work under existing conditions and that it would require an immense amount of money to operate the railroad this year. He has been here on a month's leave of absence from the C.P.R. and he returns to his old position at Winnipeg.

Poultry Association Meets.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION DISCUSSED.
The annual exhibition was discussed at yesterday's meeting of the Newfoundland Poultry Association. It was hoped that it would be held in the C.L.B.C. Armoury and the days appointed for the show were November 29th, 30th and December 1st. The meeting was well attended, the Vice-President, Mr. Calver, being in the chair in the absence of President LeMessurier, C.M.G., who is away on a vacation. Secretary Stanley White was in his place and read the minutes and reports. The report from the "St. John's Florists Association" was read re their requirements as to their share in the Association's show. The florists hope to have an exhibition of bloom, foliage, house plants, (open to all housekeepers) potatoes, cabbage and turnips, etc., provided space can be arranged for it. A committee will report as to space for the florist's section next Monday night, when this matter will be decided. Mr. Emberly announced that all the reports of the results of hatching eggs this spring were not yet received—some 900 eggs were distributed by the Association whilst the individual members distributed some 2,000 eggs additional, making a total distribution this year of some 3,000 eggs. Complaints were made as to the rough handling of Railway Express parcels containing eggs, and the Secretary was ordered to write the new Manager, Mr. R. C. Morgan, to investigate this matter and have the express department remedy this for the future and stop the habit of throwing parcels. Secretary White is also writing to Judge Landry at Truro, N.S., again, to try and secure his services as a judge for the coming show. Mr. Williams called the Association's attention to the fact that Mr. T. Moulton—a blinded soldier of our Regiment—England, as a Poultry farmer, is now living at Bonavista and is interested in starting a poultry farm there. Mr. Williams suggested that the Association in the matter and the meeting decided to write Mr. Moulton assuring him of their interest in his work and offering their assistance as far as possible in his enterprise should he require the same. Good news was reported from Bell Island Poultry Association, which announced the holding of their second poultry show this Fall. The Newfoundland Association's work is increasing in volume and more and better poultry are becoming evident in the country which is the object in view.

Building Trade Reviving.

The decreasing cost of lumber is having a good effect on the building trade, and quite a number of carpenters who were idle owing to the high price of stock, are now finding constant employment. The "own-your-own-home-movement" is again beginning to boost, and in the newer sections of the city quite a number of houses have been started during the past month. The cost of felt and glass is still high, but it is hoped that within a short while these will drop to reasonable limits.

Presentation to Footballer.

Mr. T. Delahunty, who left by today's express to study for the priesthood, was waited upon last night by a deputation from the Star football team, who presented him with an address and handsome gift as an appreciation of his work as a member of the Star football team, and the many services on their behalf rendered this season. The presentation was made by Mr. H. Wall. The recipient was agreeably surprised at this thoughtful action on the part of the Club, and suitably replied, thanking the members and assuring them that there would always be a warm spot in his heart for his old team. Various other speakers made congratulatory addresses and the best wishes of his many friends are extended to the young student.

Equine Entries.

At the special Exhibition to be held at Charlottetown, P.E.I., from Tuesday, September 27 to Saturday, October 1 (inclusive) one hundred and five horses, some of which are coming from farms and courses in the State of Maine, will be entered for racing. There will also be circus, sideshows and sports of all descriptions in connection with the Charlottetown Exhibition, and a general display of all the products of P. E. Island.

Field College Re-Opens.

Bishop Field College re-opened this morning after the summer holidays. A large number of directors were present. The boys were addressed by the Headmaster, who read the results of the O.R.E. examinations insofar as they affected the college. Congratulatory addresses on the work done in the exams were made by His Lordship, Bishop White and Dr. Blackall. The regular school work will commence to-morrow.

The Halifax Sports.

LOCAL TEAM LEAVES THURSDAY.
The team representing our A.A.A. in the Halifax sports leaves by Thursday's express for the maritime city. It consists of Messrs. P. Phelan, T. Butler and H. Skirving. It is expected that Mr. E. J. Goodland will accompany the team as manager. The following address was made by A. Harvey Thomas, Bell's manager, at the Railway Station on Sunday:—
Ladies and Gentlemen,—On behalf of Mr. Bell I thank you most heartily for the splendid reception which you so ably have extended to us on our departure for Nova Scotia. You are all aware what we are going for. This is a new sort of Athletics in this country and one, which we hope will be maintained for ages to come. There is nothing finer than having young men, or even young women, fitted for good clean sport. It uplifts them, makes them always cheerful and above all it leads to a good manly or womanly clean life. It is gratifying for both of us to know that you are wholeheartedly with us, we feel for you and will do all that may be pleasing to you in our preparation, prior to the big race. Bell's further training will be carried out very quietly, down on the farm, while trips secretly arranged to Halifax will be carried out at different intervals during the training period. It is quite an honor for me to accompany Mr. Bell, Newfoundland's champion, for this even, as his Manager and Trainer. I will be just as faithful towards him as I have been during the past eleven months and all the knowledge I possess will be extended to him. His was a disappointment last year and any little obstacle that was in the way will be overcome this time. Now that we are about to leave our hearts with you, we know how you feel, we intend to put forth our best efforts and as Jack Bell is Champion of Newfoundland so will he be the Champion of the Maritime Provinces for 1921.

Men Sleeping in Woods.

A surprisingly large number of young men who are out of work are sleeping out in the woods, sustaining themselves by visits to the city, where they take anything in the food line that they can lay hands on. They also visit the farm houses and beg food or ask for some in exchange for work. The practice is so frequent as to become annoying, and farmers are fearful that, made desperate by hard times, these "out-of-work" will take to stealing. Generally the farmers treat them well, and when considered deserving they give them a meal.

Improving the Railroad.

Between St. John's and Briggs Junction the Reid Newfoundland Co. have about 400 men employed making improvements to the track and otherwise preparing for the winter season. At Irvine Station, extensive alterations are being made, and a number of sharp curves are being straightened out. A horse shoe is also being built. At Brice's Pond, about 3 miles west of Avondale, the rock out there, which for years has been a source of trouble during winter, is now being blasted away. Last year this particular cut gave a great deal of delay, as after every snowfall it was so much blocked up that hours of valuable time had to be spent in shovelling it out.

Executive Will Consider.

The recently formed Postal Association has received a communication from Hon. W. W. Haldy informing them that the Prime Minister is due back from Canada on Monday next, and that immediately on his return a meeting of the full executive will be called, when an answer to their protest re the reductions of salaries will be considered.

Is There Any Such?

Dear Sir—I would like to insert a few lines in your esteemed paper to inform the Mayor of our City Councilors whether the cabmen of this city have a fixed scale of charges for driving in this city and country roads. Recently a cabman charged $5 dollars to drive a party from their home to a public institution and return. Time occupied was one hour and a half. This institution is not out of the city. If there is no fixed scale like our carmen have for doing work on the street, I think there should be a fixed scale in order that everyone may see what the charges are for driving, and published in our daily papers. I would like to see this brought forward before the next civic election.
Yours truly,
CITIZEN.
Sept. 12, 1921.

Has to Leave House.

In the Police Court this morning a man pleaded not guilty to the charge of assaulting his father. The plaintiff in giving evidence said he had fished for years on the Banks and he had never heard such language as his son had used on him. He said the son had not paid him any board, and in fact he (the father) had given the accused over $300 recently. All he wanted was to get his son out of his house. Mr. C. W. Ayles, on behalf of the accused, said his client was prepared to leave as soon as he could get another house. Judgment was suspended for a week.

Has to Leave House.

In the Police Court this morning a man pleaded not guilty to the charge of assaulting his father. The plaintiff in giving evidence said he had fished for years on the Banks and he had never heard such language as his son had used on him. He said the son had not paid him any board, and in fact he (the father) had given the accused over $300 recently. All he wanted was to get his son out of his house. Mr. C. W. Ayles, on behalf of the accused, said his client was prepared to leave as soon as he could get another house. Judgment was suspended for a week.

Civil Court.

A man was sued for commission on a sum of money collected for him. Mr. Curtis for the defendant stated that the amount demanded was excessive. The plaintiff said his charge was at the rate of 35 per cent, as "he had a lot of walking round to do. He said the person he tried to collect the money from told him to "go to Halifax." The judge decided that the charge should have been about one-third the original amount. The reason for the court's decision was that the plaintiff had a lot of walking round to do. ### Burglars at Work.

On Sunday night last burglars entered a well known dry goods and variety store, situated on the north side of Water Street West, and after ransacking the premises, smashed open a cash drawer where they secured about $10 in change. It is believed that the burglars also got away with some suits of clothes and other wearing apparel. Two pieces of iron, with which entrance was made, is the only clue left by the thieves, but it is unlikely that these will lead to their apprehension.

Capture of Quebec.

On the night of September 13, 1759, when Major-General James Wolfe's forlorn hope of 400 light infantrymen embarked in the boats, they were supported by 1,300 men in a second line of boats, while 1,900 remained in the ships to act as reserves. Silently the boats slipped away, the men sitting quiet and grim, their muskets on their knees. Suddenly from out the dark came a sharp hail in French, and every man caught his breath. Then one of the British officers replied in French that they were supply boats for the city. These were expected, and they were allowed to pass. The forlorn hope sprang out and silently scaled the cliffs, but as they reached the top they were discovered, and a shot rang out from the sentry, but sentries and guard were overpowered, and in a few minutes the supporting party had also reached the top. When Montcalm came hurrying up, he found the British army in battle array, but he thrust his whole force into line, intending to overwhelm the British, and drive them back over the cliff. With a steady swing they came on, halting now and again to fire a crashing volley, but the British, under Wolfe's express orders, stood silent and grim until the French were almost upon them; then a flash of flame ran down the line followed by an ear-splitting roar, and the French reeled backwards, their front line almost completely swept away. Before they could recover, the British had reloaded, and a second volley was poured in, and this time the French broke and fled in disorder. Montcalm and his officers ran amongst them and gallantly brought them into line again, but a third volley crumpled up the French ranks, and with loud cheers the English swept down to finish the work with sword and bayonet. In the rear of the British line, however, lay a dying man whose eyes were fixed on the spot where the red coats gleamed amid the smoke of battle. Suddenly an officer ran up, shouting, "They run, sir, they run." "Who run?" asked Wolfe, weakly. "The French," was the reply, and with a muttered prayer, and a thanksgiving for having carried out his task successfully, Wolfe passed away, content in the knowledge that he had won Canada for the British. On the other side of the battle a like tragedy was being enacted, for Montcalm, the leader of the French, had been struck down at the same time as Wolfe. He died with all the bitterness of defeat, but knew he had done his best. For three months he had kept at bay a picked English force, supported by a

Fashions in Furniture.

Furniture fashions vary almost every season, there is always some newly-designed chair or lounge coming into vogue.

The present trend is toward upholstered furniture, a splendid selection of which we are now showing. Here—huge Cosy Chairs, Chesterfields and Lounges, overstuffed and beautifully upholstered in Silk, Tapestry, Damask, etc.—gladden the eye, and there is no lack of smaller upholstered articles.

Salvage Notes.

Strawberry picking is at its height and the boys now, and on every day boat loads of people are gathering quantities of the precious fruit for various purposes, notably for the manufacture of "Whort Wha" which ranks next to "Sarsaparilla" in the opinion of many of our export wine connoisseurs.

On Tuesday of this week the rector, Rev. E. H. Humphries, in fulfilment of a promise made at the time of the annual Sunday School picnic, took all the S.S. Teachers in the Mission Boat and went to Barr'd Island for a day. Apart from the pleasures inseparable from such an outing, the trip was rendered fairly profitable by the quantity of berries—about 45 gallons—brought home.

The scho. "Skyhawk," Thos. Tulk, master, of Newtown, home with 500 qts of fish, came here Tuesday to discharge part of her cargo to get made.

Some of the salvage fleet have yet arrived, but messages report Mr. William Moss in the "Mary Kate" at Seaboard homeward bound, all sail used. The "Kate" was the last away and evidence seems to point to her being first.

Mr. Thomas Tulk and child, Newtown, were here for a couple of days last week visiting friends and relatives.

Rev. E. H. Humphries with Nancy, his daughter, went to Newtown to-day on a brief visit to his parents.

Since writing the above the "Mary Kate" has arrived in the harbour hauling for 300 qts. of fish.

Mr. Maxwell Lane, Bishop's Hr., left for St. John's to-day on route for St. John's, via Alexander Bay. Messrs. Arthur Lane and James Hiscok of the islands, also left for the city, all three intending to spend the winter at Bishop's College.

Miss Gertrude MacDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald, and Miss Margaret, daughter of Mr. Geo. Lang-mead, watchmaker, St. John's, left Salvage to-day by S.S. Malakoff en route for St. John's.

Mr. Geo. Parsons, Alexander Bay, passed along yesterday homeward bound, hauling for 900 qts. codfish.

We understand that one or more of our workmen at Grand Falls are laid off by reason of the company's action in cutting things so fine in the running their plant. Every man thus thrown out of work makes it doubly harder for all, for although we have not the Communist doctrine in toto, nor have we sworn ourselves in as members of the "Brethren of the Common Table" (which society numbers eight in England), yet outport people are so united that the affliction of one becomes the affliction of all, and vice versa. We trust the unemployment period may be of short duration.—COR.

Schooner Mac Lake arrived at Westville from the Straits yesterday hauling for 350 quintals of codfish.

Schooner Muriel M. Young, arrived at Twillingate yesterday from Sydney with 200 tons of coal for Hodge Bros.

Schooner Rose M. has sailed for Port Mulgrave to load cattle and produce for this port. The last vessel to engage in carrying produce between here and Port Mulgrave, were the Gladys Whidden and Congo.

Clear Sky.

(Twillingate Sun)

Some inquiry has been made in reference to the position of the Sun financially and politically. Some say we are in with the fishermen, others say the F.F.U. and still others say the merchants. Then some are thinking that the Government or the Opposition must have control.

Well, Gentlemen! We can say we are independent enough to be clear of any such incumbrances. Of course nobody can be independent enough that he or she can live without the help of the other fellow. The multimillionaire cannot do that, he cannot digest his gold or silver.

We say we are in with anybody who can give us good reasonable grounds for their assertions and practices, therefore to that degree we are independent, and no one in this town, or any other town, has yet, or going to, we think, try to govern our policy in journalism, either politically or otherwise.

We should be helping to bear one another's burdens, and from which channels we know are not going to be made a foothold for political or any other policies, as long as we have control.

So with our own, and other Capital (for which we are thankful) we can keep the good old Sun shining and the dark clouds may appear, we expect the one with the silver lining will appear also.

Anyone waiting to contribute to this paper on important topics, are welcome in our columns, while we must say that if any want to be personal with anyone they must sign their own name to such articles and we will accept non de plumes on anything reasonable otherwise.

We might say, financially we obtained a little help, and it came from right channels, and from which channels we know are not going to be made a foothold for political or any other policies, as long as we have control.

Not for off is the Day Dream Mine so named by its discoverer, Meech. Stumbling wearily along he was faced by a bluff glistening with bright blue, green and yellow silver carbonates. At the base of the low cliff some mysterious hand, presumably a black's, for no white man would have passed by such a discovery, had raised little piles of beautifully-coloured fragments of the precious stuff.

Later on, in addition to silver, lead and zinc in enormous quantities were discovered; and still later a veritable mountain of ironstone.

S. U. F. to Organize in Cape Breton.

Grand Officers of Newfoundland Society to Visit Sydney.

St. John's, Nfld.—After 50 years of insular isolation, a sentimental reason having prevented the establishment of a lodge outside the Ancient Colony, the Order of United Fishermen is about to extend its boundaries by the institution of a lodge at Sydney. Application having been received by the Grand Lodge some months ago from brethren residing in Sydney and vicinity, negotiations were at once opened, and have progressed so favorably that what was once deemed an impossibility will soon become an accomplished fact. Various difficulties, apparently insurmountable, were met with and successfully overcome. The ancient sentiment, having its origin in a desire of the founder of the order, long since dead, that the banner of the Society of United Fishermen—"S.U.F." as it is popularly known—should not be flown officially over any other province than Newfoundland, was respected for a longer period than it should have been, but with an entirely new personnel, the Grand Lodge very wisely decided that the fraternal benefits of the order should no longer be withheld from any who desired to obtain them, so long as the applicants were British subjects and desired the foundation of a lodge in a British province. Hence, the Red Flag, containing the symbol of the Triangle and Maltese Cross, will very shortly be spread in Nova Scotia, and to the city of Sydney will be given the first opportunity of displaying it on the S.U.F. flag pole.

For those to whom the name of the society conveys little, yet who may wish to know something of it, it can be said that the ideals of the Society of United Fishermen are as lofty and noble as are those of any fraternal organization which makes loyalty its guiding power. The motto of the Order is made up of the words, Love, Purity, Fidelity, a triangular arrangement of the three great virtues which direct and govern the destinies of the S.U.F. are Red, White and Blue, and are typical of the trinity of human virtues given above. Love is exemplified by Red, Purity by White, and Fidelity by Blue. The motto of the order is loyalty and benevolence. It stands firstly for the King; secondly for the country, and thirdly for the fisheries, and all that these imply.—Sydney Record.

Obituary.

MRS. JOHN GRACE.

There passed away, on the 4th inst., an old and respected lady in the person of Mrs. John Grace, aged 75 years, a native of St. John's. She was sister of the late Thomas Conway, who predeceased her about two years ago. She was always known to be an honorable person. Her remains were interred at Belvidere Cemetery on the 6th inst. May her soul rest in peace.—Amn.

The World's Richest Silver Mine.

Leading an expedition into an unexplored part of New South Wales, an explorer found himself in a mass of barren gorges where desolation reigned supreme.

There was no water. The heat was terrific. Every screw in the boxes of the explorers was drawn by it, the bone handles of their instruments, as well as their combs, were split to pieces. The lead dropped out of their pencils, their hair ceased to grow, their nails became brittle as glass.

Glad to escape with their lives from the place of torment, they turned southward, never dreaming that they were leaving behind them wealth beyond the dreams of avarice.

They had discovered, without knowing it, the Barrier Silver Field, a region richer in this precious metal than any other of similar size on the face of the globe.

Years afterwards a boundary rider named Charles Rasp visited the place, and noticed an outcrop of ore which he took to be tin, but which in reality was nearly pure silver. He pegged out his claim, thereby becoming the original discoverer and first proprietor of the world-famous Broken Hill Mine.

The story of the subsequent rush of miners and prospectors to the new El Dorado is graphically told by Mr. Roy Bridges in "From Silver to Steel."

They were a hard-bitten, hard-drinking, hard-gambling crew, these early pioneers. Many died. Some few became millionaires. One man won at a game of cards a share in the Broken Hill Mine valued at £120,000. Six years later he sold it for £1,250,000.

The Cato St. Plot.

On September 12, 1790, was born Arthur Thistlewood, a man who was destined to have his name included on the scroll of criminal notoriety as the originator of the Cato Street Plot—an organized attempt to assassinate the ministers of the Crown. Thistlewood, while living in France, had been able to learn the doctrines of the French revolutionaries, as first hand. He had been involved in a trial for sedition, but acquitted, and had later suffered a year's imprisonment for sending a threat to Lord Sidmouth. He was probably, therefore, actuated by a desire for revenge, and also in urgent need of money. The military were absent at Windsor for the funeral of King George III. On February 23, 1820, a Cabinet dinner had been arranged for the evening at the residence in Grosvenor Square, of the Earl of Harrowby. Thistlewood planned that all the ministers should be murdered as they sat at the table. One of the conspirators was to call at the house with the ostensible object of delivering a letter. On the door being opened the gang were to rush in, secure the servants, and then murder the ministers at the point of the sword, or by means of hand grenades. In the meantime, other members of the gang were to set fire to the cavalry barracks, and two cannon in Grays Inn Lane were to be captured, together with six others in the Artillery Ground. With these possessions was to be taken of the Mansion House and the Bank of England. Different parts of the metropolis were to be set on fire, and before order could be set up. One or more of the gang, however, turned informers with the result that the dinner was postponed, although the arrangements were allowed to proceed till the last moment, so that when a surprise raid was carried out by the police and military on the stable loft in Cato Street, where the conspirators were assembled between twenty and thirty of them were discovered in the act of arming themselves with swords, pistols, knives, etc. After a desperate fight nine of the men were arrested, but fourteen or fifteen, including Thistlewood, escaped through a back window. Thistlewood was arrested the next morning and four of his companions—Tidd, Ings, Brant, and Davidson (a coloured man)—were hanged on May 1, 1820, at the Old Bailey. They all went gallantly to the scaffold, Ings shouting: "Good-bye, gentlemen, here go the remains of an unfortunate gentleman." Brant took a pinch of snuff at the last moment.

Mr. James F. McGrath, formerly of the Evening Herald staff, leaves by a.s. Sabie I. for Antigonish, from where he will matriculate to McGill to study medicine. Mr. McGrath, who is a son of the late Jas. McGrath, at one time Governor of H.M. Penitentiary, is a young man of exceptional ability, who should have a brilliant future in his chosen profession.

Mr. C. B. Blackie, who has been seriously ill for the past few weeks, is, we regret to learn, still confined to his room.

Mr. Cyril C. Duley of T. J. Duley & Co., Ltd., has taken passage by the S.S. Manoa on a visit to the United States, where he will purchase novelties and other goods for his firm. He will be accompanied by his sister, Miss Margaret, who proceeds to North Carolina on an extended visit to her sister, Mrs. Courtenay.

Miss Florence Mundy, sister-in-law of Dr. Mosdell, arrived by the Manoa from Toronto, to spend a short vacation.

Mr. Wilson Vardy of Channel, his many friends will be pleased to learn, was yesterday admitted to the General Hospital.

Physical Development

And its Bearing on Health and Strength.

POWER OF THE WILL. Before proceeding with Exercises, my desire is to give readers a treatise on the "Power of Concentration," which is by far one of the most important subjects of the day.

The Muscles and Relation of Same to the Will—The muscles are merely agents for the will. They may be compared to machinery costing thousands with all the latest improvements the inventive mind of man can suggest; without motive power it is useless, though perfect in every detail. Being in this mind, it must immediately become apparent to everyone that the stronger, the better developed, the will, and the better developed or trained the muscles is, the stronger the action of the muscles. This is one reason why one man, with the same muscular development as another, is much stronger. He has more will-power and nervous energy, with better powers of concentration. Even if one's physical development is at its limit it behaves us, therefore, to attempt to bring up the feeble forces mentioned above to a higher possible pitch of development, for at the same time they will also be preparing yourself for attaining your highest ambitions, gaining power to memorize things to a remarkable extent, for without a direct and strong effort or desire to remember anything, the impression made on the faculties devoted to this important work is so slight as to be totally eradicated within a very short space of time.

Illustrative of this, let's put forward the well-known fact that many people are able, by firmly fixing the mind on a certain hour, to wake up at that hour. A feeble attempt in this direction has no result. A strong suggestion to the subconscious mind takes root. Many persons pride themselves on being "strong-willed" when they are simply stubborn and "mullah"—quite a different thing. Even if a person has a strong will and good concentration powers, it is of no use to him or her if they have no control over same. If the judgment be warped and a person is simply determined in doing wrong, using his or her powers to attain a wrong end—it would of course be far better for such a person to possess a less determined spirit.

BY GEE. The above is an illustration of what is only a travesty of the real power which I intend to show how to properly develop.

There is also the subject of "absent-mindedness" to touch upon which we will illustrate in this manner. Did you ever bring home The Telegram at tea hour and scan its columns while in the act of pouring a cup of tea. Of course the tea reaches the table cloth instead of the cup and wifely is sore and blames the Telegram for wearing a blush also. This, too, is susceptible to treatment by these methods; in fact most troublesome conditions of the mind quickly give way to "Psycho-Physical Culture."

The Volitive Faculties—The action of the will is termed "Volition." The faculties of the will are Determination, Firmness, Decision, Ambition, Authority and Vigilance. These faculties indicate strength and continuity of purpose.

Patience and perseverance, whilst not classified as faculties of the will, are developed by the will. He who can employ volition to effective purpose is master of any difficulty he may have to contend with almost as rapidly as it makes its appearance.

Mental Influences upon Health—The nervous system governs the bodily functions, even if not under our direct control. We may, however, control and develop nervous energy to a certain extent, and "nerve forces" may be brought to bear in improving our physical and mental condition. We are possessed of what is known as a "sub-conscious" mind, and it is through this agency that abnormal conditions are produced from apparent nothingness by our not having proper control over the will. For instance, if the mind be allowed to dwell at undue length on the effect of any violent disease, the symptoms of same pictured, etc., etc., the sub-conscious mind will set on the parts and bodily functions involved in the mental picture with the result, that (as has been proven hundreds of times) the disease or trouble thought of, will make its appearance. What is a powerful factor for evil (as above described) may, however, be turned into an agent for our protection and continuous well-being if the directions advised will only be adhered to and followed.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

BODIES BEING RECOVERED. SAN ANTONIO, Mex., Sept. 12. More than 100 bodies of flood and storm victims in Newland, along the San Gabriel River in Williamson and Milan Counties, have been recovered, according to a correspondent of the San Antonio Express at Taylor, who telegraphed his report to-night.

ANARCHIST PLOT FRUSTRATED. TOKIO, Sept. 12. The arrest of forty extreme Socialists, mostly Japanese, but some of them Koreans, was featured to-day by newspapers, which allege those arrested were connected with serious sedition plots. Newspapers say that officials declared the plot to be the most important conspiracy since the anarchist movement against President Mushato, in 1900.

PRESSING THEIR ADVANTAGE. MADRID, Sept. 12. Spanish forces in the Mellila zone in Morocco, after a brilliant operation in their new offensive against rebellious Moorish tribesmen, have occupied the line of Rasquivians, Zoco and Arabia, says an official statement of the fighting, issued to-day. The troops were assisted by Spanish war vessels.

FLED IN PANIC. LONDON, Sept. 12. The Central News Madrid correspondent gives further official statement of the fighting in Morocco. He says, "The enemy is in flight before our artillery, abandoning villages, harvested grain and booty. The enemy left numerous dead on the field. The Spanish losses were insignificant."

AT CONSTANTINOPLE. CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 12. The discovery of a vast revolutionary plot at Constantinople is announced by the British authorities here.

OF TURKISH ORIGIN. LONDON, Sept. 12. The British Intelligence Department at Constantinople has discovered a plot organized and subsidized from Angora, the Turkish Nationalist capital, to foment revolution at Constantinople, according to Reuters dispatches. It was planned to spread disaffection among loyal Indian troops and assassinate leading Allied officers. Seventeen desperadoes, it is reported, were brought to Constantinople to carry out murders. Last June it was reported from Constantinople that a great uprising by Turks and Bulgarians there had been true, but that through the vigilance of police and military officers. Allied troops acting under orders from General Harrington, Commander of the British forces in Constantinople, raided various hotels and houses, seized large quantities of arms, and arrested more than fifty persons, alleged to have been implicated in the movement.

GREEKS HARD PRESSED. CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 12. Advice received here from the war zone in Asia Minor says the Greek forces in hard presser under renewed attacks by Turkish Nationalists.

GREEK LOSSES SEVERE. LONDON, Sept. 12. A Constantinople despatch to the London Times says it is believed the Greeks had 18,000 men put out of action during their recent drive toward Angora. Turkish Nationalist casualties are placed at 12,000.

EARLY MEETING. PARIS, Sept. 12. Great Britain has proposed to France and Italy that a meeting of the Supreme Allied Council, for discussion of questions pertaining to the Far East, be held early in October, says L'Homme Libre.

DOINGS IN RUSSIA. LONDON, Sept. 12. Revelations at Moscow, following arrest of members of the Russian Famine Relief Committee, are said to prove the Committee was plotting to overthrow the Soviet Government, under the cloak of carrying on relief work, says a despatch to the Daily Herald from the Russian capital. An extraordinary commission is said to have discovered letters showing the conspiracy was widespread. One of these is said to have outlined a scheme for reorganizing Russia under a supreme ruler, with a Federal Duma, Regional and Parish Dumas and local Governments.

IN FOR REPAIRS.—S.S. Postiac Bridge, 13 days out from Bristol, put into port this morning to have some slight repairs made to her machinery. The ship is in ballast and on the passage encountered very heavy weather. She is bound to Mobile, Alabama, U.S.A. and will likely be ready for sea in a day or so; Messrs. Furness With Co. are agents for the ship.

Facts About a Great Weather Mystery.

The scientific oracle of a London club was explaining the cause of the recent prolonged spell of dry weather. "It is," he said, with an air of finality, "due to the fact that we are in an anticyclone." The audience seemed to be content. They had at least a scientific explanation, even if they could not understand it. But it was very much the same as when a man explains the culture of ancient Athens by telling you that the Athenians had a genius for culture. The authorities on the subject will tell you that an anticyclone is "an area of relatively high pressure in which calm weather usually prevails"; which is precisely what the oracle had to explain.

An Ocean of Gas. In point of fact we have a very heavy knowledge of these conditions of the "pressure" and "anticyclones." To understand them broadly one must think of the atmosphere as an ocean of gas about three hundred miles deep, surrounding the ball of the earth. If this gas were uniformly heated by the sun, we should have a very regular climate. Some day, when the fires of the sun have sunk so low that no appreciable heat comes to us across space, there will be no winds or rains. The atmosphere will spontaneously liquefy—as Sir J. Dewar liquefies gases in the laboratory—and will form an ocean, like water, thirty-five feet deep, lying upon the frozen mass of what we call our oceans to-day.

That is millions of years ahead. At present the gases of the atmosphere are so light and free that we gasp with astonishment when we learn for the first time that some fifteen tons of air press upon the body of each of us for months together in the winter, and London does not know what it is. If the Gulf Stream were diverted from the British Isles by cutting through the isthmus of Florida our English coast would be ice-bound every winter.

In a word, the surface of the earth varies so enormously in temperature that the movements of the air are beyond all our present power of calculation. The anticyclone is one of the results of this complex mass of movements that is most difficult to predict. What it means is that over a certain area the air flows gently downward toward the earth, instead of sweeping across its face. This air is warmed and dried as it comes down to the earth, and then a large region enjoys a spell of dry and genial weather. In winter the anticyclone gives us our stretches of bright, exhilarating, frosty days; in summer the spell of brilliant sunshine which, until the year 1921, we were accustomed to bless.

What the Prophets Can't Predict. If this state of things lingers too long over an area we have a drought; and that is where the weather-prophet is baffled. An anticyclone can never be predicted, because the precise reason why it occurs in a particular region is unknown. Moreover, once it is formed, it moves very slowly, and according to laws which we have not yet mastered. All that the meteorologist can do is to get in his telegrams and wireless messages daily from the whole region and follow the sluggish movement of the air-disturbance which he calls an anticyclone.

On the day on which we write this, for instance, the wind is in the west. From this we know, without any instruments or wireless messages, that our anticyclone has moved south, and a break of the drought is probable. We know this because the winds round the centre of an anticyclone region flow in the direction of the hands of a watch, so that a westerly wind means that we are at the northern fringe of the anticyclone.

Nearly 2,000,000 a Year. But will it return? Or when will another of these dry-air systems form over the British Isles? No meteorologist can answer either question. The movements of the air are so complicated, on account of the immense diversity of the underlying earth, that it may be centuries before they are completely mastered. At present science can do little more than gather messages from all parts and calculate which way a depression (formerly called a cyclone) or an anticyclone is moving. Nearly 2,000,000 a year is spent in doing this. Meantime the meteorologist is patiently studying the scientific laws, and some day he will predict weather for weeks ahead.—John of London's Weekly.

"Striking" History.

WILL THE STRIKE WEAPON BECOME LESS POPULAR.

When Tortelier, the famous French socialist, first conceived the idea of a general strike, he doubtless never thought of the devastating effect the instrument of his creation would bring to its users as well as their opponents. However, the French Syndicalist, M. Georges Solret, who possesses the beautiful honour of popularizing it, was fully aware of its uses. He at once described the general strike as a myth, and was fully aware of its glaring defects, going so far as to it must never be used, or it would undoubtedly do more harm to the party than to the community.

He knew full well that the strike which succeeded must certainly ruin the country it concerned, and bring terrible devastating poverty on the strikers themselves. The truth of this statement is proved when we consider the general strike of 1917-18 in Russia, which led to revolution and killed all prospects of industry for many years. On the other hand the strike which failed gained nothing for its perpetrators save the distrust and antagonism of their fellow citizens.

A Record of Failure.

We find that the national strike has been a useless weapon, possessing a remarkable record of failure.

Sweden was the first country to be paralyzed by an industrial crisis of this nature. In 1909 a dispute arose in the wood pulp trade, and immediately the other workers came out in sympathy, bringing the nation to a standstill.

Every worker downed tools. The very street traffic stopped. There were no road-sweepers and no grave-diggers. The streets and houses had neither electric-light nor gas, while the telephone service was useless. The citizens even had to depend on rain for their water supply.

The nation was held as if in a vice for a month, until a leading spirit in the land rose up to hand his brethren together to put a stop to the strangulation.

The counter-stroke of action had the desired effect. A voluntary civilian watch and a vigilance corps were formed with headquarters scattered over the stricken areas. Those who labored were drawn from all classes; they undertook all the vital public services, such as street cleaning, working the gas and electric generators, and organizing the transport system, which was immediately brought to life, ensuring the food supply to be distributed.

In a short time everything was working as smoothly as before the direct action had struck its blow at civilization.

How They Do It Overseas.

In 1913 South Africa had a truly terrifying experience of the general strike. The miners' strike at Witwatersrand began in 1913, and rioting and arson broke out over the district, Johannesburg, and along the coast.

In January, 1914, the men of the United State railway came out on a striking strike in sympathy with the others in the country.

It was rumored that a general strike was to be declared on a certain day at midnight. General Botha, then Prime Minister, took a daring course of action to prevent the strikers.

Next morning he had enrolled and organized a immense body of armed burghers who patrolled the city and all the side roads to keep order.

Special laws were made to prevent the gathering of crowds, and that same morning the organizers of the strike were arrested and smuggled out of the country to England.

In August, 1917, Australia was paralyzed by a general strike, which began by a grievance among the railwaymen and tramwaymen in Sydney. Naturally the Government determined to fight the strike, and called for volunteers, with remarkable results.

It will be remembered how school-boys and students ran the tramway services, while farmers and clerks came forward to work on the docks.

Organizing the Nation.

So efficacious were the methods of the strike-breakers that work was resumed by all concerned within five weeks.

When France had trouble of this nature as recently as last year, the Government's prompt action quelled the impending stoppage by prosecuting the officials of the Confederation of Labor, which was organizing the strike. Thus she may lose their controlling centre, and again went back to work. On a previous occasion, when French Labor came out, the Government called up the men on the reserve and immediately neutralized their action.

The recent organization of British strikers and the way the nation has coped on during industrial crises are striking examples of how a strike, no matter how widespread in its interest, can be overcome by energy, initiative, and common-sense. The day is not far when the strike will be cast aside as a useless weapon. That, at least, is the opinion of many of the wise men of London.

C. G. S. Stanley Reported Sold.

There is a report current in shipping circles that the steamer Stanley, of the Marine and Fisheries service, may be taken over by the Reid-Newfoundland system, and there is also a rumor that she will be sold, that the steamer Dollard will be laid up for the winter months at least, and that Captain Joseph Bliss, of the Stanley, will take charge of the steamer Arammore, with Captain Bayers, of the Dollard, as first officer, and Mr. LeBlanc, also of the Dollard, as second officer.

The Arammore, it will be remembered, went aground on the Labrador coast winter before last, while proceeding to the Straits of Belle Isle, and was taken the next spring to Quebec, where she was repaired. This summer she was chartered to a private company, but is now working for the P. E. Island agency of the marine department and will be through there when navigation closes about December 1. The report is she will then proceed to Halifax to be employed by the marine agency here until next spring.

It is also stated the Lightship Lower Traverse, now undergoing changes in order to be utilized as a lightship in the St. Lawrence, will only proceed to Quebec this fall and will not go on the station designated until spring. The crew taking her to Quebec will be paid off on her arrival there and sent back to their homes in Halifax.

It is also stated, though not vouchsafed, that the Halifax Lightship, now at Heath Point, at the entrance of the river St. Lawrence, will not come to Halifax when navigation closes, but will winter in Princess Louise Basin, Quebec, and return to Heath Point in the spring.

Marine department officials, when questioned about the above, could neither confirm nor deny the reports, but a well informed shipping man said that they were well within the line of probability.—Halifax Herald, Sept. 3.

AGE AND BITTERNESS.

Too many men, when they grow old, are prone to sit around and scold, and view things with alarm; they spend the long hours heaving sighs, and everything that meets their eyes is void of worth and charm. I too am old and oft I feel so tough I'd like to raise a spile of sorrow and dismay; distressed by rheumatiz and gout, I'd like to tell the world about a golden yesterday. But when I take my lyre in hand, to celebrate a past long canceled, I feel that I am wrong; the world is still a fine resort; the fact that makes me kick and snort is that I've lived so long. The world is right side up with care, and old men shouldn't tear their hair, and say it's slipping cogs; it still rolls on around the sun, and girls and boys who have their fun aren't going to the dogs. We all admire the fine old guy who views the people going by, and views them with a grin, who joins the laughter of the young, and doesn't sprain a withered lung to prove that mirth's a sin. But if an ancient gent is sore and sits beside his cottage door to prove all things are wrong, he finds he has a lonesome job, for no one cares to hear a sob when he can hear a song.

How Miners Work.

The pit bottom in a colliery is high roofed and roomy. When the miner steps out of the cage it is here that he stands for a minute or two waiting for his eyes to become accustomed to the darkness.

Until he has what he calls his "pit eyes," it is unwise to proceed, for the light given by his safety lamp is so dim, owing to the gauze cover, that it merely makes darkness visible.

Presently he tramps off to his stall, which may be a mile away, and after interviewing the "ovsman," he himself examines the roof to see if it is safe, and tests the place for gas.

All being right, he sets himself to "bolting"; that is, cutting away the shale from underneath the seam of coal. This brings the coal down and the next task is to load the "tram," the small wheeled truck which runs on rails and carries the coal to the bottom of the shaft.

Trams must be loaded with clean coal, or there will be trouble. When the tram is loaded, the collier chucks upon it the number of his stall. This is so that the weigher and check-weigher may know where it comes from, and that he himself may be credited with proper weight.

In the North special men are employed to do what is called the "dead work"; that is, setting the props and pushing up the rails. But the Welsh miner is proud of his ability to do all this sort of thing by himself.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Big Round Moon.

WHY DOES IT APPEAR SO BIG CAN YOU SAY!

The big round moon which we see rising in the east at certain times has been a mystery to scientists for hundreds of years.

What they cannot find out with complete satisfaction to themselves is why it should look so big on the skyline and so small by comparison when it has been risen for a few hours.

The mystery is deepened by the fact that there is no difference in the size at all when the low-down moon and the high-up are photographed or measured with suitable instruments. It is only the human eye that shows any difference in the size!

Indeed, even the eye can be made to prove that the big horizon moon is a deception. And in this way: You make a narrow paper tube about a foot long and with one eye look through it at the rising moon. The biggest will disappear as if by magic; you see only an ordinary moon.

But next close the eye at the tube and with the other again look at the moon; it is of an enormous size. The deception has returned.

There have been no end of attempted explanations of this mysterious appearance, but none has so far been entirely accepted as satisfactory. Some students of the mystery think that the moon is magnified by the haze that usually clings about the horizon; others that the frosty night air magnifies it, arguing in favour of their theory that the bigness is always more noticeable in autumn and winter.

But perhaps the most popular of all the explanations is that the increased size is due to our ability to compare the rising moon with objects, such as trees and buildings, between it and the eye.

It is curious how so many people are quite content to take this as the true "explanation." Yet how would they account for the low moon being just as much enlarged when seen over a wide stretch of sea with not a ship visible in between?

Fish Dealer Lost Bank Roll.

An elderly man named Sheehan, a representative of a Buxford Me., concern of fish dealers, who arrived in North Sydney yesterday on his way to St. Pierre, last night fell in with a party of good fellows, drank too ardently of the stuff that cheers, and in the end was relieved of his bank roll amounting to $40 and a certified check for $1,000, payable to himself.

Sheehan early in the evening joined the company of a party of North Sydney toppers and visited several places in the town across the water where he drank liquor. His recollection of his tour about town to-day is vague, but he knows that last night he had $1,400 and that to-day he has not a cent. The police are investigating the case.—Sydney Post.

HINARD'S LINIMENT RELIEVES DISTEMPERS.

Some of the World's Famous Impostors.

Never since the beginning of history has the world been free from the presence of its mountebanks, its charlatans, its necromancers and its impostors. The latest of these was Louis Lem Laforge, the self-styled King of a mythical Transcaricada Vitarvalla.

But it is not given to many impostors to have their names handed down through posterity and for the word derived from it to find a place in the language of at least two of the leading nations of the world. Such, however, was the distinction achieved by Frederic Anton Mesmer, father of the "science" of mesmerism.

It was during the career at the University of Vienna that Mesmer made his first investigation into the subject of "animal magnetism," the theory with which he was later to astonish the world. At the beginning of his career he was undoubtedly in earnest, believing firmly in the efficacy of his methods and feeling certain that he was benefitting mankind with his discoveries. But it was not long before he came to the parting of the ways between the practice of medicine and that of charlatanism. He invented a "magic tub" or species of covered bath, around which his patients were arranged in tiers. To the tub was attached a number of tubes, touching the bodies of the patients and Mesmer dressed in a fantastic costume symbolic of extreme mystery, walking about among his clients, touching them with his "magic wand." He also held private seances, giving many exhibitions of his unusual power of hypnotism.

When the commission of the faculty of medicine commenced to investigate Mesmer's practices, the "scientist" refused to appear before the board, and his reply was a demand that he be pensioned by the State on account of his great services to humanity. This being refused, Mesmer turned his back on Paris and moved his headquarters to Spa, where he arranged for the sale of his powers at figures that brought him in an income of one million francs a year. Satisfied with this, he returned to his native country of Salsburg, where he lived until his death at 81 years old.

The Wandering Jew.
On January 1, 1644, Michob Ader, calling himself the "Wandering Jew," appeared at Paris and created an extraordinary sensation among persons of all ranks.

Ader said he had lived sixteen hundred years, having been originally an usher at the court of judgment in Jerusalem, where all criminal cases were tried, and that, because he had thrust Jesus, out of the hall, saying, "Go! why tarriest thou? the Messiah answered, 'I go, but tarry thou until I come,' thereby sentencing him to live until the day of judgment. He pretended to have been in Rome when it was buried by Nero; to have witnessed the return of Saladin after his eastern conquests; to have been in Constantinople when Salimen built the royal mosque; to have known Tamerlane, the Scythian, and Scander Beg, prince of Epirus; to have seen Bajazet carried in a cage by order of Tamerlane; to remember the caliphs of Babylon and of Egypt, the empire of the Saracens and the Crusades. However, he admitted that he had not witnessed the sacking of Jerusalem, declaring that he was then in Rome at the court of Vespasian.

The pretensions of the Wandering Jew were supported by many persons who claimed to have seen him in various places throughout the world. Moreover, contemporary history bears out his contention by stating that he was tested by a number of learned men of the city and that "it was not possible to address him in any language with which he was unfamiliar." After obtaining a vast amount of notoriety, he finally disappeared, apparently without having made any attempt to capitalize his strange experiences and almost universal learning.

"The Most Perfect Scoundrel."
Of Joseph Balsamo, the self-styled "Count Cagliostro," Thomas Carlyle wrote "He is the quack of quacks, the most perfect scoundrel that in these latter ages has marked the history of the world."

This notorious impostor was the son of Pietro Balsamo, a poor shopkeeper of Palermo, who commenced his unusual career by selling prints which had been touched up with ink as original sketches. After marrying Lorenza Felliciana, the daughter of a giraffe maker, the pair made their appearance at a number of European capitals under a number of spurious titles, finally adopting those of the Count Alessandro and Countess Soraphina Cagliostro.

Shortly after his arrival in London the "count" permitted it to become known that he owned certain manuscripts explaining the original system of Egyptian Free Masonry as instituted by Enoch and Elijah adding that it was his mission to restore the sacred brotherhood to its ancient glory. The success of the hoax appears to be almost incredible. The "count" and "countess" travelled over all of Europe, posing as the grand Coptha and the grand priestess of the revived faith and finally, when they settled in Strasburg, they had collected sufficient funds to enable them to live in princely style. While at the height of their power they were induced to accompany Cardinal de Rohan to Paris and, with him, they became involved in a famous diamond necklace scandal. After nine months' imprisonment in the Bastille, the pair were liberated and fled to England, but they were forced to leave the country under suspicion and were unfortunate enough to select Rome as their next point of attack. Here the Holy Inquisition seized them, burned the manuscript relating to Masonry and ordered that the impostors be imprisoned for life.

A Man Who Fooled the World.
The civilized world was naturally astounded when, in September, 1835, the New York Sun appeared with an article telling how Sir John Herschel, the celebrated astronomer, had invented a very powerful telescope by which he was able to detect minute objects on the moon.

According to this article, which was filled with a wealth of scientific detail and bore all the earmarks of truth, the observers had discovered trees, rivers and fields of poppies on the moon, together with amethyst mountains and green valleys in which roamed goats, which appeared like unicorns, birds similar to the pelican and all manner of other remarkable animal life, including an ape with the wings of a bat. Edgar Allan Poe reviewed the article in the light of science, but, despite the many absurdities which he pointed out, not one person in ten refused to believe it. In fact, as Poe stated, "a professor of mathematics at the University of Virginia told me that he had no doubt of the truth of the whole affair."

The New York Times editorially stated that the report "displayed the most extensive and intimate knowledge of astronomy," while other prominent papers of the day hailed the discovery of the Herschel telescope as presaging a new era in scientific investigation. So widespread was the demand for copies of the paper containing the article that it was reprinted in pamphlet form and more than sixty thousand copies were sold before it was discovered that the story was a clever hoax, perpetrated by a New York Journalist, Richard Locke.

Locke had read the early chapters of Poe's "Hans Pfaal's Journey to the Moon" and prepared the article as a joke, but feared to acknowledge authorship when he saw how generally it was credited—both in the United States and Europe. It was not until Herschel signed a denial of the affair, some months after it appeared, that the story was finally discredited.

Many Families Destitute

Writing from Bonavista a correspondent states that the fishery with a great number of people there has been a failure, and work being scarce, quite a lot of families are destitute. With the high cost of food and a small price for fish, even those who have done fairly well are greatly concerned over the prospects of getting sufficient food to put them over the coming winter.

Fight Against Fordney Tariff.

President of Salt Fish Dealers Says Importation of Herring Into the United States is an Absolute Necessity—Alaska Herring Are Very Inferior.

(Saturday's Trade Review.)
The following extracts from a letter of Mr. Louis Meyer, President of the Salt Fish Dealers Association, which was sent to the members of the United States Senate, will give an idea of the intensity of the fight that is being waged against the Fordney Bill, which proposes to impose such a prohibitive tax on fish going into the United States:—

"It is a duty of $5.25 a barrel is assessed on herring, an article necessary to the poor man's food costing $3.00 a barrel. It is taxing the poor man 65 per cent. The importing of herring from Norway, Newfoundland, Holland, and Scotland is a positive necessity, and neither Alaska nor any part of the United States can produce quantities in comparison with the imported herring. A small portion that comes from Alaska. It is true that since the war there have been some herring landed in Alaska which are equal to those in some cases, superior to herring produced in the other countries mentioned. These herring are brought to Seattle and the quantity being limited, there are always buyers there from all over the United States ready to absorb the herring at the highest price, which in many instances, are higher than herring that are imported. They retail at such high figures and supply so many people that they cannot be seriously regarded as entering competition with the imported fish. The quantity of these superior herring is indeed very small when compared with the vast supply of inferior herring caught in Alaska, which are so poor that no market can be found for them in this country. They have been tried and found not to be up to the mark in spite of the fact that expert curing has been tried upon them."

Prompt Action

AVERTED GREATER TRAGEDY.
Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Kindly allow me space to refer on behalf of Mrs. Murphy and myself our very sincere thanks to our many sympathizing friends who did so much for us on Sunday evening when we were taken from the boat more dead than alive. In fact, I might say that the whole of Placentia on hearing that our boat with our whole family together with my little niece, Bridie Collins had turned overboard, rushed to the scene of the accident, where everything possible was done to rescue us. But one out of the number was destined to go, and the Almighty reached forth his hand and took Bridie Collins in spite of all efforts to save her. With about a six-inch tide running and not a boat of any kind to hand, it looked as though none of us could be rescued. Had it not been for the Ferry boat, which happened to be at the wharf on the town side at the time and rushed to our assistance, I believe there would have been some loss of life. In speaking of Mr. Peter Morrissey and Mr. John Furlong, who were in charge of the Ferry at the time, I fall into words sufficiently praiseworthy to give men for the practical manner in which they handled their boat. It was their quick thinking and prompt action that saved our lives. I repeat that it was extremely well done. After we were landed and while the women and girls were working to rescue Mrs. Murphy and the children to consciousness, and consoling Mrs. Murphy and her family, the men from different parts of the Parish joined in searching for the body of Bridie Collins, and kept up the search till every possible means, starting the following morning, joined by Capt. Murphy and crew from the Argyle and continued all day, and all through the night the search has been kept up but without success.

Mrs. Collins is heartbroken over the loss of her only little girl, and her mind being away from home makes it harder to bear. Mrs. Murphy and I feel it very keenly, as we had asked Bridie to spend the evening with us on Mount Pleasant. Mrs. Collins wishes to join with us in special thanks to Rev. Father Kennedy, who is here relieving Father O'Flaherty, for all his kindness in helping to lighten her burden, and to Rev. Fr. O'Flaherty for messages and letters conveying words of consolation, and to Rev. Mother Rose and all the Sisters of the Convent, and to Nurse Sinnott, who on hearing of the accident, hastened from her home at St. John's at a very great inconvenience to herself to offer her service, L. J. and Mrs. Murphy, Capt. and Mrs. Bona, Miss Mabel Sinnott, Mrs. P. Brown, T. H. and Mrs. Stevenson, P. R. Keating, and many other friends at St. John's for letters of sympathy.

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN T. MURPHY.

The good little wife says: 'I will rub them with some liniment I have.' 'Go ahead,' I said just to humor her. 'Well, in she comes with a bottle of Winard's Liniment and gets busy. Believe me the pain disappeared a few minutes after, and you can tell the world I said so.'"

WHAT ONE OF THE BEST KNOWN TRAVELLERS IN CANADA SAYS.

"Now I am going to give you an unsolicited testimonial as they say in the patent medicine advertising literature for patent medicines, particularly so-called liniments. Perhaps this is due to the reason that I have been blessed with a sturdy constitution and get busy like a man who has never had anything wrong with him physically. I complained rather bitterly. The good little wife says: 'I will rub them with some liniment I have.' 'Go ahead,' I said just to humor her. 'Well, in she comes with a bottle of Winard's Liniment and gets busy. Believe me the pain disappeared a few minutes after, and you can tell the world I said so.'"

Homing Pigeons Are Training for Races.

Halifax and Dartmouth pigeon men are training their homing pigeons for races to take place later on in the fall. It is hoped to have a race this year from Truro about the time the Halifax Poultry Show is on, in November. Birds are also being trained along both shores leading to the entrance of the harbor.

So far flights have been made from Ketch Harbor on the western side and from Cow Bay on eastern side. Also several flights have been made from about twenty miles out to sea from the entrance of the harbor into Halifax and Dartmouth.

Inland, some birds have flown as far as from Amherst to Halifax, but the majority of birds owned here have not as yet been trained past Ellsdale, but it is expected that before next year it is expected that before next year to have at least twenty birds trained from Moncton to Halifax, which will be a flight of 100 miles, also along the D. A. R. line to Digby, which is a flight of 150 miles.—Halifax Chronicle.

The Tide.

The tide is the rising and falling of the sea which takes place twice a day, becoming each day later by from half an hour to an hour. The rising of the sea is called the flood tide, the falling the ebb tide. The tides do not always rise to the same height, but every fortnight, with the new and the full moon, they rise much higher. These high tides are called spring tides. The alternating tide of maximum lowness are called neap tides. The highest spring tides are those which follow the new moon by one, two or three days, depending on the locality. When the moon is in perigee, or nearest the earth, the rise and fall of the tides are sensibly increased. The spring tides are greater about the time of the equinoxes, that is, about the end of March and of September, than at any other time of the year, and at the same time the neap tides are less.

Baths and Bathtubs.

That the bathtub was once generally condemned by medical authority in the United States and that all bathing was pronounced illegal in Boston by legislative authority, "except for medicinal purposes," will probably surprise some who think that the regulation of our private habits has reached its maximum in the year 1921. Such, however, are the facts, as related by the writer of "An Outline History of Tubbing," contributed to Gas Logic (New York, August). According to him, the first bathtub to be built and used in the Republic was perpetrated by one Adam Thompson, of Cincinnati, in the year 1842. The word "perpetrated" is used advisedly, we are told, for Mr. Thompson's tub appeared as a serious misdemeanor, if not a high crime, in the eyes of the press, the public, the medical profession, and the legislators of the day. He goes on:

"We have no record that it was inveighed against by the clergy, but it was roundly denounced in the public prints as subversive of democratic simplicity and pioneer hardihood. The good doctors averred that so luxurious a form of bathing, practised in winter, would lead to 'phthisis rheumatic fever, inflammation of the lungs, and the whole category of syphilitic diseases. To prevent any such disaster, the Common Council of Philadelphia considered, but failed to pass by a margin of two votes, a measure making bathing illegal between November 1 and March 15. Virginia by legislative action laid a tax of $30 on all bathtubs, while Boston went the whole hog by making bathing unlawful save on the advice of a physician. Be it said in extenuation of the hygienic condition of the Bostonese that the ordinance was never enforced and that in 1862 it was repealed."

"President Fillmore braved the shafts of ridicule in 1851 and had a bathtub installed in the White House and report says that this action so far destroyed the prejudice that by 1860 every hotel in New York had a bathtub, and some of them two or three, a fact which must have to some extent lessened the Saturday night congestion in these latter hostels. During the sixty years since this event progress has reached the point of 1,000—1,000 baths, school baths, public baths, Senatorial baths, soon to be reopened, and even compulsory baths. The last, it is true, operate only with respect to certain special classes, or we might, with more accuracy say conditions, of men, one of whom perhaps not unjustly understood his thirty-day sentence to be for 'fraternity.'"

"While tiled and porcelain bathtubs, with unlimited supplies of hot water always available from automatically regulated gas water heaters, may be a long step in advance of Mr. Thompson's mahogany tub lined with sheet lead, or its immediate copper-lined successors, whose water emanated from the kitchen stove via the teakettle, it is only in the mechanical apparatus of the bath that we have surpassed the bathing arrangements of other ages and other races. Socially and sanitarily speaking, we have yet some to go before reaching the standards of ancient Persia or Rome and of Japan.

"The luxury of Egyptian baths has been fully exploited by a well-known soap manufacturer, and the splendor of the great Roman thermae, clubs, houses, theatres, gymnasia, libraries and baths in one, has been sung by historians and archeologists from the time of their erection down. The aged, daily hot-bath habits of the Japanese cause them to look with scorn of the elect upon the unwashed who are so uncivilized as to omit the daily hot bath.

"The heating devices of these and some other and simpler baths are worthy of notice and interesting in comparison with modern arrangements for the same purpose. One of the simplest methods was to heat stones or firebricks and place these directly in the bath vessel. Remains of a primitive prototype of the Turkish bath have been discovered in Ireland in the form of a 'hive-shaped stone-hut, with an opening at the top for the head of the bather and one at the side for entrance and egress. This bath was warmed up by burning peat inside it. When a sufficiently high temperature had been attained the peat was raked out and the bather took his place on a stone seat, indubitably a rather warm one, a fireproof closed door and banked it up with sod, closed the aperture about the bather's neck with a neckpiece of the same, and left the unfortunate to sweat it out, after which process the victim probably scampered home and to bed without any further cooling down or rubbing-off ceremonies.

"Japanese baths are heated almost to the boiling point by pipes containing hot charcoal immersed directly in the end of the tub, to the serious detriment of unwary Caucasian toes when long-legged foreigners are initiated into the native-bath mysteries.

"The Roman thermae were heated by a great hypocaust, or furnace, which sent hot air through the hollow walls of the various chambers and also brought up the temperature of successive reservoirs of water from cold to temperate and hot. Charcoal or wood was the fuel.

"The Russian and Turkish vapor baths, which were adaptations and successors of the Roman dry baths, were not infrequently produced by the simple process of pouring water upon hot stones or bricks or directly upon a charcoal stove. The immemorial time-honored method of Merrie Englands' dispensing with the heating problem by the simple expedient of ignoring it. Cold baths are said to have been the fashion among the Angles and Saxons, and the fashion has never changed.

"Not all the baths of history, however, were remarkable for temperature or the lack of it. There were mud, sand, wine, milk, and veal-broth baths. Perfumes, pomades, the juices and effusions of strange herbs and plants added to the baths of noted personages. One beau of London was wont to have the yolks of 100 eggs put into his bath, truly a luxurious bath to the modern market mind."

Wedding Bells.

GEARIN-WALSH.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Church Sept. 7th, when Miss Rose Gearin was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Frank Walsh, of the Reid Mfg. Co. The Rev. Dr. Kitchin performing the ceremony. The bride was handsomely attired in white silk with large picture hat. Miss Mary Grills acted as maid of honor and was prettily attired in pink and white. The groom was very ably supported by his friend, Mr. Patrick Molloy. After the ceremony was performed the happy young couple drove to the residence of Mrs. Grills, Bartlett's Hill, where a sumptuous supper was partaken of and the health of the bride and groom toasted. Amusements were indulged in until the wee sma' hours of the morning. The bride was the recipient of many useful presents testifying to the esteem in which the young couple is held. The writer joins with their many friends in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Walsh many years of matrimonial happiness.

Bananas for Brains.

There was once a popular notion that a fish diet was especially good for the brain. Well, it isn't. As a matter of fact the phosphorus in fish does service to our joints and not to our head. The one merit that fish possesses is that it is easily digested and blood is not therefore drawn from the brain to aid the digestive organs in their work.

By an alliterative coincidence the three things which are best for brain are bananas, bacon and brushes.

Bananas have that in them which directly feeds the grey matter of the brain. Their content of sugar, too, is excellent. Sugar, in any form, is energizing to the body, and as brain and body are closely allied anything which reduces bodily fatigue helps the brain. Mental workers will know the heavy mental strain of working when the body is tired.

Bacon is an aid to the imagination. It is not generally known that all food, whether vegetable or flesh, has an effect on us. Turnips, for example, depress. Peas exhilarate. Mutton allays irritation of temper. Pork excites the imagination. Not long since a well known writer of exciting stories confessed that his inspiration came from pork chops. So—bacon for the brain.

There remains the brush. Probably nine persons out of ten scratch their heads when they feel a sort of temporary hold-up in the action of their brains. That is nature's stimulus to the grey matter.

Rub your head and you bring the blood to the excited part. That's what your brain needs—more blood. Hence the vigorous use of a stiff bristled brush will, by exciting the scalp, bring blood to the brain and reinvigorate it.

The mental sluggishness that is felt after meals can be banished by brushing. It checks the cause of the torpor—the withdrawal of blood from the stomach.

So if you are a brain-worker, eat bananas, bacon, and a brush. C.E.I. DEFEAT C.E.I.—In the night's League football game the C.E.I. defeated the C.E.I. by 1 goal to 0. There was a poor attendance of spectators. The game was a good one but the C.E.I. were handicapped by the loss of several of their best players. The goal for the game was scored by Chafe.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

ON LEARNING THE LAWS OF LIFE IN THE HOME.

The other day I heard some children begging to make candy on a rainy afternoon. Their mother objected. "Oh please," they begged. "I've just tidied up the kitchen and you will get everything messed up," she pointed out. "We won't," they said, and they began toasting until she yielded. An hour or two later, after the excitement of candy making had died down, she showed me the kitchen. It was full of dirty dishes, and the candy had been spilled on the butter that had been left out of deals with the subject. In the first place they make candy once a week no matter. That does away with constant-teasing. In the second place, they cannot make it at all unless they clean up every dish and leave the kitchen just as they found it. If they fail to do this they forfeit the right to make candy the next week.

The Right Taken Away Once or Twice.

"I had to take away the right once, or twice but after that they learned," said this mother. "It's perfectly simple and doesn't involve any strain on me. I like them to have a good time but I have to work pretty hard to keep four kiddies well fed and the house in order (although of course they all have their tasks) and the sewing done, and I don't feel that I should have any extra work that can be avoided."

Why doesn't every mother do it this way I wondered.

I suppose the answer is obvious—because it seems easier to forbid than to train.

Or if you are of another type of mother, easier to do the extra work than to train.

A NEW NOVEL by the author of "The Shepherd of the Hills." "Helen of the Old House,"

by Harold Bell Wright.
A stirring romance of American life to-day. The scene of the story is idealized but brings to mind almost any manufacturing town or community. The chief character, "Helen of the Old House," represents the finest type of American womanhood. A beautiful love story in a colorful setting. "Helen of the Old House" sweeps to a climax that leaves one impressed anew with the virility and force of Harold Bell Wright.

But it really isn't easier in the end. Children are fully capable of appreciation. Any system of rewards and punishments which they know is just, and of being guided by it.

An army officer has an article in one of the magazines on the way he introduced a system of rewards and punishments like those of a military school into his home and what wonders it accomplished! A boy friend of mine is at a boy's camp and writes home enthusiastic letters about how he got nine and a half out of a possible ten points on care of his tent. The boy who would never be reached by nagging and scolding and reproaches could be reached by reward and deprivation.

And since that is just what life is going to do to the children—that is, reward them for obeying the laws and punish them for disobeying, why not let them learn the laws of life in the home?

The Pin's History.

The modern pin-making machine completes the pin except in coloring and polishing, and then comes the pin-sticking machine which supplies us with our papers of pins. This machine is almost human in its workings. One workman feeds it with pins and another feeds it with papers. The packages come out at the other end.

Pins for the use of the soldier were first made in England during the fifteenth century. They were made of iron wire. Brass wire pins were introduced from France in 1540 by Catherine Howard, queen of Henry VIII. The foundation for the manufacture of the present-day pin commenced with the invention of the process of drawing wire. For many years all pin manufacturing was confined to France and Germany, where this process was invented. Brass wire pins were first made in England in 1826.

In the early days of pin making it was a most tedious process. They were made by filing a proper length of wire to a point and then twisting a fine piece of wire to the other end, thus forming a head. This required fourteen different operations by as many workmen, all of which was done by hand as machinery had not been invented.

In 1776 the American congress, realizing the absolute necessity for pins in the development of the civilization of the country, offered a bonus of $250 for the first twenty-five dozen domestic pins equal to those imported from England.

In 1787 Timothy Harris of England devised the first solid headed pin. American inventive genius continued on the job until the best idea was hit upon, and in 1824 a machine was invented which made solid heads to the pins by a process similar to the making of nails.

Seven years later, in 1831, John Ireland Howe, a doctor in Bellevue Hospital, New York, invented a machine for making perfect solid headed pins. A company was organized and a factory started at Derby, Conn.

MY COLUMN

By the CUB-EDITOR.
THE STOLEN BRIDE.

Author's Note.—Owing to the jealousy of the editor who probably realizes that his editorials (that's what he calls them) are being neglected by readers when instalments of this serial appear, I have been compelled to curtail it considerably. For this I crave my readers' apologies but can assure them that it is not my fault. (No more, by an excuse for either laziness or an inability to think out any more melodramatic situations.—Editor).

Characters in this story—Sairy Gumchew, nee Sairy Snubbs, has been abducted by the desperate desperado. Bad Bill Blood who has vowed vengeance on Sairy's husband.

Jan Gumchew, a prominent citizen of Deadshot Gulch. The outlaw cuts a rope stretched across a chasm which Jan is endeavouring to cross in his quest for his stolen bride.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER III.
A NARROW ESCAPE.

For an instant, Jem stood suspended in mid air. Then, with a horrid lurch, he tottered and plunged head first into the faky blackness below. The outlaw on the brink of the precipice waited only until he heard the faint splash which told him that Jem had taken his first and last bath. Then, with a throaty chuckle, he snatched up the half-unconscious Sairy, and hurried off to whinge the ferment of his unruly band awaited him.

Three weeks had passed. Within a roughly fitted room in an equally rough looking log cabin, a woman sat weeping bitterly into a pan which she held on her lap. Nor were the tears caused by the onions which she was busily engaged in preparing for an onion stew. No, it was not the onions, for the woman was Sairy Gumchew, and the tears which rapidly filled the huge pan, were for her lost husband. Even now she did not believe that he had died. But to-morrow, she was to wed Bad Bill Blood. The latter's gang had already captured a wandering monk from the old Spanish monastery hard by and had threatened to cut his ears off if he refused to perform the wedding ceremony. As the tears fell, the door opened and Bad Bill Blood appeared in the doorway. He had just been eating blueberry pudding and the purple stains on his face made him look more repulsive than ever. "Jest looked in Sairy, to tell yew as how me byes has taken yure own bridal dress from yure house in Deadshot Gulch and yew has to be spliced in it to-morrow," chuckled this dreadful example of refined cruelty.—As Sairy burst into another paroxysm of weeping, Bad Bill left the room and slammed the door behind him.

CHAPTER IV.
IN THE NICK OF TIME.

It was shortly after sunrise. The sun shone like a brilliant ball of crimson flame in the western sky. Within the outlaw settlement everyone seemed busy. In an open green square stood Bad Bill Blood surrounded by his followers, whilst a frightened monk stood near.

Suddenly, the outlaws' own Jazz Band struck up that beautiful air "Here comes the bride" and, to the strains of the awful discordant noise, Sairy Snubbs advanced slowly with head bowed and took up her stand by Bad Bill. As the monk moved his lips in the opening words of the marriage service, a wild looking, heavily bearded, rugged man rushed wildly between him and those whom he had been about to unite.

(To be concluded)

RHINES OF THE TIMES.

THE LOBELLA.

Of battleships in action we have read and heard a lot. And now I shall relate the tale of one that's left to rot. Her name is the Lobella and she lies in St. John's stream, round her play. And whilst she looks impressive, she is not all she may seem. Despite her guns and smokestacks two she is a useless craft. And was sent out here from Whitehall where they must have all gone daft.

'Tis some years since she arrived here but from then until this day she's been anchored where the harbor's murky waters 'round her play. And the only thing she's used for by our brainy Government is as an excuse for spending when on squandering their bent. Riding in the stream at anchor in her coat of warship grey With her wicked guns a-gleaming and her sides all wet with spray Is the gallant ship Lobella, of White Ensigns the ware. With which a slim country in the globe has been accused.

The new hats have broader brims and higher crowns. Sashes of metal brocade are seen on divetyn dresses. Long sleeves and high necks return with fall blouses. The hem of a satin cape is lifted in cascade at the sides. A jet toque has a lace veil floating from its broad wings. A cape wrap has its sides slightly bloused over by hip straps. Most of the fall models show at least a touch of handwork. Fuchsia, purple and prune are favored colors in millinery. Fall blouses show filmy sleeves of contrasting fabric and color. Many coats and evening wraps are cut on wider, fuller lines. Suit coats vary in length but the majority of them are long. A silver slipper buckle has its design cut out over colored leather.

SWEET, PURE MILK—always on hand when you want it!

If you have never used Libby's Evaporated Milk, you will be amazed to find how good, how convenient and economical it is. Many women who first tried it in some emergency now use it always—they find it gives such satisfactory results.

There's no waiting for the milkman—you can always keep several cans on the shelf and in summer there's no bothering with ice, and in winter the milk wagon can get stuck in a heavy drift of snow as often as it wants to!

And there's less waste—a can of Libby's Evaporated Milk will keep indefinitely before being opened—and after you have opened a can you can use just what you need; the rest, put in a cool place, will keep several days.

Libby's Milk comes from the finest dairying section of America and is processed in our own sanitary condensaries—it is not the "distributed" product of an unknown and nameless plant.

Order a tin from your grocer to-day.
