DISSENTIATION IN WELLAND.

It did not require the letter from Welland published elsewhere to inform us that there is trouble brewing in the Tory camp over there. Welland is a debatable ground. It was only carried in 1878, as many other constituencies were, through the folly of the managers of the reform party and by a liberal distribution of promises, of nothing more substantial on behalf of the Tory candidate.

The Welland conservatives complain that every other interest is subsordinated to designs entertained in certain quarters upon the seat in the senate. This is just the trouble with our party politics. Personal designs and private ends, not the public weal, not even the welfare of the party, are too often the motives of men who become politicians simply because they are accidentally become publishers. It is generally admitted that such schemes will not be tolerated in Welland, and that there will be a good opening there for some sensible and independent candidate in 1882.

BOUNDS AND BARS.

One of the prerogatives of feudalism was the privilege—"right" would be a misnomer—still insisted upon by the aristocracy of some European countries to ride rough-shod over the farms and the crops of the peasantry in pursuit of a hare, or a fox or some other defenceless animal bred and preserved for such purposes. Angling has been cynically described as a sport in which a bait is placed at one end of the line and a fool at the other. He is an encumbrance upon the earth, who is so lazy to work himself, and who has no compensation about destroying the fruits of the labor of others. His game is a burden and a tax upon the land, and his pursuit of it is an impertinent infringement upon the rights of others. There is no good reason why foxes should be reared in a cultivated country, and there is equally little reason why a hard-drinking gentry should not be compelled to find either some more profitable employment or some less irrational amusement than fox and hare hunting.

Many of the Irish tenantry have given notice that in future they will permit no rough-riding across lots on their farms, and there is no Canadian outside of the Mail office who will not say that they are perfectly right. But the chief organ of the Tory party bemoans the decay of "Irish sport" and the sufferings of the dog that were stoned on several of the estates. The sufferings of a hound always appeal more powerfully to the snob editor than the sufferings of a workman. A fellow feeling makes him wondrous kind. He has pitched his tent in the wrong country. If he were in Ireland, now, he might have the inestimable honor of holding a landlord's stirrup, or even of being kicked by a viscount. Gallipole over crops is a survival of a semi-laborer's age in Great Britain and Ireland. The revolt against its continuance is one of the most hopeful of many indications of the growth and spread of popular intelligence. No Canadian tenant would submit to such an imposition for a moment.

MAD COMPETITION.

The publishers of the Globe are trying to crush out the country weeklies by offering a twelve page dollar weekly for an average price of 70 cents a year, not the actual cost of the white paper at the mill. The proprietor of the Mail is trying to crush out the daily press of the towns and cities of Ontario by sending out a one cent reprint of the Mail at thirty cents a hundred copies, also a less price than what paper costs at the mill. And all the time the proprietor of the Mail is playing this out-thrust game he is selling or trying to sell the blank paper from his mill to these provincial dailies at a price greater than he sells the reprint of the Mail to the news agents. No wonder, then, that the independent provincial daily and weekly press, irrespective of politics, are resenting the endeavor of these two journals to live and not let live.

THE WORLD'S OFFER.

We will give One Hundred Thousand Dollars toward the proposed free public library if ten other city papers will put up the same amount. The ST. THOMAS TIMES conceives that the agitation against the social evil in this city is proceeding upon false principles. It contends that it is the duty of the clergy, and of all Christians, to overcome evil by good, and that all attempts at moral reform through material agencies, such as raising houses and the like, must ignominiously fail. It enlarges upon the idea advanced in the columns of The World some weeks ago, that society is largely responsible for the prevalence of social immorality, and that it sacrifices everything to appearances, and pays deference to good clothes in a front porch, no matter how obtained, while a threadbare garment eye askance in the vestibule, though it doth the body of a saint upon earth.

THE SOCIAL EVIL.

Some Hard Facts for the Morality Party—Poor Paid Working Girls—Cause and Effect. To the World: I have watched with great interest the various phases presented in the press discussion of this important subject, and, with the general public, I sympathize with the laudable desire evinced to control this evil, but as regards its suppression I am persuaded the attempt, with all the aid the law or special enactments may afford, will prove as fruitless as an effort to turn the tide with a pitchfork. To control and lessen the evil is, however, another question altogether, and this can be done not by coercion, or by having resort to the questionable and inhuman means to the production of the evil complained of, and whilst those of moral character who have come to the front to combat immorality and proclaim an indiscriminate war against all concerned, it is to be feared that they have not paid attention to the matter which wise and discreet men invariably find it necessary to adopt in order to be successful in their undertaking. So that when their sincerity in the cause of public morality is tested by a general consistent line of conduct, they may be found free from the charge of hypocrisy.

Amongst those publicly identified with the movement are the names of several well known and highly respectable business men, who employ a large number of girls, and in their various reflections have drawn a single word of remonstrance from their employers. Reference has been made to the small wages paid to these girls, and style far in excess, it is said, of their income and having lies a potent cause of evil habits. And in this case the girls are held responsible. The employer who takes a week's labor of from eight to ten hours a day of his work for the sum of two dollars a week, in the first place, is generally responsible for whatever evil consequences may happen to the part of the girls, to pass through life in a respectable manner. It is, indeed, a notorious fact that one of these girls, who has been employed in a large establishment, on King Street, and in connection therewith a tailoring establishment, employs a large number of girls, and pays them incredibly low wages. Twenty cents and under for making vests and fifty cents for pants which are sold by those who pay more than double the wages just mentioned. And yet these gentlemen who are so ready to blame the girls, are not more than a few rods from the premises where they are driven into detestable habits by their own exacting business dealings with them, by withholding from them the just reward of their labor. Still these men carry a high head amongst christian people and many such may be found numbered among the pillars of several of our churches. Here, then, is a grand opening for the clergy who do the honors of the altar in their might and strike at this branch of the root of the evil complained of. Let them make the first move, and let them set an example by moving jointly in advancing us all round. It is the managers whom I believe to be the most responsible for the low salaries now paid. There is considerable competition among the banks, and each manager is more anxious than the other to (1) make big and sure profits, and (2) to keep down expenses; and one way of keeping down expenses is to hold a convention I think they would agree to a 25 cent advance. THE KINGSTON NEWS

The Kingston News thinks that the limestone city ought to be anxious to elect Sir John A. Macdonald in 1882. Kingston is always anxious to elect a member of the party in power. It thought it had a rare thing in 1878, but made a slight miscalculation. To be safe, Kingston should have the privilege of voting after the other constituencies get through.

TO THE ELECTORS

GENTLEMEN,—I take this means of requesting at your hands a continuance of your confidence by my re-election as Mayor for the ensuing year. I have endeavored in every way in my power to do my duty as your chief magistrate and I trust not without a certain measure of success and honor. I receive at your hands the compliment paid to my predecessor in office, a second term, I feel that the experience derived by me during the past year will enable me to be more serviceable in advancing in many ways the best interests of the city during the ensuing year. I shall take the opportunity on nomination day of giving an account of my stewardship, and whatever the result in the future, I shall always look back with pride to my having enjoyed your confidence in so high and honorable a position as Mayor of this metropolitan city. I remain, your obedient servant, W. HARCULY MCGURRICH, Mayor's Office, City Hall, December 13, 1881.

TO THE ELECTORS

GENTLEMEN,—Finding at the last moment that the real estate upon which I proposed to qualify, if elected as alderman, is valued on the books of the Assessment Commission at $162 less than the legal requirement, I am therefore compelled reluctantly to withdraw from the contest. In doing so, I desire to express my hearty support for the very many assurances of support I had received from the electors, and trust that some future time to again solicit your suffrages. I am, gentlemen, Your obedient servant, JAMES E. MILLET.

TO THE ELECTORS

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter of the 11th inst. in relation to the proposed election of John Leary, J. W. Keenan and Henry C. Myers for 1882. Henry McCormick, the well-known pitcher, is actively engaged in the project to represent that city on the ball field next season. Warwick of this city and Frank C. Catharines are to run their 3200 a side. The bad weather has prevented either men from doing much training. Warwick has been suffering from the strain he received in his race with Carruthers, but does not apprehend that it will interfere with him in this contest. Carruthers has lately been seen on the river at Oxford, in England, maned (or rather womaned) by students of the high school. Among this fair crew the daughter of one of the professors. TO THE ELECTORS

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind letter of the 11th inst. in relation to the proposed election of John Leary, J. W. Keenan and Henry C. Myers for 1882. The proposed election of John Leary, J. W. Keenan and Henry C. Myers has been organized in St. Andrew's Ward, N. Y. Henry McCormick, the well-known pitcher, is actively engaged in the project to represent that city on the ball field next season. Warwick of this city and Frank C. Catharines are to run their 3200 a side. The bad weather has prevented either men from doing much training. Warwick has been suffering from the strain he received in his race with Carruthers, but does not apprehend that it will interfere with him in this contest. Carruthers has lately been seen on the river at Oxford, in England, maned (or rather womaned) by students of the high school. Among this fair crew the daughter of one of the professors. Thaddeus Crane Banks, business manager of Forest and Stream, died yesterday morning at New York, aged 58. Mr. Banks had extensive acquaintance among sportsmen throughout the country.
