Middleton May Not Be Gazetted a Town

The Attorney-General Has Reported Against the Step and Intimates That in Naming the Boundaries an Evasion of the Act Was Attempted.

A copy of the report of the attorney-general to the government, as a commissioner sent by the government to Middleton to make enquiry as to the objections raised against the incorporation of that town, has been received here. He has gone into the subject very fully and, as was expected by many, has reported against it. He finds according to the report, that the proceedings were regular but that there was not 700 people on an area of 500 acres, within the meaning of the town's incorporation act.

King Edward Saves a Little Lass.

London, Oct. 27.—Edward VII is a hero to at least one person not his subject. This person is Rosetta Neumann, aged 14 years, to whom the emperor—king of the British—is a hero and an idol.

For Edward VII saved the life of Rosetta Neumann recently, and by exchanging his own life and limb rescued her from fearful peril. The adventure in which the King of England was the hero happened in Austria, near Maribor, where he was on a visit to the king of the Austrians to seek health and strength. The coming of the English king to the famous Austrian spa excited the people of the entire valley. Not only were the Americans, French, German and English health seekers who were taking the famous cold chalybeate and saline baths and stopping at the luxurious hotels excited, but the natives, the people from the Eger, Olomou, Tabor, were filled with curiosity to see the ruler of the proud nation.

And among those who hoped to look upon the king from afar and marvel at his greatness was little Rosetta Neumann, the daughter of a poor, but healthy parents, who had heard of the king's coming and hoped that some day she might meet him as she rode her bicycle through the lovely valley.

She was heart broken when, during the first few days of the king's stay, the paths where she was wont to ride her bicycle were roped off and held for the king, and she rejoiced when by his request, the ropes were torn away and the public admitted to the walks.

Many have the road out on the bicycle that her father had bought for her on Christmas, hoping that she might get a glimpse of him, but although she rode many miles she never saw him.

If she had but known it Dr. Ott had ordered him to take long walks over the hills that edge the beautiful valley, and any day she might have found him, striding up the hill roads and wandering across the beautiful mountain meadows.

The time for the king to return to his court was drawing near. Improved in health and strengthened in body, he was preparing to quit Maribor and his health-giving waters, and still Rosetta Neumann had not caught a glimpse of him.

One morning she went for a ride on her bicycle up into the hills above the famous Kreuzbrunn spring. At times she walked and pushed her wheel along until she reached the crest of the hill and rested there, looking down upon the roofs of the famous hostels and sanitariums in the valley that are built near the famous Caroline and Ambrosian cold springs.

It was nearly noon when she suddenly recalled the fact that she had promised her mother to return in time to help with the preparation for luncheon. She sprang to her wheel and started downward. The hill was steep and her wheel gathered speed as she plunged downward toward the valley. Before long she was flying vainly trying to back pedal and hold the wheel.

As she rushed downward her feet slipped from the pedals and the bicycle, running free, whirled downward. The child half in terror, realized the danger. Below her the perfect road slanted for nearly half a mile, and then there was a sharp curve, almost at right angles, and a high stone wall. The wheel was beyond control, and yet, in her blind terror, she held the handlebars and guided it straight. It was gathering speed at every rod. If she could make the spokes of the front wheel, and not she would be dashed to death against the stone wall.

The wheel, with the terrified child clinging to the handle bars, was rushing downward to destruction when suddenly there appeared in the road a short, heavy set man, wearing a jaunty walking cap, a pair of tweed knickerbockers, and a short gray walking coat. In his hand he carried a heavy walking stick and he was walking briskly uphill.

He stopped, and the terrified child clinging to the handle bars, was rushing downward to destruction when suddenly there appeared in the road a short, heavy set man, wearing a jaunty walking cap, a pair of tweed knickerbockers, and a short gray walking coat. Only Few Bones of Loved Sister

Slight Satisfaction Comes to Professor Hewitt After Two Years' Search.

Vancouver, Oct. 28.—With part of a skull, a rib, a piece of the femur and bits of clothing, by which identification was made possible, Professor Hewitt, of Wisconsin, has returned to Dawson with all that remains of his sister, Dr. Emily Chambers, for whose body he searched the frozen north for two years. The discovery of these few bones and the positive knowledge of the fate that overtook Mrs. Chambers sets at rest the mystery concerning her disappearance and brings down the final curtain on a tragedy that for gruesome details has seldom been surpassed in the grim land of ice and gold. A recent arrival from Dawson says there is no doubt Mrs. Chambers' body was devoured by wolves. The gladly relics which alone remain are to be brought to Seattle to be buried. Professor Hewitt undertook a long, arduous trip alone, tramping through the wilds with a pack on his back, over hills and through swamps, that he might be sure of the fate that had overtaken his beloved sister.

Youthful Clerks Rob Rich Bank.

Took Over $250,000 Before Being Found Out—System Was Simplicity Itself.

"We played for millions just like millionaires, but we lost." This was the declaration of C. H. Wray and C. S. Hixton, 800-a-month clerks in the Union Trust company, who stole $250,000 from the Union Trust company, of Pittsburgh. The two clerks pleaded guilty, and were each sentenced to ten years in prison. When the sentence was passed Hixton broke down and pleaded for mercy, but Wray met his fate with a smile, and before his trial led away, told a story that made the court room gasp with astonishment.

Women Not Liable

English Laws Give Them All Privileges and Relieves Them of Responsibility for Debt.

London, Oct. 28.—The history of the favored position which married women occupy in the English legal system is not without interest. Until comparatively recent times a married woman was considered in the eye of the law as no more capable of owning or dealing with property than an infant or a lunatic. All she possessed when she married became her husband's.

All she acquired during her marriage passed into his control and he had the sole right of dealing with it. She could not sue or be sued alone. She was, in fact, a legal nonentity, a mere shadow of her husband's personality.

As the result of a series of acts of Parliament passed during the last 75 years, married women have gradually emerged from this position of legal disability. Now a married woman may possess separate property of her own and deal with it quite independently of her husband. She may make contracts. She may sue and be sued in her own name. In fact, she now enjoys all the rights of an unmarried woman.

But for some unaccountable reason the Legislature in conferring upon her increased powers and privileges has not enlarged her responsibility in proportion. Related from the standpoint of legal liability, her position still remains in many respects quite exceptional and anomalous. For example, the wife is entirely exempt from liability to pay for articles which fall within the category of "necessaries," and in the case of ladies in society "necessaries" is a very elastic term and may include expensive articles of dress or jewelry.

Women of London, Ont., were recently swindled to the amount of about $1,000 by a smooth-tongued rascal, who canvassed for an alleged woman's magazine, securing 81 subscriptions in advance. Inquiry revealed that there was no such magazine published.

A Colalt nugget two and one-half feet wide, and 11 inches thick was taken out of Cobalt, Ont., by the Lalloze owners on the 300-foot level. The nugget is of the highest class one and is valued at $100,000. It weighs about 3,000 pounds.

Something to Think About

To The Editor of The Monitor

Sir—Can Bridgetown obtain a share of the summer tourist business? What has Bridgetown to offer, at the present time, in order to induce the summer tourist to come here, and stay with us a few weeks, or months? What can we do, to supplement the advantages, or inducements we now have, to tempt the summer tourist to stay with us?

What advantage or benefit would it be to the town to have with us, during the summer months, say from fifty to a hundred summer tourists?

Will you, Sir, insert in big type, in your next issue the above questions, and ask your readers, one and all, to give the Monitor their views upon the subjects embraced in the questions, which are asked solely in the

For a whole week, Nellie Rice, aged 28 years, lay dead in a house in Montreal, before her death was made public. Edward Sixsmith, aged 67 years, for whom she kept house, went in and out of the place, knowing that the woman lay dead, and did not take the trouble to disturb the body or to tell about it. On the arrival of the old man's son the fact became known.

William Bowler and George Bion, employed at the works of the Pillsbury (Ont.) Portland Cement company, met death by the accidental discharge of several sticks of dynamite. They were engaged in loading the sticks. It is thought that the men were using the dynamite to permeate the cap when it was struck. Both men resided at Point Au Lac, Ont.

Ed. Gray and Carl Horvick, his wife, have each purchased a small farm of about 20 acres, near Nelson, B. C.

Bond and shackled to keep him from doing himself injury a Hungarian man was placed in the Maple Creek barracks the other day, after arriving in Medicine Hat, a raving lunatic, as the result of doses administered to him by a gang of confidence men. The gang has been operating along the Crow's Nest railway and the Hungarian was starting out for a holiday, when he was spotted on the train by the criminals. He was dragged at Lethbridge and then sent on to Medicine Hat. He had to be roped and tied by a cow puncher, before he could be placed under arrest.

George Robinson, of Regina, Ont., and Gabriel Bakewell, a Cree Indian, have been sentenced to the Edmonton penitentiary for terms of four and three years respectively. Robinson was found guilty of forgery and Bakewell of horse theft.

Alex. McFadyen, of Oil Springs, Ont., was suffocated by gas in a hotel at Sarnia, while sleeping. It is supposed that in turning on the electric light he turned on the gas, which was on the same fixture.

A quarrel over a woman led to the shooting at Villa Marie, Pontiac county, Ont., of Jules Glaspiers by Jules Hildin. Hildin was placed in jail to await the outcome of the former's injuries. On the strength of the report that the latter died, an officer started for the Temiskaming wilds to investigate.

After two hours in the chilly waters of Lake St. Louis, O. J. Norman and W. Perry, both of Montreal, were rescued by the steamer H. M. Peblitt. They were on a hunting trip, and while crossing the channel, a large wave scuttled their boat. Innumerable by their hunting outfits they were almost helpless and could only cling to the boat until help reached them. When picked up they were almost exhausted and Perry was about to lapse into unconsciousness.

Books Never Examined and Money Went to Bucket Shops and Poker Joints.

"We played for millions just like millionaires, but we lost." This was the declaration of C. H. Wray and C. S. Hixton, 800-a-month clerks in the Union Trust company, who stole $250,000 from the Union Trust company, of Pittsburgh. The two clerks pleaded guilty, and were each sentenced to ten years in prison. When the sentence was passed Hixton broke down and pleaded for mercy, but Wray met his fate with a smile, and before his trial led away, told a story that made the court room gasp with astonishment.

When asked the reason for the embezzlement, Wray replied with a smile: "We were playing for a high game, and the same as the millionaires. We were never able to stop as they do, however, and I suppose we will have to suffer the consequences. Like everyone else in the financial world in Pittsburgh, we were simply money mad. We handled millions every day; we dealt in millions in everything. We were constantly talking money, and hearing of many opportunities where we could make $50 a month, might become millionaires also. We saw many opportunities vanish because we did not have the money to take advantage of them, and consequently we were stealing from the bank."

THEIR SYSTEM WAS SIMPLE. In his explanation, Wray said it was the easiest thing in the world to steal from the bank, and go on and on, and the life so long and free. He would then pass this deposit slip to a teller and all he had to do was to make a false deposit slip in the name of a depositor whose account had lapsed, or who had died, although there still remained a few cents in it. He would then pass this deposit slip to Hixton, who, as an individual bookkeeper, would enter it. Then Wray would draw a large check for the amount of the deposit, and take the money. Hixton, when the check reached him, would destroy it. When asked if neither his nor Hixton's books were ever examined, Wray replied in the negative, and the court administrator, a stung man, rebuked to the bank officials, who happened to be in attendance at the trial.

"We saw so many opportunities slipping away from us," said Wray, "we started to work our system, expecting that we would be able to put the money back again with $500 and lost it. It was so easy to get the money that we continued to play. The money was simply burned up. We don't know just how much we took, but it was about $250,000 and probably more. Of that sum the bucket shops got nine-tenths.

"We got half an hour off every day at noon for our lunch, and instead of devoting it to that purpose we visited the bucket shops. There we received the 'tips' from the proprietors, and gave our orders. It was like putting money in a rat hole. Finally we were so deep in that we had to get larger sums of money from the bank to pay our losses, and we took as high as $10,000 in a single day. On one transaction alone, and with one broker, we lost $40,000.

"We bought and sold short, just as they advised us. I remember only one time that we won, that was $25, and we were sure that the tide had turned, but then it was soon the same old thing again."

Resuming his story, Wray declared that while he lived a high life for a time, still he had never been extravagant. He supported his aged mother in good style, he said, and she supposed that he was one of the rising young millionaires because he was connected with a bank whose directors are all millionaires.

He said that in addition to the money that he spent with the bucket shops, a part of his share was lost in playing poker at the Randall club, a prominent political organization of the city.

Hixton, who was made of weaker stuff than Wray, admitted that the story was true, but begged for the court's mercy. He said he had received half of the plunder, and that the bucket shops had taken every cent of it. He lives with his wife and child at Carnegie, a suburb of the city, in humble style, but the salary that he made. From the

SOME VALUABLE INFORMATION FOR YOUNG WIVES.

Silver articles and ornaments kept in the drawing room tarnish. They can be brightened by dipping the articles in a strong solution of ammonia and hot water.

When making boiled fruit pudding, after well greasing the basin, put a little brown sugar in the bottom before putting in the paste, and you will find after turning the pudding out it will have a nice brown top.

A cloth dipped in ammonia and rubbed thoroughly on a coat collar will remove any greasy look. Velvet collars may be treated in the same way, but must be held in front of a hot iron directly afterwards to raise the pile.

Three signs will show if an egg is fresh. 1. When the inside does not shake. 2. When it will not stand up or float in the water. 3. When the shell has a clear semi-transparent look if held before a candle.

Lamp chimneys are often very brittle, particularly the cheap ones which one buys with some idea of economy. These cheap chimneys may be toughened by setting them on the stove in cold water until it comes to a boil.

Those who do their own washing after washing the hands are very will notice that for about two days cough, sometimes the skin peeling off. To prevent this rub the hands well with salt after washing. This takes the water out, and keeps the hands nice and safe.

To make shoes waterproof take two ounces of mutton suet and two ounces of beeswax. Melt and stir. Warm this, and rub on the shoes with a soft rag. Leave, and when dry rub with the cloth, and black in the usual manner. In a day or two they acquire a bright polish, and will be found to be quite waterproof.

To keep butter cool without ice, take two pans, one smaller than the other. Into the smaller pan put your butter. Place it in the larger one, and put two tablespoonsful of salt with water sufficient to reach the top of the smaller pan. Well soak a flower-pot, and cover the butter with this. In a few hours it will be as firm as in the depths of winter. Occasionally re-soak the pot.

A black skirt may be freshened by spunging it with equal parts of spirits of turpentine and water. Then iron on the wrong side, and hang the skirt in the air to remove any smell of turpentine. Quite a shabby skirt can be renovated in this way.

Mildew linen may be restored by sponging the spots with still wet with finely powdered chalk, and rubbing it well into the discolored places, allowing it to dry. Afterward, thoroughly wash in warm water with soft hot soap. When dried the marks will have disappeared.

Those who make blouses at home will save themselves a great deal of trouble if, instead of sewing the hooks and eyes on to the blouse, they sew them on to a piece of tape. This is seen by hand down the front of the blouse, and when it is sent to the wash the tape is easily removed.

When linoleum is washed it should be thoroughly dried afterward with a dry cloth, and not left damp. This small precaution will keep the linoleum good for at least double the time.

Cane seats may be easily tightened by the use of hot water. Turn the chair upside down, and wash it with very hot water, using a brush. If the cane needs cleaning, use soap, and dry in the open air away from the direct rays of the sun.

VARIOUS NOTES OF THE LATEST AND PRETTIEST FASHIONS.

If you are to be in the fashion this winter you must be trimmed, much trimmed, as to gowns, hats and even fur coats. No matter if your trunks are Quakerish and your income on the wrong side of nothing, trimmings you must have. Moreover, when you see those trimmings in all their beauty of coloring, texture and design your quiet proclivities will be no more.

Severe simplicity may have its day again—but it will not be this winter.

THE ART OF GETTING THINGS DONE. I suppose the art of getting things done, so far as one is personally concerned, depends very much on system and perseverance. There is a homely proverb about the head saying the heels, which has a good deal of truth in it. You know how many needless steps may be taken in the course of a morning's baking, for instance. The cook thinks of everything she will require—the spices, the sugar, the butter, the pans, the salt, the sieve, the sundries—and arranges them all on the table in an orderly manner before she begins her mixing and moulding. Another has her hands full of dough, and remembers that she has not adjusted the oven dampers properly, and that the lard is in the cellar, and the apples are in the barrel, and the milk is in its place. The housekeeper who has no method is

The tiniest peep in shop windows makes this evident: Braids, passementeries, tassels, jettied and jewelled laces; flats and broadcloths and chiffon alike belovetted and befringed; hand embroidery everywhere; velvet and cloth, velvet and tulle, velvet and braids in the most remarkable combinations; nets and chiffon-voile, with soutache-braided taffeta; filmy, glittering sequins, beads, bugles and danglers; ornate buttons as big as a silver dollar; wonderful buckles, gold, bronze, gilt and silver; rhinestones and colored jewel effects—such are a few of the gauds with which lovely woman is to beautify her person and deplete her pocketbook.

This is to be a color season beyond all else. In nothing is this more marked than in the new trimmings. Never have they been gayer, yet never lovelier, so perfect has become the designer's skill in harmonious blending of many tones. In fact, if you really want to grow delicious with admiration and indubitable to decide on some particular applique or balloon among the bewildering assortment from which choice may be made.

Few evening or house gowns are without at least a touch of this colored trimming. For an elaborate white gown nothing could be lovelier than a new applique with lace-shaped clusters of small pink velvet flowers with gilt centres, shaded leaves of green ribbon ribbed with gold and a heavy gold edging.

A glint of gold is seen in most of the new trimmings, though the metallic effects of certain seasons is not observable. The combination of gay silk embroidery or ribbon work quite overcomes this effect.

A number of raised folds—of not designs in exquisite pastel colors, on net and silk textures are particularly favored among the new trimmings. Black and white chintilly nets have the pattern marked by these little blossoms in pink, lavender and blue, with green leaves and intricate interweaving of gilt thread. The black net in two shades of lavender, green and gilt, gives a charming touch to the all-black costume. These embroidered net come in both edging and insertion.

White tulle affords an interesting background for much of the new colored embroidery, which, by the way, is more strikingly beautiful than ever before. One trimming in a large and small scalloped figure has its edge of gold dots, from pin to toe, with wreaths of colored flowers couched in gold, alternating with raised silk embroidered white roses, with a circle of green leaves. A touch of black and much outlining in gold adds much to the beauty. The same pattern is seen in silver with deep blue flowers.

FOR MARRIED HAPPINESS. Here are a few of the qualities that make for married happiness. A spirit of tolerance, which will always make one of the two lenient towards the shortcomings of the other.

A cheerful temper, which will make both always see the bright and rosy side of things, and will not let a thousand and one little miseries of conjugal life.

A generous temperament, which will make them easily forgive and forget little offenses, and only remember service and good turns.

A genial philosophy which will keep them satisfied with themselves, and with each other.

A keen sense of humor, which will ever prevent them from making fools of themselves in their own eyes as well as in each other's, and will fill their homes with gaiety.

An artistic temperament and the love of the beautiful, which will prevent them from making matrimonial life prosy, dull, and monotonous, and will constantly enable them to find something that will keep alive their ideals and feed their intellectual wants.

Self-control, which will prevent them saying things which they may afterward regret.

Openness, which will cause them to mention what little grudge one may have against the other, and never to brood and consume their own smoke in sulks and resentment. The sky of matrimony should never be allowed to remain long cloudy. Rather than that, let the one who was right and knows it make advances and get a reconciliation if the one who was wrong will not quickly come forward and do it.

The Pandora Thermometer

The thermometer on the Pandora range oven means precisely in accuracy to the cook what the square and compass mean to the draftsman. Without the square and compass the draftsman would have to work entirely by guess, just as you do without an accurate and reliable thermometer on your oven.

The Pandora thermometer reduces cooking to an exact science. You know precisely how much heat you have and what it will do in a given time. It is one of the small things which makes the Pandora so much different and better than common ranges.

HINTS FOR MONEY MAKING AT HOME.

Among the many sociological and industrial changes which have taken place in recent years few are more noteworthy than those which affect the position and environment of women. The quiet persistence with which woman has invaded nearly every industrial, commercial and professional field has created manifold new conditions in her life. These reflect, not only upon the individual woman, but upon the whole body of her sex, and the influence of the money-earning woman is today a permanent and vital one among that class whose lives center around some hearthstone, and whose circumstances are such that they must remain there.

Among many of these home women there is a desire to emulate in a way existing the woman who has gone out from the home and has acquired an income. Then the knowledge of what some other woman has done comes to the home woman and she gains courage to feel that she, too, though she cannot leave home, may be able to find some way of making an income, and she looks about for a means of so doing.

SOME MONEY-GETTING METHODS.

Many unique ways of money-getting have thus been thought out by home women, and some of these have developed into most prosperous businesses. Of this latter class are the pie-making begun and carried on more being run at a loss. The for years by Mrs. T. J. Macready of New York State. Mrs. Macready began in her own kitchen in Buffalo, making preserves at the request of friends. She had three customers the first year, but her preserve acquired a reputation and in a few years she was selling them in the best grocery stores in the big cities as far west as Chicago. Then when she had acquired capital she started the American Inn at the Buffalo and St. Louis Expositions, and last year managed the largest Exposition hotel at the Lewis and Clark Exposition.

The beginning of her business career was her pickle and preserve-making. BECAME A STORY TELLER. Here in New England various plans have been successfully carried out for making money at home. A very pretty one was that carried out last summer by a young woman who lived in a town which was quite a summer resort. She had always been fond of children, and a happy idea came to her one day. She was sitting on the bench one morning when a number of the summer children came up to her and asked her to tell them a story. She began, and so much did the children enjoy it that they kept her until nearly luncheon time telling story after story. They seemed so happy and so much pleased that the idea came to the young woman that their parents might be willing to pay her a small amount for amusing the little people a certain number of hours a week.

Upon suggesting this to one of the mothers she found that her plan was quickly approved. Arrangements were made for definite hours, and the young woman was occupied during all the summer at a pleasant and—as it proved—a fairly profitable occupation. She did not have to go away from her beautiful mother, and, indeed, gave the latter many pleasant moments as her little patrons.

A woman tea merchant.

Another woman, under somewhat unusual circumstances, became a vendor of tea and coffee. She was a widow with several small children to support. From a life insurance left by her husband she built a small house for herself. She made arrangements with a wholesale tea and coffee house to sell their goods. She drove over a country circuit in good weather and in poor, and in time had a pleasant personal acquaintance with nearly every housekeeper in the country side. She never offered premiums of any kind, but in spite of this, housewives who had come to know her and to like her, saved their rivals, even though they offered champagne teas and various other premiums found themselves, in nine cases out of ten, unable to take orders. After a time she practically had the territory to herself, and had a reliable patronage which brought her in a comparatively steady income.

SOLD DOZENS OF EGGS. A girl in northern Vermont, who lived on a farm, one day made up her mind that she could make money in eggs. She did not go to work and buy no incubator, for that was not in her plan. Nor did she start a henhouse of her own. She did, however, arrange through a friend to send a certain number of some of eggs a week to a Boston store. Then she went through the countryside, engaging eggs from the farmers' wives and promising to call and collect them on a certain day each week. She made small profit on the sales, scarcely enough, at first, to be profitable, but as she gained new customers and extended her calls over a larger territory, she in time had a very satisfactory income.

A CATERER FOR SOCIAL FUNCTIONS. A young woman in a coast town of Maine, a teacher by profession, was obliged to give up her school and assume the care of an aged and invalid grandmother. Her grandmother's illness was such that she was obliged to remain closely with her, so where she could be within hearing. At the same time it was necessary for her to have some sort of income. She had no taste for needlework, could not

One New Hampshire girl did several years ago, but she has trapped many since since the reward of her courage. She lived in a certain New Hampshire town where her father had, from her father, kept a grocery store. He was getting old, and the business seemed slipping entirely away from him, so much so that at last the daughter, after much thinking, resolved her position as a teacher in one of the public schools, and started out one Monday morning to "take orders" for the store. She went among former customers and to friends of her family and frankly sought their patronage. In a few months she had not only paid the business back on a paying basis, but had increased it to a point beyond what it had ever before reached.

She did not attempt to attend to the work at the store, but continued herself exclusively to taking orders. For this work she devoted every morning, leaving her afternoons free for reading, visiting or any work which she chose. It is quite fair to suppose that her personality won her patrons but what one woman has done others can do.

These are all true instances of what women have done. It is with the hope that they may prove helpful in succession to others that they are here narrated.

Tea kettles should be turned up sideways every time after use. It is generally the little drop of water that is allowed to stand in the bottom of the kettle that causes the rust, and once rust makes its appearance, a hole very soon follows.

SHOWS JAPAN'S HATE OF U. S.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 23.—There is no doubt that Asahi Kitaraki, the Japanese midshipman who resigned to-day from the Naval Academy, did so because of the feeling in Japan against the United States.

The only reason in his application for discharge was that it was the order of his Government received through Japanese official sources.

It was stated authoritatively that Kitaraki did not resign on account of deficiency in his studies and that the reason which he gave for his resignation composes the whole information possessed here.

Kitagaki has just returned from an extended leave spent in Japan, and the fact that he returned to complete his course is taken as indicating that the reasons for his resignation are of recent origin.

OVERDUE WITH $3,000,000.

(New York Sun)

The British steamship Arabistan, on board of which is $3,000,000 in gold shipped here from Buenos Ayres, is now overdue and while her agents, Norton & Sons, said yesterday that they believed the vessel would reach port, there is considerable anxiety over her delay.

The Arabistan left Buenos Ayres on September 22 and was last reported as sailing from St. Lucia, in the Windward Islands, on October 12.

She was due at San Juan, P. R., on October 17, but up to yesterday afternoon nothing had been heard from her.

Because she has not been reported in the lanes used by vessels bound for Porto Rico it is thought that she might have suffered from the recent hurricanes that have raged among the islands to the southeast of Florida.

The Arabistan is an old ship and for that reason the fears are increased.

HANDLING THE APPLE CROP.

In commercial orcharding, the business end of the enterprise, that of marketing the crop to the best advantage, is second only in importance to that of producing fruit of the best quality.

It is in this particular that there is the greatest need for improvement at the present time. There are hundreds of apple growers who can grow first-class fruit to every one who can place it on the market when and where it will bring the best price.

The growers who make the most out of their apples are those who keep in touch with the best markets at home and abroad. During the shipping season these men watch the market reports day and night, unless prices are satisfactory they hold their fruit until good prices prevail.

During the past year a number of these associations have been formed in various parts of the province, and the prices obtained by some of them for last year's apples have made the growers enthusiastic over this method of handling the crop.

An effective co-operative association for this purpose involves the selection of an honest, well-versed business manager, and the erection of a central packing and storage house at the most convenient point for shipment.

Through such an organization, boxes and crates can be purchased when sale to better advantage than when obtained by single individuals.

Two material injury to fruit trees, including even peach. For the latitude of New Jersey, Dr. Smith sets Oct. 15 as about the right date to begin the fall application of scale insecticides in average years.

It cost less to produce honey than it does butter or eggs, says a writer in an exchange. A few stands of bees in a sheltered spot, where they can be seen from the kitchen window, and back porch, during the warm season, make a source of profit as well as a delight to their owner.

LACK OF ENERGY.

A Common Trouble Among Growing Boys—A New Blood Supply is Needed—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make New Blood.

There are thousands of young men just approaching manhood who have no energy, who tire out at the least exertion, and who feel by the time they have done their day's work as though the day was a week long.

On account of the unfavorable results which were obtained by many entomologists and fruit growers in applying insecticides for scale insects during the fall or early winter, this operation has generally been postponed until the late winter or early spring, just before the buds swell.

According to experiments by Dr. J. B. Smith, entomologist of the New Jersey station, reported to the Department of Agriculture, it appears that all kinds of insecticides effective against scales may be applied with success in the early fall, even before the trees have become thoroughly mature.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity.

W. E. PALFREY, LAWRENCETOWN

Our debating society was re-organized for the winter months, to meet fortnightly, on Monday evening, J. H. Bishop, president; Principal Spianey, secretary, with the same committee as last year. The subject for debate on Monday evening was, "Are the resources of Nova Scotia sufficient to keep our young men and women at home." Affirmative: Dr. Hall, Dr. Morse, Dr. Schaffner, J. E. Schaffner, negative: H. Phinney, W. E. Palfrey, Wm. Whynard. A very lively and interesting discussion took place and many important matters were brought up. As the society never takes a vote at its debates, we cannot just say which side won. Collection for street lighting $2.77.

TORBROOK. Mr. Parsons, of the Londonderry Iron Co. was in town last week. The office at the old mines has been moved up on the cars and placed near the new shaft. It is now painted red like the rest of the town. George Conant was in town last Sunday.

Otto Wile has opened his new store and is now doing a thriving business. S. Wood has nearly completed his first house and has a good start on the second.

A pie social took place in the hall on last Wednesday. During the last year there has been a great addition to the town's population so that now the majority of the residents live in the west end of the town. As the Torbrook post office is now situated at almost the extreme eastern end, it makes it awkward for over half of the community. This makes a new post office an absolute necessity. It would at least save a good deal of wear and tear on sole leather and patience.

HARRIS OAKES. A very interesting event took place at Nictaux Falls, on Wednesday, Oct. 17th, when Miss Lizzie S. Oakes was united in marriage to Archibald H. Harris, of this place, at the residence of her parents. Promptly at 12.30 o'clock to the strains of the wedding march which was beautifully rendered by Miss Bessie Drew, the bride entered the room on the arm of her father, James E. Oakes. The contracting couple then took their position under a beautiful autumnal arch, the ceremony being performed by Rev. C. H. Haverstock in the presence of a large number of guests, among whom was Prof. I. B. Oakes, of Wolfville, uncle of the bride. The bride was becomingly gowned in Little Ethel Amis, niece of the bride, also dressed in white, was flower girl and did her part very nicely. After the ceremony and congratulations, a beautiful and sumptuous collation was served to which the guests did ample justice. The bride was the recipient of many valuable and useful presents, among which were a number of substantial cheques. The bride's going away gown was of navy blue broadcloth with hat to match. After luncheon the happy couple were driven to the depot at Middleton where they took the express for Halifax and other points of interest. Mr. and Mrs. Harris arrived here on Tuesday and were tendered a reception at the home of his mother, Mrs. Thomas Harris on Wednesday evening. The telephone joins their many friends in wishing them a long happy and prosperous married life.
