Skirtmaking Department

de la feria de la la la feria de la feria della della feria della

Being well equipped in our Skirtmaking Department at the present time, the inconvenience of having to wait weeks for you dressmaker is overcome. Our Separate Skirtmaking Department is under the management of competent heads and well equipped with skilled workers, whose attention is given solely to the making of separate skirts. We also have a separate Waistmaking Department, managed in just the same way, whose attention is given entirely to waist designing and creating pretty styles for our own trade. Our customers who are familiar with these departments, which are separate entirely from our dressmaking and ladies' tailoring, find them a great convenience, and the prices are very moderate. We make this announcement for those who are not familiar with these particular departments, and orders received now will be executed on very short notice. Make inquiries when purchasing your materials at Dress Goods Department.

Ladies' Winter Coats---A Long-Coat Season

THAMESFORD. Thamesford, Oct. 16.—The services in the Methodist Church on Sunday were conducted by Rev. Mr. Green, of Clinton, who was welcomed by his ormer parishioners. Miss Green accompanied him, renewing acquaintinces in the village. A quiet wedding took place at St Andrew's manse on Wednesday evenng, when Miss Ella Hueston was Verschoyle. The bride was attended by the sister of the groom, and was dressed very becomingly in a traveling suit of navy blue.

Word has been received of the advent of a little son in the family of Professor John and Mrs. Patterson, of Simla India Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. McCarty and Miss Aggie Henderson have returned after spending the summer in Ireland and Scotland. They visited the fair at Dublin and report the Canadian exhibit as one of the best. Mr. Parsons' family have moved into the house lately vacated by Mrs. Morrison. Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Laing, of this village, have moved to London, where Mr. Laing has secured employment at the McClary works Dr. McWilliam, of London, was in the village on Saturday evening en route to Lakeside, having been called to the bedside of Mrs. Stevenson, who is very ill. Miss Scellan accompanied the doctor, to nurse the lady. Miss T. Scellan returned home or Saturday evening, after a short visit with friends in London. Mrs. James B. Day, who has been on an extended visit to her daughters in Ubly, Mich., returned home on Saturday evening. Mr. Brennan, of the Star, is offering his household effects for sale prior to leaving for Welland, where he expects to go into business for himself. Miss Jessie Lawrence has gone to Toronto to attend the university, and Miss Anne Lawrence has returned to Woodstock to resume her work at the General Hospital, after two weeks' daughter, spent a few days with J. A.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCT. 19. A WESTERN BY-ELECTION.

The by-election in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, last week, was the first since the Opposition in that province changed its name to the "Provincial Rights" party. The new Attorney-General, Mr. Turgeon, was defeated by one vote, but some 200 ballots, which a place among the leading nations of were challenged, were not included in the world. the count and have been reserved for the courts.

The school question was the main tssue of the contest, and the press and platform controversy was an echo of cial Righters." The Liberal press consign a statement to the effect that he greater than for the corresponding is qualified. Every such ballot is placed in an envelope with the voter's name on the outside, and is referred to a court comprising a magistrate and the deputy returning officer at the poll at which the elector voted. This is a rather loose system and will no doubt be remedied by the Provincial Govern-In the meantime the air is thick with charges and countercharges, and politics in the new province is seething with western vigor.

EDUCATION IN JAPAN.

That Japan's advancement educationally is keeping good pace with that along other lines is shown by the fact that whereas in 1873 only 28 per cent of the children of school age attended an automobile will be cheaper than places of instruction in 1904-5, the a horse. last year of which there is record, the percentage was 94.43. The report of the Minister of Education for the latter school year gives evidence of marvelous diffusion of popular education since a system of collecting data was inaugurated some 34 years ago.

"London people have no idea how important a center London is for distributing poultry, eggs and produce. In the last few years the business has grown very rapidly, and is at present increasing more rapidly than ever before. This year over 1,000,000 pounds of poultry have been handled in our warehouse. It is a peculiar fact, but the export trade to England is decreasing. Canada is getting so big now that she can consume all that her farmers produce. This fact is perhaps nowhere more noticeable than in the egg business. When we first started in this city we used to send practically all the eggs we handled to England.

The attraction "Shadowed by Three" to be seen at the Grand on next Thursday and Friday evenings, contains the complete story.

The deep and lasting interest of "The Right of Way," by Sir Gilbert Parker, dramatized by Eugene W Presbrey and produced by Klaw & Erlanger at the Grand Opera House, London, Saturday, Oct. 26, is its human interest, the story of a man's fight with himself. It is the open record of the struggle upwards of a human soul-a scroll whereon is re corded a man's endeavor to answer the eternal question, "Who Knows?"

Mr. Guy Standing, who plays Charlie Steele in Mr. Presbrey's dramatization of Sir Gilbert Parker's, novel is a man of superb physique and a trained athlete. Mr. Standing declares that the man who plays the part of Steele must be in constant training. He says the part is a modern Faust and longer than Hamlet. As a matter of fact the part of Steele is probably the most exacting of any role in modern drama. The powerful English company engaged contains many wellknown favorites. The Hague, Oct. 18.—The Hall of Knights presented an imposing spectacle today at the closing session of read, including one on "Normal Work" the international peace conference. cabinet ministers, diplomats and other statesmen and their wives in most attractive costumes. The president, M. Nelidoff (Russia) made a long speech, saying that notthe knitting factory, which was bounded by them, for a large sum.

During the evening an attractive withstanding the assiduous work of the delegates, the conference had lasted what had been done and the results attained, emphasizing the spirit of concord which had characterized the debates, observing that the pessimists forgot that the delegates were not sent to The Hague to find ideal solutions of the various problems discussed, but to carry out the instructions received from their governments in the interests of their respective countries. Superior consecrations such as the good of humanity in general must undoubtedly guide delegates to such a conference, but they must also keep in view the objects of those who direct the governments, the interests of which are often diametrically opposed to the interests of other countries The efforts of the conference had tended to harmonize these interests. ADVANTAGES OF LIVE UNIVERSITY

Arguments in Favor of Civic Aid to Western Set the histories of Canadian universities and their educational and material advantages may come as a revelation. In 1842 the University of King's Colege was founded in Toronto by the Anglican Church. In 1849 this institution was thrown open to all denominations, and received the name of the Toronto University, which now numbers between 3,000 and 4,000 students Kingston has even a more startling record. Queen's has between 1,300 and 1,400 students. It has been estimated at a low figure, that these students alone are worth to the city about $5,000 weekly. Kingston's population is be tween 19,000 and 20,000. The Western University has no sectarian principle. It maintains the view that it simply gives an arts course and

Some people may say that it was at one time an entirely Church of England institution, but a view of the constitution of the present body would entirely dispel that idea. For past years the majority of the students have been non-Church of England. During this year the professional staff has been equally divided between "non" and Church of England mem

The main facts of

The provincial educational authorities at Toronto, whilst recognizing the efficacy of the present university staff, will not acknowledge their honor degree in pedagogy. They state, and reasonably, that there should be a sound financial basis, or otherwise the present staff cannot be depended upon for its standard.

With a definite grant of a small um annually from the city this objection would be met. There are many derton recently when Miss Laura, young people in this city who have to eldest daughter of Mr. and. Mrs. go to outside universities to obtain required degree. This is an absolut pecuniary loss to the city. They can get it at stores or direct from our delivery wagons. The best proof of Takoma Loaf popularity is in the eating: No other bread made today is equal to that of Takoma Loaf. We invented this special bread not only to gain new trade but to give the citizens of London, and throughout the country, a loaf of bread which is far superior in quality to any other bread made. We had another thought in view when putting this loaf on the market and that was to have a loaf of bread which could be the main article of food and would be easy for the stomach to digest. Takoma Loaf is the result that we have attained from years of study, and we can recommend it highly to all who are troubled with a weak stomach. Ask your grocer and insist on get-

PEER* IS GOOD FOR MOST FOLKS (HARDLY ANOTHER BEVERAGE FEEDS SO WELL)

EER really excels milk as a food-drink for most grown people. And many, many people cannot digest milk easily, because it is so lacking in solid food-contents.

Moreover, milk is so liable to contagion that it is seldom pure when we get it in the cities. But Ontariobrewed beer is really pure,-brewed in cleanliness, of sound materials, in a sanitary way, and brought to the user in the same fit-to-drink state.

Beer Is No Stimulant

Drink beer with meals and at bedtime, as an item of diet that will help the stomach do its work better, and will feed the body besides. Don't choose beer as a stimulant, though,-it does not contain enough alcohol for that. Use it as a food-drink that induces lazy stomachs to do their work well, and so helps them get more good out of all food.

Beer Makes Better Nerves

Ontario beer is not only deliciously appetising and refreshing, because brewed of pure malt and hops only; but, besides, all the power that hops possess to repair nerve wastes is kept in these brews. That is what makes beer so particularly good for women to drink regularly. Ask your own doctor what he thinks of beer for your household.

Prince Buelow is the first prime minister of a great power in modern times to invoke the protection of the courts against calumny and to institute proceedings of criminal libel against his traducer. Until now statesmen of his rank and importance have always treated slander with disdain, which has, of course, emboldened their assailants. In this instance, however, the Chancellor of the German Empire has done well to break with precedent, and to resort to the tribunals, and every healthyminded person, whether friend or political foe, especially those who know the romance of his marriage and the romantic affection which still exists between his brilliant and devoted wife and himself, will rejoice when he succeeds, as he assuredly his will to prevent the then widowed will, in securing exemplary punishment for that unsavory and mendacious pirate of the pen who has figured in many a previous scandal, and who has made many vain attempts to secure a foothold in the American press as Berlin correspondent.

Slanders such as those circulated in print about the prince can only recoil on the head of their author, but when so publicly made must be met either by means of personal violence or by an appeal to the law. Prince Buelow has wisely chosen made by King Leopold of Belgium to inthe latter course, and is particularly well qualified to do so, his private life being sels, which has been rigorously boycotted singularly exemplary and in every sense by foreign sovereigns and by royalty in of the word irreproachable.

King Edward owes the possession of several of his transpontine dependencies to the fleetness of British men-of-war in bygone days, a fact which it is well to remember in connection with the efforts which are made by the various navies of fore returning home. He has addressed the great nations to secure high powers of similar invitations to the King and Queen speed for all vessels added to their fleet. Thus, although Abel Tasman had discovered New Zealand in 1642, and Capt. A similar affair took place in connection with the Island of Perim in 1857. A French cruiser was in port at Aden, and its officers were being most hospitably entertained by the governor at a banquet, followed evening one of the French officers, whose tongue had presumably been loosened by good cheer, happened to reveal the fact that on sailing next day they were bound for the Island of Perim, situated only a few hours distant and commanding the southern entrance to the Red Sea. Long before daybreak. before, indeed, even his French guests had left his hospitable roof, a couple of English gunboats had quietly stolen out of the harbor and had steamed off at top speed to Perim.

SOME FAMOUS FRENCHMEN WHO GOT INTO DIFFICULTIES THROUGH REVERIES.

Since the days when Diogenes kept bouse comfortably in a tub, and Socrates ruined Xantippe's disposition by his neglect of the necessities of existence, philosophers and scientists have rejoiced in a faculty which enables them to become so absorbed in the calculations and deductions of their new theories and discoveries that they can forget their surroundings. An example of this quite recently has been M. Meuchot, to whom the world owes much of its present day knowledge of the effects of solar heat. All Paris was horrified to learn that the dear old man. "le pere Meuchot,' as his papils affectionately call him, was in dire straits. It seems he came out of a profound reverie one day to find that his household effects were being sold over his head, and he watched in bewilderment the various articles of furniture being carried off to satisfy creditors, while his weeping family greeted each well-loved piece with fresh tears. He thought himself in the depths of poverty, but refused all offers of heap. However, friends looked into his affairs, and found that he had three years' back pension that he had forgotten all about, and eight years' royalties which had also escaped his memory. So they have taken him in hand and are doing their best to get back his furniture and settle his financial affairs. Many stories are told of the eminent scientist Ampere, whose capacity for blind reflection, so deep it made him absolutely oblivious to all around him, was a source of mingled amusement and concern to his friends. One day when he was walking During the course of the along the street absorbed in seeking the solution of a problem which had been occupying his attention for some time, he saw a watering cart ahead of him. Taking a piece of chark from his pocket he commenced to cover the end of the barrel with figures. The cart moved slowly off, and the professor walked after it, still busy with his calculations, till a sudden cold douche brought him to his senses. dinner party at the house of M. De Fontaine, grand master of the university. It was shortly after Ampere's election to the Institute of France, and some of his acquaintances persuaded him he ought to go in his uniform as academician. Poor Ampere took them seriously, and acting on their advice was much embarrassed on his arrival to find that he was the only guest thus attired. He felt himself to ridiculous with his sword clanking about his legs that he determined to get rid of that incumbrance anyhow, and, taking it off, he managed to slip over to a sofa and hide it behind some of the cushions. By the time the dinner was finished the old gentleman had quite regained his selfpossession, and with it his interest in his work, and he suddently commenced to make some calculations. Walking over to the fireplace he remained there quite unconscious of the people around him, or, in fact, of anything except his problem. In due time the guests all took their departure, and M. De Fontane went upstairs, while his wife agreed to wait down in the drawing-room till Ampere should have finished, so that she could spare him any extra embarrassment. However, the time was long, and the dinner had been a tiring affair, so the amiable lady dozed off on the sofa. In the meantime the scientist finished his figuring, woke to a knowledge of his surroundings, and was horrified to find all the guests had gone. The only person visible was madam, and she was sleeping at her post. He resolved to slip out unnoticed, but wishing to secure his sword, he walked on tiptoe behind Madame

Scotia last winter I needed medicine of its scabbard. 'The slight movement awakened the lady, who was terrified to see Ampere bending over her with a naked sword in hand. Her shrieks awakened the household, and though the explanation was only a matter of seconds, the scientist was so mortified that it was with the cures the urinal disorders that often greatest difficulty that he could ever again be persuaded to accept a dinner invitation. The late M. Berthelot was also a victim of acute absent-mindedness. He was walking to his laboratory one day through a crowded street when one foot slipped from the curbing into the gutter. He did not notice the misstep and continued walking slowly along, one foot one the sidewalk, one in the gutter, deep in thought, until first drawings up at the front of the room and then criticised them point by point, you must have discovered the most glaring blunders.

Some of you complained that you could not find a row of trees of similar size together, where you could see them at a sufficient distance to get the perspective. The trouble is that we are so peculiarly constituted that if we know the trees are the same height, they will seem to appear so whether they really do or not. If you make the cardboard frame or finder that I told you about in your last lesson and hold it off in front of you, moving it about till the trees show in the opening, you will find that the top of the nearest tree will probably touch the top of the frame, whereas the top of each tree behind it will come a little lower down than the one in front of it. You must hold your finder very steadily, and in this way, measure how much shorter each tree appears than the one in front of it. It is only on the level that you get this effect. Naturally on a hillside the treetops will appear higher the farther up they are.

Let us think of the points we had go back to the schools you can put has put the shadow on that side.

to think of the proportion of height to width, of trunk to top, and of the branching. As regards the first of these we all underrate the width of top as compared to the width of trunk. We see these things as they strike me, underestimate the height of top as you will never forget and make these compared to height of trunk, and we forget that all the branches put together should make the thickness of unintentionally. Housemothers' Exchange

O N THIS blessed summer day I have cooked and eaten cranberries which I put up in an air-tight jar last February.

I used cold water as a preservative, and nothing else. I held the jar under the nothing else. I held the jar under the faucet about one-half minute and then sealed it as in putting up other fruit.

The berries were as plump and fresh as when I packed them in the jar, and even the water in which they had lain all these months was not in the least discolored.

Think of eating fresh stewed cranberries in summer with a chunk of ice in the dish!

Thus an esteemed contributor, betpapers than to those of our weekly Exchange. He (for it is a masculine member) has discoursed to us upon divers topics, and always to edifica-

It so commended itself to me, by cheapness, promised relief from the heat and reek and toil attendant upon heat and reek and toil attendant upon the old way of canning, that I seized eagerly upon the suggestion, and forthwith invested much coin of the realm in two-quart jars and the appurtenances of tops and rubbers; had a bushel of fine tomatoes of uniform size gathered, and put them up according to directions sent to me by practitioners of the new school.

The air was carefully expelled from the jars after they were filled with to-

When the jars were turned upside down, not a bubble appeared within.

Finally, the jars were packed, upside down, in clean sawdust and left in the

Our whilom friend and contributor, "The Private Secretary," has doubtless had his reasons, and such as satisfy his conscience with respect to his remissness usward, for a three months' silence. And it would be a poor return for the present favor to greet his reappearance with reproach.

I am a new housekeeper.
Indeed, I have been married only six months, but we went at once to housekeeping; and as I was always fond of cookery and had been trained in housework by my dear mother, I have not had as many "downs" as a majority of girls seem to have, and quite a gratifying number of "ups."

Or so John thinks.
I am so proud, and so is he, of one of these successes, that I am running to you with it, as a child that has found a pretty flower or pebble scampers with it to his You are a foster-mother to us all, aren't

You are a foster-mother to us all, aren't you?

My successful composition is a new salad dressing. John brought a friend home unexpectedly, and I wanted to give a festive touch to our simple dinner.

We have a little garden, where we grow flowers and lettuce and mint, etc. We had had boiled beets the day before, and I was wondering how I could serve them as a "left-over," when the inspiration took me. I minced them very fine, and when my mayonnaise was made, I whipped the chopped beets into it.

You have no idea how pretty the color was. You have no idea how pretty the color was.

A sort of rich red orange, and it tasted so good. I garnished the lettuce with two hard-boiled eggs sliced, and put a slice upon each "help" of salad.

I served heated crackers and cottage cheese with it, and made a separate course of the salad. That was nicer than to serve it with the meat, wasn't it?

If you won't think me vain and silly, I should like to tell you some time of what John calls my "chef d'oeuvre"—that is, what I did with a hopelessiy tough steak one day. May I come again?

R. M. F. (Camden, N. J.).

With all my heart I bid you welcome and heartily hope to hear the tale of the redeemed steak. I am saying this to you by mail also to make sure of the story.

Problems of Young House keepers

I saw in the Exchange a communication from "Mrs. M. E. W.." a "newly wed." I have the greatest possible sympathy for these newly wed girls. I recollect that when I married I was most deplorably ignorant of all housewifely duties, and how many times I would read most studiously, and in the privacy of my own room, my fast friend, "the cook book," then give instructions in the most knowing manner to my cook. to my cook.
